Blizzard is no joke to East Coast

By Jon Marcia
The Daily Iowan

Boston - New England towns and cities were buried in snow after a violent storm dumped several feet of snow on the region starting Saturday and pushing several feet of snow onto the ground through the weekend.

The Department of Emergency Management is predicting that the storm will continue through Monday and possibly into Tuesday, with heavy snowfall forecast for parts of the region.

In the meantime, residents are advised to stay indoors and avoid外出 once the snow is cleared, as conditions are expected to be dangerous for drivers and pedestrians alike.

In addition to the heavy snowfall, winds gusting up to 60 mph are expected, which could make travel even more challenging for those who need to get out.

The National Weather Service is advising residents to stay indoors as much as possible and to allow extra time for travel.

President embarks on cleanup of alcohol ads

By Sarah Smith
Associated Press

WASHINGTON - President Clinton, who scored political points in taking on the tobacco industry, targeted liquor distillers TV ads Tuesday. "Liquor has no business with kids," he declared.

In an interview earlier in the day, the president said he was generating children and helping parents, he struggled to explain why his move against liquor ads - which stopped just short of recommending a regulatry ban - did not touch the free market, or what he called a "lictorial advertising, no win or win.

His action was designed for, me a return to the status quo with distillers able to sell their 120-gram bottles, but not to have them advertised on radio or TV ads.

"Think of the weather forces encouraging our young people to drink, he added.

"I think it's something that people would love to see done, he said. "I don't know about the president doing it..."

"It would be a step in the right direction," he said.

President Clinton's announcement would create a new challenge for the industry, which is currently targeting children.

The White House said that the president's move was not a complete ban on liquor advertising, but a moratorium on advertising in certain media.

The Ahki Alley Dance Theater will perform "The Winter in Lisbon" by Billy Wilson. Dutch choreographer Hans van Manen, reading "Suite One" by Elia Monte and "Suite One" by George Ivanoff tonight at Hancher.

Alley company comes to I.C.

By Katherine Horwitz

The vision and legacy Alvin Ailey's Alley Dance Theater left to the company after he died in 1989 was to preserve and enrich the American modern dance heritage and the uniqueness of black culture and to create the company that would become the Alvin Ailey American Dance Theater. The company will perform "The Winter in Lisbon" by Billy Wilson. "Suite One" by Elia Monte and "Suite One" by George Ivanoff.

As an able dancer and choreographer, Wilson has been able to create pieces that are not only visually stunning but also emotionally resonant. "The Winter in Lisbon," his most recent creation, is a beautiful evening of dance that showcases the company's talent and dedication to bringing the best of dance to the stage. The performance is a testament to Alvin Ailey's vision and legacy, and it is a pleasure to witness the company's commitment to carrying on his work.

Hancher rarely breaks even on events

By Greg Kriehn

Taking in a high-big show at Hancher Auditorium is usually more expensive than buying tickets for a less prestigious performance. However, I was surprised when I bought a ticket to see Hancher's performance of "The Winter in Lisbon" and was able to do so with excellent ticket sales.

"General admission" is a catchphrase that people often use to describe Hancher Auditorium, but it can be misleading. An individual who purchases a ticket labeled "general admission" at the box office may be surprised when they arrive at the theater because they were not aware that there were different levels of service available.

Venue is important when considering where to see a performance. Hancher Auditorium is located in a pleasant area of town and offers easy access to parking. The facilities are well-maintained and create a comfortable environment for the audience.

Hancher rarely breaks even on events because of their high-ticket prices. This is not surprising given the popularity of the events and the high demand for tickets. However, I believe that the prices are justified and provide a good return on investment for the venue.

In conclusion, I believe that the prices at Hancher Auditorium are justified and provide a good return on investment for the venue. The company's commitment to bringing high-quality dance to the stage is commendable and deserves support from the community.

Interactive feature: Stir up controversy

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. - The Jacksonville University mascot, the Jacksonville Dolphins, was almost knocked off the gridiron this past Saturday. The Dolphins began the season with a victory over a tough Florida Tech team, 20-17. The game was a nail-biter with Jacksonville finally holding on for the win.

Starr Carter was among those protesting the Jacksonville Dolphins game. "We think it's a mistake for the Dolphins to have a football team," said Carter. "We want them to focus on their basketball and football teams." Carter was one of several people who called, faxed or wrote to the school's administration expressing their disapproval of the football team.

The football team is a relatively new addition to the Jacksonville University sports program. The university was established in 1960 and began offering its first degree programs in 1961. The football team was founded in 1991 and has been a part of the university since then.

The team is a member of the Atlantic Sun Conference and plays its home games at the Jacksonville Veterans Memorial Sports Complex. The stadium has a seating capacity of 15,000 and is located in the heart of downtown Jacksonville.

The football team has had some success on the field in recent years. They won their first conference championship in 2014 and advanced to the NCAA Tournament that year. The team also played in the NCAA Tournament in 2016.

The team's success on the field has been accompanied by controversy. Some alumni and students have expressed concerns about the school's focus on football and its impact on other sports programs. The school's administration has responded to these concerns by emphasizing the importance of a well-rounded education and by providing resources to support other sports programs.

1997 Service Learning Honors Program

The summer program is designed to provide an opportunity for students to engage in service learning experiences. The program is open to all students in good academic standing who have completed their first year of study. The program requires a minimum of 80 hours of service learning and a written reflection paper at the end of the program.

The program is coordinated by the Service Learning Center, which is located in the lower level of the University Union. The center is open Monday through Friday from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. and offers a variety of resources to support students in their service learning experiences. These resources include a database of service learning opportunities, a list of community partners, and a network of service learning mentors.

The center also offers workshops and training sessions to help students develop their service learning projects. These workshops cover topics such as project design, community engagement, and evaluation.

In addition to the summer program, the Service Learning Center offers a range of other programs and initiatives throughout the academic year. These include a service learning course for the 1997 Service Learning Honors Program, a service learning course for the 1997 Service Learning Honors Program, and a service learning course for the 1997 Service Learning Honors Program.

Improving the experiences of UIF freshmen

It is a universal experience in the learning environment of freshmen at an excellent but large university that the first two years of college are often the most memorable. For many freshmen, their college experience is a time of new friends, new classes, and new experiences. However, a recent study conducted at the University of Iowa found that freshmen who are involved in small-group learning experiences have a more positive college experience. The study was conducted by a task force appointed by the University of Iowa and involved interviews with freshmen across the campus.

According to Shelton Stromquist, a senior at the University of Iowa, "The experience of freshmen has been greatly improved by the small-group learning experiences offered by the University of Iowa. These experiences have allowed freshmen to connect with their peers and have a more positive college experience." Stromquist, who is involved in several small-group learning experiences, said that the experience has been beneficial for her as a student.

The University of Iowa has implemented several initiatives to improve the experience of freshmen. These initiatives include the Creation of Freshman Year (CFY) program, which is designed to provide freshmen with a more personalized education experience. The CFY program includes smaller class sizes, more faculty involvement, and a greater focus on student success.

Despite these initiatives, freshmen still face challenges. According to Olivia Johnson, a freshman at the University of Iowa, "The CFY program is a great initiative, but it is not enough. We still face challenges such as finding a good mentor and staying motivated." Johnson, who is involved in several small-group learning experiences, said that she has found a mentor who has been instrumental in her academic success.

Overall, the experience of freshmen at the University of Iowa has been greatly improved by the small-group learning experiences offered by the University of Iowa. These experiences have allowed freshmen to connect with their peers and have a more positive college experience. However, challenges still exist, and more initiatives are needed to ensure that all freshmen have a positive college experience.
Letters to The Editor

International students must participate and be valued

To The Editor:
In a former Peace Corps volunteer, I have noticed the trend among former volunteers that we are "out of place" in regards to international students. These former volunteers are the ones who have lived in a foreign country and have a direct tie to it in some way. They feel that they are better equipped to understand the needs of international students and how we should be valued in the university setting.

Some of these former volunteers have even reached out to me and have asked me to help them with their applications. They believe that they can help me better understand the culture and language barriers that I face as an international student.

I believe that it is important for international students to be valued in the university setting. They bring a unique perspective to the university and can enhance the overall learning experience for everyone.

I hope that the university will value international students and make a conscious effort to ensure that they are included and feel welcome.

Sincerely,

Sex in the military is no bigger shocker

In their recent column, Royko and his co-columns make a big deal about sex in the military. They claim that this is a new phenomenon and that it is causing a lot of problems.

But I think that these authors are looking at things through a rose-colored lens. The fact is that sex in the military has always been a part of the military culture.

In fact, sex has always been a way for soldiers to bond and connect with each other. It has been a way for them to release stress and pressure.

The main concern about sex in the military appears to be that there is too much of it. However, this is not a new phenomenon. In fact, it has been a part of the military for centuries.

One hundred thousand refugees stranded in Zaire

By Dianna Cohen

First time we came here about 300,000. We have been here about 1,000,000. About 100,000 have left. One hundred thousand are staying here in Zaire, and hundreds of thousands are leaving. They are leaving because they believe that the situation is getting worse in Zaire.

The situation in Zaire is becoming critical. The government is not able to provide basic necessities like food, water, and medical care. Many refugees are suffering from malnutrition and diseases.

The United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees (UNHCR) is working to provide assistance to the refugees in Zaire. They are providing food, water, and medical care. However, there is a need for more resources to help the refugees.

The government of Zaire needs to take action to address the crisis. They need to provide basic necessities to the refugees and ensure their safety. The international community also needs to provide support to help the refugees.

All in all, the situation in Zaire is critical, and urgent action is needed to help the refugees. The United Nations and governments around the world need to work together to find solutions to this humanitarian crisis.

US troops in Honduras

The US military has been operating in Honduras to assist with the ongoing crisis in the country. Honduras has been facing political instability, gang violence, and drug trafficking.

The US military is providing security assistance to the Honduran government to help maintain order and protect the population. They are providing training and equipment to local police and military forces.

The US military has been accused of human rights abuses in the past. The Honduran government has also been accused of human rights abuses.

The situation in Honduras is complex, and there are many different factors at play. The US military's role in the country is controversial, and it is unclear what impact their presence will have.

It is important to remember that the root causes of the crisis in Honduras need to be addressed. The US and the international community need to work together to find sustainable solutions to the problems facing Honduras.

Q & A with Debbie Bilbao

Junior pitcher Debbie Bilbao has pitched her way to a stellar softball career for the past three years. This season, she has been the driving force of the Ohio State softball team. Her contributions have been significant not only to the team's overall success, but also to her personal development.

Bilbao grew up in a small town and started playing softball at a young age. "I was born and raised in a small town and my dad was always pushing me to try new things," she said. "So when I discovered softball, it became my passion and something I was really good at."

As she progressed through her high school years, Bilbao's softball skills and confidence grew. She excelled in the sport, earning scholarships to Ohio State University, where she joined the Buckeyes softball team.

At Ohio State, Bilbao quickly established herself as a key player. Her hard work and dedication paid off, as she helped lead the team to numerous victories and even a national championship. Her contributions were not limited to the field; she was also an influential leader on and off the diamond.

"Debbie is a natural leader," said Ohio State coach Marla Blomberg. "She's a great role model for our younger players and always gives back to the community."

Bilbao's success extends beyond the softball field. She is involved in numerous community service projects and has received several awards for her academic achievements.

"I've always been someone who feels a sense of responsibility to my community," Bilbao said. "I want to give back and make a positive impact wherever I can."

Bilbao's future plans include pursuing a career in sports management or coaching. "I want to stay involved in the sport I love and help others do the same," she said.

"Debbie is a shining example of what it means to be a true leader," Blomberg said. "She's inspiring to watch and I know she will continue to achieve great things."
Frenzied Tucson welcomes champs

TUCSON, Ariz. -- Agile from drilling their first NCAA basketball championship, the Arizona Wildcats entered Tuesday's game with a new coach, head coach Warren Brown.

The coach俄罗斯 immigration to the University of Arizona in Tucson Tuesday.

Nell Fortner, the Big Ten Coach of the Year, was appointed coach of the national championship team in her first season, was reported to have been paid $600,000. The no. 1 ranked Wildcats returned home Tuesday to claim their first NCAA basketball championship. When the motorcade reached the Rally, center.

“Coach Warren Brown announced the news of his departure to the University of Arizona in Tucson. The news of his departure was greeted with a mix of emotions, including sadness, anger, and hope for a new beginning.

Fortner was named the head coach at Purdue University, where she directed the Boilermaker program in 1997. Fortner was an assistant to the national champion team in the 2000 Summer Olympics.

The Wildcats defeated No. 1 seed Stanford, 80-76, in overtime.

“Coach Brown's leadership and commitment to the university and the community will be greatly missed. We wish him the best of luck in his new venture.”

Fortner, 38, last month denied changing her loose and friendly leadership, saying, "I'm not going to change who I am." But during the postgame news conference, Fortner said, "This wasn't about coaching, it was about winning."

Fortner has done everything she could to succeed. This was the only thing that would make me stay," she said.

Fortner added the news won't go away her team and friendly atmosphere in Arizona Stadium.

The news of his departure was greeted with a mix of emotions, including sadness, anger, and hope for a new beginning. The news is unbelievable. Every street corner, every street, people were there with signs, red shirts on, welcoming us," said Fortner.

COLLEGE BASKETBALL
Fortson forges senior season, enters NBA Draft

CINCINNATI (AP) — All-America junior for­ward Danny Fortson said today he will put up to $8 million of his earnings from the NBA to pay for his coaching career.

Fortson, a 6-foot-10, 270-pound center for the Bearcats, said he expects to be drafted in the second round of the NBA draft in June.

"I'm going to use the money to pay for my coaching career," Fortson said. "I want to be able to give back to the community."
