Faculty Senate policy approved

Plan focusing on UI professors' time allotment, service duties unanimously agreed upon

By Laura Heinauer
The Daily Iowan

The issue of faculty workload surfaced again Tuesday afternoon as members of the UI Faculty Senate unanimously approved the Post-tenure Effort Allocation Policy (PEAP).

The policy focuses on the amount of time UI professors should concentrate their efforts on teaching, research and service duties and will encourage all UI departments to develop unit norms indicating the normal amount of time the professors should spend in the classroom and doing research and service work.

The policy also will provide professors with the option of creating individual portfolios, specifically designed to be short-term contracts that will be renewable every two years, allowing for deviation from the departmental norms as long as the shift doesn't conflict with the overall mission of the department or the UI.

Sheldon Kurtz, president of the Faculty Senate, said the portfolios are not intended for all faculty members, but allow those who decide to take advantage of them a way to play off their strengths by having more flexibility in deciding the appropriate balance for their professional duties at the UI.

"No one is entitled or compelled to have (an individualized portfolio)," Kurtz said. "This proposal is simply putting our current practices into policy language. ... It's taking things that are already going on implicitly and making them explicit."

The PEAP proposal was drafted by the PEAP committee at the request of the Iowa state Board of Regents last fall. The committee, chaired by the director of the music department, David Nelson, already has submitted the proposed policy to the Liberal Arts Faculty Assembly, the Faculty Council and the provost's office, where it was modified and approved before it appeared before the Faculty Senate.

Sen. John Menninger proposed two amendments to the policy during the meeting. The amendment guaranteeing no portfolio agreements would be made without the approval of the appropriate dean or provost passed overwhelmingly.

The second amendment, which would require a mandatory 20 per-

Acting CIA director named

By John Diamond

WASHINGTON — Reeling from Anthony Lake's sudden withdrawal, the White House considered a quick move Tuesday to name acting CIA Director George Tenet as a substitute nominee to head the nation's spy agency.

Senior White House officials, Republican senators and even Lake himself advanced Tenet's name as a non-controversial way to bring a new chief to a CIA that has been without a confirmed director since early December.

Other names were on President Clinton's short list, but Tenet was the only candidate undergoing a final White House review and, barring a snag, could be nominated as early as today. Lake

"I have a lot of respect for him. We believe he's capable," said Sen. Richard Shelby, R-Ala., chairperson of the Senate Intelligence Committee and the man who orchestrated much of the criticism of Lake that led to his withdrawing his name Monday night. Shelby indicated the committee could move quickly on a Tenet nomination — in sharp contrast to the drawn-out consideration of Lake's nomination.

White House press secretary Mike McCurry said Clinton wanted to move quickly but was not ready Tuesday to fill the vacancy left by the departure in last year's post-election shuffle of John Deutch. Senior White House officials who spoke anonymously said Clinton's staff was pushing Tenet's candidacy in private meetings with the president.

In an unsolicited appraisal, McCurry told reporters the front-running Tenet "does a spectacular job and has a great reputation inside the agency. I think he's very well liked on the Hill."

Without mentioning Tenet by name, Clinton suggested his list was down to one name.

"I would ask you to respect the fact that we have to do some review of our own before we send a name up there," Clinton told reporters. "It's really not fair to put someone out on the line on this until we know that the president is in fact determined to nominate him or her."

Other Republicans echoed Shelby's favorable comments toward Tenet. And after the ordeal experienced by Lake, White House officials were listening carefully.

"Barring something I don't know about, he looks like he'd be a good choice," said Senate Majority Leader Trent Lott, R-Miss.

Entrants compete for a 60-second bookstore shopping spree

By Jeff Clayton
The Daily Iowan

Entrants in the University Book Store's 60-second shopping spree spent Tuesday afternoon plotting and scheming to make sure they get the prizes of their dreams if their name is drawn.

At 2:30 p.m. today, the winner's name will be chosen from a box full of student, faculty and staff entries. But the journey will not end there — the minute-long race to grab as much merchandise as the winner can carry is the most strenuous part, expectant customers said.

"I'm going to make a plan out and I'm going to do a first run before the actual event," UI sophomore Daric O'Neal said.

O'Neal said he plans to snatch clothing if he wins.

"It's the stuff I can't afford in the store," O'Neal said.

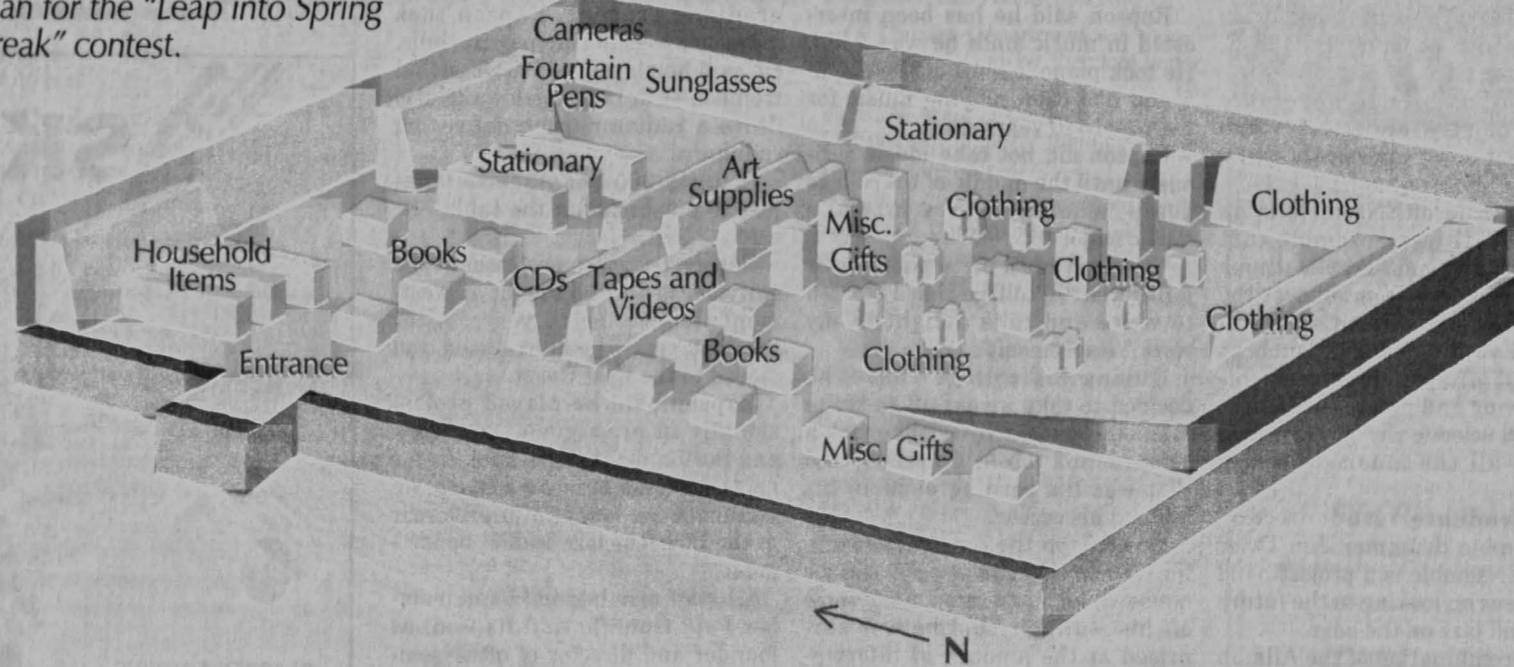

Rex Spicer, a substance-abuse researcher for the UI, had his eyes on apparel and a fountain pen.

"I'm a little frustrated that it is only a minute. I'll have to run very fast," he said.

Lack of painted lines irks drivers

By Will Valet
The Daily Iowan

Disappearing driving lanes on Iowa City streets are causing confusion among drivers, but city officials say they will wait for the weather to stabilize before remedying the situation.

Iowa City City Manager Steve Atkins said weather-worn lanes, which are repainted once or twice a year, have been a common complaint among drivers. The disappearing lane paint can be attributed to changing Environmental Protection Agency regulations concerning the contents of road paint, he said.

"The EPA, in their wisdom, changed regulations, and the type of paint we use now isn't as good as it used to be," he said. "It doesn't have the same kind of staying power, especially after the sand and salt from winter driving has been put on it."

UI students who drive in Iowa City have been perplexed as they change lanes and experience near-misses as a result of worn lane paint. UI sophomore Stephanie Reynolds was riding in a car Friday night that nearly collided with another confused driver near the corner of Gilbert and Prentiss streets because there are no painted road lines.

"Some guy driving next to us thought there was a turning lane," she said. "We didn't wreck, but we had to swerve into another lane. If there had been another car in that lane, we would have been in trouble."

UI junior Wes Fowler said he has Break" for the second consecutive year. Entrants can sign up at the store's checkout counters.

Last year's winner, UI senior Doug Lane, won $1,876.70 worth of merchandise. He donated most of his winnings to the UI's frisbee team.

"It was a pretty unique experience," Lane said. "I can't imagine many get the chance to do this. It was a lot of fun."

Lane offered some advice to today's winner.

"Definitely have a plan beforehand," he said. "I knew exactly what I was going for. Don't turn around until after you have 10 seconds left or you'll go back too soon."

Lane said he made a grave judgment error that he would have changed if he could.

"I wouldn't have worn sandals that day," Lane said.

Most customers in the store Tuesday spoke of creating a route before the event.

"I will map out in detail my destinations in the store," UI sophomore Sarah Claypool said. "I will feel so excited."

Most potential winners said they plan on going for the high-priced items, although text books and electronics are off-limits in the contest. UI junior Luke Neil said he hopes to win an abundance of art supplies.

"I spent most (of my) money on art supplies," he said. "There's some things I need like paper and pens. I would be relieved if I didn't have to buy more paper."

"I will get as many books as possible," said Sandy Barkan, assistant dean in the UI Graduate College. "I will feel very surprised if I win. It will make my day."

Bookstore employees were enthusiastic about today's event, but saddened they won't be able to participate.

"I am very disappointed that I don't get to be in it to make a run for the roses," employee and UI sophomore Marc Burg said. "You can only dream sometimes."

However, store employees and management said they are looking forward to the event.

"I am very excited for whoever wins. It is an exciting leap forward into spring break," said Alison

UI researcher aids fight against prostate cancer

Virus found to provoke immune system to attack cancerous cells

By Kelley Chorley
The Daily Iowan

A researcher at the UI Hospitals and Clinics has discovered a technique that might open new doors for prostate cancer therapy.

After two and a half years of research, Dr. Timothy Ratliff has found a virus called canarypox, which can be used to transport genes that will infect human cells, causing activation of the immune system. The immune system will attack the cancerous cells, hopefully removing malignant tumors from the prostate.

"It's just like if a person were to get influenza. The body recognizes the foreign disease and eliminates it." Dr. Timothy Ratliff, who discovered a virus that helps fight prostate cancer canarypox virus transports the cytokines into the body to fight cancerous cells by activating the immune system. The body recognizes the virus as a foreign object and turns on the immune system to kill the virus — at the same time killing the cancer.

According to the National Cancer Institution, 300,000 men will be diagnosed with prostate cancer this year, and 48,000 of them will die.

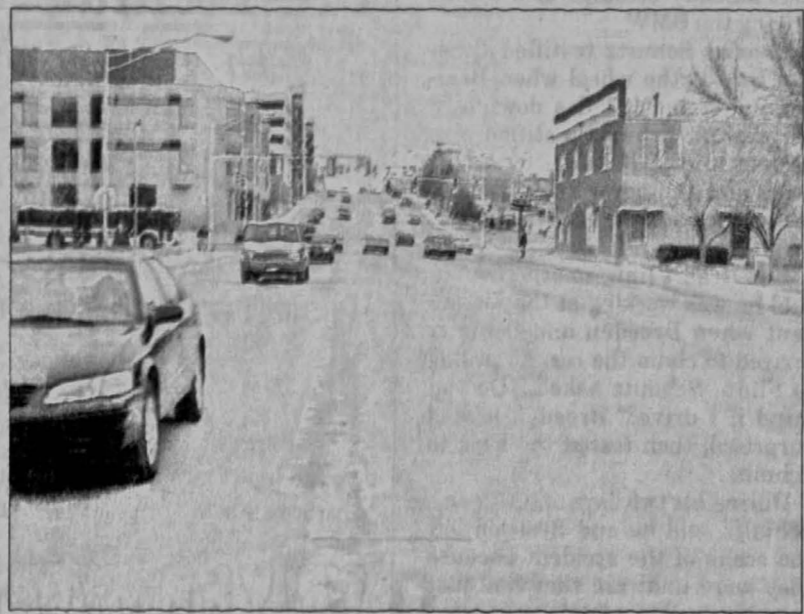

Steve Maravetz, director of UI Health Science Relations, said the new findings are exciting because the unique canarypox virus doesn't replicate in mammals, only in birds.

"The body won't replicate canarypox because the body doesn't allow the virus to duplicate itself, leaving the immune system to kill it," Maravetz said. "The researchers tried the cowpox virus and others before they realized canarypox was the promising virus."

Ratliff said the next step is to make sure there are no harmful or toxic substances that could hurt humans. He also said he hopes to start testing the virus on people before the end of the year.

"As soon as we know the virus

Iowa City residents and UI students recently have been complaining about the dangers caused by weather-worn lanes. Iowa City City Manager Steve Atkins said the disappearing lane paint can be attributed to changing Environmental Protection Agency regulations concerning the paint's content.

noticed the disappearing lane problem on almost all Iowa City bridges and in construction areas.

"I personally hate driving in Iowa City," he said. "It's so crowded and confusing, and it doesn't help not to have lines on the street."

Campus drivers have found the lack of driving lanes frustrating but adaptable. UI senior Chad Nuess, who has been driving the Pentacrest route for the last eight months, said he notices the disappearing lane problem all over the city, especially on Iowa Avenue and Clinton Street.

"It's everywhere," he said.

"There's not a single (painted) lane in Iowa City, I don't think. It can get a little frustrating at times. When three-fourths of the drivers are from out of town, especially on game days, it makes a pretty dangerous situation."

UI junior Steve Kurth, who has driven a Cambus for a year and a half, said he has become used to the lack of driving lanes.

"I think it presents more of a problem to drivers who aren't used to the traffic patterns," he said.

Ted Turner praises new boss, merger

ATLANTA (AP) — Has maverick media mogul Ted Turner learned to be a team player?

Looks that way: Six months after his broadcast empire became part of Time Warner, the CNN creator has nothing but praise for his new boss and support for the merger.

"I wasn't sure at first, but things have worked out great," Turner said in an interview with The Atlanta Journal-Constitution published Tuesday.

Turner

Turner became vice chairperson of Time Warner when it merged with his Turner Broadcasting System Inc. He said the deal was based partly on a gamble he and Time Warner Chairperson Gerald Levin could get along.

"It's going much better than I ever expected," Turner said. "Really."

Margaret Thatcher makes mementos available

LONDON (AP) — Margaret Thatcher's mementos are out of the attic and soon will be available to scholars.

The former British prime minister said Tuesday she has put her personal and private papers on permanent loan at Cambridge University's Churchill College.

"I hope they will be a valuable source for students and scholars who wish to study the great changes brought about by the Conservative governments that I had the privilege to lead," she said.

The Thatcher archive, which includes a large collection of photographs and audio-visual material, comprises more than 1,000 boxes of Lady Thatcher's political and personal papers from 1945 on.

Not all the material will be immediately available. Documents from her days as prime minister from 1979-90 are bound by government confidentiality rules that bar them from public view for 30 years.

Stuntwoman for Fran Drescher movie files suit

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A stuntwoman on the set of the Fran Drescher film "The Beautician and the Beast" has filed a lawsuit against the star, claiming she was injured after being sprayed with a fine mist of flame retardant.

Maria Doest says the spray led to the "onset of chemically induced asthma, involuntary upper body muscle control, short-term memory loss and chronic exhaustion."

Drescher

Her Superior Court lawsuit was filed last year against Drescher — the film's star and executive producer — and its director and stunt coordinator. It seeks unspecified damages.

"There is no factual or legal merit to Ms. Doest's claims," the defendants' attorney, Donald Etra, said in court papers Monday. "Each of the defendants denies any wrongdoing whatsoever. We are committed to vigorously defending this lawsuit."

UI associate professor of music John Rapson plays his trombone Tuesday afternoon at the Voxman Music Building. Aside from teaching jazz at the UI, Rapson is part of the 12-member group oftENsemble.

Associate professor moonlights in local jazz band oftENsemble

By Scott Lester
The Daily Iowan

Monday through Friday, UI associate professor of music John Rapson teaches jazz to UI students, but after school hours he trades his classroom stage for a local bar.

Rapson, 44, plays the trombone in the local band oftENsemble, a 12-member group that performs once a month at Gunnerz, 123 E. Washington St.

"It took awhile to develop a crowd, mostly of writers and artists, but now people are starting to find us," Rapson said.

Rapson said oftENsemble is an experimental jazz ensemble that takes music from different cultures and has members from all over the world. They take elements from all kinds of styles of music such as Brazilian, afro-pop, funk, straight-ahead swing and progressive jazz.

"A very eclectic rhythm is drawn upon in all the music," Rapson said.

UI graduate student and oftENsemble drummer Jim Drier said oftENsemble is a project band and focuses on looking to the future of jazz and jazz on the edge.

"It's a combination of the Allman Brothers and Sun Raw, a band from the '70s that wrote real weird jazz," Drier said.

The members of oftENsemble write and compose everything that is played. Members do it for the fun of it and for the challenge of producing high-quality music, Drier said.

Rapson, a professor of jazz studies, has been with the UI for four years. He received his undergraduate degree from Westmont College in California and completed his graduate work at California State University at Northridge.

Rapson said he has been interested in music since he was a kid. He took piano lessons at the age of 5 and has been playing music for the nearly 40 years since.

Rapson did not take music seriously until the middle of his college years, when he was a jazz and music major.

"It wasn't until my sophomore or junior year in college that I started to write and take delight in my work," Rapson said.

During his college years, he decided to take a year off to try to break into music. Instead he took a construction job in Colorado, and that was the turning point in his life and his career.

One day on the construction site he was invited to a co-worker's house to listen to music and show off his stuff. He said he was surprised at the amount of information a construction worker knew about music.

"He told me I had the same taste as his father and I said 'thank you.' But he said it wasn't a compliment," Rapson said.

After that, Rapson said, he decided to become involved and take more control over his fate. He said he started to investigate different forms of music and develop his own style.

"I became more active in my career I wasn't just along for the ride," Rapson said.

As a struggling musician and graduate student, Rapson took many odd jobs to help pay the bills. He said he played as a professional trombonist in Los Angeles and also drove a radiator truck delivering radiators.

"I drove 300 Los Angeles miles just to put bread on the table," he said.

Rapson became a professor at the early age of 26, and taught at Westmont College for 10 years. After those 10 years, he he resigned and moved to the East Coast.

Rapson said he played professionally in prestigious New York and Boston night clubs. Looking for another venue to make a living, he became a candidate for a professor at the UI in the jazz studies department.

UI staff member and band member Paul Cunliffe said Rapson, as founder and director of oftENsemble, has a tremendous amount of knowledge about music and loves what he does.

"He definitely has a passion for music," Cunliffe said. "He's a great guy and a good musician."

Columnist's death resembles whodunit

By Judith Kohler
Associated Press

DENVER — With its tales of a millionaire playboy, fast cars and drugged-out joyrides, the hit-and-run trial of Jorg Peter Schmitz should be sent straight to Hollywood for casting.

A popular newspaper columnist is killed in a hit-and-run crash. The car that struck the columnist's rare "cosmos black" BMW is traced by the paint to a scion of one of Colorado's richest families. But the 36-year-old millionaire, Spicer Breeden, commits suicide as the police close in. And in a goodbye note, he implicates his friend Schmitz.

So who was driving the car that killed Rocky Mountain News columnist Greg Lopez?

A jury was to begin pondering that question after closing arguments in Schmitz's vehicular-homicide trial Tuesday.

Prosecutors have tried to prove it was Schmitz at the wheel of the BMW on the night on March 17, 1996, when it clipped Lopez's sport-utility vehicle at 110 mph and sent it into a deadly roll.

The BMW stopped briefly and then sped off. After switching to an Audi sport wagon at Breeden's house, Breeden and Schmitz then returned to the wine bar they were at earlier in the evening and had a few more drinks.

Schmitz's defense is simple: He was a passenger during the joy ride and it was Breeden, high on cocaine, who was driving.

Schmitz's attorney Walter Gerash described Breeden as a "playboy of the Western world" with a history of driving offenses who talked Schmitz into saying he was the driver. That was before Schmitz realized someone had died.

Two days after the wreck, as police began focusing on him, Breeden took out his .357 Magnum revolver, wounded his dog with a blast to the neck and then fatally shot himself in the head. Left behind was a scribbled suicide note, with the misspelled postscript: "I was not driving the vehicle."

Schmitz's trial has managed to capture the state's attention, even as the JonBenet Ramsey drama and the Oklahoma City bombing case have drawn national coverage.

Much of the allure has to do with Breeden's family. His mother was the granddaughter of mining, farming and investment magnate Charles Boettcher, whose name graces buildings at Denver's botanical gardens, theater complex and natural history museum. It was a Boettcher, Breeden's uncle, who transformed Aspen into a glittering ski resort.

Breeden's mother owned about a third of the Boettcher family's $20 million fortune, and when she died of cancer in 1972, she left her then-13-year-old son $2 million.

Breeden, who took his life at age 36, never held a job and spent most of his life enjoying a jet-set lifestyle.

Among those testifying at the trial was Sydney Stone, a svelte blond former model to whom Breeden willed what was left of his estate.

Stone admitted she lied to police when they asked where Breeden was after the crash. She said Breeden asked her to tell officers he was "out of town" if they questioned her.

Stone also was identified in an earlier court proceeding as Breeden's cocaine supplier, which she vigorously denied. "I'm 50 years old," she said. "Would I look like this if I took drugs?"

Also providing intriguing testimony were two valets who gave contradictory accounts of who was driving the BMW.

Charles Schurtz testified Breeden was at the wheel when Breeden and Schmitz left a downtown restaurant. Schurtz testified also he had known Breeden for seven years and had never known him to let anyone else drive his luxury cars.

But Brad Flinn, another valet, said he was working at the restaurant when Breeden and Schmitz arrived to claim the car. According to Flinn, Schmitz asked, "Do you mind if I drive?" Breeden looked surprised, then tossed the keys to Schmitz.

During his two days of testimony, Schmitz said he and Breeden left the scene of the accident because they were unaware they had just been involved in a fatal car wreck.

Posed parking increase debated by I.C. Council

By Renee Bovy
The Daily Iowan

An increase in hourly parking rates was debated during a public hearing at the Iowa City City Council regular meeting Tuesday night.

The increased rates would only affect streets in the core downtown area, and will not affect the meters on Iowa Avenue.

Gary Lundquist, Downtown Strategy Committee member, said increasing the meter fees would increase the meter turnover rate and free up parking spaces for downtown customers.

Councilor Dee Norton said the increased parking rate also would encourage drivers to use the parking garages, which are a cheaper alternative.

"I think there is something nice and symmetrical about a quarter for 15 minutes and $1 for an hour," Norton said. "You would get 15 minutes for a quarter and people wouldn't have to stay a whole hour. They could scale it the way they wish."

However, John Gross, of the Downtown Association, said the organization has mixed feelings over the increased rates. He said the effects of the raise may be minimal on the turnover rate and could result in resentment from downtown shoppers.

"(I) see this as foolish with a new mall coming to the area, and we raise our parking to $1," Gross said.

Gross said one of the serious parking problems facing downtown is the illegal act of meter feeding. He said the problem is especially serious due to downtown employees feeding the meters all day long.

"Downtown business owners complain about no parking when three or four of their employees are taking the spots directly in front of their store," Gross said.

However, Councilor Dean Thornberry said he has thought of a way to capitalize on the problem of meter feeding.

"In my entrepreneurial spirit, I can see hiring myself out to college students to feed their meters," Thornberry said.

Iowa City Mayor Naomi Novick announced all city flags will be flown at half-staff today in honor of Iowa City historian Irving Weber, who died Sunday morning.

UP: One of the UI's greatest selling points

My decision to come to the University of Iowa was not an easy one. I knew I wanted a broad, liberal-arts education and I wanted to stay close to home. Coming from a small high school outside of Ames, I feared the huge lecture-hall classes that are common at Iowa's three public universities. However, I knew I could not afford to attend an expensive private school.

Ultimately, and obviously, I chose to attend the UI — and I haven't regretted it since.

What sold me on the UI was the Unified Program (UP). The UP is a program for 88 freshmen and sophomores who attend a series of eight courses together during a two-year period. These courses meet the General Education Program all UI students need for graduation. Because UP students and professors get to know each other well, classroom discussions are typically much more lively than other UI classes.

It seemed as if I had found the best of both worlds: I pay affordable, in-state tuition, attend small classes with motivated people and benefit from all of the resources a huge university like ours has to offer.

Unfortunately, the UP soon will be a thing of the past.

Because of budget cuts, the UI has decided to eliminate the UP by 1999.

When I first heard this, I was in disbelief. I could not imagine why the UI would cut a program that has been so successful. The UP may be more expensive than the mainstream system at the UI, but it is a worthwhile investment.

The UP should be expanded, so more students can benefit from it.

But, apparently, a personalized education is not a priority for officials at our university. By making this decision, UI officials are telling us lively discussion, interaction and personal attention from professors are not priorities. Moreover, they would prefer all UI students to sit in lecture halls among 400 or more other nameless students listening to someone talking behind a distant podium.

Why stop there? Why not just line us all up on a conveyor belt? Professors can stand along the side and recite their lectures as we pass by. We'll just wear our Social Security numbers on our chests, being that numbers are the only way we seem to be recognized. At the end of line, President Coleman can throw our diplomas to us. She can say, "Way to go, Mr. 320-33-9045." Unfortunately, we won't know how to thank her, because, due to our impersonal education, we weren't allowed to develop communication skills.

Perhaps things won't go that far, but they certainly are moving in that direction. This semester, along with my UP courses, I am taking an elective with a lecture for 400 people. The difference I see between the elective and my UP classes is remarkable. In my elective's discussion section, students hardly interact at all. When the professor asks us questions to spark a discussion, students rarely contribute. Who can blame us? Because we don't know each other, we naturally are more apprehensive about contributing.

This certainly is not the case in the UP. Because we are a small community, we all know each other well. We feel free to express our opinions because UP facilitators are aware the free exchange of ideas has a vast impact on the learning process. I not only enjoy the classes and brilliant professors the UP offers, but I look forward to class each day. In fact, the best friendships I have made at the UI have been through the UP.

I love the UI. In fact, I can't imagine having gone anywhere else. Iowa City offers amazing opportunities as far as entertainment, athletics and cultural events. No other school in Iowa offers such an assortment of activities.

However, I know had it not been for the UP, I would not have come to school here. Dozens of other UP students feel the same way. Unfortunately, the UI fails to recognize the vast impact this termination will have pertaining to the recruitment of students. The money the UI claims it will be saving does not compare to the quality and quantity of students it will fail to attract.

My younger brother is a freshman in high school. Right now, he is beginning to think about college. I'm afraid I'm going to encourage him to look at smaller, private schools more closely. As much as I'm enjoying my experience here, I know there will be fewer opportunities at the UI for him when he goes to college.

Opportunities at the UI like the UP aren't being enhanced — they're slowly being taken away.

Chad Doobay is a UI freshman majoring in communication studies.

What needs to happen at the Co-Op before a union does

To the Editor:

What an organic pickle we have here. Tongues are wagging with the briny taste of old unaddressed issues. Like a saturated salt solution, we have a very polarized environment.

In my group at the stockholders meeting we addressed the general issues confronting the (New Pioneer) Co-Op. We listed: 1.) good staff relations; 2.) quality, affordable food; 3.) support for local growers; 4.) educating and building community; 5.) keeping a viable niche in the growing natural-foods market.

To address these issues well we must first heal our organization. We must learn to work in harmony in a manner reflecting the quality of the foods we sell. My feeling is that bringing in the union at this time does not resolve the issues of becoming responsible to our tasks.

I would like to suggest that we look for a holistic remedy for our current polarized situation. Let us confront the truths in our relationships with each other and our commitment to the Co-Op. We are not a big lumbering bureaucracy, so let us look for a way to create healthy, responsible solutions where the victim/oppessor view is replaced with something resembling fulfiller/inspirer.

This requires us to look further than an employee-management bargaining problem. The union would be a temporary success for activists who then move on to the next action. It would not create freedom of communication. It would not inspire greater personal empowerment for employees. It would not improve the quality or commitment of the board. It would not get to the root of the human-resources problem.

The recent explosion of emotional turmoil has given me a keener knowledge of what I think needs to happen before we can act on the stockholders' findings. All participants have responsibility to this resolution.

The board must provide clear direction and leadership and seek a full range of member opinions.

Management must communicate and coordinate with the board and staff — actively engage employees in expression of their needs and sever relationships with any hostile parties.

Employees must communicate their opinions regarding customer service, operations and employee relations to each other, to management, to the board or to the members.

Members must keep informed of board's commitment to the Co-Op mission and elect members dedicated to the natural-foods business.

Customers must demand good products, good services and good prices.

What if we put off the union issue for a while? What if we take the issues that have been raised and work to resolve them in a way where everyone bears her/his own responsibility and earns her/his own success? What if we mediate solutions to these organizational problems?

We must begin now so the food does not develop that briny taste.

Margaret Hansen, D.C.

NAFTA is a problem for all parties

President Clinton wants to extend the North American Free Trade Agreement (NAFTA) to Chile, and even though three out of four Americans and most congressional Democrats oppose it, he is selling it as "uncontroversial" and "bipartisan." Since the extension is assured with a Republican majority, there has been no debate.

We all have heard horror stories about American corporations packing up shop in the United States and going to Mexico, where workers are cheap and exploitable. The documentary "Roger and Me" surveyed the destruction wrought on the factory town of Flint, Mich., when General Motors moved its plant and almost half of the town became unemployed overnight. Flint's crime rate became the second highest in the nation, and prison building replaced the assembly line as the town's major industry.

But it isn't often that we hear Mexico's side of the story. Supporters of NAFTA claimed it would stimulate their economy, curb illegal immigration, increase wages and productivity in both countries and turn Mexico into a bustling suburb of the United States, complete with shopping malls and a stable middle class. It didn't turn out that way.

Just on the other side of the border is the maquiladora corridor (Spanish for "sweatshop"), where labor laws are waived. There is no minimum wage, no union representation and no safety or environmental regulations. Many southern Mexican jobs are being relocated there, and American corporations target it as their primary destination.

Before NAFTA, the average hourly wage in a maquiladora was $1 an hour, but today it is only 70 cents an hour. The peso has been devalued 40 percent, making the wage decline even worse than it appears. Before NAFTA, a person could eke out a subsistence wage working in a maquiladora. Today, the wages are not enough to live on, and most of the recently created middle class has been destroyed.

Maria Ibarra and her children work in a maquiladora for Maxell Inc. "As their mother, I felt very bad for them when they first went to work," she said in an interview with Pacific News Service. "Children should be in school. I wanted something so different for them. I was forced to send them to work so we could survive."

Not only has the economy and the working conditions strained families, communities and schools, but the corporations create an oppressive environment for their workers.

"I asked the assistant manager why they can't pay us a little more," Ibarra said. "He told us that the company came here because we work so cheap. They call us crybabies. If we pressured them to pay more, they say, they would just take the work somewhere else."

In the maquiladoras, it is standard procedure to assign dangerous work to pregnant women, forcing them to quit so the company does not have to pay maternity benefits. The women are often placed in environments where they have to breathe toxic fumes that harm them and their babies. The dilemma is a nasty one. Poison yourself, or quit and starve.

Employees who are even five minutes late are automatically suspended without pay for three days, and during the 1993 Tijuana floods, many people were killed when they were told to come to work and traverse dangerous floodways or be fired.

There are no safety regulations, nor is there concern for injured workers. According to "The Organizer," Jorge Barron asked for eye goggles, and the company he worked for refused to let him wear them. When a flying drill bit pierced his eye, management would not let him leave to seek medical attention for eight days. He is blind today.

Attempts to form unions are rapidly smashed. Most companies fire pro-union employees, but Ford Motor Company dragged seven union organizers behind the factory and shot them in the head. The bosses wanted to make it clear who is in charge.

Make no mistake — most of the maquiladoras are owned by American corporations. And though NAFTA gives them permission to move there, they are not trading with Mexico. Forty percent of what counts as Mexican "trade" in the government's statistics is actually just American companies selling products to Americans that were made by exploited Mexicans. The government may call it trade, but that is not what it is.

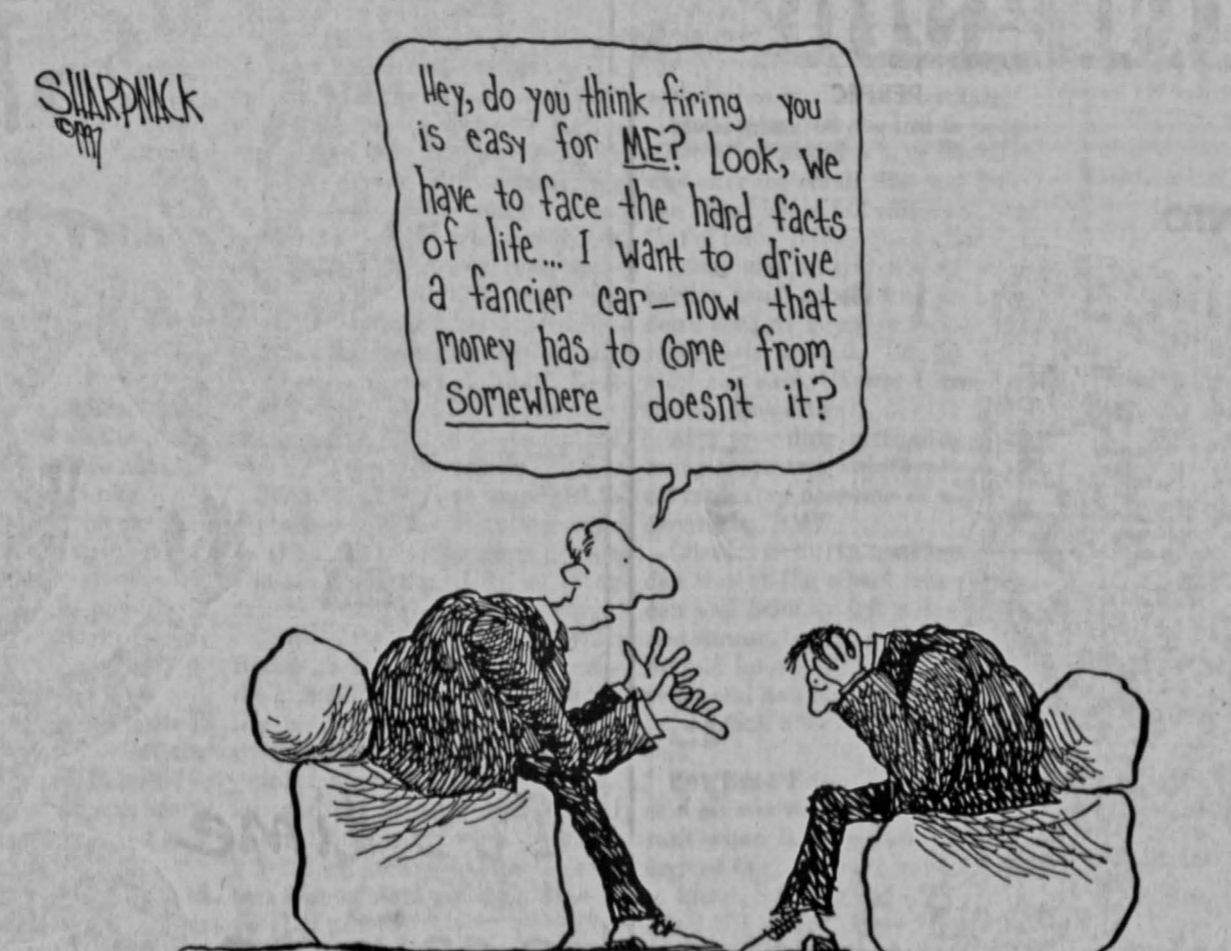

President Clinton refers to workers' rights as "special interests" that impede "growth" and do not belong in the NAFTA agreement. Those who benefit from NAFTA are the real special interests, if a special interest group is defined as a numerical minority, but they have the most clout in Washington through our money-soaked political system. You can bet your bottom dollar if it hurt the economic interests of the upper class, NAFTA would be repealed tomorrow.

So, what will we get out of extending NAFTA to Chile? The rich will get richer, more American jobs will be exported and many Chilean workers will learn how it feels to have an American CEO's boot on their neck.

The ironies of St. Patrick's Day in Iowa City

To the Editor:

I found your March 17 front-page article, "Irish fever grips I.C. on St. Patrick's Day," noteworthy on two accounts. First, Micky's shift-norm Gretchen Schiller, in pointing out that St. Patrick's Day is often an excuse for students to drink in the middle of the semester, calls this "a break from normal."

Perhaps Schiller and I are living in different towns, but a break from Why does beer have head?

After the yeast's fermentation process converts the sugar in the grain into alcohol and carbon dioxide, the raw beer is adjusted for head, which is actually dissolved proteins. Since some of the enzymes in the malting process break up proteins, the timing of the head is important for controlling much head a beer has.

If the malting process went too long, the proteolytic enzyme (proteo=protein, lytic=cut) did too much protein, and the head would be flat.

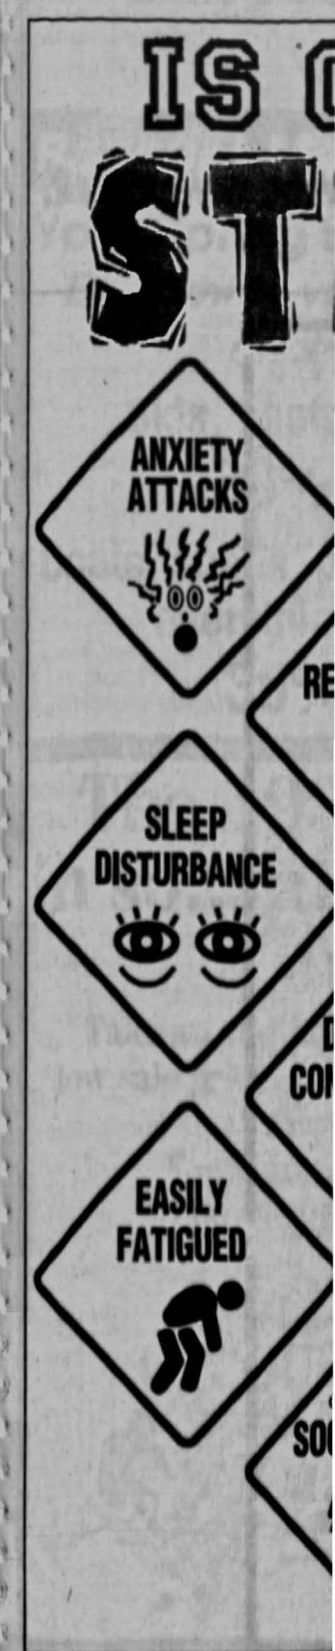

If the malting was stopped too soon, the beer will be cloudy when it is cold. Thus, you get beer that is thick enough to eat with a fork.

Enzymes can be added at the end of fermenting to cut up protein and clarify the beer.

Beer has many trace compounds (just a little bit of that substance that control the taste. The trace compounds and different malting and fermenting times make a different from ale or stout.

One trace compound is dimethyl sulfide, which sounds like a noxious chemical, and that's what it is. It has high concentration is bitter and makes the beer undrinkable. Without a little bit of it, lager beer would be tasteless. Dimethyl sulfide is formed in the malting process by enzymes.

First, Micky's shift-manager Gretchen Schiller, in pointing out that St. Patrick's Day is often an excuse for students to drink in the middle of the semester, calls this "a break from the norm."

Perhaps Schiller and I are living in different towns, but a break from the norm? You must be kidding. The only difference is that St. Patrick's Day gives us an excuse to go out at 8 a.m. Perhaps this is a trivial point, but in a town where "Alcohol Awareness" is such an issue (believe me, I think we're all aware of alcohol) we could do a bit better about being honest with ourselves.

Later in the piece, the DI actually attempts to make the suggestion that March 17 is about more than going out and getting really wasted, filling us all in on the history and traditions behind the holiday: "St. Patrick's Day is to celebrate and honor St. Patrick, who as an ex-slave drove off all the snakes in Ireland, converted the Irish to Catholic and created the shamrock as a national symbol."

It's true Patrick was briefly a slave. The part about the snakes is pure legend. Even without the snakes, though, he certainly would have earned his sainthood if he had managed to convert anyone to Catholicism in the 5th century because Catholicism wouldn't exist, as such, for another 1,100 years. He did, however, begin the long process of converting the island's inhabitants to Christianity (a goal that fell just a wee bit short, I might add). And speaking of those inhabitants, they lived then in constantly warring tribal bands and would not be, give or take, depending on your point of view, for another 1,400 years.

It's bad enough that our Irish heritage is reduced to green beer and a front-page article about everyone getting drunk. The least you could do is get the history correct.

Higgins deserves college Pulitzer

To the Editor:

Karrie Higgins' column on the stigma of being "poor white trash" (March 11, "Examining the stigma of 'poor white trash'") was one of the finest, most insightful and moving examinations of this issue I've read. If they awarded Pulitzer Prizes for student journalism, Higgins' essay would be a shoo-in. I don't know what career Higgins has in mind, but I selfishly hope it's journalism. I want to read and be challenged by her work for many years to come.

Carver-Hawkeye Arena should learn from Kent State

To the Editor:

I am writing in response to Becky Gruhn's March 7 article on the policies of Carver-Hawkeye Arena and fan participation. I was outraged to hear such an incident occurred where a 10-year-old's sign was confiscated and destroyed, due to the fact that signs are not permitted in the arena.

I attend Kent State University in Ohio. We have approximately 29,000 students at our school. Unfortunately, athletics are not a high priority here. On the average, we get about 4,000 people for a conference basketball game (our arena only holds 6,200). You would never know there are only 4,000 there — the fans all cheer, and they bring any sign they want. No one really cares if someone else is waving a sign in front of them.

As for the problem of the alumni getting upset with having their views blocked, we have that problem taken care of. When our arena was remodelled six years ago, a Blue and Gold lodge was created to put the alumni where they belong — on the other side of a wall of glass. That way they don't have to worry about fans yelling and waving signs, which are things that should occur at a college basketball game anyway.

To me, the alumni really don't have any business getting the preferred seats — regardless of how much money they donate. Without the students, there would be no universities in America.

So, take a hint from a school that lets their students enjoy themselves at a game: Get rid of your childish rules and restrictions and let Carver-Hawkeye Arena become what it should — an intimidating and noisy place for opposing teams to play in.

On the death penalty, from Australia

To the Editor:

I trust that the people of Iowa will have the wisdom to forbid their state to kill its citizens. I understand that a serious debate is going on regarding the reintroduction of capital punishment. If these attempts fail, Iowa will be in good company, as states that have abolished the death penalty have a lower homicide rate. The death penalty has never been proved as a deterrent to murder.

The rest of the Western world has abolished the death penalty and I trust that Iowa will want to emulate the fine examples of countries such as Australia. The immense cost of state murders could best be spent on preventative measures for crime. Please don't believe the lies of this racist and discriminatory system; please choose life. Twenty-three innocent people in your country this century have been killed by the death penalty. I cannot accept this.

I encourage you to read more about the facts of the death penalty, so you can make an educated choice.

Why does beer have a head?

After the yeast's fermentation process converts the sugar in the grain into alcohol and carbon dioxide, the raw beer is adjusted for head, which is actually dissolved proteins. Since some of the enzymes in the malting process cut up proteins, the timing of the cutting is important for controlling how much head a beer has.

If the head process went on too long, the proteolytic enzymes (proteo=protein, lytic=cut) digested too much protein, and the beer will be flat.

So, if the malting was stopped too soon, the beer will be cloudy when it is cold. Thus, you get a beer that is thick enough to eat with a fork.

Enzymes can be added at the end of fermenting to cut up more protein and clarify the beer.

Beer has many trace compounds (just a little bit of that substance) that control the taste. The trace compounds and different malting and fermenting times make lager different from ale or stout.

One trace compound in beer is dimethyl sulfide, which sounds like a noxious chemical, and that's what it is. In high concentrations, it is bitter and makes the beer undrinkable. With a little bit of it, lager beer would be tasteless. Dimethyl sulfide is formed in the malting process by enzymes.

Clinton optimistic about summit Panel: Citadel allowed women too quickly

By Barry Schweid
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — President Clinton said Tuesday despite a tough agenda for this week's summit with Russian President Boris Yeltsin, he was optimistic of "constructive progress" on a shared desire for a free and democratic Europe.

A bit more upbeat than his senior aides, Clinton still struck a practical stance in an exchange with reporters in the White House Red Room. "I just wouldn't overreact to any particular thing that's said and done between now and then," the president advised them.

Senior aides to Clinton and Yeltsin are playing down expectations for the two-day summit in Helsinki, Finland, saying it's too much to expect final agreement on a new relationship between Russia and NATO.

Differences over NATO's planned absorption of former Soviet allies tended to overshadow preparations for the two leaders' 11th meeting and first in nearly a year. Secretary of State Madeleine Albright promised "NATO expansion will remain on track."

But Clinton said: "We have never had a meeting that didn't result in constructive progress in the relations between the United States and Russia and in matters of our common concern. And I believe this will be such a meeting."

The stakes are high, he said, and first on the agenda is "our shared desire for a Europe that is free and democratic, secure and united. My hope is that we can achieve an agreement between Russia and NATO that will be part of that."

In Helsinki, where the summit will be held Thursday and Friday, Yeltsin's spokesperson, Sergei Yastrzhembsky, said, "Maybe it will be the most difficult summit for the two presidents during all Russian-American relationships after the end of the Cold War."

Clinton and Yeltsin plan to take up a U.S.-proposed charter to give Russia a larger role in NATO deliberations, but no veto over alliance military actions, as NATO prepares to take in new members from Central and Eastern Europe in 1998.

Hungary, Poland and the Czech Republic are the leading candidates, with invitations expected at a NATO summit meeting in early July in Madrid, Spain.

And Albright, at a pre-summit news conference, said "the first new members will not be the last."

The United States and its NATO allies have offered concessions to Russia to soften its resistance. These include a promise not to deploy nuclear weapons on the territory of the new members and a statement that there are no plans to bolster forces in the countries.

Even so, Albright assured U.S. critics of those concessions that the rights of the Central and East European countries would not be restricted.

She resumed pre-summit negotiations by telephone with Russian Foreign Minister Yevgeny Primakov and then told reporters at the White House: "We know it will take time for the process of trust to catch up with the process of change."

The proposed charter is designed to reflect a new NATO relationship with Russia, one Albright said was based on friendship, not threats.

Finishing the document has proved a formidable task. Russia, for instance, wants Western pledges to be legally binding. But the administration said it will agree only to pledges by Clinton and other NATO leaders.

State Department spokesperson Nicholas Burns said the charter cannot be concluded by the end of the summit, Friday evening. "Substantial work needs to be done," he said.

And in Helsinki, Yeltsin spokesperson Yastrzhembsky said: "I don't think that from this meeting we will get a final agreement for drawing up or creating NATO-Russian relations. That would be too much to expect."

CHARLESTON, S.C.— The Citadel should have waited longer after a court battle before admitting four women cadets, two of whom later charged they were harassed and hazed, a school-appointed committee said Tuesday.

The state military college announced last week that one male cadet had been dismissed, three resigned and 10 others were given lesser punishments for hazing and harassing two female cadets. One male cadet was cleared.

The Citadel changed its all-male admissions policy last summer, two days after the U.S. Supreme Court ruled a similar all-male policy at Virginia Military Institute was unconstitutional. Just six weeks later, four women were on campus.

"We believe the college should have waited a year before bringing them in," former Citadel President James Grimsley said Tuesday. That would have allowed time to recruit more women and to better judge how the plan would work, he said.

Grimsley was among a group of community leaders asked in January to review the school's plan for admitting and training women.

Two of the women, Jeanie Mantavlos and Kim Messer, left school after the first semester, saying they had been hazed and harassed.

They said their clothes were set on fire while they were wearing them and cleanser was poured on their heads, they were forced to drink alcohol and forced to stand in a closet while being shoved and kicked.

The Citadel still has two female cadets.

The committee led by Grimsley also said the Citadel's governing board needs to better state how the school should function as a coeducational college. It also called for a review of freshman training and said cadets must be convinced that women are part of the school's future.

A consultant appointed by U.S. District Judge C. Weston Houck is expected to file a separate report later this week.

On Monday, The Citadel's incoming president said he is confident school officials have punished everyone responsible for the hazing. "I don't believe there has been anything that has been covered up or anything that has been missed," John Grinalds said at his first news conference after meeting with cadets Monday. He takes office this summer.

Grinalds, 59, a retired Marine major general, said he has some ideas for bringing in more women but wants to learn more about the school before suggesting any changes.

Grinalds, a Rhodes Scholar with degrees from Oxford University and Harvard Business School, also is a West Point graduate and headmaster of Woodberry Forest School, an all-male boarding school in Virginia.

ANAHEIM, Calif.— Today with a glass of grape juice, you can be an especially good state heart.

A study found 8 or 10 days of the purple variety potent effect on the blood platelets, making them less form clots that can lead to attacks.

In fact, purple grape juice is even more potent than which is recommended way of warding off heart attack.

The researchers compared with orange and grapefruit and came to the conclusion grape juice is better, at least heart.

The study was led by Folts of the University of Wisconsin Medical School. His research has been funded for several years by Nutricia Research Foundation of the Netherlands and the O'nebohm Foundation of Wisconsin, and more recently by which makes grape juice.

Folts noted that 10 can make purple grape juice in the United States, and all probably equally well. Purple juice is more potent than white.

Heart attacks occur when clots stick to fatty deposits on the walls of the heart's arteries of the supply of blood. Two ago, Folts was among the show — first in animals and people — that aspirin is good heart because it slows blood.

CONCORD, N.H. — New Hampshire lawmakers Tuesday vote short of joining the celebration with a holiday honoring Martin Luther King Jr.

After a stormy 90-minute session, the House failed by a 177-171 margin to adopt a bill passed by the Senate that would have added the name to the state's Civil Rights Day. The House then voted not to take the issue again until 1999.

"The state of New Hampshire stands as a beacon light for the rest of the world," said Rep. Jane Kelley said who joined other defeated lawmakers in making the unusual step of individual protests.

A House committee tried support by adding the name of Johnathan Daniels, a Keene resident who also died in the civil rights movement, to the name of the holiday along with King.

But supporters of a King holiday were angry King's name didn't come first in the title: "Civil Rights Day to Martin Luther King Jr. and Johnathan Daniels."

Exhibit traces origins of Kermit the Frog

By Carl Hartman
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Kermit the Frog began life looking more like a lizard — made of an old spring coat and a split pingpong ball. Now, his original incarnation is back in an exhibit that traces Kermit's 42-year journey to stardom.

The split pingpong ball, with a couple of dashes of black paint, became Kermit's eyes when he and other "Muppets" first appeared in 1955 on a Washington television show called "Sam and His Friends."

And while Muppets creator Jim Henson originally developed Kermit and his pals for entertainment, they became known worldwide for children's education when, 14 years later, they got their big break on Public Broadcasting System's "Sesame Street."

The Muppets "are largely commercial entertainment, but there's always a little heart, a little moral to it," said Paul Avery, a University of Maryland instructor who put together the exhibit, "The Muppets Take Maryland," at the university's College Park campus.

"There's always the message that people need to work together, and how you treat people is important," said Avery, who teaches a course related to the Muppets.

Kermit got his start at the College Park campus, where Henson met his partner and later wife, Jane Nebel, as a student.

On "Sam and His Friends," Kermit became "frogified," as Henson put it, from his original lizard-like image.

But it wasn't until 1969 that producer Joan Ganz Cooney put Kermit and others onto "Sesame Street."

The characters went on to even wider fame in their own television show, and in Hollywood movies.

The original Kermit the Frog sits on the shoulder of Jane Nebel in 1955 (left) as the puppet Sam appears alongside. A more contemporary Kermit is shown at right.

Henson, who died in 1990, combining "marionettes" and "pup-invented the word 'Muppets' by 'pets'."

A glass of grape juice a day may keep heart attacks away

By Daniel Haney
Associated Press

ANAHEIM, Calif. — Toasting the day with a glass of grape juice may be an especially good start for the heart.

A study found 8 or 10 ounces a day of the purple variety has a potent effect on the blood cells called platelets, making them less likely to form clots that can lead to heart attacks.

In fact, purple grape juice might be even more potent than aspirin, which is recommended widely as a way of warding off heart attacks.

The researchers compared grape with orange and grapefruit juices and came to the conclusion that grape juice is better, at least for the heart.

The study was led by Dr. John Folts of the University of Wisconsin Medical School. His research has been funded for several years by the Nutricia Research Foundation of the Netherlands and the Oscar Rennebohm Foundation of Madison, Wis., and more recently by Welch's, which makes grape juice.

Folts noted that 10 companies make purple grape juice in the United States, and all probably work equally well. Purple juice appears to be more potent than white.

Heart attacks occur when blood clots stick to fatty deposits on the walls of the heart's arteries, choking off the supply of blood. Two decades ago, Folts was among the first to show — first in animals and later in people — that aspirin is good for the heart because it slows blood clotting. Now, he is looking at the anti-clotting properties of a large group of natural substances called flavonoids that are found in many different kinds of foods.

Folts presented his latest findings Tuesday at a conference of the American College of Cardiology.

Experimenting on 17 volunteers — himself included — Folts found that both aspirin and red wine slow the activity of blood platelets by about 45 percent, while purple grape juice dampens them by about 75 percent.

"His data are very convincing," said Dr. Arthur Klatsky of Kaiser Permanente Medical Center in Oakland, Calif., who studies the benefits of alcohol on the heart. However, he cautioned that anything that slows down platelets also could lead to unwanted bleeding.

While grapefruit and orange juice also contain plenty of flavonoids, they are different from the ones in purple grape juice.

Folts found that when people drink purple grape juice once a day, the benefits linger. In one experiment, people drank the juice for a week. Even after they had stopped for two days, their platelets were still sluggish.

Folts recommended including grape juice in a healthy diet, which should include five to seven servings a day of vegetables, fruits and juices. However, he said people should not stop taking aspirin or other heart medications just because they are drinking grape juice.

N.H. rejects attempt to join nation in honoring King

By Norma Love
Associated Press

CONCORD, N.H. — New Hampshire lawmakers Tuesday came one vote short of joining the rest of the nation with a holiday honoring Martin Luther King Jr.

After a stormy 90-minute debate, the House failed by a 177-178 margin to adopt a bill passed by the Senate that would have added King's name to the state's Civil Rights Day.

The House then voted not to take up the issue again until 1999.

"The state of New Hampshire will stand as a beacon light for bigotry," Rep. Jane Kelley said when she joined other defeated lawmakers in taking the unusual step of lodging individual protests.

A House committee tried to gain support by adding the name of Johnathan Daniels, a Keene minister who also died in the civil-rights movement, to the name of the official holiday along with King.

But supporters of a King holiday already were angry King's name didn't come first in the proposed title: "Civil Rights Day to Honor Martin Luther King Jr. and Jonathan Daniels."

"It keeps Martin Luther King at the back of the bus," said Arnie Alpert, program coordinator for the American Friends Service Committee. "We don't want this amendment. We want Martin Luther King Day."

New Hampshire, specifically mentioned by King in his "I Have a Dream" speech, remains the only state in the union that does not honor the slain civil-rights leader with a holiday.

Instead, it has a compromise: Civil Rights Day on the third Monday in January, the same day the other 49 states celebrate King's legacy.

"This noble House has repeatedly voted for Civil Rights Day. The motive was to exclude no one. The motive has always been inclusive," said Rep. Loren Jean, a Litchfield Republican who voted against adding King's name.

A King holiday bill first came before the Legislature in 1979 and has been introduced during all but one two-year session since.

Opponents killed the holiday bill every session until 1991, arguing that King associated with communists, opposed the Vietnam War and was suspected of adultery.

cent teaching and research effort, failed. Menninger said persons not affiliated with the UI would criticize the UI teaching efforts if no minimum standard was set.

"We need to set some limits on the degree to which the efforts of teaching and research are weighted," Menninger said in his proposal to the Faculty Senate. "Research and teaching components build off one another and justify the UI's distinction as a research university. To let individual professors abandon one of these components would be a sad mistake."

Other senators expressed concerns about where certain faculty activities, such as service, would fall under the policy. The language in the policy, which says portfolios must demonstrate "teaching effectiveness, research, and to a lesser extent, service," initiated discussion among faculty. Sen. Warren

Piette said the term "service" should be clarified to avoid altering the customary meaning of the term.

Wasserman said the policy grants more leeway to faculty members because it formalizes their individual skills.

"This is what is already happening," Wasserman said. "This policy serves to recognize the different contributions faculty members make."

Tenet, unlike Lake, has been confirmed previously by the Senate. In 1995, the Senate confirmed him as deputy CIA director, the agency's No. 2 post, after Tenet got a unanimous endorsement from the Intelligence Committee.

If Clinton chose Tenet, it would not be the first time he had selected a well-liked deputy after the failure of a controversial national security nomination. In 1994, after Adm. Bobby Inman dropped out of the running for defense secretary, Clinton chose Deputy Defense Secretary William Perry and the Senate quickly confirmed him.

Tenet started out in Washington on the staff of the late Sen. John Heinz, R-Pa., and moved from there to the staff of the Intelligence Committee where he served as staff director for four years. During Clinton's first term, Tenet served on Lake's National Security Council staff as principal intelligence adviser.

Lake, a close friend of Tenet, recommended him for the job in a Monday night conversation with Clinton, a senior official said.

Other possible candidates were Morton Abramowitz, the outgoing head of the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace and long-time Clinton friend Strobe Talbott, the No. 2 State Department official. But neither was in the same tier as Tenet, aides said.

Colleagues of outgoing Deputy Attorney General Jamie Gorelick, once considered for the CIA job, said she was not interested in the job. Former Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Ga., said he wasn't either.

As the scramble to find a CIA director unfolded, the White House and Senate Republicans exchanged barbs on the handling of Lake's confirmation.

"The president feels that the process that Tony went through was inexcusably flawed," McCurry said.

Clinton called the episode "an example of what's wrong with Washington," but avoided making the fight worse as he tried to lure Republicans toward a balanced budget agreement. Recovering from knee surgery, Clinton summoned reporters to the Red Room near his private residence to defend Lake's integrity. "If it had been up to me, I'd be here a year from now still fighting for him," the president said.

Shelby rejected suggestions that he had politicized the confirmation process, noting that Lake himself had praised Shelby last week for his fair handling of public hearings.

In a long letter to Clinton delivered Monday, Lake listed a host of reasons for his withdrawal and said he was the victim of a political process "gone haywire."

On Monday, Tenet ordered the CIA to investigate reports that Democratic Party Chairman Don Fowler had pressed the NSC in 1995 to invite a prominent donor to high-level meetings and then asked the CIA to forward the NSC a report on the donor. Lake, who was then national security adviser, said he was never informed of the political pressure.

Works, said the water-based paint the city now uses is less adhesive than the rubber-based and enamel-based paints the EPA deemed environmentally hazardous. The rubber-based and enamel-based paints were outlawed about five years ago.

"The state of California led the charge in getting rid of those paints," he said. "With the water-based paint, when it dries and its solvent vents off, the atmosphere is less affected. People are still trying to find a better, more adhesive type of paint; a silver bullet if there is one."

The cost of the paint will be $19,250, not including labor or equipment rental. Brachtel said the repainting of all Iowa City streets is expected to start in mid-April because the surface temperature of city streets needs to reach at least 50 degrees Fahrenheit to be adhesive to the paint, and also because the streets need to be cleaned.

There is no guarantee the canarypox virus will work in killing prostate-tumor cells. However, the test showed positive in the laboratory mice, and Ratliff said he isn't concerned with harmful side-effects in humans.

"An animal-model system doesn't always translate into human systems, but the mice went cancer free," Ratliff said. "The side effects we are expecting will only amount to flu-like symptoms of fever and vomiting, and we could encounter some complications when injecting the vehicle into the prostate."

If the canarypox virus is found successful, it potentially could be used to kill off other cancers such as melanoma and breast cancer, Ratliff said.

UISG approves student budgets

By Kristin Bauer
The Daily Iowan

The UI Student Government voted to approve the budget requests from student organizations at its regular meeting Tuesday night.

UI junior Travis Leo, chairperson of the Student Assembly Budgeting and Auditing Committee (SABAC), said the committee made sure it gave every group money for their office supplies, phone service (including long distance) and funding for their first program. He explained the guidelines used in budgeting for the next fiscal year.

"We had a set of guidelines that we followed in splitting up the budget," Leo said. "It just was a way for us to make everything fair for everyone."

Leo said the UISG took money out of their own budget so they could promise every group's first program would be funded. The UISG's budget for the next fiscal year will be $118,092.74.

Graduate Programs Student Senate executive Jon Jones said the process of giving money to every group's first program was unfair.

"What if one group asks for $5,000 to do their program and the other only asks for $60," Jones said. "I just don't see how you could give more money to one or the other."

UI sophomore Jeff Fisher, SABAC committee member and Undergraduate Collegiate Senate senator, said the guidelines were fair and the committee stuck to them very closely.

Student groups that missed the deadline to apply appealed for funding. They can file an application for the money in the supplemental accounts.

In other matters, Undergraduate Collegiate Senator Dan Pinegar stressed the importance of adding a resolution to put safety on the agenda, which was tabled at the previous UISG meeting.

"We already do things to improve safety on campus," Pinegar said. "I just think it would be nice to have this behind us to do as much as possible for the students."

2nd Mexican general lands behind bars

By Anita Snow
Associated Press

MEXICO CITY — The second Mexican army general in a month is behind bars, underscoring the depth of the country's drug corruption problem as lawmakers debate whether to certify it as a drug-fighting ally.

Brig. Gen. Alfredo Navarro Lara was accused of offering $1 million a month to a top federal agent to protect a drug smuggling family.

Navarro faces charges of drug trafficking, bribery and criminal conspiracy, the Mexican attorney general's office said Tuesday. He was being held at a high-security prison outside Mexico City.

The case shows drug corruption in Mexico just as it is being challenged to prove it should be certified as a drug-fighting ally.

President Clinton defended Mexico's efforts, but the U.S. House of Representatives voted to overturn Clinton's certification of Mexico's anti-drug efforts if it doesn't shape up in 90 days.

Lawmakers opposed to certifying Mexico have cited the Feb. 18 arrest of another Mexican military man, Gen. Jesus Gutierrez Rebollo, the former head of the National Institute to Combat Drugs.

Gutierrez is charged with protecting Amado Carrillo Fuentes, head of the Juarez drug cartel. Authorities said Navarro admitted offering the bribe, but told a judge Monday he did so only after his and his daughter's lives were threatened, evidently by the traffickers.

With the crackdown on drug corruption that followed Gutierrez's arrest "not even the most brutish soldier" willingly would have offered a federal prosecutor a bribe, Navarro told the judge.

After Navarro made an appointment to meet in a hotel suite in Tijuana with the chief federal prosecutor, Jose Luis Chavez, Chavez told authorities Navarro had promised "important and confidential information." But instead, Navarro allegedly offered Chavez $1 million monthly to let the Arellano Felix family move drug shipments through the region.

Jewish housing project spurs riots

By Dafna Linzer
Associated Press

JERUSALEM — Yellow bulldozers began clearing away rocks and earth Tuesday for a Jewish housing project in disputed east Jerusalem, triggering Palestinian protests and warnings that Mideast peace was near collapse.

Hundreds of troops in riot gear, backed by snipers and helicopters, sealed off the pine-covered hill where 6,500 Jewish apartments are to be built on land claimed by the Palestinians as part of a future capital.

There was scuffling around the site, and scattered protests broke out later. In the nearby West Bank town of Bethlehem, the scene was reminiscent of the 1987-93 Palestinian uprising. Teen-agers burned tires, blocked roads with garbage dumpsters and whistled at Israeli soldiers, daring them to chase them.

A combative Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu defended his decision to go ahead with the construction. Both sides have made the project a test of their resolve on Jerusalem, the deal-breaker of the Israel-Palestinian negotiations.

"We're not going to change our policy because of the threat of Palestinian violence," he said. Palestinian leader Yasser Arafat said he had ordered that there be no violence, but Netanyahu accused him of giving "the green light" to attacks.

"We have received very hard intelligence that the Palestinian Authority has prepared the ground for violence that they would initiate," Netanyahu said in an interview Tuesday with the Foreign Press Association.

"I demand from them to reverse these decisions immediately," he said. "The Palestinian side must choose: Do we want terror or do we want peace?"

State Department spokesperson Nicholas Burns rejected that accusation, saying he had seen no evidence Arafat had approved violence. In fact, Burns said the United States has assurances from Arafat that "he stands against violence."

Later Tuesday, Netanyahu told Channel 2 TV he also was "studying" the possibility of building a neighborhood for Arabs near the construction site. The TV said those plans call for 1,000 homes for Arabs.

Surveyors with tripods and measuring instruments spread out Tuesday afternoon around the foot of the hill as the bulldozers began moving.

Dozens of Palestinians, including a legislator holding a Palestinian flag above his head, then tried to reach the site.

A cordon of soldiers pushed them back, and a scuffle ensued. "With our bodies we will protect Jabal Abu Ghneim," the demonstrators chanted, using the Arabic name for the area known in Hebrew as Har Homa.

The official Voice of Palestine radio station reported that "the bulldozers of the occupiers had begun work with the aim of isolating and Judaizing Jerusalem."

As a precaution, the Israeli army suspended joint security patrols between Israel and the Palestinians, and barred Israeli civilians from entering Palestinian-controlled West Bank cities.

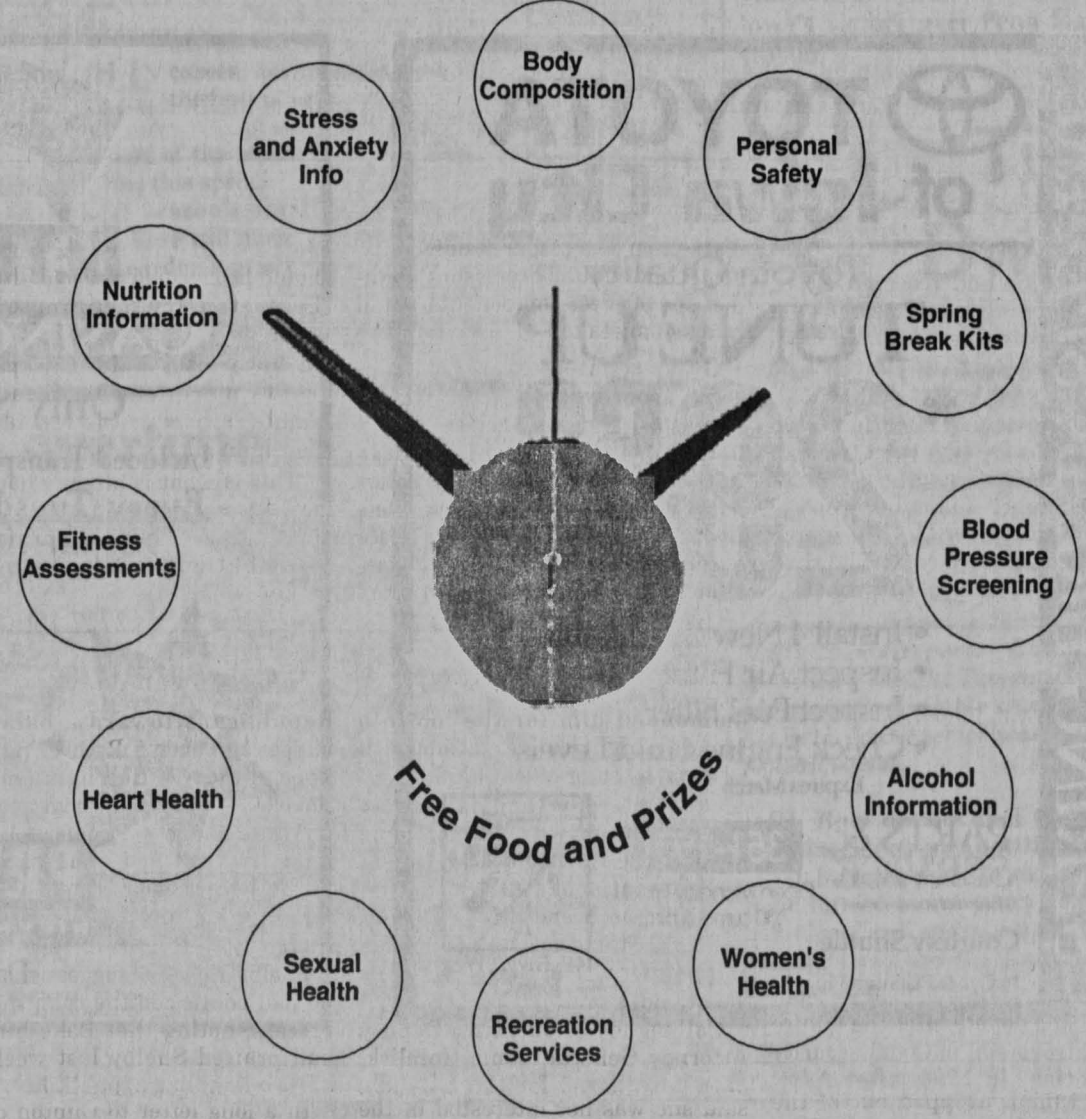

Throughout Israel, security forces were on alert for possible attacks. Hundreds of police officers were deployed in Jerusalem and all leaves were canceled, police said.

Netanyahu's decision to go ahead with construction showed his determination to prove he would not yield control over east Jerusalem, which Israel captured from Jordan

Zaire votes to oust prime minister

By Beth Duff-Brown
Associated Press

KINSHASA, Zaire — With many pro-government legislators absent, Zaire's parliament voted Tuesday to oust the prime minister. The government denounced the vote as invalid, saying not enough lawmakers were present.

It remained unclear late Tuesday whether Leon Kengo wa Dondo, widely blamed for sweeping military losses to rebels in eastern Zaire, remained prime minister. The dispute was likely to further weaken an already fragile regime.

"As of tonight, it's finished. The decision has been made," Parliament spokesperson Kinkela Vi K'ansy, a member of the opposition, said.

But Jean-Claude Biebie Ekalabo, spokesperson for Zaire's executive branch, said the constitution requires the presence of three-quarters of the parliament for a vote to be valid.

The vote came only hours after Kengo left for Nairobi, Kenya, for an international meeting on the insurgency in Zaire. He could not be immediately reached for comment.

The attempt to oust him came after his government's worst setback in the war, the loss of Kisanгани, Zaire's third-largest city, over the weekend.

Kengo was elected prime minister by Parliament in 1994, but only after President Mobutu Sese Seko made clear Kengo was his choice for the job. Mobutu had surgery for prostate cancer in August and was admitted to a hospital in Monaco on Friday.

Military leaders have been among Kengo's harshest critics, blaming him for setbacks in the war against rebels who have captured most of eastern Zaire in the last seven months.

The rebels are seeking to topple Mobutu, who was ruled dictatorially for 31 years.

Kengo, whose mother was of Rwandan Tutsi descent, has been accused of secretly backing the rebels, who are believed closely linked to the Tutsi-led government in neighboring Rwanda.

Earlier Tuesday, government soldiers looted the market in Mbuji-Mayi, the hub of Zaire's lucrative diamond industry, an official of the government-owned mining company said.

The report came after the rebels said they would move toward Eastern Kasai province, of which Mbuji-Mayi is the capital.

The rebel advance across eastern Zaire has been eased by the lack of discipline among Zaire's poorly paid soldiers, who have repeatedly looted cities and fled rather than fight.

The rebels have agreed in principle to a cease-fire, but only if Mobutu first meets with their leader, Laurent Kabila. Mobutu has refused such a meeting.

Diplomatic sources, speaking on condition of anonymity, told the AP his generals were debating whether to attempt a coup.

Report: Drugs and a party before accident

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (AP) — A former Michigan State basketball player and a recruit last year were involved in a car accident that sparked an investigation, a newspaper reported Tuesday.

The Lansing State Journal reported that a former Michigan State basketball player who was present at the Feb. 1996, party said the player's hotel room smelled of marijuana. She saw at least one player with alcohol.

Former Michigan State student Alexandria Tithoff, who attended the party with several Michigan basketball players in a Detroit hotel room.

The incident initially caused concern after a rollover accident involving a former Michigan State basketball player, Maurice Taylor, fell from the wheel of his grandmother's Explorer while the group was partying in Ann Arbor.

Also in the vehicle were former Michigan State basketball players Mateen Cleaves — who transferred to Michigan State — center Tylor, guard Louis Bullock, guard Willie Mitchell and walk-on Oliver.

The report is the latest in a series of investigations raising concerns about the Wolverine basketball team. On Monday, the school announced it was naming a Kansas-based law firm to investigate allegations of giving money and gifts to players.

Mixing things up

Tight end Chris Knipper may be the Hawkeyes' newest lineman; Tim Dwight expected to play on defense

By Andy Hamilton
The Daily Iowan

Iowa football coach Hayden Fry has made a tradition out of transforming tight ends into offensive linemen. And last Thursday, Chris Knipper became his latest project.

Knipper was an honorable mention all-Big Ten selection by the media and coaches last season after catching 15 passes for 190 yards and three touchdowns.

But for spring practice, Knipper has made the move to left tackle to fill the void left by the graduation of three-year starter Ross Verba, who was also a tight end early in his career.

"He may go back to tight end," Fry said. "If we had enough depth in the offensive line we wouldn't even think about moving him because he's an outstanding tight end. But we have a lot more real good back-ups at tight end than we have quality linemen."

Fry listed Verba and former NFL lineman John Alt as two of the players that have successfully made the move.

"We've done this many times since I've been here, to take a big tight end who can run and who's a good athlete — and particularly if the guy likes to eat — and move him over to tackle," Fry said.

Fry said Knipper weighs a deceptive 270 pounds and he won't be asked to put on additional bulk due to a heart condition in his family.

"He's strong as a bull," Fry said. "He plays like he weighs a lot more. If he desires to go back to tight end at the conclusion of spring ball, then he would go back and be our starting tight end going into fall practice."

"Looking at helping our football team and a pro career, left tackle might be the best place for him."

Moving Knipper is just part of the shakeup in the offensive line this spring.

Last season's starting left guard Derek Rose will move to center, where Bill Reardon's graduation leaves an opening. Rose's back-up will be Jay Tim Dwight runs the ball during Iowa's victory over Penn State last season.

Q & A Tim Dwight

After helping the Iowa football team to a victory over Texas Tech in the 1996 Alamo Bowl, wide receiver Tim Dwight made the jump over to the Hawkeye track and field team. After running in a few meets last year, Dwight decided to dedicate himself solely to the track team this spring. The trade-off is that he will miss spring practice and the annual Iowa spring football game. Daily Iowan reporter Chris Snider spoke with Dwight Tuesday regarding his current role on the track team and his forthcoming senior season with the football squad.

DI: How does it feel to be back running track competitively?

TD: It feels great. It's such a piece of mind for me to not worry about football now. I still worry what's going on over here and how the guys are doing. It's just time for me to get away and do something that I wanted to do in college.

DI: Is it going to hurt you in football that you have lost weight to run track?

TD: I don't think so. Why do I have to be a receiver at 200 pounds when I'm 5-9? I'm not going to get any taller, so I don't have to get any bigger. So, if I get faster, that's all that counts. Size doesn't matter. Anybody at 5-9 can cut block anybody at 6-2. I just worry about getting back on the team when the summer comes.

DI: When you see what Desmond Howard is doing in the NFL, does that give you added hope for a pro career as a punt returner?

TD: Now, scouts will come look at me and say, "Dwight's only 5-9, but he's a good punt returner and a good kickoff returner. He can come in and play receiver a little bit." Desmond Howard doesn't play as much receiver, but Don Beebe does. And Don Beebe is not much taller than I am. Desmond opened the door for some of us smaller guys that now have an easier chance of getting in the league and being looked at as return men. He showed the whole world that special team do matter.

WOMEN'S TENNIS

Intrastate rivals meet at Drake

By Becky Gruhn
The Daily Iowan

In a sense, spring break is over for the Iowa women's tennis team.

After a 10-day break from competition, Iowa will return to action today at intrastate rival Drake.

Both teams sport identical 4-7 records. Drake has an 0-3 record this spring against Big Ten opponents, including losses to Purdue, Minnesota, and Illinois.

Coach Jenny Mainz is clear on what she wants her team to accomplish today.

"The match against Drake will be a good lead into our spring break trip to Texas," Mainz said. "We will be focusing on our singles, playing smart tennis and increasing our record to 5-7."

Iowa has beaten the Bulldogs 22 times in 27 meetings. Despite this history of domination, Mainz is not taking Drake lightly.

"Drake is a solid team but I feel confident going into the match," she said. "We had a good practice today (Tuesday). Everyone is feeling confident and playing within themselves. Drake is always out to get us, but I feel as if we are prepared."

Mainz will install the same lineup she used in a 6-1 victory over Ohio State on March 9, with Natalya Dawaf in the No. 1 singles position.

"Natalya is playing very well," Mainz said. "She had a great match against Indiana and was the only person to pull out a win. She has a lot of dimensions to her game and knows how to make the right adjustments."

Brooks leaves with fond memories

By Chris Snider
The Daily Iowan

KHAK announcer Bob Brooks doesn't have to think long before remembering how he first got into broadcasting.

"I got started mainly because of World War II," the 51-year veteran of Iowa football and basketball games said. "I went to Franklin High School in Cedar Rapids and the war was on. WSUI needed male voices. They'd all been drafted. So I started out in the summer, volunteering to come down to WSUI."

Just 16 years old at the time, Brooks went on to study communications at the UI. He then went to work at KCRG for 25 years before starting his current position, doing play by play for KHAK in Cedar Rapids.

But after a half century of broadcasting Iowa football and basketball games, Brooks will be reassigned next season. Starting with the 1997 football season, Learfield Communications will have exclusive rights to radio broadcasts of Iowa football and men's basketball games.

Cascade native Gary Dolphin will be the new play-by-play announcer, replacing Brooks, Jim Zabel and Ron Gonder. The three long-time announcers will remain involved, only now they will be in charge of pregame and postgame broadcasting.

"I think my view is that I'm anxious to go on and look forward to what's in the future," Brooks said. "I

Pro wrestling's new star is no Mr. T

Thirteen years ago, professional wrestling broke into mainstream American culture with the debut of Wrestlemania.

The event held great significance as, for the first time, one of the world's most cherished TV stars took the ring — Mr. T. It was T and Hulk Hogan vs. "Rowdy" Roddy Piper and "Mr. Wonderful" Paul Orndorff in a no-holds-barred tag team extravaganza.

The event was a tremendous success, shattering pay-per-view ratings history. Although entertainment experts probably won't admit it,

I'd say that today's numerous pay-per-view events are a direct result of pro wrestling.

At the time, Hulk Hogan — fresh off his World Heavyweight Title victory over the Iron Sheik — was a household name and his mug even made the cover of Sports Illustrated. However, it was T, and all his fame from the hit "A-Team" series, cartoon and cereal that made the event.

Little did T know, he had opened the door for actors, professional athletes and anyone involved in the entertainment industry to venture into the dangerous realm of pro wrestling.

Keeping the highlights coming

"Human highlight film" Wilkins flies high again with Spurs

By Kelley Shannon

Dallas forward George McCloud reaches in on San Antonio forward Dominique Wilkins Tuesday, Nov. 26. Wilkins scored 32 points.

SAN ANTONIO — Dominique Wilkins wasn't hired to be a star for the San Antonio Spurs. It is, however, a role he fills with ease.

Long cheered for his thunderous dunks, basketball's one-time "human highlight film" is experiencing a rebirth of sorts with the San Antonio Spurs at the unlikely age of 37.

"The guy just keeps on doing it," Spurs coach Gregg Popovich said. "It's incredible."

Wilkins has been one of the few bright spots in a trying season for the Spurs. In the absence of injured center David Robinson, Wilkins has led San Antonio in scoring, averaging 18.9 points a game. The 6-foot-8 forward also has averaged 6.9

rebounds a game, playing an average of 31.7 minutes.

"I've always been a player who likes to compete," Wilkins said. "I knew what I could do coming into this year. But I don't think a lot of people knew what I could do."

There was no better example than a sequence late last month when he scored 20 points against Charlotte, a day after he had 28 points against Houston.

"I think it's unbelievable that he can go play a back-to-back game like that at age 37," Popovich said.

In January, Wilkins scored the 26,000th point of his 14-year NBA career. He is one of only eight players in league history to hit that mark.

After Monday's loss to Washington, Wilkins had 26,309 career points, placing him second to Michael Jordan among active players. Wilkins is in position to surpass John Havlicek, who ranks seventh on the scoring list with 26,395 points.

Wilkins has battled injuries this season. Most recently, he missed five games in early March with a pulled hamstring. But his problems have been nothing like those of other key players.

The Spurs (16-49) are without Robinson, Sean Elliott and Chuck Person, the frontline players Wilkins was brought in to back up when San Antonio signed him in October.

"I thought they more or less wanted me to play a role, and I would have played that role, no question about it," Wilkins said. But, he added, "I'm a much more competitive player than that."

Atlanta comeback even shocked Wilkens

By Paul Newberry

Orlando guard Darrell Armstrong faces tough defense from Atlanta's Mookie Blaylock and Christian Laettner, rear, during first half action in Atlanta on Monday.

ATLANTA — Most of the fans at the Omni had gotten the booping out of their system and were on their way home.

Orlando was whooping it up on the bench and sending its reserves into the game to mop up.

This one was over, or so everyone thought. Then Atlanta began a comeback that had even Lenny Wilkens shaking his head.

Wilkens might be the winningest coach in NBA history, but he's never had a victory like this: Overcoming a 10-point deficit with less than a minute to go, his Hawks went on to beat the Magic 112-107 in overtime Monday night.

"This just shows you that anything can happen in basketball," said Mookie Blaylock, who sparked the Hawks comeback with defense and 3-point shooting.

"Those people walking out in the last mites will wake up tomorrow, see the paper and think it's a misprint," said Steve Smith, who led the Hawks with 38 points. "We should consider this the beginning of a new season."

The Magic can only wonder where their season will go from here. Orlando had won four in a row and turned its season around under new coach Richie Adubato, but this loss could have a devastating effect.

"We got lazy at the end," Dennis Scott said. "We thought we had the game won, and then we got careless in the last two minutes. Steve, Christian (Laettner) and Mookie kept pushing and pushing and they kept hitting their shots. You've got to give them credit."

Adubato blamed himself for going to his bench too early, thinking the game was locked up. By the time the starters got back into the game, it was too late.

"I think I substituted a bit too freely," Adubato said. "This is by far the toughest loss I've ever had as a head coach. It will be very hard to get over this loss."

Orlando led 92-76 with 2:30 remaining, and the Magic was still up 94-84 after Horace Grant hit two free throws with 48.9 seconds remaining. Atlanta, which already had a season-high three-game losing streak, seemed destined for another defeat.

Once the game went to overtime,

- 32.2 seconds: Atlanta's Christian Laettner fouls Dennis Scott, who makes one of two free throws. Magic 95, Hawks 87.
- 27.2 seconds: The Hawks' Steve Smith drives for a lay-in. Magic 95, Hawks 89.
- 25.2 seconds: Atlanta's Mookie Blaylock fouls Penny Hardaway right after the inbounds pass, and Hardaway hits one of two free throws. Magic 96, Hawks 89.
- 19.3 seconds: Blaylock brings the ball upcourt quickly and hits a 3-pointer. Magic 96, Hawks 92.
- 18.0 seconds: Blaylock fouls Brian Shaw right after the inbounds pass, and Shaw makes one of two free throws. Magic 97, Hawks 92.
- 10.5 seconds: Corbin hits a lay-up as the Magic try to avoid fouling. Magic 97, Hawks 94.
- 7.0 seconds: Darrin Hancock fouls Orlando's Darrell Armstrong, who makes one of two free throws. Magic 98, Hawks 94.
- 5.7 seconds: Atlanta inbounds after a timeout and Laettner gets another lay-up. He then draws a delay-of-game warning for stepping out of bounds to guard the inbounds pass. Orlando calls timeout. Magic 98, Hawks 96.
- 2.3 seconds: Blaylock steals the halfcourt inbounds pass and is inexplicably fouled by Horace Grant while trying to hurry up court for a desperation shot. Blaylock makes both free throws. Magic 98, Hawks 98.

everyone knew Atlanta would find a way to come out on top. Blaylock hit another 3-pointer and had another big steal, and the Hawks pulled away at the end.

Reed blasts out at Knight, won't return to Hoosiers

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Indiana guard Neil Reed said Tuesday he won't return for his senior season because coach Bob Knight pressured him to leave.

"If the choice were mine, I would have returned to Indiana University," Reed said in a statement. "But the choice was not mine. Coach Knight has made it clear that in making those decisions about my future, he is accountable to no one."

Knight told Indianapolis television stations Tuesday that he met with juniors Reed, Andrae Patterson, Richard Mandeville and Robbie Eggers to discuss their futures with the program. He said all four players were told what was expected of them next season, and each was given an option to play elsewhere.

Knight said Eggers, Mandeville and Patterson indicated they wanted to complete their careers at Indiana, which was routed by Colorado 80-62 last week in the first round of the NCAA tournament.

"What I want is for this to work out for these kids the best way possible," Knight said. "I've told them in each case what I think, and they've thought it over and have told us what they would like to do, and we'll just take that and go from there."

Knight criticized his juniors for inconsistent play this season and questioned their dedication to the program. But Reed, who started 26 of 33 games, said he was singled out for criticism.

"Coach Knight has created a different set of rules for me," said Reed, who averaged 12.9 points and led the Big Ten in free-throw percentage (85.2) this season. "Leadership requires respect. I have not been given any respect for three years."

"Coach Knight has continued his longstanding tradition of verbal attacks and physical assaults on his players and his coaches. I have personally been at the forefront of those focused attacks during my time at IU."

After Indiana's loss to Colorado, Reed said Knight met with him and two other juniors.

"Coach Knight told us, 'I think you guys should transfer because you are not going to play here next year,'" said Reed, who hasn't officially asked for a transfer yet.

Reed's departure follows a rocky season for Indiana.

After starting 14-1, including an 85-69 rout of then-No. 6 Duke in the Preseason NIT, the Hoosiers struggled in the Big Ten. They went 9-9 in the league, tying for sixth place.

Late comeback keys Bulls overtime win

By Rick Gano
Associated Press

CHICAGO — Michael Jordan capped a 32-point, 18-rebound performance by hitting two free throws with three seconds left in overtime Tuesday night, giving the Chicago Bulls an 89-87 victory over the Seattle SuperSonics.

Seattle's Gary Payton, who finished with 14 points, 12 rebounds and 14 assists, hit a free throw with 16 seconds left to tie it 87-87 but missed a second shot from the line that would have given Seattle the lead.

The Bulls rebounded and Jordan, surrounded by Seattle defenders, put up a wild shot. But he was fouled by Payton and sank both free throws, his fifth and sixth of overtime.

Seattle's Hersey Hawkins, who earlier hit two 3-pointers in overtime to give the Sonics an 86-83 lead, missed a shot at the buzzer and the Bulls escaped with their 25th straight home victory in a playoff-like game between last year's NBA finalists.

The Sonics forced overtime when Payton hit three free throws after he was fouled on a jumper by Luc Longley with 20.8 seconds left in regulation. Early Tuesday morning, Payton was accused by a limousine driver of punching him in the face over a fare dispute.

Chicago's Scottie Pippen and Seattle's Shawn Kemp both missed overtime after fouling out in the closing seconds of regulation.

Hawkins had 23 points for the Sonics, while Longley added 16 for the Bulls.

The Bulls, now 32-1 at home, didn't lead until Longley hit a bank shot with 2:28 to go to make it 74-73.

Jordan, whose 18 rebounds matched a career high, hit a jumper, Kemp missed two of four free throws and then Jordan hit two from the line as Kemp fouled out. That gave the Bulls a 78-75 lead.

Top women's teams missing key players

By Chuck Schoffner
Associated Press

Not that it's apparent, but some prominent teams are going to the round of 16 in the NCAA women's basketball tournament with key players hurting or missing.

No. 1-ranked Connecticut breezed into the Midwest Regional semifinals without No. 3 scorer Shea Ralph, sidelined by torn knee ligaments. Stanford advanced easily in the West with All-American Kate Starbird nursing a sore left ankle.

Defending champion Tennessee played its second-round game with point guard Kellie Jolly limping on a bum ankle. LSU lost starting forward Keia Howell to a knee injury.

While Ralph and Howell are finished for the season, Starbird and Jolly have time to heal before the regional semifinals on Saturday, when the games figure to get tougher. Stanford (32-1) plays Virginia (23-7) in Missoula, Mont., and Tennessee (25-10) meets Colorado (23-8) in the Midwest Regional in Iowa City.

Starbird scored a season-low six points in Stanford's second-round game with Texas Tech on Monday night, but the Cardinal won 67-45 with a dominating performance that displayed the depth of their talent. And Starbird said it wasn't the ankle that caused her to shoot 3-for-10.

"The ankle felt pretty good. It wasn't bothering me that much," she said. "I just was not shooting well. I've had a couple of other games like that this year."

Connecticut (32-0) will play Illinois (24-7) in Iowa City, Iowa, after knocking the host team for that region out of the tournament. With Ralph watching from the sidelines, Connecticut relied on its balance and inside strength to overpower Iowa 72-53 on Monday night.

"We really don't depend on one person," Connecticut coach Geno Auriemma said. "Our program isn't built around one person and at this time of year, you start to realize how much you depend on each other."

Jolly, who made a courageous return this season after undergoing knee surgery in October, sprained an ankle in Tennessee's first-round rout of Grambling. After two full days in the training room, she played 15 minutes Monday night in a 76-59 victory over Oregon.

"What can you say? She's as mentally tough as anyone I've coached," Tennessee coach Pat Summitt said. "If I had felt we could have won the game without her, I would not have played her, but I felt we were unsettled offensively. I thought Kellie could settle us down."

Howell, LSU's third-leading rebounder and best interior defender, went down with six minutes left in the first half of the Tigers' 71-58 victory over Marquette on Monday night. The 6-foot-11 junior tore the anterior cruciate ligament in her right knee and will have surgery in three or four weeks.

Morris' streak still alive in his mind

David Zalubowski/Associated Press

Cincinnati's Hal Morris watches the his solo home run in the second inning against Colorado on Aug. 27, 1996.

"I would like to get a hit on opening day just so 20 years from now I can say I hit in 30 straight games. I'll count it."

Cincinnati Reds first baseman Hal Morris

By Joe Kay
Associated Press

PLANT CITY, Fla. — Officially, Hal Morris' hitting streak is relegated to the record books. In his own mind, it's at 29 games at counting.

When the Cincinnati Reds first baseman comes to the plate on opening day, he'll feel like something important is on the line, even if no one else does.

"I would like to get a hit on opening day just so 20 years from now I can say I hit in 30 straight games," Morris said. "I'll count it."

Unfortunately for Morris, streaks don't carry over from one season to the next. He ran out of time last year, extending the streak to 29 games by going 2-for-5 in the final game against St. Louis.

It went down as the second-longest streak in Reds' history, trailing only Pete Rose's 44-game streak in 1978.

Until it got into the upper 20s, the streak didn't mean much to Morris, who considers them a byproduct of luck as well as skill. Once he approached 30, started wishing for more time.

"That's where it started to be more meaningful, only because you don't see that many guys go over 20 games," he said. "It might be something you do only once in your career, so it sticks out."

There is an obscure category in the baseball record book that recognizes carryover streaks, but it's not considered meaningful. Streaks end when the season does.

"If it did carry over, I might have thought about it a little more," Morris said. "Since they don't officially continue, I haven't given it a lot of thought."

He has thought about something more important to him — his health.

Throughout his career, Morris has been one of the best pure hitters in the National League. He has batted .313 or higher in five of his seven seasons with the Reds, including a .318 in 1991 that was second to Terry Pendleton in the National League.

The only two times he failed to hit .300 were in seasons ended by injury. Overall, he has been on the disabled list in four of the last five seasons — the main reason he has never appeared in more than 136 games in a season.

"At this point, I look at games played," he said. "I've had those injury problems. My goal as I sit here is to play 150 to 155 games. That's really what my goal is in any given year, and I feel my numbers will follow."

Avoiding injury isn't as easy as it might sound for Morris. Several of his mishaps have been strange.

In 1992, he broke his hand when he was hit by a pitch from Charlie Liebbrandt. He came back and pulled a hamstring while stretching in the on-deck circle.

Although UI graduate student Amy Wheeler just recently completed the finished script for her play, "Two Birds and a Stone," she said she is not at all nervous about the UI Playwrights Festival in May. Rather, Wheeler said, she is excited and anxious to see the finished project showcased.

Wheeler will present her play along with four new scripts from other UI playwrights, in this year's Playwrights Festival, to be held at the UI Theatre Building May 5-7. The annual event, which has drawn national attention, will feature two showings daily at 5 and 9 p.m. Casting has just been completed for all shows.

Wheeler wrote "Two Birds and a Stone" in October of last year as inspiration from national renowned director Anne Bogart and a 1960s novella "The Boy and His Friend the Blizzard," by Hungarian author Gregory Morton.

"A young life, taken away just like that ... he will be missed," said Felicia Daniels, one of a group of fans who stood across the street from a funeral home on Manhattan's Upper East Side, where a private service was held.

The fans played his music and held pictures of the entertainer whose given name was Christopher Wallace but who also went by the stage name Biggie Smalls, a reference to his hulking 6-foot, 280-pound frame.

LOS ANGELES — In a rather unattractive, industrial section of downtown, a creaking postal facility has been converted into a studio for "EZ Streets," CBS' recently revived series.

Inside, all is quiet as Ken Olin and Debrah Farentino film an intense bar scene for the gritty, critically acclaimed drama about corrupt cops and ruthless mobsters.

Outside, a siren screams by, forcing a stop to the filming. That's the downside of filming at the 500,000-square-foot Terminal Annex, shrugs Paul Haggis, executive producer, creator — and, for this episode, director. Of course there are also the rodents, and

Although a final vote
a plan was approved

By Kevin Doyle
The Daily Iowan

AMES — The Iowa state Board of Regents preliminarily approved a plan Wednesday to raise UI room and board rates by $137 per student next year, and UI officials said they will begin immediately. Final approval of the proposed rates will be voted on at the Regents' April meeting in Cedar Falls. The proposed 3.7 percent increase would bring room and board to a total of $3,825 for the year, which is the lowest per-

"Match Day"

During Wednesday's "Match Day," 155 UI medical students were informed about where they will do their residency upon graduation. Of the 169 students who will earn the UI's Doctor of Medicine degree this year, 155 participated in the National Residency Matching Program. Nearly 57 percent of students who were "matched" on Wednesday will continue their education in residencies of family medicine, internal medicine, pediatrics and gynecology. Fifty-six graduates will remain in Iowa for their post-graduate training. All UI students who participated secured positions — 69 percent with their first choice and 86 percent with one of their top three choices. Twenty-seven percent of participants chose residencies in family medicine, well above the national average of 17 percent.

Medical students evaluate residencies

The Daily Iowan

More than 150 graduating medical students waited Wednesday with their friends, families and teachers, nervously fingering white envelopes that contain their plans for the future. The papers inside told the students where they would spend the next several years pursuing advanced training, or residency, their chosen specialties. Wednesday's event, known as "Match Day," is a time of great anticipation for graduating UI medical students, Elaine Demetroulis said. "I think everything, the anticipation and nervousness, finally when we were all together in the room," Demetroulis said. "I all wanted to find the program."
