ICPD faces test of questionnaire

Privately conducted study will let Iowa City citizens voice thoughts on ICPD performance

By Jennifer Cassell
The Daily Iowan

Local residents who oppose police procedure will be able to voice their opinions in a city-wide survey sent via mail.

In the privately conducted questionnaire, 1,500 random Iowa City residents will be questioned on their feelings toward the function of the ICPD. The survey is being conducted by Iowa City residents Dr.

Stephan Arndt and Ted Cizadlo.

The surveys were mailed out to a cross-section of the community on Friday and are expected to reach citizens as soon as today or Tuesday. Results are expected to be released in three to four weeks.

Arndt, who is a research scientist for the UI psychiatry department, and Cizadlo are not affiliated with the ICPD or City Council in any way. Because the questionnaire is an independent effort, Cizadlo said the results of the survey can be interpreted in a unbiased manner.

"If the police become aware of how the public would like them to be, with any luck they'll be able to change," he said.

The survey was initiated by the local residents after police officer Jeffrey Gillaspie shot Iowa City resident Eric Shaw last August. Cizadlo said the responses will give a more accurate representation of public opinion than recent open forums have.

"Open forums are really important because they give people with strong opinions the chance to reflect those opinions, but they don't necessarily represent the entire community," Cizadlo said.

The survey requests the respondents' age and sex, and asks whether they rent or own a home, the number of contacts they have had with police in the past year, their opinions on neighborhood safety and their perceptions of security in Iowa City. Respondents also are asked to rate the ICPD on concern, helpfulness, confidence-building, fairness, solving the problem, professional conduct, quality of service, putting residents at ease, response time and friendliness.

Both the ICPD and the City of Iowa City are supportive of the survey's efforts. ICPD officials say community feedback is essential to assessing the department's strengths and weaknesses.

Citizen complaints about unsympathetic and curt officers are common, said ICPD Sgt. Mike Lord. Failure to follow up on grievances is also a general criticism.

However, local residents approve of the number of college-educated officers and the amount of training they receive, Lord said. Professional manners with public interaction

"We try, in our dealings with the public, to do it in such a way that we come out with a positive response," Lord said. "We take genuine interest with what we do. It's not something to just earn a living."

Cold weather, harsh winds land in Iowa for duration of week

1,800 local residents lose power after strong Sunday gusts

By Scott Lester
The Daily Iowan

The storm may be over but the effects of Sunday's 60 mph winds — along with winter-like weather — will linger throughout the rest of the week.

At the height of the storm, 1,800 customers in the Iowa City-Coralville area were without power, said Terry Smith, supervisor of engineering design at MidAmerican Energy, 1630 Lower Muscatine Road. The cause of the power outage was due to a tree toppling onto the main distribution line, he said.

"There were different spots all over town that lost power," Iowa

"But if the winds keep up, then it could be a different story."

House siding and tree branches will be cleaned up according to the severity of the damage, Lord said.

"If there is no immediate hindrance, it may take days to clean up," Lord said.

UI law student Doug Davis, alerted by his neighbor, walked outside Sunday to see his car buried under a large tree. Along with Davis' car the tree took out two other vehicles.

"I hope my insurance will cover it," Davis said. "Something like this is termed unforeseeable or deemed an act of God."

Since the tree is in between property lines, Davis may have to wait a day or two before his car is released, while the two landlords fight over ownership of the fallen tree.

The wind was so strong, UI senior Sue Marino barely held herself on the sidewalk.

"I almost got attacked by a trash can that was rolling down the street; it's crazy," Marino said.

Blocked areas and busier streets were cleared of debris first, Lord said.

The ICPD reported streetlights out at intersections causing confusion for drivers and drifting tree branches resulting in damages to property.

On the 1400 block of Buresh Avenue, a tree fell in the road but Lord said it may take longer to remove because it is not a frequent street.

UI Department of Public Safety reported that a blown transformer and the fencing along the construction at Schaffer Hall was blown over.

"The clean-up has been pretty well taken care of," Blank said.

"If there is no immediate hindrance, it may take days to clean up."

ICPD Sgt. Mike Lord

City Police Department Sergeant Mike Lord said. "It is a hit or miss thing."

All power is expected to be restored today, unless conditions worsen, Smith said.

Iowa City Fire Department Captain Jerry Blank said the ICFD received about 20 complaints about damage from the high winds. Most of the complaints were due to downed wires, trees on wires and fallen trees, he said.

"The clean-up has been pretty well taken care of," Blank said.

Iowa City resident Sue Blackwell braves the wind and cold as they walk through downtown Iowa City Sunday afternoon. The weather is expected to stay below the 40s for the rest of the week.

Safety of intersection questioned

By Joseph Leavitt
The Daily Iowan

Colliding cars at the corners of College and Governor streets are a frequent sight, local residents say, but city councilors are not aware of any uncommon danger.

Iowa City resident Mary Griswold, 830 E. College St., said drivers fail to notice the stop sign on College Street, and as a result, multiple accidents have occurred at the intersection. Both streets set up conditions conducive to accidents, she said.

"I think people coming down Governor, they know they have about

"When you are stopped at the stop sign, there is a point where you cannot see cars coming over the hill."

UI sophomore Liz Vaughn, describing the intersection near her residence four or five blocks without stop signs, so they speed," Griswold said.

A traffic accident at the intersection last Thursday at 6:15 p.m. was particularly heinous, Griswold said, although no one was seriously injured. A black Ford Ranger truck driven by North Liberty resident David Leyden and a white Ford Explorer driven by Cedar Rapids resident Cheryl Gray collided in the intersection, causing the truck to roll over on its side.

Griswold, who witnessed the crash when the truck flipped over onto her garden, said it stood out in comparison to others.

"This accident was the worst I've seen. The truck was airborne," Griswold said.

Cars collide about once a month, Griswold said, because the stop sign along College Street is often difficult to see at that intersection, especially in the summer when the leaves from trees obscure the view. City Councilor Larry Baker said if there is a pattern to the collisions in that intersection, it would be documented. The issue of safety at this intersection has not come before the council yet, he said. Even with concern, the placing of stop lights or signs is not an automatic operation, Baker said.

"You have to have a certain traffic flow in order to justify a light," Baker said.

Griswold said a "Stop Ahead" warning sign about half a block before the intersection would reduce the number of people who miss the stop signs. She said this difficulty, coupled with the speeding along Governor Street causes most of the accidents.

UI sophomores Jill Johnston and Liz Vaughn, both residents in the Alpha Phi sorority house across the street from Griswold, said accidents are not limited to this particular intersection, but occur with frequency along the four or five block that the one-way Governor Street runs north from Burlington.

"When you are stopped at the stop sign, there is a point where you cannot see cars coming over the hill," Vaughn said.

Pete Thompson/The Daily Iowan

Iowa City police survey a car crash at the corners of College and Governor streets Thursday evening. Local residents said that collisions on this corner are a common occurrence. "This accident was the worst I've seen. The truck was airborne," said Iowa City resident Mary Griswold, who lives nearby.

Johnston said accidents happen also when people mistakenly travel south on Governor, especially at night.

Johnston witnessed last Thursday's collision on her way home.

"I almost got killed during the accident. I had mud and gravel on me — I was that close. It was a frightening experience," Johnston said.

Gray said she didn't see Leyden coming, and that the intersection should have stop signs on all four corners.

"There is nothing along (Governor) to slow down traffic, not stop signs, stoplights," Gray said.

Leyden drives through the intersection every day and said he has never experienced problems before.

"As far as I can tell, the visibility on Governor is fine," Leyden said.

Leyden said he has never driven across Governor Street on College Street and doesn't know about the difficulty from that approach to the intersection.

Co-Op vote rejects effort to unionize

By Jeff Clayton
The Daily Iowan

Skeptical criticism has been raised by pro-unionists after New Pioneer Co-Op employees voted 40-36 against unionizing.

Members for an Accountable Co-Op (MAC) and some employees of the store blame the defeat on management anti-union propaganda prior to the vote. The election was conducted by the National Relations Board.

The loss means that store management does not have to recognize an employee union in the store, said UI sophomore and Co-Op employee Abbie Lueders.

"We are very concerned of the tactics used (by management) in the last week and the last day," said MAC and store member Roberta Till-Retz.

Rochelle Prunty, general manager of the Co-Op, 22 S. Van Buren St., could not be reached for comment.

Employees said managers used "emotional blackmail" against pro-union employees by depicting the effort as a personal attack against management, Till-Retz said.

Furthermore, Till-Retz said management handed out anti-union documents in the store the day before the vote. By law, management is not supposed to do anything overt in the work place 24 hours prior to the election.

"From what I heard, there was a tremendous amount of pressure from their own superiors," Till-Retz said.

Till-Retz said MAC has decided to launch an investigation into the election.

"We need to satisfy ourselves that the election outcome was not coerced ... If we become satisfied we will move on," Till-Retz said.

Board members supported the election results and said the board handled the attempt to unionize in a proper manner. Co-Op Board Member Tom Wegman was pleased

Beat poet laureate Ginsberg dead at 70

NEW YORK (AP) — Allen Ginsberg, the poet laureate of the Beat Generation whose writing and lifestyle shaped the music, politics and protests of the next 40 years, died Sunday morning. He was 70.

Ginsberg died in his Lower East Side apartment at 2:39 a.m. of a heart attack related to his terminal liver cancer, said Bill Morgan, his friend and archivist. The poet was surrounded by family and friends.

Ginsberg suffered from chronic hepatitis for years, which eventually led to cirrhosis of the liver. His diagnosis of terminal liver cancer was made eight days ago and made public on Thursday. He suffered a stroke Thursday night and slipped into a coma.

Ginsberg has spent several days in a hospice after the diagnosis, but then decided he wanted to return home. "He was very energetic," Morgan said. "He wore himself out (Thursday) talking to friends and writing poems."

He wrote about a dozen short poems on Wednesday. One of the last was titled "On Fame and Death"; others ran the gamut from nursery rhymes to politics.

Truth imitates art for DeGeneres

NEW YORK (AP) — Ellen DeGeneres is coming out in real life, too.

After a season of controversy-stirring rumors, her character on "Ellen" will acknowledge her homosexuality on the ABC sitcom April 30. Now, DeGeneres says she's a lesbian, too.

"When I decided to have my character on the show come out, I knew I was going to have to come out, too," DeGeneres says in the latest Time magazine. "But I didn't want to talk about it until the show was done. I never wanted to be the lesbian actress. I never wanted to be the spokesperson for the gay community. Ever. I did it for my own truth."

'Liar, Liar' tops 'The Saint' at box office

LOS ANGELES (AP) — "Liar, Liar" beat the Val Kilmer thriller "The Saint" at the weekend box office and trounced other star vehicles on its way to breaking the $100 million mark, according to industry estimates Sunday.

"Liar, Liar," which had the best March opening ever, earned $100.9 million in just three weeks.

Universal knew that "Liar, Liar" would be big but "the records for reaching $100 million were set during the summer season, when you have kids out of school and movie-going is an around-the-clock activity," said Allen Sutton, senior vice president of distribution and marketing.

"To achieve it in such a short time at this time of year is certainly unheard of."

Sutton said the figures indicate that people are seeing the film over and over.

The top 10 films from Friday through Sunday:

1. "Liar, Liar," $18.5 million.
2. "The Saint," $16.2 million.
3. "The Devil's Own," $7.4 million.
4. "That Old Feeling," $5.2 million.
5. "Double Team," $5 million.
6. "Jungle 2 Jungle," $3.4 million.
7. "The Sixth Man," $3.1 million.
8. "Selena," $2.7 million.
9. "Return of the Jedi," $2.5 million.
10. "Inventing the Abbotts," $2.4 million.

And tonight at 8, Galvin, currently a teacher in the UI Writers' Workshop, will appear in Shambaugh Auditorium to read from his newest book, "Resurrection Update: New Galvin and Collected Poems." The book is an anthology of all his published poetry, dating back to 1973.

While some critics have questioned the direct, in-your-face tone of his writing, Galvin said bold statements are a key component of his style.

"It keeps coming out directly because I like the effect," Galvin said. "I like the style of poets who are assertive and confrontational. It's very unfashionable, but I don't care about fashion."

This straightforward tone of Galvin's poetry helps to reach a wide audience, said Winston Barclay, director of UI Arts Relations.

"It's very clear, direct poetry. There's nothing obscure about it — not that it is simple," Barclay said.

'Saint' is a lover, not a fighter

At the Movies

Greg Kirschling

In "The Saint," the secret agent man dons disguises, retrieves microchips and pops up around Russia in order to thwart the power-mad tycoon. He stops only to add millions to his Swiss bank account and to romance the beautiful yet instrumental woman. Sound familiar?

Of course it does. "The Saint" owes directly to a bunch of old movies and a same-named '60s British TV series starring Roger Moore, but indirectly it connects to countless other spy tales. And while this glossy attempt never stands apart from the rest, at least it has a lot more heart than the similarly generic "The Phantom" or "The Shadow."

Thankfully, lead Val Kilmer is no superhero, although as the title agent-for-hire with a fetish for crazy disguises, he makes the espionage business look easy. When a dastardly oil magnate (Rade Serbedzija) needs something to boost himself into head office, Kilmer's Simon Templar must uncover the secrets of a revolutionary new power source, "cold fusion," from its creator, Dr. Emma Russell (Elizabeth Shue), which turns out to be a breeze.

First, he clicks on "Cold Fusion Notes" on the desktop of Emma's computer. When that's only partially successful, Templar poses as a long-haired tortured artist in order to woo and bed her, easily making off with the few vital scraps of paper apparently necessary to bring cold fusion to the world. But of course Simon feels bad because he's in love, and when Emma finds him again (he's some elusive master agent), he takes her along in order to outstep the villains.

OK, so none of this is very credible. Val Kilmer has a lot of showy fun as Simon's various incarnations — at least he's back from "The Ghost in the Darkness" land of the walking dead — but even as a frumpy cleaning woman, Simon Templar always looks too much like Simon Templar to be believable. And as the inventor of cold fusion, Elizabeth Shue doesn't quite come off as the greatest scientific thinker since Einstein.

But the chemistry between the stars, while never approaching nuclear levels, redeems segments of the movie, even if the circumstances of their relationship are contrived and ridiculous. Kilmer's a little loopy around her, as if he's forgotten he's got people to save, and Shue's earnest, sparkly sincerity elevates the material. Their happy joining at the end makes all the anticlimaxes bearable.

It hurts, though, that the movie is more often charming than suspenseful. What's missing is a big action set piece for director Phillip Noyce ("Patriot Games") to wow us with, the kind that made the only slightly more confusing "Mission: Impossible" bearable. Here, after a few ho-hum fights, the highlight is watching Emma warm up a hypothermic Simon after a dip in an icy lake. The hero's vulnerability is surprising, but it isn't very exciting.

Plus, the story lacks twists and the villains aren't very dynamic (although they always know exactly where to go when chasing the hero). The action-adventure of this action-adventure is merely mediocre (although there's an unusually grooving score by Graeme Revell), so if "The Saint 2" comes along, maybe it'd make a better love story than an action movie.

'Unfashionable' poet to read work

Columbia

By Marcia Dunn
Associated Press

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. — Space shuttle Columbia and its seven astronauts will return to Earth on Tuesday, 12 days earlier than planned, because of a deteriorating and potentially explosive power generator.

It is only the third time in space shuttle history that a mission has been cut short by equipment failure.

While NASA considered commander James Halsell Jr. and his crew to be in no immediate danger, shuttle managers did not want to take any chances with the generator and, on Sunday, cut short the 16-day science mission.

"The conservative thing to do is land on Tuesday," shuttle program manager Tommy Holloway announced at a hastily arranged news conference.

Holloway said a landing was ruled out for today in order to allow for an orderly return, and because Columbia's two other electricity-producing fuel cells were working fine.

The fear was that hydrogen fuel and oxygen in the degraded generator could mix, overheat and blow up if voltage in the unit dropped far enough. Flight controllers had the astronauts turn off the unit Sunday to reduce, if not eliminate, that risk. The crew shut down also all non-critical equipment to conserve power.

"Our plans would be to manage this fuel cell in a way that's not a threat to crew safety and, indeed, we are extremely confident in the two remaining fuel cells and their ability to support an orderly and methodical preparation for landing, and land-

Columbia returns early for Tuesday landing

By Marcia Dunn
Associated Press

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. — Space shuttle Columbia and its seven astronauts will return to Earth on Tuesday, 12 days earlier than planned, because of a deteriorating and potentially explosive power generator.

It is only the third time in space shuttle history that a mission has been cut short by equipment failure.

While NASA considered commander James Halsell Jr. and his crew to be in no immediate danger, shuttle managers did not want to take any chances with the generator and, on Sunday, cut short the 16-day science mission.

"The conservative thing to do is land on Tuesday," shuttle program manager Tommy Holloway announced at a hastily arranged news conference.

Holloway said a landing was ruled out for today in order to allow for an orderly return, and because Columbia's two other electricity-producing fuel cells were working fine.

The fear was that hydrogen fuel and oxygen in the degraded generator could mix, overheat and blow up if voltage in the unit dropped far enough. Flight controllers had the astronauts turn off the unit Sunday to reduce, if not eliminate, that risk. The crew shut down also all non-critical equipment to conserve power.

"Our plans would be to manage this fuel cell in a way that's not a threat to crew safety and, indeed, we are extremely confident in the two remaining fuel cells and their ability to support an orderly and methodical preparation for landing, and landing," Holloway said.

To slow the decline in voltage, Mission Control first had the astronauts reduce the power load on the degraded fuel cell. But the voltage continued to dwindle. Engineers debated a few hours before deciding to shut down the unit — once turned off, it cannot be restarted in the event another fuel cell fails.

While a shuttle can land safely with two fuel cells, it's uncertain what would happen if only one fuel cell was available because of all the vital systems that would have to be shut down for lack of power.

Each $5 million fuel cell uses hydrogen and oxygen to generate electricity for the numerous shuttle systems, and produces water as a byproduct. National Aeronautics and Space Administration flight rules stipulate that all three fuel cells be working properly in orbit, otherwise a mission must be cut short.

Mission Control had been monitoring the mysterious decline in voltage in the fuel cell since Friday's liftoff. As it turns out, brief jumps in voltage were detected in the unit several hours before launch, but managers determined it was working properly and cleared Columbia for flight.

Holloway admitted that "with 20-20 hindsight," the countdown should have been halted and the fuel cell replaced. Launch controllers made the best decision at the time with the data available, he said.

Engineers have no idea why the fuel cell slowly was losing voltage. The unit has flown before in space without problems.

A failed fuel cell forced an early landing during NASA's second shuttle flight in 1981; in that case, the unit was flooded with water. The only other time a shuttle mission was cut short for equipment failure was in 1991, because of a failed navigation unit.

Halsell did not sound surprised when Mission Control radioed up the bad news.

"That's certainly a disappointment," Halsell said, "but we know you guys put your best effort forward and you're doing the right thing and we appreciate all the work that's gone into that."

Mission Control immediately began planning for a Tuesday afternoon landing of Columbia — which wasn't supposed to return until April 20 — at the Kennedy Space Center. And the astronauts rushed to complete as many laboratory experiments in the time remaining.

Scientists who had been preparing for more than three years for the mission were devastated. They expected to complete no more than 15 percent of their experiments, if that. Nevertheless, they supported Mission Control's decision.

"None of us wants to take a chance with crew safety," said NASA mission scientist Michael Robinson. "We know them professionally. We know them personally."

Army drops false statement charge in sex scandal

By David Dishneau
Associated Press

ABERDEEN PROVING GROUND, Md. — The Army on Sunday dropped its allegation that a female trainee lied about having sex with an instructor.

The Army said the charge against Pvt. Toni Moreland wasn't a priority and it didn't want to bring in an out-of-town witness. The soldier's attorney accused the Army of ducking a confrontation over its investigation of the Aberdeen sex scandal.

Moreland, 21, pleaded guilty to other minor charges Sunday at a summary court-martial, the lowest level of military court. She was sentenced to 16 days in a military prison and fined $300.

Moreland was the first of five Army privates who accused Army investigators of trying to bully them into falsely claiming they were raped by instructors at the weapons training school at the Army's Aberdeen Proving Ground in northern Maryland.

Moreland was charged with two counts of making a false statement after she recanted a sworn statement that she had consensual sex with Staff Sgt. Marvin Kelley. She repeated Sunday that she never had sex with Kelley and signed the statement only to appease investigators. She said investigators were pressing her to claim he raped her.

Consensual sex between superiors and subordinates is prohibited in the military.

No charges were filed based on Moreland's original statement. Army officials have denied that investigators tried to force false accusations from interview subjects.

Storms halt traffic, flood Northern plains with ice

By Jeremiah Gardner
Associated Press

BISMARCK, N.D. — A blizzard shut down much of the northern Plains on Sunday with blinding wind-blown snow and drifts up to 20 feet high, stranding travelers and making life miserable for volunteers sandbagging flood-threatened towns.

Hundreds of miles of highways were closed in Wyoming, the Dakotas, Nebraska and the eastern edge of Montana. Thousands were without electricity.

The blowing snow rebuilt drifts that had begun melting after a winter of record snowfall.

"My mailbox is probably 30 yards away. At times I can't see it," said Chad Klinske, who lives about a mile outside Grafton, N.D. "My drifts that were down to 4 or 5 feet are now 12 feet."

With the electricity off, Klinske had to borrow a generator to run a small space heater and run the sump pump keeping water out of his basement.

"Right now, I'm walling off the living room with cushions from the couch, to try to reduce the area I've got to heat," he said Sunday afternoon.

Snowbound day-shift employees couldn't get to work Sunday at the Elm Nursing Home in Fargo. The overnight crew put out a call for help from people in the neighborhood, and 15 to 20 volunteers showed up, administrative assistant Louise Swanson said.

"They're making beds. They're helping feed the residents and just doing whatever they can to help," Swanson said.

North Dakota Gov. Ed Schafer asked President Clinton to declare the state a disaster area. "We've got the whole state virtually paralyzed," he said.

Across the state line in west-central Minnesota, dikes failed throughout much of Breckenridge during the night, letting the Red River pour as much as 3 feet deep into streets. Most of the downtown was knee-deep in water and snow-crosted ice, and parked cars were frozen in place.

Hundreds of people had been evacuated in Breckenridge because of the flood caused by melting snow from previous storms, and others were stranded by the blizzard, police Chief Dennis Milbrandt said Sunday. Temperatures were in the 20s and the wind-chill was below zero.

Theories on courtesy and the modern woman

Am I too much of a '90s woman, a product of our modern society? And is that such a bad thing?

I was out on the town Saturday night; we had hit the Country Club in Cedar Rapids. It was a fun evening with all the '80s music we used to dance to in front of our mirrors singing at the tops of our voices when we were in junior high. The dance floor was quite empty, which allowed for some pretty wacky moves from those of us drunk enough not to care. And it took some guts to dance, as all the men sat round the outside, like buyers round the ring at a meat market.

During the course of the night, several people bought me drinks. Normally I buy my own, but since it was my birthday and the drinks were all 94 cents (even the shots, amazingly) I drank without losing any sleep over it.

But a couple of days before I had been interviewing Naba Lamoussa Morodenbig from Burkina Faso about his spiritual beliefs. We decided it would be nice to sit in the Pedestrian Mall soaking up the sun. I had just enough in spare change to get a drink so we could relax and chat. As he saw me counting out my coppers he offered to buy my pop for me.

Thinking he was merely taking pity on the temporary poverty of a student, I declined and said I'd get it myself. He called me a modern woman and somehow it sounded derogatory, though I know he didn't mean it to.

GUEST OPINION
Penny Tapp
 After I left him, I thought about what he'd said. Africa, among other countries, is renowned for its often "old fashioned" views and values. A friend of mine, Rebecca, told me recently she found young men in South Africa "real gentlemen," who always offered to buy her drinks, always opened doors for her and so on.

They couldn't understand it if she tried to refuse. I remember the same thing from when I was in Africa. It is nice as it suggests respect for one's fellows. What I don't like is the idea that it is being done just because I am female.

OK, so does that make me modern? Probably. I feel women have spent so long trying to become equal to men that the idea of a man buying me a drink because I am a woman is bizarre. After all, why should they have to spend their hard-earned money on me unless we go out often and I can return the favor.

If we want equality, then full equality is what we should get. It shouldn't be about sex, it should be about friendships. We are no longer as much men and women, black and white, homosexual and heterosexual, religious and atheist — we are all human beings, people of the 20th century.

If someone buys me a drink and I know I probably won't get the chance to pay back the favor I feel indebted to them. That goes against the grain — I always pay my debts. And with a man paying, I would worry he felt I owed him something I wasn't prepared to pay, particularly just for a drink.

As for other old-fashioned mannerisms such as opening doors, surely they come under the term "common courtesy." If I am driving, I will unlock and open the door for my passenger regardless of who they are, which sex they are, or how much older they are (I always was told as a child to respect my elders, but I do think they need to act responsibly to keep that respect — and they don't always).

I can totally understand why Naba considers me too modern. He simply wanted the pleasure of giving another person a gift that he could then sit and watch her enjoy, as he was doing. He told me I was undermining our friendship by thinking of it as a debt.

He did buy me a pop in the end. He made me feel I was being unreasonable to a man from his culture. I respect the diversity of cultures and had no wish to offend him, especially since I was trying to interview him.

As a modern woman, I feel it's important to respect other people whatever their sex, religion, culture and country, and to take into account different points of view.

Yet still to stick to my own.

Tobacco companies and responsibility

The maker of Chesterfield cigarettes has admitted that smoking causes cancer. This means very little for American consumers, who have long known that cigarettes are dangerous to one's health.

It does mean a great deal to the 22 state attorneys who are trying to prove in a court of law that the tobacco companies should help pay health costs associated with the use of their products.

Liggett, the producer of Chesterfields, will not help pay those costs. Instead, in their settlement with the attorneys, they agreed to turn over confidential documents that may incriminate the major tobacco players. After a long period of immunity, the great tobacco conspiracy is beginning to show signs of weakness.

Imagine that the documents confirm what everyone already knows: cigarette manufacturers deliberately market to minors, that nicotine is addictive and that smoking adversely affects health in many ways. What will this change?

First, it would end the lying and take the last excuse from the likes of Jesse Helms to defend the actions of tobacco companies. Legislators would have more political leverage to prohibit marketing to minors.

Second, it may enable lawyers to recover substantial health costs for the state. Herein lies the curiosity: Do people in car accidents sue Ford? Do drive-by victims sue Smith and Wesson? Of course not. Consumers know cigarettes are dangerous, and yet they continue to light up with pleasure.

That minors should be prevented smoking is based on the assumption that they are not quite old enough to make good decisions. Fair enough. But by the same logic, adults know what they are doing when they purchase a pack. They should pay their own health costs, right?

Unfortunately, the health costs are paid by smokers and non-smokers alike. All who pay taxes, which fund Medicare, or health insurance, are helping to pay for smoking-related illness. It is this rather unfair situation that has motivated the state attorneys to seek compensation from the deep pockets of Big Tobacco.

Litigation is more likely to produce a monetary award than a long-term solution. Continuous payment on the part of the tobacco companies is necessary so long as new smokers pick up the habit, and old smokers get sick.

Anti-tobacco crusaders would like to see cigarette manufacturers devote a percentage of revenue to paying health-care costs. If such a scheme survives the legal scrutiny, costs will indeed return to the consumer, and with them, individual responsibility.

Thus, you would be paying money into the health-care system every time you bought a pack of cigarettes. It would be like if you paid a percentage of your gasoline price to the oil companies, and they in turn paid damages in car accidents.

Instead of "less tar," cigarette packs could be printed with the slogan, "Health-care insurance for your future illness included!"

Don't just sit there: Get involved!

"Far better is it to dare mighty things, to win glorious triumphs, even though checkered by failure, than to take rank with those poor spirits who never enjoy much nor suffer much, because they live in that twilight that knows not victory nor defeat." — President Theodore Roosevelt, 1899

President Roosevelt had it right in urging all of us to get involved, to risk victory as well as defeat.

Such a heady task cannot be accomplished from a barstool with a frosty one in hand or a couch with ESPN on 24/7.

It requires action, something too few UI students know about.

But it's something Marc Beltrame and Rob Wagner know quite a bit about.

As UI Student Government president and vice president for the 1996-97 school year, Beltrame and Wagner, respectively, dared mighty things, tried to win glorious triumphs.

They tried to improve communication between students and the administration by establishing monthly "fireside chats" with UI President Mary Sue Coleman.

They tried to increase the visibility of UISG by creating a World Wide Web site for student government.

They tried to make the UI a little more fun by having newly released movies shown for free on campus.

How many of us can say we've tried, let alone accomplished, so many good things?

Beltrame and Wagner, both of whom are graduating seniors, understand that time is ephemeral, that it passes before you and that you are powerless to stand in its way.

"In one year it is very difficult to get all your goals completely accomplished," Beltrame recently told the DI. "Just when you figure out what needs to be done, it is time for you to leave office."

It's not important that Beltrame and Wagner didn't achieve all of their goals. What matters is that they got involved.

That's a lesson all of us could stand to learn.

Going to college should be about more than just drinking beer and cramming.

It should be about learning new things, taking risks and overcoming obstacles. It should be about getting involved in student organizations, going on a rafting trip with Touch The Earth or seeing the ballet at Hancher just because you may never again have such a wonderful opportunity.

Whether you get involved to boost your résumé or your self-awareness, it doesn't matter. What matters is you did something.

In the waning weeks of yet another school year, it is important to remember college is the time in our lives when we should be having the time of our lives.

By the time graduation rolls around, it is better to have dared mighty things than to have spent all four (maybe five or six) years in that twilight that knows not victory nor defeat.

History and self-pity in Ireland

There has been a proposition to eliminate Lust from the Seven Deadly Sins by a British newspaper columnist and I'm all for it. With Gluttony as a close second, my combination of impure thoughts and over-indulgence hasn't lead me down the straightest path.

Eoghan Harris, however, is rallying for Lust to be sacrificed to make room for Self-Pity. Rather than relieving Irish-Catholics from the guilt they feel for following such a glandular pleasure, he wants to punish them for feeling sorry for themselves. He said the Irish are consumed by their victimhood, constantly crying about being ruined.

Last year, he said, there was a pitiful-to-do about remembering the Famine. If you are an Irish-American, the post-famine years are probably responsible for your family's emigration; over 1 million moved to America to avoid starvation and poverty.

This year, he said, the damn cry-babies want to reopen the investigation into the Bloody Sunday shootings that killed 13 unarmed Irish people. Royal Ulster Constables (or RUC-British troops) opened fire, but the question of why is still left unanswered.

Then, in more recent history, there is a lot of undue attention being given to Roisin McAliskey, an Irish woman eight months pregnant, according to Harris. She is being held in prison for possible extradition to Germany for a bombing of an RUC barracks. There are no eye witnesses connecting her to the attack, but people are supposed to remain unconcerned.

From Belfast

Kathryn Phillips

March also brought the murder of an Irish-Catholic father of 10. He was shot pointblank as he prepared bottles for his twin infant daughters in his Belfast home. Still, Harris would keep the Irish from mourning their lot.

He evidently wants the Irish to buck up and ignore both historic and present-day tragedies. What he doesn't understand is that people already do.

I was appalled by the shooting of the father of 10. An Irish friend of mine, Emma, remained unmoved and said it sounded like every other shooting and if she cried about something so typical, she wouldn't be able to live day-to-day. She only bothered to follow Roisin's story because she works with her sister at a cafe.

Emma is hardly the poster child for Irish self-pity, and I think Harris would be hard up to find anyone suited for the job.

From the earliest days of the Vikings, the Irish have been invaded, robbed, raped and colonized. But they harbor as much self-pity as Harris suffers guilt for England's Imperialist history. Less than you can snort up your pinkie nail, I'm sure.

Those few Irish that are riled in self-pity are dangerous — their brains are so saturated with the wrongs that have been committed against their race and self, that they think it is OK to strike back.

As victims, they blur to perpetrators. They are at war; they are the IRA and the split-off paramilitaries.

Gerry Adams of Sinn Fein blurred the victim-perpetrator lines a few weeks ago. An RUC officer was murdered at a checkpoint and he said he felt sorry for all the victims involved — meaning both the officer and the sniper and probably the person that drove the getaway car. They are all part of the same cycle of self-pity, birthing vengeful violence.

Most people in the South recognize this trap and avoid it. When I met my family in Cork, a supposed IRA breeding ground, they only had a vague notion of what was happening in Belfast. They weren't keeping tallies or shedding tears over the tit-for-tat killings. They were busy doing other Irish stuff, like raising kids and sheep and cows.

The people in the North aren't so different from the Southerners, they just learn to live around the war. Some, like my friend Emma, turn deaf ears, while people like my boss at work choose to live in segregation — he shops at Catholic owned stores, drinks in their pubs and lives in their subdivision. Others choose to live in linked communities, aware of the troubles and confronting them.

None of these people are victims of self-pity, because each of their lifestyles are geared for survival. They are survivors.

So Harris can go forward with his proposition to replace Lust with Self-Pity as a Deadly Sin.

To me, it sounds like he is the one feeling sorry for himself. Daily, he is subjected to media reports about Irish people being hurt or exploited and he interprets it all as whining. Poor man.

But the Irish don't hear whining. In fact, they don't consider much about the trouble news (new news anyway). Rather than be buried by it in self-pity, they prefer to wear the robes of self-preservation.

And for those who do wear their Irish pity on their sleeve, well, they don't need Harris to condemn them. They already have condemned themselves.

When I started this job, a veteran columnist at the next desk offered advice. One rule was: "Never write about a subject when you're mad. Wait until you calm down."

Sensible words, and I usually try to follow them. But on this day, there weren't nearly enough hours left until my deadline for me to calm down about a whopper of a lie that a public figure named Ron Fitzsimmons has finally admitted telling.

Fitzsimmons runs the National Coalition of Abortion Providers. And he says his conscience nagged him into admitting "lying through my teeth" when he made public statements in 1995 that the controversial "partial-birth abortion" was rarely used. And that it was only used when a woman's life was in danger or the fetus was already severely damaged.

You probably remember the debate on this issue. Those against this late-term procedure wanted it outlawed because the said it killed healthy, normal fetuses that were well into full development.

And the procedure is barbaric, they said. The fetus is partially delivered feet first, then a device is used to suck its brain out to collapse the head.

Fitzsimmons now admits that most such abortions are done on women who are healthy and fetuses who are healthy, not because the woman is in danger or the fetus is unhealthy.

The abortion is performed for the same reason as other abortions: The woman wants it.

Fitzsimmons says he and others lied because the truth might have hurt the cause of abortion rights.

They were right. If it hadn't been for those lies, eagerly accepted and passed along as gospel by the printed press and broadcast news, President Clinton would not have dared to veto a bill that outlawed the procedure. And Cor

Maintaining the status quo can be harmful to the public

When I started this job, a veteran columnist at the next desk offered advice. One rule was: "Never write about a subject when you're mad. Wait until you calm down."

Sensible words, and I usually try to follow them. But on this day, there weren't nearly enough hours left until my deadline for me to calm down about a whopper of a lie that a public figure named Ron Fitzsimmons has finally admitted telling.

Fitzsimmons runs the National Coalition of Abortion Providers. And he says his conscience has nagged him into admitting "lying through my teeth" when he made public statements in 1995 that the controversial "partial-birth abortion" was rarely used. And that it was only used when a woman's life was in danger or the fetus was already severely damaged.

You probably remember the big debate on this issue. Those against this late-term procedure wanted it outlawed because they said it killed healthy, normal fetuses that were well into full development.

And the procedure is barbaric, they said. The fetus is partially delivered feet first, then a device is used to suck its brain out to collapse the head.

Fitzsimmons now admits that most such abortions are done on women who are healthy and fetuses who are healthy, not because the woman is in danger or the fetus is unhealthy.

The abortion is performed for the same reason as other abortions: The woman wants it.

Fitzsimmons says he and others lied because the truth might have hurt the cause of abortion rights.

They were right. If it hadn't been for those lies, eagerly accepted and passed along as gospel by the printed press and broadcast news, President Clinton would not have dared to veto a bill that outlawed the procedure. And Congress wouldn't have buckled and failed to override his veto.

That's what is so infuriating: the silence of those in the medical field who knew it was a lie but failed to thunderously refute it.

And the willingness of the press to accept the lie and pass it along as fact. If more sheep are cloned, don't be surprised if some come out looking like modern journalists.

A few physicians spoke up. Two wrote a piece for the op-ed page of The Wall Street Journal that shredded the line peddled by people like Fitzsimmons. But they were ignored, probably because the Journal's opinion sections are viewed by the rest of journalism as hopelessly conservative.

The press swallowed the lies like worms by a bass because the lies fit so neatly into what is sometimes referred to as a "world view" that is shared by those in the mainstream news media.

Part of that view seems to be that anyone who questions the need for the vast number of abortions performed each year is some kind of right-wing, bomb-tossing, gun-toting religious nut.

So when those who present themselves as social progressives say that only women who face death and fetuses who face life as vegetables are involved in partial-birth abortions, the press is comforted and lets it go at that. Heaven forbid that the newsroom should offend any of the "don't tell me what to do with my body" crowd.

It isn't the first big lie the media have bought and resold.

Some years ago, gay organizations and public health people launched an intense "We're All at Risk" campaign. This meant that we were all equally vulnerable to the threat of AIDS.

But those who launched the propaganda campaign later admitted that they believed the fear would create sympathy for gays and spur increased spending on AIDS research.

Eventually, a few skeptical reporters shot holes in the campaign. But not until others who had questioned it had been labeled bigots and homophobes. One journalist who wrote a book on the subject lost his newspaper job, and his book, despite impressive hardcover sales, couldn't attract a paperback publisher. It was politically correct censorship.

More recently, there was the media hysteria over the burning of black churches. Remember? Night riders were thought to be galloping all over the country, burning black churches. A massive racist conspiracy, possibly inspired by the oratory of political conservatives like Pat Buchanan.

Clinton, concerned frown and all, visited churches and recalled similar evil arsons in Arkansas when he was a youth — memories that turned out to be pure fiction.

Proposals were made to use federal funds to rebuild churches. Rich do-gooders kicked in money to organizations that made the most victimization noise.

As it turned out, it was more smoke than fire. After the nation's press spread the arson story, calmer heads took a closer look. Most of the fires weren't arson. No conspiracy. Black arsonists as well as white arsonists were arrested, proving that a nut is a nut, regardless of color. It was as if no one in an American newsroom knew that an old wooden, rural church can actually have bad wiring. Not when Jesse Jackson is dishing out hot quotes about the second coming of the Ku Klux Klan.

Now we have Fitzsimmons blowing the whistle on himself. His conscience? Or was it that the truth was going to come out anyway?

Higgins' discussion of cults deserved more serious treatment

To the Editor:

In her April 1 article "Are there more 'cults' than we would like to admit?" Karrie Higgins makes several uncharacteristically glib observations that ought not to go unchallenged. Quoting a brochure from the CAN (Cult Awareness Network), she lists the so-called seven marks by which we might identify a cult: mind control, charismatic leadership, deception, exclusivity, alienation, exploitation and totalitarian world view. Then, she purports to demonstrate that, according to CAN's own criteria, even religious organizations as big and well established as the Roman Catholic Church might be classified as cults.

Her "demonstration," however, has about as much depth as a typical comic strip.

To show mind control and deception in Christian churches, she dredges up a single personal experience with a particular minister from a church she attended years ago, saying in effect that it represents the experiences Christians have everywhere. Does it? How does she know?

To show charismatic leadership among Christians, she pops off a couple of rhetorical questions: "What is a minister if not a charismatic leader?" — as if that proves anything. What is a strawberry if not a citrus fruit?

Then she lets loose with a double punch. Joining the "sins" of exclusivity and alienation together, she accuses Christian churches of both of these grievous offenses on the basis that the churches forbid homosexual practices. In addition, she takes special aim at the Catholic Church, noting that her father was ejected from the Church years ago for divorcing his first wife. That, supposedly, proves the Church is inclined to alienate people.

Right.

It's terribly ironic that she selects the Catholic Church to make her point. Catholicism is about as open as a religion as one can find anywhere. The very name "catholic" means universal — open to all. Although the Church forbids certain forms of behavior, the church keeps the doors open to homosexuals, alcoholics, adulterers and all the rest of us who would renounce our sinful natures and embrace Christ.

Does Ms. Higgins not know this?

Finally, to convict the Christian churches of harboring a totalitarian world view, she lumps Pat Robertson together with the phenomena of the Spanish Inquisition and the Crusades, which is like classifying the common cold with the Bubonic Plague and the Black Death. Pat Robertson in a league with Torquemada? The Christian Coalition a modern-day version of the Medieval Crusades? She's got to be kidding!

As if to crown the nonsense, she caps off her argument by suggesting that the mass suicide of the Heaven's Gate crowd reflects a Christian view of life after death. No dice, Karrie. No Christian church promotes suicide as a route to Paradise. To the contrary, Christian churches have been at the forefront of groups opposing euthanasia as a means of escaping the sufferings of this world. Christ himself rejected such an easy way out at Gethsemane.

Perhaps without meaning to offend, Karrie's article did nonetheless touch in a crude and flippant manner on several points which deserve a far more profound and delicate treatment that they received in her discussion.

Turnout low for latest Haitian elections

By Michael Norton
Associated Press

PETIONVILLE, Haiti — Turnout was light and cynicism was high Sunday for elections seen as a referendum on an economic plan and expected to clear the way for the return of former President Jean-Bertrand Aristide.

Leslie Norvil, 22, was at the polls at Guatemala primary school in Petionville, but not as a voter.

"I'm here to pick up some cash," he said, explaining that he was hired as a guard. He said he did not see the point in voting. "The country is stuck in the mud, and the people have been cheated."

"Haitians didn't vote for underdevelopment. But that is what they have gotten," said teacher Marcelin Raymond, 24, who was voting.

At stake Sunday were nine of 27 Senate seats; two in the Chamber of Deputies, including one for a legislator assassinated in a drive-by shooting last year; and thousands of slots on 697 new local councils.

Polls were open for 12 hours and closed at 6 p.m. International observers said they would be surprised if more than 5 percent of the 2 million registered voters participated. But the Provisional Electoral Council shocked a news conference by announcing that as many as 50 percent cast ballots in

"The disparity is too flagrant between the reported participation and the participation as announced by the electoral council."

Jean-Robert Martinez, independent candidate for the Haitian senate some southern areas and up to 30 percent in parts of the west-central Artibonite Valley.

Reports of a higher than expected turnout drew claims of fraud by at least one candidate.

"The disparity is too flagrant between the reported participation and the participation as announced by the electoral council," said Jean-Robert Martinez, who's running as an independent for senate. He said some areas in the southern district where he's running were fraudulently reporting up to 100 percent turnout.

Meanwhile, authorities said one poll watcher was shot to death in an incident apparently not directly linked to the voting. They said the poll watcher got into an argument with another man over the purpose of the election as the two rode the bus. When they disembarked, the shooting erupted.

The balloting is between candidates supporting and opposing President Rene Preval's internationally-backed economic policy.

International donors keeping Haiti afloat have demanded austerity measures that would cost thousands of jobs in a country where industry employs only 40,000 of the 7.2 million people. Most Haitians already are unemployed or surviving on odd jobs.

Aristide, who left office a year ago when his term limit expired, opposes international backing and has used the prospect of increased economic hardship to build government opposition.

Sunday's vote was expected to clear the way for Aristide's probable return to power. His newly formed Lavalas Family Party already controls the Chamber of Deputies, and its candidates were expected to sweep local council elections and gain control of the Senate. The local councils will help choose a 10-year electoral panel that will oversee the next presidential elections, in 2000.

Still, this year's voter apathy showed how little Haitians believe their country can ever function as a democracy.

An hour after polls opened at Petionville High School, not one voter had cast a ballot and none were in sight. Ten years ago, though, hundreds of people waited to vote here. Army-backed goon squads drove past, shooting, and panicked voters ran. Hundreds across the country had died in previous months in politically inspired terrorism.

A few years later, in 1990, nearly everybody turned out to sweep Aristide to power in Haiti's first democratic election. The army ousted him in September 1991. Military terror ended with the intervention of 20,000 U.S. troops in September 1994, and the Haitian people were full of hope.

But time has not relieved the misery in a nation impoverished by nearly 200 years of civilian and military dictatorships.

Legislative elections in June 1995 drew less than a 50 percent turnout. The December presidential elections won by Preval were better organized, but turnout was less than 30 percent.

Radio Cap-Haitien reported that fewer than 10 percent of voters had turned out by midday Sunday in the northern city of Cap-Haitien. At a polling station at the prime minister's office, only 36 of 6,800 registered voters — less than 1 percent — had cast a ballot.

Vietnam agrees to pay U.S. $146 million in debt

By Ian Stewart
Associated Press

HANOI, Vietnam — Seeking to develop closer economic ties, Treasury Secretary Robert Rubin and Vietnamese officials Sunday discussed a pact obliging the communist government to repay the wartime debts of South Vietnam.

Rubin and the Vietnamese will sign the agreement during a ceremony later today, Treasury Department officials said.

Rubin is the highest-ranking U.S. economic official to visit Vietnam since the war's end in 1975. He arrived here Sunday as part of an Asian tour that included visits to Japan and the Philippines.

Although President Clinton lifted a decades-old economic embargo on Vietnam in 1994, and the two countries established diplomatic ties in 1995, a full trade pact remains elusive.

Rubin's trip is an acknowledgment of Vietnam's economic progress, moving from one of Asia's poorest countries to an emerging economy embracing market-oriented reforms.

"He's here for an opportunity to see some of the changes that have been taking place firsthand," Treasury Department spokesperson Howard Schloss said.

In the mid-1980s, Vietnam embarked on a program of economic reform and liberalization that in recent years has catapulted the country's economy to near double-digit growth.

Vietnam's willingness to absorb South Vietnam's wartime debts is a major step toward better economic ties with Washington.

Vietnam has agreed to repay $146 million in debts still owed the United States by the now-defunct South Vietnamese government.

Resolving the debt issue will move the two countries closer to concluding a trade agreement, Schloss said.

"The debt agreement is a very important step to move forward," he added.

Hanoi is hoping to win access to financing from the Export-Import Bank and other economic assistance from Washington with the signing of the pact.

Washington channeled billions of dollars in military, humanitarian and development aid into South Vietnam during the 1960s and 1970s, before Saigon fell to advancing communist troops in 1975. Divided Vietnam then was reunited under communist rule.

Repayment is not being considered for the outstanding military debt, but Washington wants development and humanitarian loans repaid.

Zairian rebel leader Laurent Kabila with armed forces, where about 4,000 soldiers

By Dianna Cahn
Associated Press

GOMA, Zaire — Rebel leader Laurent Kabila objected Sunday to the presence of American troops on Zaire's border, calling them a threat to his country's integrity.

"They could move in at any time. They don't recognize the sovereignty of our people," Kabila said at rebel headquarters in eastern Zaire.

"For us, it is a threat to our territorial integrity," said Kabila, whose forces have taken control of the eastern third of Zaire during their seven-month campaign to oust dictator Mobutu Sese Seko.

Kabila said also there should be no international intervention in Zaire.

About 1,200 U.S., Belgian, French and British soldiers forces have set up camp in Brazzaville, Congo, across the Zaire River from the Zairian capital of Kinshasa, in case Westerners have to be evacuated. Also, the U.S. warship Nassau is stationed off the coast of the central African nation, with about 1,000 Marines aboard.

While Kabila didn't say specifically that American troops should leave the region, he apparently fears there are more U.S. soldiers than would be needed to evacuate the 500 or so Americans who live in Zaire.

State Department officials in Washington refused to comment Sunday on Kabila's objections, but reiterated that the possible evacuation is the soldiers' sole purpose.

The rebels have kept up their advance through Zaire, although their representatives are meeting in South Africa with officials from Mobutu's government, trying to sort out a peaceful resolution to the crisis.

Democrats urge bipartisan efforts

By David Espo
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Two spring-times ago, House Republicans backed by their huge freshman class were racing to complete work on their "Contract With America." Now it's the Democratic newcomers' turn to step into the spotlight — and prod the GOP for moving too slowly.

"There are issues everyone cares about and they haven't even been able to get hearings," Rep. Darlene Hooley, a first-term Democrat from Oregon, said in an interview. Referring to balancing the budget, education measures and campaign finance reform, she added, "They should be on the horizon somewhere and at least scheduled for hearings."

"I think we're really not doing anything," said Rep. Jim Davis, D-Fla., of the beginning of the Congress.

Democrats aren't the only ones clamoring for action.

GOP lawmakers are tired of "wasting time" by "coming here and naming bridges," Rep. Matt Salmon, R-Ariz., said late last month after a handful of rebels inflicted a defeat on Speaker Newt Gingrich and their leadership in a floor vote. The revolt was sort of a wake-up call to the leadership, Salmon and others said at the time.

For their part, Hooley and about two dozen other first-term Democrats sent a letter last month to Gingrich and House Majority Leader Dick Armey of Texas, urging that Congress "get to work" in a "productive, bipartisan relationship." With Congress returning this week from an Easter break, she and several other Democrats will make the same point at a news conference Thursday.

Democratic leader Dick Gephardt of Missouri and other party leaders are scheduled to attend, likely giving the event a more partisan tone. "The Gingrich Congress: All Rhetoric, No Action," was the title of a Democratic report on the GOP Congress issued late last month.

"Not only have Republicans failed to come forward with a budget or a campaign reform plan, but all of their major legislative efforts this session have failed miserably," the report said, a reference to the proposed constitutional amendment to require a balanced budget.

Figures compiled by the Democrats illustrate the slow start.

The House has taken 60 roll call votes this year, according to statistics distributed by the Democrats. That compares with 271 at this point two years ago — when the GOP was racing through its "Contract With America." In 1993, the last time the Democrats held a majority, the comparable number was 123.

Lawmakers also have been in session relatively infrequently.

The Democratic report said the House had been in session only 27 days in the first quarter of the year, compared with 53 days during the last Congress and 35 the last time Democrats were in power.

with the outcome.

"We (the Board) feel that in a store like ours, employees and workers should work together as one group," he said.

Wegman hopes the union attempt will increase communication within the Co-Op.

"It was a wake-up call," he said. "I hope that everyone is grown up and accepts this. If Dole and Clinton can still talk, so can we."

Lueders blamed the union defeat on apathy, due to the amount of time it took to have an election. Discussion about forming a union began in December, Lueders said.

"All those in the middle (and undecided) got to the point where they didn't care. I am sure some people were just tired of it," she said.

Store employee Hannah Sparks agreed that undecided voters were key to the election's outcome.

"I think it was easier to say no than yes," she said.

Employees and members seem relieved that the election is over, but pleased that the process brought up important issues.

"It has become a lot more comfortable already. For a long time managers were high-stressed. Now they seem relieved," Lueders said.

Although pro-union employees are disappointed, they are pleased they got better acquainted with employees of the main store and the bake shop, Sparks said.

"It helped to form some strong bonds," Sparks said.

Sparks said employees hope to talk with management about the concerns brought up during union attempts.

"We've learned that we need to stick together to get things done," she said.

Lueders agreed. "The whole process of getting a union has helped open communication and what needed to be dealt with."

Netanyahu, Arafat urged to resume talks

By Laura Myers
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — U.S. officials pleaded Sunday for Israeli and Palestinian leaders to shed their hardline stances and renew face-to-face consultations as President Clinton prepared to meet with Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu.

Palestinian leader Yasser Arafat insists building must stop on an Israeli housing project in east Jerusalem before longstanding disagreements can be resolved. Netanyahu pressed his case Sunday with his closest friend among Arab leaders, King Hussein of Jordan, who was recovering from prostate surgery at the Mayo Clinic in Rochester, Minn.

The U.S. government, meanwhile, urged the two sides to agree to a face-to-face meeting to salvage a shaky Middle East peace process.

"The United States remains committed to securing a just, lasting and comprehensive peace between Israel and her neighbors," said Bill Richardson, U.S. ambassador to the United Nations. "But, in the end, the success of the process depends on the willingness of the Palestinians and the Israelis to work together as negotiating partners."

Richardson, addressing the influential American-Israel Public Affairs Committee, said, "We are very concerned at the significant and rapid decline in the confidence that the Palestinians and the Israeli government have in each other and, to some extent, in the process itself."

Vice President Al Gore also was to address AIPAC's annual meeting. Netanyahu was scheduled to make an appearance Monday after meeting with Clinton, members of Congress and Jewish groups.

With the peace process stalled since last month amid increasing violence in the Middle East, U.S. officials have suggested it may take another Camp David-like negotiating session to force both sides to resolve their differences in a private setting.

But first, Clinton, Secretary of State Madeleine Albright and U.S. diplomats were meeting with both sides to find possible compromises. Neither the Israelis nor the Palestinians appeared ready to budge.

Arafat, who went over the weekend to a meeting of the Non-Aligned Movement of developing nations in New Delhi, India, sent Clinton a letter saying any U.S. initiative must include a pledge by Israel to stop construction on disputed land — especially the Jewish Har Homa project in east Jerusalem, which the Palestinians claim as a future capital.

Netanyahu has told his cabinet the U.S. initiative would be based on his proposal to move up negotiations on a permanent peace agreement, with a goal of wrapping up talks on the most difficult issues of Palestinian statehood, borders and Jerusalem in six to nine months. Arafat sees this as a ruse to get building for the duration of peace talks while the United States presses Arafat to take a clear position opposing terrorism.

U.S. troops unwelcome in Zaire

By Dianna Cahn
Associated Press

GOMA, Zaire — Rebel leader Laurent Kabila objected Sunday to the presence of American troops on Zaire's border, calling them a threat to his country's integrity.

"They could move in at any time. They don't recognize the sovereignty of our people," Kabila said at rebel headquarters in eastern Zaire.

"For us, it is a threat to our territorial integrity," said Kabila, whose forces have taken control of the eastern third of Zaire during their seven-month campaign to oust dictator Mobutu Sese Seko.

Kabila said also there should be no international intervention in Zaire.

About 1,200 U.S., Belgian, French and British soldiers forces have set up camp in Brazzaville, Congo, across the Zaire River from the Zairian capital of Kinshasa, in case Westerners have to be evacuated. The rebels have kept up their advance through Zaire, although their representatives are meeting in South Africa with officials from Mobutu's government, trying to sort out a peaceful resolution to the crisis.

South African and Zairian officials were tight-lipped Sunday about progress in the first substantive peace negotiations between Zaire's warring factions.

No one involved would say where the talks were being held or even characterize the tone of the discussions. The two sides met informally Saturday because they were still waiting for some government representatives to fly in.

The rebels, who began the talks sounding like they were in no mood to compromise, appeared slightly more conciliatory on Sunday.

Despite earlier threats to withdraw from the talks if they did not begin on schedule Saturday, the rebel's representative in South Africa, Richard Wenu, told the AP: "We are prepared to wait however long it takes for a compromise."

Rebel forces are reported near Lubumbashi, Zaire's second-largest city and the capital of the mineral-rich Shaba region. Mining industry sources, speaking on condition of anonymity, said a vanguard group of rebels had reached the city, though it was unclear whether there was any fighting.

Kabila confirmed Sunday the rebels had taken Mbuji-Mayi, the country's diamond-mining center, 435 miles northwest of Lubumbashi, encountering some opposition from Mobutu's forces.

The diamonds, and Shaba's copper and cobalt, have been a money-making machine for Mobutu's 31-year regime. Now, they will be revenue for the alliance.

Kabila said officials of the South African-based Anglo American Corporation — the firm that owns the diamond mines — were in Goma on Saturday to renegotiate contracts.

Speaking Sunday of his plans for the future of Zaire, Kabila said he envisions a transitional government, a political reorganization, then elections within a year.

Last month, Kabila said only his Alliance of Democratic Forces for the Liberation of Congo-Zaire would be allowed to function as a political party.

But on Sunday, he said other parties would be allowed to return to the political arena, possibly including Mobutu's Popular Revolutionary Movement party.

He insisted once again that the rebels would not share power with "Mobutists."

"The aim of the negotiations is for Mobutu to relinquish power. Power-sharing is not an issue."

The rebels, who control the important river city of Kisangani in central Zaire, agreed Saturday to allow international aid agencies to airlift Rwandan Hutu refugees from camps south of the city.

Relief agencies say about 120 of the estimated 100,000 refugees there are dying each day from malnutrition, disease and exhaustion.

The airlift probably will begin by the end of this week, the U.N. refugee agency said Sunday.

It will take that long to organize the highly-complex transportation and select the refugees most in need of moving but still able to survive the trip, said Pam O'Toole, chief spokesperson of the U.N. High Commissioner for Refugees in Geneva.

Before reaching the two areas south of Kisangani where they are now concentrated, the refugees had traveled through the rain forests of eastern Zaire for more than five months.

to pay on in debt

the mid-1980s, Vietnam marked on a program of economic reform and liberalization that in recent years has catapulted the country's economy to near double-digit growth.

Vietnam's willingness to absorb Vietnam's wartime debts is a first step toward better economic relations with Washington.

Vietnam has agreed to repay $146 billion in debts still owed the United States by the now-defunct South Vietnamese government.

Resolving the debt issue will move the two countries closer to concluding a trade agreement, Schloss said.

The debt agreement is a very important step to move forward," he said.

Hanoi is hoping to win access to financing from the Export-Import Bank and other economic assistance from Washington with the signing of a pact.

Washington channeled billions of dollars in military, humanitarian and development aid into South Vietnam during the 1960s and 1970s, before Saigon fell to advancing communist troops in 1975. Divided Vietnam then was reunited under communist rule.

Repayment is not being considered until the outstanding military debt, but Washington wants development and humanitarian loans repaid.

Reporter 15 years late on apology to court

IOWA CITY (AP) — An international news reporter who made restitution for bad checks 15 years ago but failed to show up for sentencing apologized Friday for her error.

Wafa Amr, 35, now of Jerusalem, was given a deferred judgment, meaning that if she is not charged with any crimes in the next two years, the charge will be taken off her record. She also must pay $500 to the Domestic Violence Intervention Program in Iowa City in lieu of performing community service.

District Judge William Eads said, "I've had people late for court, but never 15 years late."

Amr was a student at Coe College in Cedar Rapids from 1979 to April 1982, when her registration was canceled for non-payment of fees. Johnson County authorities filed the second-degree theft charge against her in June 1982 after she wrote $625 in bad checks. She faced a fourth-degree theft charge in Linn County for a $98 bad check.

In July 1982, Amr pleaded guilty to the Johnson County charge and the Linn County charge was dropped, contingent on her making restitution.

After paying back all the bad checks, Amr left the country later in July. A warrant was issued for her after she failed to appear for her sentencing in August 1982.

It was that warrant that turned up March 3 when the Reuters news service sent Amr to Washington, D.C., to cover the meeting between PLO leader Yasser Arafat and President Clinton.

She posted $10,000 bond after her arrest.

Amr declined comment Friday, but her attorney, Joseph Caldwell of Washington, D.C., told Eads that Amr did not willfully evade justice. She simply believed she'd met her legal obligations, he said.

Noting Amr's journalism career, which has included stints at The New York Times and the Middle East Times, Caldwell said his client "traveled through several states last year to cover the presidential, vice presidential and congressional elections. She would not have done that if she knew she was wanted."

Caldwell said Amr's bad checks resulted when Middle East unrest tied up money her family in Jordan was sending to her in Iowa.

Top South African judge to speak about death penalty

Judge Pius N. Langa from the South Africa Constitutional Court is scheduled to speak about the abolishment of the death penalty today at the UI.

UI law Professor Adrien Wing said it is a great honor to have Pius, a top judge in his country, visit the UI.

"Other than having Nelson Mandela, this judge is as high-ranking as you can get," Wing said.

The court, which Langa joined upon its creation in 1995, was authorized under the country's first post-apartheid constitution. One of the Constitutional Court's first rulings was to abolish capital punishment in South Africa.

Wing said South Africa's 300-page opinion against capital punishment is viewed by governments worldwide as a profound statement. The lectures, set for 12:40 p.m. in Room 245 of the Boyd Law Building and 7 p.m. in the International Center, are free and open to the public.

Former Iowan one of two cultists who claimed mental illness

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Two Heaven's Gate members claimed to be mentally ill in the years before they killed themselves and one, a former Minneapolis man, was collecting benefits, Social Security records show.

Former Minneapolis resident Alphonzo Ricardo Foster, 44, had been receiving $890 a month in disability payments for a "manic disorder" since December 1988, said Leslie Walker, spokesperson for the Social Security Administration.

Foster was born in Detroit and grew up in Mason City, Iowa. Another member, Robert John Arancio, 46, of Texas, received $626 a month in disability between January 1995 and September 1996 because of schizophrenia. He became ineligible after his income increased, Walker said.

Mother Nature can't prevent softball team from victories

By Becky Gruhn
The Daily Iowan

Someone obviously forgot to show Iowa's softball schedule to Mother Nature.

Ominous clouds, blinding rain, hurricane-like winds, teeth-chattering coldness, and periodic intervals of blowing snow all tried deflating the sky-high Hawkeyes this weekend.

Hawkeye Highlights

- Lea Twigg was 3-for-4 with two doubles and four RBIs Sunday and 2-of-4 with two doubles and one RBI Saturday.
- Brandi Macias was 2-for-3 with a homerun Sunday.
- Christy Hebert was 2-for-3 with two RBIs Sunday.
- Tammy Utey was 2-for-2 with a double Saturday.
- Debbie Bilbao earned the victory both days, moving her season record to 15-3.

game even earlier than the sixth inning, holding a 10-0 lead heading into the bottom of the third inning.

"We opened really strong," Blevins said. "We hit largely through the lineup and we kept good pressure on them. One of the trademarks of this team is that we like to make opposing teams battle from behind."

Michigan managed a mini-rally by adding three runs in the third and one in the fourth. But that was all the offense the Wolverines could muster.

Brandi Macias slammed her 12th career home run in the top of the sixth, sailing the ball over the centerfield wall to give Iowa an 11-4 advantage.

Macias' solo homer marked Iowa's 23rd of the season. A year ago the Hawkeyes had a total of 14 for the entire season.

Lea Twigg put the game out of reach by nailing a two-run double to a gap in leftfield to give Iowa a ten-run advantage in the sixth inning.

Debbie Bilbao raised her record to 15-3, pitching Iowa to both victories over the weekend.

"I think this game depended on which team was going to let the weather affect them more," senior Kari Knopf said. "We just came out more focused. We were worried about the game, not the weather."

Knopf's three hits this weekend allowed her to tie Tasha Reents as the career hit leader with 272. Knopf already holds the record for career doubles (46), and RBIs (144).

The Hawkeyes did not have to worry about snow and wind on Saturday, just pouring rain.

"They (Michigan) came out and hit us first on Saturday," Blevins said. "But we have a lot of confidence in our defense and our hitters."

Trailing 1-2 heading into the bottom of the second, Iowa tacked three runs on the board.

Two of the runs were walked in off of Wolverine All-American pitcher and 1996 Big Ten Player of the Year Sara Griffin, while the third was scored off a fielding error at second base.

Shaina Barnes, who pinch ran for Tammy Utey, added to the lead in the third by scoring off another Wolverine error.

Iowa clung to a 5-2 lead when the game was delayed for two hours and 23 minutes in the top of the fourth due to inclement weather.

After the delay, Iowa scored three more runs while holding Michigan scoreless to grab the 8-2 victory.

Iowa baseball team drops two of three to Penn State

By Mike Triplett
The Daily Iowan

No amount of snow, wind or cold could quiet the bats of Iowa and Penn State Sunday on a blustery Iowa Field.

The Lions won two of three games last weekend, the last coming in a marathon slugfest Sunday that had its share of offensive highlights:

Hawkeye Highlights

- With two home runs and six RBIs in Sunday's late game, sophomore Brian Mitchell now has 11 homers and 31 RBIs on the year.
- Junior Bill Stafford hit safely in his first four at-bats during the nightcap and finished 4-of-5 with one RBI.
- Seven different Hawkeyes hit homeruns during the three-game series.
- Junior Steve Boros had the most productive weekend at the plate, going 6-of-11 with a home run and four RBIs.

said. "But that's asking a lot of the kids. It was an adventure every time a ball went up in the air."

Earlier Sunday, Iowa defeated Penn State, 7-6, in a continuation from a Saturday rainout. On Friday, the Hawkeyes fell, 11-5.

Iowa's overall record dropped to 8-15 and its conference record fell to 5-6. Penn State is 2-5 in the Big Ten.

Iowa's only win ended on a bases-loaded single by junior Steve Boros that broke a 6-6 tie.

Reliever Troy Wulf pitched the final 4½ innings to earn the victory. He replaced starter Jeremy McEague, who allowed one hit, one walk and no earned runs while striking out six in the first 2½ innings.

Other Hawkeye starters didn't fare as well last weekend. Sophomore Nate Freese gave up 13 hits and six earned runs in seven innings Friday. Sopho-

Same script, different year.

For the second straight season the Iowa men's gymnastics team finished second to the Ohio State Buckeyes at the NCAA East Regional Saturday in West Point, N.Y.

This is one story that is definitely in need of a rewrite according to Iowa coach Tom Dunn.

"We always seem to come up short against Ohio State," Dunn said. "I'm pleased with our overall performance and the fact that we qualified for the NCAA Championships, but it's getting frustrating losing out to the same team all the time."

The top finishers for the Hawkeyes were freshman Brian Hamilton on the floor exercise (9.700) and senior Tyler Vogt (9.775) on the still rings. Both finished in third place respectively.

Ohio State's deadly all-American duo of Blaine Wilson and Drew Durbin snagged five of the seven individual titles. Buckeye teammate Doug Stibel won the horizontal bar championship.

The only non-Ohio State winner was Victor Prisk of Michigan State who won the still rings.

While things went according to plan in the East Regional (the three highest ranked teams all advanced), the West Regional in New Mexico was just a little more wild.

Hawkeyes overpower No. 68 Penn State, 4-3

By Becky Gruhn
The Daily Iowan

All season long, the Iowa women's tennis team has come close to beating nationally-ranked opponents, but not close enough.

Yesterday, that trend changed. Under the guidance of seniors Lisa Harris and Kristen McCracken, Iowa upset No. 68 Penn State, 4-3.

High-fives, hugs, and mile-wide grins told the tale of what coach Jenny Mainz calls a win her team has been waiting a long time to get.

"This was a huge win today for the Hawkeyes," Mainz said. "We had a lot to prove today and we proved it. We were fired up and ready to play. This was a great team effort."

"Today's win just got us over the hump. This should get us in into the top 75, which is what we've been waiting for. We're right in there and now we want to see it on paper," Mainz said.

Iowa took control early as it swept all three doubles matches to take the 1-0 lead.

Shera Wiegler added to the cushion with a victory at the No. 5 singles, 6-3, 6-2.

Then the drama began. Penn State stole victories away from the Hawkeyes at the No. 1, 3, and 4 singles, forcing Iowa to win its last two singles matches to grab the team victory.

After losing the first set, McCracken came back to notch a victory at the No. 2 slot, 3-6, 6-3, 6-4.

Harris secured the team victory in come-from-behind fashion, taking the win at the No. 6 slot, 4-6, 6-4, 7-5.

"Lisa just has the biggest heart," Mainz said. "You can see her heart on her sleeve when she plays."

"It was great for Kris and Lisa to end on the notes they ended on today," Mainz said. "They played poised under pressure and played good, clean tennis."

According to Harris and McCracken, the ending of the match against Penn State was the perfect script for their final home contest.

"This is what you work for, this is 1-0 lead."

Former Iowan one of two cultists who claimed mental illness

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Two Heaven's Gate members claimed to be mentally ill in the years before they killed themselves and one, a former Minneapolis man, was collecting benefits, Social Security records show.

Former Minneapolis resident Alphonzo Ricardo Foster, 44, had been receiving $890 a month in disability payments for a "manic disorder" since December 1988, said Leslie Walker, spokesperson for the Social Security Administration.

Foster was born in Detroit and grew up in Mason City, Iowa.

Another member, Robert John Arancio, 46, of Texas, received $626 a month in disability between January 1995 and September 1996 because of schizophrenia. He became ineligible after his income increased, Walker said.

Cubs' skid jumps to six games

By Paul Newberry
Associated Press

ATLANTA — After needing more than 18 hours to win their previous game, the Atlanta Braves had the perfect pitcher on the mound to speed things up Sunday.

Greg Maddux allowed three hits in eight innings to lead the Atlanta Braves past the Chicago Cubs 4-0 in just 1 hour, 47 minutes — the fastest major league game in five years.

Earlier, the Braves beat the Cubs 11-5 in the completion of the game suspended by rain on Saturday night. That contest, delayed more than four hours before it was halted, finally ended 18 hours, 37 minutes after the scheduled start.

Maddux (1-1) wasted no time disposing of his former team, 0-6 for the first time since 1983. He didn't allow a hit until the fourth, didn't walk a batter in the game and 14 of his outs came on grounders.

It was the fastest nine-inning game in the majors since Houston and Los Angeles played a 1:44 game on Oct. 4, 1992.

"He's a guy who keeps you in the game if you're an infielder," said Jeff Blauser, who extended his hot start by going 3-for-3 with a homer. "He gets a lot of ground balls, keeps your head in the game. That's the guy you want out there. You don't want somebody walking around the mound all day long."

Maddux, who allowed 10 hits and four runs as he lost his first start of the season, threw 91 pitches before Mark Wohlers came on to pitch the ninth. Between them, they threw only 23 balls and 27 first-pitch strikes.

"Maddux was at the top of his game," pitching coach Leo Mazzone said. "That was as good a pitching as you're ever going to see."

Typically, the four-time Cy Young Award winner shrugged off his dominating performance, which gave Atlanta its fourth straight victory.

"I was just happy to have a good outing," he said. "Let's face it, the last three games (including spring training) were pretty shaky. I threw some strikes and got some good plays behind me. It was nice to get some grounders."

The Cubs, who made four errors in the regular game, head back to Chicago on Tuesday for their home opener. They haven't been 0-7 since 1962.

"There's not much to say," manager Jim Riggleman said. "Atlanta played extremely well, dominated the series. Maddux is as good as we've seen and maybe as good as we'll ever see."

The Cubs have endured a brutal stretch to begin the season. After breaking camp in Arizona, they played exhibition games in Cleveland and Fort Myers, Fla., before opening the season with three-game series in Florida and Atlanta.

"I can't say it's a shock being 0-6," Riggleman said. "When you face Florida and Atlanta pitchers like we've done, 0-6 is possible for a lot of teams."

Blauser, who struggled the past three seasons at shortstop for the Braves, finally is starting to resemble the player who looked like a potential star when he hit .305 with 15 homers and 73 RBIs in 1993.

MIAMI (AP) — Thanks to nine bases on balls, the Florida Marlins walked away with another win.

Kevin Brown pitched seven strong innings, singled home a run and drew one of two bases-loaded walks to help first-place Florida beat the Cincinnati Reds 3-2 Sunday.

The Marlins, who expected to be much improved this year, concluded their opening homestand with a 5-1 record. They're in sole possession of first in the NL East for the first time in the five-year history of the franchise.

"We had a couple of chances to break the game open, as we've had this whole homestand," manager Jim Leyland said. "We haven't been able to do that. But you've got to be pleased when you open by winning five of six."

Florida took the lead when reliever Scott Service walked Jeff Conine on a 3-2 pitch with two out and the bases loaded in the seventh. Service replaced John Smiley (1-1), who had walked the bases loaded.

Brown (2-0), who allowed only one hit in winning the Marlins' opener, limited Cincinnati to six hits and two runs — one earned — in seven innings.

Rockies 6, Expos 2
MONTREAL — Vinny Castilla homered for the second straight game and Colorado completed its first-ever sweep at Montreal.

Texas catcher Ivan Rodriguez, left, and first baseman Lee Stevens miss a pop up from Baltimore Orioles' Mike Bordick during the third inning Sunday afternoon, in Arlington, Texas. The ball was ruled foul.

Montreal reliever Lee Smith appeared in his 1,000th major league game, joining Hoyt Wilhelm (1,070), Kent Tekulve (1,050) and Rich Gossage (1,002) as pitchers to reach the mark. Smith, the career saves leader at 474, worked a perfect ninth.

Colorado, just 28-53 on the road last season, won its fourth straight away from Coors Field. Kevin Ritz (1-1) allowed one run in 6 2-3 innings.

Astros 3, Cardinals 2
HOUSTON — St. Louis, the defending NL West winner, stumbled to 0-6, the worst start in the team's 106 seasons. Jeff Bagwell overcame a 2-1 deficit with a two-run double in the eighth off John Frascatore (0-1).

Tom Martin (1-0) pitched a scoreless eighth, and Billy Wagner worked the ninth for his third save.

Mets 4, Giants 2
SAN FRANCISCO — Brian Bohanon, starting in place of ailing Pete Harnisch, pitched seven strong innings for his first NL victory.

Harnisch, who has been suffering from insomnia, was sent back to New York earlier in the day. Bohanon was recalled Saturday from Triple-A Norfolk to fill the roster spot of disabled pitcher Yorkis Perez.

Bohanon (1-0) gave up two runs on four hits as the Mets salvaged a win in the finale of the three-game series.

Mark Gardner (0-1) pitched seven innings, settling down after allowing three runs in the first.

Phillies 3, Padres 2
SAN DIEGO — Curt Schilling (2-0) allowed two runs and seven hits in eight innings and struck out seven, increasing his season total to 18. Darren Daulton, Derrick May and Wendell Magee homered off

John Jaha hit a solo home run off Hentgen in the eighth.

Ben McDonald (1-1) rebounded from a shaky first start, allowing two runs and five hits in six innings, and Doug Jones pitched the ninth to save his second straight game.

Royals 12, Twins 2
MINNEAPOLIS — Glendon Rusch allowed four hits in eight innings and retired 19 consecutive batters in his major league debut.

The 22-year-old left-hander struck out four and walked none. He gave up a pair of unearned runs in the first and allowed Ron Coomer's lead-off single in the second, then retired 19 straight until Chuck Knoblauch's two-out single in the eighth.

Mike Sweeney homered and drove in a career-high four runs to lead the Royals. Brad Radke (0-1) was hammered for seven runs — six earned — and eight hits in 4 1-3 innings. He struck out five and walked one.

Athletics 3, Yankees 0
OAKLAND, Calif. — New York, which had not committed an error this season, booted two grounders as Oakland scored three runs in the eighth.

Third baseman Wade Boggs and first baseman Tino Martinez made the miscues as the Yankees, the last team in the majors to commit an error in 1997, wasted a stellar pitching performance by David Cone.

Mariners 8, Red Sox 7, 10 innings
SEATTLE — Paul Sorrento singled home the winning run with one out in the 10th.

Ken Griffey Jr. homered for the third straight day, giving him five home runs in Seattle's six games. Alex Rodriguez homered, had four hits and scored four runs, including the game-winner.

Rodriguez led off the 10th with an infield single and moved to second on a wild pitch by Rick Tricek (1-1). After Griffey was intentionally walked, Rich Amaral sacrificed. Jay Buhner was intentionally walked to load the bases and Sorrento singled.

Indians 10, Angels 8
ANAHEIM, Calif. — Brian Giles and Sandy Alomar homered in the ninth inning as the Cleveland Indians overcame a six-run deficit Sunday night and beat the Anaheim Angels 10-8.

With the score 8-all, Giles homered with one out off Troy Percival (0-2). One out later, Alomar hit his third homer of the season.

Percival is 0-3 against the Indians and has given up 10 runs in 13 1-3 innings against them. In 2 2-3 innings this season, he has allowed six runs and six hits, walked four and hit a batter.

American League

ARLINGTON, Texas — Dean Palmer drove in three runs and Rusty Greer had four hits as the Texas Rangers beat Baltimore 9-3 Sunday and sent the Orioles to their first loss of the season.

Mike Mussina, making his first appearance of the season, gave up four runs in the first and wound up allowing seven runs and eight hits in four innings. He was scheduled to pitch on opening day but was pushed back because of calcium deposits in his right elbow.

Brewers 4, Blue Jays 2
TORONTO — Jeff Cirillo doubled home the go-ahead run in the seventh off Pat Hentgen.

With the score 2-all, Jesse Levis singled with one out in the seventh. With two outs, Cirillo doubled over left fielder Shawn Green for his second RBI of the game.

MLB NOTES

Orioles' Alomar set to return, quietly

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Roberto Alomar would prefer to merely blend into the background Monday when the Kansas City Royals start the 25th season in their current home and honor three of their heroes.

Alomar, Baltimore's All-Star second baseman, is scheduled to play his first game after serving a five-game suspension for spitting in the face of umpire John Hirschbeck last September.

Umpires were incensed when AL president Gene Budig allowed Alomar to remain in the lineup during Baltimore's chase for a wild-card berth, saying the suspension would take effect at the start of this season.

Amidst the controversy, Alomar hit clutch home runs that helped the Orioles reach the playoffs and advance to the second round.

Alomar, who hit .328 in 1996 while reaching career highs in runs (132), homers (22) and RBIs (94), was booed vigorously every time he batted in opposing stadiums after the incident.

Alomar was sidelined most of spring training with an ankle injury. But he even received a smattering of boos in the few at-bats he did have.

"I don't want to talk about it. I've already said what I have to say about the whole situation," he repeated recently. "I'm just going to think about baseball."

The Orioles have hardly suffered in his absence. With Jeff Reboulet filling in, Baltimore won its first four games of the season. Big comeback for big unit: Now that Randy Johnson is back, he hopes his injury troubles are over.

"I just came off major back surgery seven months ago and I'm not expecting too much right now. I don't know how my back's going to respond," he said after striking out eight in six strong innings Saturday night, his first start since last May 12.

Johnson, who underwent surgery Sept. 12, gave the Mariners' bullpen a 3-2 lead, allowing a two-run homer to Wil Cordero in the fourth. But the relievers couldn't hold the lead and Boston won 8-6.

"It was a big thrill being back out there," he said. "I'm back now, but I still have to continue to take small steps before I can get out there and do the things I used to do. But this was a step in the right direction and I'm pretty pleased with tonight."

"By the All-Star break, I should know how I'm feeling and how this season is going to go. By the All-Star break, I'll probably have pitched 15 to 16 games. Hopefully, by that time, I'll be above water."

He threw 91 pitches, 57 for strikes, walked none and allowed five hits — four for extra bases.

"Any time your premier pitcher shows no signs of back problems in his first game back, that's great news," said Ken Griffey Jr., who hit his fourth homer in four games for the Mariners.

A Kingdom sellout crowd of 57,110 warmly greeted Johnson when he came onto the field and cheered him enthusiastically.

Redskins owner Cooke dies of heart failure

By Joseph White
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Jack Kent Cooke, the crusty entrepreneur whose Washington Redskins won three Super Bowls and whose personal life was the stuff of tabloid headlines, died Sunday. He was 84.

The NFL owner collapsed at his estate in northwest Washington and was taken to George Washington University Hospital at 11:34 a.m. He died 35 minutes later.

"He didn't complain of chest pain, and he suddenly collapsed," said Dr. Robert Shesser, the hospital's chief emergency room physician. "When the paramedics arrived on the scene, his heart was not beating. ... We went through every possible scenario to try to revive him."

Cooke, who had a heart attack in 1973, had long been bothered by angina pain and breathing problems. Last Nov. 10, he became ill in his RFK Stadium box during a game. He spent the next five days in the hospital, where he was found to have osteoarthritis, a degenerative condition found in the elderly.

For Cooke, image was nothing and success was everything. During his 23 years as majority owner of the Redskins, his success could be measured by his vast financial holdings, his NFL championships and the parade of celebrities that came calling to his stadium box.

"Nobody's going to write a book about me (50 years from now)," Cooke told The Associated Press in 1995, "because nobody's going to find anything worth writing a book about."

It was that no-nonsense mindset that helped Cooke become one of the most successful American sports owners.

"He was a tough negotiator," said D.C. Mayor Marion Barry, who haggled with Cooke for several years over a new stadium. "He wouldn't have made all his money if he had been a softie. ... I regret that he didn't live long enough to see the stadium completed. It was one of his dreams. In fact, he was almost obsessed with it."

President Clinton said Cooke's "straight-shooting style and love of the fans earned him respect and admiration throughout the sports world."

Born Oct. 25, 1912, in Hamilton, Ontario, Cooke sold encyclopedias during the Depression before making his fortune in radio and television companies, real estate and newspaper publishing.

His net worth when he died was estimated at $825 million, earning him the 170th spot on the most recent Forbes Magazine's 400 Richest Americans List.

Brad Faxon watches his tee shot from the 7th tee during final round action at the Freepor-McDermott Classic in New Orleans Sunday.

Putter leads Faxon to Freepor title

"I've always felt like demons could come out, you know," he said. "Even though I had a five- or six-shot lead throughout the day, all you had to do was make double bogey and have someone make birdie. Do that a couple of times, and you're back to Square One."

It never happened. In his first appearance in the senior tour's version of the Masters, Morgan played the narrow, angular Coché Course at Desert Mountain like a second home.

His 5-under-par 67 in the final round helped set a tournament record at 22-under 266, and he had the best score or tied for it each day. Morgan played the last 33 holes without a bogey and had only three in 72 holes.

Aoki, who lost to Jack Nicklaus in a playoff in the 1995 Tradition, shot a 68 for 272 to finish two strokes ahead of John Jacobs.

Nicklaus, a four-time Tradition winner, started the round with no real chance at his third straight title. He shot 73 to finish with his worst performance ever (289) on the course he designed.

Long Drugs Challenge

LINCOLN, Calif. — Sometimes golf isn't enjoyable, even for two-time U.S. Open champions.

Annika Sorenstam knows the feeling, but for the third time this season she reaffirmed her appreciation of the sport she learned 15 years ago in Sweden. She parred the second playoff hole Sunday to beat unheralded Pam Kometani in the LPGA's Longs Drugs Challenge.

"The key is that I love to play golf again," said Sorenstam, the 1994 LPGA rookie of the year who won consecutive U.S. Open titles the past two seasons. "There was a lot of pressure last year. It was almost like I was forced to play."

Sorenstam, who with Kometani finished regulation tied at 3-under-par 285, won her third LPGA tournament of the season and the ninth of her four-year career. She shot a 1-over-par 73 in the final round.

Inspired Jordan carries Bulls

Associated Press

Orlando's hopes began to fade as soon as Michael Jordan launched his first shot of the second half. Jordan hit a 3-pointer a minute into the third quarter, then made his next five shots as Chicago broke open a close game and went on to beat the Magic 110-94 Sunday night.

The Bulls star scored 37 points to move into fifth place on the NBA's career scoring list and Chicago swept the season series between the teams that met in last year's Eastern Conference finals.

Jordan scored 24 in the second half, 13 of them during a decisive 21-2 run, and moved past Oscar Robertson (26,710) on the career scoring list with 26,726.

"He took care of our opportunity by just coming down and burying a couple of shots real quick," said Orlando coach Richie Adubato, whose team trailed by three at the half and pulled within one before Jordan took over.

"They're a great third-quarter team. They seem to ignite in the third quarter against everybody. You can't give them a 20-point lead and think you're going to take it back."

Scottie Pippen scored 21 for Chicago, while Penny Hardaway and Rony Seikaly had 23 apiece for Orlando, which saw its lead in the race for the seventh playoff seeding in the East shrink to two games over Washington.

The loss was the fifth in six games for the Magic, who broke a four-game losing streak Friday night at New York despite playing without Seikaly and two other starters, Horace Grant and Dennis Scott.

Pacers 94, Timberwolves 83
MINNEAPOLIS — Rik Smits had 27 points and 11 rebounds as Indiana downed Minnesota to continue its playoff push.

Antonio Davis added 17 points and seven rebounds and Reggie Miller scored 16 as the Pacers remained two games behind Washington and closed within 1 1/2 of idle Cleveland in the race for the final Eastern Conference playoff spot.

Minnesota got 17 points and 11 assists from Stephon Marbury.

Rockets 94, Grizzlies 85
VANCOUVER, British Columbia — The Houston Rockets set a franchise record for road wins and Charles Barkley's 28 points put him in 17th place on the NBA career scoring list.

Barkley, playing only his third game back after missing a month with a hip injury, overtook Hal Greer on the list. The 13-year veteran has 21,609 points and now trails Larry Bird by fewer than 200 points.

Despite 22 points and a career-high 16 rebounds from rookie Shaheed Abdul-Rahim, and 23 points from Bryant Reeves, the Grizzlies lost their seventh straight game and 22nd in 23. Vancouver fell to an NBA-worst 12-65.

Chicago Bulls' Jason Caffey goes over Orlando Magic's Dan Schayes to score during their game in Orlando Sunday.

Clippers 103, Nets 96
EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. — Loy Vaught scored 20 points and grabbed 11 rebounds as the Los Angeles Clippers won their third straight road game and handing New Jersey its fourth loss in a row.

The Nets led 77-73 going into the fourth quarter, but the Clippers outscored them 21-8 to open a comfortable 94-85 lead with 3:39 to play.

Kerry Kittles led New Jersey with 23 points.

Bullets 120, Celtics 114
BOSTON — Chris Webber and Juwan Howard scored 31 points each and Washington its playoff surge by handing Boston its ninth straight loss.

After the Celtics took their last lead at 100-99 with 9:00 remaining, Howard followed with a dunk and a layup to put the Bullets in front for good.

Boston was led by David Wesley, who matched his season-high of 34 points.

After the opening two games of the playoffs to their home court. "I don't know what to say about it," Dikembe Mutombo said. "This was a very big test for us, and we just couldn't get anything done down the stretch."

The Hawks can take some solace in their remaining games. Atlanta has an easier schedule than the Knicks or the Pistons, providing a glimmer of hope that No. 3 is still within reach.

"I think there's still a chance," Mutombo said. "We're not going to put our heads down just because we lost to the Knicks. I think the future is still in our favor."

Atlanta's remaining games include two each against New Jersey and Philadelphia, both eliminated from playoff consideration, as well as an April 16 game at New York. But the Hawks have only two contests left at the Omni, where their record is 34-5; Atlanta is 17-19 on the road.

Eastern race should come down to wire

By Paul Newberry
Associated Press

ATLANTA — Chicago will be the top seed in the NBA's Eastern Conference playoffs, and there's a spirited race to see which team will get to lose to the Bulls in the first round.

The most significant events, however, are occurring in the middle of the pack, where New York, Detroit and Atlanta are battling to avoid a tough first-round matchup and put off a possible meeting with the Bulls as long as possible.

Chicago has locked up another Central Division title and Miami appears headed for the Atlantic Division championship, giving those teams the top seeds in the Eastern playoffs. After that, things get interesting.

New York (53-22) held on to the critical No. 3 seed Saturday night with a 102-97 victory over Atlanta (51-24), which dropped back to the fifth spot behind Detroit. The Pistons (51-23) have a half-game lead for No. 4 with two weeks left in the regular season.

What does all this mean? The team that ends up third gets a couple of key advantages in the playoffs: home-court advantage in the first round and the chance to delay a meeting with the Bulls until the conference finals.

The No. 4 seed gets home court in the first round, but faces a meeting against the fifth seed in a best-of-5 series. Right now, that would match the Pistons against the Hawks, meaning one of those teams would be eliminated in the first round — an unfair fate considering they began Sunday's play with the sixth- and seventh-best records in the NBA.

Maybe that's why the Hawks were so downcast after losing to the Knicks, only the fifth defeat at the Omni for Atlanta this season. With only seven games remaining, the Hawks face an uphill battle to bring the opening two games of the playoffs to their home court.

"I don't know what to say about it," Dikembe Mutombo said. "This was a very big test for us, and we just couldn't get anything done down the stretch."

The Hawks can take some solace in their remaining games. Atlanta has an easier schedule than the Knicks or the Pistons, providing a glimmer of hope that No. 3 is still within reach.

UI students courageous enough to come out at peace in Iowa City

By Chris Gardner
The Daily Iowan

With a sleek black dress and red hair, Mercedes struts into room. Knowing onlookers recognize her true identity, she doesn't bother her stride.

As she walks through the halls of the Union, confidence radiates with every step, as she denies even a glance of acknowledgment to those who can tell she really is a man.

"I wanted some kind of change in the law-school decor that would represent the diversity of the school," Ralston said.

Ralston formed a student group, Students Making Artful Change (SMAC), with fellow third-year student Jennifer Pellant. In January, SMAC collected 150 signatures of law students on a petition supported by redecorating the second floor to reflect more diversity. The current criteria for the selection of the portrait subjects is years of service to the law-school community. Pellant said because of the historically hierarchical nature of law schools, women and mi
