House pulls plug on free Net access

One state legislator urges UI students to fight as the bill returns to the Senate

By Kevin Doyle
The Daily Iowan

Legislators passed the Internet Bill Thursday, but one Iowa legislator said UI students still can fight to save their free on-line access.

In a 58-36 vote, the Iowa House of Representatives passed the bill and added an amendment that would allow dormitory residents to keep free service. But for off-campus students, free service through the UI still could come to an end, if the Senate passes the amended bill.

Students should get as political as local phone companies, who have lobbied for the legislation, said Rep. Minnette Doderer, D-Iowa City, who voted against the bill.

"Students, faculty and administration have a shot to take it off the bill," Doderer said. "They have to call their hometown legislators and their folks need to do it, too. This will affect their folks or (students) if they're paying for it."

The Iowa Senate passed the bill 35-14 on March 25. If the amended bill passes the Senate and is approved by Gov. Terry Branstad, students at the UI, Iowa State University and the University of Northern Iowa would lose free on-line services currently provided by the Iowa Communications Network.

With the amendment, students living off-campus would have to either subscribe through a private service or travel to one of the campus' 23 Instructional Technology Centers.

"(The amendment) will not make everyone pay," Rep. Mary Mascher, D-Iowa City, said.

"They will only charge people off-campus on top of the $35 computing fee students already pay."

Mascher, who also voted against the bill, said students who live off-campus are being penalized.

"The state is pulling the rug out from underneath people," Mascher said. "We're taking a real step backward. The sad part about it is that we've allowed students access off-campus for so long, and now we're taking it away."

UI senior Stacey Sexton said she doesn't plan to complain to leg-

"We would be the only institution of higher education to be denied the right to dial-up access. It's ludicrous."

Tolling the Information Superhighway

If the bill is passed UI students, faculty and administration would lose these services from everywhere at the UI except one of the 23 UI Instructional Technology Centers — unless they pay for it:

- 1) e-mail
- 2) ability to check grades, check UI bill, register and find student employment on-line
- 3) World Wide Web access
- 4) File Transfer Protocol, a program used to transfer files from one computer to another

If UI students want to fight the bill, Rep. Minnette Doderer, D-Iowa City, recommends taking these steps:

- 1) Call hometown legislators and complain.
- 2) Have parents call hometown legislators and complain.

Pow Wow highlights dancing, celebration

by Scott Adams

By Joseph Leavitt
The Daily Iowan

Hundreds of years ago, American Plains Indians had to trample down tall blades of prairie grass before they could hold formal outdoor celebrations.

This act of preparation eventually grew into its own dance, full of stomping, that will be carried on by the tribes' descendants this weekend at the UI.

An expected 5,000 dancers, singers and students are planning to celebrate and compete for prize money at the annual UI Pow Wow, which is scheduled to run from today to Sunday in the Recreation building.

Fourth-year urology resident Orrenzo Synder, who was taught to be a grass dancer, said Native American dancing becomes more about the community than an individual.

"You realize that you are dancing for your family and the elders. For ones who are sick, and those who cannot dance themselves. They feel your spirit dancing, and it helps to heal their feelings," Orrenzo said.

"Pow wow" is a general term for a social gathering involving dancing and celebration, UI Pow Wow coordinator Sheryl Snyder said. The term originally referred to curing ceremonies, but since has been used to describe any large Native American dance competition and symbolizes birth and beginning. Many tribes have their own specific names for the event, she said.

The event is sponsored by the UI American Indian Student Association.

Beanie Babies become latest craze in toy market

By Renee Bovy
The Daily Iowan

Beanie Babies are not just for cuddling anymore.

The inexpensive animals are fast becoming a collector's item, and Iowa City stores barely can keep their beanie shelves stocked. The styles of dolls that have been retired have reached values of up to $1,000.

University Book Store employee Janelle Rhodes, who described the demand for the dolls as "absolutely crazy," said the store has sold more than 10,000 Beanie Babies since October, and 2,300 in March alone. Mark Gauger, co-owner of Fun Zone toys, 105 S. Dubuque St., said his store just received a large shipment of the soft critters and they have been selling like wildfire.

After a customer bought 161 dolls in one visit and another bought 30, the store limited purchases to six at a time.

The Ty Company began making Beanie Babies in 1993, and initially retired the dolls that were not selling as well to make new ones, Gauger said. Now these retired dolls have increased dramatically in value, and Ty plans to continue retiring Beanie Babies.

Alumni give record contributions in '96

By Jeff Clayton
The Daily Iowan

Aided by gifts toward a scholarship celebrating Iowa's sesquicentennial, the UI Foundation pulled in a record amount of $71.6 million last year from alumni.

The amount of outright money from 15,077 contributors jumped to $42.5 million, an increase of $5 million from the previous year, UI Foundation President Darrell Wyrick said.

The remaining $29.1 million came from future pledges and bequests — almost 50 percent more than in 1996.

"We made a special effort to create a scholarship for the sesquicentennial," said Susan Shullaw, UI Foundation Director of Annual Gift Programs. "Alumni want to provide money to student aid. We had a couple of major gifts that came in."

Shullaw said UI President Mary Sue Coleman has been an asset to fund-raising efforts.

"We're lucky to have a president as public and enthusiastic as Mary Sue Coleman. She met with alumni all over the country; that does make a difference."

Telefund Supervisor and UI senior Jennifer Landau agreed that Coleman's visibility has helped.

"I think people are more receptive," Landau said. "People (are) realizing that higher education is state-supported and not state-assisted. We're not calling because we want money — we're calling because we need it."

Telefund Supervisor and UI senior Jennifer Landau

Shullaw said the foundation's fund-raising efforts will continue to bring improvement to the UI — and its own facilities.

After its completion in 1997, the foundation will move to the Levitt Building from their current space in the Art Building.

"Art will expand into (the foundation's) part of the building," Shullaw said. This will allow art currently in storage to be displayed.

The bottom three floors of the Levitt Building will house the offices of the Iowa Foundation and the Alumni Association.

"The top floor will be public space like the IMU for alumni reunions and board meetings," Shullaw said. "It's spacing we don't have in the current building."

Shullaw said a new fund-raising effort for additions and renovations at the Engineering Building has been successful. The official groundbreaking will be in May.

In a smaller effort for the current year, the foundation also will aid in revamping the Bird Hall at the Museum of Natural History.

Steel drums to sound at Burge

By Emily Shack
The Daily Iowan

The sounds of oil drums pounded into musical instruments, originally conceived in dusty Caribbean streets, will roll into snowy Iowa City today with the performance of River City Steel.

The UI's steel drum class — one of only two school-based steel drum bands in the state — is scheduled to bring their soulful Calypso melodies to Burge Residence Hall at 4:30 p.m.

"People should get ready to hear new sounds, new timbres they haven't heard before," the band's director, UI Assistant Professor of music T.M. Scruggs, said. "The River City Steel will play infectious dance music that should make you get up and move."

Much of the music students play in class is called soca, a combination of soul and Calypso music, Scruggs said. They play also some Latin songs, ska and a ballad composed by Scruggs.

"The steel pan ensemble is the only ensemble of folk, non-classical music at the university," UI junior Jeremy Rosenfeld said. "It's great to be able to play Trinidadian, Calypso and Soca music."

The class, which meets Wednesday nights, is enjoyable because of the upbeat music and relaxed atmosphere, Rosenfeld said.

"Most of the time, I'm just dancing in class," he said. "It's super fun, and I love those slick Latin tunes we play."

Scruggs, an ethnomusicologist, studies a variety of music except for classical European. He said he is most concerned with the meaning of the notes and the cultural aspect of the music.

"I have one foot in music and one foot in anthropology," Scruggs said. "Then I try to walk."

Soundgarden calls it quits

SEATTLE (AP) — One of the loudest and best-selling rock groups of the decade has disbanded quietly, as the members of Soundgarden announced their breakup in a brief statement posted on the Internet.

"After 12 years, the members of Soundgarden have amicably and mutually decided to disband to pursue other interests," said the statement, issued Wednesday. "There is no word at this time on any of the members' future plans."

Diana Baron, a publicist for A&M Records, said none of the four members — principal songwriter and lead singer Chris Cornell, 32, guitarist Kim Thayil, 36, bassist Ben Shepherd, 28, and drummer Matt Cameron, 34 — would comment.

Cornell

Soundgarden, known for a thunderous, brooding instrumental approach, came to prominence in the late 1980s as part of the Seattle rock scene that also spawned Pearl Jam and Nirvana. The group won two Grammy awards and was nominated for six others.

ABC declines to air lesbian cruise ad during 'coming-out' episode

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — A lesbian cruise line says ABC refused to air its ad during an upcoming episode of "Ellen" in which the main character is expected to reveal she is a lesbian.

"It is our position that discussion about same-sex lifestyles is more appropriate in programming," ABC broadcast editor Bob Reynolds said in a fax to Oakland-based Olivia Cruises and Resorts.

Olivia's president, Judy Dlugacz, called the April 30 "Ellen" episode historic, since it will be the first time a show's lead character reveals she or he is gay.

"Here was this incredible opportunity for me to reach a group that often doesn't want to be identified," Dlugacz said.

Dlugacz still plans to film her 15-second ad featuring two women embracing on a cruise ship. Her company is pursuing air time on ABC affiliates in New York, Los Angeles, Chicago, San Francisco, Houston, Dallas, Miami and Seattle.

"Needless to say, it will cost much more to air the ad in these individual markets than it would have cost to air nationally," said Bob Fitzgerald, spokesperson for TED Inc., which handles advertising for Olivia.

It is the second time in less than a month that sponsors of a gay-related ad have had to shop it to local ABC affiliates after rejection from the network. An anti-discrimination ad by the Human Rights Campaign was rejected because of its controversial nature.

Greg Kirshling MOVIE REVIEW

"Grosse Pointe Blank": ☆☆ out of ☆☆☆

Starring: John Cusack, Minnie Driver
Director: George Armitage
Screenplay: Tom Jankiewicz, Steve Pink and John Cusack

Film's humor draws a blank

Underneath the convoluted blood and yuks of "Grosse Pointe Blank" lies the skeleton of an interesting idea. Suppose someone staged a 10-year high-school reunion for all the jocks, burnouts and princesses of the still-popular '80s high-school Brat Pack movies.

While the film doesn't bring back familiar faces like Jeff Spicoli or "The Breakfast Club," sometimes it seems to address the collective dweeb generation of the movies with a "Where are you now?" Centered around a reunion for the Class of '86 in Grosse Pointe, the film and its small, suburban, rock 'n' roll, minimart subtlety feel touched by John Hughes.

Wait a minute, though. This is the '90s, the Tarantino age, so the main character here isn't just anybody. John Cusack (a veteran of teen cinema classics such as "Better Off Dead" and "Say Anything...") is Martin Blank, a hitman as unflinching as "Pulp Fiction" 's Jules and Vincent and as angst-ridden as a young Hughes protagonist, who finds killing people for money isn't satisfying him anymore.

Blank hasn't had any contact with his hometown for all 10 years. He returns in hope of fulfillment and finds apparently no one has changed; the reunion is populated with the same weirdos, drunks, dopes and jocks. And in the big unintentional hilarity of the movie, Martin looks at this bland bunch and somehow decides he wants something that resembles their comparatively normal lifestyle — no more lone gunman.

The movie never really is concerned with this, though. Of course, life won't really be so bad for Martin if he can make it out of Michigan with his old squeeze Debi (Minnie Driver, "Circle of Friends"). But she is mad because they haven't spoken since he ditched her on prom night to go join the Army. (But if he left to go on to become an assassin right before the prom, how did he graduate, since presumably prom fell before the graduation ceremony? Anyway ...) Plus, Martin still has to make time for an assassination while he's in town, although this piece of the plot is shoddily shoved into the movie's last 15 minutes, when the movie turns into a jokefest/bloodbath.

Actually, it's only in the surprisingly violent moments at the end when "Blank" starts gathering the complications it needs for the mania of its black comedy. The dark humor just doesn't work very often because director George Armitage fails to meld the Hughes and Tarantino aspects of the story into one. Martin romances Debi while secretly dodging both the clichéd government guys on his tail and his assassin rivals (including Dan Aykroyd, who restrains his usual overacting here to give a fairly spry performance). But the dumb shootouts (like one in a convenience store) and slackly-written courtship scenes (like one in a radio station) belong in different movies, up until the moment near the end when Debi finds out what Martin has been up to for the last 10 years. If Debi had found out earlier, or if Martin had been under more pressure, the movie probably would have been edgier, funnier and better.

Cusack's performance is the only element of the movie that feels properly balanced. The script (which he co-wrote) is wise not to sugarcoat Martin's job (although it makes a few feeble attempts to justify it), because it's better to leave it up to the likable Cusack to pump the necessary sympathy into the character. Thankfully, he wisely checks his nice-guy qualities with an appropriate amount of cool cynicism.

But despite the efforts of Cusack and feisty, teasing Driver, "Grosse Pointe Blank" 's dark and light comedy jumble just isn't funny enough. Unfortunately, it consistently ignores its most promising implication. Movies in the '80s tended to prove teens couldn't wait to escape their drag of an existence. Now, 10 years later, Martin Blank comes along and literally shoots his way back into the pack. Forget the body count and forget the courtship — tell us about that.

Other Cusack Films

"Better Off Dead" (1985) — In his first lead role, Cusack plays the typical '80s movie teenager, ailing mainly because he was dumped by his girlfriend. Don't miss the dancing hamburger, and watch it with director "Savage" Steve Holland's follow-up, "One Crazy Summer," starring Cusack and Demi Moore.

"Eight Men Out" (1988) — Cusack took top billing in the big ensemble of this drama by John Sayles ("Lone Star") about the 1919 White Sox baseball scandal. This quiet, sad movie is lived up to with its cast, and it shows its love for the game as it used to be.

"Say Anything..." (1989) — When Cusack dies, they should write "Lloyd Dobler" on his tombstone. Dobler, the kickboxing, Malibu-driving underachiever who sets his mind on winning the smartest woman in the graduating class, is Cusack's crown achievement — so far.

"The Grifters" (1990) — Co-stars Anjelica Huston and Annette Bening got the Oscar nominations for this dark crime film, meaning Cusack's understated yet hard-nails performance went overlooked.

Impotent Sea Snakes slither into Gunnerz

By Renee Bovy
The Daily Iowan

Gyrating men dressed in leather and lingerie, fire breathers and sadomasochistic stunts backed up by the psychotic pulse of glaring guitars will be shocking Iowa City this weekend.

The Impotent Sea Snakes, a band known for its outrageous stage show, is set to perform at Gunnerz, 123 E. Washington St., Sunday night at 9. Iowa City band Scrid will open the night of in-your-face sex, divas and rock 'n' roll.

The Impotent Sea Snakes — consisting of 17 musicians, drag queens, jugglers and fire breathers — originated in Florida and began sowing their corrupt seeds in the late '80s.

Gunnerz office manager Dre Green said the Impotent Sea Snakes are an audience-orientated band and go to extremes to get the crowd involved.

Publicity Photo

The Impotent Sea Snakes — a band that includes drag queens, firebreathers and jugglers — will play at Gunnerz, 123 E. Washington St., on Sunday at 9 p.m.

"The Impotent Sea Snakes cater to what the audience wants," Green said. "If they're looking for a crazy show, there going to get it."

The Impotent Sea Snakes are currently promoting their controversial new release, God Save the Queen, that contains tracks such as

"Chicks with Dicks," "Kangaroos (Up the Butt)" and "Fur, Leather, Wool, Meat, I Hate You."

Green said when the band played at Gunnerz last semester, it had the crowd going wild as it burned flags, ripped Bibles and tied up a voluptuous woman and whipped her with fire while cutting her steal underwear off with a circular saw.

Green said the band's openly explicit sexuality is making a freedom of sexuality statement. She said although the performers usually wear very little, Iowa law will not allow complete nudity in an establishment that serves alcohol.

"They can wear g-strings, pasties or even see-thru cellophane, but they can't be completely naked," Green said.

Iowa City resident Lisa Swiss said the Impotent Sea Snakes' show is one of the best she has ever seen.

"It's an undescrivable, amazing, good time," Swiss said.

GOMA, Zaire — Rebel leader Laurent Kabila gave Zaire's president an ultimatum Thursday — three days to resign and retreat to his home village — and announced that rebels have taken the country's second-largest city.

Although fighting continued early Thursday on the outskirts of Lubumbashi, Kabila declared a three-day "pause" in his military advance to await a call from the capital indicating President Mobutu Sese Seko will resign.

"In three days, if we will not get good news from Kinshasa of his willingness to depart to the north, then we will be forced to continue the military advance," Kabila told reporters at a news conference at his Goma headquarters.

Arafat agrees to help Israel prevent suicide attacks

By Hilary Appelman
Associated Press

JERUSALEM — Raising hopes for an end to the deadly Mideast impasse, Palestinian police helped Israel crack a cell of the Islamic militant group Hamas on Thursday and officials said Yasser Arafat had pledged to work with Israel to stop suicide bombings.

Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu credited the Palestinians for helping to find the body of a missing Israeli soldier, and said the Hamas cell that killed him also was responsible for at least another 13 deaths, including a March 21 suicide bombing in a Tel Aviv cafe that killed three women.

"Full cooperation, both in prevention of violent demonstrations and in the war against terror, is still not being carried out, and it is important that it should be carried out."

Arafat promised to help stop such bombings this week in a meeting with the head of Israel's Shin Bet security agency, Israeli and Palestinian officials said Thursday.

The meeting was the first high-level contact between Israel and the Palestinians since Israel broke ground three weeks ago for a new Jewish neighborhood in the part of Jerusalem claimed by the Palestinians. It raised hopes that the daily — and deadly — clashes in the West Bank could end.

But in the town of Hebron on Thursday, hundreds of Palestinians threw stones and firebombs at Israeli troops who responded with rubber bullets, injuring seven people.

The body of 20-year-old Sgt.

Sharon Edri was discovered Thursday in the village of Zurif, outside Hebron. The army said he was killed by Hamas. Residents said Israeli troops arrested more than 20 villagers.

Netanyahu, speaking from The Hague, Netherlands, said the Palestinians' arrest of two members of the Hamas cell had led them to Edri, who the army said was shot and killed Sept. 9 while hitchhiking from his army base.

"I wish to make it clear that in the last part of this operation we received very specific support from the Palestinian Authority," said Netanyahu, who has accused Arafat of having tacitly approved attacks against Israel.

But he added: "Full cooperation, both in prevention of violent demonstrations and in the war against terror, is still not being carried out, and it is important that it should be carried out."

Arafat spokesperson Marwan Kanafani said the cooperation in locating Edri's body was not a sign that political or security cooperation had resumed.

"It was a purely humanitarian concern," he said.

Three top Palestinian officials were meeting Thursday and today with U.S. officials in Washington. The Palestinians want U.S. assurance that Israel will stop building settlements in Jerusalem and the West Bank pending a final peace agreement, something Netanyahu has refused to consider.

A meeting between Netanyahu and President Clinton earlier this week failed to produce tangible movement toward restarting the stalled peace talks.

"What we need is intervention," one of the officials, Hanan Ashrawi, said Thursday. "The U.S. government must intervene in these illegal acts."

The Palestinians want to establish a capital in parts of Jerusalem captured by Israel in the 1967 Mideast War, while Israel insists the city remain united under Israeli sovereignty.

GOMA, Zaire — Rebel leader Laurent Kabila gave Zaire's president an ultimatum Thursday — three days to resign and retreat to his home village — and announced that rebels have taken the country's second-largest city.

Although fighting continued early Thursday on the outskirts of Lubumbashi, Kabila declared a three-day "pause" in his military advance to await a call from the capital indicating President Mobutu Sese Seko will resign.

"In three days, if we will not get good news from Kinshasa of his willingness to depart to the north, then we will be forced to continue the military advance," Kabila told reporters at a news conference at his Goma headquarters.

The rebel leader, who has captured one-third of Zaire since September, refused to elaborate on his ultimatum, saying only: "The loser is him if he doesn't take our advice."

The new prime minister, Gen. Likulia Bolongo, went to the presidential palace in Kinshasa Thursday in full military uniform to meet with Mobutu, but made no comments to reporters. Likulia also planned to meet later in the day with the U.S. ambassador, Daniel Simpson.

Kinshasa, in western Zaire, is the only major city still under Mobutu's control. And his hold on power seemed to crumble further Wednesday, after his decision to oust popular opposition leader Etienne Tshisekedi from the prime minister post sparked riots in the capital.

The United States has urged Mobutu, 66 and ill with prostate cancer, to make way for a democratic government. White House spokesperson Mike McCurry on Wednesday called Mobutu's three-decade dictatorship "a creature of history."

Kabila, meeting with journalists early Thursday in the Goma palace that once belonged to Mobutu, welcomed the U.S. statement.

"Everybody knows that this is the time for Mr. Mobutu to get out of power," Kabila said.

He added that the rebels had no indication Mobutu plans to resign, though Kabila repeated demands he do so before any cease-fire. Mobutu would be allowed to return to his home village, the northern town of Gbadolite, but Kabila has said he would not be permitted a role in politics.

Mobutu named Likulia, a former defense minister and army chief of staff, as prime minister Wednesday. The four-star general immediately promised a crackdown on civil liberties, saying his primary goal was "the restoration of public order."

Likulia also said measures would be taken against the media for any articles that "affected the morale of the military."

'Star Wars: The Politically Correct Special Edition'

I recently finished seeing all three re-released "Star Wars" movies. George Lucas did an admirable job enhancing these films with previously unseen footage. However, he did not improve his three films sufficiently.

The problem is all three films still are much too politically incorrect. Lucas needed to adjust them to fit the political and social standards of the time. After all, we are so much more enlightened now than we were in the late '70s and early '80s. So, in that spirit, here is my politically correct guide to fixing the "Star Wars" trilogy.

1. White-male dominance. Chewbacca takes orders from Han Solo, and Luke Skywalker is master of C-3PO and R2D2. This is clearly enslavement to white males. To redress this injustice, at the end of the trilogy, Chewbacca should join a wookiee liberation movement, and C-3PO and R2D2 should form a droids-rights organization. This certainly would make the trilogy more sensitive to the plight of the oppressed.

2. Disregard for animal rights. This is evident in many scenes throughout the film, but is probably best represented in The Empire Strikes Back, when Luke kills the snow beast with his light saber. Perhaps it should be changed so Luke understands the snow beast means him no real harm, he just has to eat him to satisfy his survival instinct. Of course, if Luke gets eaten, then there goes the rest of the trilogy. Instead, a stuffy little bureaucrat from the Empire should show up the next morning and fine him for a clear violation of the Intergalactic Endangered Species Act.

3. Labor exploitation. This is a serious problem in The Empire Strikes Back. How many underlings does Darth Vader strangle by using the force? Surely these must be violations of Intergalactic Labor Standards. To correct this, the workers for the Empire should be shown meeting with leaders from other unions in an effort to unionize. Perhaps even members of COGS would like to have a small part in the film as union organizers. Just think, we may someday have Stormtroopers UE-Local 96!

4. Glorification of phallic symbols. Two words: light saber.

5. Ignorance of pop psychology. Darth Vader is just too evil; it's as though his evil is his own fault. To soften him up, we need some scenes that show traumatic events in his childhood that led him to the dark side of the force. In fact, his attempt to convert his child, Luke, could be portrayed as an attempt to get in touch with his inner child!

6. Wasted resources. Another problem in the second film: an Imperial Star Destroyer dumps a ton of garbage before it jumps to hyperspace. Hasn't the Empire ever heard of recycling bins?

7. Wasted energy. It's amazing how the pilots of so many ships just lightly jump to hyperspace with no regard to all the fuel they're wasting. To be more sensitive to energy conservation, all spacecraft in the movies should be fitted with bumper stickers that read "Conserve Fuel - Minimize Jumps to Hyperspace."

There are signs the producers of "Star Wars" have been catching on to the politics of our time. While passing a store a few weeks ago, I noticed the window was filled with "Star Wars" paraphernalia. Among other things, one could buy a Stormtrooper action figure that was outfitted with a "Crowd Control Device."

But Lucas must go farther. If he decides to re-release the "Star Wars" trilogy again in another 20 years, then he should sanitize his films by eliminating the politically offensive content. If he doesn't, then he's probably headed for trouble.

Advising system needs serious work

It's that time of year again. Registration for summer and fall classes is fast approaching, and the same old problems are surfacing. The academic advising system at the UI is not working.

"We hear complaints about advising all the time," UI Student Government President Allison Miller said. "It is something that is constantly coming up in many different aspects."

Complaints range from advisers who give incorrect information (usually resulting in registration in a class that doesn't work toward the major) to advisers who are just too hard to reach.

The fact is that professors already have a large workload apart from student advising, and professional advisers have too many students to be able to give well-informed, personal advice based on a student's unique needs and interests.

According to Lisa Ingram, assistant director of the Academic Advising Center, an academic adviser's goal should be to "help make the students good consumers" by giving them the information they need to make smart decisions.

Ingram also said requesting a change in advisers is a relatively easy process. The Academic Advising Center has a "no-questions-asked policy."

But that is not really the answer. All advisers should be giving the right information, and students should be taking a more proactive role in their education.

Students ultimately are responsible for the classes they select and are, when forced by a bad advising situation, as capable of finding the necessary information as most advisers. The Schedule of Courses, the Liberal Arts Bulletin, the UI Web page, trusted professors, more experienced students and even the Bowman House admissions visitor center all have lots of information about classes and most majors.

Unfortunately, the current system does not allow for student responsibility. Students are supposed to have their schedules approved by their advisers before receiving their registration numbers. Then, if a student wants to drop or add a class, an adviser must sign the add-drop slip.

College students, as adults, should be allowed to assume more responsibility for the classes for which they pay and the education for which they work.

Admittedly, there are some great advisers out there. And there are students who really do rely on their advisers for help and guidance. This is a good thing, and it should be supported in any way possible.

But if advising were made optional, all students could accept more responsibility. Students comfortable in their decisions could stop wasting everyone's time at unneeded and unhelpful advising appointments. Advisers would be less overworked and could therefore be more helpful to students with actual questions or concerns. Those students seeking advice finally would get the personalized assistance they deserve.

With optional academic advising, everyone would win.

Expressing your individual sexuality

"Sometimes the line I walk/it turns out to be straight/other times that line tends to deviate."
- Ani DiFranco

Wednesday night, Ani DiFranco played in Cedar Rapids. The audience there represented a cornucopia of different sexual roles and orientations. If only every place were so diverse, the world would be a much more interesting and healthy place.

The audience ranged from conservative-looking, middle-aged folks to young punks with dyed hair and leather-coat-wearing lesbians. Though the spectrum was clearly well-represented, the audience shared a feeling of bisexuality, or rather, dynamic sexuality.

Ani DiFranco, a neo-folk singer and self-identified "dyke" artist, garnered a strong following from gays and lesbians. However, she did not limit herself to such a narrow definition. She used to have a girlfriend, but now has a boyfriend. She has described, in interviews and her songs, the unrestricted nature of her feelings. She speaks on the universal nature of love, and fell in love with a man this time instead of a woman. Much of her audience disapproved of the change, but she simply followed her heart. She is a strong woman for having courage of her convictions and for being able to identify love in its various forms.

Ambiguous sexuality is not limited to just one musician. Calvin Klein's CK-1 ads portray diverse androgynous sexuality. Last summer, the group Imperial Teen had a single titled "Are you a boy or a girl?," and when asked whether he is gay, straight or bisexual, Marilyn Manson replied that he does not restrict himself to categories.

Social science research supports the healthiness of androgyny. Bem's sex-role research found individuals who had both traditionally masculine and feminine traits had the highest prevalence of mental health.

Ultimately, where will intolerance get us? Recent research by the Rainbow Project Task Force found even in the supposedly liberal Iowa City, 61 percent witnessed and 33 percent experienced anti-gay verbal harassment. Threats of violence and other forms of discrimination and prejudice also had surprisingly high prevalence. Given this treatment, the request for a gay and lesbian student union seems reasonable.

But it shouldn't have to be this way. As human beings, we should challenge ourselves and our attitudes; we should not treat people differently because their plumbing does not happen to match their identity. We should ask if we are unnecessarily restricting the expression of our own identities.

We all need the courage to express our true selves, even if this may not conform to traditional gender roles.

U.S. has a responsibility to Zaire

Laurent Kabila already is behaving as a president-elect waiting for a swearing-in ceremony. The rebel leader of the Alliance of Democratic Forces for the Liberation of the Congo-Zaire has been making steady military advances in Zaire with little resistance from the government forces of President Mobutu Sese Seko.

Like many coup or guerrilla leaders, he has been received with cheers and adulation in the so-called "liberated" areas. Mobutu, on the other hand, has appointed and dismissed a new prime minister, Etienne Tshisekedi, within one week and declared a state of emergency.

The conflict is building as Mobutu prepares for the last hold on power while Kabila sees his dreams of being called the "Father of the Nation" of Zaire being fulfilled. Already he is talking of changing the country's name from Zaire to the Democratic Republic of Congo.

This new "democracy" is being created not through the ballots but by bullets. Under this background, there has not been a clear U.S. policy on the conflict in Zaire. Instead, the Clinton administration has posted combat forces of 2,000 troops ready for any evacuations in Kinshasa. Why this silence? Could it be that the United States has learned from the failure of its peacekeeping efforts in Somalia in 1993 not to enter any conflict without a clear mission?

Or is it because Mobutuism is a creation of the United States, sustained by all U.S. presidents from 1965 to date? Mobutu had the privilege of being entertained in the now-famous Lincoln Bedroom of the White House just before he took over in Zaire!

There are indications that the Mobutu rule is quickly fading into history, but the fact that the world has ignored it is equally - if not more - important.

A military solution will not restore order in Zaire. Taking Eastern Zaire by the rebels is one thing, but the rest of the country is another. Pressure should be put on the Alliance of Democratic Forces to go for the ballots and not bullets in an election supervised by the United Nations. If this is not done, then the rebellion will lead to the disintegration of Zaire into smaller states, a precedent that will create chaos as witnessed in the former Soviet Union and Yugoslavia.

The United States and France (also a long-time supporter of Mobutu) should take a lead in this. After all, the ghost haunting Zaire (Mobutu) is their creation.

The current peace talks in South Africa will not bear much. Kabila is using the Museveni methods of cheating the world - a world he is negotiating and fighting at the same time. He should accept power-sharing and campaign in the proposed July elections.

The United States also should use its newly found ally in Africa, President Yoweri Museveni of Uganda, to put pressure on Kabila to accept a cease-fire. Museveni quickly is becoming a power in East and Central Africa and could be useful in a quick resolution by way of a negotiated settlement between Mobutu and the rebels. Museveni's influence over Kabila was witnessed when he called him for a meeting in South Africa with Nelson Mandela.

It is also possible that Museveni would prefer Kabila in power in Zaire in order to create a Museveni-Kagame-Buyoya-Kabila axis centered around him. Both Kagame and Buyoya are military strongmen in Rwanda and Burundi, and came to power through bullets.

Kabila's dealings with the South Africa's diamond-mining firm, De Beers, is also questionable, and brings his character into suspect as to whose interest he is representing. De Beers controls the world's diamond market, and the conflict in Zaire has greatly affected the market prices. It was therefore not shocking when Kabila made a triumphant tour of the captured diamond areas of Mbuji-Maji in the company of the mining firm's executives. Probably they are his main financiers. Kabila has, in fact, lowered the price of diamonds.

It is the same diamond concern that has made it impossible for Belgium to be actively involved in the efforts of creating peace in Zaire. The Belgium firm Sibeka controls 20 percent of the diamond mining in Zaire.

The situation in Zaire is also a challenge to the reputed negotiation skills of new U.N. Secretary General Kofi Annan and a test to the U.S. Secretary of State.

There is enough time to save Zaire from sinking with Mobutu. The time for peace and free and fair elections is now.

Reader knows the feeling of being an Englishwoman in I.C.

To the Editor:
After reading about the "Trials and tribulations of an Englishwoman" by Penny Tapp, it reminded me when I first moved (straight off the boat) to the states from England 15 years ago.

Two weeks after arriving in Los Angeles, I landed a secretarial job with a CPA firm. I really had no idea there was such a language difference, but soon realized I had a lot to learn.

Within my first week on the job the following are just some of the humorous and embarrassing encounters I had.

I remember the first distinctly. I innocently asked a young male colleague if he had a "rubber" I could use and watched in confusion as he turned a bright shade of red, mumbled and stuttered in embarrassment and reached into his inside jacket pocket. I had meant, of course, an "eraser."

The next incident was equally embarrassing, as I had to request that the same poor guy "knock me up" in the morning" on his way to a business meeting. After he picked himself off the floor, I explained that I really meant I needed him to stop by and pick me up on the way.

Another time, a different guy in the office explained that he liked my "pants." As the word "pants" in England means underwear, I was totally horrified that my trousers must be transparent enough that he could see my underwear, and totally amazed that he would even comment on such a thing.

Last but not least, I remember a very frustrating encounter when I told my boss that I was going to get the "post" and she asked "What post?" I honestly couldn't think of what other word to say, so I just kept saying, "You know, the post." Well this went on for several minutes with her inquiring what I needed a post for anyway, until she finally realized, after much gesturing on my part, that I meant the "mail."

It is probably hard for you Yanks to imagine what difficulties you have caused us Brits by changing our language. To further illustrate my point, I made up the following (try and decipher it yourself):

"One night while I was running around town like a blue-arsed fly, I met this bloke who was a bit of alright. I suggested we go somewhere for some grub and a chinwag but he told me he was feeling knackered, fagged out and groggy, and besides, he was a bit short. He had the blasted nerve to ask me if he could borrow a hundred nicker. I said, "By Jove, Crikey, Flipping Eck. Strike a Light and Not on your Nellie." So I told him to hoppit, sling his hook and get on his bike. He called me a tight-arsed git. So now I'm left to spend the evenings alone with my soggy moggy."

Be thankful for right to complain

To the Editor:
After reading about the most recent bellyaching of students against some perceived injustice, I thought I would write a short letter to comment on the fact that folks always seem to be complaining, and are never happy unless finding fault in something.

However, upon closer inspection of my idea, I found that it, too, could be constituted as a complaint.

Therefore, what I suggest is this: Instead of complaining every time something is seen as bad or wrong, I propose we try to find the good in the situation. For example, with the recent grievances of the law students, instead of complaining about the portraits, be grateful you can see at all and have the right to voice your opinions.

Since it must start from within, one may ask what I will choose to see the good in. Simple: Next time I read about someone's gripe, I'll just be grateful I can read.

Libraries are locally, not federally funded

To the Editor:
Thank you for the compliment paid in April 3's DI ("Rentals render romance") to the video collections at the Iowa City Public Library.

But the article shows a serious misconception — that public libraries are funded by the federal government. Nearly all the budget of our library (and almost every other public library in the country) has come from LOCAL city and county taxes for more than a century. We do receive about 3 percent of our operating funds from the state of Iowa (some states have much higher allocations to public libraries), but we get nothing from the federal government — even for distributing tens of thousands of their tax forms!

So next time you check out one of those videos (or anything else), thank yourselves and your neighbors for supporting such "awesome" collections.

Stephanie Andrew
Librarian, Iowa City Public Library

Not all communities as enlightened as Iowa City

To the Editor:
This letter is regarding the DI's April 8 article by Chris Gardner about students coping with homosexual feelings and coming out.

As an out transsexual scratching out a life in Cedar Rapids, where there is no anti-discrimination ordinance yet, I commend the UI and the citizens of Iowa City for going beyond law and policy and really attempting to understand the dilemmas that gays face.

There are some pretty worthwhile people out there, and if you can get beyond what they are, you will like who they are. There is a huge toll being put on good people who don't feel free to be themselves among their brothers and sisters, and for what? Their potential for contributions to us all is being wasted to serve the insecurities of a few. This is more so in other parts of the state than in Iowa City.

Anyone who would like to contribute to the good efforts of The Iowa Coalition for Human Rights, which is a statewide grass-roots political action committee for gay/les/bi/trans rights within the state of Iowa, contact them at ICHR, P.O. Box 1222, Iowa City, IA 52244 or e-mail them at ichr@aol.com

Custodian willing to assist potential masturbators

To the Editor:
In the April 1 news story on the library masturbator, UI junior Sheba Farce observes that the janitors were sick of the mess. This is true, but the University of Iowa is the best place in the Big Ten to masturbate and the Custodial Services Department does not want to discourage this practice.

Out of courtesy for other persons who use the building, it is suggested that an individual who is contemplating masturbation obtain a receptacle for this purpose from the building custodian. The cleaning people will be glad to assist in any way they can.

Celebrate award of LIFE Skills, Inc.

To the Editor:
LIFE Skills, Inc. has recently been awarded a "Three Year Certification with Excellence" following a two-day on-site visit by Quality Assurance Specialists in the Home and Community Base Services contracted by the Iowa Department of Human Services.

The agency received 27 out of 28 possible points and received commendation regarding the areas of consumers options, individual consumer control, safety plans for consumers, knowledge of consumers regarding their rights and dignity provided the client by staff members.

The Board of Directors of LIFE Skills wish to commend Gillian Fox and her staff on this excellent review. LIFE Skills will hold their third annual Cheesecake Exposition on Sunday, April 20 in the Holiday Inn from 11 a.m. to 3 p.m. There will be live entertainment, clowns, balloons, music, contests for children and the Cheesecake Competition. Tickets are available from LIFE Skills — 354-2121 — or at the door. Please plan to attend and bring your family.

summer @ drake

It's a whole new season!

Funny, our classroom looks a lot like your living room.

Take summer classes at Drake — from home. With Drake's new classes on the World Wide Web, you'll join group discussions, turn in assignments — even take tests — right on your computer. And there's no schedule, so you can "go to class" whenever you want. Drake's Web classes are an affordable, convenient way to pick up some extra credits. And, if you just graduated from high school, Web classes are a great way to get a jump start on college. You don't even have to be a Drake student to take them — credits transfer to any institution.

Our registration office looks a lot like your living room, too. For class and registration information, call 1-800-44-DRAKE, or in Des Moines, 271-INFO — or visit our Web site at www.drake.edu.

Feds to hire welfare recipients

By Sandra Sobieraj Associated Press

WASHINGTON — With welfare rolls down by 20 percent since he took office, President Clinton said Thursday he would chip away more in the next four years by hiring some 10,000 welfare recipients into federal offices — including the White House.

"We have all got to take responsibility to see that the jobs are there so that people can leave welfare and become permanent members of the work force," Clinton said.

He summoned his Cabinet for its first full meeting of the second term to review numerical, agency-by-agency hiring goals and timetables.

Joined by Vice President Al Gore, who is overseeing the effort, Clinton committed the federal government, which employs 1.9 million people, to hiring some 10,000 welfare recipients over the next four years. Aides said as many as 2,000 would be hired before the Sept. 30 close of this fiscal year.

"If we give people who are on welfare the opportunity, they will do the rest. We will offer them a chance at a new beginning," the president said. As proof that welfare hires can work, two former welfare moms employed by the Social Security Administration sat in on the afternoon meeting in the White House Cabinet room.

The president's executive office — one of the government's smallest with 1,500 employees — would recruit and hire its share from the welfare rolls as part of Clinton's drive to find jobs in the public and private sectors for 2 million welfare recipients over the next four years.

The White House would design-

The president and vice president announced their new welfare proposals.

nate six slots for welfare recipients, Clinton said. Among the Cabinet departments and more than 100 non-Cabinet agencies participating, the Defense Department planned to hire 1,600 over four years; the Social Security Administration would recruit 600; and the Veterans administration 800.

"These will not be make-work jobs," Clinton asserted. "These will be jobs that actually need to be fulfilled and work that needs to be done for the American people."

Union leaders have expressed reservations about the hiring initiative and its potential to push other job applicants from the pool, especially after the Clinton administration cut or contracted out more than 250,000 federal jobs over the last four years.

The announcement of specific government hiring goals, which Clinton first ordered last month, coincided with the release of new administration data showing that about 2,755,000 individuals have gotten off the welfare rolls since January 1993 — from 14,115,000 recipients to 11,360,000 recipients, or a 20 percent drop.

Rodham Clinton likens Whitewater to obsessions with UFOs, Hale-Bopp

By Nancy Benac Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Hillary Rodham Clinton Thursday denied administration officials tried to hush up a key figure in the Whitewater investigation by finding him work, calling the suggestion part of a "never-ending fictional conspiracy."

She said the fuss over the Whitewater probe reminded her of "some people's obsession with UFOs and the Hale-Bopp comet some days."

Hours later, President Clinton threw back his head and laughed when he heard about his wife's remark. "Did she say that? That's pretty good," he told reporters.

Asked if he agreed with Rodham Clinton's assessment, the president added: "If I didn't, I wouldn't disagree with her in public."

As for suggestions that administration officials tried to buy the silence of former presidential friend Webb Hubbell after he resigned from the Justice Department under an ethical cloud, Rodham Clinton said, "That was not the intention of anyone that I'm aware of to try to help him in what they thought was his time of need."

"There isn't anything to be hushed up," she added in a radio interview on WAMU's "Diane Rehm Show."

Rodham Clinton, who was a law partner of Hubbell's in Little Rock before both moved to Washington, said he was "somebody who people wanted to help to get through what they thought was a rough patch in his life."

Hubbell has acknowledged lying to the Clintons and telling them there was no basis for charges against him.

He later pleaded guilty to bilking his former law firm and its clients, including the federal government, of hundreds of thousands of dollars and agreed to assist Whitewater prosecutors.

Whitewater prosecutors, frustrated by Hubbell's memory lapses in the probe of the Clintons' finances, are now investigating whether the financial assistance was designed to improperly influence Hubbell's cooperation.

"There's no evidence of that," Rodham Clinton said. "There will not be any evidence of that."

In recent interviews, Hubbell has said he hasn't talked to Clinton since his guilty plea but he is sorry for lying to his old friend. "I accept the apology," Clinton said Thursday. "I'm not angry with him because he paid a very high price for the mistake he made."

Rodham Clinton dismissed the Whitewater probe as a "never-ending fictional conspiracy" and said she had no concerns "whatsoever" about being indicted herself.

"This is the endless saga that someday, perhaps in my lifetime, will end," she said.

Woman, daughter to death after

By Chris Tomlinson Associated Press

KENT, Minn. — After her car slid into a half-frozen creek, Pamela Jean Wagner and her 3-year-old daughter escaped out the driver's window and began walking in the dark to a farmhouse for help.

Soaking wet with the temperature at 8 degrees, they walked about a mile for more than three hours and got within yards when more water blocked their way. They collapsed and died in a field, frozen and exhausted.

"To make it as far as she did, she's a very strong woman," said a sobbing Jennifer Tschakert, who owns a bar where Wagner worked part time.

Wagner, 29 and three months pregnant, had a cellular phone, but it had apparently been soaked in the accident Tuesday in the usually calm Whiskey Creek.

Searchers in helicopters spotted the bodies the next day, 200 yards from the farmhouse, after the silver car was found in the creek, along with footprints leading out of it.

Here in Kent, along the Bois de Sioux River near North Dakota, many roads are covered with ice or blocked by snow from severe flooding that began last month and a blizzard that hit over the weekend. Like other motorists, Wagner had taken a detour home because major roads were impassable.

She already had made it 40 miles from Fargo, N.D., where she worked as a secretary, had picked up her daughter Victoria from day care and gone grocery shopping when she stopped at the Barley Bin bar on her way home.

"I was the last one to give Tori a hug before they walked out the door," Tschakert said.

After leaving the bar, she got to within about a mile of home when her Chevrolet Celebrity hit a patch of ice from the flooded creek as she drove up a hill. The ice broke and carried the car away.

"You could see the tracks going into the water," Sheriff Tom Matejka said Thursday.

As they tried to walk to help, mother and daughter found their path blocked by a different portion of Whiskey Creek. They were found

House prohibits federal funding for assisted suicide

By Jim Abrams Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The House voted Thursday to bar the federal government from paying for doctor-assisted suicides, a practice that already is illegal.

Backers said the legislation was needed to head off any court decision to legalize assisted suicides. Opponents said it was a waste of time.

The bill, passed 398-16, makes it clear that whatever happens in the Supreme Court, no Medicare, Medicaid or other federal funds will be used to pay for assisted suicide.

"Our precious health care money ought to be used to improve life, not end it," said Rep. Thomas Bliley, R-Va., chairman of the Commerce Committee.

No federal money is used now for assisted suicide because it is illegal, but Bliley and others said Congress needed to act before the Supreme Court rules on two cases that could affect laws on assisted suicide in 42 states.

The legislators also were reacting to a 1994 referendum in Oregon where voters approved doctor-assisted suicides. That vote is now being challenged in federal courts.

"There is a danger here," said Rep. Ralph Hall, D-Texas, a sponsor of the bill. The courts, he said, "get the last guess as to what the law is. If they guess wrong on this, you can open up the Treasury to every Dr. Kevorkian all across this country."

The White House, in a statement, said President Clinton does not support assisted suicide and would not oppose a reaffirmation of current policy prohibiting use of federal funds for the practice.

While few lawmakers were willing to oppose the bill, numerous Democrats rose to deride it as a meaningless political stunt.

"This bill does nothing," said Rep. Pete Stark, D-Calif. "It just addresses a problem that does not exist. It eases some pseudo-religious wackos. It is a sham, it is a shame, we are a sad, sad Congress if we pass this bill."

"This is nothing more than a hollow exercise probably designed to fill a massive hole in this do-nothing Congress," said Rep. Sherrod Brown, D-Ohio.

At the committee level, Democrats pressed for amendments that would have provided counseling and guidelines for doctors treating terminally ill patients with the goal of having fewer patients seeking to end their own lives.

While their amendments were rejected, the legislation does authorize the government to develop programs designed to reduce the rate of suicide.

Woman, daughter freeze to death after car crash

By Chris Tomlinson
Associated Press

KENT, Minn. — After her car slid into a half-frozen creek, Pamela Jean Wagner and her 3-year-old daughter escaped out the driver's window and began walking in the dark to a farmhouse for help. Soaking wet with the temperature at 8 degrees, they walked about a mile for more than three hours and got within yards when more water blocked their way. They collapsed and died in a field, frozen and exhausted.

Ron Wagner, his wife Pamela Jean, 29, and their daughter Victoria Nicole, 3, are shown in an undated family handout photo. Pamela Jean and Victoria were found dead Wednesday near their hometown of Kent, Minn.

Wagner, 29 and three months pregnant, had a cellular phone, but it had apparently been soaked in the accident Tuesday in the usually calm Whiskey Creek.

Searchers in helicopters spotted the bodies the next day, 200 yards from the farmhouse, after the silver car was found in the creek, along with footprints leading out of it.

Here in Kent, along the Bois de Sioux River near North Dakota, many roads are covered with ice or blocked by snow from severe flooding that began last month and a blizzard that hit over the weekend.

Like other motorists, Wagner had taken a detour home because major roads were impassable. She already had made it 40 miles from Fargo, N.D., where she worked as a secretary, had picked up her daughter Victoria from day care and gone grocery shopping when she stopped at the Barley Bin bar on her way home.

"I was the last one to give Tori a hug before they walked out the door," Tschakert said. After leaving the bar, she got to within about a mile of home when her Chevrolet Celebrity hit a patch of ice from the flooded creek as she drove up a hill. The ice broke and carried the car away.

"You could see the tracks going into the water," Sheriff Tom Matejka said Thursday. As they tried to walk to help, mother and daughter found their path blocked by a different portion of Whiskey Creek. They were found with their clothes frozen solid. Matejka said the woman apparently carried the girl some of the way. "She just walked and fell to the ground, couldn't make it anymore," she said.

When the two didn't show up at home, Wagner's husband, Ron, called police to report them missing. Sheriff's deputies searched through the night without finding a trace.

The Rev. Stan Wieser, out searching with Ron Wagner on Wednesday afternoon, spotted something glinting in the sun. It was the silver roof of the car, buried in snow and ice. "There was no way they could have seen the car at night. Only three inches of the car was showing and it was gray. It looked like ice," said Wieser, who married the Wagners and baptized their daughter.

Police couldn't tell if there was anyone inside the car until rescuers, working out of a boat, peeled back the roof. Then they found the footprints leading out of the creek.

Kent, with less than 150 people, had endured the snow and flooding pretty well until now, with just a few flooded basements, Wieser said.

Jilted lover on trial for slaying target's twin

By Jon Marcus
Associated Press

DEDHAM, Mass. — Blond and blue-eyed, the Brown sisters lived together and looked so much alike that strangers would confuse them. The resemblance was a source of amusement — until Kimberlee Brown's jilted boyfriend went gunning for her and mistakenly killed her sister, Dawn.

Three years later, the former boyfriend, John Anthony Diaz, is on trial for murder, testifying Thursday that he acted out of hatred — not of Kimberlee Brown, but of himself. He said he felt the Brown family rejected him because he is black.

"I hated my skin color. It was something so minor, but it was major in society's eyes," Diaz testified. "I couldn't control anything anymore. I was always by myself, depressed, in my own world, always in my room."

Kimberlee, now Kimberlee Brown Goldstein, and other relatives sat in the front row as Diaz described how he hid behind a tree at the Brown family's home in Quincy, Mass., on a July afternoon in 1993, the day of her bridal shower there.

Diaz jumped out and shot 25-year-old Dawn between the eyes. She died six hours later, and Diaz disappeared.

Diaz's lawyer contends Diaz's judgment was clouded by self-loathing. Diaz, 28, could face a lesser charge than first-degree murder, which carries a mandatory life sentence without parole, if a jury decides the crime was not premeditated.

Kimberlee, who won't speak to reporters, took the stand Monday, describing how Diaz was upset about their breakup about a year before her sister's slaying and sometimes called her on the phone. Their conversations were civil, she said.

Diaz said he did not know why he went to the Browns' house that day. He said he may have been considering suicide.

"I just wanted to be acknowledged, let them know I was real," he testified. "My mind was drifting away."

Prosecutors said Diaz coldly planned the murder, obtaining a new identity by getting a birth certificate issued in the name of a dead child. He received a passport in his alias, rented a post office box in Rhode Island and got a Rhode Island driver's license, allowing him to buy a Glock 9mm handgun in that state.

Police chased Diaz around the world after he fled the Browns' house. He lived in Singapore, Amsterdam and other spots before he was captured in Guyana. Someone saw him on a pirated tape of the TV show "Unsolved Mysteries" and notified authorities. Diaz said he had assumed a new name months before the killing not to conceal a crime, but because "I hated me. I hated John Diaz. I wasn't in control anymore. I wanted to be someone else."

Diaz's lawyer, Henry Owens III, planned to call psychiatrists to testify that Diaz had "a major depressive disorder" and "a substantial mental impairment." Diaz was raised without a father. His mother had a drinking problem, and he was raped at age 8 by an uncle, who fatally poisoned his dog, Owens said.

Brown and Diaz met in 1991 at a nightclub on Cape Cod where he worked as a bouncer.

Year after year, millions of animals are killed and sold for classroom use by students. Published surveys indicate that about one in two students has ethical reservations towards participating in education activities that harm animals. If harming animals for education is to stop, students must voice their concerns and educators must be receptive to them.

DENVER — Prosecutors in the Oklahoma City bombing case have lined up about 100 witnesses to testify about telephone records that allegedly tie Timothy McVeigh to the Ryder truck, bomb components and other parts of the plot.

The phone-record witnesses are among 327 people on the prosecution's final witness list, which was made available to the AP. Others include McVeigh's sister and several friends.

Notably missing from the list: four FBI agents under investigation because of allegations that evidence was mishandled at the FBI lab.

The prosecution's star witness is expected to be Michael Fortier, a former Army buddy of McVeigh's who has agreed to testify that McVeigh planned to blow up the building. Fortier faces a prison term after pleading guilty to weapons charges.

McVeigh's sister, Jennifer, has told authorities her brother enjoyed "The Turner Diaries," a novel that describes a plot similar to the Oklahoma City bombing.

Prosecutors wouldn't comment on the witness list, citing a judge's gag order.

Meanwhile, jury selection continued Thursday. Among the prospective jurors questioned: an airline pilot who lost a friend in a terrorist attack.

Another candidate was a self-described witch who expressed reluctance to impose the death penalty. A member of the Wicca faith, she said her pagan religion centered on a love of the Earth, love for others, understanding before judgment, inner joy, happiness and strong spiritual views.

"We do consider ourselves witches — that's all — by the traditional term," she said.

Six prospective jurors were questioned Thursday, bringing the total to 56.

BEANIE

"People who want to complete the whole set are willing to pay crazy amounts for them. But I'd rather see a kid playing with them than having them sitting on a shelf," Gauger said.

Gauger, who had 300 people from Los Angeles to Georgia on a waiting list for his Beanie Babies shipment, said he has heard rumors the dolls have grossed more money than Tickle Me Elmo and Cabbage Patch Dolls combined.

UI freshman Jessica Lock said all she wanted for her birthday this year was Beanie Babies. She said she received 25 of the $5 dolls to add to her collection of about 50. Lock said she collects the dolls because they're cute.

Rather than cuteness, Gauger attributes Beanie Baby madness to the dolls being inexpensive, well-made and collectible. He said the dolls are also non-commercialized, and noted Ty never has advertised the dolls and will not sell them to large, commercial chain stores.

"They are non-sexist, non-violent, they don't have a breakfast cereal or a Saturday morning cartoon. They're just a gentle toy that appeals to all ages," Gauger said.

North Liberty resident Lori Hussman said she started buying Beanie Babies as Christmas gifts for her niece. Fifty-seven dolls later, Hussman said her Beanie Baby buying has "mushroomed."

Hussman said she is not buying the dolls for the money, but for her niece. She said if they ever really become worth something, her niece will have something very special from her.

Beanie Babies are hot now, but many retailers are wondering how long it will last. Rhodes said retailers are hoping the craze will last through Christmas, but if the company keeps retiring and making new dolls, it will last even longer.

However, she pointed out that in the past, rages like Beanie Babies burn bright for a while, but eventually do burn out.

"It's a craze now, but look what happened to Trolls. Trolls were real hot, and then they died," Rhodes said.

tion (AISA) and features dancers from locations as far away as Florida, Oregon and Ontario. The dancers compete in six categories including: traditional men, traditional women, men's fancy bustle, women's fancy shawl, men's grass and women's jingle. The variety of dance originates from the many different tribes that created unique styles.

Fancy shawl dancer and UI freshman Candice Sanache has danced in pow wows from Albuquerque, N.M., to Hartford, Conn.

Sanache said she is proud to dance to celebrate her heritage.

"I've danced since I was 4. It's part of my life," Sanache said.

More than 200 tribes plan to attend the pow wow. UI students and the general public can join in during intertribal dances throughout the three-day event which runs from today until Sunday in the Recreation Building.

"Everybody's welcome. They can come and see what a pow wow really is," Sanache said.

Sharing culture with those not familiar with it is a goal of the pow wow, said UI freshman Nicole Wynos. Wynos said books only can teach people so much. After a certain point, students need to go and meet people to gain a more well-rounded perspective of their culture, Wynos said.

"It's not like on TV. We don't all go around shooting arrows," Wynos said.

Orrenzo said the event is an important opportunity for UI American Indian students to socialize among themselves and share their cultures with other students. Orrenzo said because American Indian students makes up less than two percent of the entire UI student population, they often get lost in the shuffle.

"We have to generate our own diversity to recruit and retain individuals," Orrenzo said.

Fried bread and Navajo tacos are among the food items that will be sold by some of the 30 to 40 vendors at the pow wow. Items like Kachina dolls, silver work, rugs, baskets and paintings also will be for sale. Admission is $8 for adults and $6 for children for a one-day pass. The weekend pass costs $15 for adults and $10 for children.

islanders about the bill, but thinks many of her friends will.

"It's mandatory already to pay a computer fee," she said. "I pay the same amount as the people do in the dorms, and I have to drive to get to an ITC."

The loss of dial-up access would be terrible for the UI, said Bill Decker, associate vice president for Research and director of Institutional Technology Services (ITS).

"We would be the only institution of higher education to be denied the right to dial-up access," Decker said. "It's ludicrous."

Decker said he has taken about six trips to Des Moines this semester to fight the Internet bill on the UI's behalf.

"I testified in front of the Senate Commerce Committee (the group who proposed the bill)," Decker said. "We've been fighting since February."

Douglas Jones, UI computer science professor, said the World Wide Web (WWW) is an immense teaching tool for him and his students.

"Back in the time, I used to scramble to get material to distribute to students," Jones said. "(The WWW is) more convenient and cheaper overall. All students pay for is the cost of paper if they want to have my class notes."

Decades ago, the state paid for all campus academic computing but students now pay through computing fees, Jones said.

"Anyone who says it is free is missing something," Jones said. "I don't see anything wrong with people paying for what they're getting, but I do have a problem with a middle man making a profit for the material I create for my students."

UI graduate student Peter Meyers said he would like to see the state stay out of the Internet issue but is not shocked by recent events.

"I think you're going to see shit hit the fan the next couple of years because Internet access is shifting from university and government control to the private sector," he said.

the steel pans after a stint teaching people to play Nicaraguan marimbas, a tricky instrument similar to the xylophone, because they are easier for beginners to learn.

"Steel pans have strong rhythmic components and melodies," Scruggs said. "What I came to realize is that in the last 15 years, there has been an explosion of them in high schools, elementary schools and universities."

UI senior Shannon Black said she was able to pick up the steel pans quickly.

"It really boosted my self confidence to be able to solo on the steel pan," Black said.

The UI music department owns enough steel pans for eight players, which vary in range and size.

Scruggs also owns an instrument, which he purchased on one of his two trips to hear steel pan festivals in Trinidad.

The UI's drums were handmade by Cliff Alexis at the University of Northern Illinois. Alexis uses a 45-gallon oil drum with its top sawed off. He flips the drum upside down and hammers the bottom to make convex, grooved sections that produce tones when struck. The steel is then tempered, or heated, to make the metal keep its shape.

The cost is about $200 to return these sensitive instruments. The only other school in Iowa to play steel pans is an elementary magnet school in Des Moines. Scruggs said he hopes the music department will be able to purchase additional steel pans in the future.

DES MOINES — The House agreed Thursday to crack down on nude dancing but ruled out chemical castration for chronic sex offenders.

In addition, the House decided to toughen penalties for those who manufacture methamphetamine in front of their children and increase the restitution for families of those killed by criminals.

The House voted 88-0 to approve an omnibus crime package, sending it back to the Senate and likely final approval in the next few days.

The measure is being billed as the headline measure for this year's Legislature to crack down on crime, but it's been scaled back considerably.

In its initial form, the measure would have allowed officials to require that chronic sex offenders undergo hormone treatment as a condition of their release from prison.

House passes crime package

By Mike Glover
Associated Press

DES MOINES — The House agreed Thursday to crack down on nude dancing but ruled out chemical castration for chronic sex offenders.

In addition, the House decided to toughen penalties for those who manufacture methamphetamine in front of their children and increase the restitution for families of those killed by criminals.

The House voted 88-0 to approve an omnibus crime package, sending it back to the Senate and likely final approval in the next few days.

The measure is being billed as the headline measure for this year's Legislature to crack down on crime, but it's been scaled back considerably.

In its initial form, the measure would have allowed officials to require that chronic sex offenders undergo hormone treatment as a condition of their release from prison.

Backers, including Gov. Terry

Branstad, pushed for the hormone treatment, which is designed to reduce the sex drive. They say traditional treatment programs don't work for serious sex offenders, and other steps are needed.

The chemical castration measure won Senate approval, but was blocked in the House largely by Rep. Jeff Lamberti, R-Ankeny, head of the House Judiciary Committee.

Lamberti said he wanted more study of the procedure.

"We didn't have sufficient time to give it the attention it deserves," said Lamberti.

Lamberti said he would be open to considering the issue in future years, and wanted other ideas about what to do with chronic sex offenders.

"We're going to have to either lock these people up and throw away the key, or come up with something else because what we're doing isn't working," Lamberti said.

The nude dancing issue is one lawmakers have wrestled with for years.

There's a loophole in the state's obscenity laws that allows taverns to feature totally nude dancing if they don't have a liquor license. In that loophole, some have opened "juice bars" to which customers bring their own liquor.

The measure approved by the House links the obscenity laws to holding of a sales tax permit and is aimed at closing those bars.

But because of free speech worries, the measure contains exceptions for artistic expression, and some predicted the juice bars will continue to operate under that exception.

"It would be a stretch to say we're putting these places out of business," said Rep. Bill Bernau, D-Ames.

The crime measure is significantly less sweeping than tough measures lawmakers had touted as this year's session opened, but backers said it will make a difference.

"It is not a panacea, but it is a step in the right direction," said Rep. Keith Kreiman, D-Bloomfield.

Senate stiffens drunken driving penalties

By Mike Glover
Associated Press

DES MOINES — Everyone convicted of drunken driving would spend at least two days in jail, under a measure given overwhelming Senate approval on Thursday.

"We need to change business as usual in this state if we're going to change human hearts and human behavior," said Sen. Andy McKean, R-Anamosa, main backer of the bill.

The Senate approved the measure on a 45-3 vote, returning it to the House where approval of some version is virtually certain as lawmakers seek to end this year's session by month's end.

The measure approved Thursday tightens the state's already tough law in a long list of areas, including:

- A mandatory two-day jail term for first offenders and a ban on local prosecutors using deferred judgments and other tools to ease case-loads.
- Allowing the seizure of cars from repeat offenders caught driving without a license.
- Extending to 12 years the time period used in calculating repeat offenses, a doubling of the current time period.

- Banning bail for those convicted of vehicular homicide who appeal the conviction, a reaction to a double fatal in Ankeny.
- Requiring substance abuse evaluation and drunken driving classes for all convicted of drunken driving.
- Raising fines and lengthening jail terms for repeat offenders.

McKean said the measure not only cracks down on those caught for a first time, but gets significantly tougher for drivers who repeat the crime. That's important because chronic drunken drivers cause most of the 150 deaths a year blamed on drunken drivers.

While there was almost no opposition to the measure — polls show voters favor tougher drunken driving laws — there was considerable reluctance voiced.

Sen. Matt McCoy, D-Des Moines, said he's been warned by local prosecutors that the measure could cost $250,000 a year in one county alone, and would jam the county jail beyond capacity.

Sen. Gene Fraise, D-Fort Madison, echoed those concerns.

"It's the politically right thing to do," Fraise said. "If we're going to do these kinds of things, we've got to back it up with the money."

Sen. Jack Rife, R-Durant, said lawmakers were quick to enact tough penalties for drunken drivers, but far slower to take steps that deal with the plague of alcoholism.

"Prohibition days are over," Rife said. "There were drunk driving accidents during prohibition. Some people have a problem and we aren't reaching out and extending a helping hand. This is clearly punitive, make no mistake about it."

All sides conceded the measure tightens significantly a drunken driving law already carrying significant sanctions.

Police have the power to lift on the spot the license of a motorist who fails a field sobriety test or refuses to take the test.

In addition, there's a $1,000 fine for a first offense and at least a six-month suspension of the driver's license. That doesn't count the soaring costs of insurance for those convicted of drunken driving.

Sex discrimination lawsuit against UI instructor dropped

By Kelley Chorley
The Daily Iowan

A former UI student has dropped her lawsuit alleging sexual discrimination and emotional distress against a former theater arts assistant professor.

Hannah Petersen, 20, of South Burlington, Vt., filed a civil lawsuit at the Johnson County District Court last June alleging that Trish Hawkins, assistant professor of theater arts, caused her emotional distress by asking her to perform a scene in her underwear in front of her class.

Mark Schantz, UI general counsel, said the lawsuit was dropped after both parties came to a mutual agreement. Schantz declined to comment on whether a settlement was paid to Petersen.

The lawsuit states the scene Petersen was asked to perform required her and her acting partner to portray a soon-to-be married couple, rolling around in bed in their underwear.

Petersen's lawsuit claimed Hawkins lowered her grade in the course when she objected to performing the underwear scene.

Petersen said she was extremely offended by the scene and suffered severe emotional distress from the anxiety of being pressured to act out the scene in front of the class.

After continued objections, Hawkins assigned another scene to Petersen, which she didn't find any more acceptable.

The new scene required Hawkins' acting partner to fondle her breasts and other parts of her body. The lawsuit also states Petersen didn't have the opportunity to object to the new scene until the day of her performance.

In a meeting after class, Hawkins agreed to allow Petersen to do a revised scene, according to the lawsuit. The following week, when she and her partner were performing the scene in front of the class, Hawkins yelled at Petersen and told her to "loosen up." Hawkins then allegedly told Petersen to put the sexual contact parts of the scene back into her performance and "it won't be that bad." Petersen said she reluctantly agreed to perform the scene.

The lawsuit said after Petersen performed the monologue, Hawkins smiled and told her she did a good job. The compliments indicated to Petersen she would receive at least a "B" grade in the class. However, Petersen's final grade was a "C+."

Petersen believed the grade was given in retaliation for her objections to what she believes was discriminatory and harassing conduct by Hawkins.

Schantz said he wasn't sure if this was the first complaint from a female student directed toward a female professor, but he definitely hears a variety of complaints.

Neither Petersen nor Hawkins currently live in Iowa City. Hawkins decided to leave the UI before the suit was filed to follow her acting career on Broadway, Schantz said.

Hawkins and Petersen could not be reached for comment Thursday.

Civil-rights leader to deliver conference's keynote address

By Kelley Chorley
The Daily Iowan

Kicking-off the Midwest Conference for the National Lawyers Guild (NLG), Professor Arthur Kinoy, a civil-rights leader, will give the keynote address tonight in the Boyd Law Building.

Kinoy is expected to discuss grassroots activism and using the role of a lawyer to develop change of oppressive conditions.

"I was a lawyer during the time when there was a struggle throughout the south," Kinoy said. "There was total segregation of black people, which was in violation of the Constitution. By using my skills to assist them, they finally won."

Kinoy's life has brought him three successful performances in front of the U.S. Supreme Court, life-and-death struggles to prevent death penalty executions and a book titled "Rights on Trial: The Odyssey of a People's Lawyer." Now he travels around the country speaking to beginning lawyers and law students about the continuing roles of lawyers fighting for social justice.

"He is a piece of American history with all of the things he has accomplished," UI law student and NLG President Julie Ralston said. "It is so great for lawyers to hear him speakers." Lawyers from all over the Midwest will conduct workshops Saturday on grassroots issues such as combating hog lots, implementing the parental notification law, immigration in the Midwest and domestic violence.

"The workshops are organized to teach upcoming lawyers how to listen to the public and not just corporations," Ralston said.

Kinoy grew up in Brooklyn, N.Y., and graduated from Harvard University with a degree in American history and literature. He returned home on an honorable discharge after three years in the Army during World War II and attended law school at Columbia University.

Currently, he teaches "Constitutional Law," "Law of the First Amendment" and "Law of Civil Rights" at Rutgers University's School of Law.

"I had an opportunity to work together with a movement of people struggling to meet immediate needs," Kinoy said. "My force to use law helped them meet those immediate needs."

His keynote address, titled "Sowing Seeds of Change: Grassroots Activism," is scheduled for tonight in Room 225 of the Boyd Law Building at 6 p.m.

News Brief

Grandparents left on abortion notification measure

DES MOINES (AP) — A young woman would have to notify a parent or grandparent before obtaining an abortion, under a measure approved by the Senate late Thursday. Lawmakers regaled each other with stories about their grandparents — or grandchildren — before approving a measure that's slightly narrower than current law but not as narrow as anti-abortion activists wanted.

Crew makes first I.C. splash

After a busy opening weekend, the women rowers return to their home waters

This weekend

What: Regatta against Ohio State and Wisconsin (novice)
When: Saturday at 10 a.m.
Directions: Take Hwy 1 to Solon. Turn right on Hwy 382. Head west for 3.2 miles to Boat Ramp sign. Turn left onto Ople Ave. NE. Follow for .7 miles to Launching Ramp.

By Chuck Blount
The Daily Iowan

After a weekend full of crabs, the Iowa rowers are hoping home waters and faster boats will increase their times enough for a victory over Ohio State.

The women's crew team will make its spring debut on Lake McBride Saturday at 10 a.m. The meet kicks off a two week homestead, with Iowa hosting Michigan April 19.

Against Kansas State last weekend, the varsity crew failed to win any races after hitting crabs.

"(A crab) is like taking a tooth pick and sticking it inside a moving wheel of bicycle spokes," Kowal said. "It happens when the angle of the blade get off-set in the water."

The McBride course provides a long, straight path, and coach Mandi Kowal said that is the kind of racing the crew

"We've pulled out the faster boats and we'll stick with the same line-ups for the rest of the season."

coach Mandi Kowal

needs for improved times. So far this spring, Iowa has been limited to river racing.

"The biggest difference between lake and river racing here is that the lake course has no turns," she said. "The river course has a bend at around 1000-meters and it produces slower times. We'll only have to deal with the effects from the wind, while on the river the current must be figured into things."

Kowal said her team has done a decent job this season, but she would like to see the times go down.

"I'd like to be a little bit faster at this point in the season," Kowal said. "Every meet my goal is to finish between 6:30-6:45, but there are a variety of conditions that influence that."

One solution has been the implementation of Iowa's top eight boat, christened the Christine H.B. Grant after the UI's women's athletic director.

"We've pulled out the faster boats and we'll stick with the same line-ups for the rest of the season," Kowal said. Like the Hawkeyes, Ohio State has only been in the varsity ranks a few years and is a young, but talented program.

"They had a very strong club team prior to being named a varsity sport," Kowal said. "At this point they are probably a little bit ahead of us. Our times are fairly compatible, but they are pretty fast across the board. It's definitely going to be a tough race."

Crew Lingo

Shell: The name given to the boats used in the sport of rowing

Coxswain: The onboard strategist, tactician and even coach who is also responsible for steering the shell. The coxswain is responsible for informing the crew as to where they are in the race and how they are doing.

Catch: The point at which the blade (wide part at the end of the oar) enters the water

Feather: The motion used by rowers to get the blade out of the water

Crab: Term used when an oarsperson does not feather her oar cleanly. This can cause the boat to slow down and could catapult the oarsperson out of the boat. A crab usually disrupts synchronized motion during each stroke maintained by the oarsman.

Sculling: The type of rowing where each oarsperson has two oars

Sweep Rowing: The type of rowing where each oarsperson has one oar and rows either the port or starboards side of the shell.

WOMEN'S GYMNASTICS

Gymnasts want NIT win at Carver

Eight teams will vie for title this weekend; Olympian Zmeskal will be in attendance

By Chuck Blount
The Daily Iowan

Last year's second place finish in the NIT Tournament was a pleasant surprise for the Iowa women's gymnastics team. But with the same tournament at Carver-Hawkeye Arena this season, the Hawkeyes are aiming for the top.

This is the first time the Hawkeyes have hosted the event, one year after Iowa's best-ever showing at the meet. Boise State, Michigan State, Northern Illinois, Rutgers, San Jose State, Southeast Missouri State and Towson State round out the field.

The Hawkeyes finished behind Towson State last year, while setting a school record for most points scored in a meet (194.150), highest uneven bar total (48.700), beam total (48.900) and floor total (47.950). All of those records have been broken this season.

"The team is very excited about hosting the NIT and finishing out our season at home," coach Diane DeMarco said. "We are anticipating our best meet of the year."

Iowa last competed at the Big Ten Championships, where they finished last despite setting a new season team high (193.725). They enter the NIT as the No. 5 seed with a 192.760 team average.

Southeast Missouri State is the statistical favorite to win, averaging 195.092. At one point during the season the Othakians posted a school record 196.025. Michigan State comes in as the No. 2 seed (194.392 average), followed by Towson State (194.252) and Boise State (193.922).

Iowa sophomore Lori Whitwer said the meet will be a three horse race between Big Ten rival Michigan State, SE Missouri State and Iowa.

"It just seems to be that time where we are in prime form," Whitwer said. "Everything about our routines seems to flow effortlessly. As a team, we have had a couple of weeks off from competition since the Big Tens so we have been tapering, so to speak."

Whitwer finished sixth in all-around individual competition at last week's NCAA Central Regionals. She is expected to compete with SE Missouri State's Erin Chenier, Boise State's Kathy Elwell and Meredith Behson of Rutgers for the NIT all-around title.

Last year, Whitwer gained all-American status at the NIT, placing second on the floor, and fourth on the vault and all-around.

"Lori has really developed into one of the premier gymnasts in the nation," DeMarco said. "At the regionals, we found out that she has quickly been growing quite a following."

One advantage the Hawkeyes possess lies in scheduling. Iowa has already seen half of the field this season after competing against SE Missouri State, Northern Illinois and Michigan State. But they only managed to compile a 1-2 record against those teams.

The gymnasts will have some famous eyes on them over the weekend as former Olympian Kim Zmeskal is scheduled to make an appearance at the meet. Zmeskal, a member of the 1992 United States team, will sign autographs and talk with fans Friday from 4-5 p.m. in Carver-Hawkeye Arena.

Over her career, Zmeskal accumulated three national championships and two world titles.

Big hitters lead team to record-setting season

By Becky Gruhn
The Daily Iowan

Eighteen homeruns. Three players. Twenty regular-season games yet to go.

If there was such a thing as fantasy collegiate softball, Iowa seniors Brandy Macias, Christy Hebert and junior Debbie Bilbao would be among the most coveted hitters in the league.

All three rank in the top five on Iowa's career home run list. Another senior, Kari Knopf, has yet to hit the ball out of the ball park this season, but is also in the top five with 11 in her Iowa career.

"I don't think we've ever had four powerful hitters like this at one time," Iowa coach Gayle Blevins said. "Good quality coaching from Rich Calvert and Pam (Lee) has been a key, but I think you have to give the players credit individually because hitting is a skill you just have to continually work, work and work at. It's not an easy skill to master."

Hebert and Bilbao have seven dingers apiece to set a new single-season record. Bilbao's success at the plate is something hitters have not duplicated while she is on the mound. "When I am hitting the ball, it is exactly opposite of what I want to do as a pitcher," Bilbao said. "When you're on the mound, you want to go out and make them hit your best pitch. As a hitter, you want to intimidate the pitcher and get up there and hit your pitch and make them pitch your pitch. Everything just happens in reverse."

Although all three have had similar results at the plate, Macias and Hebert admit they have their own favorite pitch. Macias prefers faster drop-off balls, but Hebert is the opposite.

"I like high and outside pitches," the Cedar Rapids native said. "I don't like low pitches very well."

Bilbao said she doesn't think about hitting a homerun when she steps up to the plate.

"You don't really think about it at the plate, it just happens," Bilbao said. "You can have a good swing and not get a good cut on the ball. I think most

Fernandez one-hitter sinks Cubs

By Mike Nadel Associated Press
CHICAGO - Showing the composure that made him a success on Chicago's South Side, Alex Fernandez did his best pitching after his no-hit batted with two outs to go.

And in the end, though the former White Sox right-hander wasn't able to hold the Chicago Cubs hitless Thursday, he did keep them winless in 1997. "He was absolutely zeroed in," Florida manager Jim Leyland said after Fernandez won 1-0 on a one-hitter. "His concentration on the mound was unbelievable. I was really impressed that he didn't get flustered by the hit, that he didn't get flustered by a couple of misplays by his infielders. It was a thing of beauty."

Not to the Cubs, who held a half-hour closed-door meeting after falling to 0-8 - the worst start in the 122-year history of a franchise that hasn't won the NL pennant since 1945. "There was a little shouting," Chicago rookie Kevin Orie said. "It was something we needed."

ATLANTA - Jeff Bagwell went 3-for-3, including a solo homer, and drove in two runs Thursday night to power the Houston Astros to a 5-3 victory over Atlanta, ending the Braves winning streak at six games.

The Astros, who had lost two in a row, also handed the Braves their first loss after five wins at Atlanta's new home, Turner Field. Bagwell's drive over the center field fence on a 3-2 pitch was his first homer of the season and his first ever off Smoltz in 63 at-bats. It gave Houston a 3-2 lead and pinned the loss on Smoltz (1-2), who didn't lose his second game last season until June 24 (14-2) en route to the NL Cy Young award.

Smoltz allowed six hits, three runs, walked four and struck out five in six innings. Rookie Chris Holt (1-0) won his first major-league game despite allowing 13 hits over seven innings. Braves manager Bobby Cox was ejected in the seventh inning by plate umpire Ed Montague for arguing balls and strikes. Bagwell walked in the first, doubled in the third and had an RBI triple off reliever Brad Clontz in the seventh and scored on a wild pitch by Alan Embree.

The Astros first baseman missed an opportunity to hit for the cycle - needing a single - when Brad Ausmus grounded into a double play in the ninth inning for the third out with Bagwell on deck. The Astros had taken a 2-0 lead in the second inning on a two-run homer by Bill Spiers, his first of the season and only the second home run by Houston this season.

was the veteran guys. Shawn (Dunston) stepped forward and did most of the speaking.

"There was just a tension buildup. We were hoping to get that first win before it had to come down to this. It's just a terrible atmosphere. Some guys had to get some things off their chests, a little wakeup call. It was something we needed."

Fernandez, who pitched for the White Sox for 6½ seasons before signing a five-year, $35 million contract with the Marlins in December, allowed only Dave Hansen's one-out pinch single in the ninth.

It was a hard one-hopper that went under Fernandez's glove and off his right thigh before settling in the infield grass behind him where no one could field it.

"It skidded off my thigh. If it hit me flush on, the ball would have stopped in front of me and I could have made the play," said Fernandez, considered one of the best fielders in baseball.

AL ROUNDUP

Molitor leads Twins past Detroit

DETROIT (AP) — Before another tiny crowd in Tiger Stadium, Paul Molitor drove in two runs and Ron Coomer homered to lead the Minnesota Twins over Detroit 7-3 Thursday.

Just 6,381 tickets were sold for the game, and with a 39-degree temperature, the actual crowd appeared to be half that. Only 6,477 tickets were sold for Wednesday's game.

The Tigers hadn't drawn so few for a home game since Aug. 21, 1989, when 6,197 saw the Tigers play Oakland.

Detroit rookie Bubba Trammell hit his first major league homer, a three-run shot. The Tigers were trying for their first sweep of Minnesota in four years.

Willie Blair (1-2) took the loss. Rangers 2, Brewers 0 MILWAUKEE — Bobby Witt scattered three hits over eight innings in his first start as Texas won before a sparse crowd at County Stadium.

A game time temperature of 38 degrees and 12 mph winds kept the crowd down. Although the announced attendance was 5,638, there were only about 1,000 fans on hand, and the upper deck was closed.

Witt, the Rangers' fifth starter, twice had his first start delayed by weather postponements. He didn't give up a hit until the fourth, when Fernando Vina and Dave Nilsson singled. He then retired 10 straight before Marc Newfield singled with two outs in the seventh.

John Wetteland, signed by Texas in the offseason after winning the World Series MVP award with the Yankees, pitched a perfect ninth for his first save with the Rangers.

Scott Karl (0-2) was the loser. Blue Jays 4, White Sox 0 CHICAGO — Juan Guzman gave up three hits in seven shutout innings to outduel James Baldwin. Guzman, (2-0), the AL's reigning ERA leader, who gave up one run in his season opening start against Milwaukee, has now pitched 14 consecutive scoreless innings and has an ERA of 0.64.

Tim Crabtree, Dan Plesac and Mike Timlin closed out the combined four-hitter.

Only a couple thousand fans were actually in attendance out of the announced crowd of 14,180, braving a game-time temperature of 39 degrees and choosing Comiskey Park over Wrigley Field where the Cubs were playing host to Florida and former White Sox pitcher Alex Fernandez. Royals-Orioles KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Between the medical report and the weather forecast, Bob Boone is having a tough time managing the Kansas City Royals.

Instead of fighting the elements as they did during a snowstorm the previous night, the Royals bowed to rain and cold Thursday and postponed their game against Baltimore, scheduling a two-night doubleheader for Aug. 19.

But forecasters are calling for more of the same, and possible snow and sleet the next few days. That could endanger the weekend series against Minnesota.

Astros end Atlanta win streak at six games

By Tom Salidino
Associated Press

ATLANTA — Jeff Bagwell went 3-for-3, including a solo homer, and drove in two runs Thursday night to power the Houston Astros to a 5-3 victory over Atlanta, ending the Braves winning streak at six games.

The Astros, who had lost two in a row, also handed the Braves their first loss after five wins at Atlanta's new home, Turner Field.

Bagwell's drive over the center field fence on a 3-2 pitch was his first homer of the season and his first ever off Smoltz in 63 at-bats. It gave Houston a 3-2 lead and pinned the loss on Smoltz (1-2), who didn't lose his second game last season until June 24 (14-2) en route to the NL Cy Young award.

Smoltz allowed six hits, three runs, walked four and struck out five in six innings. Rookie Chris Holt (1-0) won his first major-league game despite allowing 13 hits over seven innings.

Braves manager Bobby Cox was ejected in the seventh inning by plate umpire Ed Montague for arguing balls and strikes.

Bagwell walked in the first, doubled in the third and had an RBI triple off reliever Brad Clontz in the seventh and scored on a wild pitch by Alan Embree.

The Astros first baseman missed an opportunity to hit for the cycle — needing a single — when Brad Ausmus grounded into a double play in the ninth inning for the third out with Bagwell on deck.

The Astros had taken a 2-0 lead in the second inning on a two-run homer by Bill Spiers, his first of the season and only the second home run by Houston this season.

The Braves scored on a second-inning leadoff homer by Fred McGriff, an RBI single by Ryan Klesko in the third and a run-scoring double by Chipper Jones in the seventh.

Holt struck out three and walked none. John Hudek pitched the ninth, allowing one hit, for his save.

Notes: The Braves are only the second team this century to win their first five games in a new, permanent home; the Colorado Rockies also won their first five games at Coors Field in 1995. ... After Thursday night's game, the Braves head to frigid Chicago for a three-game series beginning Friday. Sign in the Braves clubhouse: "Pack your cold-weather gear. Temperature Thursday A.M. in Chicago, 21 degrees." ... The sacrifice bunt by Andruw Jones in the 12th inning of Atlanta's 4-3 win over Houston Wednesday night was the first of his pro career (357 games). ... McGriff has reached base in all nine games this season.

Expos-Cardinals ST. LOUIS — A snowstorm forced postponement of today's game between the St. Louis Cardinals and the Montreal Expos.

About 2 inches of snow had fallen and it was 36 degrees when the game was called.

No makeup date was immediately set.

It was only the second regular-season postponement in the last three seasons at Busch Stadium. One game was postponed last year and none in 1995.

Reds-Rockies Cincinnati Reds at Colorado Rockies, postponed, snow. Game will be made up Aug. 25, first game of a day-night doubleheader.

Welterweights take center stage

By Tim Dahlberg
Associated Press

LAS VEGAS — The last time Pernell Whitaker was in a big fight, Oscar De La Hoya was at ringside, wearing his red Julio Cesar Chavez bandana and cheering on the Mexican champion.

Chavez won't be around Saturday night and De La Hoya doesn't figure to come into the ring wearing a red bandana. But, outside the heavyweight ranks, it doesn't get much bigger than the welterweight title fight between the two former Olympic gold medalists.

"It's a super fight for boxing," De La Hoya said. "It's rare because you never see super fights back-to-back. When I fought Chavez, that was a fight you usually see only once a decade. Now I'm fighting Whitaker."

De La Hoya takes yet another step up in weight to collect about $10 million in challenging Whitaker, an aging but still very dangerous fighter who most boxing observers say should still be holding a perfect record.

De La Hoya, who just three years ago weighed 128 pounds, moves up to 147 pounds to face Whitaker for the WBC welterweight title he has held for more than four years.

"I was concerned about the extra pounds," De La Hoya said. "I thought it would slow me down or I would not have the same power. But I feel faster and stronger. The weight has made me better."

It's the second megafight in less than a year for De La Hoya, who stopped Chavez in the fourth round of their 140-pound title fight last June, and the fourth world title he has fought for in a remarkable pro career that has turned him into boxing's newest superstar.

"Everything is coming naturally to me," the 1992 Olympic lightweight gold medalist said. "I want to capture six world titles in six weight classes. That's my goal before I retire."

De La Hoya (23-0, 20 knockouts) is a 3-1 favorite against Whitaker, the 1984 lightweight gold medalist whose only blemishes in a 42-fight career are a disputed lightweight title loss to Jose Ramirez in 1988 and a 1993 draw with Chavez in a fight most think Whitaker won.

The scheduled 12-round fight will be televised on pay-per-view from the UNLV campus arena. A near sellout crowd of about 18,000 is expected.

"They can put their seatbelts on and enjoy the ride," said Whitaker, who will earn at least $4 million.

In Whitaker, De La Hoya will see a fighter unlike any he's faced, a left-handed defensive specialist who comes from different angles and can be frustratingly slippery.

But he also faces a boxer who at the age of 33 is nine years his senior and has shown signs of wearing down in recent years. In his last fight, Whitaker was knocked down twice by Diobelys Hurtado before rallying to knock out the challenger in the 11th round.

"The end is near for him," De La Hoya said. "He fought Hurtado who had no power and was knocked down. When I put my combinations together he'll see a fighter he's never seen before."

Whitaker, though, blames his recent poor showings on being bored and not having any challenges. For De La Hoya, he trained for eight weeks and claims to feel like he did six or seven years ago when he dominated the lightweight ranks as the undisputed champion.

"The way my legs have come back I don't know if he can keep up with my agility and movement and the different looks I will show him," Whitaker said. "Not even for Chavez have I felt as good as I feel for this fight."

It was against Chavez that De La Hoya first saw Whitaker. De La Hoya was with a friend who was a member of the Chavez camp and was wearing the red bandana with Chavez' name on it that his entourage favors.

Women's golf team travels to Georgia

This Week: The Iowa women's golf team travels to Athens, Ga., to play in the Liz Murphey Golf Classic Friday through Sunday at the University of Georgia Golf Course.

Meet Notes: Indiana and Ohio State are the only other Big Ten teams competing in Athens this weekend. The 54-hole tournament features southern powers Georgia, Louisiana State and Auburn. ... The Hawkeyes' fourth-place finish last weekend at the Indiana Invitational moved them from ninth to sixth in the district rankings and No. 56th nationally. ... Coach Diane Thomason is predicting Greg Norman to win the Masters this weekend in Augusta, Ga.

Coach's comment: "This will be a good golf course," Thomason said. "The upperclassmen like this course and it's a tough golf course, so it might take the freshmen a time to adjust. It will certainly help those that hit the ball long and you need to be a good putter here because the greens are pretty slick."

—Andy Hamilton

Invitational in Tempe, Ariz. ... Wysome Cole finished second in the 400-meter hurdles in Tempe with an unofficial time of 59.28 ... Iowa's 4x400-meter team ran a time of 3:47.02, good enough for a third place finish.

Coach's comment: "The team's goal for this meet is to compete with the same intensity that we showed in Tempe, against even greater competition," Coach Jim Grant said. "I expect us to place high in the sprint medley, as well as the distance medley. Individually, Brianna Benning, Wynsome Cole, Ellen Grant, and Ann Paré have the capability to place high in their events."

Looking ahead: The team will have their first home meet of the year next Saturday when they host the Iowa Invitational at Francis X. Cretzmeyer Track.

off Michigan. "We're playing very well right now and I feel as if we're peaking at the right time. Michigan has everything to lose when we play them while we have everything to gain. We've got a lot of confidence right now and we know we'll have to play hard for each opponent."

—Becky Grubb

Men's track team splits for two meets

This week: The Iowa men's track and field team will split squads this weekend with a majority of the team heading to Knoxville, Tenn., to compete in the SeaRay Relays, while the rest of the squad will head to Macomb, Ill., for the Western Invitational on Saturday.

Meet notes: Last week, the Iowa 4x400-meter relay team improved upon its provisional NCAA qualifying time with a 3:06.6 ... According to coach Larry Wiecek, that time ranks as the fifth-best this year nationally ... Chris Davis, Ed Rozell, Tim Dwight and Monte Raymond make up the relay team ... NCAA long jump runner-up and Big Ten champion Bashir Yamini will not join the team for the outdoor season until after spring football practice ... Monte Raymond has been a force in the 400-meter hurdles. Last week, he set a new personal best, finishing in 51.63 seconds.

Coach's Comment: "We hope to qualify some more events down in Knoxville," Wiecek said. "The guys that we think have a shot will be down there, there will be a lot of teams down there."

Next Competition: Iowa will host the Iowa Invite April 19.

Women's tennis team faces Big Ten rivals

This week: Still aglow from its upset victory over Penn State, the Iowa women's tennis team will look for two more when it travels to Michigan State on Saturday and Michigan on Sunday.

Match Notes: The Wolverines and Spartans are at opposite ends of the Big Ten standings. Michigan is currently sitting on top of the conference and rated No. 18 nationally, while Michigan State is in the conference cellar ... Iowa is 8th in the Big Ten ... Michigan's No. 1 singles player is rated No. 49 in the nation.

Coach's Comment: "This is a key weekend for us," coach Jenny Mainz said. "If we want to have any post-season chances, we have to beat Michigan State and try to pick

Women's track team heads to two meets

This week: The Iowa women's track team will take two separate paths when some runners compete in the SeaRay Relays in Knoxville, Tenn., and the rest of the team competes at Western Illinois University. The Hawkeyes will begin competition in Knoxville today, where 49 other teams will provide the opposition.

By Wayne Drehs
The Daily Iowan

Inside or outside? Temperatures below 50 degrees or strong winds usually force the Iowa men's tennis team off the Klotz Tennis Courts and into the UI Recreation Building for home meets.

But with the annual Iowa Indian Association Pow-Wow scheduled in the Recreation building this weekend, the Hawkeyes will make the short trip to Cedar Rapids and hold the match at Coe College if weather doesn't permit outside play.

Iowa is scheduled to face Wisconsin Friday at 2 p.m., and Northwestern Sunday at 12:30 p.m. in the team's last home matches of the season.

"Of course, I'd much rather play at the Rec Building," coach Steve Houghton said. "It's definitely an inconvenience and its no more of a home match for us than it will be for Wisconsin or Northwestern. We are not used to playing there like we are at home."

No matter where Iowa plays, they might be without the services of No. 1 player Tom Derouin, who injured his ankle last weekend against Michigan.

The senior leads the team with an 8-4 overall record against the opposition's top players. His doubles record of 7-5 with teammate Ulf Jentler is the second best on the squad. If he has able to play, Derouin will be looking to win the remainder of his matches in hopes of qualifying for the NCAA Championships at the conclusion of the season.

"His status is really up in the air right now," Houghton said. "It looks like he's going to be o.k. to play doubles, but we'll have to decide at match time if he's going to play singles or not."

With or without Derouin, the road won't be an easy one for Iowa, who faces one of the Big Ten's top teams in the Wildcats (10-4, 5-0). Wisconsin, on the other hand, has struggled much like Iowa has, posting an 8-9 overall mark.

IOWA BASEBALL

Hawkeyes hope for good weather

By Chris James
The Daily Iowan

The toughest foe the Iowa baseball team will have to face this weekend is a familiar foe: the weather.

Today's Big Ten tussle with Indiana was postponed and will instead be made up in a double header on Saturday, weather permitting. The Hawkeyes and the Hoosiers will try to play two on Sunday and finish their four-game series. Both double dips start at 1 p.m. at Iowa Field.

The forecast calls for rain and snow for the whole weekend, so the whole weekend itself is still up in the air.

"We're not going to repeat last weekend," Iowa coach Duane Banks said. "Indiana won't even come here till Friday night. We're just going to play it by ear."

Last Sunday in a 21-15 loss to Penn State, blowing snow made life a living hell for the Hawkeye defense, which made seven errors. The Hawkeyes already have lost five games this season to weather, including a pair of scheduled home games Tuesday and Wednesday against Mankato State and Iowa State.

Iowa is currently alone in fifth place in the Big Ten at 5-6. Indiana is tied with Northwestern for seventh place at 3-5.

Weather has not only spoiled the beginning of Iowa's weekend, but has wreaked havoc on the entire conference. Illinois has one more win than Big Ten leader Minnesota and is in fourth place. The Gophers are 5-1, while the Illini have played twice as many games and stand 6-6.

Indiana has been effective outside of conference play, compiling a 24-9 record. The Hoosiers are the defending Big Ten tournament champions. The Hawkeye bats will be tested by Hoosier pitcher Brian Partenheimer, who has an 8-2 record, 53 strikeouts and a 4.60 ERA.

Indiana took two of three from Iowa last season in Bloomington, although Iowa leads the all time series 58-40.

Banks said he just hopes his team can get some game time in.

"If we lose too many more games, we could be making up things well into May. Hopefully the weather will cooperate for once, but it doesn't look that way right now," Banks said.

AUGUSTA, Ga. — The only thing more incredible about Paul Azinger leading the Masters is the 3-under-par 69 he shot today on some of the slickest greens ever at Augusta National.

That's an unbelievable score," said Fred Couples, the 1992 Masters champion who shot a 72. "What Paul Azinger is doing is like shooting 66 or 65. He's lapping the field."

It was one of the toughest first rounds at the Masters since 1982, when Jack Nicklaus' 69 was the only score below par.

Azinger made only one bogey, at No. 12. His flop wedge to the 15th green rolled 10 yards off on the other side, but he saved par and then had a tremendous two-putt from about 40 feet on No. 16 for par, extending his arms as in flight and running off the green after the second putt from 4 feet fell.

"I've never played this course with greens this hard on a Thursday," said Couples, who was tied with former U.S. Open champion Lee Janzen, Australian Stuart Appleby and David Berganio Jr.

Danny Yates, a committee member at Augusta, suggested that competition officials may have been misled by dry, breezy conditions when they chose the first-round pin positions.

"This is the toughest I've ever seen it play in the first round, maybe any round," Janzen said.

The culprit was the greens, so

Azinger leads Masters with 69

By Doug Ferguson
Associated Press

AUGUSTA, Ga. — The only thing more incredible about Paul Azinger leading the Masters is the 3-under-par 69 he shot today on some of the slickest greens ever at Augusta National.

Azinger, who hasn't been in serious contention in any tournament since his battle with lymphoma after winning the 1993 PGA Championship, made two dangerous par putts and birdied No. 17 for the early lead.

"That's an unbelievable score," said Fred Couples, the 1992 Masters champion who shot a 72. "What Paul Azinger is doing is like shooting 66 or 65. He's lapping the field."

"It was one of the toughest first rounds at the Masters since 1982, when Jack Nicklaus' 69 was the only score below par."

Danny Yates, a committee member at Augusta, suggested that competition officials may have been misled by dry, breezy conditions when they chose the first-round pin positions.

"This is the toughest I've ever seen it play in the first round, maybe any round," Janzen said. The culprit was the greens, so lightning quick that even uphill putts from 10 feet kept players on the defensive.

"I don't see how they can get them any faster," Janzen said. Appleby, the promising Australian who won the Honda Classic last month, had a chance to break par until a bogey at No. 18.

"The main thing is not to make mistakes," Appleby said. "Catching yourself making one or two out here is pretty easy. I hit some great two-putts."

Berganio, who passed up an invitation to Augusta in 1994 as an amateur because he wanted to turn pro, eagled the par-5 15th hole to get to even par and then hung on.

Berganio's caddy had Jose Maria Olazabal's bag when the Spaniard won in 1994.

"He said he doesn't remember them being quite this hard and fast on a Thursday," Berganio said. Most of the favorites had late starts and already were running into problems.

Defending champion Nick Faldo five-putted five times and shot a 41 on the front nine. Tiger Woods, playing with Faldo in his first Masters as a professional, was all over the course and shot a 40 on the front after bogeys at Nos. 8 and 9.

Greg Norman, hoping to erase the misery of his final-round 78 last year, double bogeyed the second hole but was making a strong recovery. He made the turn in 39, but birdies at the 10th and par-3 12th hole got him to 1 over.

Janzen had few complaints about his round of three bogeys and three birdies. Two of his bogeys came on three-putts that showed why no putt was safe today.

He had an uphill 15-foot birdie putt on No. 8 and ran it by 4 feet, then missed the putt coming back. "The same putt on any other greens would only break 6 inches," he said. "Here, they break 15 or 20 inches because they're so fast. You've got to be thinking about stopping it by the hole somehow."

"Some pins, if you get a little bold, it could go by 20 or 30 feet." Temperatures in the 50s, gradually warming as the day went on, and super slick greens were all it took to make Augusta a menace.

"We got to that first green and it was blue," said John Cook, who shot a 77.

WOODS VS. FALDO Dream matchup fizzles at first, sizzles at end

By Paul Newberry
Associated Press

AUGUSTA, Ga. — The buzz that accompanied their every move made it seem like the final round at the Masters — not the first. The throngs began staking out positions just after the gates of Augusta National Golf Club swung open Thursday.

Yet, amid all the tumult, defending champion Nick Faldo and would-be king Tiger Woods encased themselves in a cocoon of relative calm, two men merely going about the work of putting themselves in good position for the more nerve-racking days to follow.

Paired together, Faldo and Woods barely spoke to each other during more than four hours on the course. Even when they wound up standing together for an extended period of time at the 15th tee box, backed up by slow play in front of them, they never found a reason to say a word to each other.

Woods sat on a pine bench, munching on a banana. Faldo stretched his legs and practiced his swing.

"Playing with Nick is nice," Woods said with a smile. "It's a nice, quiet day."

Well, they did speak a few times. Standing together in the second tee box, the two mumbled something to each other out of earshot of the fans, bringing a smile to Tiger's face. After Woods holed out a shot from off the green at No. 12 for a birdie, Faldo went over to congratulate him.

In between, Woods said there were other small exchanges that went unnoticed, even with thousands of eyes watching their every move.

"Playing with Nick is nice. It's a nice, quiet day."

Tiger Woods on playing with Nick Faldo

"We talk a lot more than people might think," Woods said. "I don't know if it's me or not, but he opens up and talks to me occasionally. Granted, it's brief, but people tell me it's different than the so-called norm with Nick."

For Faldo, the emotions of the golf course are kept out of public view. Oh sure, the frustration was readily apparent as he three-putted five greens on the front nine. The three-time Masters champion would pound his putter into the slick, green carpet or occasionally let out a "Whoa!" as the ball skipped past the hole.

Woods was more outgoing, pumping his fist on good shots or flipping his club in the air when things went wrong, as they did quite often on the first nine holes. He squandered the built-in advantage of his wondrous power by spraying shots all over the course. Good thing the blossoms have already fallen off the azaleas at Augusta, or quiet a few undoubtedly would have been knocked off by Woods' errant ball. He was even forced to make one shot with his left foot propped on the curb of a cart path.

When they made the turn at No. 9 — Woods with a 4-over-par 40, Faldo with a 41 — the dream matchup seemed to have fallen flat. Some of the fans even began to peel off, hoping to catch a look at some players who were actually in contention.

Blackhawk playoff chances still uncertain

By Mike Nadel
Associated Press

CHICAGO — If the Chicago Blackhawks make the NHL playoffs for the 28th straight year, they will own the longest active string of postseason appearances in major pro sports.

That it's still an "if" with two games to go is no surprise.

"We never make it easy on ourselves. We haven't all year," said coach Craig Hartsburg, whose Blackhawks blew a chance to clinch a playoff spot Wednesday with a 1-0 home loss to St. Louis.

"We put it off another night and we have to be ready to play more intense. We don't have a lot of time to worry about what slipped away. We've got to look at what's ahead of us Friday night."

That's when the Blackhawks entertain the Calgary Flames. A win or tie puts Chicago in the playoffs, eliminates Calgary and Vancouver, and finalizes the eight-team field in the Western Conference.

If Chicago loses, then things get very interesting.

Calgary closes the season at Toronto on Saturday, the same night Vancouver finishes at home against Edmonton. A victory by either Calgary or Vancouver would force the Blackhawks to win or tie Sunday at Dallas — which is vying for the NHL's best record.

"We need to make sure it doesn't come down to Sunday," Chicago scoring leader Tony Amonte said. "I thought that by five games left in the season, it would be more stabilized. But it's coming down to game 81. And it might come down to game 82."

By winning Wednesday, the Blackhawks not only would have assured themselves of a playoff spot but would have had a chance to move up in the conference standings. Now, they can finish no higher than seventh, "and it looks like we're fighting for eighth," Amonte said.

That probably means a first-round date with Colorado.

Buffalo beats Bruins, 5-1

BOSTON — Miroslav Satan scored two goals and Dominik Hasek recorded his 37th win of the season Thursday as the Buffalo Sabres beat the Boston Bruins 5-1 to capture the NHL's Northeast Division.

It was the first Division championship for the Sabres since they won the Adams Division in the 1980-81 season.

Satan got his first goal with 52 seconds left in the first period as he slammed a rebound off the skate of Boston defenseman Don Sweeney into the net. His second goal of the game, and 25th of the season, capped a Buffalo scoring spree of three goals in 85 seconds in the second period.

Rangers 6, Flyers 3
PHILADELPHIA — The Philadelphia Flyers, their captain sitting out the first game of his two-game suspension, gave up a 6-3 loss to the Rangers on Thursday night, their second defeat by New York this week.

Pat Flatley scored twice and Darren

Langdon, Adam Graves and Niklas Sundstrom each had a goal and an assist for the Rangers, who also beat the Flyers 3-2 Monday night.

Eric Lindros was suspended for two high-sticking incidents in that game.

Capitals 3, Canadiens 2
LANDOVER, Md. — The Washington Capitals kept their slim playoff hopes alive Thursday night, beating the Montreal Canadiens 3-2 for a four-game sweep of the season series.

Bill Ranford had 21 saves for the Capitals, who trail Hartford and Ottawa by two points in the battle for the eighth and final playoff spot in the Eastern Conference. All three teams have two games to play, none against each other.

Lightning 4, Penguins 3
TAMPA, Fla. — Dino Ciccarelli bounced the puck off the goalpost in the third period to give Tampa Bay a 4-3 victory over the Pittsburgh Penguins on Thursday night and keep the Lightning in the playoff race.

It was only sixth time the Lightning have rallied for a victory when behind after two periods (6-27-3). Tampa Bay moved within one point of Hartford and Ottawa for the eighth and final Eastern Conference playoff berth. All have two games left.

Blues 5, Maple Leafs 1
ST. LOUIS — Harry York had two goals and an assist, and surprise starter Jon Casey made 16 saves as the St. Louis Blues rolled to a 5-1 win over the Toronto Maple Leafs Thursday night.

Casey had not appeared in a game since Feb. 23 against Calgary. Grant Fuhr, who shut out Chicago 1-0 Wednesday night, had played in 17 straight and 72 overall.

The victory put the Blues at .500 (35-35-11) for the first time since Feb. 25. St. Louis has 81 points and is in a tie for fifth place in the Western Conference with Edmonton and Phoenix. The Blues have one game remaining Sunday in Detroit and can finish no worse than seventh.

Fenway Park

By Jimmy Associate

BOSTON — Lauded by John Updike, Fenway Park is fast becoming a lyric li-foot high Coke bottles have been hung from the rafters. The advertisement covers three sides of the net that keeps home runs from leaving the park. The Red Sox have said the bottle-batteries (some of it for charity) — more market teams with their layers of luxury boxes and megabucks marketing deals.

"Anything that brings in that kind of revenue, I'm for," general manager Dan Duquette said Thursday as his team prepared for Friday's home opener against Seattle. "It's a Classic Coke for a classic ballpark."

But others wonder if the presence of the bottles is defacing the beloved ballpark.

"If this is the way they're going to treat Fenway, they might as well tear it down," said John Carroll, head of the Carroll Creative Inc. advertising firm in nearby Brookline. "There's no question the Red Sox are getting squeezed. But you would hope that some things would be off-limits."

Red Sox marketing vice president Larry Cancro did not return a call seeking comment. But CEO John Harrington said team decided the ads are less intrusive home plate than other ballparks are. Harrington also noted that the New York Yankees spent $95 million over 10 years to renovate Yankee Stadium.

Other arenas — including the Fenway Boston Garden — have sold signs more recognizable than Kenmore Square's Wall even though it is a blatant marketing tool, even there.

There's only one reason for this: money. He also noted that the Citgo sign, which makes it different in his mind, is a turmpike toll ticket or in a subway car. "Why is it different?" he asked. "It's a position in people's experience and their own lives."

Carroll's objections notwithstanding, the ballpark experience as trampled by many minor-league and spring training outfield walls covered with ads, including before it was painted green in 1914. "Those look almost charming at the time, but they're just a bunch of ads," he said. "There's something about the advertising now that I think strikes me as different."

Harrington stressed that some of the ads will go to the Jimmy Fund, a cancer charity. Additional donations will be made from the bottles with a home run.

First baseman Mo Vaughn is already seeing the bottles for the first time. He said: "I haven't seen them official yet."

Taking the field, he upgraded his asse-

Fenway Park goes from bandbox to brand-box

By Jimmy Golden Associated Press

BOSTON - Lauded by John Updike as a "lyric little bandbox," Fenway Park is fast becoming a lyric little brand-box now that three 20-foot high Coke bottles have been hung conspicuously above its famous Green Monster.

The advertisement covers three sides of a light standard, just above the net that keeps home runs from pelting Lansdowne Street below. The Red Sox have said the bottle-boards will bring in more than $1 million (some of it for charity) - money necessary to compete with big-market teams with their layers of luxury boxes and megabucks marketing deals.

"Anything that brings in that kind of revenue, I'm for," general manager Dan Duquette said Thursday as his team prepared for Friday's home opener against Seattle. "It's a classic Coke for a classic ballpark."

But others wonder if the presence of the bottles is defacing the beloved ballpark.

"If this is the way they're going to treat Fenway, they might as well tear it down," said John Carroll, head of the Carroll Creative Inc. advertising firm in nearby Brookline. "There's no question the Red Sox are getting squeezed. But you would hope that some things would be off-limits."

Red Sox marketing vice president Larry Canero did not return a call seeking comment. But CEO John Harrington said during spring training that the team decided the ads are less intrusive than the rotating signs behind home plate that other ballparks are using to maximize TV exposure.

Harrington also noted that the New York Yankees had signed a deal with Adidas for $95 million over 10 years to put its name and logo all over Yankee Stadium.

Other arenas - including the FleetCenter, which replaced the beloved Boston Garden - have sold their names outright. And nothing is more recognizable than Kenmore Square's landmark Citgo sign, visible over the Wall even though it is several blocks away.

"The Citgo sign is arguably there for some historical value. It's not as blatant a marketing tool," even though it once was, Carroll said. "There's only one reason for this: money."

He also noted that the Citgo sign is not on the ballpark premises, which makes it different in his mind than advertising on the back of a turnpike toll ticket or in a subway car.

"Why is it different?" he asked. "Because Fenway has a different position in people's experience and there's an attachment to it more than a toll ticket."

Carroll's objections notwithstanding, advertising is as much a part of the ballpark experience as trampled peanut shells. Old parks, as well as many minor-league and spring training sites, have their entire outfield walls covered with ads, including Fenway's 37-foot-high Monster before it was painted green in 1947.

"Those look almost charming at this point," Carroll said. "It's one thing to sell every inch of space inside the ballpark, but I think this is worse. There's something about the high-tech relentlessness of the advertising now that I think strikes the wrong cord."

Harrington stressed that some of the money - at least $100,000 - will go to the Jimmy Fund, a cancer charity long favored by the Red Sox. Additional donations will be made for each time a player hits one of the bottles with a home run.

First baseman Mo Vaughn is already taking aim - with his mouth. After seeing the bottles for the first time on his drive to the workout, he said: "I haven't seen them officially yet, but they already look stupid."

Taking the field, he upgraded his assessment to "disgusting."

Elise Amendola/Associated Press

Twenty-foot high Coca-Cola bottles are seen perched above Fenway Park's famous "Green Monster" Thursday.

"What's next? The players wearing Coke bottle caps on their heads?" Carroll asked. "Here's a good promotion: A fan gets to come out in the seventh-inning stretch and pop the cap off the Red Sox player, and if he picks the right one, he wins something. And of course we'll give something to the Jimmy Fund, too."

Alabama assistant named Minnesota head coach

By Ron Lesko Associated Press

MINNEAPOLIS - Cheryl Littlejohn, the top women's basketball assistant at Alabama, will get the Minnesota coaching job today, sources told The Associated Press.

Littlejohn, the lead recruiter since 1994 for one of the top programs in the nation, will replace Linda Hill-MacDonald, who resigned last month after going 1-31 in the Big Ten over the past two seasons.

A 3 p.m. news conference has been called to announce the new coach. Two sources who spoke on the condition of anonymity said Littlejohn would get the job.

Chris Voelz, Minnesota's women's athletic director, was not available for comment today. Senior associate director Donna Olson would neither confirm nor deny the report.

Kaiser-Brown, Little return for Drake Relays

DES MOINES, Iowa (AP) - Hometown favorites Kevin Little and Nataasha Kaiser-Brown are returning for their 14th Drake Relays.

Little - who tied the American indoor record of 20.40 seconds in winning the 200 meters at the World Championships last month - will run in the invitational 400. He has competed at every Drake Relays since his sophomore year at Ankeny High School, including his career at Drake.

Kaiser-Brown - second in the U.S. Indoor 400 and a member of the American-record setting 4x400 team that finished second at the World Indoor - will run in the women's 400. She was a member of the 1992 silver-medal 4x400 Olympic team. The Drake Relays are April 25-26.

Iowa State player gets four days in jail after pleading guilty

NEVADA, Iowa (AP) - Iowa State University basketball player Penny Pratt was sentenced to four days in jail following a plea bargain in Story County District Court today.

Pratt pleaded guilty to three charges while a fourth count, drunken driving, was dropped.

Associate District Judge Steven Van Marel also sentenced Pratt to fines totaling $500 plus a 30 percent surcharge and court costs. He was given 120 days to pay the fines and ordered to arrange the jail time before June 20.

Pratt was charged following a traffic accident in Ames on Dec. 28. He pleaded guilty today of reckless driving, serious misdemeanor assault on a police officer and interference with official acts.

Pratt, 23, completed his eligibility at Iowa State in the past season. Coach Tim Floyd suspended Pratt after his arrest in the case last December, but an athletic department committee reinstated him.

Longley rescues Bulls, 105-103

By Chris Sheridan
Associated Press

NEW YORK — Michael Jordan scored 20 of his 34 points in the final 7 1/2 minutes and Luc Longley made two free throws with 5.4 seconds left after rebounding a rare Jordan miss as Chicago defeated New York 105-103 Thursday night.

Longley's two free throws gave Chicago its first lead since early in the third quarter and completed the Bulls' comeback from a 10-point fourth-quarter deficit.

New York still had a chance to win, but Jordan made Chris Childs alter his shot on a drive to the basket, then got a hand on the ball as Charles Oakley was ready to shoot from underneath with less than a second left.

The Bulls improved to 68-10 with their fifth straight victory and retained a chance to match last year's NBA-record 72 victories. Chicago has already clinched home-court advantage throughout the postseason.

Patrick Ewing had 20 points and Larry Johnson 19 for New York, which lost its third straight home game.

The Knicks had no answer for Jordan down the stretch. He scored nine straight Chicago points while being guarded by Allan Houston, helping pull Chicago to 91-90 with 5:14 left.

The Knicks then put Johnson on him, but Jordan made a pair of jumpers and went 5-for-6 from the line to pull the Bulls into a 103-103 tie with 44 seconds left.

Scottie Pippen, who scored 33 points, then deflected an entry pass, grabbed the loose ball and called timeout while falling out of bounds to give Chicago the ball with 27 seconds left.

Predictably, the ball went to Jordan. He faked John Starks off his

His two foul shots provided the final lead change in a game that seven of them along with eight ties.

NBA ROUNDUP

Heat takes Atlantic championship

MIAMI (AP) — The Miami Heat beat Detroit 93-83 Thursday night, then clinched their first Atlantic Division championship 15 minutes later when second-place New York lost to Chicago.

The title assures Miami of the No. 2 seed in the Eastern Conference playoffs behind the Bulls. The Heat will have the home-court advantage through the first two rounds, and they won't face the Bulls before the conference finals.

Tim Hardaway scored 30 points for the Heat, including the last of four consecutive 3-pointers for Miami in the fourth quarter. Alonzo Mourning added 26 points for Miami, which has won six in a row.

Detroit's Grant Hill just missed a triple-double with 21 points, nine rebounds and eight assists. Terry Mills scored 24 points for the Pistons, who have lost three straight.

Nets 93, Bucks 88
EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. — Jimmy Jackson had 24 points, 11 rebounds and 10 assists for his first career triple-double as the New Jersey Nets defeated the Milwaukee Bucks.

Gerald Wilkins added 19 points for the Magic, who held Toronto to 29.4 percent shooting from the field. Toronto's 69 points broke the previous team low of 70 against Minnesota on Nov. 30.

Blazers 98, Spurs 81
SAN ANTONIO — Rasheed Wallace scored 19 points and Portland used two spurts in the second quarter to beat San Antonio 98-81 Thursday night.

The Trail Blazers' starters outscored San Antonio's first five, 75-27.

Arvydas Sabonis had 18 points and 12 rebounds for the Blazers, who had runs of 12-0 and 10-0 in the second period when they outscored the Spurs 26-10.

Magic 105, Raptors 69
TORONTO — Dennis Scott scored 20 points and Orlando held Toronto to its lowest point total ever. The Magic tightened their grip on the seventh playoff spot in the Eastern Conference, taking a 3 1/2-game lead over Washington and Cleveland. If they finish seventh, they will avoid a first-round meeting with the defending champion Chicago Bulls.

New Jersey Nets' Sam Cassell, left, runs into the defense of Milwaukee Bucks' Sherman Douglas during the first half Thursday night.

Alexander had 10 apiece. SuperSonics 90, Mavericks 82
DALLAS — Hersey Hawkins scored 17 points and Gary Payton had 16 to lead Seattle over Dallas.

Terry Cummings added 14 points and Sam Perkins 13 for the Sonics. But Shawn Kemp continued to struggle for Seattle, scoring only six points in 31 minutes. Kemp, who was 0-for-4 from the field, scored all his points from the free-throw line.

Michael Finley scored 25 and Sasha Danilovic added 22 for the Mavericks, who have lost 12 of their last 13 games.

Rockets 102, Grizzlies 94
HOUSTON — Charles Barkley, making his first home appearance in six weeks, had 21 points and 12 rebounds as Houston beat Vancouver.

Hakeem Olajuwon added 18 points and 12 rebounds for the Rockets, who won for the fourth straight time to keep pace with Seattle for the second-best record in the Western Conference.

Rhodes Dunlap Honors Program Scholarship Winners

The Rhodes Dunlap Honors Program Scholarships were established through a bequest of Samuel Rhodes Dunlap, founder of the Honors Program at The University of Iowa. He served as its director from 1958 to 1981. Dunlap was also a professor of English at The University of Iowa. He was a Rhodes Scholar at Oxford University in England and held degrees from Rice University (B.A.) and Oxford University (Ph.D.). Rhodes Dunlap Honors Program Scholarships carry a monetary value of $2,000 each and are awarded to undergraduate students in the College of Business Administration, Education, Engineering, Liberal Arts, Nursing and Pharmacy at The University of Iowa in recognition of outstanding academic achievement in course work with the Honors Program. This is the second year of the award. The awards will be presented at The Honors Award Ceremony on April 12, 1997.

Fourteen award winners were selected from the College of Liberal Arts.

Shelly Bierbaum, a sophomore from Griswold, Iowa, receives a Rhodes Dunlap Honors Program Scholarship for her study in both Exercise Science and Speech and Hearing Science. Bierbaum's future goals are to attend medical school to study the causes, cognitive effects, and physical effects of strokes.

Jennifer Blair, a junior from Knoxville, Iowa, will receive a Rhodes Dunlap Scholarship to continue her education in History and Museology. Blair hopes to complete an honors thesis by researching the status of women in colonial American and their economic impact on the colony.

Sonal Bhasker Dave, a sophomore from Independence, Iowa, will use her Rhodes Dunlap Scholarship to continue her study in Microbiology and Pre-Medicine. Dave plans to attend medical school.

Lynne Kvapil, a senior from Toledo, Iowa, receives a Rhodes Dunlap Scholarship for her future study in Classics. Kvapil is working toward graduation with honors in Classics and plans to continue her study of Classics in either a Ph.D. or Masters Degree program.

Kimberly Life, a junior from Iowa City, Iowa, will receive a Rhodes Dunlap Scholarship to help further her education in Economics. Life's future plans include attending graduate school to earn a joint MBA/JD in Finance and International Law.

Reid Longmuir, a junior from Arlington, Iowa, receives a Rhodes Dunlap Scholarship for his study in Biology. Longmuir hopes to attend graduate school to further his study in genetics.

Michael Miller, a junior from Strawberry Point, Iowa, will receive a Rhodes Dunlap Scholarship to continue his study in English. Miller plans to graduate with honors by completing a research project on the absence of the father figure in the African-American novel.

William Nichols, a junior from Ames, Iowa, is a double major in Electrical Engineering and Music. Nichols plans to use his Rhodes Dunlap Scholarship to help finance attendance at the Brevard Center for Music in North Carolina.

Willene Owens Luper, a senior from Davenport, Iowa, is a double major in Journalism and Education. Luper, the gospel choir director of Voices of Soul, plans to student teach next fall in either Boston or Africa.

Wade Pfau, a senior from Des Moines, Iowa, will receive a Rhodes Dunlap Scholarship to assist him in his study of Economics. Pfau plans to earn Honors degrees in three departments, Economics, Political Science, and History. Pfau's future plans include attending graduate school to continue his education in Economics.

David Reynolds, a senior from Solon, Iowa, receives a Rhodes Dunlap Scholarship to further his education in Math and Physics. Reynold's future plans include studying the topology of quantum spaces, its relationship with knot theory, and how both areas pertain to General Relativity.

Weston Waterbeck, a senior from Marshalltown, Iowa, will receive a Rhodes Dunlap Scholarship to continue his education in Biochemistry. Waterbeck plans to become a doctor in the field of family practice.

Anne West, a junior from Waverly, Iowa, is majoring in Political Science. West will receive a Rhodes Dunlap Scholarship to spend a semester in Washington D. C. at the Washington Center.

Jessica Wiskus, a junior from Lisbon, Iowa, is a double major in Music and Comparative Literature. She will receive a

Honors at Iowa

Honors Recognition Week is emblematic of the philosophy of the Honors Program: to involve and reward all students at Iowa who place academics at the center of their collegiate life. This philosophy aims at an Honors Program rich in opportunities for students such as honors courses, research programs, honors degrees, teaching internships, and special honors majors. It is a program dedicated to giving students opportunities to be challenged by faculty, challenged by other honors students, and most of all, challenged by themselves.

When the University of Iowa established the Liberal Arts Honors Program in 1958, it was one of only a few dozen honors programs in the United States. Under the 23-year direction of English professor Rhodes Dunlap, the Honors Program mushroomed from less than 100 students to over 1,000. Its facilities were transformed from a small office in Schaeffer Hall to a substantial house at 303 Capitol Street. In 1981, Professor Donald Marshall became the new Director of Honors and the Program moved to its new headquarters at 219 North Clinton Street, better known as Shambaugh House. In 1986, Irwin Levin, Professor of Psychology, took over the directorship.

Nineteen ninety-one marked the beginning of the university-wide Honors Program, which includes the Colleges of Business Administration, Education, Engineering, Liberal Arts, Nursing, and Pharmacy. Over 3,000 students are members of the university-wide program, which is currently under the direction of David Klemm, Professor in the School of Religion, who replaced Levin in 1992.

All undergraduates with at least a 3.2 cumulative grade point average are invited to join the Honors Program.

Shambaugh House

In 1901, political science professor Benjamin Shambaugh began construction on a new home at 219 North Clinton Street. For the next forty years, Benjamin and his wife, Bertha, entertained guests at Shambaugh House. Duke Alexander of Russia, Amelia Earhart, Jane Addams, and Thornton Wilder were among the thousands who enjoyed the hospitality of the Shambaughs. Besides the famous, the Shambaughs always invited faculty and students into their home, making Shambaugh House the social and intellectual heart of the University.

Today, the Honors Program carries on the tradition of the Shambaughs. Shambaugh House Honors Center is a hub of activity; receptions for visiting international undergraduates, seminars conducted by visiting faculty, discussion with University of Iowa faculty, and workshops concerning scholarships and graduate programs are all a part of the life of Shambaugh House. The House also serves as a meeting place for various national honors organizations such as Phi Eta Sigma and Phi Beta Kappa. Shambaugh House is, most importantly, a place for honors students to study, socialize and relax. The house is furnished with a library, IBM and Macintosh computers, copy machine, kitchen, cable television, VCR, seminar room, and a Ping-Pong table.

Shambaugh House Honors Center is open Monday through Thursday from 8:00 a.m. to 11:00 p.m., Friday from 8:00 a.m. to 5:00 p.m. and Sunday from 2:00 to 11:00 p.m. Shambaugh House is accessible to physically challenged students.

Honors Curriculum

In addition to honors coursework offered in individual majors, the Honors Program offers over thirty lower division "Honors" sections and courses. The Honors Program began offering Honors Rhetoric in the Fall of 1995 taught by tenured Professors at the University of Iowa. The course satisfies the 10:3 Rhetoric requirement. Honors seminars, which began in the Fall of 1994, are small classes of first and second year honors students taught by leading faculty at the University of Iowa. Honors courses are listed each semester in the Schedule of Courses under "Honors Program" and are open to all members of the Honors Program. By special arrangement with an instructor and the Honors Program, students may designate any course in the College of Liberal Arts an "Honors course." To arrange honors designation, the student must speak with the instructor during the first four weeks of the semester and agree upon a special project that would enrich the course.

Honors Commendation goes to students who take Honors classes. University of Iowa students who have completed four honors courses, with a minimum grade of B in each of the graded courses before they have completed their second year or their first 59 semester hours, whichever comes last, will be selected to receive Honors Commendation.

Honors Degrees

All students who rank in the top ten percent of their graduating class will graduate with either distinction, high distinction or highest distinction; however, students who wish to graduate with honors must attain more than a high grade point average. Requirements for an honors degree typically include: (1) maintaining a specified grade point average in general and major course-work; (2) successfully completing an honors project, usually under the supervision of a faculty member; (3) completing special honors courses in the major, such as an honors seminar. The nature of Honors projects varies, according to the nature of the discipline, but one element is common: all projects are designed to stretch the student's thinking and abilities through the guidance of faculty.

Honors Research

The Honors Research Scholars Program allows students to work one-on-one with a faculty member as a research assistant. The program matches the interests of students with the research projects of faculty. In return for their assistance, students receive three hours of course credit on a satisfactory/fail basis.

Honors Teaching Internships

The Honors Teaching Internship provides outstanding senior honors students with the opportunity to assist a faculty member in teaching a lower division course. Teaching interns do not carry the full responsibilities of a graduate teaching assistant, but they do take an active role in the course. In return for the roughly ten hours per week teaching interns are required to devote to their duties, they receive up to three hours course credit on a satisfactory/fail basis.

Three University of Iowa students receive prestigious awards

Honors Recognition Week is a celebration of undergraduate excellence at The University of Iowa. This year, The Honors Program is pleased to announce that three undergraduate students were selected as recipients of prestigious national scholarships.

Sarah Holstein, a senior Chemistry major from Iowa City, Iowa, was selected to the USA Today's All-USA Academic Team. The newspaper selects 60 college students from more than 1,200 students annually as their top scholars. Holstein presented her research in synthesizing RAS protein inhibitors to win the award. Sarah has been active in The University of Iowa symphony band, is a member of Phi Beta Kappa and Mortar Board, and has joined a national chemistry fraternity. Sarah's future plans include working toward a medical degree and a doctorate in Chemistry.

Michael Schnieders and Jennifer Meyer were selected as recipients of the Barry M. Goldwater Scholarship. Schnieders is a Biomedical Engineering major from West Branch, Iowa. Meyer is a Microbiology major from Dubuque, Iowa. The Barry M. Goldwater Scholarship Program was created to encourage outstanding students to pursue careers in mathematics, the natural sciences or engineering and to foster excellence in those fields. The awards are bestowed upon both sophomores and juniors. It is expected that students selected as scholars will pursue graduate degrees.

The College of Engineering selected two Rhodes Dunlap Scholarship Winners, Amanda Ennis and Katherine Redford. Ennis, a sophomore Mechanical Engineering major from Taylorville, Illinois, is currently studying the reasons why students are dropping out of the engineering program. Ennis plans to continue this investigation in order to complete a Senior Honors Project. Redford, a sophomore Biomedical Engineering major from St. Louis, Missouri, plans to attend graduate school to obtain a Master's Degree or Ph.D. in Biomedical Engineering.

The College of Pharmacy selected two Rhodes Dunlap Scholarship Winners, Christopher Wittich and David Blaha. Wittich, a Pharmacy student from Mount Pleasant, Iowa, is currently conducting a study aiming to establish a more efficient human hergulin protein production system using modern methods of genetic engineering. Blaha, a Pharmacy student from Urbandale, Iowa, plans to study drugs used in the control of pain as his honors project.

The University of Iowa Honors Program has also awarded 15 Rhodes Dunlap Academic Awards. These awards carry a monetary value of $500 each and are awarded to students in the Colleges of Business Administration, Education, Engineering, Liberal Arts, Nursing, and Pharmacy. The list of winners is the following:

- Daniel Bray-A senior History major from Iowa City, Iowa.
- Ronald Schwenn-A senior Political Science major from Crestwood, Illinois.
- Marie Rutkoski-A junior double major in English and Art from Bolingbrook, Illinois.
- Christopher King-A senior Art and Art History major from Omaha, Nebraska.
- Justin Engelhardt-A senior Classics major from Denison, Iowa.
- Esperanza Helms-A junior Spanish and

Honors Recipients

the College of Liberal Arts is Chad Doobay. A Communication Studies major from Ames, Iowa, Doobay plans to pursue a career in international relations. Doobay serves as a member of the Student Activities Board for The University of Iowa Student Government, serves as a Liturgical Minister for the Newman Center, and plays clarinet with The University of Iowa Concert Band.

The 1996 winners of the Dewey B. Stuit Scholarship for an Outstanding Sophomore are Rebecca Chacko and Eric Wood. Chacko, a Biology and Spanish double major from Ames, Iowa, spent last summer in Costa Rica studying Spanish and ecology. Chacko's future goals include becoming a doctor for the underprivileged. Chacko is captain of the Ultimate Frisbee Club, is a volunteer for the Women's Resource Action Center, and has been a member of the Dance Marathon Marole Team. Wood, a Music major from Saint Cloud, Minnesota, is currently researching the structural composition of Maurice Ravel's music. Wood is an active participant in the School of Music, serves on the Residence Halls Fine Arts Council, and is Vice-President of Athletics for Stanley Residence Hall.

The winner of the 1996 James D. Robertson Scholarship for a Junior in the Social Sciences is Dan Pinegar. Pinegar is a Political Science and Communication Studies double major from Marshalltown, Iowa. Pinegar spent the summer of 1996 as a volunteer in the Department of Democracy and Human Rights within the United States Information Agency. Pinegar is the President and charter member of the Legal Forum and Trial Association and serves as a senator for the UISG University Collegiate Senate.
