'Mommy 2' enjoys high honors at Iowa film awards

The filmmakers of the suspense thriller "Mommy 2: Mommy's Day" have been honored with four awards of excellence in the Iowa Motion Picture Awards.

Max Allan Collins, the film's writer and director, won an award for the screenplay of "Mommy 2." Collins also earned a certificate of merit for direction and the film itself earned a finalist plaque in the entertainment category

Steven Henke and Robert Hurst. both of Iowa City, won an award for excellence in lighting design and Phil Dingeldein won for his work as Director of Photography.

Paul Steffensen won a certificate of merit for his special effects work in "Mommy 2," but won the award for excellence in art direction for the Hallmark Hall of Fame telefilm "Harvest of Fire."

Actors Michael Cornelison and Sarah Jane Miller also were honored with certificates of merit for their performances.

"Mommy 2" was shot entirely in Iowa, using a home-grown crew, with regional talent supplanting Hollywood names — including Patty McCormack of "Bad Seed" and Gary Sandy from "WKRP in Cincinnati." The film has been released on video nationally since mid-March.

'Volcano' spouts box-office eruption

LOS ANGELES (AP) - "Volcano" bumped "Anaconda" from its No. 1 perch at the box office but failed to generate the heat of its earlier rival, "Dante's Peak."

"Dante's Peak," about a volcano that destroys a small town, beat it to the screen by two months and took in $18.6 million, for the best February opening ever.

"Volcano," starring Tommy Lee Jones, got good reviews for its lavafilled special effects. But its opening take could have been fatter, said Tom Sherak, chairperson of 20th Century Fox's Domestic Film

"I think everybody really would have liked to have done more," he said, explaining that a film's opening is crucial because movies tend to lose audiences quickly these days.

Toast with the most

One of the most popular lines in movies last year was Cuba Gooding Jr.'s "Show me the money!" It wasn't long into the latest disaster flick "Volcano" before the obligatory, and rather dull setup was through that I was begging for the film to shut up and deliver what it advertised. "Show me the volcano," if Thankfully, that's just what happens. Lava flows, ash descends and Los Angelenos are exposed to the living hell (that the rest of the world thinks they live in anyway) and it makes for a sweet, tasty cinematic equivalent of a Twinkie. It's bad for you, you know you shouldn't eat it, and, worst of all, you always want another bite.

Tommy Lee Jones plays Mike Rourke the city's top emergency official who has divorced and since remarried to his job while trying to find time for his adolescent daughter (Gaby Hoffman of "Now and Then"). Jones is able to overcome his character's purposeful Midwest simplicity by relying on the acting tools that have produced an archetype that is one of the mainstays of today's cinema. However, unlike most of Jones' characters, Rourke doesn't seem to have a higher level of intelligence to compliment his street smarts. In one scene, for instance, he asks the film's resident expert on volcanoes (Anne Heche of "Donnie Brasco") "What's magma?"

Yet, as with many other aspects of "Volcano," this too can be forgiven. It's a matter of remembering where you are. You didn't buy a ticket for "Anna Karenina" - this is summer-movie fare to the nth degree. All Hell is breaking loose, and "Volcano" lets you enjoy it with a cavalcade of impressive special effects, and a distinct sense of comfort that you're not in it.

friend of mine recently cut off his waistlength hair, and the result astounded even him. People in his department who previously had treated him with indifference, if not outright contempt, became warm and solicitous. Suddenly his scholarship was respectable. His family, he said, acted as though he had dropped a long-standing grudge

At the bar where he works, patrons made sentimental with strong drink would grab him and tell him how they too once had long hair, drifting off into nostalgic reverie, letting him know that despite their outward appearance now, they also were once members of the fraternal order of men with long hair.

To have long hair, my friend realized, is to make life unnecessarily difficult for yourself, and that was the essence of the bond these men felt. It was the camaraderie of former outlaws, rogues gone straight, heads now bent to the Great American Razor. Before he had been unjustly condemned, and now he was unjustly praised. His rise in social standing came not through an act of merit or virtue but from a simple trip to the barber shop. This may all seem obvious, but I bring it up only to show you how poorly academic life prepares one for the real world. In school, we learn that we shouldn't make judgments based on superficial appearance, yet of course we all do, even within the university community. In a few weeks, many students will be leaving this idealistic community and head-majored in sensible, vocational disciplines like computer programming or physical therapy are at ease in the lovely spring weather, but what of the others, for whom the future is a bleak "Dilbert"-esque nightmare of sitting in an office cubicle beneath fluorescent lights, bending paper clips into animal shapes and cocooning them in Scotch tape? Or worse, taking up permanent residence on Mom and Dad's living room sofa, watching "Reality Bites" over and over again? Don't worry, no matter how stupid your choice of major was, there's still hope. What you don't want to do, however, is the typical job search, in which you wake up and drink too much coffee, scan the want ads, spend hours agonizing over cover letters, send out a couple of résumés, and then sit with caffeine jitters, waiting for the phone to ring, until it gets dark or "Seinfeld" reruns come on.

The first thing to do is start temping right away. Any job is better than no job at all, and often temping leads to full-time, real positions. It helps you gain work experience, and provides you with money and a little hope when you realize how many idiots have high-paying jobs.

The second thing is to learn how to cold call. One reason you see so few unemployed salespeople is that salespeople know how to cold call and cut directly through organizational bureaucracies like human resources. Do research and find the growing companies in your area. They will have job needs that aren't listed yet. And don't be bashful. If telemarketers have the right to annoy you in your home, you most certainly have the right to call people at work. They get paid to be there, after all.

The third thing is the informational interview. Set up as many of these as you possibly can. People love the excuse to take time off from work to talk about themselves, and if there are jobs available, your interviewee will tell you and give you tips about applying. The informational interview also will help you narrow down career fields, which leads to the fourth thing: Pretend you know what it is you want to do.

I say pretend because most people don't really know what they want to do, which makes complete sense, since most jobs suck, entry-level jobs in particular. However, not having a job sucks even more, and employers are understandably reluctant to hire someone who is just looking for "a job." Be ready to explain why you wish to dedicate your life to folding shirts at the Gap as opposed to selling pet insur-ance, or scraping tartar off other people's teeth. There are zillions of job books on the market, all written by unemployed former human resource directors, but they all miss the crucial element, which is that new graduates are held back by an idealized view of how the world works. Forget it. A little pushiness and dishonesty will go a long way. Oh, and for God's sake. Get a haircut.

Why Jews fast during Passover or the past six days, I have been observing the Jewish festival of Passover. I've noticed that, while Christians "celebrate holidays," Jews tend to "observe festivals." In the case of the last six days of Passover, the term

"observe" is much more accurate than is "celebrate."

The first two nights of Passover are actually a celebration. We share a big feast and tell the story of the Jews' liberation from Egypt. The meal is a joyous recognition of pride and of freedom. Each food we eat symbolically represents one important aspect of the Passover story: bitter herbs dipped in salt water reminds us of hard times and bitter tears, "charoset," an apple and walnut mixture, represents the mortar that our slave ancestors used to build the pyramids, and the hard-boiled egg symbolizes the strength of the Jewish people: "just as an egg becomes increasingly hard the more it is cooked, so Jews are said to toughen their resolve to survive during hard times.' We eat, we tell the story, we sing, we drink wine. A celebration. But imagine passing the next week (days and nights - this ain't Ramadan) being allowed to eat, as one rabbi tells it, "anything that gets bigger when you cook it," or food that has become fermented." This includes: bread, cereal, pasta, rice, beans, tortillas, pita, beer, peanuts, donuts, cookies, and other things like the grain "spelt" which is no loss to me because I don't know what it is, anyway

What can we eat? Meat, dairy, coffee, tea, fruit and vegetables. Our staple during these eight days is Matzah (a.k.a. "the bread of affliction"), an unleavened cracker which is too big to lie flat on a plate, so that when you butter it it breaks into small pieces and makes crumbs on your clothes and leaves you late for work and hungry, longing for a bagel because a bagel fits on a plate and doesn't break into small pieces.

This is a celebration? It's more like self-denial. And you thought only Christians had Lent. To add to the suffering of the season, there are those special "Passover products" that occupy one small shelf at your local co-op, Eagle or Econofoods. These items are simply processed substitutes for supposed to be eating, like the things we aren't cakes and chocolate chip cookies. This section of the store reminds me of the "diet aids" aisle: sugary-sweet chemically engineered imitations of what we really want to be eating. Don't go there.

For the last six days, I've been living on Matzah, potatoes, Matzah-ball soup, eggs and the occasional ice cream (no cone). I'm hungry. I'm cranky. I've got a job interview tomorrow and am going to have Matzah crumbs all over my "professional-looking" outfit. Why am I doing this? Will these cracker crumbs bring me closer to God? Is there something inherently virtuous about eating potatoes and milk shakes rather than rice and beans? I called the Rabbi. He'd know. He'd explain it to me.

Jeff Portman, our wonderful Iowa City Rabbi, is laid back, accessible, honest and funny as only a Rabbi from Indiana can be: the perfect combination of Midwestern and Jewish. "How are you?" Rabbi

"I'm hungry and cranky and trying to feel full." He could relate. "Why are we doing this?" I asked our scholar, our teacher, our spiritual leader. He laughed. Not at my question, I think, but at the tone in which it was asked. Being a Rabbi and all, he quoted the Book of Exodus which commands that "unleavened bread shall be eaten" during the

When the Jewish slaves finally were permitted to leave Egypt, they did not have enough time to let their bread rise. By eating this "bread of affliction," we remember what our ancestors experienced. We recognize that "we" were once slaves. We commemorate the liberation of Israel from slavery. Eating Matzah and otherwise restricting our diet also enables us to experience, on some micro-level, "what slavery feels like." It is a time during which we think about and acknowledge the struggles for freedom of both our own people and of others. Imbuing food with symbolic meaning and sharing a ritual meal helps Jews remember where we came from; it binds us to our history in a material, visceral way.

The Seder meal includes and welcomes the participation of children, who get to open the door for a ghost (prophet), ask questions and find a hidden piece of Matzah. The Passover story, as Rabbi Jeff says, "has all the elements of a successful Broadway show." The Jewish people "vowed to remember that the Jews were once slaves in Egypt, and to retell the story of our liberation once a year. Because the ceremony is fun, active, exciting and participatory, Jews remember, with all of our senses, this freedom story.

Every year, I attend the feast and spend the next week eating afflicted bread, dreaming about donuts and being hungry. It is bothersome. And that is exactly why the story is more real to me than it would be had I merely read a book about Jewish slaves or listened to a sermon while sitting in a worship service. I like the tangible and concrete ways in which this festival's rituals remind me of my people.

On Tuesday at sundown, I'll be joining other Jews in a "yeast feast," making the rounds of pizza places and cookie shops not unlike an undergraduate touring the bars after winter break. Food then will cease to have the rich symbolic meaning it has during this special week.

So we do it again next year. And the year after that - in Iowa, in New York, in Jerusalem.

According to this faulty logic, Abby would probably recommend that all undergraduate students need not take courses since all of the information can be found in the library for free. The prep courses take some of the most admittedly boring material that a student will ever see and make them into an interesting social and educational classroom experience led by a human teacher. Books are no substitute for the explanations which a live teacher can provide.

Secondly, the courses are indeed expensive. However, the companies that offer prep courses in Iowa City rarely make a profit. Materials, instructors, classrooms, etc. all cost more than one would guess.

Abby did, however, make one excellent point: Standardized test scores are extremely important for graduate and professional school admissions. Test Prep courses are a proven method for raises test scores

Reader suggests new Barbies for a less-thanperfect world

To the Editor:

I am writing in response to RVAP's lecture on the cultural impact of the Barbie Doll. I would like to propose that a new Barbie Doll be designed to suit the modern norm. Modern women are sick of a Barbie who dates a man, lives in a mansion, drives an expensive car and wears fancy clothing. Women are sick of wearing their hair long, shaving their legs and exercising to please men. I am a man and I am sick and tired of my girlfriend dressing nicely, combing her hair, vatching her weight and generally being attractive.

You see, none of us would have this desire to fit such an unrealistic ideal if it weren't for a conspiracy cooked up by 'the man,' forcing us to buy Barbie Dolls. Instead of programming little girls with a perfect and attractive doll, we should design an Alternative Lifestyles Barbie to bring girls into line with what is nor-

This new Barbie would have a butch haircut, at least 100 extra pounds of rippling cellulite and crooked yellow teeth. Barbie wouldn't have one of those nasty, polluting cars and she would live in a one bedroom apartment with her ambiguously gendered lesbian lover. Barbie and her companion would not be rich. In fact, they would be unemployed. They would live off of welfare and food stamps, occasionally hooking for drug money. Their clothes would be dirty, scrubby rags and the package would include a body-piercing kit for decoration. The Ken Doll would be much the same, only his companion would of course be homosexual.

Presenting these new Barbie Dolls as the ideal would make the world a much better place for us all.

N.D. residents defy security and go home

By Jeremiah Gardner Associated Press

GRAND FORKS, N.D. - They told Henry Hawe to get out of town. It was no use.

"I've got a home and business, and I've got to get in here," Hawe

He is one of hundreds of people who have defied evacuation orders and skirted lax martial law to get at their property since the Red River flooded this city of 50,000 people 10 days ago.

"I don't know what else I'd do," Hawe said. "I'm really worried about my home."

Some people are even living at home again, despite having no tap water or sewer service.

"Anybody that knows the city and has a brain right now can get in," said Scott Carlson, a National Guardsman manning the only traffic checkpoint in town during the weekend.

During the night, police crisscross the city and helicopters circle desolate neighborhoods, using high-tech infrared and night vision scopes to look for looters.

But many others entered areas still officially closed.

"There's no way they can keep people from coming over here,' said Barb Faulkenberry, inspecting her home behind security lines Saturday. "Since about every road is open, you don't have the manpower to do that."

Guardsmen and police who randomly patrol the neighborhoods are turning a blind eye to residents too anxious to keep away.

"I think it's pretty easy to tell the good guys from the bad guys,' Faulkenberry said.

"For these reasons, Iowans have asked Barbara and me to keep representing them in the Senate," Grassley said. "Consequently, I have ruled out a run for governor in 1998."

Many Republicans had urged Grassley to run for governor to assure that the GOP would continue ley said he has little doubt that the party will be able to hold the office.

"We have a good field of candidates," he said. "I do it with complete confidence that whoever wins that primary will be able to win in November of 1998.

The fallout from Grassley's decision was immediate.

Republican Secretary of State Paul Pate attended the announcement and said potential contenders have been maneuvering for months. "It opens up our money-raising," Pate said. "I'll be on the phone today

Republican Terry Branstad has announced he's stepping down next year after four terms as governor. He had been among the Republicans urging Grassley to seek the governor's office.

"While I have encouraged Chuck to run for governor because of the respect and affection that Iowans have for him, I respect his decision," Branstad said in a statement. "I fully support his re-election."

Branstad added, "I will also do my best to see that the Republican party has the strongest possible candidate to keep Iowa going in the right direction."

roe, was visiting friends at VEISHEA when he was stabbed. According to police, Runyan and Abrams got into a fight with Sellers early last Sunday morning on the lawn of the Adelante Fraternity house, 318 Welch Ave., at Iowa State University, where Sellers was visiting friends.

A few minutes after the first confrontation, police said, the two returned and Runyan stabbed Sellers once in the chest. Sellers died four hours later at Mary Greeley Medical Center from a severed aorta, which carries blood from the left side of the heart to the arteries of all limbs and organs except for the lungs. Police said the two discussed killing Sellers on the way back to the fraternity house.

Runyan and Abrams were also in Ames for the VEISHEA celebration, Ames Police Chief Dennis Ballantine said. Ballantine's information and information in the warrant were provided by "eyewitnesses who accompanied Abrams and Runyan to Ames from Fort Dodge.'

These witnesses "gave statements to the police concerning the assault and have heard the defendants make statements implicating themselves in the crime," Abrams' arrest warrant application said.

The knife that was believed to be used in the attack was found by the Ames Police Department on Friday afternoon. The police had information about the general location of the weapon, which was described by police as having a 5- to 6-inch long blade, but they were unable to ian Church, gave the eulogy at the to this story.

Both Runyan and Abrams were transported to the Ames Police Department for processing and then transferred to the Story County Jail in Nevada, Iowa, where they each are being held on a $250,000 bond.

Witness accounts of Sunday's brawl indicate a third individual fleeing the scene of the crime. Police officials said they have spoken to the third person, but don't plan to charge him.

As the assailants surrendered, more than 750 friends and family mourned Sellers' death at the First Baptist Church in Monroe. Reverend Marvon Pottar, a former pastor at the Presbyterian Church in Monroe, and Rev. Larry Gander, the present pastor at the Presbyterclosed-casket ceremony

The casket was open during the visitation on Wednesday and Thursday when friends and family members stood in lines that were over a block long to pay their respects.

Jennifer Barnett attended the standing-room-only ceremony with her family. Her son, Reed Barnett, who had been best friends with Sellers for eight years, was one of eight pallbearers for the ceremony. Prairie City Monroe High School (PCM) dismissed classes one hour early for the ceremony that started at 2:30 p.m. on Friday.

"Uri was like a son to me," Jen-nifer Barnett said. "We'll all miss his smile and his outgoing personality."

IOC chief says sports ignore drug problems

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo. (AP) -The president of the ICC assailed some Olympic sports on Sunday for ignoring drug use among world-class athletes.

In an uncharacteristically blunt assessment, International Olympic Committee chief Juan Antonio Samaranch said that while most sports were fighting drugs others closed their eyes to an issue almost three decades old.

"Doping for these organizations is not existing," he said.

Although he declined to identify the sports failing to act, Samaranch said public scrutiny of drugs in highprofile events such as track and swimming was misdirected.

'All the attention and all the criticism is going to the organizations that are fighting drugs," he said.

Samaranch also had some criticism for the organizers of next year's Nagano Olympics. Speaking after three days of meetings with the U.S. Olympic Committee, the IOC chief said Nagano needed to better promote the games.

"They need to sell the games better to the world and Japan," Samaranch said. "... If you go to Tokyo now, you get the feeling that the Nagano Games are not so important."

Former Hawkeyes earn national freestyle titles

Jordan takes over, leads Bulls past Washington

CHICAGO (AP) — Triangle offense? the-face defense by Calbert Cheaney, Not this day. Michael Jordan decided couldn't change that. Neither could that HE was the offense and no one was going to stop him — not even his own teammates and coaches.

Jordan scored 55 points, including 20 of Chicago's 23 in the fourth quarter, as the Bulls overcame a strong performance from the young, hungry Washington Bullets to win 109-104 Sunday. The defending champions lead the best-of-5 first round series 2-0.

"I got into that zone and I couldn't get out," Jordan said. "I apologized to Tex after the game: 'Sorry about the triangle, Tex.' I just got in that mode and I couldn't turn it off."

Tex Winter is the assistant coach credited with bringing the Bulls the triangle - a motion, reaction and passing offense that, theoretically, gives everybody an equal chance to

"Steve (Kerr) told me that he might be open, but I couldn't focus" on passing, Jordan said. "I just felt compelled to stay in that mode." The Bullets, despite some hand-in-

"M.J. is M.J.," Chicago's Ron Harper said. "We allow him to do his thing. If he wants to take over a game, there is nothing Scottie can say or Phil can say to stop it."

Said Jordan: "That's my job. That's what I get paid the big bucks for. I want to win. I want to win another championship.' The Bulls want to wrap up the best-of-5 series Wednesday at Washington. "They are a good team," Jordan said of the Bullets. "They are gaining confi-dence and I'd like to get this thing over with quickly before they get too much confidence.

Cheaney scored 26 points, Tracy Murray 22 and Chris Webber 21 for the Bullets, who felt they would have won if they were playing any team that didn't have Jordan on it.

DES MOINES, Iowa - Michael Johnson isn't just a sprinter anymore. He's a phenomenon.

From the moment Johnson arrived at the Drake Relays in an 18-foot stretch limousine and donned his purple shoes, the crowd belonged to him.

How the Hawkeyes fared at Drake, Page 3B

Hundreds of athletes, workers and judges in the infield craned their necks to glimpse him in the starting blocks. The sellout crowd of 18,000 waited on edge for the starter's gun. Those without tickets stood four and five deep along the fence at the open end of the u-shaped stadium.

TORONTO (AP) - Randy Johnson won his 15th consecutive decision and Alex Rodriguez homered and drove in two runs to lead the Seattle Mariners over the Toronto Blue Jays 2-1 Sunday.

Johnson, who hasn't lost in 23 starts since Aug. 1, 1995, struck out nine in eight innings, allowing the one run and six hits.

Johnson (3-0) is two wins shy of the AL record for consecutive decisions won, set by Cleveland's Johnny Allen (1936-37) and matched by Baltimore's Dave McNally (1968-69). Carl Hubbell set the major league record of 24 with the New York Giants (1936-37).

Yankees 7, White Sox 1

NEW YORK — Andy Pettitte became the season's first five-game winner and Paul O'Neill drove in four runs to lead the New York Yankees over the Chicago White Sox.

Pettitte (5-0) limited Chicago to just four hits in 7 2-3 innings to join Mel Stottlemyre as the only Yankees pitcher to ever record five wins in April. The left-hander walked two and struck out six. Red Sox 13, Orioles 7

BALTIMORE — Bill Haselman homered, hit three doubles and drove in four runs to lead the Boston Red Sox past the Baltimore Orioles. The teams combined for eight home runs. Rangers 7, Twins 3

MINNEAPOLIS - Warren Newson broke out of a slump with three hits, including a tiebreaking tworun homer that led the Texas Rangers over the Minnesota Twins for a three-game sweep.

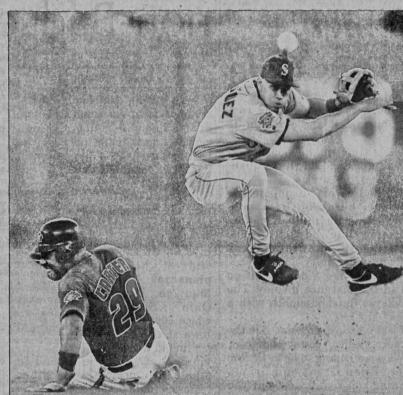

Newson, just 1-for-13 this season and hitless in 10 at-bats coming in, had a run-scoring double in the second, then connected in the eighth off Dan Naulty (1-1) for his first homer of the season. Brewers 6, Indians 5

MILWAUKEE - Dave Nilsson singled home the winning run in the ninth inning as the Milwaukee Brewers rallied from a four-run deficit to beat the Cleveland Indians.

Milwaukee, which rallied Saturday against Jose Mesa and scored three in the ninth to win, erased a 5-3 deficit in the eighth when Dave Nilsson and John Jaha singled off Eric Plunk (0-2) and scored on Jeromy Burnitz' RBI double and Jeff Huson's double-play grounder. Angels 6, Tigers 5
ANAHEIM, Calif. — Jim

Edmonds singled home the winning run with two outs in the ninth inning, lifting the Anaheim Angels over the Detroit Tigers.

Luis Alicea singled off Mike Myers (0-2) to start the ninth. Alicea moved to second on Gary DiSarcina's sacrifice bunt, took third on pinch-hitter George Arias' comebacker and scored on Edmonds' drive off the center-field fence.

CHICAGO (AP) — Ryne Sandberg of the Chicago Cubs hit his 267th home run as a second baseman Saturday, breaking Joe Morgan's record for most homers at the position.

Sandberg, who tied Morgan on Friday with his first homer of the season, passed the Hall of Famer in the second inning with a shot off Pittsburgh's Steve Cooke.

The Wrigley Field crowd gave Sandberg a standing ovation and he responded by tipping his cap at the top of the dugout steps.

Sandberg, 37, has a total of 272 homers in his career. His first five came as a third baseman.

Hawkeyes drop 3-of-4 to Purdue

By Chris James The Daily Iowan

The Iowa baseball team's postseason hopes were put on life support this weekend after losing three out of four games to the Purdue Boilermakers.

Hawkeye pitcher Jeremy Meccage (5-4) took the loss, giving up four runs on nine hits. Meccage struck out five and walked none.

A shortened 4-3 loss started off Saturday's doubleheader for Iowa. Nate Frese did the damage for the Hawkeyes with a two-run double in the first inning and Eric Martinez added an RBI single to give Iowa a 3-0 lead after two innings.

Purdue fought back in the bottom of the fifth with three runs to tie the game. The Boilermakers picked up a run in the bottom of the eighth to edge ahead 4-3 and the game was called in the top of the ninth because of weather.

ATLANTA — There was no fourth quarter fadeout this time for the Detroit Pistons.

After tiring down the stretch in a loss to Atlanta in Game 1, the Pistons dominated the final period Sunday for a 93-80 victory over the Hawks that tied the first-round series 1-1.

Grant Hill scored 25 points and former Hawk Grant Long made a key contribution off the bench with 17 points and six rebounds.

Detroit, which outscored the Hawks 29-15 in the fourth, has a chance to clinch the best-of-5 series on its home court. The next two games will be played at The Palace,

Power-play goals ice St. Louis

ST. LOUIS (AP) - The Detroit Red Wings wrapped up their firstround playoff series in six games on Sunday, getting power-play goals from Viacheslav Kozlov and Brendan Shanahan in a 3-1 victory over the St. Louis Blues.

The Red Wings were 2-for-7 with the man advantage and ended the series with six power-play goals after getting shut out the first two games on 14 chances. Kirk Maltby added a third-period goal for Detroit, the third seed in the Western Conference, which needed seven games to eliminate St. Louis in the second round last season.

Stars 3 Oilers 2 EDMONTON, Alberta — Mike Modano skated around the ice like a man possessed. He knew exactly where he was going and what he wanted to. Modano scored at 14:42 of the third period after running the Edmonton Oilers' defense ragged to lift the Dallas Stars to a 3-2 victory Sunday, forcing a seventh and deciding game of their NHL Western Conference playoff series.

Mighty Ducks 3, Coyotes 2, OT PHOENIX - The Anaheim

Mighty Ducks claim they thrive on pressure, and, facing elimination in their first playoffs, they proved it. Paul Kariya scored his second goal of the game 7:29 into the first overtime period Sunday, lifting the the Ducks to a 3-2 victory over the Phoenix Coyotes that tied their Western Conference first-round

Kariya and Brian Bellows had goals in the second period to give the Ducks a 2-0 lead, but the Coyotes, also in their first playoff series since moving from Winnipeg after last season, tied it on scores in the third by Darrin Shannon and Keith Tkachuk. Sabres 3, Senators 0

KANATA, Ontario - Buffalo backup goalie Steve Shields, replacing injured star Dominik Hasek, recorded his first NHL shutout Sunday night as the Sabres beat the Ottawa Senators 3-0 to force a seventh game in their playoff series.

Game 7 of is Tuesday in Buffalo. Shields, who entered the third game when Hasek sustained a knee sprain, made his third straight start and stopped 31 shots.

Brian Holzinger gave Buffalo a 1-0 lead in the first period, Alexei Zhitnik added a goal in the second and Jason Dawe finished the scoring in the third for the opportunis-
