Raquel Welch to replace Julie Andrews in 'Victor/Victoria'

NEW YORK (AP) — Picture, if you will, Raquel Welch as a man.

Theatergoers will have to suspend disbelief when the voluptuous 56-year-old actress takes over for Julie Andrews in the cross-dressing Broadway musical "Victor/Victoria" in June.

"I think I'm going to have a lot of fun with this character because I get to play the guy part and the girl part," Welch said in Thursday's New York Post. "My figure will be under wraps for some of it, and we'll have fun playing with what's under the wraps."

Spike Lee enthralled with Confederate past

LEXINGTON, Va. (AP) — Spike Lee went to Washington and Lee University to talk about the future of movies on the Internet, but it was the past that caught his attention.

"Part of my ancestors probably built this place — they just didn't get paid for it," Lee told more than 1,000 students Wednesday night at Lee Chapel, named for Gen. Robert E. Lee.

The filmmaker smiled as he scanned huge portraits of the general and George Washington and spoke above the Confederate hero's tomb.

"I'm sorry the bookstore wasn't open," Lee wisecracked. "I would have bought myself a Confederate flag and a CD of Confederate songs."

Portrait of Howard Stern ousted from auction

DOYLESTOWN, Pa. (AP) — Howard Stern got bounced from a charity auction and took a few celebrities with him.

A self-portrait of the raunchy radio host was dropped from an auction to raise money for a new playground. Parents were concerned "we were associating the playground with Howard's name," said playground coordinator Jeff Byers.

Also dropped from Thursday's auction were drawings by Stern co-host Robin Quivers and TV host Kathie Lee Gifford, on the grounds that it wouldn't be fair to pull one celebrity's art and not others', Byers said.

Letterman, 'fruity' guest patch things up

STAMFORD, Conn. (AP) — Things are apparently just peachy again between David Letterman and a woman caught on camera eating a juicy fruit at a tennis tournament.

Jane Bronstein, 55, of New York settled her lawsuit against Letterman on Feb. 25. The terms were not disclosed.

Bronstein was caught on camera eating a peach at the 1995 U.S. Open. For 15 days that September, Letterman's late-night show repeatedly aired footage of the heavyset Peach Lady with juice dribbling down her chin.

Bronstein sued, claiming Letterman violated her privacy and subjected her to ridicule.

Jury finds Hardy guilty of murder

By Greg Smith
Associated Press

KEOKUK, Iowa — Kimmi Hardy's bizarre story of a faked pregnancy and a mysterious drug dealer came to an end Thursday when a jury found her guilty of killing an acquaintance to claim the woman's child as her own.

Hardy bowed her head several times but showed little emotion after a South Lee County jury returned their guilty verdicts on charges of first-degree murder, second-degree kidnapping and child stealing. That followed six hours of deliberation.

At least a dozen family members, including Hardy's parents, sisters and children, cried and hugged each other and were consoled by a family pastor who, like the family, declined comment.

Authorities accused Hardy, 36, of Keokuk, of fooling her husband Robert with a faked pregnancy. They say she lured Theresa Lynn Lund, 34, also of Keokuk, to her home and killed her last Aug. 28 with two gunshots to the head and then passed off Lund's 6-week-old son, Paul, as hers.

Hardy claimed a drug dealer from Florida named Anthony Matrana masterminded Lund's death and put her body in a crawl space at Hardy's home. Hardy, a mother of three, said she bought a baby boy from two employees of Matrana and didn't know the child was the son of Lund, who also has three other children.

Jurors didn't buy Hardy's story. "We didn't think she or her story was credible," said one of them, who spoke on the condition of anonymity. "We believed this Anthony Matrana was a real person but that she used him as a scapegoat."

County attorney Michael Short and assistant Bruce McDonald told jurors in closing arguments Hardy was lying to them about Matrana and her story that she did not know where he lived or his phone number.

Testimony revealed that Hardy and her first husband, Gary Drummond, had lived with Matrana for a short time in 1981 in Houma, La. He still lives there, where he is a baker.

"We seriously considered bringing him up (to testify), but time just didn't permit that," Short said at a news conference.

Velva Green, Lund's mother, cried when the verdicts were read and spoke to reporters afterward.

"I'm glad she got caught," she said. "There are children involved in this that will be hurt for a long time."

Green said she is not a vengeful person and doesn't believe in the death sentence.

"I do," Gerald Green of Keokuk, Lund's brother, said from the back of the room.

"The pressure today was very hard," he said. "We're glad it didn't take very long. We're thankful for the outcome of the verdict. That's what the family had hoped for."

Defense attorney Carl McMurray was not in court when the verdicts were read and couldn't be reached at his office later.

Assistant defense attorney Laura Amundson said Hardy will appeal.

"I'm disappointed, but I knew this (verdict) was a good possibility," Amundson said. "Mr. Short and Mr. McDonald put their case together very well."

District Court judge David Hendrickson sentenced Hardy to life in prison without parole on the murder conviction and up to 25 years for the kidnapping conviction, with the sentences to be served one after another.

Terry Bell, Lund's boyfriend who has been awarded custody of young Paul, arrived at the courthouse after the verdicts were returned but was prevented by police from going to the courtroom hallway because Hardy's family was still there.

Police were afraid of a confrontation.

"Let it go. It's over," one officer told Bell.

Bell said he was upset that prosecutors offered Robert Hardy a plea bargain agreement in which five of seven felony counts against him were dismissed in exchange for his testimony against his wife.

"I believe that anybody that was involved in this — in any way, shape or form — there should have been no deals cut," he said.

Bell was asked how he would explain the strange and tragic events of the past year to Paul one day.

"You tell me a good way," he said.

USDA allows yogurt to replace meat in elementary-school lunches

By Eun-Kyung Kim
Associated Press

ARLINGTON, Va. — The government's new rule that kids may eat yogurt in school lunches in place of meat may take some getting used to in some places.

At Randolph Elementary School in this suburb of the nation's capital, students and administrators agree it will be a hard-sell.

This school, like many others across the country, already offers yogurt a la carte.

But toward the end of a recent lunch hour, a sole container of yogurt, knocked over on its side, sat untouched in the refrigerator after repeatedly being passed over by students who reached for Jell-O cups instead.

"They go more for the fruit or Sunny D," a fruit drink, said cashier Tanja Johnson, ringing up students who whizzed by her Wednesday with their lunch trays.

Not once has she sold yogurt to a student.

"Only the teachers," she said.

Under a new rule announced earlier this week, an 8-ounce cup of yogurt could substitute for the hot dogs, spaghetti and fish sandwiches that were offered Wednesday as the school's main lunch.

"It depends on the choices. I don't know if they'll choose yogurt over spaghetti or over pizza. In fact, I guarantee they won't choose it over pizza."

items.

The USDA requires 2 ounces of meat or its equivalent in every school lunch. It already allows schools to substitute cheese, beans, eggs and peanut butter for meat.

From left: Katherine Campos, 5, Linda Argueta, 5, and Elise Holguin, 5, eat a lunch of spaghetti, fruit, hot dogs and french fries Wednesday at Randolph Elementary School in Arlington, Va. Fewer children may have this menu, as the Agriculture Department this week approved yogurt as a meat substitute in school lunches.

The idea of yogurt as a meat substitute in school lunches created a stir among the students in Judy Rundle's kindergarten class, most of whom never even heard of yogurt. Many shrugged their shoulders and furrowed their brows in confusion, looking around the table for a teacher or classmate who could fill them in.

"I know exactly what it is and I don't like it!" said 6-year-old Kendall Avery. Crinkling his face in disgust, Kendall said his one and only experience with yogurt was with "the white kind — and it just didn't taste right."

On the other side of the cafeteria, among older students, the dairy product fared a little better. When told the Agriculture Department announced this week that yogurt could substitute for meat in school lunches, 10-year-old Cherrelle Faust nodded in approval.

"That's cool. I'd eat it," said the fifth-grader. "It's better than pudding and stuff like Jell-O. It's softer and got more flavor."

Tiffany Ratliff, sitting two seats over, wondered aloud whether school officials would eventually substitute frozen yogurt for meat as well.

"Oooh, yeah, that would be great," she said, informing her friends, "It would be like ice cream, without all that fat."

While the kids pondered whether they would choose yogurt instead of a hot dog, Randolph Principal Gloria Hoffman said she doesn't know whether the new rule will have much impact.

"It depends on the choices," she said, raising her voice over the lunchroom clamor. "I don't know if they'll choose yogurt over spaghetti or over pizza. In fact, I guarantee they won't choose it over pizza."

Forum debates Cambus funding

By Kevin Doyle
The Daily Iowan

All UI students may experience an increase in the fees they pay for Cambus service, a Cambus representative said at a Thursday night forum at Macbride Auditorium.

The forum was held in response to complaints voiced by UI students who live at Hawkeye Court Apartments, who pay nearly twice as much in fees as students elsewhere because they must use both Cambus and Iowa City (ICT) services.

"Students may have to bear the burden of increasing the fee (for Cambus service)," said County Director of Transitioning Jeff Davidson said. "It's a very delicate idea."

Currently, $10 of UI student tuition is given to Cambus, up 45 percent of the system's revenue.

Hawkeye Court residents pay an extra $16 per month to ICT for receiving free transportation from Cambus.

GOP compromises on fund-raising probe

By Larry Margasak
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — A Republican plan to investigate "illegal activities" in the 1996 congressional and presidential campaigns was rammed through a Senate committee Thursday over Democratic objections.

Democratic leader Tom Daschle, speaking before the Rules Committee's 9-6 vote, said attempting to define illegal activities could cause "very serious" problems. But he did not threaten a filibuster and acknowledged, "We do need to get on with something."

The Republican resolution, which will reach the Senate floor Monday and may be ready for a vote Tuesday, was a compromise. It would shave more than $2 million from an earlier $6.5 million GOP funding proposal, set strict deadlines as demanded by Democrats and permit an investigation of congressional as well as presidential fund raising — along with activities of both political parties. Democrats had insisted congressional fund raising be included.

But to the chagrin of Democrats, the probe led by Sen. Fred Thompson, R-Tenn., will not include most "soft money" and independent expenditures — some of the most abused areas of campaign finance but rarely involving illegality.

"We have eliminated two big bites in my opinion," said Sen. Wendell Ford, D-Ky., of the plan devised by the Rules Committee chairperson, Sen. John Warner, R-Va., and Majority Leader Trent Lott, R-Miss. Nonetheless, the plan was a compromise.

Besides the lower $4.35 million cost, the plan set a Dec. 31 deadline for finishing the investigation — Democrats had fought any open-ended probe — and a month later for completing a report. And it included congressional campaigns, as Democrats demanded.

The excluded categories involve areas of unlimited expenditures. So-called "soft money" contributions are designed for party-building activities. Independent expenditures are donations by special-interest groups to elect or defeat candidates, without a candidate's involvement.

"I just don't believe that the Democrats want to be in a position of trying to, you know, block this or filibuster this," Lott said at a news conference before the Rules Committee meeting. "I think there are a lot of concessions involved here."

Before the committee acted, Chairperson Orrin Hatch of the Senate Judiciary Committee sought to have his panel ask the attorney general to appoint an independent counsel. The plan was postponed for a week after Democrats objected.

Meanwhile, new developments emerged involving the $50,000 donation delivered to Hillary Rodham Clinton's chief of staff, Margaret Williams, by California businessman Johnny Chung.

Privately, some White House officials were dismayed by the Williams development, complaining she could have avoided the latest flap by simply sending Chung to the Democratic National Committee. Though nobody said they suspected her of intentional wrongdoing, some aides said she acted carelessly.

Chung's donations to the Democratic National Committee — $366,000 in all, including the check for $50,000 — are being returned because of questions about their origin.

Chung handed the $50,000 check to Williams at her White House office on March 9, 1995, said one of Chung's attorneys, Lisa Tucker.

"There was a discussion in her office about a donation" and "the check was handed over to her," said Tucker, who declined to elaborate.

That was during a three-day period when Chung was showing a delegation of Chinese businessmen — executives in government-owned industries — around Washington, said Tucker. Chung took the group into the president's radio address on March 11, 1995.

$2.46 billion Pentagon missile project fails testing

By Robert Burns
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — In a setback for a high-priority Pentagon missile defense project, a Thaad interceptor launched Thursday from a test range in New Mexico failed to hit its target.

It was the fourth miss in four tests, dating back to December 1995.

Lt. Col. Rick Lehner, spokesperson for the Pentagon office that oversees the project, said the cause of the latest failure has not been determined. He said it was too early to say what consequences the failure might have on the project.

Paul Kaminski, the top Pentagon official in charge of weapons development, told a trade publication last month if Thaad failed another test, the Pentagon probably would push back its goal of fielding the system in 2004.

The missile project is a top priority for the military, which sees a growing threat to U.S. and allied troops abroad from attack by medium-range ballistic missiles, more sophisticated and deadly than the Scud missiles Iraq used in attacks on Israel and Saudi Arabia during the 1991 Gulf War.

Thaad is intended to provide a better defense than the Patriot, the only current antimissile missile in use.

Capt. Michael Doubleday, a Pentagon spokesperson, said $2.46 billion has been spent on the project since 1990. "This is a very important program to us," he said.

On Capitol Hill Thursday, the director of the Ballistic Missile Defense Organization, which oversees antimissile projects, said the threat posed by medium-range ballistic and cruise missiles "is here and now" and must be addressed.

Air Force Lt. Gen. Lester Lyles told a House National Security subcommittee that while the Thaad program had made some important advances, the Pentagon realizes it ultimately will collapse unless it can hit a test target.

Kaminski was quoted by Aviation Week and Space Technology in a Feb. 27 interview as saying one more test failure would not necessarily kill Thaad. But he said the lack of a successful hit "in the very near term" would force a major restructuring of the program, which is costing $622 million this year. The Defense Department is requesting $560 million more for the 1998 budget year.

"I don't think we're going to see funding for ballistic missile systems that aren't working," Kaminski was quoted as saying.

Lehner said no date had been set for the next test flight. Doubleday said the program schedule calls for another test in June, but that is now in doubt.

In announcing the latest failure, the Pentagon said the Thaad interceptor and debris from the target missile landed on the White Sands Missile Range in New Mexico as planned in the event of a miss.

Chance of microbes on Mars bugs NASA scientists

By Harry Rosenthal
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — It has come to this: A panel of scientists is warning NASA to be careful about contaminating Earth with hostile bugs when robots go to Mars to bring back soil samples. The risk is small, they say, but "not zero."

While researchers don't want to raise fears of an Andromeda Strain — as in Michael Crichton's best-selling novel about an extraterrestrial organism that threatens life on Earth — they urge that anything brought back be considered dangerous until proven otherwise.

"If life forms ever existed on Mars, either by having been formed in an independent origin or having been transferred there from Earth, it is possible that they have continued to exist up to the present time," says a National Research Council report released Thursday.

Two U.S. probes, the Mars Pathfinder and the Mars Global Surveyor, are en route to the Red Planet, but the first sample-return mission is not scheduled until the middle of the next decade.

To prepare for that, NASA asked the research council's Space Studies Board in 1995 for guidance about protecting Mars from our microbes — and us from Mars'. An engineer and a lawyer were on the panel with the scientists.

For starters, even if Martian microorganisms were somehow introduced into Earth's environment, the study said, "the likelihood that they could survive and grow and produce harmful effects is judged to be low." The Martian bugs, "would be unlikely to be able to compete successfully with Earth organisms, which are well adapted to their habitats."

Some of the anxiety about contamination from another planet was fueled last August when NASA researchers announced they had found possible signs of life in a meteorite discovered in Antarctica 13 years ago.

The rock, originating on Mars, contained chemicals that can be produced by bacteria and it had unusual microscopic shapes that could be interpreted as fossilized microbes.

Other researchers have disputed the interpretation by the NASA researchers and their conclusions about Martian life remain controversial.

The National Research Council panel said while the Martian surface is believed inhospitable to life as we know it, "there remain plausible scenarios for extant (still existing) microbial life on Mars — for instance, in possible hydrothermal (hot water) oases or in subsurface regions."

Therefore, the report said, samples returned from Mars should be "treated as though potentially hazardous until proven otherwise." That includes sterilizing them in space or putting them in containers — and building a safe facility to check them out.

FAYETTEVILLE, N.C. — A judge dismissed the jury on the sentence of a supremacist soldier convicted of killing two black people. Jurors said they were hopelessly deadlocked Thursday.

The deadlock meant Judge Brewer was required by statute to impose life terms on Burmeister II, when the hearing set for later Thursday convened.

Jurors had to decide whether to impose a death or life sentence on Burmeister II, who was convicted last week of counts of first-degree murder.

Jury deadlocks in N.C. racial killing case

By Estes Thompson

FAYETTEVILLE, N.C. — A judge dismissed the jury considering the sentence of a white supremacist soldier convicted of killing two black people after jurors said they were hopelessly deadlocked Thursday.

The deadlock meant Judge Cody Brewer was required by state law to impose life terms on James Burmeister II, when the sentencing hearing set for later Thursday convened.

Jurors had to decide whether to impose a death or life sentence on Burmeister, 21, of Thompson, Pa., who was convicted last week of two counts of first-degree murder and one count of conspiracy in the death of a black couple slain on a Fayetteville street.

Brewer sent the 12-member panel home after it returned to court a second time Thursday to say it was at an impasse.

Prosecutors said Burmeister was a member of an extremist skinhead group at Fort Bragg who wanted to earn a spider-web tattoo by killing a black person. They say Jackie Burden, 27, and Michael James, 36, were walking along a dark street when Burmeister stalked and shot them to death early Dec. 7, 1995.

Burmeister is the first of two former Fort Bragg soldiers to be tried in the deaths. Malcolm Wright, 22, is scheduled for trial March 31.

Defense lawyers said no proof existed that Burmeister fired the fatal shots and he was too drunk to think clearly about committing the crime.

Jurors had deliberated about six hours over two days before sending a note to Brewer asking for his help.

The jury foreman told Brewer in court the jurors had sided 11-1 on a punishment for Burmeister on both murder counts. A death sentence by state law must be a unanimous decision by the jury.

The foreman did not say which way they were leaning. After questioning the foreman for a few minutes, Brewer sent the jury to lunch and said jurors would resume deliberations this afternoon after he gave them more instructions.

A defense lawyer asked Brewer to take the case away from the jury and impose life sentences on Burmeister, but the judge refused.

Finally, the foreman told Brewer at 3:45 p.m. the panel remained at the same 11-1 impasse it was at this morning.

"Do you believe there is any reasonable possibility that with additional deliberation, that this jury will be able to reach a unanimous recommendation?" Brewer asked. "We do not," the foreman said.

"The court finds the jury is definitely deadlocked," said Brewer, who thanked the jurors for their work. Jury selection started Jan. 21 and opening arguments were heard Feb. 11.

4 girls killed as tree crushes van

By Frank Eltman
Associated Press

NEW YORK — A 60-foot maple toppled in the wind and fell on a van carrying children and adults to minister-congressman Floyd Flake's church school Thursday, crushing four girls to death.

The girls — two of them sisters — were 10 to 12 years old. The driver, her husband and four other children suffered minor injuries.

"I've known these kids since they were babies," Flake, his eyes red and his voice breaking, said at the hospital where the survivors were taken.

With the wind gusting to 50 mph, the van was heading for the Allen

Christian School in the Queens neighborhood of St. Albans.

"Get the babies out! Get the babies out!" the driver, Maxine Capers, cried as she emerged bruised and shaken from the wreck.

Workers had to saw the tree away and pry open the van's roof to reach the four other girls. They were pronounced dead in their seats.

Killed were Olivia Warren, Kia Saterfield and Kimberly Washington, all 10, and Kimberly's 12-year-old sister Christian Washington, police said.

Thursday's wind blew down more than 100 trees in parks and on sidewalks in New York City.

Beethoven for Dummies: Capitalizing on classical

By Calvin Woodward
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Beethoven can be found these days amid the frilly undies at Victoria's Secret. Just go past the Lace Top Thigh Highs and hang a right.

On the counter, the German composer serves up Love Immortal, a tape of classical music to go with your love life. Schubert does Passion and Pleasure.

In the music business, the oldest kid on the block is learning lessons from the upstarts. At least as much as jazz, pop and New Age, classical music is being packaged for every mood, impulse, need and occasion.

In other stores, Mozart delivers music precisely for the morning commute. (So far, you're on your own for the drive home.) There's also a soothing Baroque for Bath-time.

You can have Breakfast in Bed with Grieg, Bizet, Chopin — and Martha Stewart. Or Sunday Brunch with Bach, Handel, Vivaldi — and Martha Stewart.

The masters provide the music. Stewart, the ubiquitous guide to crafts, gardening, food and taste, contributes recipes.

"Classical music is a language — a language of feeling," said Peter Munves, a PolyGram senior vice president who is responsible for many lifestyle titles. "We have linked one feeling in one album." The traditional classical titles mean little to many people, he said. "This paints a picture for them."

Some critics have suggested assorted dead European composers are spinning in graves over this.

But Munves' 21-title "Set Your Life to Music" series, which includes the bath, bedtime and commuting music, has sold more than 1 million recordings, impressive for a genre in the doldrums.

Before taking charge of PolyGram's classical catalog, Munves worked on the CBS Masterworks "Dinner Classics" series, classical gastronomy that offers music and recipes for specific meals.

Now there's the IDG Books, which created the "Dummies" series of instructional publications. It has teamed with Angel Records to make the classics "fun and easy" with interactive CDs such as Beethoven for Dummies.

Walk through a record store and the classical aisles are still full of albums featuring fancy old art and guys in suits.

But a prominent section features classical compilations such as Ecstasy, Intimacy and Cosmopolitan magazine's Seduction. Covers depict scantily clad people who seem to be enjoying the music immensely.

"People will buy them as

lifestyle products, as impulse purchases, not as classical music," Heidi Waleson, contributing classical editor for Billboard magazine, says of the themed recordings.

"They're buying the music because it's background music."

Such marketing offers companies an economical way to package old material and sell it at reasonable prices, often under $10.

It's also a way to help baby boomers make the leap to classical. London Record's Exile on Classical Street does this most explicitly by featuring rock stars' favorite classical selections.

Waleson said many of the compilations are wonderfully played but generally offer movements or parts of movements matching the particular mood, instead of the whole symphony.

Love it or hate it, it's a tribute to the greats.

Those who like the idea of Mozart for Morning Coffee or Lease Breakers — high-decibel classical designed to get "revenge on your neighbors" — say it shows the classics still resonate in modern life.

Others say it shows the music is, despite this marketing form, indestructible.

Apart from Victoria's Secret, with its own collection, the lifestyle classics have moved beyond music stores to bookstores and other shops.

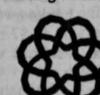

Munves says buyers tend to be women ages 19 to 49 with little or no classical music exposure. His Mozart for Mothers-to-be implies in liner notes that moms who listen may have tuneful babies.

It's unknown what happens if someone plays Mozart for the Morning Commute at bedtime, or bathtub baroque during a meal.

Probably only a dummy would try such a thing.

Philosophy of the Infinite and Foundations of Contemporary Mathematics:
Nonstandard Analysis and Abraham Robinson
Sponsored By:

Guest Speaker:
Joseph W. Dauben,
Graduate Center, City University of New York

Abraham Robinson is best known for his discovery and development of nonstandard analysis, a rigorous theory of infinitesimals that Robinson used to unite mathematical logic with the larger body of modern mathematics. This lecture will explore the personal and academic dimensions of Robinson's work as both an applied and theoretical mathematician. It will also focus on non-standard analysis as a paradigmatic example of how mathematical logic, using the powerful methods of model theory, has made an original, even revolutionary contribution to modern mathematics.

An end of an era: British leave Hong Kong

By Marcus Eliason
Associated Press

HONG KONG — A luxury ship pulled out of Hong Kong at sunset Thursday, carrying away 53 British civil servants and their families in an evocative reminder that the end of empire is at hand.

The British-owned Oriana made its last stop in Hong Kong before China takes over the British colony in less than four months.

There was little fanfare as the 69,000-ton ship slid out of the harbor between the skyscrapers of a city preoccupied with its Chinese future rather than its British past.

"I stuck a pin in a map and said, Hong Kong it is."

Peter Berry, a civil service engineer on why he came to Hong Kong in 1963.

The only touch of ceremony came from the bagpipes of a Chinese police band that performs for every big liner that sails in and out of Hong Kong.

The civil servants had employment contracts that entitled them and their 72 relatives to a luxury voyage home that's costing the Hong Kong taxpayer $8,000 per person.

This is a sore point among many Hong Kong taxpayers. "It creates a very bad image. It makes people think all the British did was come out to Hong Kong to live it up," says John Walden, a retired British civil servant who has stayed on in Hong Kong.

But Peter Berry, departing after 34 years as a civil service engineer, saw it as a bonus of more than $230 annually for each year he served the Hong Kong public.

He said he came to Hong Kong in 1963 because he was sick of winters in England. "I stuck a pin in a map and said, Hong Kong it is."

Berry, 60, believed Hong Kong would prosper under China. His son works in a bank here, and he plans to return in June to a part-time job.

Clive Pulling, 52, a Hong Kong police officer for 29 years, said he was going for good, and looking forward "to some green fields and a little bit of countryside, as an antidote to the urban life in Hong Kong."

Betsy Drummond, wife of a Marine Department official, said she longed for her native Scotland, "for the friends, the family ... yes, even the weather."

"I think it's time to go," she added.

Anat Givon/Associated Press

Royston Griffey (center) one of 53 Hong Kong civil servants who are leaving the British territory with their families, holds his head while consoling his 8-year-old son Allen before boarding the London-bound Oriana cruise liner after 18 years of service in Hong Kong, Thursday, at Hong Kong's Victoria Harbor.

Royston Griffey, 53, a law draftsman in the Legal Department, was leaving with his Chinese wife and 8-year-old son. He said he would miss the food, the friends, "the buzz and excitement," but not the crowds and polluted air.

Another 13 civil servants will sail Saturday aboard the Queen Elizabeth 2. Hundreds more have opted to stay on, as the handover treaty entitles them to, but under less generous terms offered to Chinese civil servants.

Swiss firms donate $46 million to Holocaust fund

By Alexander Higgins
Associated Press

GENEVA — Swiss companies are contributing $46 million to a fund set up by banks to aid victims of the Holocaust, the Swiss federation of industries said Thursday.

The donation means there is now $188 million in the fund begun by the three largest Swiss banks a month ago under pressure from Jewish organizations.

That money is in addition to a Swiss government plan announced Wednesday for a $5 billion fund to aid victims of the Holocaust and other genocides or disasters.

The banks set up the humanitarian fund to help impoverished Jews, Gypsies and other Holocaust victims while investigations continue into the banks' handling of the assets of people murdered by the Nazis.

Jewish organizations claim the banks owe the heirs of Nazi victims up to $7 billion in assets and interest that went unclaimed after the war.

The banks claim it is much less. In 1962, they gave 9.5 million Swiss francs (now about $7 million) to Jewish charities as a settlement, but subsequently have conceded that may not have been enough.

An international panel headed by former U.S. Federal Reserve Chairperson Paul Volcker is looking for any missing assets.

The banks also are conducting their own search, and the Swiss government has set up an independent international panel of experts that began meeting this week to study Switzerland's role during World War II.

The latest contribution to the humanitarian fund came after the

"We are pleased by this initiative, which indicates Switzerland is aware of its moral responsibility."

Peter Feldmayer, leader of Hungary's Jewish community, on the $5 billion government fund to aid Holocaust victims

Swiss Federation of Commerce and Industry, based in Zurich, appealed to its members for contributions.

On Wednesday, Switzerland's central bank, announced it was giving $71 million, matching $71 million already put up by the three commercial banks.

The central bank has been accused of laundering gold plundered by the Nazis from occupied countries during World War II.

Meanwhile, Swiss Finance Minister Kaspar Villiger stressed Thursday that the $5 billion government fund is meant to assist not only Holocaust victims, but a broad range of victims of past, present or future genocides and disasters.

A leader of Hungary's Jewish community, Peter Feldmayer, welcomed the $5 billion government fund, saying: "We are pleased by this initiative, which indicates Switzerland is aware of its moral responsibility."

The Hungarian parliament voted late Tuesday to set aside $23.5 million to be distributed among Hungarian Holocaust survivors. About 600,000 Hungarian Jews perished in the Holocaust.

Wal-Mart trapped between Canadian, U.S. laws

OTTAWA (AP) — Wal-Mart's sleepwear section has become a diplomatic trouble spot following the retailer's decision to pull Cuban-made pajamas from the shelves of its Canadian stores.

Withdrawing the men's pajamas may conform with the U.S. embargo against Cuba — but it also risks breaking Canadian law and has irked Ottawa, which has full trade relations with Fidel Castro's communist nation.

Wal-Mart Canada, a subsidiary of the giant Arkansas-based retail chain, yanked thousands of pairs of the pajamas from all its 135 Canadian stores last week.

The pullout came after shoppers in Winnipeg, Manitoba, pointed out that the company would not be able to sell the clothing in the United States because of the embargo.

That triggered an investigation by Canada's Justice Department, which is looking into whether Wal-Mart violated a Canadian law intended to deter companies from complying with the U.S. embargo.

"We follow our own economic and political objectives," Foreign Minister Lloyd Axworthy said. "We expect Canadian companies to follow Canadian law."

Wal-Mart Canada spokesperson Ed Gould said the company decided to remove the pajamas while it tries to determine whether it was breaking U.S. law.

"We've asked our legal counsel to determine if there are any laws in the United States which would prevent a Canadian subsidiary from selling this product," he said. "I would sincerely hope we get clarification and the product can go back on the shelf."

The case deals directly with one of the few sensitive issues clouding U.S.-Canadian relations.

Canada's Foreign Extraterritorial Measures Act was amended last year to allow for fines of up to $7 million U.S. or prison terms of up to five years for executives of Canadian firms — or foreign firms registered in Canada — that obey foreign laws enforcing the Cuba embargo.

It was a direct response to the United States' Helms-Burton law, which allows U.S. citizens to sue foreign companies whose business uses property confiscated since Castro took power in Cuba.

Executives from those companies also can be denied visas to enter the United States, as has happened already with top officials of Toronto-based mining company Sherritt International.

Canada and the 15-nation European Union have rejected U.S. claims the Helms-Burton law is a private matter of national security for the United States. They accuse Washington of violating international trade rules by seeking to impose its policies beyond U.S. territory.

Yeltsin:

By Dave Carpenter

MOSCOW — A vigorous Boris Yeltsin strode back to a center stage Thursday promised to shake some sense into a government he acknowledged riddled by corruption and incompetence.

Four months after heart surgery and twice that long since his major speech, the 66-year-old president went before parliament pledged emergency measures to jump-start economic reform, describes as "stuck."

It was vintage Yeltsin: full of finger-pointing and specifics for curing a Russia depicted as having gone to the wrong.

Russia is "still struggling flood of problems," he said 25-minute address, tele-nationally. "We haven't been reach the far bank."

War on cholesterol gets new enemy

By Steve Sakson
Associated Press

NEW YORK — High cholesterol can kill you slowly and quietly, but the companies that make prescription drugs to lower it are being anything but quiet as they try to convince Americans these medicines can save their lives.

Newspapers, magazines and television are peppered with advertisements with feel-good images of "Happy Birthday Dad" cards and smiling gray-haired men chasing their grandsons on the beach.

"It's your future. Be there," says one.

In 1996, cholesterol-cutters like Zocor, Mevacor and Pravachol were among the fastest growing in the industry, with sales rising 30 percent to about $3 billion, according to Source Informatics, a Phoenix-based researcher.

In February, a new more-potent competitor called Lipitor blasted onto the scene following months of subtle promotion to doctors. By early this week, it already had grabbed a stunning 5 percent market share, among the five drugs in its class, said Source Informatics.

"They've had everybody salivating for it," said Dr. Richard Pasternak, director of preventive cardiology at Massachusetts General Hospital in Boston.

Doctors have believed for decades that high cholesterol contributes to heart disease by causing a buildup of fatty plaque in coronary arteries that rob the heart of oxygen. So why the clamor to treat it now?

Well, for the first time, there's scientific proof that cutting cholesterol does save lives.

Since 1994, three major studies in Scandinavia, Scotland and the United States showed the family of cholesterol-lowering drugs called "statins" can reduce deaths from heart attacks by 24 percent to 42 percent, even in people with no symptoms of heart disease.

Yet, high cholesterol remains a grossly undertreated condition. Merck & Co., maker of Zocor and Mevacor, estimates only 30 percent of the 13 million Americans with symptoms of heart disease are reducing their cholesterol. An additional 16 million with high cholesterol, but no symptoms of heart disease, are untreated.

By advertising their drugs directly to consumers, companies like Merck and Bristol-Myers Squibb Co., maker of Pravachol, are motivating patients to get treatment, said Hemant Shah, an industry analyst in Warren, N.J.

"Cholesterol is silent. Most people don't think about cholesterol because it doesn't hurt them; there's no pain involved," Shah said.

Doctors didn't agree always that using drugs to lower cholesterol is a good idea. One study — later discredited — even spurred fears the drugs could increase gastrointestinal cancers.

"Then there was this bizarre hard-to-explain phenomenon of accidents and violent deaths, people running their cars through railings, homicides, suicides," said Pasternak of incidents involving users of cholesterol-cutting drugs.

These concerns already were eroding at the time of the latest three studies — which involved more than 15,000 people and found no evidence the statins caused gastrointestinal cancer or strange behavior.

"These are very safe drugs," said Dr. Richard Steingart, chief cardiologist at Winthrop-University Hospital in Mineola, N.Y.

The only significant side effects are liver and muscle damage, but these were seen in less than 1 percent of patients, he said.

son said.

"The management feels threatened," Anderson said. "However, all employees have been vocal (about the union) improving the Co-Op and to make it better for managers and employees."

Union supporters feel the Co-Op has moved away from an organization of equals, to a hierarchical structure, Lueders said.

"It's becoming a corporation with a pyramid effect," Lueders said. "For a co-op, that is unhealthy. It's natural for the Co-Op to have a union because (a co-op) should be a union of people."

For $60, customers can purchase a regular membership, which allows them to avoid a 5 percent fee charged to non-members. If they choose to volunteer nine hours each month, they receive a 30 percent discount. Members receive also a monthly newsletter and are invited to special events, such as concerts, sponsored by the Co-Op.

Last week, Co-Op members formed Members for an Accountable Co-Op (MAC) and gathered customer signatures on a petition calling for a board meeting to express their displeasure toward management and support for employees.

"Unions are always good," said

Vicki Grube, a 15-year member of the Co-Op. "It gives employees a feeling of power and a vehicle so they can be organized in a unified fashion."

Nancy Jaspers, a five-year Co-Op member, agreed.

"Personally, I am not a union person, but if they feel that way, it should be their choice," she said.

Lueders recalled a humorous moment that happened just a few weeks ago.

"Six founding members in their late 40s and early 50s came in singing and screaming 'We Will Roll the Union.' They were kicked out," Lueders said.

cy Hospital Medical Center in Des Moines, Iowa Methodist Medical Center in Des Moines and Genesis Medical Center in Davenport.

The most waste was generated in Des Moines with 3,070 tons per year.

Environmental activists worry about incineration of medical waste, arguing the burning emits a toxin called dioxin, which is dangerous.

Dioxin can be stored in animal fat and rural incinerators can deposit dioxin on grass eaten by livestock.

"Thus the primary path of dioxin exposure for most Americans is meat and dairy products," the report said. "In Iowa, cattle grazing and medical waste incineration occur in close proximity. Of the cattle raised in Iowa, 27 percent graze in counties that have incinerators."

The report was timed for release as environmental regulators consider new rules on emissions from medical waste disposal facilities. The Iowa Citizen Action Network, a consumer activist group, released the study.

Officials of that group said they were worried proposed regulations aren't strict enough.

Steve Siegel, head of the group, said the proposed regulations "would allow small rural med-waste incinerators to operate with no pollution controls whatsoever."

Iowa City.

The Agape Cafe, with its menus and decorated round tables, is meant to simulate a real restaurant environment. It is modeled after a similar mission restaurant in Chicago called the Inspiration Cafe.

The inspiration for this cafe came from a desire to provide a fun volunteer activity for UI students while helping develop relationships with homeless citizens, cafe director Julia Easley said.

"I wanted to create some creative campus ministry, something students could be interested in and have expertise as well," Easley said, "to promote conversation and relationships that would not otherwise be there."

The relationships are important to both the servers and the patrons. Cafe Coordinator Preben Borch said he enjoys the friends he makes at the cafe.

"The community that develops in this place is incredible — the barriers that get broken," Borch said.

Marty, a patron of the cafe, said he has come to know the servers well.

"You develop friendships with some of the students," Marty said.

"Other students should check this out, to learn to socialize with people and communicate with others."

Ben Weyrick, a UI sophomore and server at the cafe said he cannot imagine not volunteering. He is glad to have developed relationships with patrons.

"There are certain people that you make friends with," Weyrick said. "When I leave the university, I will miss this more than any other activity I have been involved in."

Borch recognizes that the classy design of the cafe is an important part of its appeal to customers. He said it is set up to provide dignity and respect for everyone.

"It blows away our guests when they first come in. We try to run it like a fancy place, like a real restaurant," Borch said.

The safe and relaxed atmosphere contrasts with other places that serve food for the homeless, said Jeff, a guest of the cafe.

"I like the atmosphere," Jeff said. "It's quiet and peaceful. There are no hostilities. In Texas, it's different. In the soup kitchens, the people are always ready to fight."

Marty agreed that feeling relaxed while enjoying his breakfast is a key reason he comes to the cafe.

"Nobody is around to bother you," he said. "You can sit back and enjoy yourself rather than having to watch your back all the time."

The entire operation begins with the students, Easley said. She said the guests are articulate and willing to talk, so the effort of the students is essential.

"I continue to be surprised by how smoothly it runs. I am impressed by the commitment of our volunteers," Easley said.

Jeff said the opportunity is one students should take advantage of. He said it gives them good job training and interpersonal skills.

"It's good for the students to see the other side, for some who don't have homes," Jeff said.

The volunteer work is rewarding to UI freshman Liz Langley.

"The rest of the day you just smile because you've helped someone else, bettered their day," Langley said.

The feeling Borch said he gets from coordinating the volunteer work is gratifying.

"It's the heartbeat of my week," Borch said. "That feeling is what keeps me going the rest of the week."

"I'm a motor mouth," said Taresa O'Rourke, who has been an attendant for five years. "I love getting outside to see people and talk to them."

O'Rourke said criticism about the amount of parking in downtown Iowa City is unjustified, because the area is designed to be a short-term parking area.

"The downtown area is prime parking, and a lot of the time people don't understand it's short-term," she said. "Overall, I think they have a really good system for parking, as long as the public keeps the system running by freeing up spaces."

UI sophomore Aaron Hoelt said he drives to campus occasionally, and although he has never received a parking ticket in Iowa City, he has friends who often do.

"They're always bitching about all the parking tickets they get," he said. "It's a pain that they get a $5 parking ticket for being five minutes late to feed the meter."

"Meter-feeders" like Sylvia Stayton, the 63-year-old grandmother who was arrested for feeding expired meters in Cincinnati in October, are prominent around Iowa City, attendants said. O'Rourke said she has no problem with it, as long as it's not gratuitous.

"I think if someone feeds a meter, more power to them," she said. "I don't see that as a problem. If I don't have to write that ticket, then fine. I'll just come back in an hour after the meter's up."

Parrott said one of her biggest pet peeves is people who still call female attendants "meter maids."

"I don't like that term, but even my husband calls me that," she said. "I'm a parking meter attendant. We're not old maids."

Hurmence said she does not think UI students are the worst at parking in Iowa City, nor are they the most argumentative.

"Some of the worst experiences I've had are with middle-aged people," she said. "They know how to argue better."

• Wisconsin and Northwestern did not receive votes.

The Hawkeyes' new season begins Saturday at noon when they go for their 24th-consecutive Big Ten Conference championship in Minneapolis. The last time Iowa did not win the conference tournament was 1973, three years before Dan Gable became head coach and before any Iowa wrestlers were even born.

"I can't say I'm looking at the Big Tens any different than I've always looked at them," Gable said. "It's a qualifier for the national tournament. It just so happens we've won them all."

By most teams' standards, the Hawkeyes have enjoyed yet another successful season. They lost just one of 16 dual meets, finished first at the Midlands Championships and were runners-up at the National Duals.

Still, Iowa looked sluggish at various times during the season, and by losing to Oklahoma State, moved to an unusual position — No. 2.

For Iowa to climb back to the top, it needs continued success from its proven wrestlers and a surprise or two from some others. Last season, all 10 Hawkeyes scored points at the Big Ten and NCAA Championships.

The upper-weight classes will be crucial for Iowa during this weekend's two-day tournament. 167-pounder Mike Uker (12-10) has had a lackluster season, while Tony Ersland (9-11) has struggled all year at 177.

"It's a new season, a clean slate. Everybody's even right now," said Ersland, a senior. "It's my last hurrah, so it's important for me."

For the first time since the National Duals, three top-ranked wrestlers will compete in Iowa's lineup. Two-time NCAA champion Lincoln McIlravy (14-0) missed the team's final seven duals with post-concussion symptoms, but will wrestle this weekend.

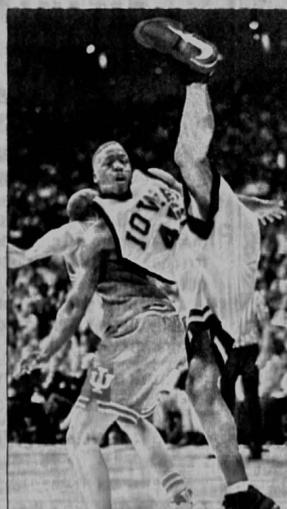

The 150-pound McIlravy has rejected interview requests in recent weeks, but Gable said his pupil is ready.

Moore's season ends with home crowd

Pete Thompson/The Daily Iowan

Darryl Moore boxes out during the Hawkeyes' win over Indiana, Feb. 4.

By Chris Snider
The Daily Iowan

The smile on Darryl Moore's face Wednesday night said it all.

The Hawkeye junior was pleased with his team's 81-55 victory over Penn State, the fact that his good friend and teammate Andre Woolridge played spectacularly in his final home game as a Hawkeye and that his team appeared well on its way to an NCAA Tournament bid.

But there was something else behind Moore's smile.

The Chicago native will play his first college game in front of his parents when Iowa travels to Northwestern Saturday. Moore's family lives in Chicago and is not able to attend games, but has been planning to attend Saturday's for some time.

"They never saw me live before," he said. "They always watch me on the television, so this is the first time they will see me play."

Tipoff is scheduled for 3:05 p.m. at Welsh-Ryan Arena in Evanston, Ill.

After battling on the Iowa scout team for three years, Moore earned a spot in the Iowa rotation this season. Soon after, he was rewarded with a scholarship.

Now, with one game left in the regular season, Moore has found a home in Iowa's starting lineup. He has started nine games this season, including the last four.

The 6-foot-2 swingman is expecting 20 friends and family members to make it to the game, which will feature the second place Hawkeyes against the Big Ten cellar-dweller Wildcats.

"A lot of people want to come to the game, Moore said. "I can't get tickets for all of them. Some of them will have to pay, but they're still going to come."

Iowa (20-9, 11-6) is fresh off the Penn State victory. Northwestern (7-21, 2-15) lost to Michigan, 93-76, on Wednesday, but will be looking for a solid performance in its final game under coach Ricky Byrdson, who was fired in February.

"I don't want the team to take anything for granted," Iowa coach Tom Davis said. "We want to finish with some style. We want to go in there and try to play as hard as we can play."

Carver cops, let us support our Hawks!

Why is it that the image which will forever be imprinted in my memory of Andre Woolridge's last home game isn't the picture of him shredding the defense and slicing to the hoop? Instead, it is the event which took place with less than three minutes left in the game.

Two young boys — I'm guessing they weren't older than 10 — walked down more than 20 steps in Carver-Hawkeye Arena, carefully carrying a small sign that paid tribute to both Woolridge and ESPN. After reaching the concourse, they held the sign up so Woolridge could see it when he exited the game.

Except someone else saw it first.

Just as the children raised up the sign, a large grey-haired, yellow-jacketed Per-Mar man grabbed his walkie-talkie, rushed over, yanked it out of their small hands, crumpled it up and walked away.

My friends and I were mortified. I have one thing to ask this man and his boss: Were you always fun-haters or did you slowly evolve with age?

With walkie-talkie in hands, Per-Mar officials do their best to suppress "rowdy" behavior in Carver-Hawkeye Arena — whether it is kicking football players out of courtside seats or confiscating signs from 10-year-old boys. They are sending one loud and very clear message: Just try showing team support and we will get you!

The Michigan game was a classic example of Per-Mar in action. The yellow

The pounding echo of feet crashing on the floor, the cheers ringing off the ballowed walls, the familiar grip on the battle torn bar.

Six seniors on the Iowa men's gymnastics team will experience those feelings for the last time at the UI Fieldhouse Saturday when the Hawkeyes host Michigan State in their last home dual meet of the season.

One of those seniors, Peter Masucci said emotions will be running high against the Spartans.

"It's going to be tough," he said. "It will be the last time for the six of us to perform in a place that is very special to us."

The Big Ten clash is scheduled for 7 p.m.

The 11th ranked Spartans should be weary of coming into Iowa City. The last time a Big Ten team did, it was waxed. Minnesota was on the wrong end of a 229.625-223.875 decision, Jan. 31.

Hawkeye freshman Lou Datilio said Iowa needs to build momentum before next week's Big Ten meet in Minneapolis.

Last weekend against Nebraska, the Hawkeyes were upset by the No. 5 Cornhuskers, 231.65 to 229.10 in Lincoln.

"We don't look as good as we really are," Datilio said. "Hopefully we can take the emotion out of senior night and the loss to Nebraska and give it to Michigan State. If we can have a big meet, then we'll have something to take to Minneapolis next week."

Iowa's Tyler Vogt, another one of the six seniors, may miss the meet due to a shoulder injury.

"I'm disappointed," Vogt said. "I don't think it's worth risking more damage before the Big Ten meet. But it's too bad that it had to happen on what is other-

BIG TEN TOURNAMENT

"He gets scored on once in a while, very seldom," Gable said. "In one practice, he'll leave with a week's worth of practice."
All signs of the concussion problem have diminished, Gable said.
"He got hit in the head a few times, and he was like, 'Oh my God, I'm gonna have this again,' and he realized it didn't come back."
The other two No. 1-ranked Hawkeyes are Mark Ironside at 134 and Joe Williams at 158. Both have perfect 21-0 records and hope

IOWA VS. NORTHWESTERN

Northwestern is going to give us a good effort on their home court. It's Ricky Byrdson's last game as well as their last game of the season.
"I think they're going to come out flying. They've beaten people on that court and they've stayed with everybody."
The Hawkeyes, who have won

Even though Iowa fell to the Cornhuskers, the Hawkeyes managed to jump back to the No. 2 low-jacketed ones could be seen surveying the student section, just waiting for a college student to put up the ever-scary and offensive "Coming up on SportsCenter" sign.

FANS COME FIRST

Without hesitation, they would stagger up the steps, rid the arena of the tiny billboard, and all would be right with the world.
"I'm trying and trying to see the wisdom in not allowing signs in Carver-Hawkeye Arena, but there just doesn't seem to be any."
OK, let's look at this rationally. If profane or derogatory messages are embedded on a sign, then by all means they shouldn't be allowed.

THE WEEKEND IS JUST ANOTHER DAY AT THE OFFICE.

"I'm feeling good and I'm feeling strong," said Ironside, a two-time Big Ten champion. "We've had some ups and downs and now it's time to get rid of the downs."
If Iowa can get solid performances from the two freshmen in its lineup, it will be nearly impossible for any Big Ten team to challenge the Hawkeyes.
Unranked 142-pounder Kasey Gilliss (13-9) and No. 9 heavyweight Wes Hand are looking forward to their first postseason appearances in Hawkeye singlets.
"I try not to look at it as my first time," Gilliss said. "It's just another tournament and it's a new season. This is the season that counts."
Hand, who owns a record of 16-6, said, "This is the best I've felt all year as far as technique, conditioning and health ... I haven't really thought about my seed (6). I don't really care who I wrestle."
If Iowa does struggle at its suspect weights, the teams that could make some noise include No. 3 Minnesota, No. 4 Illinois and No. 5

MOORE, WHO HAS NEVER PLAYED IN THE NCAA TOURNAMENT, SAID THE TEAM IS ENTERING THE NORTHWESTERN GAME AS IF IT WERE THE FIRST ROUND OF THE NCAA'S.

"We're trying to look at it now as one and done — one loss, you're out," Moore said. "We have to have that mentality going into the tournament, knowing that if we lose, that's the last game of the year and the last game with Andre."
Of course, Moore has something else on his mind as well — what he will do to impress the home crowd.
"Ten rebounds, 10 points," he said. "I want to get a lot of rebounds because that's what I like to do. If I can get a lot of rebounds and show a lot of hustle, that would be my ideal game, but they're on my side whatever I do."
In the coaches' pre-seeding, each of the three top-ranked Hawkeyes received top seeds, along with 126-pounder Mike Mena (18-4). Official seeds will be announced tonight in Minneapolis.
Penn State. The remaining conference schools will have to settle for spoiler status.
Gable's squad knows how anxious the host Golden Gophers will be to end the Iowa streak.
"I'm really ready for the crowd. I love those situations," Ironside said. "I'm just gonna go and shut 'em up."

Softball

This Week: Leaving indoor training facilities and cold weather behind, the No. 9 Iowa softball squad will travel to Tampa, Fla., to compete in the South Florida Speedline Invitational today through Sunday. Coach Gayle Blevins is calling the tournament a 'big test for her team due to the quantity and quality of teams the Hawkeyes will face. Iowa opens the journey today against Illinois-Chicago at 11 a.m., Virginia at 3 p.m., and Florida at 7 p.m. Saturday, the Hawkeyes will face Western Michigan at 10 a.m. and Central Michigan at 2 p.m. If Iowa places in the top three of its pool, the team will participate in a single-elimination bracket on Sunday.

Tournament Notes: Iowa is one of six top-25 schools competing in the 24-team field ... The Hawkeyes have not practiced outside since the Arizona State Classic Feb. 21-23 ... According to Blevins, Iowa has played 10-15 fewer games than other teams with similar ratings in the USA Today poll ... Iowa's first opponent, Illinois-Chicago, has already had five outings compared to just one for the Hawkeyes. "It's a disadvantage to have started a little late," Blevins said. "These teams are ahead of us right now, but I hope it will help us in the Big Ten." ... Last year, Iowa went 7-1 in the tournament, losing to UCLA, 1-2, in the championship game.

Coach's Comments: "We plan this weekend to build upon our success in Arizona," Blevins said. "This is a grueling tournament with a lot of competition, but that's what we want in order to get a good look at the team. We will face teams that are ahead of us in the amount of time they have been outside. We will have to work hard to play our game."

Men's Tennis

This Week: The Hawkeyes travel to South Bend, Ind., to take on No. 29 Notre Dame. Play begins today at 3:30 p.m. Iowa is 6-2 on the year and ranked No. 14 in the region, while the Fighting Irish are No. 2 in that same region.

Game Notes: Iowa is fresh off a 5-2 upset of Drake. The Hawkeyes won four of six singles matches and two of three in the doubles category ... Notre Dame boasts four players ranked in the top 30 in the region for singles players, while Iowa has only senior Tom Derouin ... Notre Dame's doubles team is ranked No. 4 in the region, but Iowa has lost only one doubles point in its eight matches this year. Overall, the Hawkeyes are 17-4 in doubles matches ... Iowa hasn't beaten Notre Dame since 1988 ... In 1995, the Irish dominated Iowa, 7-0.

Coach's Comment: "Notre Dame is the best team we will play all year," coach Steve Houghton

Pete Thompson/The Daily Iowan

Hawkeye Lea Twigg lays down a bunt last season at the Hawkeye Softball Complex in Coralville. Iowa will compete in the South Florida Speedline Invitational today through Sunday.

said. "But our team is very confident right now and we have a good frame of mind. I don't think that they are out of our range. It can be done."

Baseball

This week: The Iowa baseball team is seeking its first win of the season when the Hawkeyes travel to Evansville, Ind., this weekend for a three-game tournament. Iowa will clash with Memphis at 2 p.m. today, Butler at noon on Saturday and the host Purple Aces at 3 p.m. on Sunday. All three games will be played at Bosse Field in Evansville.

Game Notes: Iowa is 0-5 after losing two games to Mississippi in Oxford. The third game of the series was rained out ... The Hawkeyes' opponents have a combined record of 6-9 ... Iowa and Butler have met once before. The Hawkeyes beat the Bulldogs, 3-2, in 1929. This is the first meeting between Iowa and Evansville. The Hawkeyes are 2-2 against Memphis ... The last time Iowa started the season 0-5, they qualified for the Big Ten Tournament ... Iowa will have to cut down on the runs allowed to pick up its first win. The Hawkeyes opponents have scored an average of 14 runs per game ... Iowa sophomore Brian Mitchell is swinging a hot bat with an average of .444, 3 home runs and 10 RBI.

Coach's comments: "We just need to win a game," Iowa coach Duane Banks said. "We're making a lot of early-season mistakes, but I'm encouraged. Playing teams with a lot more game experience will help us in the long run. We need to start getting hits in critical situations."

—Chris James

Women's Gymnastics

This Week: The Iowa women's gymnastics team travels to Columbia, Mo., Sunday to compete in the 1997 Corvette Cup. The meet begins at 2 p.m.

Meet Notes: Iowa, Missouri, Minnesota and Eastern Michigan will make up the field ... This is the first non-dual competition for the Hawkeyes since Feb. 2 ... Iowa is coming off a 192.725-191.375 loss to Ball State ... Only three meets remain before the March 22 Big Ten Championships ... Sophomore Lori Whitner leads the Hawkeyes with team season-best performances in the vault (9.825), floor exercise (9.875) and all-around (39.050) ... Iowa is 5-7 overall ... Feb. 16, Iowa and Missouri met in dual meet action, with the Tigers winning 193.775-191.300 ... Minnesota is 9-4 on the season and has registered two team scores over 194 ... In order to receive NCAA Regional qualification, Iowa needs to register near-season high scores.

Coach's Comment: "We've been stressing meet situations in practice," coach Diane DeMarco said. "I've been hoping for scores around or higher than our season-best (193-195 range). We have been hitting in practice, but it needs to come when it counts."

—Chuck Blount

Men's track & field

This Week: Bashir Yamini and Dion Trowers will represent the University of Iowa men's track and field team at the NCAA Indoor Championships at the RCA Dome in Indianapolis, today and Saturday.

Meet Notes: Yamini enters the long jump field with the nation's fourth best leap (25'9 1/4") ... At last weekends Big Ten Championships, Yamini won the long jump with that qualifying jump ... Trowers was one of the late additions into the 55-meter hurdles field. He finished third in the event at the Big Ten Championships ... Trowers was a qualifier in the 110-meter hurdles at the NCAA Outdoor Championships last season ... Sixteen athletes are selected per individual event.

Player Comment: "I think a jump in the neighborhood of 26-6 can win it," Yamini said. "I'm going out to win it. I think I'm capable of that kind of mark. I try not to put limits on myself, so we'll see."

—Chuck Blount

Women's Track & Field

This week: Ellen Grant will represent the Iowa women's track team this weekend at the NCAA Indoor Championships in Indianapolis. Grant, a senior, qualified in the 400-meter dash for the second year in a row. The meet starts with preliminary races on Friday and finals on Saturday.

Meet notes: Grant enters the meet as a six seed ... She originally qualified for the NCAA meet when she ran a 55.44 second 400 at the Iowa State invitational on Feb. 8 ... Grant's personal best in the 400 is 51.54 seconds.

Coach's comments: "I think Ellen could do really well," coach Jim Grant said. "If she runs a smart race and runs up to her capabilities, she can be right in there with the finalists. Indiana has first-class facilities. Ellen just needs to run every race as a final, in the preliminaries on Friday and the finals the next day."

—Tony Wirt

Women's Golf

This Week: The Hawkeye women's golf team travels to Brooksville, Fla., to play in the Big Bird Classic March 9-10.

Meet Notes: The Hawkeyes are hoping to rebound from a disappointing 18th-place finish in their season opener at the Regional Challenge in Palos Verdes, Calif. ... Aside from Iowa, four other teams will compete, including Eastern Michigan, Cincinnati, Toledo and Alabama-Birmingham ... The two-day tournament consists of 36 holes — 18 on each day ... Iowa's lineup will consist of M.C. Mullen, Kelli Carney, Karen Schroeder, Lynne Carothers and Stacy Bergman.

Coach's Comment: "We're pretty comparable to the other Midwest teams, but Alabama-Birmingham has an advantage because of its location," Iowa coach Diane Thomason said. "We've been at it longer now. I think the team was a little nervous in California."

Iowa seeks first conference win

By Becky Gruhn
The Daily Iowan

Last weekend coach Jenny Mainz described her tennis team's victory over Illinois State as a breakthrough performance. This weekend, Mainz would like to see her team take it a step further.

Namely, recording a Big Ten conference win.

Iowa, 3-6 overall and 0-3 in the Big Ten, will have two opportunities to do just that as they host Indiana and Ohio State. The Hawkeyes will take on Indiana, (8-1, 2-0), on Friday at 4:00 p.m. and Ohio State, (5-5, 1-1), on Sunday at 10:00 a.m. Both matches will be held at the UI Recreation Center.

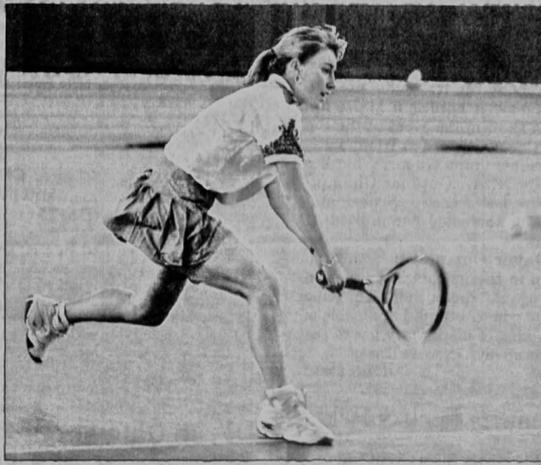

"I've seen a difference in their attitude this week," Mainz said. "It's been a bit of a relief, like a little weight had been lifted off their shoulders. We had to prove to ourselves that we could win a close match that could have gone either way."

In 21 meetings between the Hawkeyes and Hoosiers on the tennis court, Iowa has managed just one win. But according to Mainz, that does not intimidate the team.

"It's going to be a tough weekend. We haven't had a lot of success against Indiana," Mainz said. "But just as our women's basketball team proved, anything can happen on any given day."

Senior Kristen McCracken doesn't see Indiana as the same threat as when she was a freshman. "Indiana is good but not as good as they were in the past," McCracken said. "They're always a tough team and they come out strong."

"The younger players really stepped and helped the team a lot against Illinois State and we want to keep carrying that momentum," McCracken said.

Iowa's Erin Wolverton volleys in a match earlier this season. The Hawkeyes host a pair of home meets this weekend at the UI Rec. Building.

One advantage Mainz feels Iowa will have over Indiana is the quality of its doubles play.

"I'm going to be bold and say that in the next couple of years we'll have the best doubles teams in the conference," Mainz said. "Doubles is our strength right now and will continue being our strength. We just have to keep executing and finish off the point," Mainz said.

The history between Ohio State and Iowa is quite different as the Hawkeyes have enjoyed a 14-8 overall advantage over the years.

"We've always had the edge against OSU, only in the last two years has that changed slightly," Mainz said.

As the team lunges into the thick of the Big Ten season, it is also trying to balance the pressures of nearing midterm exams.

"This is definitely a crunch time for us," McCracken said. "For the three seniors we realize it is our last semester and we want to have fun and make the most of it. On the other hand we have more to deal with in terms of job interviews to go along with practice and homework."

Bulls debate Rodman's worth

By Mike Nadel
Associated Press

DEERFIELD, Ill. — Michael Jordan says the Chicago Bulls don't need Dennis Rodman to repeat as NBA champions. Coach Phil Jackson doesn't know who would do the dirty work in Rodman's absence.

Friday night against the Indiana Pacers, Rodman will return from yet another suspension — his fourth in less than a year. The Bulls can't decide if that's good or bad.

"Dennis isn't a distraction for me. I've gotten used to his act," Pippen said Thursday. "But there are some nights that you just don't feel like dealing with him."

"I differ with Scottie on that point," said Longley, Rodman's biggest supporter on the team. "It's easy to wonder if Dennis is worth having after we beat a team by 40. Wait until we play tough, physical teams like New York and then tell me if you think he's worth having or not."

Chicago's two-season Wormless record is 27-5 — an .844 winning percentage that would mean 69 victories over an 82-game NBA campaign. With Rodman, the Bulls are 112-15, including last season's 15-3 playoff showing. That's an .882 percentage, a 72-win pace.

"We're better with Dennis, but I'm prepared to go with whatever we have," Jordan said. "It would be easier if we had him, but we could do it without."

Swimmers from across state to compete at Fieldhouse Pool

The University of Iowa will play host to 230 swimmers from the state of Iowa this weekend when the USS Iowa Senior Short Course Championships is held at the Fieldhouse pool.

The field of swimmers will include men and women that are registered with United States Swimming in the state of Iowa. Collegiate, post-collegiate, and high school swimmers will be competing.

According to Iowa mens coach Glenn Patton, this will be the last chance for members of his team to qualify for the NCAA Championship meet.

Iowa's womens team is also taking this meet more seriously than an exhibition.

"We're taking this meet seriously," coach Kara Schmitz said. "We really want to improve on our Big Ten times. It is another chance for a shave and taper meet."

The action starts Friday at six o'clock and will continue all-day Saturday and Sunday.

Bowe wants one more shot at U.S. Marine Corps

NEW YORK (AP) — Riddick Bowe wants to give the Marines another try, if the Corps will have him.

"All I think about is becoming a Marine," Bowe told the Daily News. "I really would like to be a Marine and make the Marine Corps proud. If they gave me another opportunity, I know I can do it."

The former heavyweight champion left the Marine Corps Reserves after three days of training Feb. 20 at boot camp in Parris Island, S.C.

"It is very common that failed recruits want to come back after they reflect on their time here and are feeling remorse at their own failings," Gunnery Sgt. Hugh Hawthorne told The Associated Press.

"They have this nagging feeling of unfinished business."

BASEBALL

Yankees refuse $550,000 offer from AL Rookie of Year, Jeter

(AP) — American League Rookie of the Year Derek Jeter is taking a wait-and-see approach about stalled contract negotiations with the New York Yankees.

The Yankees rejected a proposal submitted by Jeter's agent Casey Close Wednesday, that sought a $550,000, one-year contract.

"It's up to them to decide," Jeter said Thursday. "So I'm not going to worry about it."

The Yankees offered $450,000. Jeter made $120,000 last year, $11,000 over the old minimum.

Jeter hit .314 with 10 homers and 78 RBIs last season.

'Best film of 1996' comes to Bijou

By Stacey Harrison
The Daily Iowan

Independent films are quite en vogue right now — the saving grace in the otherwise wasteland known as Hollywood. They dominate this year's Academy Award nominations, while serving as the starting points for many hot young careers. They are, in essence, the alternative to "Show me the money!"

They also, however, quite often are the most pretentious, indulgent products ever put on celluloid. Audiences are expected to "woo" and "wow" over the ostentatious quirks and eccentricities of the characters while mindlessly applauding the effort of the enigmatic director. The dubious philogishes itself as the least pretentious and most satisfying of the five current Best Picture nominees.

At the heart of "Secrets & Lies" lies a simple story, brought to vivid and unforgettable life by actors who do not need to rely on neuroses or ultra-hip, esoteric dialogue to produce emotion.

Hortense (played by Best Supporting Actress nominee Marianne Jean-Baptiste) is a successful, but lonely black London optometrist whose adopted parents recently have died. She decides it's time to seek out her birth mother, Cynthia (Best Actress nominee Brenda Blethyn), who looks like she stepped off the set of "Absolutely Fabulous." Not only is she a past-her-prime chain smoker, but she happens to be white.

It is upon this discovery that "Secrets & Lies" encounters a fateful juncture where it could have taken on the persona of a mindless sitcom. Instead, the film puts into high gear its ascent into film excellence.

The much-ballyhooed diner scene where mother and daughter have their first conversation is more than deserving of the wide praise it has garnered, but, like the rest of this film, it is best enjoyed when approached with no expectations at all. This is reflective of most of the film itself, which was reported to have been performed without the benefit of a written script.

There is a structure in "Secrets & Lies" that plays more like a mystery. Little by little, the hidden truths behind Cynthia's sad, loveless life are revealed, as are those in the not-so-perfect life of her uppity brother Maurice (Timothy Spall) and his goody-goody wife Monica (Phyllis Logan).

Spall emerges as the film's third major character with a truly unheralded performance, and it is he who is elected to supply the film with its only non-spontaneous sequence — its climactic monologue, which is terrific, but much too literal for a film of this caliber. In any other film, it would be the shining moment; here, it is one of the few subpar items presented.

Everything Oscar asks for, and everything an independent film aspires to be, is in "Secrets & Lies." It is a witty satire as well as a gut-wrenching drama. It has symbolism that is effective and accessible without being too obvious. It is, quite simply, the best film of 1996.

"Secrets & Lies" plays at the Bijou, in the Union, this weekend. Show times are today at 8:15 p.m., Saturday at 6:30 p.m. and Sunday at 8:15 p.m. Tickets are available at the University Box Office in the Union.

Iowa City's own Pompeii V garners national attention with electronic

Katharine Horowitz

Riding the rocket of electronic music that is currently captivating the country, Iowa City trip-pop band Pompeii V is about to jet into the stratosphere.

With a new contract from a national recording label (Sire Records) and a proposed invitation to open for Cake, Pompeii V is set to break onto the national music scene. The band launches their latest album, Oxygen Sensor, tonight at 7 at Gunnerz, 123 E. Washington St.

Pompeii V guitarist and UI senior Jonathan Payne describes Oxygen Sensor as something of an accident gone surprisingly well. Experimenting with pop sound, synthesizers and just a hint of electronica, much of the album evolved randomly, Payne said. But the result was a successful one.

"With Oxygen Sensor we had more time to experiment and have fun and a lot more artistic control"

Jonathan Payne, Pompeii V guitarist and UI senior

"There was never a mastermind as to how we would work the album," Payne said. "We knew we wanted a pop sound, but we just decided to see what happened. Kind of play it by ear, so to speak. A lot of what we did was jamming. We would go in with a collection of music and just start mixing everything. When we ended, we had recorded 15 songs."

This trip-pop sound and the band's astounding regional and growing national success has also led to a proposed invitation to open in concert for national band Cake, a show tentatively scheduled at a venue in Ames later this spring.

While nothing has been set in stone, Payne said, the band has declared their interest in such an opportunity.

The band formed in 1993 after UI graduate student and singer/guitarist Micha Hardy and UI junior and drummer Matt "Logo" Cepican answered an ad Payne had placed in the icon. Bassist/vocals Matt Gerken and "Elektra" on tambourine soon followed.

The name, Pompeii V, came from Hardy's visit to Pompeii, Italy, in 1993. Impressed by the city and needing a name, the band chose Pompeii V, Hardy said. However, the "V" was a little more symbolic. "Five just sounded better than four," Hardy said. "Even though we only have four members. It's kind of like that Holy Trinity thing. Well, we have the holy five. It's the spirit of the band."

A month after forming, Pompeii V was in the studio recording their debut album, Amphora. "Amphora was more of a learning experience than anything else," Payne said. "We were really new at the whole thing and didn't quite know how to make a CD. With Oxygen Sensor, though, we had more time to experiment and have fun and a lot more artistic control."

The band attributes their success to local venues, record stores and other area bands. While many cities' band scenes can be "cliquey," Hardy said, Iowa City audiences are much more versatile in their musical preferences.

"The Iowa City music scene is fabulous because people here are really interested in it," Cepican said. "Go to a bar any night and people are there, listening. The musicians really make an effort to be involved and get their stuff and their sound out there. I think this city gives a lot of support to the band scene here."

The Notorious B.I.G., coast gangsta rapper who rhymes reminisced a crack-dealing past in B was killed in a drive-by Sunday.

The 24-year-old rapper, known as Biggie Smallz, second major rapper to die by shooting in the months. Tupac Shakur was in Las Vegas last fall.

Wallace built his persona around his past crack dealer from Stuyvesant section of New York City, one of the city's toughest hoods.

"Rap was his podium, speak about his real life," said. "Like any artist, he himself through his art, I think it was the music to him — it was his lifestyle like this happens every just notice it when it has superstar. Unfortunately occurs everyday, too."

Wallace and Shakur sired to be rivals, occupying shots at each other songs. Wallace conspicuously absent from a "rap sun fall in Harlem, where West coast rappers met tensions after Shakur's death."

"There's going to be a fusion, and the media will ing to make this another West coast fight, correlating Tupac's death," Wallace said. "Personally, I think the goes deeper into Biggie's than we will ever know expected something happen."

UI junior Gena Wallace, music fan, said she was when she heard the news. Notorious B.I.G.'s death described the shooting craziness.
