Faculty say lack of funds hinders ability to teach effectively

When UI physics and astronomy Professor Gerald Payne describes his job two words come to mind -"depressing and frustrating."

Payne, along with many other faculty members who work in science departments within the UI's College of Liberal Arts (CLA), said and faculty is difficult.

"It's depressing because I can't do the job I should be doing," Payne said. "We want to educate the stuequipment to do that, that's than what we have now." depressing."

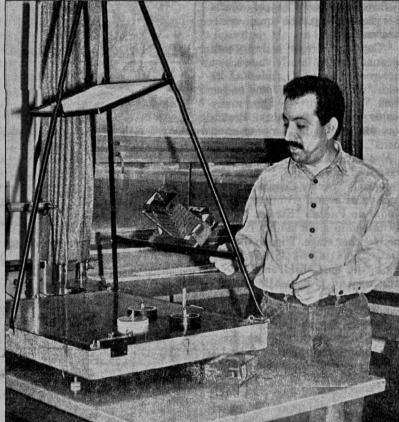

In an attempt to help cover the costs of lab equipment maintenance, students taking labs will pay lab fees between $5 and $90 starting this summer. In the spring of 1996, a total of 929 students had majors in the sciences.

Some science departments within the CLA have conducted infrastructure studies to examine the costs of acquiring new equipment and upgrading the old ones. Payne said the physics and astronomy department needs $1.5 million in order to improve the condition of undergraduate teaching supplies. Some equipment in his department hasn't been replaced in 20 to 25 years, despite the fact most of the instruments only have a lifetime of five to 10 years.

First dean candidate stresses diversity

By Jennifer Cassell The Daily Iowan

Dean candidate Michael Fisher said Friday he is pro-diversity, against splitting up the College of Liberal Arts and an advocate of undergraduate education.

Fisher, who is one of three candidates for the position, presented his visions for UI's College of Liberal Arts (CLA) at a public symposium Friday to an audience of about 25. As interim dean of Arts and Sciences at the University of New Mexico, Fisher said his past experiences relate to possible scenarios he might face at the UI.

One example was of a lesbian professor who had to deal with coworkers who didn't accept her because of her sexual orientation. Fisher correlated this experience with the UI's problems of diversity within the CLA's faculty.

"A dean's role is to encourage and persuade departments that this (lack of diversity) is a problem," he said. "You have to work carefully with department heads in welcoming faculty that are already there."

Fisher expressed also an interest in curbing the problems of undergraduate student complaints about classes being too large and professors being unavailable outside of the classroom.

Internal and external reviews of the CLA done one year ago sparked discussion of the possibility of splitting the 42-department CLA into smaller subdivisions.

Fisher said he was opposed strongly to dividing the college and would rather find ways to be more attentive to the needs of each department. As dean, his role would be to act as a watchdog over the allocation of resources within the CLA, he said.

"You have to be an advocate for the college as a whole and a referee to make sure funds are being split up equitably," he said.

Search Committee unique program they won't find elsewhere is one of Fisher's primary goals for the CLA. One way of doing so, he said, was featuring the best laboratories, libraries and equipment, as well as attracting the best faculty.

In addition, Fisher would like to see more undergraduate degree options, and a diversity of students and faculty and more students involved in research with professors. He stressed also the importance of professors balancing their time between working in the classrooms and working in the laborato-"The choice between teaching and research is a false one," he said. "Teaching and research are interdependent, they benefit from each other."

Although Fisher said he didn't like rigidity in general education requirements, he said he did understand the need for them and would like to diversify some of the course options. Doing more teaching evaluations and monitoring Teaching Assistants are two other topics, Fisher discussed concerning undergraduate education.

LOS ANGELES (AP) - The mother of slain rapper Tupac Shakur is suing Death Row Records for $17 million, claiming the hip-hop label failed to pay royalties and cheated Shakur out of millions of dollars.

The federal lawsuit filed Friday follows a $7.1 million lawsuit Death Row filed against Shakur's estate earlier this month, demanding reimbursement for money allegedly advanced to Shakur for cars, houses, jewelry and other expenditures, including recording and video costs.

Besides seeking unpaid royalties and repayment of disputed expense billings, the countersuit from Shakur's estate seeks to invalidate a handwritten 1995 contract Shakur signed with Death Row while in prison.

Shakur died with little more than $150,000 yet Death Row reaped more than $100 million from his

About 100 guests were on hand for the wedding at St. John's Episcopal Chapel, the Rev. Jerome Politzer told the Monterey County Herald.

The couple exchanged vows at 6:45 p.m. in front of the Rev. Charles Gard, pastor of Holy Family Catholic Church in Glendale and a longtime family friend of Shields.

The two superstars reportedly were introduced at a tennis match in 1993 and kept in touch by fax until their first date.

performances from such companies as the American Ballet Theatre, the Sydney Dance Company, The National Ballet of Canada, as well as Australia's Tap Dogs.

Hancher director Wally Chappell said it is often difficult to bring ongoing major goals for upcoming many of the performances and companies to Hancher due to its Midwestern location.

"A well-known group such as the Chieftains will not just go to Iowa and return to Ireland," he said. "They have to not only be on tour, but be touring through the Midwest. And sometimes these companies will come through only every second, third or fourth year, or only at certain times of the year. It is very tricky scheduling, more of it a function of what's available rather than what is particularly good." The 1996-97 season proved to be one of the most financially successful years in Hancher's history - due to line-ups featuring family favorites - and Chappel expects this year's lineup to be equally wellreceived.

'Cats' and 'Grease' sell very well because they're family shows, not just geared towards students," he said. "Whole families come to see them. You'd be surprised how many people have heard of these Broadway shows but have never seen

Though there is limited seating of 250 bleacher seats, the four children's performances and two public performances are expected to be sell-outs, Chappell said.

However, despite Hancher's heavily publicized events, it is its classi-Sarah Bleeden work for half of it!" Among attempting to schedule the Broadway hit "Rent" and the Irish dance group Riverdance, Chappell said two of Hancher's seasons are to expand people's perceptions of art and entertainment, and to improve audience awareness of the various performances.

"We got a great response from Barishnikov's White Oak Dance Project, but a few of our audience members were more than surprised when they discovered it was not classical but modern dance," Chappell said. "They didn't read the articles or press information, didn't know what to expect at the performance and got upset when it was different than what they expected."

Hancher always will continue to strive for only the best and excellent in its seasonal performances, goals and contribution to the culture of Iowa City, said Armando Duarte, UI assistant professor of dance.

"What Hancher is able to bring to the community and even to the Midwest is incredible," Armando said. "It is one of the most important cultural centers around and is able to bring amazing kinds of high-caliber art and culture to the community. JERUSALEM - Prosecutors said Sunday they will not charge Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu with fraud and breach of trust, rejecting police recommendations, but called his conduct puzzling.

"The decision is to close - for lack of sufficient evidence - the case against the prime minister," Attorney General Elyakim Rubintein said at a news conference.

However, Netanyahu's reputation and credibility were damaged by the three-month investigation into an influence-peddling scandal. With coalition allies threatening to bolt his government, he still faces a major political crisis.

Rubinstein said Justice Minister Tsachi Hanegbi also would not be charged in the scandal. However, he said, prosecutors still were weighing an indictment against Arieh Deri, head of the ultra-Orthodox Shas Party, a key ally in Netanyahu's coalition, for fraud and extortion.

Netanyahu's top political aide, Avigdor Lieberman, and a contrac-David Appel, would face further investigation, Rubinstein said.

Rubinstein said the evidence provided by police did suggest Netanyahu might have appointed Roni Bar-On as attorney general to satisfy a coalition ally who is facing a corruption trial. Netanyahu's actions "raised puzzling questions," he said. "From the evidence there is suspicion that there were other (than legitimate) considerations" in the appointment. "But we don't think this can be proved beyond a reasonable Natan Sharansky.

A government official close to ter received the prosecutors' report in advance and that the language used in reference to him was "very mild." He said the report accused Netanyahu of "failing to internalize" warnings he received against appointing Bar-On in January.

Police had recommended fraud and breach of public trust charges against Netanyahu. They also proposed charging Lieberman, Hanegbi and Deri.

Labor Party leader Shimon Peres, who maintained that Netanyahu should resign anyway, said the scandal killed off plans for a national unity government to pursue the Israel-Palestinian peace process.

"Right now the chances are low, almost non-existent," Peres told

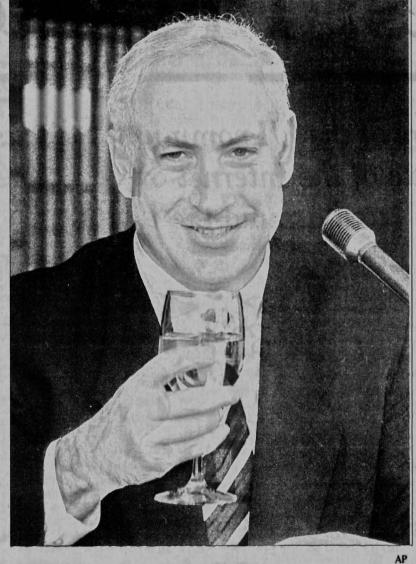

The scandal erupted in January when Channel 1 television reported that Deri, who has been on trial for seven years on corruption charges, arranged for two Shas Cabinet ministers to support the withdraw-al of Israeli troops from much of the West Bank city of Hebron.

In return, Bar-On, a little-known lawyer and Likud politician was to be appointed attorney general, and tor who is close to Netanyahu, he was to reduce the charges against Deri to misdemeanors.

Netanyahu faced a political crisis no matter what the outcome, and it was uncertain if defections from his coalition would force new elections.

He began a damage-control campaign even before the decision was announced. Aides said he called in members of his party and the coalition who were considering pulling out of the government. These included Communications Minister Limor Livnat, Police Minister Avigdor Kahalani and Trade Minister Netanyahu now controls 66 seats but if Shas bolts with its 10 members the government could be imperiled.

Yehudah Avidan, a close Deri aide, said the Shas leader was being made a scapegoat and "it is my gut feeling that the reaction will be to leave" the coalition.

David Bar-Illan, media adviser to Netanyahu, said the premier would not seek a new mandate

Clinton officials push for chemical-weapons ban

By Jim Abrams Associated Press

WASHINGTON - America's world leadership is at stake, the Clinton administration's top foreign policy officials insisted Sunday as they pressed for ratification of a treaty banning chemical weapons. The Senate takes up the pact Thursday in a vote too close to call.

"We are the superpower. We are the leader. This is a leadership question," Secretary of State Madeleine Albright said, her explanation of why the Senate must ratify the convention that imposes a global ban on the use, production, transfer and stockpiling of chemical weapons.

The treaty, signed by 170 countries and already ratified by 72, takes effect on April 29 regardless of how the Senate votes five days earli-

Albright said the treaty, initiated by President Reagan and negotiated by President Bush, "has made-in-America written all over it."

Still, the administration has had to struggle to overcome opposition from Foreign Relations Committee Chairperson Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., and the reluctance of Senate Majority Leader Trent Lott, R-Miss., just to get a ratification vote before the April 29 deadline.

With that accomplished, administration officials are lobbying hard for the two-thirds vote needed to Tom Daschle of South Dakota said Sunday on NBC's "Meet the Press" that all 45 Senate Democrats will vote for the treaty, but with Republican opposition the chances of passages are "no better than 50-50

Lott, thought to hold the key to some Republican votes, said on CNN's "Late Edition" that conditions for the treaty have improved with passage last week of some clarifying language. But he remains bothered about treaty requirements what the United States considers

"rogue" states, share information on anti-weapon technology and equipment. "That is a fundamental flaw in the treaty," Lott said.

President Clinton appealed to the Senate on Friday. He said failure to ratify would put the United States "in the company of pariah nations" that refuse to join.

"If we don't we will be on the side" of Libya and Iraq instead of on the side of our allies," Albright said

To stress the importance of the issue, Albright appeared on NBC with Defense Secretary William Cohen. It was, according to NBC the first time the top two Cabinet officials appeared jointly on a Sunday news program since Secretary of State Dean Rusk and Defense, Secretary Robert McNamara discussed Vietnam on a 1968 show.

We are here because we consider this so important," Albright said.

Cohen argued that rejection of the treaty would mean that the United States would be barred from an executive board that makes the rules on such critical issues as inspections and sanctions. "We're far worse off without the treaty: because we won't have the opportunity to point to countries who refuse to sign, or who sign and seek to cheat," said Cohen, the only Republican in Clinton's Cabinet.

Albright said without U.S. ratification, Russia's parliament would ! ratify. Senate Democratic leader probably reject it as well. "If we do not ratify it," she said, "we are giving cover to the hard liners that are opposed to it."

Sen. John Kyl, R-Ariz., said on "Fox News Sunday" that he opposes the treaty because he doesn't believe the weapons ban can be verified and countries such as Iran and China, who have signed it, would get greater access to chemicals. "A country like Iran, for example, would legitimately be able to turn to the other parties of the treaty and say, 'All right, now sell us chemicals' that member nations, including that you wouldn't sell us before," he

he Internet was a noble venture, one shrouded with the best of intentions begun by institutions of higher learning to improve scholarship and education in our country. It did its job well, although becoming slower in the passing years until finally, in its late thirties, it was gunned down by the Iowa state Legislature. May the Internet rest in peace.

Long before the Microsoft Network, Netscape and America Online, there was a whole bunch of cable strung across this country known as the Internet. It was done by academic institutions (improving on a model devised by the military originally for wartime communication) to link computers at institutions across the country to aid in academic ventures and share computing resources. It was an academic/educational tool paid for by these public and private

In the early '80s, CompuServe entered the scene. It was a nationwide version of the more local BBSs or Bulletin Board Systems that allowed home computer users to link together their computers. Eventually, CompuServe and other similar ventures such as GEnie (a system, which allowed users to access GE's internal network during off-peak hours), and then America Online, started introducing gateways to the Internet. like AOL and CompuServe were vying for full Internet access. Apple and Microsoft began creating their own Internet services. The all-mighty Web became the media's newest pet and everyone had their own .com or .org. President Clinton said he wanted the Internet in every school and library by the year 2000. Meanwhile, Bill Gates amended his computer on every desk and in every home (all running Windows®, of course) to include as Microsoft's goals to take control of the medium. But Microsoft is not alone. Literally hundreds of companies are fighting for a piece of the pie ... the pie whose crust and a majority of whose filling were made by academic institutions (using millions of tuition dollars). As an educational tool, the Internet is dead. Or is it? As a case study in good intentions for the common good falling victim to private industry, the Internet certainly shines as a lesson on greed from which we can all learn. It also clearly shows who our politicians really care about - they may say they are for education but if private industry can profit (and thus the politicians) all the better.

Private industry, once it was given access to the Internet, now wants it all for itself. Were our tuition and tax dollars which paid for the Internet simply venture capital for this new industry? If so, where is my dividend check?

It's time we set the Internet afloat and light the funeral pyre. Myself, I'm going to the library to dust off some books to do some research.

serious thought - we may all pay dearly for it in the First off: no student or UI employee currently has free access to the ICN. At this point in time, the UI receives its Internet connection from a private Internet Service Provider (ISP) just like every other shmoe on the Internet. There has never been, to my knowledge, a plan to offer anyone free access to the Internet. The only free service offered by the UI is dialin service to check one's e-mail. Sure, some clever hackers have managed to turn this cheesy way to access the Inter net, but their numbers are few nd the ITS folks have been discussing for years how to prevent from happening.

In fact, the folks at ITS Cliff Missen have even floated the idea of cutting off this free e-mail service, claiming that the $20,000 annual cost of supporting the modem pool is too expensive. (Preferring, of course, that students and staff move over to their much-ballyhooed and undersubscribed $12-a-month MCI ser-But checking e-mail on "Blue" does not require a connection to the ICN. Never has, never will. The dial-in modems and "Blue" are physically located in the same building and not one iota of Internet traffic is generated during their interaction.

So why would the folks at ITS and Bill Decker be interested in preserving their right to provide dial-in access to the ICN and why should we be worried?

If ITS has ever contemplated providing dial-in access to the ICN, which I seriously doubt, it has been with the thought of selling it to staff and students. Now this, in and of itself, might seem innocuous, but let's look at the larger picture.

ITS already has proved slow to respond to the dynamic and head-long growth of the computer market. This university is far behind other Big Ten universities in connectivity, with whole departments waiting to be wired and not a single dormitory with data connections. Their customer service is notoriously bad and students must plan their days and nights around getting access to a computer to do their work.

For example, ITS is already in the business of selling computers. From its convenient on-campus location, using all the advertising, consumer financing and perks allowed a campus entity, it sells a reasonable selection of computers. Yet with all its advantages. ITS barely manage to sell one-third of the computers used on campus because many find it is cheaper and easier to purchase better computers from the private sector.

In the last two years, ITS has sought to improve its market share. Did it do this by providing better computers at a cheaper rate with better service? Nah. It simply has instituted rules forcing anyone using UI dollars to purchase their computers from ITS' store. (Meaning that 7.5 percent of every student computer-fee dollar spent on computers goes to ITS overhead.)

The same thing with networks. Looking for a revenue stream, ITS has moved to take over every local area network on campus and replace it with its own run-of-the-mill but pricey system (by literally ripping out perfectly good and paid-for networks to install identical ITS systems). This locks members of the UI community into a one-size-fits-all solution that discourages innovation and practicality and eats away at already scarce computer budgets.

Policies like this have hurt the UI in that students and staff spend too much money, get less of a computer or network and lose out on the innovation and competition the private sector has to offer. It hurts the local private vendors as well. Gateway 2000, a company that employs thousands of Iowans, has been shunned by ITS.

So do we want a sluggish monopoly like ITS to provide Internet connections?

Not in a market where Internet connectivity is almost a promotional giveaway! (Already there are vendors who offer free e-mail if one is willing to see advertisements included with their messages.) The last thing we want in this willy-nilly and ever-improving market is to have to deal with a cumbersome ITS which, having plunked millions of dollars into yet another outdated technology, has turned to the students and staff to bail them out once again.

Every corporation that owns a chunk of cable or satellite is getting into the Internet connection business. In the next few years, we'll see scads of new, inexpensive ways to connect to the Internet. I predict in less than two years time we'll see our (significantly faster) Internet connection show up as a simple $5 charge to our monthly cable or telephone bill.

In the meantime, I would prefer to see ITS use the few dollars it is allocated to do practical things, like wire up unconnected departments and residence-hall rooms and create more student access to computers on campus. Leave the selling of commodities and customer service where it belongs: in the private sector. I almost hate to admit it, but this time I think the legislature has hit the nail on the head. Cliff Missen is a systems analyst and instructor at the UI, where he teaches the course "Internetworks in Internation-

Reader corrects Kenyon on comet facts

o the Edito

I am writing in an attempt to correct some misstatements about comets that were made in T.K. Kenyon's piece in the DI on April 9. Kenyon gave two arguments, both wrong, to convince readers that Comet Hale-Bopp would not strike the Earth.

Her first argument was that in order to strike the Earth a comet would have to approach Earth directly in line with the sun and, thus, could not be seen in the night sky where Hale-Bopp is now conspicuous.

In fact, both the Earth and a comet orbit the sun on elliptical paths. If the two paths cross, a collision is possible. The situation is similar to two cars traveling on different roads and converging toward an intersection. Passengers in one car would see the second car where it is at the moment and not look for it in the direction from which it had come. It certainly would be possible to see a comet, soon to collide with the Earth, in the night sky. Also, the probability that a comet would strike the Earth while the comet moved toward the sun is equal to the probability that the collision would occur after the comet had passed near the sun. In short, in most cases a comet about to collide with the Earth could be seen in the night sky in the days or weeks before the collision.

Kenyon's second argument was that just before a collision with a comet, the comet's tail would be pointed toward the Earth and could not be seen pointing away from the comet, as is now the case for Hale-Bopp. In fact, because a comet's tail points generally away from the sun, and because a comet would not be seen in the sun's direction just before a collision, the tail would not point directly at the Earth at that time. Kenyon is quite correct in stating that Hale-Bopp will not strike the Earth. The evidence for this, however, is not that Hale-Bopp can be seen in the night sky nor that its tail points away from it. Hale-Bopp is about 100 million miles away from the Earth and never passed rent visit to the inner solar system.

Many comets have passed much closer to the Earth. In 1910, Comet Haley passed close enough that the Earth traveled through its tail.

Why such a narrow definition of life?

Scientists look for life on other planets. We define conditions for life, like those on Jupiter's moon Europa, as temperatures at which water is liquid and the presence of carbon compounds.

Does this sound too narrow? Why not a glittering, siliconbased fairy living on a frozen world?

It's all chemistry.
First, a life form needs a way to pass genetic information on to its baby. Huge amounts of organizing information probably would be encoded on long strings. For that reason, other life probably will be based on car-

Carbon can make four bonds with other atoms to make long chains. To relate a carbon atom to a human body, carbon could join hands with two other carbons to make long chains and grab other atoms with its prehensile feet, so a carbon chain isn't just a smooth string. Most other elements can't make four bonds. Those that can, like silicon, can't make long strings for

Russia sees increase in homeless children

By Dave Carpenter Associated Press

MOSCOW - When the authorities picked up Oleg and Sergei, the youngsters were sleeping in telephone booths with cardboard boxes for mattresses

Wild-eyed and filthy, as snapshots taken by social workers show, the brothers had wandered the desolate streets of Moscow looking for handouts.

They weren't alone. Thousands of children, abandoned or neglected, have been left to fend for themselves in a country where the changes of the past decade have plunged millions into poverty.

Months later, Oleg, 8, and Sergei, 9, live in a crowded but cheerful shelter where children are introduced to such social niceties as hygiene and table manners and share hugs with a director they call Papa.

KINSHASA, Zaire - Walk into Western embassies in Kinshasa and chances are there will be a stack of passports belonging to wealthy Zairians, all looking for an

If the stories swirling through the teeming streets of the capital and dark corridors of parliament are true, those closest to President Mobutu Sese Seko have booked 400 hotel rooms across the river in the Congolese capital, Brazzaville, in case they have to flee. And Mobutu's presidential guards are smuggling their families out of town under cover of darkness.

With half the country in rebel hands and opposition to Mobutu gaining momentum, the questions in the capital may have changed: It's no longer whether the rebels will reach Kinshasa, but when. And, will it be soon enough to forestall an uprising by soldiers and civilians demanding an end to more than 31 years of bullying and corrupt rule.

In public, Mobutu and his backers still perform as if there are battles left for them to fight in a war that most political observers say was lost long ago. A "major government communique" read on staterun TV Thursday night denounced an American company's billion-dollar deal to mine copper, cobalt and zinc in rebel-held territory and declared it "null and void."

Never mind that the government itself is null and void in that part of Zaire and that its word and credibility is in as much jeopardy as the national currency, now trading at 175,000 to the U.S. dollar.

The question is whether the cancer-ridden Mobutu, despite his efforts to appear in control, has accepted the reality and is prepared to negotiate his exit before rebel leader Laurent Kabila comes

"He has no choice. He has no army. He has lost the support of the people. There's no money left in the state treasury," said Jose Kinkela, secretary-general of the Independent Democratic Union party. "Kabila will take the country there's no doubt about it."

Mobutu's best move, say Zola and others, would be to salvage what honor he has left by retiring into foreign exile before he and those linked to his regime are forced to

That could involve announcing he will not contest long-promised presidential elections in exchange for Kabila halting his advance on Kinshasa and accepting a transitional government until voting takes place. Despite Kabila's war talk, international persuasion

CINCINNATI - Goodyear Tire & Rubber vowed to continue production as more than 12,500 workers at nine plants in seven states across the Midwest and South went on strike Sunday.

The strike was announced by the United Steelworkers of Americå soon after the contract with North America's largest tire maker expired at midnight Saturday. The company said no new talks were scheduled.

"The union's position would restrict the company's flexibility to operate its facilities more efficiently," spokesperson John Perduyn said in a statement. "The company has no intention of mortgaging its future by agreeing to a contract that would widen a contractual disadvantage with its competitors." Negotiations on a new three-year contract began March 6, the first time Goodyear has bargained with the steelworkers' union. Previously, workers were represented by the United Rubber Workers International, which merged with the Steelworkers in 1995.

Contract issues include wages and benefits, but the union wants also all contracts covering Goodyear's 20,000 union employees to expire at the same time. The average Goodyear worker makes $18 an hour, or $37,440 a year, based on a 40-hour work saliva, hair and voice samples from a suspect, who has been cleared. This DNA evidence shows a definite link between an assault that happened in Lincoln and one that occurred in Davenport.

Kenosha (Wis.) police investigator Kristine Block, whose work helped uncover the similarities of the assaults, has described the suspect as a muscular black male in his early 20s with short hair. He has been seen twice wearing a black jogging suit with a backpack. The first assault took place on Feb. 6 at Union College in Lincoln. A man wearing a ski mask attacked a woman who was playing the piano in the basement of an administrative building.

On Feb. 10, the second attack occurred when a 19-year-old female student at Carthage College in 9. Kenosha was raped while she was playing the piano and singing in a music practice room.

A 24-year-old woman working alone at a computer lab on Feb. 16 was attacked at St. Ambrose University in Davenport.

On March 5, a 30-year-old instructor on the campus of the University of Nebraska at Omaha was assaulted in a computer laboratory while she was logged onto the Internet.

Block told the Kenosha News in Saturday's newspaper that two assaults in Illinois also fit the campus-rape pattern: · A woman at Knox College, Galesburg, Ill., was assaulted Feb.

· Just four hours before the Davenport rape, a man attempted to sexually assault a student at Augustana College in nearby Rock Island, Ill., just across the Mississippi River.

In the Lincoln, Kenosha and Davenport attacks, the assailant forced the victims to lie on their stomachs, demanded money, questioned their sexual history and asked them to pray for him, according to court documents filed in Lancaster County District Court.

Kosar retires after 12 NFL seasons

MIAMI (AP) — Quarterback Bernie Kosar, who won two championship rings and a legion of fans in two cities, has decided to retire after 12 NFL seasons.

Kosar, 33, will announce his decision Monday after meeting with Miami Dolphins coach Jimmy Johnson.

Kosar, who spent his final two seasons with the Dolphins as a backup quarterback, declined to talk with orters Sunday. He told The Miami Herald on Saturday that he wanted to concentrate on his family and business interests.

"I can no longer give all my attention to football, so I called Jimmy and told him of my decision," Kosar told the Herald. "I expected to play football this year. I was even working out since the end of the season. But I just have so much going on in my life that I can't devote everything I have to playing anymore."

nals. Later in the first round, tackle Ross Verba was chosen by the Green Bay Packers with the 30th selection.

Tailback Sedrick Shaw (3rd round, No. 61, New England), and defensive back Damien Robinson (4th round, No. 119, Philadelphia) were also selected later in the process.

Knight's selection came under heavy scruitiny from ESPN Draft Analyst Mel Kiper Jr., who called the seletion a "major, major reach" at that point in the draft. Kiper had Knight ranked as the 112th player overall.

Iowa coach Hayden Fry didn't take too kindly to Kiper's comments.

'He must have heard what I said about him," Fry said. "You'd have to introduce Mel Kiper to a jock strap because he's never had one on."

"I think you put all this effort on the field and it's nice to be recognized for it," Knight said. "But it doesn't stop here. It starts pretty much all over again. You're back to square one and back to hard work.

"For right now, I think I'll just enjoy the moment. That's the biggest thing. It doesn't come for everybody and I'm very fortunate that it has come for me and so early."

Verba woke up Saturday morning and threw a South Side Packers t-shirt over his shoulders. The all-Big Ten lineman played for the team in 7th and "I guess you could say I've always been partial to the Pack," Verba said. "I can't think of a better place to go than the defending World Champions." The Packers liked Verba's ability to play tackle and guard on the line. That is one of the reason's he was chosen before Wisconsin's Jerry Wunsch.

"It hasn't really hit me yet," Verba said. "I'm happy I went in the first

Iowa coach Larry Wieczorek's desire to have Saturday's Iowa Invitational scored was nixed by Iowa State and Minnesota, but maybe that was a blessing in disguise for the host Hawkeyes.

The Cyclones took individual event championships in 12 of the 18 events to dominate the rest of the field. The teams didn't want the meet scored due to partial rosters and eligibility restrictions.

Iowa's results were highlighted by a big win from Stetson Steele in the 3,000-meter run and three additional championships.

Steele stayed in the middle of the pack before taking the lead in the final 200-meters of the race to grab the win in 8:39.5. He finished a full two seconds ahead of runner-up Chris Anderson of Minnesota.

"Looking back, I feel kind of fortunate to get this one," Steele said. "I kind of let myself drift back a little too far and I didn't know if I was going to be able to catch up."

Rozell and the 4x400 each burst out with early leads and posted multi-second wins over the secondplace finisher.

Morris' win in the steeplechase was his and the team's first in the event this season.

With top performances from Michael Layne and Jim Donovan in the 1,500-meter run, Steele wasn't the only Iowa runner to find success in unfamiliar races.

Layne and Donovan, who traditionally run the 800-meter run, finished second and third respectively. Both broke the four-minute barrier, Layne in 3:56.53 and Donovan in 3:57.47.

As of press time Sunday, it was not known how many events Iowa had qualified for next week's Drake Relays, but Wieczorek has an idea.

"I think the 4x400 and the 4x100 for re," he said. "Steele has a good shot in the 5,000 and (Monte) Raymond obviously in the 400-meter hurdles."

Hawkeye Round-up

Women's track

Iowa received strong performances from its distance runners at two different meets last weekend.

Assistant coaches Rachelle Roberts and Martha Harris Brennan took most of the team to the Louisiana State Alumni Gold Relays in Baton Rouge, while head coach Jim Grant stayed in Iowa City with some underclassmen and walk-ons for the Iowa Invitational.

Freshman Alienor Gilchrist had a big meet in Baton Rouge, running a personal-best time of 4:38 in the 1,500-meter run, while Kiersten Pauling had a personal best in the 5,000-meter run.

Ellen Gantz was the top Hawkeye finisher at the Iowa Invitational, taking fifth in the 400-meter dash with a time of 1:04.14.

"This should give them a bunch of confidence going into Drake, and then if we are successful at Drake, it should carry over into the Big Tens and for those who qualify, nationals," Grant said. "Everybody did very well - I can't name just one person. Most of the athletes had personal or season-best times."

Men's golf

Iowa men's golf coach Terry Anderson is having a hard time diagnosing his team's struggles this spring.

"It's a mystery to me," Anderson said. "There's no way we're 10, 15 and sometimes 20 strokes worse than the rest of the teams we're playing."

Anderson's Hawkeyes were many strokes worse than their opponents at the Legends of Indiana tournament last weekend. Iowa shot a 927 to finish last in the 18-team field.

Northwestern finished first with an 858 - 20 strokes better than second-place Toledo. Miami of Ohio, Eastern Michigan and Notre Dame rounded out the top five.

"I question some of our guys' competitive desire," Anderson said. "We continue to make the same

Sean Rowen led the Hawkeyes with a 229, a score that gave him a tie for 54th place. Chris Englund (232), David Hersch (233), Chad McCarty (234) and Scot Johnson

(238) were the other Iowa finishers. Anderson said the scores his team are posting are taking their toll on the golfers' mentality.

"They're definitely not having any fun," he said.

Women's tennis Let the waiting game begin.

After wrapping up its final weekend of regular-season conference competition, the Iowa women's tennis team will have to wait until later this morning to learn its seed in Wednesday's Big Ten tournament. The Hawkeyes concluded dual match play Sunday with a 5-2 loss to No. 45 Northwestern.

"We were flat this weekend," coach Jenny Mainz said. "We weren't all playing with one heartbeat. It was a very frustrating weekend. There is just no excuse for losing to Northwestern by the score we did.'

Carolina Delgado and Lisa Harris were the only Hawkeyes able to record a victory. Harris won at No. 6 singles, 6-4, 6-2. Delgado's victory at No. 4 was due to forfeit.

Sunday's loss marked Iowa's fourth in a row as the Hawkeyes also came up short against No. 19 Wisconsin, 1-6, on Saturday.

Shera Wiegler was Iowa's sole point winner Saturday after defeating her opponent at the No. 5 singles slot, 7-6, 6-4.

Although the weekend losses dropped Iowa's overall record to 7-13, including 2-7 in the Big Ten, the Hawkeyes still have a chance to advance to regionals. But according to Mainz, it is only an outside chance.

'We've dug ourselves into a huge hole," she said. "No team in the conference stands out from anyone else so there is no excuse for losing by the scores we did. We really need to finish on a strong note at the tournament to have the opportunity to advance to regionals."

Host Hawks can't catch Big Ten foes

By Andy Hamilton The Daily Iowan

With Ohio State holding a 17shot lead entering Sunday's final round of the Hawkeye Invitational, Iowa was looking to knock off Indiana for second place.

But while the Hawkeyes' focus was on the Hoosiers, Purdue slipped past Iowa and left the hosts with a score of 940 and a fourth place finish.

"That's probably the only disappointing thing," coach Diane Thomason said. "Otherwise, I thought we played a pretty good tournament."

On Saturday, the Hawkeyes played what Thomason said was her team's best back-to-back rounds of the spring. Iowa's team scores of 311 in the morning and 312 in the afternoon left the Hawkeyes deadlocked in second with the Hoosiers.

"I thought we had a chance (to finish second) if we played well," Thomason said. "The two rounds yesterday they didn't play very well, so I knew they were going to come back and fire a good round just like they did. I thought we could have shot 305 today, that's very well within our reach.'

Even a 305 wouldn't have been enough to finish ahead of the Hoosiers after their final round 303. Indiana's Jenny Gray posted Sunday's low score of 72 and four other Hoosiers shot scores under

"I didn't know how good Indiana would be," Thomason said. "But they put it to us today."

Iowa senior Candy Schneekloth wrapped up one of her best collegiate tournaments with a team-low final round 77. She credited her sixth place finish to four years of playing experience on Finkbine Golf Course. It marked the first tournament in her career she has fired three rounds under 80.

"You feel like you know the course and you know where to go and what to do," Schneekloth said. "You just have to hit the right

Freshman M.C. Mullen finished 13th place.

Jessica Luciuk and Ohio State coasted to the team title, with a score of 301 on Sunday. Luciuk finished as the top individual after shooting a blistering opening round 70. She followed that up with scores of 77 and 73 to finish seven shots ahead of Gray.

Iowa men's tennis coach Steve Houghton said his team had to play well against Illinois and Purdue to avoid landing in the bottom half of the Big Ten this weekend. Land ho.

The Hawkeyes fell to the 11thranked Illini, 5-2, on Friday and the Boilermakers, 5-2, on Sunday. Iowa finished the regular season 1-9 in the Big Ten and 7-13 overall.

Houghton said his team didn't perform, bad but it was a matter of competition.

"Illinois and Purdue are probably the second and third best teams in the Big Ten," Houghton said. "We actually played fairly well but when you're on the road against the better teams in the conference it's tough.'

It wasn't all bad news for the Hawkeyes. Senior Tom Derouin finished a strong Big Ten campaign at the No. 1 singles position at 6-3 after splitting a pair of matches. Derouin defeated his opponent from Purdue, but came up short

Iowa has lost 10 of its last 11 matches heading into this weekend's Big Ten tournament at Michigan State. But Houghton isn't ready to pack it in yet. "We've lost our last three matches to the three best teams and yet still played pretty well," Houghton said. "It's going to be tough but a lot of our guys have confidence. It will be a matter of taking care of the little things and staying focused.

New addition to line-up provides big offense

By Mike Triplett The Daily Iowan

Last weekend was full of "mosts" for the Iowa baseball team:

• It was the most successful weekend of the year for the Hawkeyes, who won four-of-five games.

• Iowa coach Duane Banks gave his most emotional performance of the year, getting yanked in the seventh inning of the weekend finale after a tirade in the face of the home plate umpire. • Saturday's double header was the most-watched of the year. Thanks to people who came over allowed the ball to roll past him. after football's Spring Game, attendance reached 2,023. • And Iowa's 9-8 win in Sunday's nightcap was the most exciting win of the year for a Hawkeye squad that upped its record to 14-17. Iowa took a 7-4 lead into the seventh and final inning, retired two of a great coaching move." the first four batters, then watched everything fall apart. First Banks got tossed arguing a pitch. Then relief pitcher Kurt Belger, who had gone three full innings without surrendering a run, allowed back-to-back home runs. The Hawkeyes were down 8-7 before the inning ended. But Iowa charged back with two runs in the bottom of the inning one on a pair of errors that followed a bunt by Jeff Wick, and the other on a two-out, game-winning single by Wes Obermuller. Wick, a new

The bottom of the seventh started when Iowa's Brian Mitchell was walked on four straight pitches. Mitchell, who hit two home runs earlier in the game, said he was disappointed Creighton didn't give him anything he could hit. But what happened next made up for it.

Wick, who also had two home runs on the day, surprised the Bluejays by laying down a bunt. The throw to second was off its mark, and the center fielder crossed the plate.

"Anytime your four-hitter lays down a bunt, it's a surprise," Wick said. "But the way everyone was hitting and the way we were executing, it was the right call. It was

NFL DRAFT Ditka makes his prediction come true

> By Dave Goldberg Associated Press

NEW YORK - Last week, Mike Ditka was willing to bet that Danny Wuerffel, the Heisman Trophy winning quarterback from Florida, would be gone by the 100th pick, earlier than many people predicted.

Ditka made that bet come true on Sunday, taking Wuerffel for the New Orleans Saints with the 99th overall pick, the third choice of the fourth round.

"I think the greatest criteria for evaluating anyone is on what you've done," Ditka said of Wuerffel, who led Florida to the national championship.

"This guy is a winner. He's a true winner on every level he's ever played. I know you're going to hear all these so-called experts that say 'he can't, and he can't and he can't' but you've got to look at all the cans. His strong points certainly far outweigh anything he can't do."

Wuerffel will join a team that has just traded for Heath Shuler and has veteran Jim Everett as its starter. In the long run, he may compete with Shuler, the third overall pick by Washington in 1994, for the starting job.

He turned out to be the third quarterback taken in the draft behind Jim Druckenmiller of Virginia, who went to San Francisco in the first round, and Jake Plummer of Arizona State, taken by Arizona in the second. He fits the profile of Ditka quarterbacks. In Chicago, he had Jim McMahon, Mike Tomczak, Steve Fuller and Jim Harbaugh. None fit the ideal NFL mold.

Several other high profile colle-gians went in the fourth round and so did two players from Cornell — defensive tackle Seth Payne to Jacksonville and running back Chad Levitt to Oakland. That gave the Ivy league three picks in the first four rounds — Marcellus Wiley of Columbia went to Buffalo in the second on Saturday.

Northwestern running back Darnell Autry was chosen by Chicago, meaning that like Plummer, he'll have the pressure of playing where he starred in college.

Miami safety Tremain Mack, whose off-field problems caused him to drop, was taken by Cincinnati. If nothing else, Mack will get a shot on special teams after blocking 10 kicks in the past two seasons. Keith Poole, who caught Plummer's passes at Arizona State, was selected later with a second fourthrounder by the Saints as a prospective target for Wuerffel. And quarterback Pat Barnes of Cal, also projected much higher, went to Kansas City 11 picks after Ditka took Wuerffel. Barnes has history to overcome with the Chiefs, whose other quarterback picks like Mike Elkins and Matt Blundin have been bombs.

Ditka doesn't expect that to happen to Wuerffel, whom he compared to McMahon, the quarterback on Chicago's 1985 Super Bowl

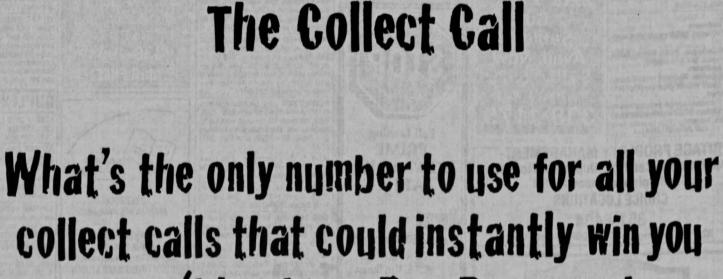

Neither does Wuerffel.
"A lot of the scouts are just into raw, physical ability and things like that," he said after being called off a driving range in Gainesville, Fla. "I think some of the coaches looked more at some of the intangible things rather than just the ability to play football. I got a lot of positive feedback from the coaches.

The rest of the day was mostly a recitation of names, some of whom inevitably will become stars, like Terrell Davis, chosen in the sixth round two years ago by Denver and now one of the league's best running backs.

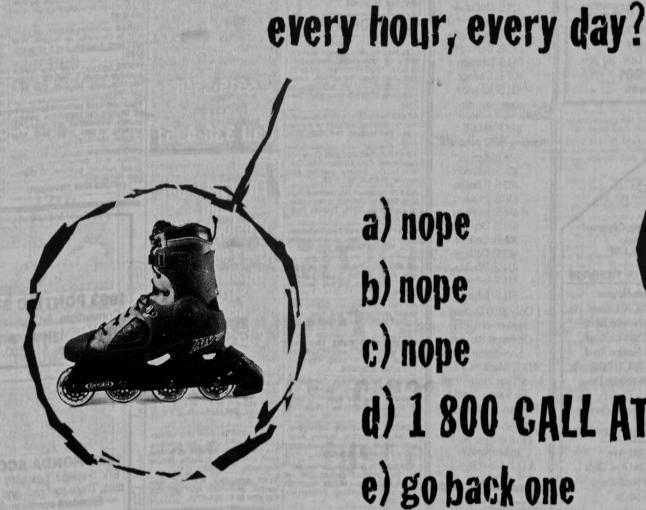

It also reflected the quirks of some of the drafters.

Jimmy Johnson, who found Zach Thomas in the fifth round last year for Miami and got Leon Lett in the seventh in Dallas, kept trading down until he ended up with four picks in each of the fifth and sixth rounds.
