Lending a helping hand

A living Mt. Rushmore was on-hand to show the benefits of volunteering to one's community

By Ron Fournier
 Associated Press

PHILADELPHIA — Like gung-ho military recruiters, President Clinton and three of his predecessors began drafting a national army of community service volunteers on Monday. One of them, Helen Beatie, sat in the cool drizzle, waiting for more work and fewer words.

"There's a hunger out there for doing the work," the school psychologist said at a star-studded rally. "So let's get on with it."

That was the mood at the Presidents' Summit for America's Future: Flowery words and presidential paint jobs are fine, but now it's time for action.

"Let's go save our children!" summit chairperson Colin Powell barked to delegates at the rally, sounding like the Army general he used to be.

After cleaning a hardscrabble neighborhood free of graffiti and garbage Sunday, Clinton helped thousands of delegates break into small work groups Monday to organize their community-by-community crusade.

Former President Bush addressed the Houston delegation, but otherwise he and former President Ford did not take part in the smaller sessions. Nor did former President Carter, who spoke to the rally by satellite.

More than 3,000 people crowded in front of Independence Hall, the birthplace of the Declaration of Independence, for a made-for-TV program featuring four presidents, three first ladies and talk show host Oprah Winfrey.

In the spirit of a corporate-sponsored event, the crowd wore Mickey Mouse ponchos from Disney and toted freebie umbrellas donated by companies seeking cheap TV time.

The high-octane guest list, snazzy video productions and corporate underwriting threatened to reduce the summit to a media sideshow.

"Is this just going to be a three-day photo opportunity and feel-good session?" Philadelphia Mayor Edward Rendell asked rhetorically. No, he said.

"This is for real!" the mayor said. "This can rekindle the American spirit like nothing else has done in the last couple of decades."

If not, the summit will be a failure, the cast of presidents said.

- Ford: "This clearly is a call to national service."
- Carter: "The real revolution will take place only if we carry this."

UI students study class schedules while waiting to see their academic advisors. The Academic Advising Center now located in the Quad has been very busy with students waiting to the last minute to plan for classes in the fall.

Long lines frustrate registering students

Advising centers face end-of-semester rush, crowded waiting rooms

By Laura Heinauer
 The Daily Iowan

It took more than 30 minutes in the waiting room Monday for UI freshman Christie Chapman to see her advisor for her two-minute appointment.

In her second trip to the west side of the river, Chapman, a Mayflower Residence Hall resident, "dropped-in" to the Academic Advising Center in Quadrangle Residence Hall to get her Fall 1997 registration number.

On Friday, she waited an hour before she was told that her advisor wasn't going to take any more appointments. She couldn't register at her designated registration time on Sunday, and at 3 p.m. Monday, she was "beginning to get annoyed."

"I think they need to reorganize things," Chapman said. "I have been sitting here forever for a two-minute appointment. They should just give us our registration numbers, and if we don't see our counselors it's our own fault."

Employees at the advising center said it's that time of year again — phones ringing off the hook, students bombarding the front desk and a general sense of chaos.

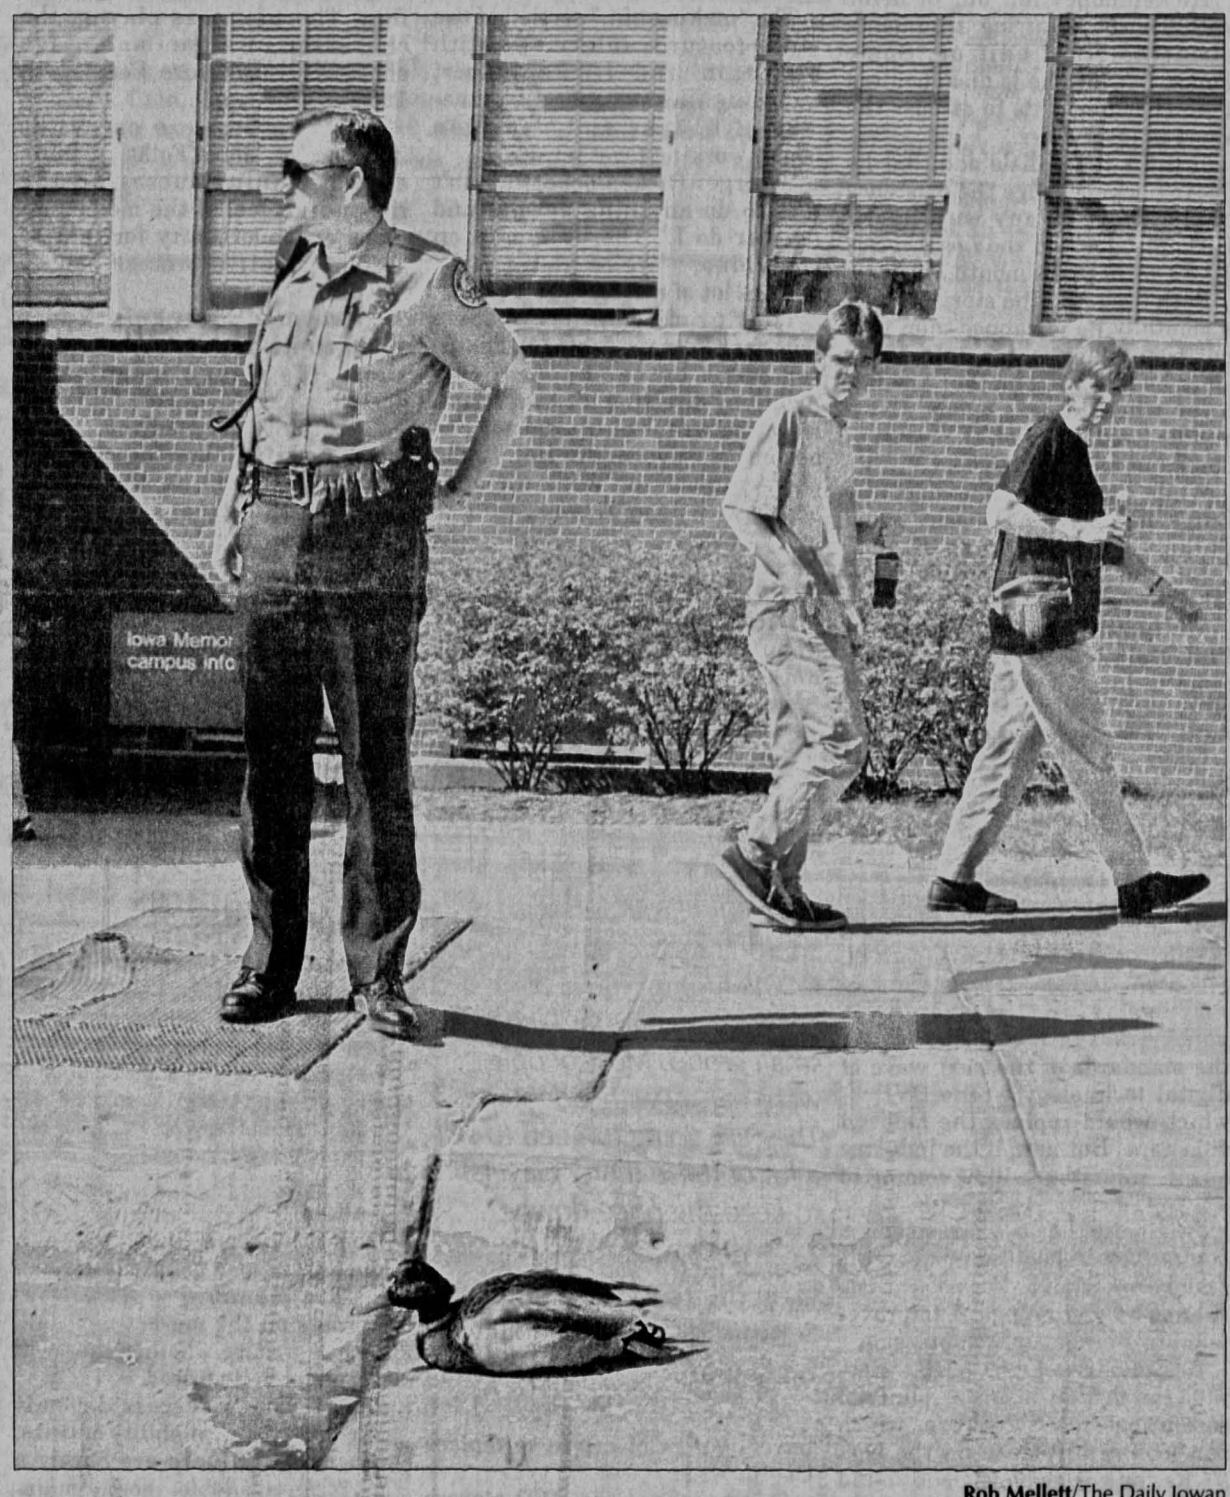

"It's really wild," said Academic Advising Center receptionist Brooke Schubert. "I'm so far behind right now that I don't know what's going on."

Schubert, a UI freshman, said the chaos results from students who procrastinate when making their advising appointments or come to them unprepared. She said she has had to deal with some very upset students in the office because they hadn't been able to register for their classes at their designated registration time.

"I wish people would call earlier, because we are usually really slow toward the beginning of the semester," she said.

To protect and serve ...

UI Department of Public Safety officer Jeffrey Betts protects a duck from students and vehicles outside the Union. The duck appeared to be injured, however the Animal Protection Agency refused to pick it up because it was able to walk. Betts said, "The duck had been there all day." Betts tried to direct the duck back to the river, but it refused to leave its spot.

Mohr favors less division in liberal arts

By Jennifer Cassell
 The Daily Iowan

After a day full of meetings, appointments and handshakes, James C. Mohr was in a rush to get back to his hotel room for some rest and relaxation.

Mohr, a visiting College of Liberal Arts dean candidate, came to the UI Monday to meet with various groups to discuss plans and opinions about the College of Liberal Arts and its 42 departments.

Academic excellence is Mohr's top priority for hiring of faculty and for UI student programs. Mohr's father, Ernest, came to the UI on a Daily Iowan scholarship. Mohr calls this a "testimony to public education."

Preserving the College of Liberal Arts is another one of Mohr's plans for the future. He said he is strong-

Photographer defends Playboy's portrayal of women

UI senior Kate Schuetz has a Polaroid photograph taken of her by Playboy photographer David Mecey Monday morning during an interview at the Holiday Inn, 210 S. Dubuque St.

Sharon Stone, Jay Leno, Brooke Shields and Barry Bonds are just a few of the celebrities who have posed in front of the camera of Playboy photographer David Mecey. Now, a few women from Iowa City may have the chance to join this elite crowd.

Mecey, who has been a Playboy photographer for 18 years, conducted interviews Monday and is expected to continue today to find girls to pose in the "Women of the Big Ten" pictorial. The issue is scheduled to hit newsstands Sept. 2.

As of Monday, 25 women have been contacted to receive an interview, Mecey said. He guesses as many as 50 UI women will interview as the word gets out, unless protests scare some potential models off, but he doesn't think this will happen.

Mecey, who started out taking pictures of football games and race cars, said protesting has been minimal this year.

"The only problem we have had was at Michigan State, where 75 people protested against Playboy," Mecey said. "There were 12 women picketing, but they misspelled the word 'obscene.'"

Mecey said he will chat with the ladies and try to get a feel for what they are about, why they wanted an interview and how comfortable they are about posing in the magazine.

"This is just the first stage, and I'm looking for women that really, really want to do this and have to be mentally into this," Mecey said.

UI senior Betty Sharples said she interviewed with Playboy because it is something fun to do.

"It is something that you just have to try," Sharples said. "Playboy is a tasteful magazine, and it's like a feather in the hat to pose in Playboy."

UI Senior Kate Schuetz said she was real nervous during her interview, but the crew made her feel comfortable. She said she choose to pose because Playboy is a "classy magazine."

 "It is not a trashy magazine; I even read it," Schuetz said. "It is tastefully done, and it shows appreciation for women."
 After the interview, Mecey said he will take Polaroid I.D. photos, and then it will take about 10 days

Judge denies Simpson appeal for civil case

by Jane Allen
Associated Press

SANTA MONICA, Calif. — The judge who presided over O.J. Simpson's civil case denied Simpson's request for a new trial Monday and called the $33.5 million in damages awarded to the plaintiffs "reasonable."

Superior Court Judge Hiroshi Fujisaki said he found no validity to defense claims of juror misconduct or arguments that Simpson would be unable to pay the damages awarded to the estate of Nicole Brown Simpson or Ron Goldman's family.

"He has the ability to absorb the punitive damages," Fujisaki said, noting there was credible evidence that Simpson would be able to make additional funds in the future to help pay the award.

Fujisaki rejected defense claims that he erred during the trial in admitting lie detector evidence and permitting a battered women's counselor to testify about a call never fully authenticated as coming from Nicole Brown Simpson, Simpson's slain ex-wife.

"The reprehensibility of this defendant is without a doubt most grievous and beyond comparison," Fujisaki said, responding to case law the defense attorneys cited in their arguments.

Fujisaki said the record showed Simpson had $15 million last year and could make $2.5 million a year for the next five years on his name. Those figures do not include Simpson's pensions, which Fujisaki said would prevent Simpson from being "left destitute."

"It would be unconscionable to let the defendant profit from his wrongdoing," he said. Simpson did not attend the hearing.

His attorney, Daniel Leonard, called Monday's proceeding a formality and said it was only one step in the appeal process.

Leonard argued previously that financial evidence presented by the plaintiffs at Simpson's trial was insufficient to show that he has a positive net worth.

Simpson has claimed he has no funds and that plaintiffs' estimates that he could make millions by selling his autograph and memorabilia have not materialized.

Ron Goldman's father, Fred Goldman, lauded the judge for his decision and lashed out at Simpson as a "man who's never been responsible for anything he's done."

"This is a man who belongs in jail sitting on death row," he said. "The judge recognized there is no amount of money that can equal the violent murders he committed."

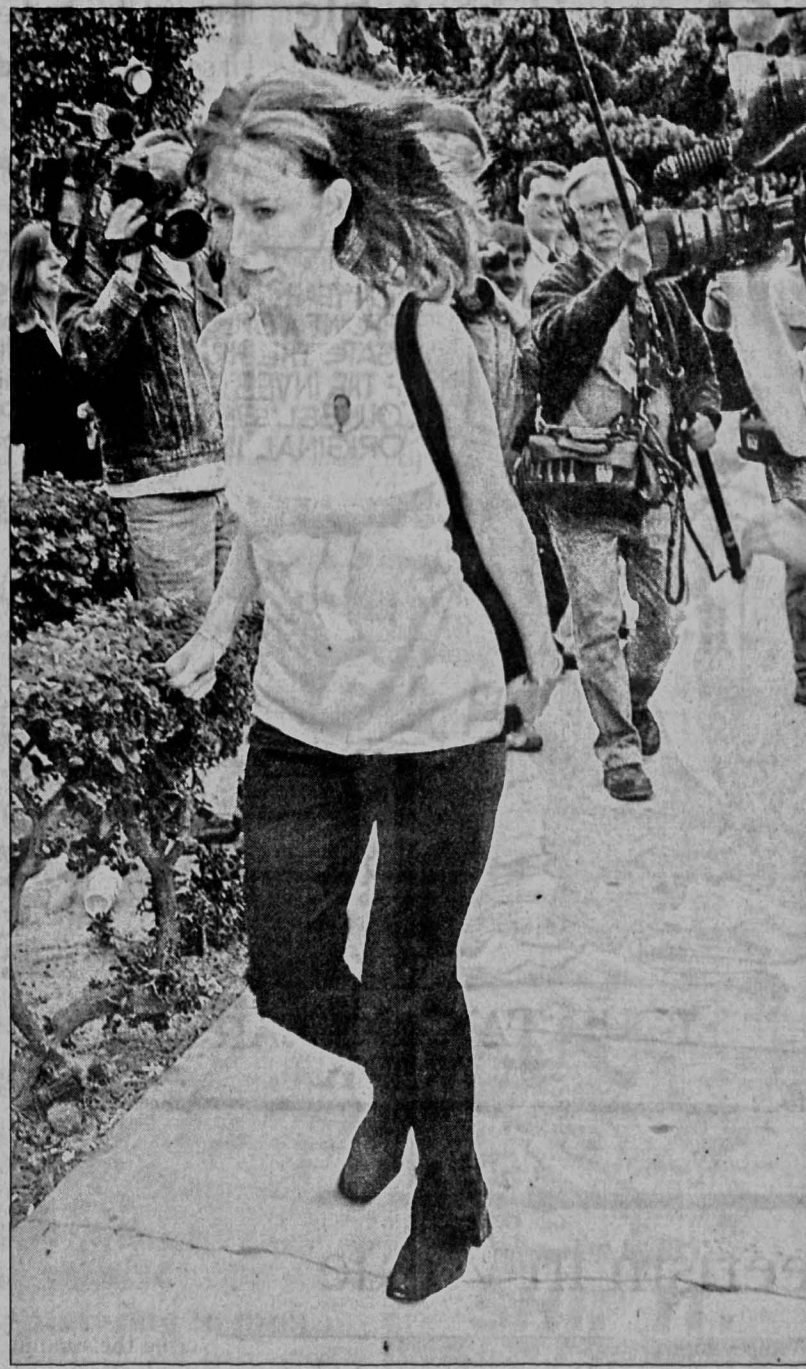

Brown Simpson and Ron Goldman were slashed to death outside her Brentwood condominium in June 1994.

Simpson, who was acquitted of murder charges, subsequently was sued by their survivors in civil court and was held liable.

The defense notice listed 12 areas of law in which it said that erroneous rulings "affected the substantial rights of the defendant and prevented him from obtaining a fair trial."

Among items on the list were abuse of discretion by the court, misconduct of the jury, accident or surprise evidence being allowed, unspecified newly discovered evidence and insufficient evidence to justify the jury verdicts.

A jury awarded $8.5 million in compensatory damages to Goldman's family, then assessed $25 million in punitive damages for the Goldman parents and Brown Simpson's estate.

Kim Goldman, sister of murder victim Ron Goldman, arrives at Santa Monica, Calif., Superior Court, Monday. Judge Hiroshi Fujisaki denied Simpson's request for a new civil trial Monday and called the $33.5 million in damages awarded to the plaintiffs "reasonable" and "not excessive."

Dakotans relieved as Red River floods recede

by Paul Sloca
Associated Press

PEMBINA, N.D. — After more than three weeks, the end was in sight. The Red River's flood crest — 30 miles of muddy, greasy water laden with sewage, garbage and farm runoff — had all but passed into Canada on Monday.

Its departure signaled the end to the worst of what has been called a once-in-500-years flood.

"Good riddance," said Susan Fagerholt of Hoople, summing up the sentiments of tens of thousands of people on the northern Plains who were driven from their homes during the Red's 250-mile flood course.

There was no jubilation, just relief, in this former fur-trading town, the oldest community in North Dakota. The people of Pembina (pronounced PEM-beh-nuh) fought off the Red by bolstering the dike encircling their community on the Canadian border, keeping it dry for its 200th birthday year.

"I wouldn't call it a victory. I wouldn't know what you would call it. We lost some and we won some. The town itself, I think we won," said Tim Wilwand, 38, a farmer and store owner who helped save the community that is the hub for 640 people. His farm was under water.

Indeed, the town was an island in the middle of a lake, its water whipped into white caps by the wind. And there, overseeing things, was the Coast Guard, amid the greatest stretch of plains in America.

"It's really weird," said Seaman Eddie Terrebone. "It's something you don't expect to see in North Dakota."

The water was expected to take weeks to recede, but now the heaviest flow was on its way to its terminus at Lake Winnipeg, about 60 miles away.

"I just pray to God that what happened to Grand Forks doesn't happen to anybody in Canada," Fagerholt said.

The crest was expected to reach the city of Winnipeg this weekend and take maybe two days to pass. The city's floodway was expected to protect Winnipeg's 660,000 people, but 17,000 others have been evacuated from small towns to the south.

David Phillip/Associated Press

Jason Gierszewski's foot prints are embedded in the mud covering the floor of his grandparents' flood-damaged home in Grand Forks, N.D., Sunday. Many residents are returning to their homes to survey the damage caused by floodwaters from the Red River.

In Grand Forks, where most of the 50,000 people driven from their homes nearly two weeks ago have been allowed to come back for clean-up visits, there were further causes for celebration, albeit small ones.

A bridge linking the town to East Grand Forks, Minn., reopened; House Majority Leader Dick Arme and eight other congressmen came to town in a show of support; water pressure was returning; most residents could get a look at their property; and the alcohol ban was partially lifted.

"Don't move away. Rebuild. If I were sitting here today making that decision, I'd come back," said Arme, who grew up in Cando and attended graduate school at the University of North Dakota in Grand Forks.

The Texas Republican recalled the days when he and his wife dreamed of living in the well-to-do Belmont Park section of the city. Pointing to a half-submerged home, Arme said: "That could have been our house."

Jurors hear from trooper who apprehended McVeigh

By Paul Queary
Associated Press

DENVER — The trooper who stopped Timothy McVeigh on a traffic charge 75 minutes after the Oklahoma City bombing testified Monday that McVeigh had a pistol, a knife, bullets and a simple explanation of where he had just been.

"He said he was in the process of moving to Arkansas and that he had taken a load of his belongings down there," said Oklahoma Highway Patrol trooper Charles Hanger. Hanger told the jury he pulled over McVeigh's yellow Mercury Marquis because his car was missing a rear license plate.

Hanger said he hid behind the door of his cruiser as McVeigh got out of the car and walked toward him. As McVeigh reached for his camouflage wallet, Hanger said he noticed a bulge under his light windbreaker.

"I told him to take both hands and slowly pull back his jacket," Hanger said. "He said, 'I have a gun.' I pulled my weapon and stuck it to the back of his head."

As Hanger searched and handcuffed him, McVeigh told the trooper he also was carrying a knife and a spare clip of ammunition.

In the chamber of the pistol, Hanger found a round of Black Talon ammunition, bullets designed to inflict maximum damage on a shooting victim.

Hanger then arrested McVeigh for carrying a concealed pistol in a shoulder holster. When McVeigh was taken to jail, he was told to clean out his pockets and produced a pair of ear plugs. The government has alleged those ear plugs contained bomb residue.

Three days later, McVeigh was tied to the blast as he waited for a court hearing on the gun charge.

McVeigh, could face the death penalty if convicted of federal murder and conspiracy charges in the deadliest act of terrorism on U.S. soil.

Hanger testified that a person driving the speed limit from the bomb site to the site of the arrest near Billings, Okla., would have made the 77.9-mile trip in 75 minutes and 15 seconds.

McVeigh was stopped at 10:17 a.m., 75 minutes after the bomb ripped through the federal building.

Just after Hanger identified McVeigh as the man wearing a blue shirt in court, the defendant whispered something to a member of his defense team and exchanged smiles with her.

On cross-examination, defense attorney Cheryl Ramsey stressed McVeigh's cooperation during the arrest, including his consent to a search of the car.

She also tried to bolster the Arkansas move theory by pointing out that taking Interstate 40 and Interstate 35 from Arkansas to Kansas is the quickest route that does not involve paying tolls.

Traces of explosives were found on McVeigh's clothing, and Mendeloff's questioning appeared designed to eliminate the possibility that the residue got on his clothes after he was arrested.

U.S. District Judge Richard Matsch refused to admit a jacket and a T-shirt into evidence because Hanger could not positively identify them as McVeigh's. The items may be admitted later through the testimony of other witnesses.

Nine witnesses took the stand Friday and described the grim details of the explosion.

The scary thoughts of a 'ghost hunter'

Do you know what "apports" are? They are objects that materialize out of thin air, often near the ceiling of a room, and then slowly float down to the floor. When this bizarre event occurs, it is usually evidence of poltergeist intervention.

I learned this in a little-known class at the UI called "The Physics of Supernatural Occurrences." No, I made that up. It was actually Peter Jordan, (no relation to Michael) a renowned paranormal investigator, who shared this information with a large audience on Thursday night at the Main Lounge of the Union. Mr. Jordan's lecture, entitled "Ghost," covered topics ranging from hauntings to poltergeisty to spontaneous combustion.

Certainly you've spent time wondering why people spontaneously combust. I've been interested in the topic since viewing a video of Spinal Tap's Mick Shrimpton spontaneously combusting during a concert in Japan. Mr. Jordan has an explanation:

Apparently, the source of heat is the build-up of chemicals in the stomach called phosphagens. This accumulation occurs more frequently in older people who drink, a fine reason to put down the bottle, as Jordan suggested. The combustion takes place when the chemicals are ignited (this is a direct quote) by a "phosphagenic fart." I think the people who study this subject have a warped sense of humor.

Nonetheless, if Jordan's description is true, then it would be foolish not to take preventative measures. Of course I'm not suggesting that anyone quit drinking. But perhaps the FDA has a role to play — they could regulate the production of baked beans — and further potential tragedies could be avoided.

Perhaps the strangest part of Jordan's lecture was the pictures of ghosts and apparitions which he shared via slide projector. Insisting that the photos were analyzed and showed no evidence of alteration or forgery, he claimed that no normal explanation could explain the strange phenomenon captured on film. In one slide, a white, translucent ghost was caught hovering above a wooden staircase. It had no face because ghosts in Great Britain (the site of the sighting) "are generally faceless." That photo reminded me of one I took when I was younger, in which a mysterious giant finger comes in from the side of the picture frame and floats, without apparent support, above Mt. Rushmore.

Another interesting bit of information came to the audience in brochures circulated by the "Third Eye Over Iowa Ghost Hunters Club." According to the literature, the group exists to "investigate, document and share information about life after life." They have amassed a list of 12 haunted places in the Iowa City area.

Most people accept as a matter-of-fact that the Oakland Cemetery, where the infamous Black Angel resides, is haunted. I concur, having got strangely lost after visiting the Angel one dark night. I am certain that the Angel became angry and imprisoned my friends and I in another dimension, forcing us to drive around in circles. It was a terrifying experience.

There are lesser-known but also haunted spots identified in the brochure. Example: "The Beta House, where a suicide victim returns to party down." Other locations included the Old Capitol, a dorm room at Currier, and the Mabie Theater.

"I don't pretend to have any real answers," said Jordan, identifying himself as a "benign skeptic," as opposed to a "hostile skeptic." The difference, he explains, is that a benign skeptic says, "I'll believe it when I see it," and a hostile skeptic says, "I'll see it when I believe it." The hostile skeptic, then, is someone so set in their ways that they refuse to consider evidence which contradicts their a priori beliefs.

The principal message of Jordan's lecture could be taken that benign skepticism is a more positive and productive stance than hostile skepticism. In academics, this is a particularly important lesson to learn, and if nothing else, Jordan reminded the audience of that.

Now, if you'll excuse me, I believe I just saw an apport in the form of a beer "materialize" in my living room. I'll try to investigate with an open mind.

Volunteerism in vogue

When Oprah Winfrey highlights a new book for her show's book club, it skyrockets to No. 1 on the best-seller list within days. When she had a show on mad cow disease that made her and many of her audience members paranoid about our nation's beef and sick to their stomachs, cattle prices fell within days and the Iowa Senate passed a resolution requesting that Oprah take back the negative comments she made.

During the recent President's Summit for America's Future, Oprah was on-hand along with other newsmakers, entertainers, CEOs and politicians to mobilize America to improve its communities and reach out to its youth.

Will the number of Americans that volunteer on a regular basis skyrocket? Will state legislatures pass resolutions that request its constituencies to give more of themselves to their communities?

Hopefully, like the Million Man March, the president's summit will send a shockwave of positive energy across the nation. A shockwave that may inspire or motivate someone to join the Big Brothers/Big Sisters program, start a mentoring or tutoring program, or get active in a community clean-up effort.

Together, President Clinton and the likes of Oprah Winfrey are making it in "vogue" to volunteer. Trickle-down volunteerism, perhaps?

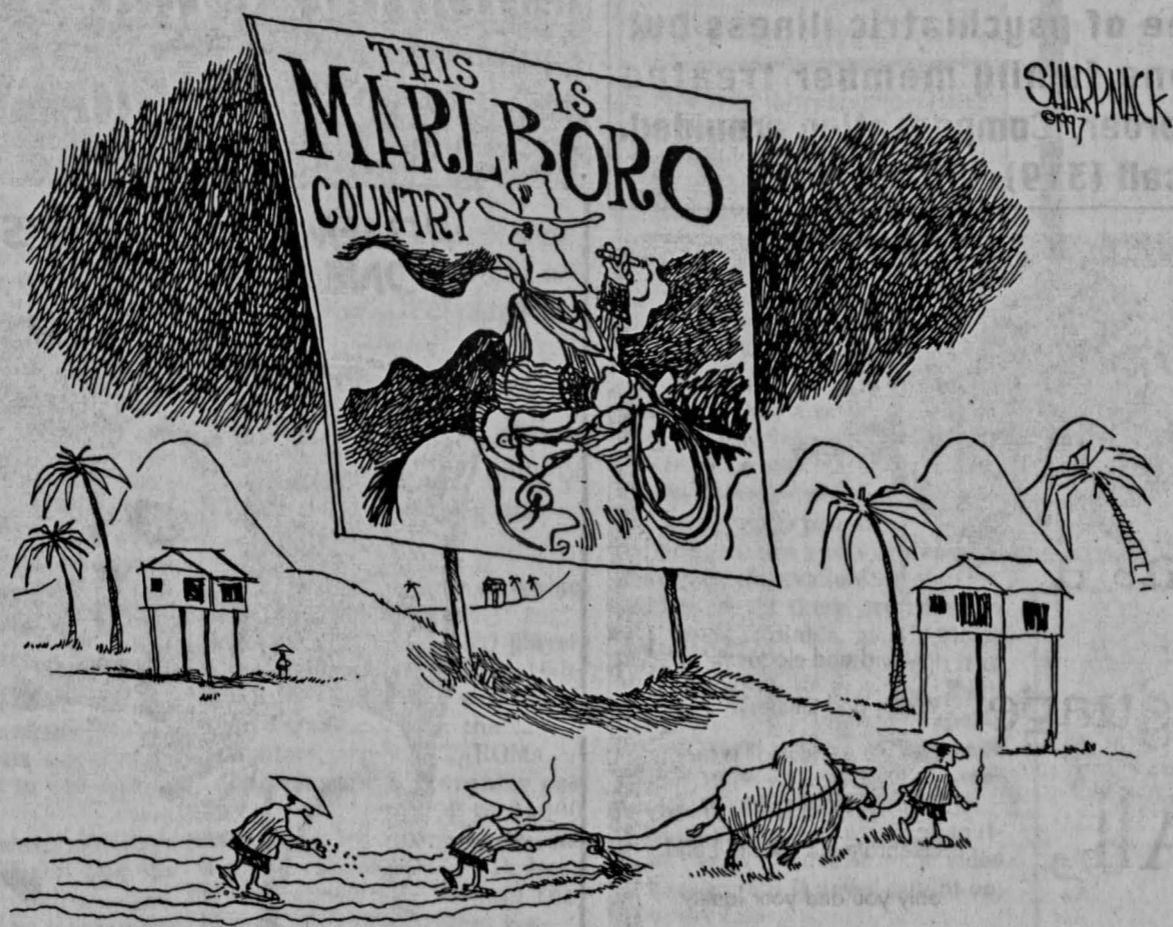

The summit hasn't proceeded without criticism. Across the street from Philadelphia's Independence Hall where the summit was held, an anti-rally also was held. Many of the protesters were quoted as stating that the money spent on the summit would have been better spent on a conference that dealt with "real" problems such as housing or Medicare. Others who criticized the summit viewed it as a weak attempt by politicians to make up for welfare reform which is predicted to place a million children into poverty.

It's good that an anti-summit rally was held. Why? Because an anti-rally requires volunteer work. People had to make signs, get permits, etc. Also, they were bringing attention to serious issues that our nation has yet to overcome. What better place than at the President's Summit for America's Future, which is swarming with news reporters and several members of "Who's Who?"

Volunteering is good for the soul. If people make it to a station in life in which they are able to give back to their community, volunteering should be equivalent to taking a daily vitamin. Now, volunteering is in vogue — so what are you waiting for? Everybody else is doing it.

Learning to love Iowa's open spaces

Knowing this may be my last year in Iowa has changed the way I feel about the state. I used to be embarrassed by its stereotyped "hickness" and endless fields of corn. Now I look at the rolling hills and flatlands in wonder, thinking how much I might miss this place.

Having a boyfriend from Oregon has influenced me, too. His fascination with the utter flatness of the Midwest made me see its strangeness for the first time.

"You can turn 360 degrees," he says, "and there's nothing. No buttes. Not even bumps." Once he spent half an hour desperately searching for Midwestern mountains on a AAA road map. I took away the map, laughing at his weird obsession. "I'd be happy with a hill," he said, snatching back the map.

Karrie Higgins

I felt compelled to defend my state, so we rented a car and toured Iowa. We drove to Pike's Peak, where the roads are walled by miniature cliffs, and "Falling Rock" warning signs stand at the bottom of steep hills. The Falling Rock Cafe boasts Iowa's greatest eggs and highest chance of being smashed by a boulder.

Mike loved the way the hills loomed beside and ahead of us, making the darkness darker during a late-night drive. He loved the spires of long-dead trees so high they seemed to stab the moon. If he pretended the trees were evergreens, it felt a little like driving through the Willamette Valley in Oregon. I was glad to see him find beauty in Iowa, even if it was because of a resemblance to home.

Driving back, we looped through southeastern Iowa. Front 242 was on the tape deck. Sunset light reddened the peeling white paint on farmhouse garages. Straight road, soybean fields, an occasional tree on which some child's tire swing hung still.

I was enjoying the geometry of flat earth meeting flat sky, as if we were driving across an infinite floor with an infinite ceiling above us. Sheltered and safe, but free at the same time.

Mike hit the brakes. His face was flushed, his hands trembling. "I need a cigarette," he said. "This is too weird." We parked on the shoulder and got out.

He felt vulnerable in the open space, like a mouse trapped in a giant hawk atrium. "You seen 'North by Northwest'?" he asked. "It's like that scene where the biplane is shooting at the main character, and there's nothing but a flat field for him to run in." It wasn't funny anymore. The flatness was transformed by Mike's fear, and I realized how strange the Midwest's topography really is.

But it wasn't until I spent the following Christmas in Oregon that I would understand how frightening foreign landscapes can be. If Mike defined Iowa by its lack of mountains, I defined Oregon by its lack of open space.

We were driving to the coast at 2 a.m., and the trees were starting to disturb me. They were hundreds of feet tall, rooted in hills so steep as to block all moonlight. Our headlights whitened the roadside trunks arching above us to the color of bone. It was like driving in the ribcage of some giant beast. I panicked.

Mike told me about a friend of his who moved there from Madison, Wis., and still had nightmares about the trees. "Good," I thought, "I'm not the only one." We hit a clearing, and I relaxed a little.

"Look," Mike tapped his window. "It's the ocean." I thought he was joking, but there it was. We weren't far from the shore, but the road was hundreds of feet higher. In the darkness, there was no distinction between water and sky. It looked like a tsunami wave was about to drown us. But I liked that the ocean was open space.

The next day we walked out onto the jetty and played on the rocks. I reveled in the salty air. I felt tiny and inconsequential. And wonderful. Asia was across that water.

If I squinted hard enough, I could see illusions of other continents. Soon, the thought of Asia's distance frightened me. A human could never swim it. I realized how Mike must have felt in southeastern Iowa. The Midwest was surrounded by safe, solid land. Here, there was the unstable sea. I told Mike the ocean frightened me, and he laughed.

"I feel unsafe when the ocean is too far away," he said, "like a wall's been knocked out of my house."

Someday I'll find out what he means. We hope to move to Portland so Mike can have his mountains, and I can experience some place new. Until then, I'll revel in Iowa's landlocked security, wide, open space and unadulterated view of the horizon. I'll revel in its beauty.

Why community members don't want Playboy on the UI campus

To the Editor:
A large group of UI and Iowa City residents, who have formed the Sexual Equality Coalition, feel deeply troubled by Playboy's visit to the UI campus because of what Playboy represents.

To us, Playboy is the McDonald's of pornography. This "mainstream porn" magazine mass produces and mass markets cosmetic caricatures of women as passive and universally sexually available. However unrealistic these images are, thousands of men consume Playboy's pages. We see this portrayal, at best, as leading men to be disappointed by reality, and, at worst, as encouraging men to impose their frustrated fantasies on women against their will.

Most likely, the outcome lands somewhere in between. Playboy consumers will come away from their air-brushed delusions more interested in the shape of a woman's body than her intelligence, personality, values, goals or accomplishments.

Why do I look like my mom and dad?

"Genes" is the easy answer. "OK, smart-aleck," a few of you just thought, "and what does that mean?"

First, the inheritance question. When your mother's body made an egg, and your father's body made that fateful sperm, each of them started with a copy of all the genetic information needed to build each of their bodies. The information in the egg or sperm was reduced to half the amount of the original information, and the result of combining the two information halves was you!

So what's this information? Genetic information is kind of like having two sets of encyclopedias. There are two "A" volumes, two "B" volumes, etc. You got one "A" volume from your mom, and one "A" from your dad.

Now, if we look in those encyclopedic volumes, we would see that the entries can be different. When we look up "eye color" (in the "E" volume, of course) we might find that Mom's volume says "blue," while Dad's volume says "brown."

If we call the volumes "chromosomes" or "DNA," and the entries "genes," we have a pretty good metaphor for inheritance.

It takes a lot of genes to build a human. Most estimates range from 40,000 to 60,000 genes. A lot of these genes work together. Some have huge, structural jobs, like "body plan is head — chest — stomach, and limbs fringe out from those." Others are for just one trait, like earlobes or attached, lobeless ears.

"But I have brown eyes," you say, "so where's that blue gene? Why don't I look like David Bowie?"

That's the next column.

Captive couple says Texas separatists intended to kill them

By Mark Babineck
Associated Press

FORT DAVIS, Texas — A married couple held captive for 12 hours by a militant separatist group said Monday they believed their armed captors were willing to kill them.

Joe and Margaret Ann Rowe said at a news conference that two men and a woman from the Republic of Texas, all dressed in battle-style fatigues, shot their way through the door of their home Sunday.

"It wasn't an empty threat. If somebody will come shooting in your door, they mean it," Margaret Anne Rowe said outside the Big Bend Regional Medical Center in Alpine, where her husband is recovering from shrapnel wounds to his right shoulder from the shooting. He is in stable condition.

The Rowes were released early Monday after the group, which is demanding a referendum on independence for Texas, swapped them for a jailed member arrested Sunday on a weapons violation, authorities said.

"At this point, the Republic of Texas has relinquished control of the Rowes' residence where they were holding them hostage. They have moved on to another unknown location within the Fort Davis resort area," said Sherri Deatherage Green, a Department of Public Safety spokeswoman in Austin.

Green said law enforcers were continuing to treat the standoff as a hostage situation because between 90 and 150 residents of the resort area were unable to leave their homes.

The Rowes' home was invaded about noon Sunday after months of conflict in the Davis Mountain Resort between Rowe, head of the remote subdivision's property owners' association, and subdivision resident Richard McLaren, self-style "ambassador" of the separatist group.

At least three dozen police who surrounded the mountainous subdivision remained in position Monday. Reporters were kept at a rest stop several miles from the entrance to the site, 220 miles south of El Paso, the nearest major city.

Hours after the standoff began, McLaren said the Rowes would be released in exchange for two Republic members: Robert Jonathan Scheidt, a 43-year-old identified as "captain of the embassy guard," and Jo Ann Canady Turner, arrested in Austin last week on two contempt charges. Turner remained in custody today.

Scientists may have discovered 'short' gene

By Malcolm Ritter
Associated Press

NEW YORK — Why are really short people so short? It's largely a mystery. But now scientists have discovered a gene that might cause some cases.

Follow-up work might help scientists understand the biology of what determines a person's height and lead to new drugs that could make short children taller.

The study defined "short" as belonging to the shortest 2.5 percent of the population. That's a standard cutoff. For American men, that translates to about 5-foot-4 and under; for American women it's just under 5 feet.

Nobody knows exactly why most people in this group are so short. Genes clearly play a role, but few genes that stunt growth have been identified. Other factors like nutrition and environment also clearly enter in.

Most of these people are healthy, so medical conditions can explain only a small percentage.

The newly found gene is called SHOX. Researchers found it was damaged in one person out of a group of 91 healthy short people, or about 1 percent.

The mutation didn't show up in 300 DNA samples from people of normal height.

The short person who showed the mutation was a girl who stood 35 inches tall at age 4. On average, girls in the United States are about 40 inches tall on their fourth birthdays.

The researchers looked at DNA from several generations of the girl's family, which lived in Germany. They found the SHOX gene flaw in all five family members who met the criteria for shortness, but not in three family members who didn't.

The SHOX gene is a "strong candidate" for causing some cases of shortness, researchers from Germany, the Netherlands and Japan write in the May issue of the journal Nature Genetics.

Dr. Judith Ross, a pediatric endocrinologist at Thomas Jefferson University in Philadelphia, called the results provocative. But it would take more work to prove that a mutated SHOX gene really makes people short, she said.

In the analysis of the German girl's family, the result depended heavily on the definition of "short," she said. Two family members who were classified as normal height would have been called short if they were less than an inch shorter, she said.

Leopard shot after killing woman

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — A leopard burst out of its cage at an animal sanctuary and killed a woman Monday morning, then escaped into woods. Deputies shot and killed it hours later as it followed a baited path.

Sheriff John Whetsel said the woman was attacked in a fenced run at the Oak Hill Center for Rare and Endangered Species. The 60- to 70-pound leopard apparently used its weight to force open its locked cage to get into the run.

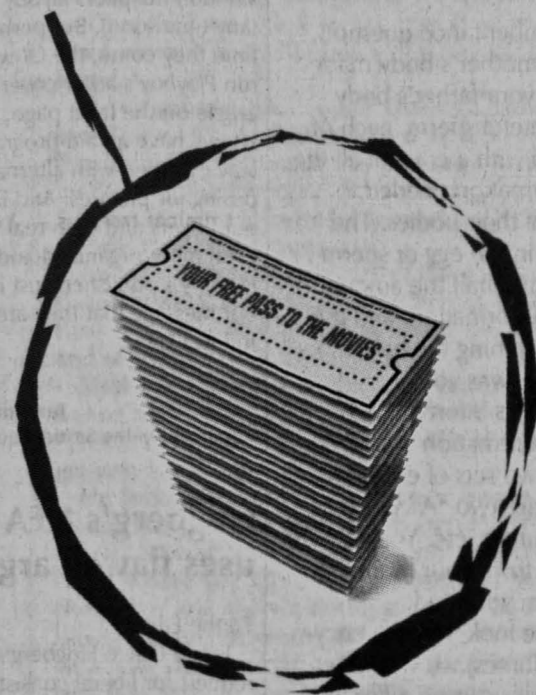

The body of the 52-year-old woman was found by her son, who works at the center. Her name was not released.

"All I can say is, it was a savage attack," Whetsel said.

The center rehabilitates injured exotic animals before returning them to zoos around the country. Whetsel said it was licensed by the state Wildlife Department and U.S. Department of Agriculture, and that he knew of no previous problems.

House approves bill to allow pistols in deer hunting

By Mike Glover
Associated Press

DES MOINES — Hunters would be able to use their pistols when they set out in search of deer under legislation on its way to Gov. Terry Branstad.

The House gave the bill final legislative approval 59-33. Supporters said it was another opportunity for hunters to enjoy the outdoors and might thin the state's very large deer herd.

Critics said legislators were letting pistol-packing hunters loose in the woods and warned of dangers from stray bullets. One suggested that legislators were so eager to kill deer that the next step would be a season "for heat-seeking missiles."

The bill is the latest debated this year because of deer. Legislators have been told the deer population has grown. Many angry farmers and nursery operators have complained they have suffered significant damage from roaming deer.

Supporters of a pistol season for deer said allowing a season for pistol hunting would increase the number of deer killed. Opponents were less than excited.

"We don't need to promote handgun use," said Rep. Paul Bell, D-Newton, a police officer.

Bell said he knows many handgun enthusiasts who enjoy their sport without heading to the woods to hunt.

"They don't need to kill something to hone their skills and have fun," Bell said.

Rep. Dan Boddicker, R-Tipton, said those who use pistols for hunting have expensive weapons and are serious about the sport. He rejected suggestions that pistols would be less safe because they are less accurate, saying hunting dangers come mainly from dangerous hunters.

"If they're going to be unsafe, they're going to be unsafe whatever weapon they're using," Boddicker said.

"This bill is designed for serious sportsmen," Rep. Russ Eddie, R-Storm Lake, said.

"People will be hurt and injured by this legislation," Rep. Jack Holveck, D-Des Moines, said.

Iowa INS struggles to keep up with growing case load

CEDAR RAPIDS (AP) — Tracking down undocumented workers in Iowa is keeping the state's new immigration office busier than expected.

The Immigration and Naturalization Service office opened last October in Cedar Rapids. Since then, its three agents have processed an average of 87 cases a month involving illegal immigrants, Gerald Noland, supervisory special agent, said.

"It's pretty much a complete surprise that there are so many undocumented workers in Iowa," he said.

Three INS agents can't keep up with it all, Noland said.

"It's not unusual to get 40 to 50 calls a day," he said.

More officers are slated for Iowa, which had been one of seven states without an INS office. The Cedar Rapids office is expected to hire three more agents by this summer.

Another office with five or six agents is planned for Des Moines, but no opening date has been announced.

Undocumented workers have been in Iowa, but the increased presence of federal agents means more are being detained.

"I think there was a lot going on here in the state of Iowa before we got here, and either the people didn't know quite what to do (or) they didn't know whom to call," Noland said.

The office's three priorities are the removal of immigrants — legal or illegal — arrested on criminal charges, conducting "work-site enforcement" operations, the INS' preferred term for raids, and arresting smugglers who bring in the illegal workers, Noland said.

Most of those arrested have been from Mexico, but the INS office in Cedar Rapids has arrested others from Canada, Ghana, Sierra Leone, El Salvador and Guatemala.

"We're not just looking for numbers," Noland said. "We're looking for quality, too. We're looking to stop people from selling fraudulent documents."

NewsBrief

City won't try to stop future block parties

Despite an attack on an Iowa City police officer at a block party Saturday night, the City of Iowa City doesn't foresee taking any legal action to put a stop to future block parties.

Officer Eric Lippold, of the ICPD, was assaulted by drunken partygoer Andrew Clark Place, 20, of Cedar Falls, at the "alternative to RiverFest" block party, held Saturday in the 400 block of South

Dodge Street.

Lippold received medical attention on the scene and was taken to the UI Hospitals and Clinics, police said. Lippold then was treated and released.

Place was arrested at the corner of Court and Dodge streets for operating while intoxicated and assaulting a police officer.

The block party, which drew a crowd of more than 1000 people, was held by UI junior Kevin Fair.

about 2 p.m. Saturday and wound down near 3 a.m. Sunday.

City Manager Steve Atkins said the party was considered private, therefore no permit was needed, and the city didn't have an obligation to restrict it.

A member of Atkins' administrative staff spoke to Fair about the party before it took place, and warned him about possible complaints from the neighbors.

After a second complaint from neighbors concerning loud music, several ICPD officers came to the party to break it up. Atkins said the party did get out of hand, and public works crews were called in to clean up the mess made by the crowd.

"It was a kind of contest to see who could get the drunkest," Atkins said. "Once alcohol is in the picture, the brain is thrown out the window."

Fair and Place were unreachable for comment Monday night.

Knopf nabs conference honor

Iowa softball player Kari Knopf was named Big Ten co-Player of the Week Monday.

The infielder earned the honor, along with Purdue's Jenny Schoen, for her role in five Iowa victories over the weekend.

Knopf went 8-for-15 in that stretch, including two triples and five RBI.

Former Hawkeyes get called in WNBA Draft

Former Iowa players Toni Foster and Tia Jackson were the top two picks of the Phoenix Mercury on Monday in the Women's National Basketball Association draft.

Phoenix selected Foster with the final pick of the first round, then grabbed Jackson with the first pick of the second round.

Both players played on Iowa's 1993 Final Four team.

Men's crew to compete for National Championship

Gooden tears second ACL

Injuries

By Wayne Drehs
The Daily Iowan

Iowa women's basketball players who have suffered torn ACLs in the past four years:

Spring 1997
Tiffany Gooden

Winter 1995
Simone Edwards

Winter 1994
Malikah Willis

Fall 1994
Simone Edwards

Summer 1994
Tiffany Gooden

Winter 1993
Tia Jackson

For the second time in three years, Tiffany Gooden has been included on the long list of major knee injuries for the Iowa women's basketball team.

The junior forward tore her right anterior cruciate ligament and lateral meniscus in a recent practice at Carver-Hawkeye Arena. She is scheduled to have surgery May 12 at the UI Hospitals and Clinics.

"It is very unfortunate that this has happened," Iowa coach Angie Lee said in a press release. "Tiffany is a very strong-willed person and she is going to work extremely hard to get back into shape for the start of the 1997-98 season."

During the summer prior to Gooden's freshman year, the Fort Wayne, Ind. native tore her left ACL.

Gooden's pair of knee injuries are just two on a long list for Iowa. Over the past three seasons, six major knee injuries have hobbled three separate Hawkeyes.

Senior Simone Edwards was granted a sixth season of eligibility from the NCAA this year after tearing her right ACL for the second time during the 1995-96 season, and Junior Malikah Willis tore her ACL during the 1994-95 preseason. Senior captain Tia Jackson tore her ACL during the beginning of the 1993-94 year.

Gooden's injury comes after a season in which the preseason AP all-American averaged just 9.6 points and 3.1 assists on an 18-12 team that bowed out of the NCAA Tournament in the second round to Connecticut. The Hawkeyes were picked prior to the year to finish as high as No. 4, but recurring injuries to Angie Hamblin and Gooden hurt the team's cause.

Gooden averaged 14.3 points and 3.8 rebounds on the 1995-96 team that was 27-4. But at the beginning of the 1996-97 season, Gooden sprained her left knee, and was slowed by the leg for most of the year. She didn't stop wearing a support brace until late in the season.

For Gooden, a former high school player of the year and Big Ten freshman of the year, the pressure will be on next fall to win. It will be the last run for the "Sensational Seven" recruiting class of 1994. The group had its best season two years ago, when it won the Big Ten regular season championship, and advanced to the Sweet Sixteen of the NCAA Tournament.

Knicks end first-round playoff series with sweep of Hornets; face Heat or Magic CHARLOTTE, N.C. — The New York Knicks are back on familiar ground. So are the Charlotte Hornets.

The Knicks made more than 50 percent of their field goals for the third straight game as they completed a first-round sweep of the Hornets with a 104-95 victory Monday night.

Former Hornet Larry Johnson had 22 points to lead seven players in double figures for New York, which advanced to the Eastern Conference semifinals for the sixth consecutive season.

The Knicks will meet either the Miami Heat or the Orlando Magic. The Heat holds a 2-0 lead in that series.

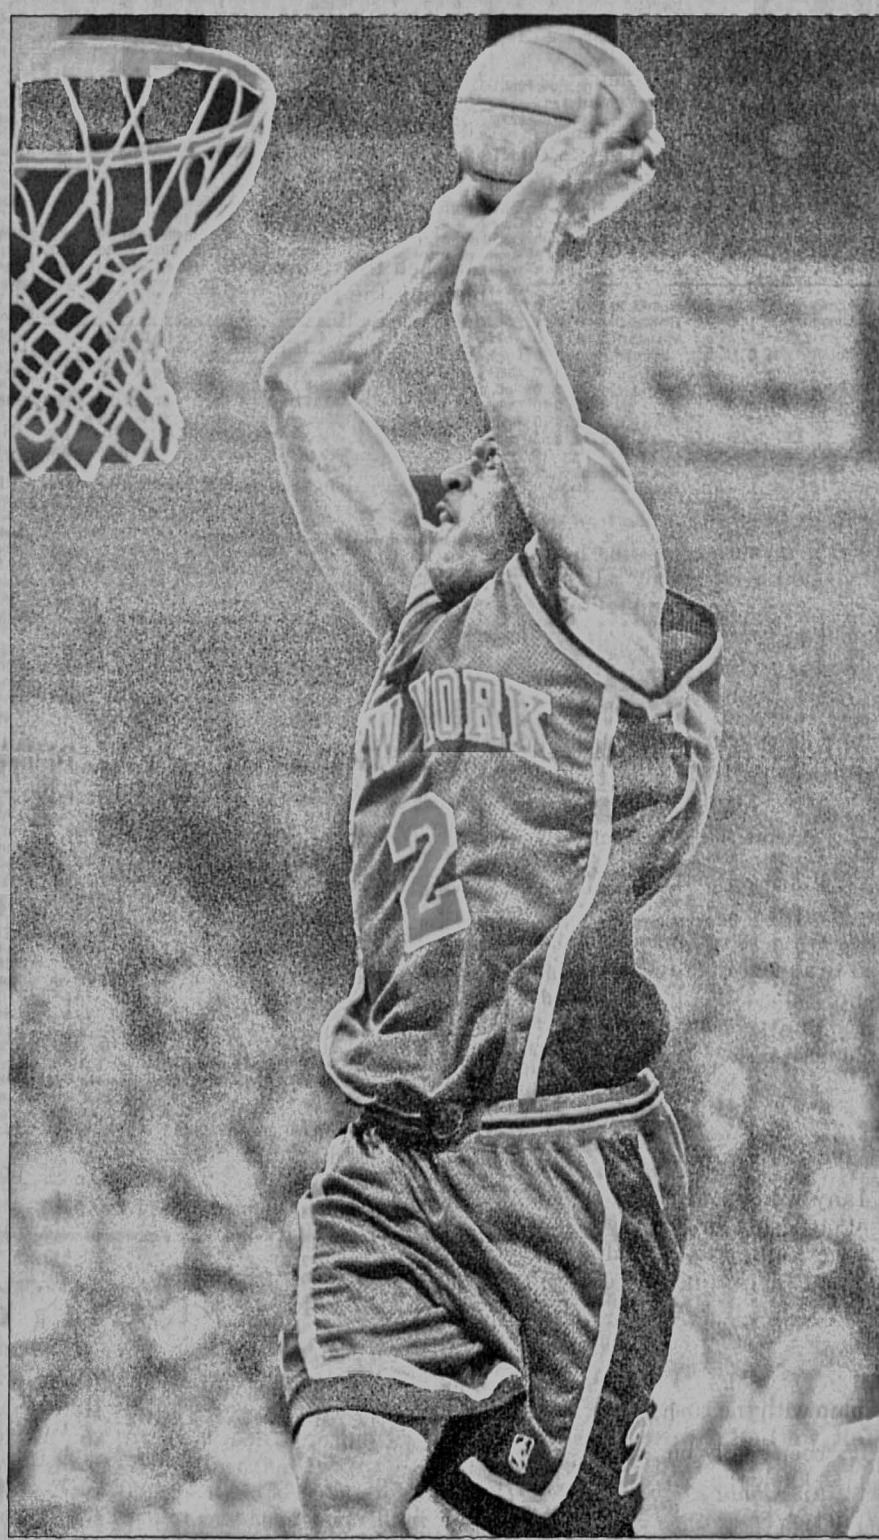

The Knicks, who shot 56 percent, finished the series at 57 percent in recording their first series sweep since ousting the Philadelphia 76ers in three games in the opening round of the 1989 playoffs.

Charlotte won a franchise-record 54 games this season but once again struggled to produce in the playoffs. The Hornets have made the postseason three times in their nine-year history but have advanced past the first round just once and have never made it past the conference semifinals.

Charlotte finished its year with five consecutive losses, the Hornets' worst skid of the season.

Glen Rice had 22 points for Charlotte, but just four of those came in the second half. Muggsy Bogues overcame

Hawkeyes set sights on Big Ten title

Victories over Northwestern today would clinch league championship in final home games

By Becky Gruhn
The Daily Iowan

Northwestern may look like just another team on Iowa's Big Ten schedule, but today's series will affect more than win-loss records — it will affect the entire conference.

Iowa (41-5), needs only a split with the Wildcats (18-27), to clinch a share of the league championship. If the Hawkeyes take both ends of the doubleheader beginning at 2 p.m., the Big Ten title is theirs.

"We're not going to focus on winning the Big Ten today. If it happens today then that's great because I think we've earned it, and winning it is something we've wanted."

Today's matchup will mark Iowa's final regular season home stand. But Cornish says she and the other five seniors are not getting sentimental.

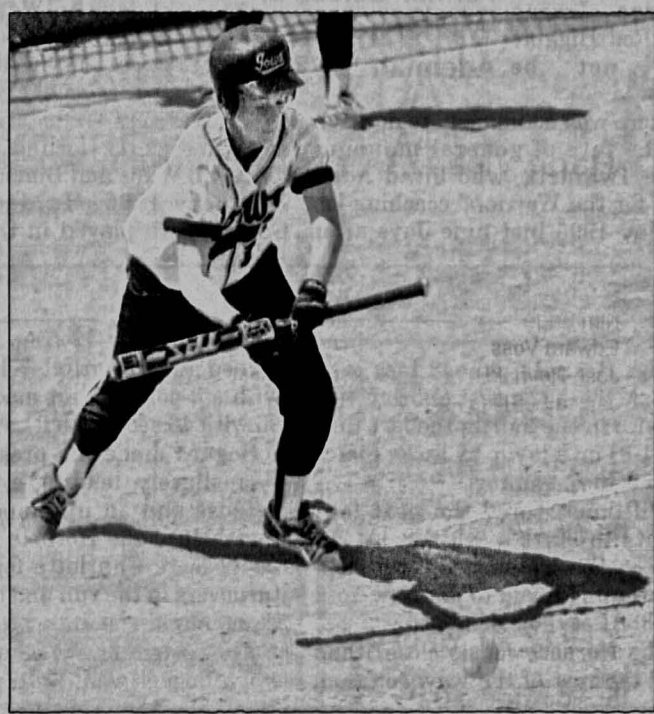

"It's still just a game to us," the center-fielder said. "We can't make it into anything bigger or else it won't turn out like we expect. Being my last home game as a senior doesn't make a difference."

The Hawkeyes enter the game fresh off a triple sweep of No. 9 Michigan State last weekend. Northwestern, currently in seventh place in the Big Ten (8-10), dropped all three of its games against Purdue last weekend.

Nearly 900 fans packed the Hawkeye Softball Complex in Coralville Saturday. Iowa coach Gayle Blevis hopes for more of the same today.

"We were very pleased with the crowds and the support we received last weekend against Michigan State," Blevis said. "I hope we have the same atmosphere for the Northwestern games. The Wildcats are a very young, but talented squad. They have made tremendous progress from last fall. They are probably the fastest team we have faced in conference play."

The Hawkeyes also have the oppor-

NCAA study: Gender equality 10 years behind schedule

By Doug Tucker
Associated Press

OVERLAND PARK, Kan. — While gaining in their long race for equality in college sports, women are still at least 10 years away from pulling even with men, the head of the NCAA said Monday.

According to a new NCAA study, women's programs made gains in several areas between 1992 and 1996, including expenditures, coaches' salaries and scholarship money. But not as much as NCAA officials expected.

"After seeing the results, we are somewhat disappointed," said Cedric Dempsey, the NCAA's executive director and an outspoken advocate of increased funding for women.

In the some 300 major athletic schools of Division I, women registered an increase of 6 percent in total participation while men declined nearly 10 percent.

"If you take (that growth rate) and try to run it out, it would take about 10 or 12 years before we reach equity," Dempsey said.

"The results do not reflect the type of progress we thought we were making toward the gender equity issue. In particular, we were disappointed in terms of the participation increase."

The survey showed that in 1996, Division I schools had an average of 225.6 male athletes and 129.6 female — a women's increase of 18 per school from 1992, the last year surveyed. Much of the discrepancy is due to football, which women do not play.

In Division II schools, the average number of female athletes rose from 79 to 80. It remained unchanged in Division III at 116.

While women's participation showed an overall increase, the number of men declined an average of 24 in Division I. But Dempsey said this did not necessarily indicate schools are dropping men's sports to try to comply with Title IX, federal law banning sex discrimination in education.

"I haven't seen large numbers dropping programs," Dempsey said in a conference call. "There may be some capping (of men's programs)."

The survey found that while operating expenses from 1992 grew by 89 percent for women's programs, men's operating expenses grew by 139 percent.

"An overall concern I have is the total cost of increases not only from the women's side, but the men's side as well," Dempsey said. "That's a significant increase in the cost of operation of programs. We have had two significant cost-reduction studies and a great deal of legislation presented in the last decade. With all those changes, it hasn't had a tremendous impact on the rising cost of intercollegiate athletics. It may be something we need to reassess."

Warriors fire Adelman after two seasons as coach

By Rob Gloster

OAKLAND, Calif. — The Golden State Warriors, who slumped to a 30-52 record this season and failed to make the playoffs for the third straight year, fired coach Rick Adelman and his assistants on Monday. The firing of Adelman, who had a 66-98 record in two seasons with the Warriors, had been expected. "I pretty much knew it was coming," Adelman said in a telephone interview. "Pretty much since February I knew it was going to come, it was just a matter of when."

getting his own position with Golden State.

"I did not put any time pressure on myself as far as analyzing Dave's performance," Adelman said. "I felt our immediate need was to get the coaching situation settled." Twardzik and Adelman have shared much of the blame for questionable personal moves and disappointing performances by the Warriors in the two seasons they've been with Golden State. The Warriors traded Tim Hardaway and Chris Gatling to Miami for Kevin Willis and Binbo Coles in February 1996. Hardaway and Gatling both played in this year's some of the bad habits that made him an easy out all too often.

When he walked away from the game two years ago, Sanders was an impatient hitter who swung at the first pitch resembling a strike. He played right into pitchers' hands.

"He used to go up there and swing, and in three pitches, whatever was going to be done was done," manager Ray Knight said. "It didn't take him many more than three pitches to get his business done." That's changing. Sanders still doesn't walk much — only seven in 22 games — but he's going deeper in counts and waiting for pitches he can handle. The on-base percentage, never anything for Prime Time to brag about in the past, is an enviable .446.

He's also going to the opposite field instead of trying to pull everything with his warning-track power.

"His swing is still very aggressive and quick, but he's cut down on it a little bit so that instead of fouling balls off, he's now hitting them hard," Knight said. "He works at the plate."

Sanders, who turns 30 in August, thinks it has something to do with accepting his limitations on the baseball field.

"It's truly a step," he said. "I just know myself now. That's pretty much it. You learn your limitations. You learn what you can and cannot do. Once you're able to accept that, everything is fine out there. I've accepted quite a few things I know I cannot do. I'm not a guy who's going to hit the ball out of the park. I could if I changed my stance, but I wouldn't be hitting what I'm hitting."

And he wouldn't be in position to steal the way he's stealing. At his current pace, Sanders would break Lou Brock's NL mark of 118 steals and challenge Henderson's major-league record of 130.

"That's not going to happen," Sanders said. "That record is going to be there for a long time. Just getting on base at that rate is unbelievable, man. Only a guy like Rickey could do that because he walks so much and he's just on base so much."

Cubs get support for Mulholland, beat Expos

CHICAGO (AP) — Terry Mulholland finally got enough offensive support to earn his first victory of the season, and Chicago's first by a left-handed starter since 1993, as the Cubs defeated the Montreal Expos 5-2 Monday night.

The Cubs have won three of their last four games and are 5-4 since their NL-record 0-14 start. The Expos suffered their second straight loss after winning their previous six games.

Mulholland (1-3) allowed six hits in eight innings for his first win since Sept. 17, when he was pitching for Seattle. He entered the game with the rotation's best ERA, 3.49, but had nothing to show for it because the Cubs only scored nine runs in his first five starts.

Pirates 9, Phillies 4, 12 innings
PHILADELPHIA — Kevin Elster's RBI single ignited Pittsburgh's six-run 12th inning Monday night that sent the Pirates to a over the Philadelphia Phillies.

Joe Randa, who went 3-for-6 with three RBIs, added a two-run double in the 12th. Al Martin had three hits and drove in two runs for the Pirates, who reached a season-high for runs.

Braves 14, Dodgers 0
ATLANTA — Tom Glavine allowed only three hits in seven innings, Jeff Blauser and Javy Lopez each hit two-run homers and the streaking Atlanta Braves routed Ramon Martinez and the Los Angeles Dodgers.

The Braves, stretching their winning streak to four, broke it open with a four-run fourth against Martinez, capped off by Fred McGriff's previous six games.

Mets 15, Reds 2
CINCINNATI — Todd Hundley and Butch Huskey homered to open a seven-run inning — New York's biggest in more than a year — and the Mets rolled to a 15-2 victory Monday night over the Cincinnati Reds.

The Mets batted around for five runs in the third inning, then sent 11 batters to the plate for seven runs in the fifth against the NL's worst pitching staff.

Yankees 6, Mariners 5
NEW YORK — Joe Girardi's first home run since last August broke an eighth-inning tie and completed the New York Yankees' comeback from a four-run deficit for a win over the Seattle Mariners.

New York's much-maligned bullpen kept the Yankees close, and Mariano Rivera worked the ninth for his seventh save in 10 chances, retiring Ken Griffey Jr. on a fly to center for the final out.

Brewers 14, Rangers 8
MILWAUKEE — The Milwaukee Brewers turned a pivotal defensive lapse into their best offensive out-pout of the season.

Marc Newfield tied his career-high with four RBIs and Dave Nilsson hit a three-run homeras Milwaukee routed Texas, snapping the Rangers five-game winning streak.

Rockies 7, Astros 6, 10 innings
HOUSTON — Vinny Castilla homered with two outs in the 10th inning to lift the Colorado Rockies to a win over the Houston Astros.

Castilla hit his eighth homer of the season off Billy Wagner (2-1), who gave up his first run in 15 innings this season.

With their sixth win in seven games, the Rockies moved back into a tie for first place in the NL West with San Francisco.

Houston rookie Bob Abreu hit the first two homers of his career for the Astros.

Hawkeyes look to put an end to losing skid

By Chris James
The Daily Iowan

With a record of 16-22 the Iowa baseball team is in danger of not winning 20 games for the first time since 1973.

So playing a team that beat you 5-1 in the first meeting might not be best right now.

But that is the scenario that faces the Hawkeyes today when they face the UNI Panthers at 3 p.m. at Iowa field.

Iowa coach Duane Banks said today's game and Wednesday's Northern Iowa at Iowa game at Iowa State in Des Moines is pivotal in salvaging a season marred by bad weather and inconsistent play.

"We need to play well in these games," Banks said. "Minnesota comes here this weekend and we have to have something positive happen down the stretch."

In fact there has only been one time that the Hawkeyes didn't win at least 22 games in one season since 1973. That was 1994 when Iowa was 22-32-1. The Hawkeyes have 11 games left and have to go 4-7 to reach 20 wins. That won't be easy with a home conference series with a tough Minnesota squad and a road trip to East Lansing to finish the year.

Iowa needs to put the breaks on in a stretch that has seen them go 1-5. The Hawkeyes split with Panthers last year, both teams winning at home.

Hawkeye sophomore pitcher Steve Rasmussen said that Iowa pitching and hitting just need to get on the same page.

"In the games where the pitching is good we don't hit," Rasmussen said. "In the games when we kill the ball we can't stop anybody."

Iowa stands at 6-9 in the Big Ten with eight games to play in conference. The Hawkeyes need to finish in the top four to qualify for the Big Ten tournament. But sitting tied in eight place seven games behind fourth place Purdue, Iowa needs a huge turnaround and a few breaks to have an outside shot at the tournament.

"We're not thinking about that right now," Banks said. "UNI and Iowa State are what we have to focus on. If things go our way, fine, but you can't look that far ahead."

DePaul's Meyer forced to resign

CHICAGO (AP) — Joey Meyer resigned under fire Monday as head basketball coach at DePaul, ending a 55-year family affair during which the Blue Demons have been coached by a Meyer.

Meyer, 48, spent 30 years at the school as a player, assistant coach and then head coach. He was a player and assistant under his father, Ray, who became the seventh DePaul coach in 1942. Joey Meyer replaced his father when Ray retired in 1984.

"Because of the Meyer tradition, this situation was not taken lightly," said Jim Doyle, vice president of student services at DePaul. "This was an institutional decision, rather than an athletic department decision."

Doyle said the school made the move hoping to improve the team's record, slumping attendance and competitiveness in Conference USA.

Game 7 is fitting finish for stressed Sabres

BUFFALO, N.Y. — Considering the stress the Buffalo Sabres have been under in the last week, it seems fitting that the success of their season hinges on one game.

The Sabres came into their best-of-7 series against the Ottawa Senators hoping to ride star goalie Dominik Hasek into the next round.

Only now, it appears Hasek will be riding them for Game 7 on Tuesday night at Marine Midland Arena.

"It's tough on the nerves every night coming out, but that's what makes the game exciting," Sabres forward Dixon Ward said. "Obviously, when you're facing elimination, there's as much pressure as you can possibly have. It's fun to compete under that kind of stress."

Talk about stress. The Sabres have been under adverse conditions since Game 3, when Hasek sprained a knee. The Sabres lost the next two games with Steve Shields in goal before winning Game 6 Sunday.

In between, there were plenty more problems off the ice. Sabres general manager John Muckler added to a feud between him and coach Ted Nolan with remarks in a Toronto newspaper that Nolan needs to understand he has a boss.

And Hasek attacked Buffalo News hockey writer Jim Kelley after Kelley suggested the goaltender was having problems dealing the playoff pressure and questioned the severity of his injury.

Hasek apologized Monday for the incident, which the league is investigating. He will not play Tuesday.

Coyotes will be without Roenick in showdown

ANAHEIM, Calif. — The Phoenix Coyotes won't have one of their top scoring threats and they will be playing in a building where the Mighty Ducks of Anaheim have been virtually invincible for three months.

But they will turn up their game, the coach says, and somebody will step up to fill in for injured Jeremy Roenick.

And that's the Mighty Ducks' coach talking.

"They're 7-3 without Jeremy Roenick," Anaheim coach Ron Wilson said, noting the Coyotes' record without their second-leading scorer during the regular season.

"They're very capable of winning without him."

"Keith Tkachuk is ... going to step up and make sure they don't miss a beat. And they've got guys like Cliff Ronning and Mike Gartner."

Asked if he thought his team might let up a little in Tuesday night's deciding game of the playoff series, knowing that Roenick won't be on the ice, Wilson said, "All I have to tell our players is '7-3.'"

Roenick, who had two goals and four assists in the first six playoff games, tore a ligament in his left knee when he and Anaheim's Ted Drury bumped knees in Sunday's 3-2 overtime win by the Mighty Ducks.

Chicago Bulls' Michael Jordan heads up court after scoring against the Washington Bullets late in the fourth quarter Sunday.

Jordan after scoring 55: That's my job

By Mike Nadel
Associated Press

CHICAGO — Michael Jordan doesn't remember exactly when he and Calbert Cheaney had their little chat.

It might have been somewhere between Jordan's double-pump foul-line jumper over Cheaney and his off-balance, hang-in-the-air, land-out-of-bounds 10-footer from the right baseline. Or maybe the conversation took place between two other similarly impossible shots.

But Jordan remembers what he said: "He joked with me: 'Are you tired yet?' And I said, 'We haven't won the game yet, so I'm not tired.'"

Superman doesn't get tired. He simply sees danger lurking and takes flight. And so, when Jordan saw that his Chicago Bulls just didn't have it Sunday against Cheaney's Washington Bullets, he took flight.

Shooting from inside, outside and everywhere in between, Jordan burned the Bullets for 55 points as the defending champions won 109-104 for a 2-0 lead in the best-of-5 series. He was especially incredible in the fourth quarter, scoring 20 of Chicago's 23 points.

"That's my job," the Bulls' $30 million man said. "That's what I get paid the big dollars for."

Ignoring his teammates, Jordan hoisted 35 shots and made 22 of them. He slashed, he dunked, he hit fadeaway jumpers while almost parallel to the court. It was merely one of the best games ever for perhaps the best man ever to play the game.

Jordan, who holds NBA records for highest postseason scoring average (34.1 points) and most points in a playoff game (63 at Boston in 1986), has five of the nine 55-point-plus games in league playoff history.

Elgin Baylor, Wilt Chamberlain, Charles Barkley and Rick Barry had one each.

Including the regular season, Jordan has 15 games of 55 points or more and 37 games of at least 50.

Though he told his teammates he was sorry for going 1-on-1 and eschewing the Bulls' famous triangle offense, coach Phil Jackson said Monday that Jordan had no reason to apologize. "Michael played perfectly within the bounds of what the offense has to offer," Jackson said. "And that is, it creates opportunities for individuals to work at their strengths."

Leadership and will to win are also Jordan's strengths. In the locker room at halftime, he "vocalized" his displeasure about the way the team was playing. Then he took over, rallying the Bulls from a seven-point third-quarter deficit and keeping them ahead in the fourth.

"That's my job. That's what I get paid the big dollars for."

Zoeller still trying to joke his way out of trouble

By Pete Iacobelli Associated Press

GREENVILLE, S.C. — Fuzzy Zoeller, still trying to joke his way out of trouble over racially insensitive remarks, traded quips with a black golfer Monday about "fried chicken" and "watermelon."

Zoeller as a spokesman and he withdrew from the Greater Greensboro Chrysler Classic after apologizing to Woods.

Zoeller and McBryde, a district manager for a chain of doughnut stores out of Winston-Salem, N.C., said they are friends, and their exchange was meant as a joke.

Playing at the Thornblade Classic, a charity pro-am and his first outing since his widely reported comments about Tiger Woods, Zoeller's exchange this time was with Victor McBryde.

McBryde said he and Zoeller laughed together at a pre-tournament dinner on Sunday and just continued it on the course. Zoeller's remarks about Woods were inappropriate, McBryde said.
