McVeigh jurors consider death penalty

By Michael Fleeman
Associated Press

DENVER — In a courtroom protected by barricades and armed guards, Oklahoma City bombing defendant Timothy McVeigh gazed intently at potential jurors Monday as they spoke of their willingness to impose the death penalty for the deadliest terrorist attack ever on U.S. soil.

McVeigh, with a buzz haircut and wearing an open-collared blue shirt and khakis, smiled and shook his attorney's hand as he was brought into the courtroom from a basement holding cell for the start of jury selection. He nodded and mouthed "Good morning" through a grin when the judge introduced him to potential jurors.

But during detailed and excruciatingly slow questioning, McVeigh's stare tightened over his folded hands as prospective jurors discussed how they could recommend execution if he is convicted in the April 19, 1995, blast that killed 168 people and injured hundreds more.

"It's hard to place yourself in the role of deciding the fate of another human being on these terms," said a middle-aged man identified only as No. 858. "Yet there has to be some ultimate price to pay."

The self-employed financial adviser said he has not formed an opinion about McVeigh, but believes there may be other suspects who have not been arrested.

"There are elements, potentially people out there that are ancillary to this case, that might want to make their strength and presence felt," he said.

The man, who once lived in Tulsa, Okla., said he visited the bombing site before the gutted shell of the building was demolished, feeling "I guess all the things a normal human being would feel. I think I cried a little."

The second prospective juror questioned, a churchgoing grandmother in her 60s, said she too cried and prayed for the victims as she watched television coverage of the bombing. Her dominant memory of McVeigh was the footage of him in an orange jail jumpsuit being led out of a county jail in Oklahoma.

"I felt very sorry for him," she said. "For such a young man to waste his life."

McVeigh attorney Stephen Jones then asked: "You didn't feel sorry because they arrested the wrong man?"

"I didn't know," she said.

As the prospective jurors took the stand to talk about everything from their view of the justice system to their opinions on the O.J. Simpson case, they were hidden behind a partial wall from nearly everyone in the audience section of the courtroom. U.S. District Judge Richard Matsch has promised the prospective jurors that their privacy will be protected during the questioning.

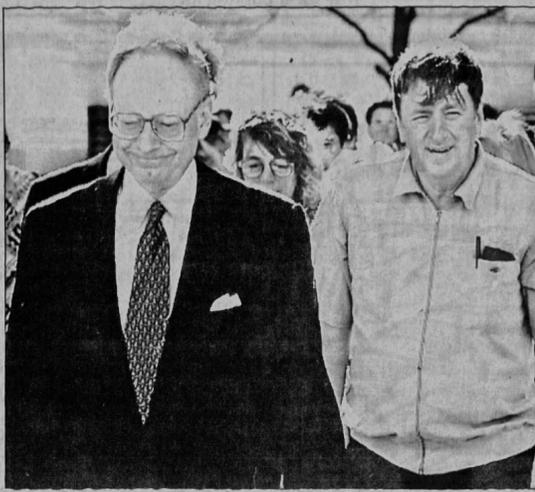

Given the slow pace — only four potential jurors were questioned by midafternoon — it could take two weeks or more for lawyers to choose 12 jurors and six alternates from a pool of hundreds, and all those picked must be willing to consider the death penalty as punishment.

Heightened security was evident at the stone-and-glass courthouse, which is ringed by concrete barriers, huge stone planters and temporary metal fences. Police officers on foot, on horseback and in cruisers made regular passes around the complex, and at least one sharpshooter, wearing military fatigues, was stationed at the top of a parking structure across the street.

Reporters and observers were screened by two sets of metal detectors before being allowed into the second-floor courtroom.

Only a few victims' families showed up to watch, and an auxiliary courtroom set up to handle an overflow crowd was filled mostly with reporters.

And fewer than 75 people showed up to watch the telecast 600 miles away in a 320-seat auditorium set up under tight security at Oklahoma City's Federal Aviation Administration complex.

Congress created the closed-circuit hookup to accommodate the survivors and the victims after the trial was moved from Oklahoma City because of the intense publicity.

"Whether there's one person or none, this closed-circuit television needed to be held," said Dr. Paul Heath, a survivor of the bombing. "The opportunity is here, and that is the real point of the closed-circuit feed."

Jones focused much of his questions on the media, since only last week he claimed the jury pool was poisoned by the purported confessions of his client in stories by The Dallas Morning News and Playboy.

McVeigh, a tall, slender 28-year-old who grew up in working-class Pendleton, N.Y., served with distinction in the Gulf War.

Prosecutors intend to show that after the war McVeigh embraced a culture of hate, racism and anti-government fervor, as spelled out in a book he was said to have devoured — "The Turner Diaries," a fictional, racist tract that describes a scene eerily similar to the Oklahoma bombing.

Chief prosecutor Joseph Hartzler intends to link McVeigh to bomb-making materials and a yellow Ryder rental truck used in the explosion.

The defense will attack the integrity of the evidence, focusing on allegations that results from the FBI crime lab were botched or altered to suit prosecutors.

Bombing victims view trial via closed-circuit telecast

By Shannon King
Associated Press

OKLAHOMA CITY — A sparse crowd of 75 relatives and survivors gathered Monday in an auditorium 600 miles away to watch the start of jury selection in the trial of Oklahoma City bombing suspect Timothy McVeigh.

Security was tight for the first closed-circuit telecast at the Federal Aviation Administration auditorium.

Even reporters and their satellite trucks were kept in a parking lot two blocks away. Shuttle buses from the lot took families to the auditorium.

As arguments play out on the 12-by-26-foot screen, victims' relatives and survivors are under the same court rules as those in Denver: no talking or demonstrations, no coming and going, no food or drink and no electronic equipment or reading material in the auditorium that can accommodate 300 people.

Among those present was Dr. Paul Heath, a survivor of the April 19, 1995, bombing that killed 168 people.

"Whether there's one person or none, this closed-circuit television needed to be held," said Heath, president of a survivors group. "The opportunity is here, and that is the real point of the closed-circuit feed."

He said some viewers Monday visited with counselors available in another room.

"It's a lot more emotional than some of the people thought," Heath said when asked about the first time McVeigh was visible on the screen.

Also present Monday was Carolyn Templin, whose son-in-law, Scott Williams, was killed.

"It's going to be extremely hard hearing the evidence no matter where we are, but this is the last thing I can do for Scott and we will get through it," Templin said.

Victims' relatives and survivors are allowed to watch the telecast under a law passed by Congress last year.

Spectators sitting in theater-style seats have only one wide-angle view at which to look. There are no close-ups and prospective jurors were not shown.

The observers must make reservations up to two days before a court session.

Federal marshals are stationed in front of the auditorium and in the lobby.

The telecast is fed from Denver to the auditorium by way of an encrypted signal on a direct fiber-optic line to prevent pirating. U.S. District Judge Richard Matsch has control of the signal; he also has hired a retired judge to keep order in the Oklahoma auditorium.

Under the new law, eligible spectators are crime victims who have a compelling interest to view a telecast because they are unable to attend a relocated trial due to expense or inconvenience.

For Tina Tomlin, whose husband, Rick, was killed, staying home to view the trial may help her ease the stress.

"It's just going to be an emotional situation all around. It will be wonderful to know that you have friends and family around to comfort you," she said.

Spokesperson: Russia, NATO may soon sign agreement

MOSCOW (AP) — Russia wants to reach an agreement on the proposed expansion of NATO before Western leaders invite new members to join the alliance at a summit meeting in July, a spokesman for President Boris Yeltsin said Monday.

Yeltsin and President Clinton, who held a March 20-21 summit in Helsinki, Finland, discussed the possibility of meeting in Paris to sign a Russia-NATO treaty, presidential spokesperson Sergei Yastrzhembsky said.

Yastrzhembsky did not give a date, but Russian news agencies said the meeting could take place in late May.

At the summit, NATO is expected to invite new members from the former East bloc, with Poland, the Czech Republic and Hungary seen as the main candidates.

"It would be preferable to have such a treaty agreed on before the Madrid summit of NATO leaders," Yastrzhembsky was quoted by Interfax news agency as saying.

Yastrzhembsky

"This would certainly contribute to stability in Europe and to an ending of the corrosion of trust between Russia and the West," he said.

Although the ITAR-Tass news agency reported Sunday that Yeltsin would go to the NATO summit in the Spanish capital, Yastrzhembsky said Monday that Yeltsin did not have any plans to attend.

The proposed Russia-NATO agreement is expected to include assurances that NATO would not station nuclear weapons or additional troops on the territory of new members, and would give Russia a say in NATO affairs. But it is not expected to include the security guarantees Russia wants.

In Washington, a senior U.S. official said Clinton would be glad to sign a charter with Yeltsin if the agreement is ready during the president's upcoming European trip.

A meeting around the time of Clinton's scheduled visit to The Hague on May 28 is a possibility, the official said, but he added that no significant work has been done on the agreement since the Helsinki meeting.

A series of meetings between Russian and NATO officials has been set for April, the official said.

Investigators: No evidence of copycat cult suicides

By Matthew Fordahl
Associated Press

SAN DIEGO — There's no evidence that more members of the Heaven's Gate cult are planning to kill themselves, although such reports are being investigated, authorities said Monday.

Such fears of copycat suicides by far-flung cult cells are real. In 1994, 48 members of the Order of the Solar Temple killed themselves in Switzerland. Later that year, five more members committed suicide in Canada, followed by 16 in the French Alps in 1995 and five in Canada on March 22.

Nonetheless, sheriff's Lt. Jerry Lipscomb said authorities have found "nothing, absolutely nothing" to suggest anyone other than the 39 members of the high-tech UFO cult planned to commit suicide.

Authorities believe there was only one other cult member — Richard Ford, who left the group about a month ago because he didn't want to kill himself.

Ford, previously identified as "Rio," received two farewell videotapes on March 25 from cult members describing their death plans. The next day, he and his employer drove to the hilltop mansion, found the bodies and called police. Ford has not talked with reporters.

As for reports that members may have killed themselves because leader Marshall Applewhite had convinced them he was dying of cancer, medical examiner Brian Blackbourne said Applewhite did not have cancer. In fact, none of the victims had a terminal illness, he said.

The bodies were being tested for HIV, at the request of relatives, he said. And although Applewhite's castration was released to the media, Blackbourne said the other seven men who had been castrated will not be identified.

Thirty-nine members of the nomadic group, which made its living developing Internet Web sites, were found dead March 26 in a rented mansion in exclusive Rancho Santa Fe. They were dressed alike and covered in purple shrouds, their bags neatly packed in anticipation of a trip to outer space.

Authorities say the cult members died in groups, consuming a mixture of phenobarbital and alcohol and then placing plastic bags over their heads.

Blackbourne also said two Vicodin vials were found near the bodies of the last two cult members alive inside the mansion — and traces of the painkiller were found in their bodies in addition to the drugs that helped kill the other 37.

Blackbourne said all autopsies were complete and toxicological tests would be finished by Friday.

Lipscomb said Monday investigators still believe it was a mass suicide, and although they're trying to determine where the cultists got so much phenobarbital, it's unlikely the answer will lead to criminal charges.

Dante's Independence Day Twister

Disaster movies are back. I watched one on TV, about asteroids slamming into the Earth and causing a devastating worldwide epidemic of bad acting. Also, there are TWO disaster movies about volcanoes, including one set in Los Angeles, although I doubt a volcano would faze REAL L.A. residents, a courageous group of people who think nothing of building luxury homes on steep hillsides made entirely of mud.

MRS. L.A. HOMEOWNER: Well, our hillside is finally done!

MR. L.A. HOMEOWNER: Let's go inside!
 (He touches the doorknob, causing the house to slide down the hillside and break into 73 million pieces.)

MR. L.A. HOMEOWNER: Not again!

MRS. L.A. HOMEOWNER: Don't feel bad! The brushfire was almost here anyway!

MR. L.A. HOMEOWNER: I know! As soon as this earthquake tremor is over, let's build another luxury home on this exact spot!

MRS. L.A. HOMEOWNER: Why ever not?

But realism is not the point of a disaster movie. The point of a disaster movie is to have exactly the same script as every other disaster movie. Here it is:

(The movie opens in a suburban home, where the heroine is having breakfast with her adorable son.)

HEROINE: Well, it's a peaceful day! No sign of any disasters!

SON: Mom, do you have a husband or romance interest?

HEROINE: No, Bobby, although I am a top scientist and very attractive.

(The phone rings)

HEROINE: Uh-Oh! I hope that's not a worker from the lab, calling to tell me about an impending disaster!

LAB WORKER: Trish, a disaster is impending!

HEROINE: I'll be right there! (To her son:) Bobby, you stay here and be vulnerable.

Dave Barry

striking this exact house, placing me in grave danger?

HEROINE: Of course!

(We see an exterior shot of the White House. Inside, the president, looking grim, is holding an emergency cabinet meeting.)

PRESIDENT: Haven't I seen that exterior shot before?

VICE PRESIDENT: It's the same one they use in the Tom Clancy movies.

PRESIDENT: OK, somebody set up the plot.

SCIENCE ADVISER: Mr. President, unless something is done, a disaster is going to strike in 90 minutes, sending miniature cars flying in all directions.

PRESIDENT: Ninety minutes! Why so long?

SCIENCE ADVISER: We need to build up the suspense.

GENERAL: Sir, we must launch a nuclear strike against Houston!

PRESIDENT: Why?

GENERAL: I hate Houston.

PRESIDENT (To the hero): Jake, you're incredibly good-looking. I want you to take your minority sidekick and get over to the laboratory immediately and develop a romance interest with the heroine. If this movie is rated "R," she can show her breasts.

HERO: I'll do what I can, sir.

(The next scene is in the laboratory. The hero and heroine are staring intently at a computer screen.)

HEROINE: ... and so, by using the mouse pointer, you can drag the three of clubs over onto the four of diamonds.

(A lab worker rushes up.)

LAB WORKER: Trish, the pantograph is giving us a vector plasma reading in the cosine range!

HERO: What does that mean?

HEROINE: Nothing. It's movie science gibberish. But it's time for the disaster! And my son is home alone!

(The scene shifts to the heroine's neighborhood. People are screaming; miniature cars are flying everywhere.)

HEROINE: This is terrible! Thousands of people are being killed!

HERO: It's OK. They're extras!

SON: Help! Help!

HEROINE: My God! It's Billy!

SON: No, it's Bobby!

HEROINE: Oh, right.

HERO: I'll save him!

HEROINE: Watch out for the special effects!

(The hero, dogging miniature flying cars, saves the son.)

HEROINE: Now we can be a family unit!

SON: With Val Kilmer? I thought the hero was going to be Tom Cruise.

HERO: He wasn't available.

(The final scene takes place back at the White House, where everybody is relieved.)

PRESIDENT: Whew! Although we lost 124 million people, all the main characters survived except the minority sidekick!

(The cabinet applauds.)

GENERAL: So now we can attack Houston?

PRESIDENT: OK by me.

Iowa City, beware the bunny

Playboy magazine is going to be on the prowl in Iowa City in a few weeks. On April 28 and 29, a playboy photographer will be hunting for young UI women to be featured as a part of their "Women of the Big Ten" issue next fall.

How is this to be viewed? Is it good or bad, silly or serious?

Thumbing through the last "Women of the Big Ten" Playboy issue done in 1991, it all seems silly in a way. Young, buxom women arch their backs in stereotypical sex kitten poses, twirling their hair in one hand while letting the other slide down between their legs. Viewing this collection of college-girl snapshots mooning the camera with their bare breasts is embarrassing in a way, like you were looking at pictures of your naked sister.

It's hard to take seriously this group of photos that look like they were taken by someone's gawky, adolescent boyfriend. Do they really represent, as some feminists would assert, the objectification and oppression of women?

Given that many sex offenders are heavy users of pornography and have said it contributes to their feeling that they have a right to view women as objects to be used however they choose, it's hard to dismiss pornography, even Playboy, as totally innocent.

The notion — that pornography is detrimental to the self-esteem of women because of its idealized image of the female body — is part of the feminist victim mentality. Women can choose to accept Playboy's notion of female beauty and feel inadequate if they don't measure up or they can choose not to. There are many women who don't subscribe to Playboy's standard of beauty and know the power to accept or reject this notion is theirs.

But what most women don't have a choice about is living with the threat of sexual assault. This threat forces them to lead a guarded existence. Given that many sex offenders are heavy users of pornography and have said it contributes to their feeling that they have a right to view women as objects to be used however they choose, it's hard to dismiss pornography, even Playboy, as totally innocent.

But pornography is also one of those blurry areas. Perhaps it's because many different things attach themselves to pornography — violence, anger, lust, power, sexual fantasies. So many different people, both men and women, use pornography for so many different reasons. Depending on how it's used, pornography can be as sexually liberating as it can be oppressive.

Playboy might seem innocent enough as it hops its way across the UI campus looking for playmates, but we should still be wary of what might follow in its tracks.

Don't forget the power to protest

Last Friday, several African-American Iowa State University students went to their local Wal-Mart store to protest its refusal to carry African-American beauty and hair-care products. The student who initiated the protest had spoken with the store manager on several occasions. The manager informed her that in order for a Wal-Mart store to carry such products, 5 percent of the population that particular Wal-Mart store serves must be African-American. The black population of Ames is only 3 percent.

This 3 percent doesn't include the 670 African-American students who attend Iowa State.

Not satisfied, the student protest leader made plans to contact the mayor, the Wal-Mart headquarters and wisely, her campus newspaper — The Iowa State Daily.

Probably sensing a public-relations nightmare, the store manager took action. When the students arrived at the store en masse to prove a sizable demand existed as well as many alienated patrons, the store manager revealed a brand new black hair-care section. Shrewdly bypassing corporate policy, the manager contacted a Des Moines Wal-Mart and simply had the products specially ordered.

As the current "next generation," we often don't realize the power we individually and collectively have when it comes to influencing and making an impact on the world around us.

Forgotten by many are the student protests and spirit of activism during the civil-rights era. Right here in Iowa City, students and members of the community collected clothing, books and money to send to those participating in freedom rides and sit-ins all across the South.

Bobby Seale, co-founder of the Black Panther Party, was only 21 years old when he and others nationwide created free breakfast programs, held voter registrations, community police education, provided armed community protection, set up free health clinics and gave legal aid and advice for all those trying to survive in a hostile and openly racist society.

In recent years, the UI was nearly shut down and gained national attention when students held protests against the United States' corporate involvement with apartheid South Africa.

Lessons from history teach us that for the most part, our destiny lies with us if we so desire. It is not necessary for us to wait until we are actually the "next generation" to make a positive difference in this often insensible world. It is up to each and every one of us to find the energy, drive and strength within ourselves that it takes to constantly improve the world around us.

If not, it's not guaranteed anyone else will.

Are there more 'cults' than we would like to admit?

Once again, newspapers have turned coverage of a so-called "cult" into a freak show. Heaven's Gate, whose 39 members committed suicide last week, has not been presented as a legitimate religion, but rather as a group of brainwashed "suicide victims" led by a sexually repressed megalomaniac.

One Associated Press article identified Marshall Applewhite as the "glassy-eyed leader of Heaven's Gate." The same article quoted a police officer as saying, "I have the same kind of penetrating questions that you have: Who or what would make 39 people take their life in this manner?"

The police officer's question characterizes the biggest misconception about "cults" inspired by biased media coverage and the literature of anti-cult activist groups like CAN. Cult members are assumed to sacrifice their volition to a charismatic leader, disabling their capacity to understand the "negative consequences" of their actions.

According to the Cult Awareness Network (CAN), ex-cult members must be deprogrammed in order to reclaim their volition. However, as James Tabor and Eugene Gallagher point out in their book, "Why Waco?", advocates of deprogramming "consistently refuse to follow the logic of their position to its conclusion and to acknowledge that former members of 'cults' will need to be reprogrammed with a different and more acceptable program in order to function successfully after leaving their group."

By not acknowledging the "reprogramming" of ex-cult members, groups like CAN make the assumption that society outside of "cults" offers complete free will. This assumption includes "legitimate" religions such as Christianity, which are presumed to offer freedom of theological dissent and purely beneficial doctrines.

By CAN's own definition, however, Christianity also could be labeled a "cult." The seven marks of a cult, according to a recent CAN brochure are: "mind control, charismatic leadership, deception, exclusivity, alienation, exploitation and a totalitarian world view."

In my childhood church, asking questions was considered sinful. When I was 7 years old, I asked my minister if man's dominion over animals included the right to eat them. I saw no biblical basis for it, and simply wanted to know. It wasn't an attack on Christian doctrine, and I wasn't a vegetarian.

My minister leaned forward, grabbed my hand and said, "You must not question God's word. People go to hell for that." I never asked another question. Sounds like mind control and deception to me. Biblical arguments could be made for a variety of theological positions, but my minister convinced me there was only one.

What is a minister if not a charismatic leader? Or the pope? Catholics travel thousands of miles just to pray in his cathedral. This is not to say Christian religious leaders are sinister exploiters of human spiritual needs, but rather to show how easy cult-labeling becomes when taken to extremes.

As for exclusivity and alienation, look to the family-values debate. Homosexuals and bisexuals are excluded from most churches. Years ago, my father was kicked out of the Catholic church when he divorced his first wife. Although this practice is no longer widespread, it clearly draws boundaries for behavior that, if crossed, result in alienation.

A Christian totalitarian world view is supported both by history and right-wing church leaders today. How many "witches" were burned in Europe and Salem, Mass., in order to rid the earth of "non-believers"? The Spanish Inquisition, Crusades and today's call by Pat Robertson to dissolve freedom of religion all smack of totalitarianism.

Many televangelists could be called exploitive, and some have been caught illegally spending funds raised during televised services. Political exploitation exists as well. Right-wing church leaders prey on the apocalyptic fears of their followers, convincing them homosexuals, "cults" and the U.S. government are the forces of Satan.

The difference between Christianity and Heaven's Gate? Christianity has millions of followers, while Heaven's Gate only recruited 39. "Cults" are most often identified by being on the fringe, while "legitimate" religions must be OK because society accepts them. Mormons were once considered a cult. So were Muhammed's followers when Islam was an infant religion.

As for the 39 deaths, it wasn't suicide in the eyes of Heaven's Gate members. They expressed pleasure to be going to a "better place." Sounds much like the Christian view of life after death.

As Tabor and Gallagher say, "Rather than conduct a war against so-called cults, we can more profitably and pointedly ask ourselves what we believe in, how we are practicing our beliefs and what is our level of participation in the open and ongoing exchange of ideas our society affords?"

Mediators are still at work in Peru

LIMA, Peru — Mediators intensified their efforts to resolve Peru's hostage standoff Monday, trying to bring the government and the rebel captors closer on the key issue of imprisoned guerrillas.

President Alberto Fujimori hosted the mediators at the National Palace, a day after Peruvian government negotiators spent several hours with the rebels holding 72 hostages inside the Japanese ambassador's residence.

No details were released. But one mediator asked for patience in solving the 104-day-old crisis. "We are trying to do things as well and as rapidly as possible,"

Juan Luis Cipriani, Catholic archbishop of Ayacucho, on solving the 104-day-old crisis

Juan Luis Cipriani, Catholic archbishop of Ayacucho, said to reporters. "I understand that you want meetings, dates, but I say that the conversations will continue."

Fujimori and rebel leader Nestor Cerpa on Saturday both denied speculation they were close to a deal to free the hostages.

Cerpa wants freedom for more than 400 jailed Tupac Amaru Revolutionary Movement guerrillas. Fujimori, whose government cracked down on the Tupac Amaru insurgency in the early 1990s, refuses to trade prisoners for the hostages.

Cerpa's rebels seized the hostages by shooting their way into a diplomatic reception at the ambassador's residence on Dec. 17. The captives include Peru's foreign minister, the ambassadors of Japan and Bolivia, judges, police officials and Japanese executives.

In La Paz, Bolivia, Bolivian President Gonzalo Sanchez de Lozada said Monday Fujimori told him by telephone he "doesn't believe (there will be) a rapid solution to the hostage crisis."

The rebels say they won't free Bolivian Ambassador Jorge Gumucio until Bolivia releases four Tupac Amaru prisoners. Bolivia refuses.

Peace talks may resume soon

By Samar Assad
Associated Press

ZURIF, West Bank — Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu said Monday peace talks with the Palestinians could resume soon, his most optimistic comments since two weeks of violent protests in the West Bank and a suicide bombing in Israel.

Peace talks stalled this month after the Palestinians became angered by a series of decisions by Netanyahu — a smaller than hoped-for West Bank pullout and the construction of a new Jewish neighborhood in disputed east Jerusalem, the sector Palestinians claim as a future capital.

"We seek to make progress on peace assuming that we have partners in peace ... and that will be seen in the next few days," Netanyahu said. "Then we can proceed to negotiate peace."

His comments, which came amid signs that the West Bank protests were losing steam, were an apparent departure from his harsh rhetoric against Yasser Arafat. There was no immediate reaction from the Palestinian leader, who has refused to meet with Netanyahu throughout the recent crisis.

Scores of Palestinians have been wounded and one killed in the West Bank riots, which Israel says have been largely orchestrated by Arafat's Fatah group.

In the village of Zurif on Monday,

Israel's army destroyed the home of the suicide bomber who killed three Israelis this month in an attack in a Tel Aviv cafe. Near the West Bank city of Jenin, Palestinian teen-agers stoned Israeli jeeps and Israeli soldiers responded with rubber bullets, injuring at least six.

But elsewhere in the West Bank, it was the quietest day since riots began 12 days ago.

Israel's Channel 2 TV said Israeli President Ezer Weizman was working to arrange a summit between Netanyahu and Arafat. The report said Weizman's aide Aryeh Shumer met with Palestinian Cabinet minister Yasser Abed Rabbo to discuss the possibility.

The Arab League, after an emotional appeal by Arafat for help, adopted a resolution Sunday recommending Arab states freeze relations with Israel. Delegates said the decision is up to individual states.

Netanyahu on Monday called the resolution "a step backward from peace," but he emphasized he was committed to continuing the peace process.

Under the Israel-PLO accords, the Palestinians have autonomy in the Gaza Strip and about a quarter of the West Bank, and Israel is to make three more pullouts from West Bank land by next year. But the Palestinian demand for statehood and key questions such as the future of Jerusalem have been left for final status talks that are to conclude by 1999.

Netanyahu said his recent proposal to speed up the process and push for a final settlement by year's end was still on the table.

"I made a suggestion how to move forward, I think it's an interesting one, (and) there are other suggestions that could come forward, from the U.S. side, or the Palestinian side," Netanyahu told CNN.

The Palestinians have not responded to that offer. But Israeli media reports said Netanyahu might visit Washington at the end of the week, apparently to discuss the proposal.

Arafat was asked upon returning to Gaza from the Arab summit in Cairo whether a new U.S. initiative could end the crisis. "We hope so," he said.

In Zurif, the army imposed a curfew Monday before the demolition of the one-story home where the Tel Aviv suicide bomber, Moussa Gheimat, 28, had lived with his wife and four children.

Dozens of soldiers ringed the home and neighbors watched from the rooftops as a large pneumatic hammer mounted on a bulldozer cut through the cement roof and knocked down the walls, leaving the adjacent home where Gheimat's parents live standing.

"For us, Moussa is a hero and a martyr," said 17-year-old Abdel Khader Gheimat, a cousin. "The demolition of his house only gives us more conviction to continue with the struggle."

Despite shooting attempt, Rainsy vows to keep fighting for democracy

By Robin McDowell

PHNOM PENH, Cambodia — A day after surviving an assassination attempt that killed 16 people and wounded 118, opposition leader Sam Rainsy vowed Monday to continue his fight for democracy and human rights.

"I am not afraid," said Sam Rainsy, no stranger to threats and government intimidation. "I am more

"He is 100 percent committed to democracy. He is one of the bravest men in Cambodia."

Son Chhay, member of parliament determined than ever to continue with my struggle."

Rainsy was slightly wounded in the leg by shrapnel Sunday when four grenades were hurled into a political rally held by his Khmer Nation Party outside the National Assembly. He said he owned his life to a bodyguard who was killed when he threw himself on top of Rainsy to shield him.

Rainsy had been leading a rally of about 200 people outside the National Assembly to protest alleged interference in the judicial system by his rival, Second Premier Hun Sen and his Cambodian People's Party.

Rainsy blamed Hun Sen, his longtime nemesis, for the attack. Hun Sen threatened to have leaders of the protest arrested, blaming them for the bloodshed. Both men cooled their rhetoric Monday and announced support for the investigation.

The attack was the worst since U.N.-supervised elections in 1993 aimed at installing democracy after decades of civil war and the genocidal Khmer Rouge regime in which as many as 2 million people were killed.

Next year's elections would be the first vote since then.

The grenade blasts killed high-ranking party officials, two local journalists and several young women textile workers, whose labor-organizing efforts Rainsy had backed.

Rainsy has championed the cause of garment factory workers, who he said are exploited by foreign factory owners and forced to work 12-hour, seven-day work weeks for often less than $30 a month. He has led dozens of strikes at textile companies despite threats by government authorities who accuse him of scaring away potential investors.

Scattered shoes, ripped pieces of clothing and dried blood still dotted the attack site Monday. Doctors in Calmette Hospital, which received 50 of the injured, appealed for blood donations. A 13-year-old girl who died from blood loss Monday was the 16th fatality, according to police and hospital reports.

Also injured in the attack was an American working for the International Republican Institute, a pro-democratic advisory group. Ron Abney, 55, of Cochran, Ga., was wounded in the groin. He was flown Monday to Singapore for treatment.

At the Lanka temple, saffron-robed monks began prayers for five of the victims brought to the pagoda to be prepared for cremation and a mass funeral Wednesday. Others will be mourned in private family ceremonies.

Some 2,000 Interior Ministry experts and police officers have begun an investigation into the attack, officials said. But while such probes often follow political violence, many view them as shams because they almost never produce arrests. Often facing government intimidation and threats of attack or arrest, Rainsy has been a constant critic of the government.

"He is 100 percent committed to democracy," said Son Chhay, a member of parliament also known for his outspoken views. "He is one of the bravest men in Cambodia."

Rainsy has reserved his most stringent attacks for the formerly communist Cambodian People's Party, particularly its vice-president, Hun Sen.

Often calling Hun Sen a dictator, Rainsy has accused him of profiting from illegal logging, from selling land to Vietnam, of involvement in the narcotics trade, and of using violence to put down or kill his opponents.

U.S. lifts port restrictions for Chinese ships

By Karen Gullo
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — For the first time since the 1950s, Chinese ships can dock near U.S. military installations with just a day's notice — a result of the Clinton administration lifting a Cold War-era restriction still imposed on the former Soviet republics.

In one of three deals in the past year helping Beijing's main shipping company, the United States quietly agreed to end the requirement that Chinese ships provide four days notification when entering one of a dozen sensitive ports.

In exchange, China agreed to provide new business opportunities it had first promised American shippers in 1993 but had not yet delivered. Officials say implementation of that offer is progressing slowly.

The primary Chinese beneficiary of the deal struck in the spring and summer of 1996 is China Ocean Shipping Co. (COSCO), the state-run shipping company that participated in the negotiations.

"The Chinese clearly signaled to us that they wanted one-day access to the ports and we said we wanted the American companies to do container services in China," explained the U.S. Maritime Administration's Bruce Carlton, a member of the U.S. negotiating team.

The deal, long sought by China, has both economic and symbolic benefits. COSCO can now guarantee with more certainty when its clients' shipments will arrive and its vessels have the same status as those from other friendly countries.

The change is one of three separate U.S. decisions that recently have benefited China's state-run shipper, one of the world's largest and fastest growing.

Last spring, COSCO struck an agreement with Long Beach, Calif., officials to lease a vacant Navy station in a controversial deal now under scrutiny because it never received a security check.

Earlier this year, COSCO also won a U.S.-backed $138 million loan guarantee to build ships at an Alabama shipyard.

COSCO ships have been involved in several recent controversies. One ran into a crowded boardwalk in New Orleans last year and another was unwittingly used by gun smugglers to transport 2,000 submachine guns into northern California.

Experts say the deals involving COSCO show fears of an imminent threat from Communist aggressors have faded as interests in building stronger business ties with China take center stage.

"It reflects the current state of the world," said Bernard Cole, a former Navy officer and expert in maritime strategy and U.S.-Asian foreign policy. "Those port cities are already fairly open."

The four-day restriction on entry to a dozen military-sensitive ports had been imposed in the 1950s to provide U.S. officials early warning about ships arriving from Communist countries that could have an interest in spying.

Though China has been freed from the requirement, it still applies to now-democratic Russia and the other former Soviet republics as well as Cambodia and Vietnam.

Dealings with China have come under the spotlight since the Justice Department and Congress began investigating reports that Beijing may have tried to curry favor with U.S. leaders by funneling illegal money into last year's elections.

The Chinese government repeatedly has denied those allegations, most recently during Vice President Al Gore's trip to China last week.

On the U.S. side, the primary beneficiaries of last spring's negotiations were APL Limited and Sea-Land Services Inc., which were finally allowed to open wholly-owned container transportation companies in China — a first for American shippers. Each must put up $1.7 million in capital, according to a memorandum from the negotiations.

China had agreed in 1993 to let the two U.S. companies in, but the shippers ran into several obstacles prior to last year's negotiation, according to APL and Sea-Land officials.

The swap was the cornerstone of a revised bilateral shipping agreement negotiated in Beijing in April 1996. The two countries exchanged a formal memorandum in June.

The agreement is supposed to lay the groundwork for American businesses to have the same opportunities in China that COSCO has here — a goal negotiators say the United States has yet to achieve.

An American company is unable to lease a terminal in China the way COSCO will be the sole tenant at the former Navy base in Long Beach, APL and Sea-Land officials say.

"There are still restrictions on American companies," Carlton acknowledged.

A committee of U.S. government officials charged with reviewing port security evaluated the proposed change and concluded that Chinese ships do not pose a threat to intelligence operations, said John Farthing, a committee member and chief of the Coast Guard's port and facilities compliance division.

Economic report rattles nerves on Wall Street

By Dave Skidmore
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — A government report showing Americans earning and spending at a robust pace wrenched an already-frazzled Wall Street on Monday. Stocks plunged for a second session on fears of more interest-rate increases from a Federal Reserve intent on keeping the economy from overheating.

Americans' personal incomes surged 0.9 percent in February, the largest gain in eight months and more than double January's 0.4 percent advance, the Commerce Department said.

Spending growth — 0.3 percent — was relatively modest but came after a large 1 percent increase in January, the best in 11 months.

Economists said February's broad-based income gain — with advances in every category except farm income — will help provide consumers with the wherewithal for strong spending through midyear. About four-fifths of the advance came in wages and salaries of private-sector jobs.

"People spend that money; they don't save it," said economist Sandra Shaber of the WEFA Group in Eddystone, Pa. "More jobs and more paychecks certainly equal growth in spending in the months ahead."

That kind of thinking jarred the stock market into the second day of its worst two-session point drop since the 1987 crash. It implies last week's quarter-point increase in short-term interest rates won't be enough to keep economic growth at or below the pace likely to produce accelerating inflation.

The Dow Jones average of industrial stocks fell 157.11 points to close at 6,584.23. That came on top of a 140-point decline last Thursday after news that existing home sales in February posted the biggest increase in more than a decade. Markets were closed on Good Friday.

Economist Richard Berner of Mellon Bank in Pittsburgh predicted Federal Reserve policy-makers would boost rates several more times.

"When the Fed decided to implement its game plan and tighten monetary policy, I don't think they had just one step in mind. I think they had three steps in mind," Berner said. "We're going to see them get on with that game plan fairly quickly."

With Monday's drop, stocks are down 7 percent from the Dow's March 11 peak of 7,085.16, and economist David Jones of Aubrey G. Lanston & Co. said he thought the decline could total 10 percent to 15 percent before the correction runs its course.

"The key to the story is the bond market. ... Rising interest rates have triggered large institutions — mutual funds, insurance companies — to shift some of their funds out of stocks into bonds," Jones said. "At least over the rest of the year that (bond) yield will be more attractive than the return on a volatile stock market."

A Labor Department report scheduled Friday — the government's first broad-based look at the economy in March — could be the next big market-roiling event if it comes in stronger than expected, Jones said.

Analysts are looking for the unemployment rate to hold at 5.3 percent and for a gain of about 180,000 jobs.

Monday's income and spending figures were about what economists anticipated for February. But revisions to earlier months' spending were a surprise.

The 1 percent spending gain in January was revised up from a previous estimate of 0.7 percent. And December spending was reported up 0.4 percent, double the last estimate.

That's significant since consumer spending represents about two-thirds of economic activity.

In details from February's income and spending report, the Commerce Department said:

- Private wages and salaries surged 1.5 percent after declining 0.2 percent the month before.

- Disposable personal income, income minus taxes, grew 0.8 percent after a 0.7 percent gain in January.

- Americans' saving rate — savings as a percentage of disposable income — was 5.5 percent, the best in five months.

Study: Too many vitamin E supplements can harm

By Paul Recer
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — People loading up on vitamin E supplements to stay healthy may be making a mistake. Researchers say most pills have only one form of the nutrient and it can be harmful in large doses.

People should take only modest levels of vitamin E in pills and then eat foods that contain more complete forms of the nutrient, said Stephan Christen, a biochemist and researcher at the University of California, Berkeley.

Earlier studies had shown vitamin E protects against heart disease and cancer and slows aging by absorbing oxygen free radicals, destructive chemicals that form during metabolism and when the body fights disease.

But a study to be published today in the Proceedings of the National Academy of Sciences suggests alpha-tocopherol, the form of vitamin E found in pills, does an incomplete job of neutralizing some compounds.

To get full benefit from the vitamin, people also need gamma-tocopherol, found in soybeans, nuts and grains, said Christen, lead author of the study.

The researcher said he hopes vitamin pill companies soon will add that second form of the vitamin to their formulas. It is the main form of vitamin E in the American diet, said Christen, "but it stays in the body only a short time."

Christen said of the E vitamins, only gamma-tocopherol gets rid of peroxynitrite, a highly destructive nitric oxide radical found at sites of inflammation. Where there is chronic inflammation, he said, peroxynitrite can start processes leading to cancer and heart disease.

In laboratory tests, Christen said, California researchers found gamma-tocopherol also was the only one of the E vitamin forms that could permanently trap and remove nitrogen oxide, a chemical commonly found in polluted air.

Additionally, the studies showed high levels of alpha-tocopherol reduce the levels of gamma-tocopherol in the blood. Thus, said Christen, high doses of current vitamin E pills actually can block a beneficial natural nutrient.

"The initial evidence is pretty clear," he said. "We should not be taking only alpha-tocopherol in supplements."

Since few pills now contain both the alpha and gamma forms of vitamin E, Christen said people should limit the amount of the supplement they take. Amounts above 100 international units may be harmful, he said.

John Hathcock, of the Council for Responsible Nutrition, a trade association for vitamin pill makers, disagreed. He said high doses of vitamin E have been found to lower the "bad" type of cholesterol in the blood.

Hathcock said Christen's study was "an important expansion" in understanding gamma-tocopherol, "but what is lacking is any proof that this makes any clinical difference."

Stepped-up enforcement and alcohol policies in residence halls accounts for the reported drug and alcohol violations on the UI campus, administrators say.

Officials: Crime report rise due to enforcement

By Will Valet
The Daily Iowan

Stepped-up enforcement of drug and alcohol policies in residence halls accounts for the rise in reported drug and alcohol violations on the UI campus, administrators say.

Nationwide campus crime statistics from 1994-95 were printed in a recent issue of The Chronicle of Higher Education. According to the report, there was a substantial increase of both alcohol- and drug-related violations.

Phillip Jones, UI dean of students, said the increase in drug violations stems from the "zero tolerance" policy in UI residence halls, which was put into effect three years ago. The policy suspends students from residence halls for drug use, specifically for use of marijuana. Violators can apply for re-entry into residence halls one year after being suspended.

"Zero tolerance is a last resort," Jones said. "It's a progressive thing, giving students information about drug use and then encouraging them to observe the rules for a healthy and safe environment."

There were 137 alcohol-related violations at the UI in 1995, up from 116 in 1994. Thirty-seven drug-related violations were reported at the UI in 1995, up from 12 in 1994.

Statistically, the state of Iowa's two other public universities had greater percentage increases of drug and alcohol violations, but the UI had by far the highest numbers. About 27,500 students are enrolled at the UI, while Iowa State University has a population of 24,400 and the University of Northern Iowa has 12,800.

Charles Green, director of the UI Department of Public Safety, said criminal incident reports for 1996 are actually lower than the 1994-95 statistics. He said there were 1,614 criminal incident reports in 1995, and 1,434 in 1996.

Green also said it is possible that increased enforcement along with increased drug use is the reason for the UI's increased violations.

"I wouldn't say we have a big rise in the crime rate," Green said. "Certain (statistical) categories rise or fall from year to year. To say there's a rise in crime isn't accurate."

Green said the Department of Public Safety is working with the UI administration to inform students on drug and alcohol policies to prevent drug use, especially through drug education programs such as Outreach.

Jones said zero tolerance was put into effect after studies showed an increased use of marijuana among high-school students, which he said could carry over to college students. He said the zero-tolerance rule was a stricter way to discourage marijuana and other drug use among students in residence halls.

"I have no sympathy toward the use of marijuana," Jones said. "We are about educating students on health and safety reasons for not using drugs."

UI senior Maurice Long said the rise in drug and alcohol use comes from an increased desire among students to experiment.

"A lot of people have become more curious about drugs and alcohol to be accepted, or to step out of reality," he said. "It'd be nice to have a drug-free environment, but we don't live in a perfect world. We just have to deal with it."

Influences at college may prompt incoming students to engage in new and unfamiliar practices, Green said.

"Being away from home and having so much contact with peer groups, sometimes (students) aren't making their own decisions anymore, but are having decisions made for them, like drug use," Green said.

There was also a small rise in burglaries on the UI campus, 113 in 1995 vs. 99 in 1994. There was no change in aggravated assaults, with nine in both 1994 and 1995. None of the Iowa universities reported murders.

Senate OKs 3-year ban on gambling licenses

By Mike Glover
Associated Press

DES MOINES — The Senate voted Monday for a three-year moratorium on new gambling licenses as critics said the state needs a cooling off period from a rash of gambling expansions.

"I'd like to make a strong statement that we have had enough as far as gambling operations," Sen. Rodney Halvorson, D-Fort Dodge, a persistent gambling critic, said.

"When we start carving out areas that can have special privileges and deny those privileges to other areas of the state, I think we are on the wrong track," Judge said.

The move Monday was yet another symptom of an anti-gambling sentiment that legislative leaders say is on the increase in the Legislature. After more than a decade of gradual expansion of the gambling industry, legislators this year are debating new restrictions.

Before communities can seek a gambling license, they must first win a local election. The last two have lost badly.

Judge said that shows voters are putting a moratorium on growth of the gambling industry and don't need help from the Legislature.

"We are cooling down," Judge said. "We are doing that on our own volition, without having to impose a moratorium."

But Sen. Derryl McLaren, R-Farragut, said legislators should send a signal throughout the state that this isn't the time to consider gambling expansion.

"You finally reach a point where you say 'look, enough is enough,'" McLaren said. "We can sit, pause for a moment and figure out where it is we want to go from here."

sure on a 45-2 vote, sending it to the House where leaders say they expect easy approval.

Backing for the bill came from a coalition of gambling supporters eager to protect existing casinos from new competition and gambling critics who seek ways of blocking expansion.

Rep. Patty Judge, D-Albia, opposed the measure, arguing that lawmakers were meddling in local decisions.

"When we start carving out areas that can have special privileges and deny those privileges to other areas of the state, I think we are on the wrong track," Judge said.

The move Monday was yet another symptom of an anti-gambling sentiment that legislative leaders say is on the increase in the Legislature. After more than a decade of gradual expansion of the gambling industry, legislators this year are debating new restrictions.

Before communities can seek a gambling license, they must first win a local election. The last two have lost badly.

Judge said that shows voters are putting a moratorium on growth of the gambling industry and don't need help from the Legislature.

"We are cooling down," Judge said. "We are doing that on our own volition, without having to impose a moratorium."

But Sen. Derryl McLaren, R-Farragut, said legislators should send a signal throughout the state that this isn't the time to consider gambling expansion.

"You finally reach a point where you say 'look, enough is enough,'" McLaren said. "We can sit, pause for a moment and figure out where it is we want to go from here."

Rep. Patty Judge, D-Albia, on why she feels the decision on whether to set up gambling establishments should be done locally

The bill would exempt proposals in Osceola and Keokuk, where efforts are underway to launch gambling casinos. Those proposals must still be approved by state gambling regulators. The measure approved Monday allows those efforts to continue.

Gov. Terry Branstad had asked the Legislature for a five-year ban on new gambling licenses, and there were some efforts in the Senate to make that ban permanent.

Those were rejected and lawmakers settled on three years as a compromise.

The Senate approved the measure on a 45-2 vote, sending it to the House where leaders say they expect easy approval.

Backing for the bill came from a coalition of gambling supporters eager to protect existing casinos from new competition and gambling critics who seek ways of blocking expansion.

Rep. Patty Judge, D-Albia, opposed the measure, arguing that lawmakers were meddling in local decisions.

"When we start carving out areas that can have special privileges and deny those privileges to other areas of the state, I think we are on the wrong track," Judge said.

Gingrich had more freedom to speak during China visit

By Robert Burns
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Newt Gingrich's blunt talk in China about defending Taiwan showed that on a world stage, the House speaker can get away with more diplomatic directness than the White House's own foreign policy chiefs.

During his visit to China last week, Vice President Al Gore was more circumspect, sticking to standard themes and avoiding public comments on what the United States would do if China used force to reunite Taiwan with the mainland.

With no direct responsibility for foreign policy, Gingrich had more leeway to speak his mind — and did.

As it turned out, he mostly echoed the administration's policies toward China. In a conversation with Gore before the vice president left for his Asia trip, Gingrich stressed the importance of speaking with one voice on China.

On the matter of Taiwan, however, Gingrich seemed to cause some White House heartburn in expressing a commitment to Taiwan's security that is implied but not stated explicitly in the 1979 Taiwan Relations Act, which governs U.S. policy.

Asked whether that bothered President Clinton, White House press secretary Mike McCurry at first said Gingrich "spoke for himself" in China and was welcome to do so.

"We are never discouraged when members of Congress take the time to explore the parameters of U.S. engagement overseas, and particularly in a relationship as important as the U.S.-Sino relationship," McCurry told reporters.

Later, McCurry added that Gingrich's Taiwan remarks were a "short-hand version" of an American policy that is more complex than Gingrich's comments suggest. Gingrich, leading a bipartisan delegation of 11 congressmen touring Asia, said Sunday he told a senior Chinese official there was no doubt how the United States would respond if China used force to reunite with Taiwan.

"We will defend Taiwan. Period," Gingrich said. That "period" is more like a "question mark" in the Taiwan Relations Act, which states that any act to determine the future of Taiwan by "other than peaceful means" would be of "grave concern" to the United States. It also says the president would consult with Congress in deciding how to respond. In light of Congress' role in handling such a crisis, Gingrich's remarks were appropriate, said Paul Godwin, a China expert at the National War College.

"What Gingrich did that was so important was remove from the minds of our friends in Beijing any notion that Congress would prevent the United States from coming to the assistance of Taiwan" in the event of an unprovoked attack, Godwin said.

In his own visit to China, Gore did not publicly comment on the Taiwan security issue. The practice of this and previous administrations has been to encourage the Chinese to resolve the Taiwan problem peacefully and to reaffirm the U.S. position that the self-governing island, seat of the rival Nationalist government, is part of China. China regards Taiwan as a renegade province and fears it seeks independence.

Administration officials had been a bit nervous about Gingrich's diplomatic debut in China, given the Republican's unpredictability. But for the most part they saw his trip as a useful reminder of the Chinese leadership of the influence of Congress on policy, especially in matters related to trade.

To the administration's delight, Gingrich said while in China he was "broadly" in agreement with the administration's China policy.

COLEMAN

makes Iowa City an interesting and wonderful community is to have all varieties of stores and have people of all ages down there.

DI: But at the same time, some downtown business owners have said they can't survive unless they sell alcohol.

Coleman: I would like to have the owners engage in discussion and I never heard anyone say that, but maybe that's the way people feel and it's the kind of discussion we need to have. It's a community issue ... the city council, the store owners and the UI have something to say about it. Because for us having a nice downtown is a key draw for students.

DI: The Daily Iowan reported Monday that you are reviewing a 49-page report from the Rainbow Coalition Task Force regarding the discrimination against faculty and staff at the UI who are openly lesbian/gay/bisexual/transgender (LGBT). What were some of the issues you found out about?

Coleman: When I asked the group to get together, what I wanted to do was get some ideas about things to make our whole community more inclusive. ... What they did went back and took a historical look at some things that had been done in the past. This was the first time for me that everything has been compiled, so it's not as though I was shocked by any of the data. I had seen it all before and it was one of the reasons that I wanted to get a group together and see what we could do in a positive vein to help us move forward as a university. What we're doing now is going through and seeing what are some of the issues that we can begin to address.

DI: The statistics in the report seemed to show a high incidence of negative attitudes toward LGBT people at the UI. Do you think similar numbers show up at other universities, or do you think these are unique to the UI?

Coleman: It's not my experience that this is somehow just at the UI. I guess I'm sorry to say that this would be the case at a number of places.

DI: Are you looking into establishing a student union for LGBT people?

Coleman: Not a student union, a cultural center. I've been very honest with the group that my general feeling is that I'm not convinced that is something I want to do. But I want to look seriously at all of these issues. We're trying to make progress in making this community more inclusive.

DI: The Rainbow Task Force advised the UI to create a Sexual Studies Program. Do you think this will happen in the future?

Coleman: That's an issue that rests with the faculty. I think the faculty needs to decide if they have the strength to do it. I want to make sure the faculty think it's a good idea and to make sure we have the course work strength.

DI: At the last Iowa State Board of Regent meeting in Ames, graduating in a four-year period was something you thought was important. What is the UI doing and why is this important?

Coleman: First of all, I think there are artificial problems that we shouldn't have that keep students from graduating in four years — like not being able to get the course you need to graduate. I want to make sure we have the courses available. I've also said that tuition is a minor part of the cost of college — it's the living expenses that are the burden. From an economic standpoint, it is in the student's best interest to graduate in four years. I understand for everyone to graduate in four years is never going to be 100 percent. But for those who want to, they should be able to do it.

DI: The DI has reported a $137 proposed increase in residence-hall fees for next year. Many students say even though it's only $137, any increase is too much. What is your response to this?

Coleman: It's a tough issue. We need to balance quality with cost. Overall, I'm proud of the fact that we have an education here that is affordable and the lowest in the Big Ten. It's keeping the cost low and providing the things we need to have. I know that every single increase is hard for a lot of students who pay their own way.

DI: What kind of goals do you have for the final stretch of the school year?

Coleman: We will be reporting our strategic goals to the Board of Regents in May. We are starting a process of talking about fund-raising initiatives in getting ourselves geared up in those areas. We're going to be completing Schaeffer Hall this summer and I'm really excited about that.

will suggest the Oakdale Research Campus as a new location and if approved, she will create a train service to shuttle students from the parking lot to the rebuilt library in Oakdale.

"Doing this makes much more sense than not allowing students to have the parking they want and deserve," she said.

At next month's Regents meeting, engineers will present the Board with the official details of the construction, which will take $3.2 million from increased student tuition to complete.

UI freshman Nathan Soldat said he hates the library as it is and wants to bring his car to campus next year now that he knows he has somewhere to park.

"This is great," he said. "Students will be able to bring cars, and as an added bonus we'll have less papers to write because there won't be the resources to write them."

Soldat said he is thankful the library is being torn down instead of an important part of Iowa City like the downtown bar area, where he said he has learned more in a single night than he ever has in the Government Publications room. He said he hopes the new lot will be enough to keep students happy, so the UI won't be forced to demolish other buildings like the Union, the Old Capitol or the UI's most important building — Iowa Advanced Technological Laboratories.

"It's about time someone did something about parking on this campus," he said. "Students need parking more than they need books and stuff."

UI sophomore Monica Bennet said she used to enjoy studying at the library until she spotted a couple engaging in intercourse on the fourth floor of the library in the P-Q aisle. She said because of this, she can't look at the library, much less Edgar Allen Poe's "The Raven" the same way, and she is "glad the damn place is being torn down."

Although she said the demolition of the library will help erase some of her recurring nightmares, she said she fears the new parking lot will create different opportunities for students to have public sex.

"I just hope now people won't be having sex in their cars. That would be even worse," Bennet said. "Especially those tiny foreign cars, like a Miata."

Hawaii kicker drowns saving coach's son

LIHUE, Hawaii (AP) — Smith, a kicker on Hawaii's team, drowned over the weekend while trying to save coach vonAppen's 6-year-old son.

Police on the island of Kauai said Smith and the vonAppen family were on an outing at Waipahoe Slide Saturday when the drowning occurred. Smith and the boy were sucked into a waterfall going down the natural rock.

Police Sgt. Cecil Balaris would have been 21 when he saved the boy by pushing a large branch which was used to block the boy out of the water.

He said Smith was then under. His body was found under later.

"That young man was a hero who gave up his life to save that boy," vonAppen said.

The medical examiner said Smith may have hit his head on a rock as he was knocked unconscious, brother, Ryan, said.

Smith, a Kauai resident, was one season at Southern Oregon. He transferred to Hawaii last season and was expected to battle for a starting job when spring practice opened Tuesday.

Abbot released by Angels

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Abbot, who suddenly became the Angels' biggest loser last season, was released Monday.

Abbot, 29, had left the team March 23 while both sides were negotiating his future.

Ultimately, the team decided to release the final two years of a three-year, $7.8 million contract Abbot signed before going 2-18 with a 7.50 ERA last season.

Abbot, 1-2 with a 13.50 ERA in 2-3 innings this spring, will be released this year and $3 million guaranteed through 1998.

Arizona races to NCAA title

By Jim O'Connell
Associated Press

INDIANAPOLIS — Now there's only one No. 1 left for the Arizona Wildcats — themselves.

Arizona, the team that was supposed to be a year away, just needed an extra five minutes to win its first NCAA basketball championship.

Led by the backcourt of junior Miles Simon and freshman Mike Bibby, Arizona kept Kentucky from repeating as national champion with an 84-79 overtime victory Monday night.

With three juniors, a sophomore and a freshman in the starting lineup, next year was supposed to be the one for Arizona. Instead, the Wildcats (25-9) made their first championship appearance a thrilling one in a game featuring 20 ties and 18 lead changes.

Fourth-seeded Arizona became the first team in tournament history to knock off three No. 1 seeds — Kansas, North Carolina and now Kentucky, the winningest programs in college basketball history.

"We just wanted it more than them," said Simon, the game's MVP. "Their legs were dragging, they were in foul trouble. We just wanted it more."

Kentucky was trying to become the second repeat champion since UCLA's stretch of seven straight titles ended in 1973. Duke repeated as champion in 1992.

"It's been the most fun I've ever had as a coach," Kentucky's Rick Pitino said. "I walked off the court feeling very proud."

Instead, Arizona won the first overtime championship game since Michigan.

Arizona's Miles Simon clutches the game ball as his teammates celebrate as Arizona beat Kentucky 84-79 in overtime to win the national championship Monday at the NCAA Final Four tournament in Indianapolis.

Wildcats shock defending national champion Kentucky in overtime to become the first ever No. 4 seed to win the NCAA men's basketball title

The Key:

An obviously exhausted Kentucky forward Ron Mercer managed just 13 points — seven fewer than he scored in helping Kentucky win last year's championship — and Arizona continuously broke the press to win 84-79 in overtime and capture its first title. He took just nine shots, none in overtime. He also committed five of Kentucky's 16 turnovers.

Mercer was averaging 18.3 points entering the game.

INDIANAPOLIS — For most teams, Kentucky's pressure defense is 94 feet of misery, hands swiping at the ball all over the court, making the trip from one end to the other an awful adventure.

For Arizona's Miles Simon, it was an opportunity, a chance to convert the Wildcats' quickness into a national championship.

"We're not scared of them," he said on the eve of Monday night's NCAA tournament title game. "If we can beat the pressure it will just mean easier shots for us down the court."

Simon knew that South Carolina had beaten Kentucky twice with that formula.

"Our guards have the same capabilities as South Carolina's guards and can cause the same kind of problems," he said.

They did and it did. Simon refused to let Kentucky's reputation for defensive disruption shake his confidence. Rather, he converted their intensity into an advantage for Arizona. He scored 30 points, converting 14 of 17 free throws in the 84-79 overtime victory.

This was Simon at his best, setting the pace, making the big plays and big shots.

It was typical of his style.

Coming out of high school, he was turned down by North Carolina, where he wanted to play. There was no room for a shooting guard at Chapel Hill, but there was space at Tucson. So Simon pinned the rejection letter on his wall and then blistered the Tar Heels in the

Everyone still in the hunt on Opening Day

It's Opening Day and your favorite team is in first place, even if it's the Tigers or Pirates.

But don't worry, this won't be the only day to look forward to this season in Detroit and Pittsburgh.

After all, the draft is only two months away.

For fans of the other 26 teams, there are still many summer days to look forward to.

Here's what to look for:

American League East:

The Yankees lost some key players during the winter, but are still loaded with pitching and George Steinbrenner will do what it takes to stay on top.

American League Central:

The trade for Marquis Grissom and David Justice gives the Indians a potent offense from leadoff through the seven hole. Two of the best hitters in the game won't be enough to get the White Sox into the playoffs.

American League West:

The Mariners offense is so good it almost carried them to the playoffs without Randy Johnson. The addition of Jeff Fassero and Scott Sanders gives Seattle the pitching to reach the World Series. The addition of John Wetteland turns the weekly Ranger bullpen into a plus and solidifies their bid for the AL Wild Card.

National League East:

The Braves addition of Kenny Lofton

Roster changes key opening day excitement

By Ben Walker
Associated Press

By the time Frank Thomas steps into the batter's box Tuesday to face Cy Young winner Pat Hentgen, one of the biggest changes in baseball this season will be obvious.

Standing in SkyDome's on-deck circle will be Albert Belle in a White Sox uniform. The next night in Toronto, the Blue Jays show off their top newcomer when Roger Clemens pitches against Chicago.

Opening day features 12 games, including the World Series champion New York Yankees at Seattle and the new-look Florida Marlins, coming off a 26-5 record in spring training, at home against the Chicago Cubs. No interleague games are scheduled — those matchups begin in June.

This is the 50th anniversary of Jackie Robinson breaking the color barrier, and the season is dedicated to his memory. Special commemorative balls have been made by Rawlings to mark the occasion, and will be used in every team's home opener.

Another change for 1997: Having seen a snowout at Fenway Park, a snowy afternoon at Yankee Stadium and freezing temperatures at Tiger Stadium and Wrigley Field for early home openers last year, baseball adjusted its schedules in an attempt to beat the cold weather.

As a result, all five domes in the majors will be in use Tuesday, and every West Coast club in both leagues will begin the year at home.

Sounds like it was a smart idea, too — a freak snowstorm hit the East Coast on Monday, with its effects supposed to linger into Tuesday.

Cincinnati and Baltimore, which

Hawaii kicker drowns while saving coach's son

LIHUE, Hawaii (AP) — Shannon Smith, a kicker on Hawaii's football team, drowned over the weekend while trying to save coach Fred vonAppen's 6-year-old son.

Police on the island of Kauai said Smith and the vonAppen family were on an outing at Waipahee Slippery Slide Saturday when the drowning occurred. Smith and the youngster, Cody, were sucked into a whirlpool after going down the natural slide together.

Police Sgt. Cecil Baliaris said Smith, who would have been 21 Tuesday, saved the boy by pushing him toward a large branch which was used to pull the boy out of the water.

He said Smith was then pulled under. His body was found 90 minutes later.

"That young man was a hero. He gave up his life to save that little boy."

The medical examiner said Smith may have hit his head on a rock and was knocked unconscious, Smith's brother, Ryan, said.

Smith, a Kauai resident, played one season at Southern Oregon and transferred to Hawaii last season. He was expected to battle for the place-kicking job when spring practice opened Tuesday.

Abbot released by Angels

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Jim Abbott, who suddenly became baseball's biggest loser last season after rejoining the Anaheim Angels in 1995, was given his unconditional release Monday.

Abbott, 29, had left the Angels on March 23 while both sides pondered his future.

Ultimately, the team decided to eat the final two years of a three-year, $7.8 million contract Abbott signed before going 2-18 with a 7.48 ERA last season.

Abbott, 1-2 with a 13.50 ERA in 14 2-3 innings this spring, will earn $2.6 million this year and $3 million in 1998.

Tennessee head coach Pat Summitt h... the net with her son Tyler after the La... defeated Old Dominion 68-59 to win NCAA Women's Basketball title Sunday.

Best may st... lie ahead? Volunteers

By Chuck Schoffner Associated Press

CINCINNATI — Tennessee was good this season to win its second straight championship in women's basketball. I wait. The best may be yet to come.

Start with the fact that all but two return from this year's team, including America forward Chamique Holdslaw, who was voted the outstanding player in the Four and is just a sophomore.

Add to that a recruiting class that's ranked 1 in the nation and might rank among the top 10 of all time.

Then throw in the considerable coaching skills of Pat Summitt, who already has the Lady Vols to five national titles, plus the addition of refusing to accept failure, and you say destiny?

When Holdslaw was asked what she would do for an encore after Tennessee's 68-59 win in Sunday night's championship game, she replied, "Go for two. The sky's the limit. We want to be the first to win four (straight)."

It's not a stretch to imagine that Tennessee does lose two key players, guard Abby Conklin and center Pashen Wilson. Conklin scored 12 points in the championship game on 4-for-5 shooting. The added eight points, making all four of her and grabbing six rebounds.

But look at what returns along with her, who scored 24 points in the title game. Tiffani Johnson, a 6-foot-4 junior, will patrol the paint. Point guard Kelly Johnson, who set a championship game record with 11 assists, is a sophomore. The other star, guard Kyra Elzy, is a freshman. So is Niya Butts, a top reserve.

The recruits are led by 6-foot Tamika Williams of Duncanville, Texas, the Naismith Player of the Year in high school. The in-class also has 5-11 point guard K. Clement of Broomall, Pa., a Naismith finalist; 5-10 Semeka Randall of Cleveland; 6-3 center Teresa Geter of Columbia, S.C.

"It's probably my best class," Summitt said. "On paper, they're very impressive. They all the individual awards in their respective states. But the thing I like about them, they're good people and they're great coaches."

CINCINNATI — Tennessee was good enough this season to win its second straight national championship in women's basketball. But just wait. The best may yet be to come.

Start with the fact that all but two players return from this year's team, including All-America forward Chamique Holdseclaw, who was voted the outstanding player in the Final Four and is just a sophomore.

Add to that a recruiting class that's rated No. 1 in the nation and might rank among the best of all time.

Then throw in the considerable coaching skills of Pat Summitt, who already has taken the Lady Vols to five national titles, plus a tradition of refusing to accept failure, and ... can you say dynasty?

When Holdseclaw was asked what she could do for an encore after Tennessee beat Old Dominion 68-59 in Sunday night's championship game, she replied, "Go for two more. The sky's the limit. We want to be the first program to win four (straight)."

It's not a stretch to imagine that. Tennessee does lose two key players in forward Abby Conklin and center Pashen Thompson. Conklin scored 12 points in the championship game on 4-for-5 shooting. Thompson added eight points, making all four of her shots and grabbing six rebounds.

But look at what returns along with Holdseclaw, who scored 24 points in the title game. Tiffany Johnson, a 6-foot-4 junior, will be back to patrol the paint. Point guard Kellie Jolly, who set a championship game record with 11 assists, is a sophomore. The other starting guard, Kyra Elzy, is a freshman. So is forward Niya Butts, a top reserve.

The recruits are led by 6-foot Tamika Catchings of Duncanville, Texas, the Naismith Player of the Year in high school. The incoming class also has 5-11 point guard Kristen Clement of Broomall, Pa., a Naismith award finalist; 5-10 Semeka Randall of Cleveland and 6-3 center Teresa Geter of Columbia, S.C.

"It's probably my best class," Summitt said. "On paper, they're very impressive. They won all the individual awards in their respective states. But the thing I like about them, I think they're good people and they're great competitors."

Of course, a great recruiting class doesn't necessarily ensure a championship. But having talent certainly is better than not having it. "By Tennessee standards, we're a little lean on talent right now," Summitt said. "But we've got some coming."

Lean or not, Tennessee still had enough to become the first team in 13 years to win back-to-back titles. This would have been the year to stop Tennessee and it didn't happen.

Tennessee finished only fifth in the Southeastern Conference and for one week, the Lady Vols fell out of The Associated Press top 10 for the first time in 10 years.

But when the calendar turned to March, the Lady Vols turned it up. And in Summitt's view, it all went back to the loss at Old Dominion. Jolly returned after that game, the Lady Vols won 11 of their next 12 and they were on their way to turning skeptics into believers.

"The only people that believed in us were us, our coaches and friends," Thompson said. "Nobody else did. We just did it."

KEY BISCAYNE, Fla. — Martina Hingis became the youngest No. 1 player in tennis history Monday, making her teen to beat.

The 16-year-old Swiss sensation likes her new role, and she's unconcerned about any pitfalls or pressure that may await her.

"Everyone is expecting you to beat every player in the world right now," Hingis said Monday at Hilton Head Island, S.C., where she'll compete this week in the Family Circle Cup.

"But if you don't make it, it doesn't matter. In tennis you have so many chances. When you don't play well in one tournament, the next week it's another one."

Hingis, who claimed her fifth title of 1997 at the Lipton Championships on Saturday, supplanted Steffi Graf in the WTA Tour rankings released Monday. Graf had held at least a share of the No. 1 ranking since June 1995.

Monica Seles, who reached the top of the rankings at age 17 in 1991, was the youngest previous No. 1.

Because Graf has been sidelined for two months with a knee injury, Hingis was assured of No. 1 even if she lost her opening match at Lipton. Instead she won the tournament, blitzing Seles 6-2, 6-1 in the final.

"I am unbeatable in this year right now," Hingis said.

Her record in 1997 is 26-0, and her dominance has been deceptive. She lacks the power of Graf or Seles, but she anticipates well and mixes her shots with an intelligence uncommon for one so young.

Hingis left Key Biscayne with a crystal trophy, $215,000 and plenty of testimonials from those she beat.

"She's very fast, and she gets back a lot of balls," Seles said. "She creates shots out of places you don't expect them."

Baseball Opening Day

CUBS VS. MARLINS

Cubs face optimistic Florida today

By Mike Schneider
Associated Press

Forget the $100 million upgrade to the team. Nevermind a 26-5 spring training record.

All Florida Marlins manager Jim Leyland wants his team to do against the Chicago Cubs on opening day Tuesday is focus.

"You really have to zero in on that concentration level," Leyland said. "The excitement is so great that you can forget you have a game."

The distractions on opening day are plentiful: TV interviews, community appearances, a ceremony that includes a navy parachute team dropping from the sky over the ballpark.

"Opening day to me is a happening, not a game," Leyland said. "It's a little bit like a playoff atmosphere. ... You're running around at the last minute to get your luggage back at your house ... It's a pain."

Expectations are higher this opening day than any other in the franchise's five-season history.

Marlins owner H. Wayne Huizenga committed $89 million to bring Bobby Bonilla, Alex Fernandez and Moises Alou and other free agents to Miami in the offseason.

The high hopes are new for the Marlins, whose 80-82 record last season was the best in franchise history.

"There are a lot of expectations now," said Kevin Brown, the Marlins' opening day starter. "The key is to try not to let it overwhelm you or change your perspective. You try to keep it as simple as you can."

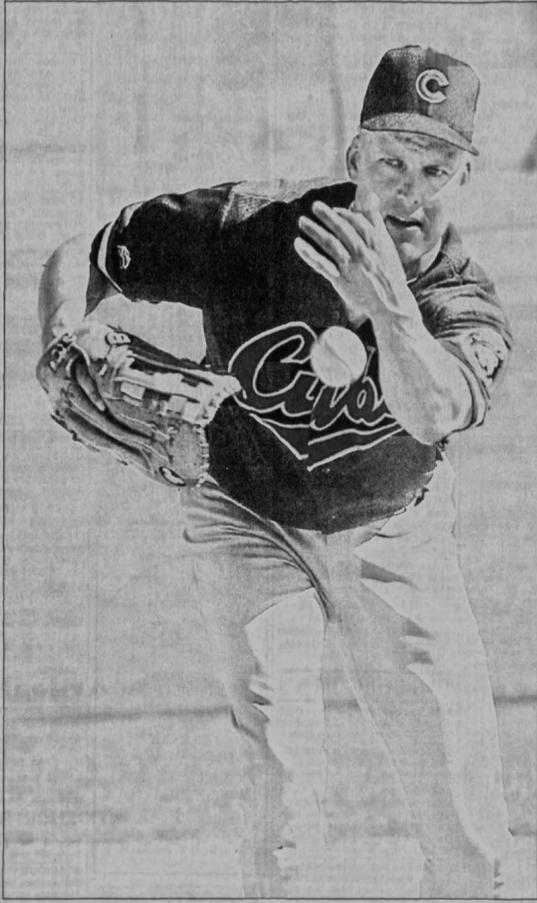

A stellar spring training record does not a regular season make, something Leyland knows. Just last year, the California Angels had a 21-10 spring training record but went 70-91 in the regular season. In 1994, the Seattle Mariners went 21-9 during spring training but slumped to 49-63 during the regular season.

"The fans have to understand that we go back to zero and zero and the home runs don't matter except for after Tuesday," Marlins president Don Smiley said.

Terry Mulholland, 15-11 with Philadelphia and Seattle last season, pitches Tuesday for the Cubs, who face the first two months of the season without No. 2 starter Kevin Tapani, scheduled for surgery on Friday.

Chicago first baseman Mark Grace underhands a grounder to first base during a drill at their spring training complex in Mesa, Ariz., Feb. 20. The Cubs open their season against the Marlins today in Miami.

Sammy Sosa, Ryne Sandberg and Mark Grace anchor the team which went 76-86 last season. The Cubs and the Marlins split the season 6-6 last season, with the Cubs leading the all-time series 24-22.

Grace said the Marlins starting pitching staff makes them one of the teams to beat in the NL.

"If we catch them before their starters are ready to go eight or nine innings, that's OK with me," Grace said. "Maybe we can keep the games close and low-scoring and then take advantage of their bullpen."

Added catcher Scott Servais: "With their pitching, we're going to have to scuffle, scramble and scratch and claw to win."

Manager Jim Riggleman said the Marlins have good defense and a catcher, Charles Johnson, who is hard to run on.

"They have a lot of the ingredients you need to win," he said. "But we'll be ready."

not only gives them the best leadoff hitter in the game, it creates an opening for Andrew Jones. The Marlins will battle the Braves for the division, but the NL Wild Card is all they will come up with.

National League Central: Delino DeShields and Royce Clayton will give the Cardinals one of the most productive middle infield combinations in the league. The St. Louis pitching is the best in the division, but Houston and Chicago have the bats to make things interesting. The only problem for the Cubs is they have a five-man left field rotation and no pitching.

National League West: This won't be the best division, but it will be the most competitive. The Dodgers have the best starting pitchers. San Diego has the best defense and bullpen. Colorado has the best offense in the best offensive park. San Francisco has the best player in Barry Bonds and they've surrounded him with a better line-up this year.

NL MVP: Gary Sheffield-Florida

His numbers last season were incredible (.314 avg., 42 HR, 120 RBIs, 118 runs) and that was with no help in the line-up. With Bobby Bonilla and Moises Alou surrounding him in the order, pitchers won't have the luxury of walking him 142 times this season.

AL MVP: Ken Griffey Jr. - Seattle

Griffey ranked third in the AL with 49 homers last season despite missing 22 games with a wrist injury. Everything is in place for him to break Roger Maris' single-season home run record if he can finally stay healthy.

NL Cy Young: Al Leiter-Florida

He always had great stuff and he proved that with a no-hitter last season. But now Leiter has improved control, a solid defense and a potent offense on his side.

AL Cy Young: David Cone-New York

Scouts have said Cone is throwing harder than he has in years and that should terrify AL hitters. To go along with his fastball that reaches the low 90s, Cone has the nastiest splitter and slider in the league. He not only has the material to be dominant, he knows how. He throws any pitch at any speed from any arm angle at any time.

Classes relocated due to repairs

By Jeff Clayton

As they are shuffled and shifted to make way for millions of dollars of construction and renovations, UI students say they hope the hassle will be worth it.

Construction set to begin in late August on the Engineering Building and work that is almost completed on $8.9 million of renovations at Schaeffer Hall have most journalism classes moving to Seashore Hall, and engineering will take its place in the Communications Center. The departments of classics, history and statistics also will move to Schaeffer Hall.

"I hope that what they are doing is worth the inconvenience," said UI junior Angela Streba, a journalism major. "It would be more valid to move if they were starting construction at the same time. It seems like they are creating a preference to engineering."

UI sophomore Amy Sass said she was not excited about taking classes in Seashore Hall.

"The current building is much more convenient, since it is in the BOSTON — New England towns had begun putting their plows away after a winter of below-average snowfall, and hardware stores had set up their displays of patio furniture. Then, April Fool!

Boston started digging out Tuesday after its biggest snowfall ever in April, a Nor'easter that blew away the tip of one of the masts on the USS Constitution, the sturdy frigate known as Old Ironsides.

Snow piled up nearly 3 feet deep from New Jersey into Massachusetts, shutting down airports, closing schools and knocking out electricity to hundreds of thousands of people, some of whom won't see their power restored for days.

"It's a practical joke. It's April Fool's Day," Christie Humphrey
