Des Moines businessman, Iowa State student, Charles City surgeon named to Board of Regents

> By Penny Tapp The Daily Iowan

The board that raises tuition for UI students and approves campus construction projects has three new members - including a student.

The new appointees to the Iowa

State University; David Fisher, a businessman in Des Moines; and Clarkson Kelly, a general surgeon practicing in Charles City.

They will replace three members whose terms of office have ended: Thomas Dorr from Marcus, John Tyrrell from Manchester and state Board of Regents, who are Aileen Mahood, the former student scheduled to start work May 1, are: representative. Members are nomi-Lisa Aharens, a freshman at Iowa nated by Gov. Terry Branstad and are confirmed by the Iowa Senate.

The Board of Regents directs the actions of several Iowa institutions, including the UI, Iowa State University and the University of Northern Iowa. The regents are set to consider an increase in the UI's room and board rates later this

Two years ago, Fisher was nominated but rejected by the Senate because of controversy over his business practices.

Critics were concerned about Board of Regents Fisher's ties to a failed Des Moines

"Most of the objections were because he'd been a director of a financial institution which failed."

Regent Roger Lande on David Fisher, appointed Tuesday to the lowa state savings and loan that had Fisher on its board of directors. He settled a lawsuit filed by federal regulators over that failure.

"Most of the objections were because he'd been a director of a financial institution which failed," Regent Roger Lande said. "It was 'much ado about nothing,' as everything that had happened was long before he was the director."

Fisher, an alumnus of the UI law school, has given workshops to UI business students and has helped students get connections.

National fraternities put clamp on alcohol

By Will Valet The Daily Iowan

At least two UI fraternities are trying to say goodbye to the Greek community's "Animal House" image - and hope to drag other houses with them.

No more beer slides or alcoholladen parties is the goal of the Sigma Nu and Phi Delta Theta houses, who plan to ban alcohol from within their walls by the year

National fraternity organizations Sigma Nu and Phi Delta titled "Project 2000." Though house members are unsure what the details of the project will be, it will prevent any members from consuming alcohol within the house. Members will not be banned from alcohol consumption outside of

Although joining a fraternity has the reputation as an opportunity to consume alcohol more frequently, Project 2000 fraternity members are optimistic their enrollment numbers will not be affected by the new alcohol-free policy.

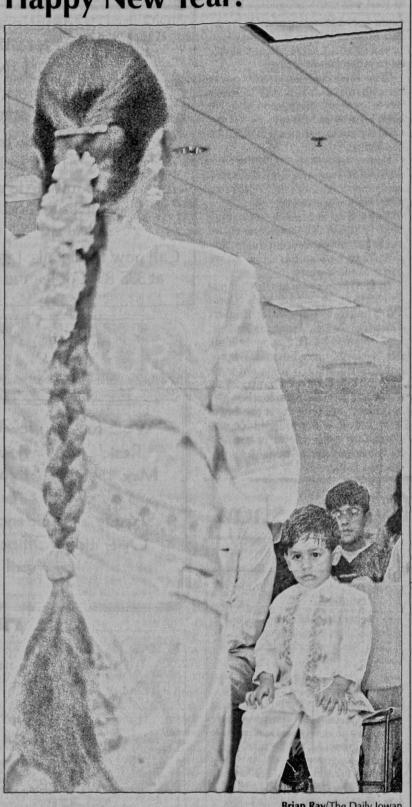

The biggest change will be in the type of people who join fraternity not in the numbers, said UI sophomore Tom Chiesa, recruitment chairperson for Sigma Nu.

"Project 2000 will probably give us a different group of people, people more oriented to the brotherhood aspect of fraternities," Chiesa said. "But I don't think our numbers will decline because of it. There are more aspects to being in a fraternity than partying all the

The alcohol-free policy will not go into effect until the millennium because members have to get used to the idea, UI junior and UI Sigma

COGS members ready for officer elections

Voting to be held for first full-term officers this week

> By Brendan Brown The Daily Iowan

With its one-year anniversary rapidly approaching, the Campaign to Organize Graduate Students (COGS) is preparing for the election of its first contingency of full-term officers.

Voting for officers will be held Thursday and Friday from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. at the COGS office, 114% E. Washington St. Only union members are eligible to vote, but UI graduate employees are free to join the ion at any time.

COGS is comprised of 570 dues-paying embers out of the 2,600 UI graduate employees who comprise the bargaining unit the union represents. On March 1, COGS finalized its first-ever contract with the UI, which provided all graduate employees with a new health-care plan and salary increases, among other benefits.

COGS members said the organization has been bolstered by ratification of the contract, which proved the union's worth and helped increase membership.

The promises of the campaign have been realized," COGS Co-President Leslie Taylor said. "When we were campaigning, we said if we were an organized force we COGS Membership could negotiate for health care and we proved that to be true.

Federal law mandates that unions involved in negotiations with management must represent everyone within their bargaining unit, and not just union members. The contract negotiated by COGS with the UI benefits all 2,600 graduate employees. Since Iowa is a right-to-work state, COGS is not allowed to negotiate provisions requiring all members of the bargaining unit to pay a portion of dues into contracts.

Not all graduate employees take part in COGS. Matthew Bognar, a statistics teaching assistant, said while COGS has positive attributes, he finds the payment of dues to be a cause for concern. "I don't necessarily agree with the fact they charge for membership," he said. "They have so many members on campus, I'd like to see where that money goes before I'd consider joining."

Derek Kang, a research assistant for the Graduate Program in Hospital and Health Administration, said COGS's short-term goals could have adverse long-term effects.

"I do give them credit for providing information about what COGS does," he said. "But I don't feel like many of the issues they are addressing concern me. My biggest concern with COGS is that seeking higher salaries and higher benefits that are all going to cost the university money are going to decrease the number of graduate positions the university offers."

COGS officially arrived at the UI on April 16, 1996, when the bargaining unit voted in favor of union representation, which had been voted down in 1993. In accordance with Iowa law, the UI was then required to recognize COGS.

We've seen a big effect since the contract went through," elections committee member Debby Herman said. "That made it real to people what the union is and what we're working for. Now that we have a contract, people see (the union) is not a fluke; it's not going to go away."

Final episode of Fox's 'Martin' to air May 1

NEW YORK (AP) - After a troubled year for star Martin Lawrence, the television show "Martin" is calling it quits.

Lawrence said Monday he wanted to concentrate on movies. His situation comedy will end with a one-hour special on Fox on Thursday, May 1.

"After five years with the series,

I feel it's time to move on,' said Lawrence, who starred in the movies "You So Crazy" and "Bad Boys."

Lawrence has been in the news for more than his acting Lawrence recently. He was arrested in March after allegedly punching a man in a Los Angeles restaurant and was arrested last summer after a loaded gun was found in his suit-

In December, former co-star Tisha Campbell sued Lawrence, claiming he sexually harassed and sexually battered her, and left the show for a time.

Musicians George Clinton and Lou Rawls, boxer Thomas Hearns and basketball player Lisa Leslie will appear on the last show, where Lawrence and his wife leave Detroit for a new life in Los Ange-

TV to poll parents on ratings system

LAS VEGAS (AP) - The TV industry will ask parents whether major changes should be made to the 3-month-old ratings system, Jack Valenti, the executive who oversaw its creation, said Monday.

Ranging from "TV-G" for all audiences to "TV-MA," mature audiences only, the voluntary ratings have been under a barrage of criticism from lawmakers and children's advocacy groups for not providing parents with enough detailed information about shows' , violent and language con tent.

Valenti, who also is president of the Motion Picture Association of America, made his remarks in an interview at the National Association of Broadcasters convention

Public Opinion Strategies and pollster Peter Hart will jointly interview more than 1,000 randomly selected parents beginning next month.

But Valenti wouldn't say what results would trigger major changes to the six-tier, age-based ratings that went into effect Jan.

MacDowell joins in protest of pipeline through town

FRENCHTOWN, Mont. (AP) Andie MacDowell and 300 neighbors jammed a public hearing to protest plans to run an oil and gas pipeline through their pristine Ninemile Valley community.

MacDowell, known locally by her real name, Rose Qualley, said at Monday's hearing it was "diffi-cult to comprehend how you could even contemplate" running the pipeline over a mountain pass inaccessible for six to eight months each year, even by snow-

A leak could go undetected for all of those months, the actress said. And that does not consider the 91 streams and creeks to be crossed in the Ninemile, or the risk to habitat for wolves, grizzly bears and bald eagles.

Yellowstone Pipe Line executives say they will use the power of eminent domain - condemnation of land - if private landowners refuse to allow the pipeline to cross their property. The line is planned from refineries in Billings to Moses Lake, Wash.

10-screen complex to expand variety at local movie theaters

By Greg Kirschling The Daily Iowan

The smash hit "Scream" opened in the Iowa City area two months after the rest of the country already had seen it.

Next spring, the opening of the area's largest movie theater will prevent the "Scream" problem from ever striking again.

The Coral Ridge 10, a 10-screen movie complex located in the new Coral Ridge Mall, is expected to open in March 1998. The mall will be located on the 90-acre plot surrounded by Highway 6, Interstate 80 and Highway 965.

"When you add more movie theaters, you're obviously going to get more movies," Iowa City-Coralville theater manager Kim Davis said. "This is just going to spread it out a little more.

The extra screens will help solve problems with booking movies such as "Scream" and "Spitfire Grill," which both opened in the Iowa City area weeks or months after their national release date, Davis said.

"The Bijou has always catered to an audience that supports it. We've been loyal to them, and they've been loyal to us. If the time for concern comes, then I'll be concerned."

Bijou board member and UI junior Bill Siegel, on the effects of the Coral Ridge 10

Other details are more sketchy. Arthur Stein Jr., general manager of the Central States Theater Corporation (which owns the four theaters currently in the Iowa City-Coralville area), is unsure how Coral Ridge 10 will affect the other theaters, although he said there are no plans to close an existing theater in order to make room for the new

Stein said he could not divulge either the cost of the project or the number of people it will employ, but he did say the new theater would

"Ticket prices will be whatever ticket prices are in the whole of Iowa City. There's no change planned at the moment," Stein said. "That doesn't mean a year from now that'll hold true, but at the moment there's no plan to

Stein also said the additional screens will allow planners to bring the kind of independent fare we see only occasionally at the Campus Theaters, and Sara Ricketts, Student Video Productions member and UI junior, said more independent films are just what this area

"A lot of the movies we get here are too mainstream. 'Albino Alligator' is never going to play here, and we need to get movies that aren't like 'Tin Cup,' " Ricketts said. are "excited," according to Davis. "More screens will let Iowa City be more of a venue for a variety of

"The Bijou has always catered to an audience that supports it. We've been loyal to them, and they've been loyal to us," Siegel said. "If the time for concern comes, then I'll be concerned.

Some, like Ricketts, said they wonder if students and residents can support 23 theaters in the area. But Davis is optimistic.

"Iowa City is a good moviegoing town. It'll just take awhile to figure out what plays well out there and over here," he said. "I'm sure we can make it work." In fact, employees at the Campus

Theatres, Old Capitol Mall; Coral IV Theatres, Coralville; Englert Theatre, 221 E. Washington St.; and Cinemas I & II, Sycamore Mall, Kevin von Behren, assistant manager of the Englert Theatre, said "Usually we tend to get the down-

By Megan Porter The Daily Iowan

Beware, Barbara Walters. The UI School of Journalism and Mass Communication is invading your turf with the new, student-produced television show "Hawkeye News."

The concept for "Hawkeye News" began with UI junior Randy Kouba, who had dreams of creating his own UI-based TV news show. After lobbying several professors, Kouba found one individual - UI electronic journalism workshop teacher Doug Alliare - who was willing to help out. Allaire agreed to structure his class around producing "Hawkeye News," but chose not to get involved with the show's content, he said. "I only give the students feedback on the project," Allaire said. "They are what makes it go. You need people with high energy who keep coming back week after week."

While "Hawkeye News" proved to news program. be a personal victory for Kouba, the show proved to be a creative catalyst for UI students, UI junior Jill Roberts said.

"This has been the best learning experience I have ever had at Iowa," Roberts said. "I have learned more about real life from this class than any other I have taken."

"Hawkeye News" is filmed once a week at the Iowa City Public Library, 123 S. Linn St., with the help of equipment from Iowa Public

UI junior Jill Roberts anchors this week's edition of "Hawkeye News," the UI's only student-run Access. The show, which is anchored by two students weekly, contains six two-minute news packages during its half-hour time slot.

Subjects for the show are very diverse," Roberts said. "This week I did my stories on the Women's Resource Action Center spaghetti dinner and pet health."

After being filmed Monday evening, the show is edited throughout Tuesday by students in the class.

"The students took workshops at Iowa Public Access to be able to produce every aspect of this show," Allaire said. "This is what makes 'Hawkeye News' look like a welldone, regular TV news show."

After being edited, the final product is returned to Iowa Public Television and Iowa Public Access ready to air. "Hawkeye News" can be seen on Channel 2 Tuesdays at 10:30 a.m. and Thursdays at noon. UITV also broadcasts the news Wednesdays at 4:30 p.m. and Fridays at 9 p.m.

On the other side is Cabrini Green, one of Chicago's reputed housing projects, famed for the film "Candyman" and the recent trauma suffered by Girl X.

The train track represents more than transportation. I compare Chicago, considered to be one of the most segregated cities in the United States, to apartheid South Africa. The divisions between black and white, wealth and poverty, haves and have-nots, only continue to widen. That's nothing new. And neither is the rage that accompanies that

Hours of confusion later, I ponder the meaning of such rage and South Africans drift back into their daily patterns. I walk, stumbling and in shock, feeling impotent, observing but not understanding.

I got used to South Africa the same way I got used to Chicago. It's just the way things are. Apathy was easy. Living without challenging such conditions became my unconscious code.

But the shock hit me when I returned to the United States. In South Africa, I had lived on the Cape Flats, an area of Cape Town reputed to have the highest murder rate in the world. But it actually was easier for me to be in South Africa instead of the United States. There, the inequities weren't about me. The racist history wasn't directed toward me. And my personal rage was outside of me. I rode third-class trains and I contemplated

The rise of the 3rd sector: Service

n 1831, French statesman and philosopher Alexis de Tocqueville came to America and discovered a revolutionary form of democratic

"If (Americans) want to proclaim a truth or propagate some feeling by the encouragement of a great example, they form an association," he said. He wrote at length about how early Americans formed community organizations to build churches, hospitals and libraries and cared for those who were disadvantaged or in need. It may seem like a normal thing for people to do, but it was in little evidence in Europe at the time. "Nothing," Tocqueville said, deserves attention.'

At the end of this month, former Gen. Colin Powell is heading the Presidential Summit on Volunteerism in Philadelphia. It originally was conceived by George Romney, a former Republican and Harris

Wofford, a former Democratic senator. Thousands of people are volunteering their time to mentor children, build playgrounds, repair inner cities and provide health care and food to the needy. Some socially responsible corporations are donating millions of dollars. Tocqueville would be proud.

Michael Totten

The week preceding Powell's summit is President Clinton's National Service Week, where more than 1 million people will participate at food banks, shelters and schools.

The two conventions couldn't come at a better time. One is touted by a Democratic president, the other by a prominent Republican. But as Powell said, "This is not bipartisan, it is non-partisan." And that's the right answer.

For the past 15 years, community service has been a victim of stupid partisan snipping. During the 1980s, the Reagan and Bush administrations promoted community service, only to be ridiculed by liberals. The Democrats rudely trashed George Bush's "thousand points of light" speech. Not to be outdone, the Republicans attacked and tried to dismantle Clinton's AmeriCorps program, which repays student loans in exchange for community service. Political squabbling over this issue is abating this year, as it should, since community service is profoundly non-ideological.

Community service and non-profit organizations are sometimes called the third sector, after the public sector (government) and the business sector.

Working in the third sector is motivated by a longing for a real sense of community and an understanding of a deep connection between all things. There are positive consequences for both the benefactor and the beneficiary. While the business sector is dominated by profit-seekers, the third sector is nurturing and uplifts the human

Economist Jeremy Rifkin wrote, "The nation's first schools and colleges, its hospitals, social service organizations, fraternal orders, women's clubs, youth organizations, conservation and environmental protection groups, animal welfare organizations, orchestras, art galleries, libraries, museums, civic associations, community development organizations, neighborhood advisory councils, volunteer fire departments and civilian security patrols are all creatures of the third sector." Its strength should not be underestimated. There are currently 1.4 million non-profit organizations in the United States, more than in any other country. Many economists are arguing that in the coming years, the third sector will be the single largest sponge that absorbs workers displaced by corporate downsizing and emerging technology. It currently is growing at twice the rate of the business sector and already accounts for 9 percent of the nation's full-time paid employment. On top of the full-time employees, Americans volunteer more than 20 billion hours of extra time each year. Collectively, its assets are almost half the size of the federal government's. The third sector is the most socially responsible of the three sectors. Politicians are power-hungry ideologues who are often slow to respond to the needs of their constituents. The business sector, of course, is the least responsible, as its primary reason for existence is profit.

here is a meteoric rise of the third sector all over the globe, and it is a serious force with which to be reckoned. Rifkin wrote "These nascent democratic groups proved a far more effective force in toppling the authoritarian regimes in Eastern Europe and the Soviet Union than traditional resistance groups steeped in political ideology and buttressed by paramilitary campaigns."

While the government shrinks and remains unresponsive and multinational corporations chase cheap labor around the globe, communities will have little choice but to come together and work for themselves. Of the third sector, Tocqueville said, "On its progress depends that of all the others."

This month, Clinton and Powell are leading the way. It is an important moment.

Communications Center story is missing pieces

The article in the April 2 DI about the School of Journalism and Mass Communication moving to Seashore Hall was incomplete. The article did not fully explain the circumstances of the school's move.

The Communications Center, which houses the school and The Daily lowan, is in terrible shape and needs major renovation. Renovating the building is the school's top priority. In order to accomplish this, the school needs to move out of the building during renovation.

Why is the school moving to Seashore Hall this summer? If the DI's reporter had dug a bit deeper, he would have discovered the College of Engineering is undertaking a major construction project. The Engineering Building will fill the entire block and will literally be in the school's backyard. This means bulldozers, cranes, dump trucks and pile drivers. Access to the construction sight will be right next to the school's front door. (The word "repairs" in the story's headline doesn't quite capture this.) The noise, dust, mud and general disruption would make it very difficult for the J-School to carry out its educational mis-

There are about 36,000 square feet of space in the Communications Center, most of it occupied by the School. Finding this much space to relocate the school is difficult. With Schaeffer Hall

Arafat spokesperson Marwan Kanafani accused Netanyahu of having "blood on his hands" after Tuesday's shootings. Arafat himself, speaking before the shooting, blamed the crisis on Arafat, saying said Netanyahu's refusal to suspend settlement building means "he does not want peace."

The Supreme Court removed the last legal challenge to the project Tuesday, rejecting a Jewish land owner's attempt to prevent Israel from confiscating his 140 acres about one-third of the construction

There were conflicting reports about the shooting in Hebron.

Palestinians said the attack was unprovoked, while Israelis insisted it was brought on by Palestinians who sprayed two Jewish seminary students with tear gas as they walked to the Tomb of the Patri- coma, also from a rubber bullet that archs. Both students had tear gas burns, police spokesperson Linda Menuchin said.

The students opened fire with Uzi submachine guns, Hebron police commander Benny Baharon said. One shot hit Assam Rashid Arafeh, 23, in the chest, killing him, Palestinian police and hospital workers said.

Israel Radio reported a police investigation found the students identified as Tomer Deel and Zeev Mok - had acted in self-defense. Police still were investigating whether they shot with the intent

The rioting was the deadliest since September when 80 people died in brawls that deteriorated into gun battles between Palestin ian police and Israeli soldiers.

The Israeli army imposed a curfew on the center of Hebron on Tuesday. In one of the day's few positive signs, Maj. Gen. Uzi Dayan. head of the Israeli army's central command, praised Palestiniar police for working with Israeli troops to control the violence.

The crowds of angry protesters disbanded late Tuesday afternoon Sporadic stone-throwing continued into the evening, when more than 700 people marched in the funeral procession of the first shooting vic-

The body, wrapped in a Palesting ian flag, was carried to the grave by uniformed Palestinian police, who fired a 21-gun salute. The mourner waved Palestinian flags and banners, and shouted down Palestinian Transportation Minister Al Qawasmeh when he tried to speak.

Miami rallies past Nets

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) - Alonzo Mourning had a seasonhigh 35 points and 18 rebounds and the Miami Heat rallied from a 20-point first-half deficit to beat the New Jersey Nets 94-92 Tuesday night.

Tim Hardaway added 26 points as Miami staged its biggest comeback of the season in winning its fifth in a row. The Heat's previous best comeback was from 15 points behind against Golden State on Mar. 19.

The victory, combined with the New York Knicks' loss to Cleveland, reduced Miami's magic number for clinching the Atlantic Division to two.

Kerry Kittles scored 23 points and Kendall Gill 21 as New Jersey tied a season-high by losing its fifth in a row. The loss was also the 52nd of the season for the Nets under new coach John Calipari, tying the number the team had the previous two seasons under Butch Beard. Cavaliers 93, Knicks 73

NEW YORK - Terrell Brandon scored 25 points, Chris Mills and Danny Ferry had 21 each and the Cavaliers pulled into a tie with Washington for the eighth playoff spot in the East. Brandon also had 11 assists, and he outscored both of New York's point guards 25-0.

The Cavs, despite playing without two starters, had runs of 13-0, 9-0 and 9-0 in the second half to turn what had been a tight game into a blowout. Ferry did much of the damage during the runs with three of Cleveland's seven 3-pointers.

It was another humbling loss for the once-fearsome Knicks, who fell for the third time in their last four home games

AUGUSTA, Ga. - Tiger Woods was back home in Florida last week getting in some extra work for the Masters. He tightened up his swing for lose critical iron shots at Augusta National. He dabbled with the putter to prepare himself for those treacherous

During this period of selfanalysis and introspection, Woods found time to play a practice round with his good friend, Mark O'Meara. When the day was done, Woods had dispensed only 59 shots to get around his home course.

"It was actually pretty easy," Woods said with a shrug Tuesday. "I hit some bad shots, yes, out they were only tee shots, so I could salvage them.'

Ho hum, just another day at the course, another 59. And since the subject is Tiger Woods, that begs the obvious question: Can this wondrous 21-year-old, who has been to the Masters twice as an amateur, shoot such a ridiculously low score in his first appear ance as a professional?

You know what? Physically, yes, you can do it," Woods said, earnest rather than mocking. Whether it's realistic or not remains to be seen in tournament play. It all depends on if you're hot and you get all the right breaks."

When it comes to Woods, the der scope of what can and can't be done on the golf course - even a course like Augusta National, which extracted a 78 out of Greg Norman in last year's final round - has broadened considerably.

Woods, less than a year removed from Stanford, arrives at the Masters as one of the favorites. It's a role that suits him just fine, even though most Augusta experts seem convinced that the balance between talent and experience leans considerably toward the latter.

Norman, Faldo return to Augusta

By Ron Sirak Associated Press

AUGUSTA, Ga. - There is a spot right at the bend in Amen Corner where the voice of Bobby Jones can almost be heard whispering through the Georgia pines, gently drawling the magic moments from Masters past.

Sarazen, Snead, Hogan, Nicklaus and Palmer. And yes, Nick Faldo and Greg Norman. Part of the intrigue of Augusta is the unending ability of the Masters to top itself.

The gentle hill behind the 12th tee was one of Jones' favorite spots on Augusta, a place from which he could observe Nos. 11, 12 and 13 - the dangerous stretch known as Amen Corner.

From that spot, against a spectacular backdrop of flowering azaleas and dogwoods, history has unfolded with alarming regularity.

Last year, Faldo was one-stroke down going to No. 11, two up walking off the 12th green and hit the best shot of the day - a 228-yard 2-iron that turned the pressure knob up a few units - on No. 13.

What unfolded in that stretch of holes was what Jones had in mind when he created this course and this tournament more than 60 years ago.

"Last year was the worst round of my life," Norman said Tuesday about Sunday at the 1996 Masters. "I don't want to keep thinking about it," he said. "The 11th, 12th and 13th - I want to flush them out of my mind."

While Norman may be able to push those holes out of his mind, they will never be erased from the memories of golf fans. Last year's Masters was one for the books.

When Ben Crenshaw won in 1995 just days after serving as pallbearer for Harvey Penick, his lifelong teacher, it seemed as if the Masters could do nothing to top that for pure drama and raw

A mere year later Faldo fashioned major championship history and Norman endured the agony of squandering a six-stroke lead, the largest ever lost in a major.

'I played the golf course the way you intend to play it," Faldo said Tuesday.

"It's as good as anything I've done." Faldo and Norman come in to this year's Masters dragging with them the baggage of last year's final round, a Sunday pairing that will forever link them in golf history.

Faldo has dealt with his return to Augusta in his usual, methodical way. "I came up Sunday, which is good, to that.

get everything organized," Faldo said. Before that he practiced at his home course at Lake Nona in Orlando, Fla., where he had the greenskeeper shave : first round last year. Mark the putting green to Augusta speed.
