In response to hundreds of objections to the Internet bill, Gov. Branstad opts to veto it

By Kevin Doyle
The Daily Iowan

You hollered for free e-mail and Gov. Terry Branstad replied. Branstad vetoed the Internet bill Thursday, the last day before it could have become law, responding to hundreds of phone calls, faxes and e-mails. Commonly known as the Internet bill, Senate File 519 would have allowed free access to on-campus sites and prohibited free access to students dialing from off-campus. The bill first was proposed in the Senate in March. Eric Woolson, the governor's press secretary, said Branstad vetoed the bill because he had a significant concern about the effects it would have on students, faculty and administration.

"He had concerns even before he received the bill because it would have restricted student access to the Internet," he said. Last week the governor's office received a total of 155 e-mail messages — 50 of which came from the UI — concerning the Internet bill. Woolson said students who contacted Branstad's office in the last week had a big impact on his veto. "It's always good when people who are affected by a bill contact their state legislature," Woolson said. "That's what the system is all about." Branstad said access to the Internet is an educational tool, wherever the student or teacher happens to be. "The overriding mission of the network is to foster educational opportunities to all areas of the state," Branstad said in rejecting the measure. In his veto message, Branstad said the overriding mission of the telecommunications network was education, and he is leery of restricting access without more study. He said the measure "would require our higher education institutions to dramatically change the educational services offered to the students, or face significant additional financial burdens." Lynn Gipple, spokesperson for U.S. West Communications in Iowa, said she was disappointed with Branstad's veto. The bill originally was proposed because local phone companies were losing private enterprise business from the three state universities. The phone companies' fight to privatize it may not be finished. "The bill struck a fair balance between private enterprise and educational concerns," Gipple said. "It's too early to make our next step. We need to evaluate and look at our options with other supporters of the bill." Gipple said U.S. West Communications needs to look at how this veto will affect their future. "As a company, something will have to be done as we look into our

Although they won the right to free e-mail, UI students may not be able to log off the Internet issue. "It's over with for this year, but I know the issue will be back next year," said Ann Rhodes, vice president for University Relations. "Even though the governor vetoed the bill, it doesn't make the issue go away." Senate File 519, commonly known as the Internet bill, was vetoed Thursday by Gov. Terry Branstad. If signed, the bill would have denied free Internet access to

UI students, faculty and administrators who use off-campus modems. Despite Branstad's veto, conflicts over who should pay for on-line services will remain, Miller said. "What's going to happen now is that students are going to have to be aware that privatization could be around the corner," said UI Student Government President Allison Miller. For now, however, students are satisfied with their victory. In the past two weeks, UI students set up Web sites and tied up Branstad's phone lines with their

Warrants issued for VEISHEA stabbing

The alleged assailants have not been located

By Jennifer Cassell
The Daily Iowan

Two warrants were issued Thursday for the arrest of two men who are suspected in the stabbing death of 19-year-old Harold "Uri" Sellers Sunday morning at the VEISHEA celebration at Iowa State University. Michael Runyan, a 20-year-old from Ft. Dodge, has been charged with murder in the first degree. Luke Abrams, an 18-year-old also from Ft. Dodge, has been charged with aiding and abetting murder in the first degree. Runyan and Abrams were in Ames for the VEISHEA celebration, said Sgt. Jim Robinson of the Ames Police Department. The two alleged assailants haven't yet been located and the investigation is ongoing, Robinson said. Composite sketches of the suspects were released Wednesday and Robinson said a possible third assailant hasn't been identified. The sketches were based on testimonies from witnesses to the crime.

Attempting a comeback

While Brown University spent 6 years fighting Title IX, the UI was making strides in gender equity in athletics

By Becky Gruhn
The Daily Iowan

In athletics, coaches and administrators tend to shy away from the phrase "moral victory." But last week's Supreme Court decision to deny Brown University in Providence, R.I., an opportunity to appeal previous lower court rulings that it discriminated against female athletes is seen as just that by UI Women's Athletic Director Christine Grant. The Brown University case began in 1991, when the university dropped women's gymnastics and volleyball in an attempt to save money in its athletic budget. Female athletes demanded reinstatement and sued the school for violation of Title IX, a law passed in 1972 aimed at combating sex discrimination in both athletics and academics at schools and colleges that receive federal funding.

"This was a very important non-decision made by the Supreme Court," Grant said. "That was a very historic day. I think now that the Supreme Court has declined to even hear the Brown case, that institutions are probably going to feel that they'd better make progress — and make it fast." Although institutions across the nation like Brown University have had difficulties or posted resistance in complying with Title IX, the UI has been able to adhere to the legislative mandate without controversy. "I think the University of Iowa has always been regarded as a front runner in the area of equal opportunity, and I believe we still are," Grant said. "I think we've gotten tremendous support from our men's athletic department and also from central administration, and we could not have done it without that." A college or university is in compliance with Title IX if it passes one of three tests: • It must have a male/female ratio in its athletic department that is similar to its male/female ratio in the undergraduate population • It must show that it has a history and a continuing practice of program expansion • The third area covers benefits, opportunities and treatment of student-athletes (e.g. recruiting expenses) For the 1995-96 academic year, the UI had an undergraduate population of 53 percent female and 47 percent male, while the athletic population was 41 percent female and 59 percent male. Despite this contradiction, the UI still complies with Title IX. "We are in compliance with the second prong," Grant said. "When we instituted crew a few years ago that established our history, and then last year when we added soccer that constituted a continuing practice. We feel good about where

Black Genesis shows culture in dance

By Jennifer Cassell
The Daily Iowan

While RUN-DMC is jamming in Hubbard Park tonight, members of the Black Genesis Dance Theater will leave hip-hop behind to perform a diverse showcase of black culture. Black Genesis Dance Theater is ending the year with a spring concert scheduled to be held today and Saturday in the Space Place Theater at 8 p.m. Artistic directors Sabrina Madison-Cannon and Bryon Davis have been preparing over the past year for the show, which is a collaboration of previous performances and new numbers. The 17 dancers will perform nine pieces, along with two solos by Davis, which will be performed on alternate nights. The concert will exhibit a variety of music, including gospel, classical, jazz, Afro-Caribbean, modern and live drumbeats. "We're not about stereotypical black dance," Davis said. "We're going to show that we can do more than that." In addition to three numbers performed to the music of jazz singer Cassandra Wilson, there also will be a dance depicting the experiences of black women in the past, present and future. "It's a way for people to learn about cultures through performing arts, not just through history books," Davis said. In the past, Black Genesis mostly consisted of female dancers and one male dancer. However, the group has expanded by recruiting members of Phi Beta Sigma Fraternity to join the entourage. Now, the group features dancers of all levels. Davis called upon the fraternity brothers to participate in the dance troupe after seeing their continually victorious performances at UI Step shows. Serial rape victim tells story, colleges grow concerned

By Robynn Tysver
Associated Press

OMAHA, Neb. — Heidi Hess chatted on the Internet alone one night on a Midwestern college campus where she had worked and studied for 10 years without fear. Her sense of security was shattered by the sound of rapid footsteps. A man in a ski mask grabbed her, threw her to the ground and raped her. Police believe it was not an isolated assault. The attack was one of six on college campuses in four Midwestern states during February and March where the assailant typically spit on his victim, asked them to pray for him and questioned them about their sexual past. "It is a terrifying thought to me that college campuses would be the preying grounds for a serial rapist," said Hess, 30, who quit her job as a part-time journalist and business teacher after the March 5 attack. The thought that a serial rapist may be targeting women in college computer labs and music halls in four states — Nebraska, Iowa, Illinois and Wisconsin — has sparked fear. Teachers have turned their desks around to face doors. More students asked for escorts at night and security alerts have been posted around campuses. Nebraska Wesleyan in Lincoln added another night security guard. Security officials in Knox College in Galesburg, Ill., have been encouraging students to use the escort service. See RAPE, Page 10A

Officers may have witnessed B.I.G. shooting

LOS ANGELES (AP) — At least one police officer and possibly as many as six acted as security guards for The Notorious B.I.G. and may have witnessed his slaying, the Los Angeles Times reported Thursday.

However, none came forward to say they were there, including the one off-duty officer who was in a car directly behind the rapper, the paper said.

"If they were there all that time before, it just seems impossible to me that they didn't see the incident," said Damion Butler, friend and road manager of the rapper whose real name was Christopher Wallace.

"Where did they go? They had to see it," he said.

The 24-year-old rapper, who also went by the stage name Biggie Smalls, was shot and killed March 9 as he sat in a car after the Soul Train Music awards. Several shots were fired from a car as a crowd of people left the ceremony, but no one provided a good description of the shooter. No arrests have been made.

In nearby Inglewood, Police Chief Alex Perez confirmed his department was investigating allegations that as many as six officers may have worked the night the rapper was slain.

Among them was the off-duty officer whose moonlighting stint was a violation of department policy, the Times said.

Undercover officers from New York were also in the vicinity during the shooting as part of a federal investigation of criminals allegedly affiliated with the rapper's record company, Bad Boy Entertainment, the paper said, citing unidentified sources.

The Justice Department, as well as the Los Angeles and New York police departments, declined to comment, the newspaper said.

Lucas expands ranching empire

NOVATO, Calif. (AP) — George Lucas' ranching empire is expanding.

A settlement with environmentalists has allowed Lucas to include an $87 million film production complex and office building on his Skywalker Ranch.

Environmentalists sued the "Star Wars" creator, saying the complex would ruin the beauty of the area's rolling hills and set a precedent that could allow sprawling growth around the county.

Lucas

The group agreed to drop its lawsuit Tuesday after Lucas promised to buy two nearby ranches and leave their combined 1,235 acres as open space.

The agreement will allow Lucas to build 640,800 square feet of office and production space near his ranch.

Patrick Keller TELEVISION REVIEW

"Gun": ★1/2 out of ★★☆☆

Directors: Robert Altman, Ted Demme, Peter Horton, James Foley and Jeremiah Chechick
Executive Producers: Robert Altman, James Sadwith, Rob Dwek, Donald Kushner and Peter Locke

'Gun' is a hit-and-miss affair

Robert Altman is trying to breathe life into a long-dead art form with his new show "Gun," but can he bring the television anthology back to life?

Prime time hasn't had a successful anthology series since "The Twilight Zone." Remember the "Alfred Hitchcock Presents" revival? No? What about Steven Spielberg's "Amazing Stories"? Not even that industry giant could resuscitate the genre.

Most media types say that the reason for the consistent failure of the genre is the lack of a central character that audiences can follow from episode to episode.

Altman addressed this problem with "Gun," sort of. The main character is an inanimate object, the "gun" of the title.

Altman also pulls off a bit of a coup with his casting. In the first episode, we saw Daniel Stern ("Home Alone"), Kathy Baker ("Picket Fences") and Kathy Ireland (Sports Illustrated swimsuit model).

Imagine that most of these big-name stars only requested a chance to be on the show because of Altman's name being attached to the project. It's an informal audition, an attempt to make an impression to be in Altman's next flick.

This sort of mentality appears to lead to a lot of overacting on the show. It's really kind of sad to see all these great actors trying so hard to be an outtake from "Nashville" or "The Player."

"The Player" is an especially apt comparison for the first episode, about a failed actor who is in the process of leaving Hollywood for good when he thwarts a robbery at a convenience store. Actually, the story of the gun begins 15 minutes earlier, with a nice little vignette about a family man who buys the gun, and it accidentally goes off. His wife makes him take it back to the shop where it is stolen by the thugs who hold up the convenience store.

Having a quarter of the show taken up by a story that isn't directly related to the main narrative is a nice touch, but it causes the rest of the program to be entirely too rushed. The breakup of Stern's character's marriage is barely dealt with and is unrealistic.

But the show really was ruined when, after we have seen then entire story of this actor's 15 minutes of fame, the rug is pulled out from under us in a "Twilight Zone"-esque twist.

The actor has his rise to prominence, starts to make a TV movie about his heroic act and leaves his wife — followed by flashback to the convenience store from the beginning. Instead of being narrowly missed by the bullet, we see Stern get shot pretty squarely. Then it all becomes apparent that the last half hour has been some sort of "Occurrence at Owl Creek Bridge" hallucination; the last thoughts of a dying man.

It cheats the viewer, and the rest of the series is starting to look as dismal. Altman is just trying to do too much, with the format and within the individual shows. Viewers don't like anthology shows to start with, and they aren't going to like them much more if they are too complex to follow.

I hate to be cute, but I have to say it — "Gun" shoots itself in the foot.

Classic Altman films

"M*A*S*H"

(1970) — Follow the exploits of the Army doctors fighting for sanity in an insane war. This classic is best known for being the template for the TV show, but the movie deserves accolades for its unique take on war and breaking narrative boundaries.

"The Player"

(1992) — Tim Robbins ("The Hudson Sucker Proxy") stars in this dead-on portrait of the narcissistic world of the Hollywood movie industry.

"Short Cuts"

(1993) — Altman's journey into the elaborate world of Raymond Carver's short stories, weaving them into a continuous world, where comedy mixes freely with drama.

Country music honors its finest

By Jeff Wilson
Associated Press

UNIVERSAL CITY, Calif. — The Academy of Country Music's entertainer of the year is a duo — again.

Kix Brooks and Ronnie Dunn, who won the top honor last year, also were awarded the prize for top duo at the academy's 32nd awards show.

"We're two of the luckiest guys in country music," Dunn said Wednesday night.

Brooks & Dunn may have won two awards, but Texas teen-age sensation LeAnn Rimes hauled away the most hardware. The 14-year-old was crowned country's best new singer and her rendition of "Blue" was picked top single and best song.

Up to the end of the three-hour show, which aired on NBC, it appeared that fellow Texan George Strait might emerge the big winner. He already had won the male singer and album (Blue Clear Sky) prizes and was a nominee for entertainer of the year.

"It was kind of feeling like a George Strait night to me," Brooks said.

But the night clearly belonged to Rimes, the blonde wearing a white gown with plunging neckline and who spoke with poise far beyond her years.

"I guess I've had to grow up in an adult world all my life," said the Patsy Cline-Brenda Lee sound-alike who won best new artist and female country vocalist Grammy Awards earlier this year.

After winning her second consecutive best female singer award, Patty Loveless said she felt sure Rimes "was going to take it this year. I'm shocked."

"Welcome to the night Hollywood turns country and you all come along," said "Wings" star Crystal Bernard, who shared hosting chores with Strait and Jeff Foxworthy.

Roy Clark got the academy's prestigious Pioneer Award in recognition of outstanding achievements in country music.

"That puts you in pretty tall company. It's hard for me to believe that anyone looks up at me the way I looked up to my idols," Clark said. Past recipients include Johnny Cash, Roger Miller, Minnie Pearl, Roy Acuff and Roy Rogers.

Winners in top categories were selected by the 4,000-member academy.

Prosecutors detail McVeigh's hateful words

By Steven Paulson

DENVER — Timothy McVeigh blew up the Oklahoma City federal building with a truck bomb to unleash his hatred for the government and see "blood flow on the streets of America," a prosecutor told jurors in opening statements Thursday.

"In plain, simple language, it was an act of terror," Assistant U.S. Attorney Joseph Hartzler said. "The man committing this act is sitting in this courtroom behind me and he is the one who committed this."

But McVeigh attorney Stephen Jones responded with a simple statement: "My client is innocent." Jurors listened attentively as Hartzler, who has multiple sclerosis, began the day by delivering his narrative from a wheelchair, speaking softly against the man accused of the deadliest act of terrorism on U.S. soil.

"The truck was there to impose the will of Timothy McVeigh on the rest of America and to do so ... by murdering innocent men, women and children in hopes of seeing blood flow on the streets of America."

Hartzler said on the day of the bombing McVeigh was wearing a T-shirt that bore the phrase, "The tree of liberty must be refreshed from time to time with the blood of patriots and tyrants."

"You'll see that T-shirt. Instead of fruit, the tree bears a depiction of droplets of scarlet red blood."

"McVeigh liked to consider himself a patriot, someone who could start the second American Revolution," Hartzler said. "Our forefathers did not fight innocent women and children. ... They didn't plant bombs and run away wearing earplugs."

Inside McVeigh's car, federal agents found a large, sealed envelope that contained photocopies of magazines and newspapers, the prosecutor said.

"They will give you a window into McVeigh's mind. They'll enable you to see his intention ... and to know the twisted motive behind this deadly offense."

He said the car also contained slips of statements quoting "The Turner Diaries," a fictional account of an attack on a federal building that is eerily similar to the Oklahoma City bombing.

"The bombing in the book served as a blueprint for McVeigh," Hartzler said. "These documents are virtually a manifesto declaring McVeigh's intention."

McVeigh, wearing a blue plaid shirt, showed little reaction in court, sometimes leaning forward on his elbows, then leaning back in his chair.

"He told people the government deliberately murdered people," the prosecutor said, adding that McVeigh described Waco as the "government's declaration of war against the people."

Flood victims allowed brief return to homes

By Julia Prodis
Associated Press

GRAND FORKS, N.D. — Evacuees tramped through stinking mud Thursday to pick through a few of their belongings and look over the damage left by the worst flood ever recorded in the Red River Valley.

"We had stuff floating all over the place. All the kids' toys and everything else," said Lynn Wolf, who along with her husband, George, briefly was allowed to return to her home in southwest Grand Forks.

The river, which crested late Monday at 54 feet — 28 feet above flood stage — has been slowly retreating from homes and streets. It was 52.8 feet this morning.

Authorities Thursday began allowing residents in one section to pass National Guard checkpoints and visit their homes for a few hours. Some came by boat. The area opened up for visits is about one square mile, or roughly a tenth of the city's land area.

It will take months, maybe years, to repair burned downtown buildings, swamped sewers, contaminated drinking supplies, flooded homes and businesses.

The Red River has continued to flood its banks farther north, threatening small towns on both sides of the U.S.-Canada border, 100 miles away. The 17,000 people living in Manitoba's Red River Valley in Canada were ordered to leave their homes Wednesday.

Early this morning, the full moon lit the water-filled streets of downtown Grand Forks, a welcome sight to the patrol boats, water scooters and Humvees that buzz the canals on the lookout for looters.

Maneuvering through swift currents, the vessels pass under blinking traffic lights, their wakes splashing against dark, abandoned buildings. Pilots keep a sharp eye out for the uncharted shoals and reefs of the flood.

"I slammed right into a dumpster," said warden Tim Larson, who piloted a boat for the North Dakota Game and Fish Department. "It's dangerous in there."

In St. Thomas, about 45 miles north of here, more than 1,500 people from farms and little towns left their homes.

Clinton supports bill ending job bias against gays

By Sonya Ross
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — President Clinton renewed his support Thursday for a bill that would outlaw employment discrimination against homosexuals, saying such bias must be eliminated "in our country and in our hearts."

During a closed half-hour White House meeting with the bill's sponsors, gay and civil rights advocates, Clinton said he intends to lobby hard for passage of the bill, which would bar firing or discriminating against an employee on the basis of sexual orientation.

"Individuals should not be denied a job on the basis of something that has no relationship to their ability to perform their work," Clinton said in a statement. "This is wrong."

Conservative groups say they will fight the legislation, arguing that it unfairly forces employers to have inappropriate, on-the-job discussions about sexuality and gives homosexuals an advantage in hiring.

"What this would do is to force sexual politics into every workplace in America," said Kristi Hamrick, spokesperson for the Family Research Council, a private family issues think tank. "It's just a very dangerous step to take, and a very unnecessary one."

The legislation bars employers from using a worker's sexual orientation as a factor in decisions on hiring or firing, promotion or compensation. The Senate rejected the bill in September on a 50-49 vote. The House never voted on it, and its sponsors plan to reintroduce it soon.

The bill exempts small businesses, the military, religious organizations and schools or educational institutions run by religious groups. Clinton said the exemptions improve the bill's chances of passage, because it "respects the deeply held religious beliefs of many Americans."

"I support it and I urge all Americans to do so," Clinton said. "It is about our ongoing fight against bigotry and intolerance, in our country and in our hearts."

Currently, gay workers in 41 states could be fired or denied jobs or a promotion because of their sexuality, and most cannot seek relief in state or federal courts. Nine states have laws or other rules that extend to homosexuals' job protections similar to those offered on the basis of age, race, religion or gender.

What it really means to 'be like Jackie'

It is great that America is celebrating the 50th anniversary of Jackie Robinson breaking the color barrier in Major League Baseball. It is one of the defining moments in our nation's history, and Robinson himself is a hero we should all admire. He endured pressures most people can only imagine, and he did it with a grace and dignity few ever have matched.

Some critics, however, have expressed concern over the advertising slogan "Be like Jackie" being promoted by corporate sponsors. What does this mean, they ask? They point out that during his first two years with the Brooklyn Dodgers, Robinson never expressed any outrage over the enormous abuse that was hurled at him. Thus, the slogan means that African-Americans should keep silent and not protest when mistreated.

To suggest that this is what "Be like Jackie" means is to be ignorant of Robinson's life. The two seasons in which he kept his mouth shut were an aberration in his life. He did it because then general manager of the Dodgers, Branch Rickey, required it of him. Rickey knew that a black player was going to be judged by a much higher standard than a white player. Robinson was going to have to behave on the field in a most unbecoming manner, and that meant staying silent, no matter what outrage was directed toward him.

Rickey chose Robinson not only because he was a great athlete but because he had the strength of character to thrive under such a hardship. Arguably, it was more difficult to maintain silence in the face of such abuse. Robinson had to endure racial epithets from the fans, opposing players who did everything to make his life difficult and even a threatened walkout by some of his teammates at the beginning of the season. It would have been easy to lash out, but Robinson did not. And it worked. Many fans were won over, and some of the teammates who had threatened to walk out at the beginning of the 1947 season were later pallbearers at his funeral.

Yet for most of his life, Robinson was anything but silent. He was outspoken on the issue of civil rights, participating in many marches. He was active in politics, supporting at various times Democrats and Republicans. And when center-fielder Curt Flood mounted his lonely challenge to baseball's reserve clause (what was clearly an unfair labor practice), Robinson was one of the few baseball players, active or retired, who spoke out on Flood's behalf.

But perhaps one incident best defines the courage and resolve Robinson possessed. It occurred when he was still in the Negro Leagues with the Kansas City Monarchs. He was traveling on the team bus in Oklahoma. At one point along the trip, the bus pulled over at a regular stop to fill up with gas. Robinson had just joined the team and was not familiar with the Midwest. He got out and proceeded to the men's room.

"Where do you think you're going?" asked the service station owner.
 "To use the men's room," Robinson replied.
 "No you're not," the owner said. "You boys know that."
 "Take the hose out of the tank!" Robinson exclaimed in anger.

That was no minor threat. Filling up the twin 50-gallon tanks on the bus would result in a considerable sale, one that the owner could ill afford to forego.

Caught off guard by Robinson's determination, he relented. "You boys can use the restroom, just don't stay in there too long."

Jackie Robinson was not one to remain silent on much of anything. "Be like Jackie" means that we should face difficulties with courage, resolve and grace, not keep our mouths shut. That is a positive message for all Americans.

Violence, VEISHEA and the future

Harold Sellers, a 19-year-old Des Moines Area Community College student, was murdered last weekend at a VEISHEA celebration. As easily as the murder happened, we have lost sight of what really matters.

Conversations across campus this week started with something like, "Did you hear about that guy that was stabbed in Ames last weekend?"

A typical response was, "Yeah, it's really sad. I wonder what this will mean for VEISHEA."

It just doesn't seem right to be debating future VEISHEA celebrations in the wake of such a tragic death.

A young man was murdered. This should be a time of coming together, a time to reevaluate the safety of our own actions, a time to realize that it could have been any of us.

Future festivities should be the furthest thing from discussion, especially when the very atmosphere of the celebration may have contributed to the tragedy.

One Iowa State University student, a witness near the Adelante Fraternity where Sellers was discovered, described the atmosphere to the Iowa State Daily. He said there was nothing out of the ordinary at this VEISHEA celebration, "a few drunken fights but nothing big."

VEISHEA is losing sight of what it should be all about, just as the discussion of Seller's death is getting off track.

Nothing big, except that one of these fights ended in murder.

Other witnesses reported that Sellers was lying on the lawn of the Adelante Fraternity for approximately 10 minutes before receiving any medical attention. No one noticed him immediately because he looked like just another passed-out partygoer.

Though VEISHEA cannot be entirely to blame for this awful stabbing, the atmosphere created by the celebration clearly was conducive to such a tragedy.

VEISHEA used to be about showcasing the academic departments of ISU, bringing families together for pony rides and a parade, and Twister tournaments of record proportions.

Now VEISHEA is more about crazy students getting together to burn couches, riot and get wasted.

This very perception is what made it possible for a bleeding young man to be mistaken for a passed-out drunk and a fight to be considered commonplace.

VEISHEA is losing sight of what it should be all about, just as the discussion of Seller's death is getting off track.

Harold "Uri" Sellers was only 19 years old.

His senior picture has been printed in papers across Iowa and on the Web — a picture of a smiling, good-looking guy. One can't help but wonder what inside jokes and claims of being "friends forever" he wrote on the back.

Then there is the other picture that everyone has seen — the picture of a crime scene complete with blood-stained grass, forgotten clothes, and the depression where a body lay.

What will it take? Not what will it take to create some VEISHEA reform, but what will it take for us to come together, grieve for the loss, and realize it could have been any of us.

What will it take?

President Clinton needs to visit Africa

Only a few days after President Clinton was discharged from the hospital following knee surgery, he flew for a meeting with Russian President Boris Yeltsin, who also had been discharged after a major operation. They met in Helsinki, Finland, over the expansion of NATO.

The fact that president Clinton ignored doctors' advice and attended the meeting indicates the seriousness with which he takes Eastern Europe following the collapse of the former Soviet Union.

During the same week, Clinton was nursing the knee injury, Hillary Rodham Clinton made a two-week tour of Africa covering six nations. Her trip was termed "Promoting Human Capital" in Africa — mainly health and education, family planning and helping small businesses get started through microcredit.

In Senegal, she met President Diop, attended a grassroots democracy training session and visited the Goree Island, once the hub of the African slave trade. In South Africa, she visited Soweto and had a meeting with the legendary Nelson Mandela and a visited Mandela's former prison on the Roben Island. She was in Tanzania for a discussion with the officials of the U.N. Tribunal on the genocide in Rwanda.

The trip enabled her to meet some of the policymakers in those countries and view development projects, particularly those concerned with promoting women's empowerment.

Hillary Rodham Clinton is the second U.S. first lady to visit Africa. Pat Nixon attended the inauguration ceremonies of the late president William Tolbert of Liberia in 1971.

Rodham Clinton's visit was different. According to her, the visit was aimed at "broadening" Americans' awareness of the need for the United States to engage with Africa and its new democratic governments.

Now, Hillary Rodham Clinton is neither Bill Clinton nor Secretary of State Madeleine Albright. Yet her words are a reflection of what should happen between the United States' and Africa's 600 million people. Would her words have carried different weight had they been the views of the U.S. government? Yes.

Hillary Rodham Clinton has challenged the Clinton administration to take the initiative for a closer link with Africa. President Clinton, in his second and last term, should open another chapter in history by being the first US president to visit Africa. Already, Vice President Al Gore has visited South Africa, a major power in the region that should play a leading role in the process of democratization.

Following the end of the Cold War, the U.S. attitude towards Africa has only centered around "dollar and humanitarian" efforts, often in the wake of crisis and tragedy like the one currently experienced in Zaire.

The Zaire crisis only has attracted American companies that are rushing to exploit the country's mineral wealth in the name of rebuilding the collapsed mining industry.

Already a leading U.S. firm based in President Clinton's home town of Hope, Ark., American Mineral Fields Inc., has signed a $41 billion contract with the rebels to mine the copper, cobalt and zinc deposits in the rebel-held regions. The American firms have quickly replaced the South African, French and Belgium companies which had previously been dealing with the collapsing Mobutu government.

The U.S. businesspeople have the advantage over the French and Belgium because of the latter two's former reputations. The Belgians brutally ruled Congo, now Zaire, often cutting off hands as a common form of punishment until 1960. The French maintained the now-disgraced Mobutu who looted the nation's wealth in league with the diamond and copper traders. Zaire has the capacity of producing over $500 million worth of diamonds per year. It is these firms that helped Mobutu to suck billions of dollars from Zaire, as millions of Zaire's population lived in poverty.

Zaire's greatest hope lies in the integrity of the U.S. firm. The fact that American Diamond Buyers is associated with the Canadian arms company, and the International Defense and Security (IDAS) which has taken over in supplying Kabila's forces with arms, does put the $1 billion deal in to suspect. Instability in Africa, whether rooted in wars, terrorism, organized crime or environmental degradation also touches America. It is time for the world to stop thinking in terms of "us" and "them" and start think of "we."

As it is, there is a greater need for the U.S. government to get involved with Africa, which is on the move with a new generation of leaders running young and fragile democracies.

Tales of a Memories

The news of Allen Ginsberg's death April 5 saddened some of us in the English Department so much that at a party that night we held a joint reading of the first section of "Kaddish." It seemed a fitting close to the evening and, in a way, to an era.

Allen's wonderful blends of innocence and outrageousness, idealism, candor and a shrewd sense of publicity epitomized not only the Beat generation but the student left and antiwar generation, to whom he was a spiritual leader.

He also had a child-like instinct for confounding expectations. His answer to an interviewer who asked a few years ago if his wearing a suit and tie meant that he had gone "respectable" was typical. "I've always been respectable," he said.

I can testify to this, because in the spring of 1969, when antiwar activists were trying to raise money, Allen Ginsberg was the person invited to come give a benefit reading. Harry McCormick, Everett Frost and others wanted to meet him, and they knew that hundreds of other students would pay a lot to hear his homosexual, acid-taking, dope-smoking, Buddhist freak.

I'm sorry, but Americans spend way too much time in their cars

Do all English people perpetually apologize? I'm sorry, I'm not sure. It's one of those great quirks of culture. We English manage to apologize when someone else stands on our toes in the elevator, or if the person we've just given a ride to has forgotten their work for the day. It's not that we are literally sorry for what we personally have not done, but simply for the situation in which you find yourself — I am sorry you stepped on my toe because now you are going to be embarrassed and it didn't really hurt at all.

It could be sometime before any of those waiting behind you are brave enough to ask whether you are waiting for whatever it is they have assumed you were waiting for.

But I have a retaliation question: Do Americans ever get out of their cars?

Unlike England, where cars become tiny, like the little box Minis or Metros, or the two-seater sports MGs which have swarmed over our capital like little green bees, Americans still seem very proud of the size of their cars. Chevy trucks and Buicks cruise along the interstates, and in Chicago I saw over 20 stretched limos within the first few minutes of leaving the airport.

When my American friend's mom decided that with all the kids flown from the nest, it was time she bought something new for herself. It seemed the perfect chance to buy a sporty number to speed along the roads with virtual no effort from the driver. Instead, she bought a Ford Taurus Sedan. Well, she had to keep up with the neighbors!

It's amazing too that this love of four wheels has extended so far that you can eat, phone, shop, bank, mail and even watch movies without ever having to get out of your car and face the great outdoors. I was in Minneapolis over the weekend, the car culture was amazing.

I can sort of understand that when a walk around one of the lakes in Minneapolis left my skin tingling and an angry red color from the cold. But their constant sitting in cars contradicts the idea of "fresh air and exercise". And so do all the power walkers who pack themselves into the Mall of America at 7:30 in the morning, old and young alike.

And where does Iowa fit into the equation? You can't go to the movies in your car, but neither can you park your car when you want to go to see a show. The limited number of parking spots are expensive for students and a multitude of red and white signs make parking within a couple of miles of your actual destination impossible. What's a driver to do? Iowa City is either aiming for the ultimate in town cruising or it's attempting to make its entire city an extension of the Pedestrian Mall.

Is it because this country is so enormous that Americans need wheels to get round most of the time? Everything is so spread out you are either majorly energetic and jog — or you take your car. The bus system is actually very good in Iowa, but there still seem to be a lot of automobiles about.

This kind of expansiveness helps to precipitate the image abroad of Big Brother America — big houses, big cars and big influence over the rest of the world. It's a kind of extension of the American Dream and about as ambiguously received.

If you have got this far and still have no idea what I am talking about try watching "Three Men and a Little Lady." It's a very Americanized view of England, but it's accurate for the most part — and watch for the scene where Tom Selleck attempts to drive along small country lanes in a Mini, which is so tiny his knees are up round his elbows.

I also had a card from him a couple of years before, after I'd written to point out an error in his poem "To Lindsay." He originally had Vachel Lindsay shooting himself, rather than drinking Lysol; and he acknowledged the error.

So he came, and I said he could stay at my house, though I finally begged my way out of hosting a party there. I was afraid too many people would come, and that we might even be busted.

The reading drew so many people that Shambaugh Auditorium couldn't hold them all. We moved, spontaneously, to Macbride. Allen wore a robe, played his finger cymbals, chanted, read poetry, spoke out against the war, against racism, and against the U.S. government's deceit. Marvin Bell also gave a wonderful introduction, which was a sign of some Workshop and UI acceptance.

The party, which I think was at Everett and Harry's house, was not a blast. True, a full conglomeration of Iowa City's Beats, bohemians, and peaceniks trucked in, wearing granny gowns and overalls, beads, rhinestones, long hair, shaggy sweaters, boots, sandals and worn sneakers.

Some danced. Some played folk music on guitars. Some went to the bedrooms to smoke pot and stare at candles and whiff incense. Some stood for hours in the kitchen talking politics. But it was all very peaceful, relaxed and cool. Allen set the tone, and people imitated him.

The next morning was another surprise. When Allen came downstairs for breakfast, he was wearing chinos and an old tweed jacket and looking not at all like a Zen priest but simply like any graduate student or young faculty member. A bigger beard and longer hair, yes, but otherwise the same. He took a long-distance call from an anthology editor who wanted to reprint a popular poem, and he drove a hard bargain. Why, he complained afterwards, wouldn't she try something new? He would have let her have it for free.

Then, he politely asked where he could wash his shirt. He had a drip-dry white shirt and did not want to leave water on the floor. My wife offered to wash it for him — stick it in the machine — but no, he liked to do it himself. But did we have a wooden hangar?

So we gave him a hangar, and he hung his shirt over the bathtub, like any respectable house guest.

Media reports different versions of raid on Peruvian embassy

By Paul Haven
Associated Press

LIMA, Peru — Two days after Peruvian forces freed dozens of hostages in a daring raid, conflicting versions emerged Thursday of the deaths of the leftist rebels who held them.

An opposition newspaper reported that some of the 14 rebels were killed even as they tried to surrender. Several of the rebels' bodies were riddled with bullets, suggesting the soldiers shot to kill from a close range, the newspaper said.

President Alberto Fujimori said the elite squad had undergone intense training for the raid Tuesday on the Japanese ambassador's mansion, and could take no chances. "Facing an armed terrorist, none of the commandos was going to leave himself exposed," he said. Fujimori did not respond directly to reports that troops killed some of the rebels after they surrendered.

The newspaper, La Republica, reported that two young female rebels screamed: "We surrender! We surrender!" as the commandos charged the residence and bombs exploded around them. Covering in a corner, the young women were shot down seconds later, it said.

Rebel leader Nestor Cerpa, it said, was shot several times in the body and face — including a bullet to the forehead. Other rebels had similar wounds, the newspaper said, quoting an intelligence agent it described as an impeccable source.

Four rebels playing soccer in the main reception hall were killed first in a blast set off in a tunnel that the government secretly had dug right below.

Four others, including the young women and Cerpa, tried to run up the stairs and were killed.

El Comercio newspaper said the tunnels were 10 feet underground, equipped with electricity and ventilation systems. Commandos used about nine pounds of plastic explosives to blow holes in the floor and ground to stun the rebels above them.

Recovery team suspends search for missing plane

By Robert Weller
Associated Press

EAGLE, Colo. — After spending the night on a snowy mountainside, a military recovery team Thursday gave up its effort, at least for now, to reach the wreckage of the A-10 Thunderbolt last seen three weeks ago.

The specially trained four-member team had been taken by helicopter up to the 11,500-foot level Wednesday, but snowy weather had made it impossible for them to climb the last 1,000 feet to the wreckage site.

This morning, after calling for help, team members were walking to a location where a helicopter could pick them up.

It was not immediately known when recovery efforts would resume at the site, about 15 miles southwest of Vail.

Earlier Wednesday, a special operations expert dangling from a cable was able to retrieve pieces of the Air Force plane that vanished during a training mission.

But there was no sign of the pilot, Capt. Craig Button.

"I don't know if Captain Button was with the aircraft or was not with the aircraft so I cannot talk about remains," Air Force Maj. Gen. Nels Running said Wednesday night.

"I don't know if Captain Button was with the aircraft or was not with the aircraft so I cannot talk about remains."

"The search continues."

Tech Sgt. Ishmael Antonio, who has climbed Mount McKinley, was the man who retrieved the debris, which confirmed once and for all that the A-10 had crashed there.

Hanging from a cable dropped by a TH-53 helicopter, he fine-tuned the operation with commands to move the chopper a little bit to the right, a little bit to the left.

Antonio tried to retrieve the biggest piece of wreckage, the one seen in aerial photos. But it turned out to be bigger than he was, and the rescue specialist had to settle for two smaller pieces.

Air Force maintenance records identified the objects as part of the missing plane.

Report cites labor abuses in U.S. commonwealth

By Kevin Galvin
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — A California Democrat alleged Thursday that an economic boom in the Northern Marianas, a U.S. commonwealth, is "an economic mirage built on exploited foreign labor."

Less than two weeks after President Clinton unveiled a breakthrough agreement to fight sweatshops worldwide, Rep. George Miller released a report enumerating what he alleged were labor abuses in the Pacific island group.

Under negotiated arrangements establishing the Marianas' commonwealth status, which took effect in 1986, the U.S. government agreed to leave immigration and minimum wage laws in the hands of local authorities.

Miller, ranking Democrat on the House Resources Committee, said he will file legislation that would have the effect of reversing that decision.

The bill would require the islands to increase the minimum wage from $2.90 an hour to the federal standard of $4.75 an hour. It also would apply the federal Immigration and Nationality Act to the archipelago's 14 islands.

And because goods manufactured in the Marianas bear the "Made in the U.S.A." label, Miller also wants to require that they be manufactured in compliance with U.S. labor law. Miller said the Commonwealth of the Northern Marianas government has reneged on promises to raise its minimum wage and improve workers' conditions and is lobbying in the Congress to convince lawmakers change isn't needed.

"Last week, President Clinton and garment industry leaders announced a U.S. Apparel Industry Partnership' dedicated to eliminating sweatshop working conditions around the world," Miller said.

Under locally set immigration rules, Miller said workers from the Philippines, China and other Asian countries now comprise a majority of the islands' 58,800 population, 36 percent higher than it was five years ago. Workers who seek to unionize risk facing deportation, Miller said. He alleged the government "fails to prosecute aggressively those who mistreat and abuse foreign labor by forcing them into prostitution and other types of involuntary sexual activity, who restrict their expression of political beliefs and who deny them the wages they have earned."

The Marianas came under U.S. control after World War II, when U.S. Marines fought major battles on Saipan and others in the island group. In 1975 residents of the islands voted to remain under U.S. sovereignty as a commonwealth. People born there are U.S. citizens.

Army rape case goes to jury

By David Dishneau
Associated Press

ABERDEEN PROVING GROUND, Md. — A military jury began deliberating rape charges against a former Army drill sergeant Thursday after his lawyer argued that the six women trainees willingly had sex with him, then lied about it to protect their careers.

A prosecutor told the jury that Staff Sgt. Delmar Simpson used the fear and intimidation that accompany rank to force the trainees to have sex.

Simpson, 32, is charged with raping six women a total of 19 times and could get life in prison if convicted of even one rape charge.

Simpson is the central figure in the biggest sex scandal in Army history. The scandal at Aberdeen has resulted in criminal charges against 12 soldiers at the base and prompted an investigation at Army installations worldwide.

"This is a case of the accused using his power, his easy access and his ability to control — an unscrupulous drill sergeant grossly misusing his position to force his sexual attentions on trainees," said Capt. Theresa Gallagher, the prosecutor.

Prosecutors contend Simpson raped the women in 1995 and 1996, mostly by intimidating them with his 6-foot-4 size, superior rank and threats.

Gallagher said Simpson frightened his trainees so badly that

Chemical weapons ban breezes past test vote

By David Espo
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — A treaty to ban chemical weapons gained impressive strength in the Senate on Thursday as Majority Leader Trent Lott said he would back the accord and supporters prevailed easily on an initial test vote.

With a final roll call set for evening, Lott cited a string of changes agreed to by the White House in recent weeks for his decision, including last-minute written assurances from President Clinton.

On balance, the Mississippi Republican said of the treaty opposed by many conservatives, "I believe the U.S. is marginally better off with it than without it."

"It is a close call," he added later. The Mississippi Republican announced his decision moments after administration allies prevailed, 71-29, in eliminating a provision that would have barred American ratification until Iran, Iraq, Syria and other so-called rogue states had acceded to the pact. The White House labeled the provision a "killer amendment."

Moments later, Lott predicted the treaty would win 72 to 78 votes and be approved. A two-thirds majority is required for ratification. All of the Senate's 45 Democrats favor the pact to ban poison gas worldwide, leaving its fate in the hands of Republicans.

Opponents, led by Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., argue the treaty is unverifiable and would open the United States to danger from nations such as Libya, North Korea and Iraq that refuse to sign the agreement. "The truth of the matter is it won't do a thing in the world to help the situation. It's not a comprehensive ban," he said.

The treaty would ban the use, development, production or stockpiling of all chemical warfare agents and require the destruction of existing stockpiles over the next decade.

It has been signed by 164 nations thus far, and ratified by 75. With or without American ratification, the pact will take effect on April 29.

The Senate held an unusual closed session to hear classified information relating to production of chemical weapons worldwide.

Lott's decision appeared to seal the verdict on the Senate floor, and in a reference to opposition to the treaty from conservatives, he said, "I'm going to take a lot of flak for it."

In a pointed reference to negotiations with the White House over a budget accord, he added, "Now we're going to see, will the president show similar courage against his (political) base and leadership and direction." Many congressional Democrats are opposed to provisions Republicans are demanding as part of a budget deal.

Lott began the day by releasing a letter from Clinton in which the president said he was "prepared to withdraw from the treaty" if other countries used it to transfer materials that could be used to develop chemical weapons or if it undermined a 30-nation pact that imposes export controls and other measures against proliferation of weapons of mass destruction.

"I consider it an ironclad commitment from the president of the United States to the Senate," Lott said.

Joe Marquette/Associated Press

Senate Majority Leader Trent Lott of Mississippi meets reporters on Capitol Hill Thursday, where he discussed various topics, including the Senate vote on the chemical weapons treaty. Bidding to win ratification of the treaty, President Clinton offered fresh assurance he would withdraw from the pact if it inadvertently results in the spread of banned weapons.

ment from the president of the United States to the Senate," Lott said.

The White House viewed Lott's vote as pivotal in the ratification struggle. Yet within the Republican party, the Mississippi lawmaker, who has presidential ambitions, was buffeted by conflicting forces.

The treaty commands huge support in public opinion polls, and was negotiated during the administrations of Presidents Bush and Reagan. On Wednesday, former GOP presidential candidate Bob Dole announced his backing.

On the other hand, GOP foes include not only Helms but Jack Kemp, who was Dole's running mate last year, as well as several former defense secretaries during Republican administrations.

In the past several weeks, the White House has grappled first with Helms' initial refusal to permit the treaty to come to the floor, then with the changes that critics demanded in the ratification legislation.

Yeltsin wants young leaders

MOSCOW (AP) — Boris Yeltsin urged his prime minister Thursday to bring young politicians into the government to push reforms that are "suffocating, losing pace."

Russia needs the zeal and fresh ideas of younger leaders, the president said in his regular radio address.

"Many of us are weary of old leaders — the times of stagnation have not been forgotten yet," Yeltsin said. "People want to see young faces. They trust them more, and have more hopes in them."

Yeltsin, 66, recently appointed two young reformers, Anatoly Chubais and Boris Nemtsov, as vice prime ministers. Their main task is to deal with Russia's pressing economic problems, especially the government's failure to pay workers' wages and pensions on time.

"That's why I have invited them to the government. It was obvious that the reforms are suffocating, losing pace," Yeltsin said.

Yeltsin criticized Prime Minister Viktor Chernomyrdin for dragging his feet in filling several posts in the new Cabinet, urging the premier not to be afraid to promote younger people.

"Don't worry. They would not be plotting against you," Yeltsin told Chernomyrdin. "They don't have time for intrigues and power fights. They want to work, and their ambitions are in the open. They haven't learned to conceal them yet."

Militants slaughter 47 villagers

By Rachid Khari
Associated Press

ALGIERS, Algeria — Muslim militants armed with sabers, axes and knives killed 47 people in two villages south of Algiers, defying government claims to be crushing an insurgency, newspapers and witnesses reported Thursday.

The victims included three babies whose bodies were mutilated and a pregnant woman who was hacked open and her baby cut into pieces, witnesses said.

The killings, which began late Tuesday, bring to about 420 the number of people killed in villages around the capital in the past month.

About 30 attackers descended on the mountain village of Omaria, 50 miles south of the capital, killing 42 people late Tuesday and early Wednesday, according to witnesses speaking on condition of anonymity. Witnesses identified the attackers as Muslim insurgents.

In the nearby village of Ouzeza, attackers who set up a roadblock stopped a bus and killed five of those aboard, the independent newspaper El Watan reported.

The slayings followed the massacre of 93 villagers before dawn Tuesday in the village of Haouch Mokhfi Khemisti, about 12 miles south of Algiers.

That attack, described as three hours of carnage, was the worst since the start of the Muslim insurgency, triggered when the army canceled January 1992 legislative elections the Islamic Salvation Front was poised to win.

Study shows more pregnant women are drinking

By Tara Meyer
Associated Press

ATLANTA — Pregnant women are drinking harder than they did four years earlier, raising the risk their babies will suffer mental retardation, learning disorders and other problems, the government reported Thursday.

A telephone survey by the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention found that 3.5 percent of 1,313 moms-to-be in 1995 admitted they had seven or more drinks per week or binged on five or more drinks at once within the previous month. That's up from 0.8 percent of 1,053 pregnant women in 1991.

"Even though those numbers seem small, that's a pretty significant increase," CDC statistician Beth Luman said.

The sample suggests that 140,000 pregnant women nationwide were frequent drinkers in 1995, compared with 32,000 women in 1991, she said. The CDC also said 16.3 percent of the pregnant women in 1995 had at least one drink in the preceding month, compared with 12.4 percent in 1991.

Louise Floyd, chief of the CDC's fetal alcohol syndrome prevention section, said the reason for the increase is unclear. CDC researchers are going back through the survey to find out.

Drinking while pregnant can cause fetal alcohol syndrome, a lifelong condition that can include retardation, facial abnormalities, stunted growth and learning disorders.

Floyd said researchers are finding some harmful effects from three or four drinks a week. "No drinking is safe while you're pregnant," she said.

The 1995 survey questioned 33,585 randomly selected women — pregnant or not — ages 18 to 44. Of the total, more than half said they drank at least once within the past month and 12.6 percent were frequent drinkers, or those who have at least seven drinks a week or five or more at once. The percentages were similar to the 1991 figures, the CDC said.

The drinking rates among women in 1995 were highest in Wisconsin, Iowa and Pennsylvania. In 1981, the U.S. surgeon general first urged women — pregnant or planning to be — not to drink. Those warnings were repeated by the secretary of health and human services in 1990 and 1995.

Claire Coles, an expert on fetal alcohol syndrome, speculated that people may simply be more honest about owning up to their drinking. But she said that in any case, obstetricians and gynecologists need to talk to their patients about alcohol.

"Anyone who is working with pregnant women should look at a 3.5 percentage and realize they should be asking women more

Grassley to announce

Grassley, who is up for re-election to the Senate next year, has sparked intense interest by suggesting he'd consider running for governor. In recent weeks, the speculation has faded as Grassley has done little to lay the ground

Day unites mothers and daughters at work

By Penny Tapp
The Daily Iowan

The UI director of Affirmative Action and her daughter leaned over a computer keyboard Thursday, intently looking for on-line information about ... Beanie Babies.

Susan Mask and her daughter Lauren Knight, 9, were joined by other parent-child teams for the UI's "Take Your Daughter to Work" Day activities. The day is a national effort to bring young girls into the work force.

Fathers and sons also were allowed, but Knight emphasized the importance of the day for daughters.

"My brother thinks it's unfair there's no 'Take Boys to Work' day," Knight said. "It's important to have, like, your daughter come to work and perhaps be influenced by what your mother is."

Both the UI Office of Affirmative Action and the Department of Internal Medicine organized activities in honor of the day.

"The exciting thing is each year it gets bigger and bigger," Diane Finnerty of the UI Office of Affirmative Action said. "The girls say 'hey, we can do anything.' It's been very successful."

When one UI group surfed the Net before lunchtime, a little girl got straight onto the Internet and looked up the Beanie Baby Web site. Once her discovery was known, almost every child in the room was looking for the site.

"I've learned how to surf the Internet," Knight said. "And I've learned about the Beanie Babies."

The other group had a tour of the campus, ending up in President Mary Sue Coleman's office for a peek at what life at the top is like.

Coleman explained to the group why she liked her job.

"Every day is different," Coleman said. "And I get to tell people what to do."

Then she gave a description of her day and another hand went up: "How much do you get paid?" one teen-ager asked. Coleman answered her — about $200,000 per year.

High-school freshman Rebekah Collier said the day had helped to broaden her career ideas. She said she particularly liked the afternoon "Career Role Models" session where six women discussed their professions, which ranged from a plumber to a missionary physician.

"They reinforced the idea that even though we are women we can still be what we want," she said.

The Internal Medicine Department called the day "Kid's Day" and gave it a theme: "Look out world, here we come."

Michele Pugh, UI human resources administrator, said they decided to have a day where both daughters and sons could come to see where their parent(s) work and learn something about the functions of a hospital.

"It's the world they are in," Pugh said. "And they are going to have to learn to interact together. It's important they know that sons can be nurses, daughters can be doctors."

She said it is important to get all ages and both sexes interested in science because the number of students interested in this area is dwindling. By teaching children more about medicine it also helps to give a positive image of hospitals, which is particularly important if any of them have to go in.

There were four tour groups in the hospital. They circulated between the Telemedicine Resource Center, the UIHC Emergency Services Area (Heliport), the CHAMPS (Cardiovascular Rehabilitation Center) and Dr. Gary Koretzky's Laboratory.

"I liked the helicopter best," said 6-year-old Robbie Medd. "We saw where the patient is put."

In CHAMPS, exercise physician Erik Samuelson let the children walk on a treadmill, showed them a model lump of fat, explaining how the body needs to stay strong with good muscle tone and encouraged them to stay away from fast foods.

"It was absolutely wonderful," said Shelly Galbraith, research program administrator for the College of Medicine. "My son's six, but after leaving each place he said 'that was neat.'"

Paranormal expert shares tales of unknown

By Joseph Leavitt
The Daily Iowan

With a series of eerie photos and strange tales, paranormal expert Peter Jordan entertained a capacity crowd with theories about ghosts and poltergeists, last night in the Main Lounge of the Union.

Jordan spoke of his personal experiences investigating paranormal phenomena including spontaneous combustion and hauntings, while he addressed an inquisitive audience of students and community residents.

UI freshman Sarah Vinson said she was glad Jordan gave possible logical reasons for poltergeists.

"I think it's neat that there are explanations for them," Vinson said.

Poltergeisty seems to be concentrated in areas of high geological activity, usually involving prepubescent children who are repressed emotionally or sexually, Jordan said. It is almost always associated with the Catholic faith, especially in cases where religion is used as a weapon, he said.

"This is a phenomena that does not seem to hurt anybody, but just scares the hell out of everybody," Jordan said.

Hauntings are a more visual phenomenon, Jordan said. He said he believes that sometimes a tragedy can leave behind a residue that is real. This can account for pictures that show images which are semi-solid said Jordan.

In many hauntings he has investigated, appliances like tape recorders and flashlights have suddenly stopped working at a certain place, then started again when he has stepped outside of the area.

"Whatever this force is, it needs electric energy to perform," Jordan said.

Jordan said the idea of spontaneous combustion is possibly the eeriest phenomenon he has ever experienced.

Grassley to announce political plans at press conference

By Mike Glover
Associated Press

DES MOINES — U.S. Sen. Charles Grassley has scheduled a much-anticipated announcement of his political plans Saturday with his closest associates saying he'll opt for another Senate term.

"He hasn't said anything to me to indicate he's running for governor," a close associate, who spoke only in condition of anonymity, said.

Grassley, who is up for re-election to the Senate next year, has sparked intense interest by suggesting he'd consider running for governor. In recent weeks, that speculation has faded as Grassley has done little to lay the groundwork for such a run.

That lack of activity has led many to conclude he will seek another term in the Senate. Close associates said that's likely to be the case. Grassley has scheduled a news conference Saturday at his farm near New Hartford to announce his plans.

That decision is likely to shape the political landscape for next year.

Grassley is probably the state's most popular politician, and most others are waiting for his announcement before settling on their plans.

Former Rep. Jim Ross Lightfoot is moving toward seeking the GOP gubernatorial nomination, and that's seen as another sign Grass-ley has decided against making the run.

Lightfoot and Grassley are close political allies and share consultants and it isn't likely Lightfoot would be making moves unless he was convinced Grassley was out of the picture.

Lightfoot has said he'll make an announcement after Grassley makes his.

Des Moines businessperson David Oman has said he'll seek the GOP gubernatorial nomination no matter what others decide, and Secretary of State Paul Pate also is interested.

House Majority Leader Brent Siegrist is interested as is House Speaker Ron Corbett.

On the Democratic side, U.S. Sen. Tom Harkin has said he's interested in running for governor, but his wife has just taken a high-powered job in Washington and that's toned down speculation.

Sen. Tom Vilsac of Mount Pleasant and former Supreme Court Justice Mark McCormick have also said they're interested in seeking the Democratic gubernatorial nomination.

If Grassley does indeed decide to seek a fourth term in the Senate, Democrats will be hard pressed to find a serious contender. One exception, however, would be former Rep. David Nagle, who has said he might be interested in making the race.

we are right now." Grant says scholarships for both sports are expected to be phased in over a four-year period. After soccer scholarships are added, Iowa is expected to have a 45 percent female athletic population. But Grant has made the goal of reaching 50-50 equity and says the UI is working hard at implementing that plan for the future.

The major reason for the disparity between men's and women's athletic populations is football. The NCAA allows a maximum of 85 football scholarships — more than women's field hockey, basketball, golf, gymnastics, softball, swimming/diving and volleyball combined. Since no school offers a women's sport comparable in size to football, additional women's varsity teams have been implemented to narrow the gap.

Adding women's sports without cutting men's teams is a feat the UI has accomplished, but many other institutions have not.

"We've made a public commitment on two or three different occasions that we will not eliminate men's teams in order to increase the participation quota," Grant said. "We prefer to add women's opportunity. We are pretty fortunate that our men's program has always been very stable and successful financially. That has helped our women's program greatly."

future," Gipple said. "We need to expand this service because much of our market receives it free from a state-subsidized system. This problem affects a variety of providers."

Sen. Bob Dvorsky, D-Coralville, said he has heard that phone companies may sue the Iowa Communications Network (ICN), the company that is scheduled to provide the UI with Internet access in the next month.

There also have been threats that local phone companies will cut into the funding of the ICN, which receives $3.5 million a year from the state of Iowa, Dvorsky said.

Gipple said she hasn't heard of any phone companies taking this action.

concerns about the problems eliminating free Internet access for off-campus students would cause. Hundreds of phone calls and e-mails went through to his office from UI students speaking their minds.

Miller said all UI students who took action should be given a pat on the back and understand they had a hand in the helping the governor decide to keep free access.

"Knowing the governor's history and his love of the Iowa Communication Network (ICN), I didn't think he would've signed the bill," Miller said. "I think we have something here to be proud of for the state of Iowa and the quality of education."

"People realize that even the Ivory Tower is in the middle of the world and they have to conduct themselves accordingly," said Kai Swanson, a spokesperson at Augustana College in Rock Island, Ill., a small liberal arts college of 2,000.

"We're not in a state of panic here," Keessen said. "It's just that wisdom would indicate we need to be more concerned."

Investigators in Wisconsin and Lincoln began to link the cases because of the manner and the words spoken by the assailant, police said in court documents filed in Lancaster County District Court.

Since then, DNA evidence has provided a solid link between a Nebraska and Iowa assault, Lincoln Police Chief Tom Casady said. Further DNA tests are being done.

After the promotion of crew to varsity status the misconception that this would hurt the UI men's athletic department circulated across campus, UI Crew Coach Mandi Kowal said.

"Having us here is not taking away from men," the third-year coach said. "One of the first things I told the women on the team is not to feel guilty about crew being elevated to varsity. They have worked hard, they deserved it, and they had the right to compete on the varsity level. Just because they are female shouldn't be reason to hold them back."

Even though the UI has satisfied one component of the three-prong gender equity test, it still lags behind in other areas.

During the 1995-96 academic year, the UI spent 64 percent of its total recruiting expenses on male athletes, and only 36 percent on females. The difference is especially noticeable for the rowing team, Kowal said.

"We only have two full scholarships right now that we can work with," Kowal said. "I wish we could have more at this point. It's been hard to bring anyone in when we don't know what is out there. We have very minimal recruiting expenses, and we are unsure of what our increments are going to be for recruiting athletes in the future."

"I feel my hands are tied right now," Kowal said. "We don't have the resources to bring in impact rowers. We need scholarship and recruiting money. Male athletes have been given a full plate and have eaten it. Women have only been given half a plate."

But it is not the coaches or administrators for whom Title IX was created to protect — it is the female athletes.

Without Title IX, UI crew member Susan Hagenow would not have had the opportunity to compete athletically.

"I don't think women's athletics would have any sort of importance without Title IX," Hagenow said. "I was always involved in athletics since I was a little kid. When I joined crew here at Iowa it not only allowed me to get back into shape, but gave me great experiences and allowed me to bond with my teammates. It's just been a general mind-expanding experience that is making me a well-rounded person."

going to off-campus modems, he said.

Rep. Minnette Doderer, D-Iowa City, said she thought Branstad did a good job of catching the concerns of students, faculty and administration throughout the state.

"The governor didn't say a whole lot about the bill," Doderer said. "The veto was not a big surprise."

Doderer said she's positive state legislators will not propose any new bill pertaining to the ICN during this session.

"We don't have a prayer of getting it done, because we don't know where we want to go with the issue," Doderer said. "We'll uphold the governor's veto."

With all of the calls flowing into the governor's office, Branstad must have gotten sick of all the calls, UISG Vice President Meghan Henry said. On the other hand, he was constantly reminded of the number of students who placed great importance on free dial-up access to the Internet, she said.

"I know that after a while the governor's office got annoyed with all the phone calls," Henry said. "We had lots of people calling, we even had non-students calling his office. It was a good effort on part of the students."

UI students were concerned with overcrowding of Instructional Technology Centers, (ITCs) the $20-$30 they would have to pay every month and the inconvenience it would cause if the bill were to pass.

Four days later, a 19-year-old woman at Carthage College in Kenosha, Wis., was raped as she was playing the piano and singing in a music practice room.

On Feb. 16, a 24-year-old woman was raped while working alone in a computer lab at St. Ambrose University, a small religious college in Davenport.

Just four hours before the Davenport rape, a man attempted to sexually assault a student at Augustana College in nearby Rock Island, Ill., just across the Mississippi River.

On March 5, Hess was assaulted in the computer laboratory at the University of Nebraska at Omaha.

On Feb. 9, Kenosha police believe there was an attempted assault at Knox College in Galesburg, Ill., at 7:20 p.m. in an art studio. Another student walked in and scared off the assailant.

Title IX

A college or university is in compliance with Title IX if it passes one of three tests:

- It must have a male/female ratio in its athletic department that is similar to its male/female ratio in the undergraduate population
- It must show that it has a history and a continuing practice of program expansion
- The third area covers benefits, opportunities and treatment of student-athletes (ex. recruiting expenses)

Woods accepts Zoeller apology
 NEW YORK (AP) — Tiger Woods said Thursday he was stunned by Fuzzy Zoeller's racially insensitive remarks, but believes no offense was intended and accepts Zoeller's apology.

"At first, I was shocked to hear that Fuzzy Zoeller made these unfortunate remarks," Woods said in a statement released by the Los Angeles office of IMG, his management agency. "His attempt at humor was out-of-bounds, and I was disappointed by it."

"But having played golf with Fuzzy, I know he is a jokester, and I have concluded that no personal animosity toward me was intended."

Zoeller, 45, was fired by his sponsor, Kmart, and withdrew from the Greater Greensboro Chrysler Classic Wednesday. He also said he wanted to talk to Woods about the remarks before competing again.

"I accept Fuzzy's apology and hope everyone can now put this behind us," Woods said.

Knicks 109, Hornets 99
 NEW YORK (AP) — John Starks, who was presented with his Sixth Man Award trophy prior to the game, put the New York Knicks ahead for good with one of their five 3-pointers in the fourth quarter.

Allan Houston, the player Starks lost his starting job to at the start of this season, added three 3-pointers and scored 13 of his 25 points in the final quarter as the Knicks pulled away after blowing a 13-point halftime lead.

Game 2 in the best-of-5 series is Saturday afternoon.
 Starks and Houston led five Knicks in double figures on a night when Patrick Ewing scored only 15 points. Larry Johnson had 20 points, including 17 in the first half, Starks had 19 and Chris Childs 14.

Heat scorch Magic in first round victory
 MIAMI (AP) — The Miami Heat raced to a 25-point first-quarter lead Thursday night and went on to a 99-64 win over the Orlando Magic, who tied an NBA record for fewest points in a playoff game.

Miami earned its most lopsided victory of the season in the first playoff game between Florida's two NBA teams.
 With a 35-10 advantage, the Heat held the second-largest lead after one quarter in league playoff history. Milwaukee led Philadelphia 40-14 in 1970.

The Magic have never won a playoff series after losing the first game. Game 2 will be Sunday in Miami.
 Voshon Lenard outscored Orlando 11-10 in the first period and finished with 24 points, including six 3-pointers. The Magic made just 26 of 85 shots, a season-low 30.6 percent.

Miami's Alonzo Mourning had 12 points, 11 rebounds and six blocked shots. Tim Hardaway added 13 points and 11 assists.
 Four players took turns guarding Orlando's Penny Hardaway, who was 6-for-16 and scored 13 points. Teammate Derek Strong had 15 points.

Johnson edgy before first 200 of year

Olympic star makes race debut at Drake Relays Saturday; on track to break meet record

By Chuck Schoffner
 Associated Press

DES MOINES, Iowa — Michael Johnson nervous? Track's reigning superstar jittery over running a little of 200-meter race in Des Moines?

Well, not exactly nervous. But Johnson does admit to feeling a little on edge as he prepares for his first 200 of the year, which he'll run Saturday at the 88th Drake Relays.

"At the beginning of the season, when I haven't run since September, it's kind of difficult when you go in there because you don't have that kind of consistency established," said Johnson, the only man to win the 200 and 400 in the same Olympics.

"There's always a little bit of apprehension. You don't take as many chances because at this point, you're not as confident."

Still, Johnson seems a good bet to break the Drake Relays record of 20.28 seconds in the 200. That's almost a full second off the world record of 19.32 he set in Atlanta last summer. In all of 1996,

Johnson's slowest 200 final was 20.27. Plus, he'll have Texas-El Paso's outstanding sprinter, Obadele Thompson, to push him. Thompson, competing for Barbados, finished fourth in the 200 in Atlanta and is the defending 200 champion at Drake.

 Johnson, though, is making no predictions on what he'll run at a meet in which he first competed as a freshman at Baylor in 1987. The race comes after he ran a 43.75-second 400 last Saturday — the second-fastest 400 ever on U.S. soil and the fastest of all time before June.

"I don't go in expecting to run any particular time. I just go in knowing I'm in good shape, so I expect to run a good race," Johnson said.

"But you never know what's going to happen."
 "My last 200 meters was last August, so it's been a while. The 200 is little more technical. In the 400, if you make a mistake, you can make that up. But the 200, once a mistake is made, it's pretty difficult to make it up."

Johnson headlines a meet that opens Friday and will feature 7,800 athletes from 53 nations. That figure includes 16 athletes who represented eight countries at the 1996 Olympics.

Among the U.S. Olympians in the field are pole vaulters Joe Dial and Jeff Hartwig. Dial, a four-time NCAA champion at Oklahoma State, is the former world indoor record holder. Hartwig has won at Drake the last two years.

Kevin Little, this year's world indoor 200 champion and a former Drake University runner, will run the 400. Northern Iowa's Joey Woody is favored to win his third title in the 400 hurdles. Baylor will try for its sixth straight victory in the 1,600 relay and Arizona seeks a third consecutive title in the distance medley.

Michael Johnson is scheduled to run in the 200 Saturday at the Drake Relays in Des Moines. The current meet record is 20.28 seconds. Johnson's slowest 200 time in 1996 was 20.27.

Spartans try to get first win off Hawkeyes

By Becky Gruhn
 The Daily Iowan

The Michigan State softball squad will travel to Coralville this weekend to try to do something no other team in the Big Ten has been capable of — defeating the Hawkeyes.

No. 5 Iowa (38-5), hosts the No. 9 Spartans (43-13), in a trio of games this weekend at the Hawkeye Softball Complex in Coralville. The battle between the first and second place conference teams will be played in a double-header tomorrow and a single game on Sunday. First pitch will be thrown at 1 p.m. both days.

After starting the season 12-0, Michigan State has lost four of its last five conference games. The Spartans were swept by defending champion Michigan Tuesday, 1-0, 4-1.

The Hawkeyes, 14-0 in conference play, are coming off two victories over Minnesota on Wednesday, 4-2, 1-0.

Despite the Spartans recent slump, Iowa coach Gayle said the team is still dangerous.

"This weekend will be a big challenge as we face a very fine opponent in Michigan State," Blevins said. "The Spartans have played well throughout the year and are in the hunt for the Big Ten title."

Although the series could have a major impact on the conference race, junior pitcher Debbie Bilbao said the team is not self-imposing added pressure.

Women's results

Lost, first round to Purdue, 4-0. Ended season at 7-14.

Men's results
 Lost, first round to Wisconsin, 4-1. Won, consolation bracket, against Ohio State, 4-1. Finished in 10th place. Ended season at 8-14.

Women's results
 The Hawkeyes also dominated doubles play against the Badgers, winning 8-3, 8-4, but failed to win a singles match. Derouin had defeated Wisconsin's Mike Goldstein earlier in the season, but lost in three sets Thursday, 3-6, 6-3, 6-4.

The loss probably eliminates any chance for Derouin to qualify for the NCAA Championships at the season's conclusion.

"His chances were pretty slim without that loss, but he was in a situation where he couldn't afford to lose any more," Houghton said.

Prior to the tournament, Derouin was named to the all-Big Ten team, and was named the conference's Sportsman of the Year. The senior finished the season with a 12-6 overall record, and 7-4 conference record.

The split finishes Iowa's season with a 8-14 overall record, including a 2-10 mark in the Big Ten. Last season, the Hawkeyes failed to get a conference win.

Women swept by Purdue

By Becky Gruhn
 The Daily Iowan

Ending a season is always difficult for a team to swallow, but Thursday's loss to Purdue in the first round of the women's Big Ten tennis tournament produced more of a choking effect for coach Jenny Mainz.

"That was definitely a rough ending and not a fun way to close the season," Mainz said. "We had to play ourself first and then Purdue. It was a very disappointing loss. You only want to play one opponent at a time, never two. That makes it rough."

Under Big Ten tournament rules, the matches end after the first team earns four points. Purdue won the doubles point and swept the No. 1-3 singles matches to advance to round two.

"I was 120 percent sure we could beat Purdue," Mainz said. "We thought that of all teams we could beat in the first round we had the best shot against Purdue."

"We didn't play very well today. We were plagued by unforced errors. Early in the season you might make those mistakes, but there's no room for errors like that in April. There's no room to consistently make mistakes like that."

Mainz partially blames the loss on a late-season slump in which the Hawkeyes lost four straight Big Ten matches heading into the tournament.

"We were flat at the end of the season and in a slump for three weeks," Mainz said. "I'd have to say we peaked at the Penn State victory. After Penn State, instead of using momentum we had a lapse. We also never really rebounded emotionally from losing to Michigan State. That was one of those losses you just can't have."

The loss ended Iowa's season at 7-14 overall. Despite the lopsided number of defeats, Mainz is not calling the season a disappointment.

"We did move the program forward," Mainz said. "We made the necessary steps to take the program to a higher level. Wins and losses aren't always indicative of the success of a season."

Men finish 10th at Big Tens

By Wayne Drehs
 The Daily Iowan

The Iowa men's tennis team's Big Ten season ended much like it started — with a win over Ohio State Thursday.

The 11th-seeded Hawkeyes beat the 10th-seeded Buckeyes in the Big Ten Championships 4-1, one hour after falling to No. 9 Wisconsin by the same score. The gave Iowa a 10th-place finish in the tournament.

The Hawkeyes beat Ohio State, 4-3, in Columbus on Feb. 23 for their only Big Ten win prior to Thursday.

The Hawkeyes used wins from Tom Derouin (6-4, 6-5) at No. 1, Ulf Jentler (6-3, 6-2) at No. 2, and J.R. Chidley (7-6, 6-3) at No. 6 singles to seal the win. Iowa also swept the doubles matches, 8-4, 8-5.

"Obviously, you are not excited to be playing for 10th, but I told the team I thought we played real well," coach Steve Houghton said. "We played about as well as we could."

Hawkeyes face crucial series with Boilermakers

By Mike Triplett
The Daily Iowan

When Iowa baseball coach Duane Banks met with his team after losing two games to Wisconsin-Milwaukee Wednesday, he was trying to find out why. Why did the team fall so flat? And more importantly, would it happen again this weekend?

The Hawkeyes (15-19, 5-6 in the Big Ten) are heading to Purdue for a four-game series with the Boilermakers. Iowa hasn't played a conference game in three weeks and needs a strong performance to stay in the Big Ten hunt.

After Wednesday's meeting, the consensus was that a strong performance will come.

"Purdue has a good team and one real good pitcher, but our best can beat anybody's best any day," Iowa senior Ryan Sienko said.

"Sure, (Wisconsin-Milwaukee) took some momentum from us," Sienko said. "But they can't take our will to win and they can't take our fire away from us."

Purdue (19-22 overall) is 10-10 in the Big Ten, and in a three-way tie for fourth place. Iowa is in seventh place. Only the top four teams advance to the postseason conference tournament.

With 12 conference games remaining, a four-game sweep would be an unbelievable boost for Iowa. And the players believe it is possible.

"I think four is realistic every weekend with the team we have," senior Eric Martinez said. "We've been playing good baseball recently. And we'll be up for this weekend."

Iowa's top hitters are Jeff Wick (.392, 2 HR, 11 RBIs), Bill Stafford (.324, 13 RBIs), Brian Mitchell (.300, 15 HR, 40 RBIs) and Martinez (.299, 5 HR, 20 RBIs).

DRAKE RELAYS

Iowa women and men travel to Relays

The Iowa women's track team will join a talented field this weekend when it travels to Des Moines to take part in the 88th running of the Drake Relays. The meet, held on Drake Stadium's Jim Duncan Track, begins today at 8 a.m. and will through Saturday.

Iowa coach Jim Grant is confident that his team can ride the success it had in the past two meets into Drake, where the Hawkeyes will face some of the strongest competition of the year.

"First off, we are looking for the people in the individual events to do well," Grant said. "Then, we are looking at those in contention to qualify for the NCAA meet — like Ellen Grant and Wynsome Cole."

While Iowa will compete in the distance medley, the Hawkeyes will scratch the sprint medley. The coaching staff decided to scratch the relay so the athletes will not be too tired to perform well in individual events.

Although not officially a home meet, the Hawkeyes are looking forward to performing in front of a pro-Hawkeye crowd.

"They are really excited, especially since it is in front of a home audience," Grant said. "The University of Iowa is always well supported during the Drake Relays and they are very excited about showing the fans what they have. It's going to be very exciting."

—Tony Wirt

Men qualify 10 events

The Iowa men's track and field team will get a first-hand look at how it compares against the nation's best this weekend at the Drake Relays in Des Moines.

Iowa qualified 10 events into the meet, which has attracted international star track athletes.

"I tried to do some last-second lobbying for our guys to get some more entrants, but everything is too chaotic at Drake's meet office," Iowa coach Larry Wiecek said. "They didn't have much time to listen to what I had to say."

Although he has yet to compete in the outdoor competition, Big Ten indoor long jump champion and NCAA runner-up Bashir Yamini will have the opportunity to defend his Drake crown from one year ago. Yamini has not been with the team since February due to his obligations with the Iowa football team.

According to Wiecek, Stetson Steele will enter the 5,000 field with as good of chance as any to take away the crowd.

"He's really built up some momentum to go into Drake with (after winning the 5,000 at the SeaRay Relays)," Wiecek said. "The field will be a good measure of where he rates nationally."

With nationally-recognized times in the 4x100-meter relay and the 4x400, the Iowa sprinters will have a legitimate shot at winning each event. Wiecek has labeled the 4x100 as possibly the team's best-kept secret.

"They (the 4x100) have the potential to be our best team," he said. "Everything is starting to fall into place."

MAJOR LEAGUE ROUNDUP

Cubs, Rojas fall apart in 9th

CHICAGO (AP) — Jason Kendall scored from second on a throwing error by shortstop Rey Sanchez as Mel Rojas blew his first save chance for the Chicago Cubs, allowing the Pittsburgh Pirates to rally for a 4-3 victory Thursday night.

The Cubs, who at 2-17 have the worst record in the majors, are 0-7 at Wrigley Field and have lost nine straight home games dating to last season.

Steve Trachsel took a no-hitter into the seventh, but Chicago didn't go ahead until Doug Glanville's two-run double in the bottom half.

Rojas (0-1), who signed a $13.75 million, three-year contract as a free agent, entered with a 3-2 lead in the ninth. Al Martin singled leading off, advanced on a passed ball by Tyler Houston and took third on Kevin Elster's flyout.

Kendall's double tied the score, and Jose Guillen singled to Sanchez, whose throw the ball past first for the Cubs' major league-leading 27th error.

Rich Loiselle (1-0) pitched two innings for the win. He intentionally walked Sammy Sosa to five Chicago two on with two outs in the ninth, then struck out Glanville.

Trachsel wound up giving up three hits in seven innings with five strikeouts.

Pittsburgh went ahead in a weird first. Jermaine Allensworth reached on a wild pitch with one out after swinging at strike three. He stole second, then advanced on an error by Trachsel when the pitcher failed to touch first handling Martin's grounder. Allensworth scored when Martin was caught stealing in a rundown between first and second.

Shawon Dunston doubled with one out in the second and scored on Kevin Orie's single.

Pittsburgh went ahead 2-1 in the seventh when Mark Johnson doubled, took third on Elster's single and scored on Kendall's sacrifice fly.

Jeff Granger relieved starter Francisco Cordova with two outs in the bottom half and walked Mark Grace.

Athletics 12, Twins 11
OAKLAND, Calif. — Rick Aguilera gave up a pair of ninth-inning homers, then threw a wild pitch that allowed the winning run to score in the 11th as the Oakland Athletics beat the Minnesota Twins.

Oakland led 6-0 after two innings and 8-2 entering the seventh. But Terry Steinbach's three-run homer against his former team highlighted a seven-run eighth as Minnesota took an 11-8 lead.

Brent Mayne hit a solo homer in the ninth off Aguilera (1-1) and Matt Stairs hit a two-run drive.

Don Wengert (1-2) pitched 3 1-3 innings. Minnesota outthrew Oakland 21-19.

seventh with a two-run double and Roger Pavlik (2-2) rebounded from two bad starts.

Texas trailed 2-1 but knocked out starter Justin Thompson (1-2) with a one-out double by Mike Simms and walk to Mike Devereaux.

A.J. Sager walked Lee Stevens, and Benji Gil hit an RBI single off Mike Myers. One out later, Rodriguez doubled into the left-field corner.

Pavlik (2-2) gave up six hits in seven innings with seven strikeouts and no walks, lowering his ERA from 12.10 to 8.10.

Indians 6, Brewers 3

MILWAUKEE — Brian Giles and Tony Fernandez hit two-run homers as Cleveland sent Milwaukee to its fifth consecutive loss.

Charles Nagy (3-1) allowed three runs — two earned — and eight hits in six-plus innings, struck out eight and walked three. Jose Mesa quickly got the save, allowing the Brewers to load the bases with two outs in the ninth before retiring Mark Loretta on a popout to second.

Cal Eldred (2-2) gave up four runs and nine hits in six innings.

Avalanche crush Hawks by touchdown

By John Mossman
Associated Press

DENVER — Patrick Roy set an NHL record with his 89th career playoff victory, and Valeri Kamenisky broke a postseason scoring slump with three goals as the Colorado Avalanche routed Chicago 7-0 Thursday night to take a 3-2 lead in the Western Conference first-round series.

Game 6 is Saturday night in Chicago.

Roy, who had 25 saves, recorded his 10th career playoff shutout and second of this series, having blanked the Blackhawks in the opener 6-0.

Kamenisky, who had scored only one goal in 14 previous playoff games, also had an assist. Peter Forsberg and Joe Sakic each had three assists as Colorado rebounded from poor performances in Games 3 and 4.

As they did in the two previous playoff games at home, the Avalanche jumped out to an early lead, taking a 3-0 advantage after one period.

Just 19 seconds into the first power play of the game, Claude Lemieux scored his fourth goal of the playoffs. Forsberg slipped the puck past defenseman Chris Chelios left of the net, and Lemieux scored from the slot at 2:53.

Foreman will retire if he gets beaten up, not beat

By Ed Schuyler Jr.
Associated Press

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. — George Foreman says he would retire from boxing only if he gets beat up, not just beaten.

"I'd quit if I truly lost, but not if somebody pulled hanky-panky on me," said the 48-year-old Foreman, who will fight Lou Savarese, a former sparring partner, Saturday night at the Convention Center.

"If some guy runs around the ring and the judges give him the decision, no way I'll quit."

The 31-year-old Savarese, unbeaten but relatively unknown and untested in top-level competition, was a 7-5 favorite.

"Is it 7-5 Lou Savarese is going to meet George Foreman in the center of the ring and go toe-to-toe with me," Foreman said. "No way. He's going to run and cry and say, 'George don't hurt me.'"

It's just possible Foreman, who weighed in officially at 253 pounds Thursday, is trying to con Savarese into staying in front of him and not moving and making him use his aging legs.

"George is a crafty old guy," said the 31-year-old Savarese, 230 pounds. "He'll do everything not to expend energy. I can box. I have to be smart with George, use my jab."

The tapes of that Savarese has watched most often are Foreman's bouts Tommy Morrison on June 7, 1993, and against Axel Schulz April 22, 1995.

Morrison, a brawler turned boxer, gave Foreman a lot of movement and won a 12-round decision for the WBO heavyweight title. Schulz also moved a lot and fought in furies, but Foreman won a disputed majority decision in defense of the IBF championship.
