2 UI students arrested in steroid bust

By Chris Gardner
The Daily Iowan

More than $10,000 worth of anabolic steroids were seized from the home of two UI students Tuesday, and police say this bust could be part of a larger illegal distribution ring.

Officers with the Johnson County Area Drug Task Force arrested three individuals, including two UI students, after seizing a package mailed from Korea, containing more than 1,300 doses of anabolic steroids. Anabolic steroids are an artificial form of the male hormone testosterone and are used to increase muscle mass and strength.

Jea Hong Jung, 22, a UI junior originally from Cedar Rapids, Stanley Szeto, 19, UI freshman from Iowa City and Phet Sadakhom, 29, of 408 Westgate St. in Iowa City, were arrested at about 2 p.m. for possession of a schedule III controlled substance and violation of the Iowa Drug Stamp Tax.

ICPD Lt. Dan Sellers said it is possible the three men charged could have been selling the steroids and that other individuals are involved. Police will continue to investigate these possibilities.

Sellers said the men charged were "fairly built" and involved in weightlifting.

"My assumption is that they were involved in some sort of competition for body building," Sellers said.

The package that was confiscated by police contained more than 1,300 doses, and UI biology Professor Eugene Spaziani said it is a huge amount, depending on the dosage size and how many people were using it.

"My guess would be that they are selling it," Spaziani said. "It sounds like that is way more than they could use."

Spaziani said a normal therapeutic dosage would be about 1 mg per day. Severe side effects, such as testicular shrinkage, could occur with a dosage of 10 to 30 mg per day. The abuse of steroids has many adverse

4th dean candidate visits UI today

By Laura Heinauer
The Daily Iowan

The absence of UI students at recent open forums with the candidates for dean of the College of Liberal Arts "kind of sucks," according to UI Student Government Vice President Meghan Henry.

Henry said she hopes more students will turn out for an open forum with dean candidate Linda Maxson today.

Maxson is the fourth person to visit the UI to interview for the position of dean of the College of Liberal Arts. In the forums with the past candidates — which are meant for discussion of undergraduate and graduate student issues — the audiences have been made up of mostly faculty members, Henry said.

Henry said the selection process is important for students because the dean of the College of Liberal Arts has a major impact on undergraduates.

"I want to know how (the candidates) are going to get student

While visiting her grandmother about 15 years ago, UI senior Dana Patterson saw something so frightening, she will never forget it.

In the midst of a hurricane in Houston, Patterson witnessed a tornado swirling less than a block from where she sat. From her seat behind the glass wall at the back of her grandmother's house, Patterson held on to her mother's arm as she watched the powerful twister suck the water out of the backyard pool.

"The water had been swishing around all day because of the hurricane, then all of the sudden it started to lift up out of the pool," Patterson said, "It was the weirdest thing, but it was really frightening."

The house didn't have a basement, so Patterson and her family could only sit on the couch and watch the television as the tornado approached.

"You just sit there and hope it doesn't hit you," she said. "It's really awful."

Although twisters like Patterson experienced are unusual in Iowa City — this area has not been hit by a tornado in 15 years — officials say it's better to be safe than sorry, since severe weather can strike without much warning. The only warning Patterson had before another brush with a tornado in

The terrible tale of twisters

By Kristin Bauer
The Daily Iowan

A strong heart and a sip of courage may get people through tornadoes, but a scientific brain is needed to understand how they work.

The following is a brief explanation of the tremendous terror of twisters:

Tornadoes account for tiny fractions of the energy produced in a thunderstorm. When cold, dry air mixes with warm, moist air, the cold air sits on top of the warm and creates friction. This friction causes a funnel which rotary column of air.

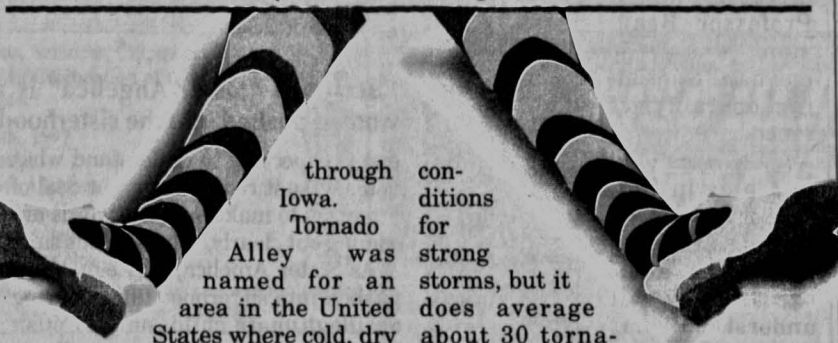

Tornadoes are commonly black in color because of the dirt and debris the funnel picks up along the way. A tornado's path can cover miles of territory or just a few yards, KGAN-TV Cedar Rapids meteorologist Dave Towne said.

"Tornadoes themselves are invisible until they pick something up," Towne said. "If a tornado hits a pink paint factory, then the tornado will be pink."

With the beginning of spring, tornado season plagues the infamous Tornado Alley, a kind of Yellow Brick Road of tornadoes that passes through Iowa. Tornado Alley was named for an area in the United States where cold, dry air fronts from the northwest meet with the warm moisture fronts from the Gulf. Tornado Alley starts in Texas and moves north to Oklahoma, Kansas, into eastern Nebraska, South Dakota and Iowa. Meteorologists vary on the actual date of the beginning of tornado season. Towne said the season starts in April, but the majority of Iowa's tornadoes occur in May and June.

KGAN-TV Cedar Rapids meteorologist Dave Towne

Iowa doesn't possess the exact conditions for strong storms, but it does average about 30 tornadoes per year, Towne said.

Red ruby slippers won't be enough to outrun the strongest twisters. All tornadoes are measured on the Fujita scale, which registers wind speed on a scale from F-0 to F-5 (40-318 mph). An F-5 tornado can carry a home up to 100 meters.

Last year, Iowa experienced just 12 tornadoes that registered as F-0s, which are storms with 40-72

Labor party dominates in British election

By Maureen Johnson
Associated Press

LONDON (AP) — The Labor Party stormed to a landslide election victory today, ending a generation of Conservative rule and making 43-year-old Tony Blair the youngest prime minister in 185 years.

As the vote count continued, Labor clinched a majority in the House of Commons early Friday by gaining 342 seats. It needed at least 330 seats in the 659-member House to take power. The Conservatives had won 57 and the Liberal Democrats 24 in the 659-member House.

"A tidal wave has burst over the Conservative Party tonight," said David Mellor, a Conservative loser and former Cabinet minister.

In power since Margaret Thatcher ousted the last Labor government in 1979, the Conservatives were battered by divisions over Britain's future role in Europe and a widespread sense they had simply been around too long.

Blair and his party fought a disciplined, slick six-week campaign from the political center after dumping a raft of socialist policies and adopting the Conservatives' pro-business and low-tax policies.

Blair easily won re-election in his northern district, Sedgfield, and thanked his supporters at the hall where results were announced early today.

"You have put your trust in me, and I intend to repay that trust. I will not let you down," he said. "We are a great country. The British people are a great people. There is no greater honor than to serve and serve them we will."

The British Broadcasting Corp. projected that Labor would have 187 seats more than the combined opposition in the House of Commons, beating the 146-seat majority Labor won in beating Winston Churchill in the 1945 election.

Labor had long been predicted the winner and exit polls late Thursday bore that out. The BBC projected that Labor would take 47 percent of the vote, compared to just 29 percent for the Conservatives — the poorest Conservative showing since 1832.

"It looks like we're going to win in

Witness: McVeigh needed detonator

By Michael Fleeman
Associated Press

DENVER — Six months before the Oklahoma City bombing, Timothy McVeigh was so eager to buy a detonator for a bomb that he was willing to drive across country to get it, a former arms dealer testified Thursday.

"He needed it bad," said Greg Pfaff, recalling a phone call from McVeigh that came about the same time he purportedly told Lori Fortier of his plans to blow up a federal building to avenge the government siege at Waco, Texas.

McVeigh, who was calling from Arizona, said he personally would pick up the detonator from Pfaff, who had mostly given up the arms business and was running a deli in Harrisonburg, Va.

Pfaff told McVeigh that it seemed like a long drive.

"He said it didn't matter," said Pfaff, who was never able to produce the detonation cord.

Pfaff was the first in a line of prosecution witnesses who suggested McVeigh had the instructions, materials and hateful motivation to build a large truck bomb before the April 19, 1995, blast that killed 168 people.

David Darlak, a high school friend from upstate New York, testified he hadn't heard from McVeigh in two years when he got a call from him in 1994 asking where he could buy some racing fuel.

Darlak said he didn't know, and asked McVeigh why he needed it. Darlak didn't elaborate on McVeigh's response.

Prosecutors say nitromethane fuel, often used in drag racing, was mixed with ammonium nitrate fertilizer to make the truck bomb.

A publisher of military how-to books testified the recipe was in a book McVeigh ordered in 1993 that gives step-by-step directions on how to build bombs that can destroy bridges, shatter steel and derail tanks.

The catalog blurb for the $12 book, titled "Homemade C-4: A Recipe for Survival," noted: "Serious survivors know the day may come when they need something more powerful than commercial dynamite."

In other testimony, McVeigh's cousin Kyle Kraus testified that in 1991 McVeigh sent him a copy of the "The Turner Diaries," a racist novel that describes a bombing of FBI headquarters.

Kraus said he discussed the book with McVeigh, telling him "It would be very frightening if it really did come to this." He said McVeigh replied: "It could possibly come to this."

May Day brings worldwide protest

(AP) — Workers marked the May Day labor holiday on Thursday with street protests around the world. Russians lambasted Yeltsin. Mexicans cursed Clinton. Germans protested unemployment. South Koreans marched against corruption.

Mexicans poured into their capital to denounce economic policies under the North American Free Trade Agreement, which linked Mexico's economy to those of the United States and Canada.

"Die, Clinton!" some of the 60,000 marchers shouted as they passed the U.S. Embassy, just four days before President Clinton's visit to Mexico.

Real wages in Mexico are 20 percent of what they were in 1980 and nearly half of all workers earn the minimum wage or less.

In Seoul, May Day demonstrators hurled rocks and firebombs, demanding the arrest of a son of President Kim Young-sam in a bribery scandal. Dozens of workers were injured and at least 100 people were detained across the country.

In Germany, union workers marched against high unemployment — 11.7 percent overall, but 18.1 percent in the eastern states. And at least 380 people were arrested in clashes around the country.

Police said 120 neo-Nazis were arrested in the central German town of Hann Munden for holding an illegal rally. Authorities had to use a water cannon and night sticks to break up protests in Berlin, arresting at least 110 demonstrators. Another 150 were arrested in Leipzig.

Crowds filled Beijing's Tiananmen Square at dawn Thursday to honor model workers and watch soldiers raise the flag on the first of a three-day vacation.

But noting the 10 million layoffs from debt-ridden state industries over the past year, an editorial in the Communist Party newspaper, People's Daily, warned more bitter medicine was ahead. The commentary called for factory managers to be given greater responsibility — a code for allowing them to make decisions based on profits, rather than on full employment.

Russians, most of them communists, marched through central Moscow and gathered just off the Red Square to denounce the government and demand President Boris Yeltsin's resignation.

"Yeltsin's gang to court!" chanted the crowd, awash in Soviet red flags and anti-government banners.

For his part, Yeltsin noted how democratic reforms made Thursday different from May Day celebrations in Soviet times, when hundreds of thousands of Russians marched in military parades.

"You have a choice today. You can take care of your home affairs if you wish, or take a train to the countryside," Yeltsin said. "Others will follow the old habit and take part in a march ... Well, they have the right and that's what we have been fighting for."

In neighboring Ukraine, 100,000 people protested the government's Western-oriented economic and foreign policies.

The government owes pensioners and workers more than $1.5 billion in back pay.

Russia continues to avoid NATO charter

By Barry Schweid
Associated Press

MOSCOW — President Boris Yeltsin urged the Clinton administration Thursday to give "concrete meaning" to pledges by the United States and NATO not to threaten Russia with its planned expansion to Russia's western border.

The administration signaled back that room for bargaining remains before President Clinton and leaders of the 15 other NATO countries meet in July and invite former allies of Russia to join the alliance.

Much of the negotiating until then will be in the European ministate and NATO member Luxembourg, where Russian Foreign Minister Yevgeny Primakov and NATO Secretary General Javier Solana meet next week; and neutral Austria's capital Vienna, among the 30 countries including Russia and the United States that are debating troop concentrations.

Secretary of State Madeleine Albright, true to her prediction, was unable in talks with Primakov on Thursday to close the gaps on a charter to give Russia a link to but no military voice in the Atlantic alliance. Their 2½-hour discussion included a 20-minute telephone conversation with Yeltsin, vacationing at his dacha outside Moscow.

Deputy Secretary of State Strobe Talbott and other U.S. negotiators met with their counterparts Wednesday, and arms experts met again after the Albright-Primakov sessions.

Yeltsin has expressed hope that Clinton and other leaders can sign the charter in Paris on May 27. Even if it's not signed, Albright has vowed expansion will go ahead in any event, although she said Thursday,

"We would very much like to have a NATO-Russia charter signed."

The Russians were described by U.S. officials as having a deep-seated fear that an expanded NATO may be even more hostile than the military bloc that confronted the Soviet Union and its Warsaw Pact allies in the Cold War.

Poland, the Czech Republic and Hungary are expected to be invited to join at a NATO summit meeting in Madrid on July 9. Their membership would add to NATO's arsenal about 2,500 tanks, 700 combat aircraft and about 2,000 artillery pieces, thus widening an already huge advantage over Russian forces.

Letters to the Editor

McAlister's letter makes wide generalizations

To the Editor:

After reading Jon Knapp McAlister's letter in the April 29 DI, I had a few questions for him. McAlister said in regards to the portrayal of women in Playboy, "At best, as leading men to be disappointed by reality, and, at worst, as encouraging men to impose their frustrated fantasies on women against their will."

I personally resent the implication that men either cannot see the world around them, or are so blinded by lust that we ignore the fact that the world is made up of people of many shapes, sizes, races and temperaments of people. One only has to take a walk through Iowa City to realize that all women do not look like those portrayed in Playboy, and the men like those portrayed in GQ.

If your point is to make people aware of your opinion that Playboy stands for the sexual subordination of women, say so, but do not include ludicrous statements generalizing all men, (or all men who read Playboy, for that matter), into a category of your own definition. In effect such generalizations are wrong, whether applied, by you to men, or applied by the media to women.

What to expect after the Internet bill vote

To the Editor:

The sighs of relief are still audible after the governor vetoed the Internet Bill, and we are told of a renewed effort by the ITA (Iowa Technology Association) to end off-campus access to e-mail. The ITA is also referred to as a "voluntary trade association" and is acting purely in its own financial interest in these attempts to cut off Internet access.

Their activities are broader and will be more persistent than is now apparent. These "local exchange telephone carriers" are active all over the country in both state and national legislative chambers and also are contemplating court action.

Their goal is to charge minute rates for use of the local telephone lines. Then, we would have competition like the AT&T vs. MCI ad wars we are so familiar with! People now get local minutes without toll charges through their monthly fee of under $20.

With people logged on for hours in large numbers, the phone companies want to see some profit from those minutes. They certainly will want long-distance fees, especially for overseas connections. They are, in fact, challenging the use of the nation's phone lines as a vehicle for the Internet.

The cost would be so prohibitive that you couldn't routinely log on to a Web site outside the United States, for example.

Students who care about Internet access will have this battle to carry on wherever they should go after college. This will be a single-minded contest and will pit the phone companies acting in unison against the public interest. The first shock is behind us, but it seems the battle is just getting underway.

I think we can and should win this fight to keep low-cost Internet access available to the American public.

Ramseys reinforced their innocence

By Jennifer Mears
Associated Press

BOULDER, Colo. — The parents of JonBenet Ramsey proclaimed their innocence Thursday in their first meeting with reporters since days after the 6-year-old was found slain in their home.

"I did not kill my daughter," John Ramsey told six local reporters who had been invited to meet with the couple in a secret Boulder location. "I will miss her dearly for the rest of my life."

Patricia "Patsy" Ramsey, sitting next to her husband with her hands clasped, said, "I did not have anything to do with it. I loved that child with my — whole of my heart and soul."

Six-year-old JonBenet was found strangled Dec. 26 in the basement of her family's expensive Tudor mansion, about eight hours after her mother said she found a ransom note demanding $118,000. An autopsy said the little beauty contest winner may have been sexually abused.

District Attorney Alex Hunter recently acknowledged that the couple were the focus of the investigation. They were questioned by police at length on Wednesday — separately, as investigators had demanded — after months of wrangling over the terms of the questioning.

In their media interview Thursday, the couple asked the help of the public in searching for their daughter's killer. Patricia Ramsey also used the interview to send a message.

"God knows who you are and we will find you," she said.

As for the suggestions that the girl was molested, Ramsey said, "I can tell you those were the most hurtful innuendoes to us as a family. They are totally false. JonBenet and I had a very close relationship."

The media interview was held this morning in a secret location. It was the couple's first such appearance since they talked at length to CNN on Jan. 1.

Reporters from the Boulder newspaper, two Denver newspapers and three Denver TV stations were forbidden from asking about the interviews with police or about the night of the slaying, according to sources familiar with the meeting. Other reporters were excluded entirely.

The couple had less success imposing conditions on the police interview, agreeing to police demands that Patricia Ramsey be interviewed before her husband, that the sessions be taped and that there be no time limit on them. The couple was allowed to have their lawyers with them. Sources who spoke on condition of anonymity said Patricia Ramsey was questioned for six hours Wednesday and her husband for two.

It was their first discussion with police since they spoke briefly with officers the day JonBenet's body was found. Hunter refused to say whether there would be any further police interrogations. "I can't speak to that," he said.

In January, police rejected the Ramseys' demands that they be interviewed together and that their lawyers choose which officers would interview them.

Separate interviews initially were scheduled for April 23, but police canceled those meetings the day before when the FBI's Child Abduction and Serial Killer Unit advised that the terms were not acceptable. One rejected demand was that the interviews last no longer than two hours.

In the days that followed, the Ramseys' relationship with authorities turned ugly. Letters from the couple's lawyers implied that the police were the obstacle to setting up interviews and accused authorities of launching a "cowardly smear campaign" against the family.

Authorities still were awaiting Patricia Ramsey's response to a request for a fifth handwriting sample. Her husband was ruled out as author of the ransom note.

FBI, Secret Service warn Congress of 'point-and-click' crime

By Dave Skidmore
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — A fast-growing corps of "point-and-click" criminals, from lone computer buffs to ethnic gangs, are stealing billions of dollars with phony checks — many times what bank robbers steal with guns.

The Secret Service and FBI warned Congress on Thursday of the thriving new kind of fraud from counterfeit checks. Consumer advocates cautioned that some of the solutions, such as requiring non-customers to apply thumb prints to checks, penalize the innocent without deterring the guilty.

"The Secret Service has seen a dramatic increase in the number of investigations specifically relating to the counterfeiting of checks," Kevin Foley, the service's deputy assistant director, told the House Banking monetary policy subcommittee.

"The motivation behind these schemes is greed. The goal is always money," he said. "It's a point-and-click crime."

Estimates of the size of the problem vary widely. The Federal Reserve put the cost of check fraud to banks at $615 million in 1995, more than 10 times the $59 million attributed to bank robbery.

The FBI said data compiled from banks, businesses and individuals showed losses amounting to $5 billion in 1993.

"More alarming than the total amount is the fact that it is growing at a very rapid rate and could threaten the current payment system with unsustainable losses if it is allowed to grow unchecked," said Rep. Michael N. Castle, R-Del., the subcommittee's chairperson.

It's not a crime committed only by non-violent white-collar criminals. Chuck Owens, the FBI's financial crimes section chief, said counterfeit checks finance gangs that traffic in narcotics, commit extortion, run auto and jewelry theft rings.

Though suspects include individuals operating alone, a "sizable portion" of check fraud has been committed by organized ethnic enterprises, including Nigerians, Vietnamese, Russians, Armenians and Mexicans, Owens said.

In one of the biggest cases to date, 33 members of Vietnamese organizations were indicted in October in Orange County, Calif., after a two-year FBI undercover operation dubbed "Operation Paper Caper."

"Over 1.2 million worthless checks are accepted for payment every day," Owens said. That's fewer than 1 percent of the 180 million written in the United States daily but enough to amount to a very expensive problem.

Its cause lies in the rapid spread of personal computers and desk-top publishing. A decade ago, producing convincing counterfeit checks required offset printing equipment and a fair degree of skill.

Now, all that's needed is a laser scanner to capture an original check, a personal computer to alter the data and a quality laser printer.

Total cost: less than $5,000.

Bankers are using technology to fight technology. Research in "biometrics" is focusing on a variety of sophisticated equipment that can verify identification using voice patterns, the iris or retina of the eye and hand and face patterns.

In the meantime, some of the nation's biggest banks are demanding that non-customers affix thumb prints to checks presented for cashing, said Boris Melnikoff, senior vice president of the Atlanta-based Wachovia Corp.

They generally use clear, nontoxic ink that is much more easily removed than the heavy black ink used by police.

First Union Corp. of Charlotte, N.C., has said requiring thumb prints from non-customers cut monthly check fraud losses by 40 percent from its branches in Florida, Georgia and South Carolina. A month ago, it expanded the program to offices from Virginia to Connecticut.

Mobutu misses flight to peace talks

By Tina Susman
Associated Press

KINSHASA, Zaire — Without explanation, President Mobutu Sese Seko failed to show up Thursday for a flight to talks with the rebel leader who has seized half his country. Mediators and Zairian officials insisted the meeting is still on, but it might be delayed.

It was not the first time Mobutu has hedged on attending talks, which mediators hope will lead to his peaceful resignation. For the past week, he has committed to meet Laurent Kabila and then renege.

With talks set for today, Mobutu's no-show at the Kinshasa airport left the status of negotiations unclear — as are many things in Zaire these days.

Zairian Cabinet ministers and other officials waited for Mobutu at the airport Thursday, ready to depart for the talks to be held on a South African naval ship departing from Gabon. Sources close to Mobutu said the situation was "confused" and that the meeting may be postponed until Saturday.

As diplomats scurried to keep the meeting on track, aid workers in northeastern Zaire flew more than 1,500 Rwandan refugees home Thursday and reports emerged that troops and tanks from Angola were helping the rebels in their march toward Kinshasa, the capital.

South African officials insisted Mobutu would meet Kabila today, while a rebel spokesperson said nothing would happen until Sunday.

"The end of the war will be on Sunday when Mobutu decides to leave," spokesperson Bizima Karaha told reporters in the southern, rebel-held city of Lubumbashi.

Mobutu, 66, has insisted he would never bow to Kabila's demand to resign, but he is ill with prostate cancer and under intense international pressure to step down.

New witnesses come forth in Cosby slaying

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The man accused of killing comedian Bill Cosby's son, Ennis, was with two friends who witnessed the shooting, according to court documents cited Thursday by USA Today.

In court Thursday, defendant Michael Markhasev was appointed two public defenders because his family cannot afford to pay private attorneys who were working the case.

According to USA Today: Eli Zakaria, 23, and Sara Ann Peters, 21, both of Huntington Beach south of Los Angeles, told police they were driving around with Markhasev shortly after midnight on Jan 16.

Zakaria's uncle, Carlos Rodriguez, says Zakaria told him the three were high on drugs and looking for a drug dealer to find more. "He told me he was out of it and that they pulled over to use the phone," Rodriguez said.

According to their statements to police, Zakaria and Peters stopped with Markhasev at a telephone in a parking lot about 450 feet from the isolated spot where Cosby was shot to death on a road just off Interstate 405 as he fixed a flat tire on his Mercedes-Benz.

While Zakaria spoke on the phone, Markhasev headed up the street toward Cosby, the witness statements say.

Zakaria told Rodriguez that Markhasev was going to rob Cosby, but "just lost it," shot him and then came running back to the car and said, "Let's get out of here." The witnesses told police the same story.

Court papers show Christopher So and Michael Chang of Los Angeles told police that Markhasev called Chang days after the slaying and asked for help in finding the night of the shooting.

Change, So and Markhasev searched for the gun without success, the newspaper said. So subsequently reported the incident to police and led them to Markhasev, the newspaper said.

"The USA Today story came as a surprise to me," outgoing defense attorney Charles Lindner said outside court. "I'm curious as to how they obtained the documents they claim to have."

Co-counsel Darren Kavinsky denied that the defense leaked the documents.

SAFETY

Ames a few years ago was an eerie, red clay-colored sky after a thunderstorm. When she noticed the color, she headed for the basement before the alarm had even sounded.

"Some people say that tornadoes sound like a freight train. I guess I was always too scared to notice," Patterson said.

Classroom Safety

Safety for students on campus in the event of a tornado is an issue being addressed recently in an emergency policy with the UI, said Ann Rhodes, vice president for University Relations.

"The sirens are there to inform in the event of a tornado, and everyone should really know the general guidelines for tornado safety," Rhodes said.

There is no guarantee of safety during a severe storm, but Rhodes said not using the elevators, covering your head with a sturdy object and applying common sense are the best ideas.

Getting to the center of the room or the inner most part of a building is your best chance for safety in a tornado, said Jim McGinley of the Johnson County Disaster Service.

"Basements are always the first place you should go, but getting to the nearest spot and getting under a sturdy object for safety is important," McGinley said.

Getting away from windows is also very important, McGinley said. Some time ago people thought they should open windows to avoid shattering due to pressure from a tornado, but experts now say that isn't true.

Dorm Safety

In the dorms, Resident Assistants are instructed on what to do if adverse weather arises.

Slater Residence Hall Coordinator Holly Holliday said all Resident Assistants are trained at the beginning of the year to handle emergency crisis situations, such as tornadoes.

"You never know when something like this will happen," Holliday said. "So if a tornado is beating down the door we know what to do to get students to safety."

The RAs help students at the beginning of the year by running evacuation drills in which the alarm does sound, and then the RAs explain to students the proper precautions to take in the event of an emergency, Holliday said.

"How we would react in a severe storm like a tornado would depend on the severity of the storm," she said. "After the city tornado alarm would sound, we would possibly sound the fire alarm to alert students."

The RAs would direct the students to the floors or areas where they should take shelter, she said.

UI freshman Becky Clark, who lives in Burge Hall, said she knows exactly what to do in the event of a tornado because she grew up in a part of Iowa where severe storms are common.

"I would run right down to the basement because I live in the dorms," Clark said. "Don't most people know what to do in tornadoes?"

Apartment Safety

Apartment safety varies from building to building, McGinley said. Some of the new apartment buildings in Iowa City do not have basements because they have been replaced by parking areas for the tenants.

"If they don't have a basement in the building, tenants should get in the lowest inner hallway of the building. Tenants can also go into the bathroom (because there are usually no windows) or a closet, if there is room," he said.

Tornadoes can act like a vacuum, McGinley said; they can pick up the roof of a building and drop it right back down on top of whatever is below. Those in the smallest area possible have less of a chance of getting hurt by debris, he said.

Representatives from AUR said stressing common sense is the best way they know how to keep their tenants safe. Moving to the center of the apartment and away from windows is a smart policy to follow for those in a buildings without basements.

Outdoor Safety

If a person is outdoors and the siren goes off, McGinley said the most important thing is to try and get indoors.

"Get into the lowest part of the nearest building, go into the men's or the women's bathroom if you can. You just need to get off the street," McGinley said.

If there are no buildings nearby, people should get in the lowest spot possible, like a ditch, and cover their heads with their hands, McGinley said.

"People should just use the common sense that they have and remember what they have learned from tornado drills," McGinley said.

16-year-old identified in Cedar Rapids bank robbery

CEDAR RAPIDS (AP) — The suspected bank robber fatally shot by Cedar Rapids police officers was identified Thursday as a 16-year-old high school student, the Iowa Division of Criminal Investigation said.

He was identified as Ryan Noel Washburn, a junior at Cedar Rapids Washington High School. Officers said the man was not carrying identification, leaving officials to comb fingerprint records to discover his name.

Police Chief Bud Byrne said that missing persons reports also were checked in an effort to identify the man and that was how he was identified.

Washburn was reported missing at 11:08 p.m. Wednesday by his parents, DCI Special Agent in Charge Rick Benson said.

The man, who was wearing a ski mask, robbed the Mercantile Bank in northeast Cedar Rapids on Wednesday.

Byrne also said two officers, Pete Hegarty and Troy Nogelmeier, were involved in the shooting. Both officers have voluntarily taken administrative leave, which is not required in Cedar Rapids.

Witness reports differed on whether the armed suspect, who took an undetermined amount of money, fired first at the officers.

registered F-1, which are storms with 73-112 mph winds capable of overturning a mobile home.

Last year, Iowa experienced the lowest number of tornadoes since 1976, state climatologist Harry Hillaker said. The number of tornadoes per season cannot be predicted because elements for severe weather can combine in any climate, he said.

Iowans may be safe from twisters this summer, Towne said, because the weather should be wet and cool.

"That keeps our chances down for being hit with severe weather this summer," Towne said. "We just can't predict what the summer will do, but we do the best we can."

The peak times for a tornado to develop in Iowa are between 4 p.m.

and 8 p.m. due to the daytime heating, and they only remain on the ground for five minutes. They normally move from the southwest to the northeast.

"About 10 or so years ago, we had a tornado that started in Illinois and moved up to Cedar Rapids," Towne said. "Something like that is odd, but it is not uncommon. Tornadoes can come from all directions."

Henry plans to join other student leaders in a meeting with Maxson today, where she will ask her questions concerning campus diversity and the use of course evaluations.

Throughout the day Thursday, Maxson met with a number of groups to discuss agendas and recommendations for the College of Liberal Arts and its 42 departments. She could not be reached for comment.

Currently, Maxson is the associate vice chancellor for academic affairs and dean of undergraduate academic affairs at the University of Tennessee.

Two additional candidates are expected to visit the UI next week. David Bright, vice president for arts and sciences and dean of Emory College in Atlanta is scheduled to be on the UI campus on May 5 and 6.

Marianna Torgovnick, professor and chairperson of the Department of English at Duke University in Durham, North Carolina, plans to come to the UI on May 7 and 8.

Michael Fisher, from the University of New Mexico, Joan Stewart, from North Carolina State University, and James Mohr from the University of Oregon already have visited the UI and had interviews for the position. The new dean will replace Judith Aikin on July 1.

Sellers said Iowa City officials were alerted by U.S. Customs officials about two weeks ago, after customs noticed the suspicious package that originated in Korea. It was then traced to Iowa City and to 408 Westgate St.

"It really wasn't a complicated

Sellers said the drug task force worked with the State Division of Narcotic Enforcement, the U.S. Customs and U.S. Postal Inspectors to issue a search warrant and seize the illegal package. The package contained both tablet and liquid steroids, he said.

Tony Blair as "a man with a heart."

On Thursday, police searched Britain's 45,000 polling stations following bomb hoaxes and small explosions by the Irish Republican Army during the campaign. Armed officers stood by as Blair voted near his home in Trimdon, 235 miles northeast of London.

In Northern Ireland, which will have 18 seats in the Commons, a series of bomb threats — believed to come from pro-British paramilitaries — closed roads and disrupted traffic in Belfast.

Across Britain, voters turned out steadily in brilliant sunshine, and officials predicted a traditionally heavy turnout. In 1992, the turnout was 78 percent.

Nearly 44 million people were eligible to vote, and more than 3,700 candidates ran.

With most official results due early today, Major, 54, could be out of his official Downing Street residence by the end of day.

Blair becomes the youngest prime minister since the 42-year-old Lord Liverpool in 1812. He and his wife, Cherie, a lawyer, have three children.

The new Parliament convenes Wednesday, and the government will lay out its program a week later in a speech read by Queen Elizabeth II.

Labor started dumping a raft of socialist policies in 1983. And, since Blair became leader in 1994, no Labor tenet has been sacred. He has adopted the Tories' pro-business and low-tax policies, and its wait-and-see line on joining a single European currency.

Blair concentrated on reassuring the key voters — middle-class and skilled blue-collar waverers — that Labor has dropped its old high-tax ways.

For Major, trailing in polls for nearly three years, things got worse. Conservative divisions over closer European integration erupted with more than 200 Tory candidates flatly rejecting a single European currency.

Charges of sleaze against Conservative lawmakers resurfaced.

And many Britons refused to credit the Conservatives with Britain's good economic performance — remembering instead two recessions since 1979 and broken tax pledges by Major.

Despite Labor promises to keep to Conservative spending plans for two years, most voters believed health and education services will improve under Blair.

Major made Labor's plan for a Scottish parliament a big issue, saying it will shatter the United Kingdom. But English voters, the majority, appeared largely indifferent.

I.C. to join worldwide AIDS vigil

By Brendan Brown
The Daily Iowan

Iowa City will join more than 290 cities around the world in observing the 14th International AIDS Candlelight Memorial and Mobilization Sunday.

The Iowa Center for AIDS Resources and Education (ICARE) is scheduled to host the memorial at 6:30 p.m. in Hubbard Park under the theme, "Illuminate the truth: Honor every death, value every life."

ICARE Program Assistant Holly VanGundy said Iowa City is unique to the state for its concentration of people living with HIV and AIDS due to the college-town atmosphere coupled with the vast resources of the UIHC. She said the abundance of people in this area who know someone with HIV or AIDS underscores the need for this event.

"It would be tragic if Iowa City didn't honor this observance," she said. "It's important this community supports its fellow members."

The event, which was started in San Francisco in 1983, is intended to support those living with AIDS and to remember those who have died. About 40 countries and all 50 states observe the event. In Iowa City last year, about 200 people attended the Candlelight Vigil.

The observance will include music, speeches from local dignitaries and activists, and the reading of names of those who have fallen victim to the disease. Those attending also are encouraged to bring candles for a lighting ceremony.

VanGundy said part of the evening's program will be devoted to an open participation session to provide an opportunity for audience reflections. She said the forum is important because the stigma of AIDS in society can put survivors in a difficult position.

Farmers Market to offer fresh food, music

By Joseph Leavitt
The Daily Iowan

With a tomato here and live music there, the Iowa City Farmers Market is set to open this weekend.

Vendors will sell fresh produce, plants, handicrafts and baked goods twice each week through October. The market runs from 5:30-7:30 p.m. on Wednesdays and 7:30-11:30 a.m. Saturdays, and takes place in the lower level of the Chauncey Swan parking lot.

The market will feature musicians performing on Wednesday evenings in the park adjacent to the parking garage.

Iowa City program supervisor Joyce Carroll said artists will play

Folk and Acoustic music each week beginning at 5:00 pm. Different groups feature classical guitar, flute duets, flamenco and percussion acts.

"It's a real nice cross section of entertainers," Carroll said.

Vendor Dave Sickles, owner of Beautiful Land Products, said attending the market is a hobby of his. Sickles said the market is a tight-knit group, and people keep him coming back to buy his perennial plants.

"The people are a different breed. They are not the typical retail shoppers. They come to have a good time, to greet each other. It's a neat atmosphere," Sickles said.

Market supervisor Marilyn Kriz said Wednesday evenings are busy with people perusing the market after work on their way home.

Iowa City resident Dave Reynolds said he likes to visit the vendors later in the day.

"It's fun to go there at the end of work because I am hungrier and I buy more," Reynolds said.

She said people enjoy picking up baked goods instead of spending time making them later. Iowa City resident Barb Coffey said she often buys baked goods at the market.

"We are devoted customers of Mrs. Metz, who makes angel food cakes," Coffey said.

The market attracts a large diversity of people at all ages, and Kriz said many exchange students visit the market.

Report: Traylor planning to enter NBA draft

DETROIT (AP) — Michigan forward Robert Traylor, whose ties to a university booster have been among questions under investigation, reportedly will leave school and enter the NBA draft Thursday that the 6-foot-8, 300-pound forward would announce his plans Friday. Traylor has scheduled a news conference for 2 p.m. at his alma mater, Murray-Wright High School in Detroit.

A source told the newspaper Traylor informed coach Steve Fisher of his decision.

University officials said Friday could not comment because the investigation had not been announced.

Traylor was named the team's most valuable player this year, along with guard Louis Bullock. Traylor averaged 13.1 points and 7.7 rebounds in 13 games last season.

The Free Press said Traylor is leaving because of an NCAA investigation into the basketball program and an investigation into Traylor's ties to Martin, a Detroit booster. Martin was banned March 10 from association with the basketball program.

KENTUCKY DERBY

Captain Bodgit may get last laugh

By Ed Schuyler Jr.
Associated Press

LOUISVILLE, Ky. — Captain Bodgit might look lame, but he's not fooling anybody anymore. The colt has a bulging tendon in his left foreleg, which has been much written and talked about, but which certainly has not bothered him.

"It's just something that's part of him," trainer Gary Capuano said Thursday. "I know him and I've been training him up to this point, and I'm not going to change anything because of the leg."

What's to change? Captain Bodgit, who has raced from the start with the "funny" leg, won five of six starts as a 2-year-old and emerged a major contender for the Kentucky Derby by upsetting previously unbeaten Pulpit in the Florida Derby on March 15 and by winning the Wood Memorial on April 12.

Pulpit, who rebounded to win the Blue Grass Stakes on April 12, is the 2-1 early favorite for the 1 1/4-mile Derby on Saturday at Churchill Downs. Captain Bodgit is the 5-2 second choice in the 13-horse field, the smallest since Spend a Buck beat 12 other 3-year-olds in 1985.

Spend a Buck broke on top and stayed there, running the first half mile in 45 4-5 seconds and winning in 2:00 1-5.

Who will take the lead and what kind of pace he will set are big questions in this Derby. Will the pace be fast enough to give stretch runners Captain Bodgit, Crypto Star, Hello and Jack Flash a chance? Will he be eliminated by a pace slow enough to let others have something left for the stretch run.

Ed Reink/Associated Press

Kentucky Derby entrant Captain Bodgit, with exercise rider Sam Davis up, pauses on the Churchill Downs track Thursday morning.

Perhaps Pulpit, who won his first two starts wire-to-wire, will take the lead nobody seems to want.

"Probably not," trainer Frank Brothers said of whether Pulpit would go to the front. "But if he goes slow enough and that's where he is, that's fine. If they do the first half in 48 and he's there, that's fine. But that's not going to happen."

Barry Irwin, who manages Captain Bodgit's career, hopes it doesn't happen.

"If they go in 48, I'll puke," he said.

Captain Bodgit, however, could be able to handle a slow pace better than some of the other stretch runners. He overcame that kind of pace in the Florida Derby.

Other contenders, who prefer to run in or near the pace, are Free House, Silver Charm, Concerto and Phantom On Tour, who worked three-eighths of a mile under jockey Jerry Bailey in 35 3-5 on Thursday.

Completing the field are Celtic Warrior, Crimson Classic, Shabby Davis and Deeds Not Words.

While Pulpit, the Claiborne Farm homebred, did not race last year because of a stress fracture, Captain Bodgit won five of his six 2-year-old starts, including the Laurel Futurity.

Earl Woods not surprised by comments

By Ron Sirak
Associated Press

"I'm not surprised that he said it. I've heard him say worse. Fuzzy is a jokester."

Earl Woods, Tiger Woods' father

"We found out about it on Wednesday," the elder Woods said. "Monday we were in Chicago to tape the Oprah show. Then we flew to Portland (Ore.) and had very intense talks with Nike on Tuesday and on Wednesday we went our separate ways. I went home and Tiger went to be with his friend Kevin Costner on location at his movie somewhere in Oregon."

Woods said he was surprised at the intensity of the reaction to Zoeller's remarks.

NEW YORK — Tiger Woods' father is not surprised at the racially insensitive remarks by Fuzzy Zoeller but is disappointed the comments distracted from his son's Masters victory.

Earl Woods, who said he believed Zoeller's remarks about fried chicken and collard greens were meant as a joke, also said Thursday his son waited three days to accept Zoeller's apology because he was unaware of the controversy.

"I was shocked that he said it in the venue he said it in," said Earl Woods, referring to Zoeller's comments from Augusta National on the final day of the Masters. "But I'm not surprised that he said it. I've heard him say worse. Fuzzy is a jokester."

Woods, in New York to promote his book, "Training a Tiger," said he knows Zoeller and felt his remarks were meant not as a slur but as an indication of the significance of his son's victory.

"It was more of a focus on the racial aspects of Tiger winning the Masters," Woods said.

The remarks were broadcast by CNN-SI the Sunday following the Masters and Zoeller apologized the next day. Woods did not accept the apology until Thursday night of that week.

MAJOR LEAGUE BASEBALL ROUNDUP

Rookie leads Florida to fifth straight

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Rookie Matt Morris (1-1) retired his first 17 batters and allowed four hits in 7½ innings as the St. Louis Cardinals beat the Florida Marlins 3-2 Thursday for their fifth straight victory.

The Cardinals, 12-8 since a franchise-worst 0-6 start, swept a two-game series from the Marlins, who came in with a five-game winning streak. Florida is 12-2 at home but 3-9 on the road.

Mark Sweeney had a two-run, bases-loaded single in the first off Alex Fernandez and Delino DeShields had a sacrifice fly in the fourth.

With the bases loaded and two outs in the ninth, Jeff Conine flied to center off Dennis Eckersley, who got his sixth save.

Braves 4, Reds 2

CINCINNATI — Michael Tucker, Javier Lopez and Ryan Klesko homered, and John Smoltz (3-3) allowed two runs and five hits in eight innings.

At 20-6, the Braves are off to the best start in franchise history. Mark Wohlers pitched out of a jam in the ninth to remain perfect in seven save chances.

Dave Burba (3-3) gave up all four runs and six hits in six innings. Red manager Ray Knight was ejected by home plate umpire Wally Bell for arguing a ball-and-strike call in the fifth.

Dodgers 5, Phillies 0

PHILADELPHIA — Pedro Astacio (3-0), pitching on only three days' rest, scattered nine hits in his fourth career shutout, his first since May 24, 1995, at New York. He started in place of Ismael Valdes, scratched because of a stomach disorder.

Los Angeles got just four hits, including a Todd Zeile's two-run homer off Curt Schilling (3-3), who struck out nine and increased his league-leading total to 49. The Dodgers finished a seven-game road trip with three wins after losing the first four games.

Pirates 3, Giants 2

PITTSBURGH — Al Martin, who had struck out in five consecutive at-bats, completed a three-run fifth inning off Shawn Estes (4-1) with an RBI double as Pittsburgh rallied.

Steve Cooke (2-3) limited the Giants to two runs in 6 1-3 innings to win as Pittsburgh for the first time in seven decisions since June 21, 1994. Ricardo Rincon pitched two perfect innings for his first major league save.

Expos 4, Astros 0

MONTREAL — Pedro Martinez (4-0) pitched a three-hitter for his fifth career shutout and lowered his ERA to 0.31. He has not allowed an earned run in 25 innings since making his first start April 15 at Houston.

Martinez struck out nine and walked two in his first complete game this season.

Rusty Kennedy/Associated Press

Los Angeles Dodgers Wilton Guerrero looks to the umpire Bruce Dreickman, who calls him safe at third base Thursday.

Padres 7, Mets 3

NEW YORK — John Flaherty hit his first two home runs of the season as San Diego stopped an eight-game losing streak.

Andy Ashby (2-1) allowed eight hits as the Padres won for the first time since beating St. Louis in Hawaii on April 20.

Rockies 5, Cubs 4

DENVER — Dante Bichette and Quinton McCracken homered as Bill Swift and the Colorado Rockies beat the Chicago Cubs.

Swift (3-1) allowed one run on only four hits in six innings. He struck out two and walked three.

Tyler Houston led off the Chicago ninth with his first home run of the season. Mark Grace grounded out with runners on first and second to end the game, giving Steve Reed his first save.

Boston-Anaheim game postponed by rain

BOSTON — Thursday night's game between the Boston Red Sox and Anaheim Angels was postponed by rain after 4½ innings with the Angels leading 2-0.

No makeup date was immediately announced.

Orioles 3, Twins 2

MINNEAPOLIS — Scott Erickson allowed five hits over 8 1-3 innings and B.J. Surhoff drove in two runs as the Baltimore Orioles beat Minnesota, extending the Twins' losing streak to eight games.

Erickson, traded to Baltimore from Minnesota in July 1995, was virtually flawless until Matt Lawton's two-out homer in the seventh.

Royals 8, Blue Jays 0

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Jose Rosado pitched 7 2-3 shutout innings and Jay Bell and Jose Offerman drove in three runs apiece, powering Kansas City past Toronto.

Chili Davis added a two-run homer with a towering shot in the fifth, his second homer in three games.

Indians 7, Athletics 1

CLEVELAND — Jack McDowell made a fiery, nearly flawless return to the starting rotation and David Justice hit two of Cleveland's four homers as the Indians beat the Oakland Athletics.

In his first start following a demotion to the bullpen, McDowell (2-2) allowed one run on three hits in seven innings and struck out nine.

Bonds is baseball's greatest decoy

By Rob Gosker
Associated Press

SAN FRANCISCO — Barry Bonds, a three-time MVP and one of baseball's most feared power hitters, has turned into the game's greatest decoy.

Teams terrified of being beaten by Bonds' homers are pitching around him. Opponents figure that, with Matt Williams traded to Cleveland, there's no one else in the San Francisco lineup they need to fear.

But, so far, the Giants — despite hitting just .240 as a team — are making opponents pay for that strategy. They may not be hitting many homers, but they're finding ways to turn Bonds' walks into key runs.

And that, along with an unexpectedly good pitching rotation and the revitalized Rod Beck anchoring a solid bullpen, has turned the Giants into one of the season's early surprises.

"We've been able to compensate in other areas. It's good that we're doing it without Barry hitting,"

"I've carried the team for so many years, it's kind of nice to sit back and see everybody else do it."

Barry Bonds

said Giants manager Dusty Baker, whose club entered May tied with Colorado for first place in the NL West. "You know he's going to hit, and when he starts he'll be strong."

Bonds, who annually ranks among the major league leaders in homers, RBIs and just about every other major offensive category, is not even among the team leaders in many statistics this season.

He has just three homers, one of those an inside-the-park blooper that skipped past Atlanta left fielder Ryan Klesko, and is third on the club with 12 RBIs. He is hitting just .257.

But Bonds leads the team in walks (26), steals (4), runs (15) and on-base percentage. In fact, his stats look more like those of a good leadoff man than one of the game's best cleanup hitters.

"I've carried the team for so many years, it's kind of nice to sit back and see everybody else do it," Bonds said. "We've got a lot of contact hitters on this team and guys that put the ball in play, and it takes a lot of the pressure off me."

When Bonds went eight consecutive games without an RBI in mid-April, the Giants won seven of eight. Last April, Bonds had 11 homers and 32 RBIs in April as the Giants went 14-12.

Though Bonds admits he's started chasing some bad pitches, he insists he's not getting frustrated at being pitched around or by his below-par statistics.

"I'll take walks and steal bases and score runs," he said. "If that's what it takes to win, that's what I'll do."

JERUSALEM (AP) — Israeli flags flew at half-staff, more than 2,000 teen-agers marched to the ruins of the gas chambers at Auschwitz, and Germans read aloud the names of nearly 56,000 Nazi victims Sunday in a tribute to the 6 million Jews who died in the Holocaust.

"Never again will the threat of annihilation hang over our children," Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu said at a ceremony.

Like a hoard of out-of-season fireflies, about 100 candles reflected off the Iowa River as local residents honored the 14th International AIDS Candlelight Memorial and Mobilization Sunday night.

Even though turnout was lower than expected — last year's event brought more than 200 people to Hubbard Park — an emotional service was held as Iowa city joined 290 other cities around the globe to "illuminate the truth: Honor every death and value every life."

Terry Schweitzer, a former UI student and Iowa city resident, was one of the gatherers who turned out to remember, honor and celebrate the lives of people who live with AIDS. He said he wanted to pay homage to those who have died of AIDS and honor a friend in California who is living with the HIV virus.

Schweitzer, who attended the vigil last year, said it was unfortunate that many of his friends didn't want to go to the memorial because they thought it would be too depressing.

With the smell of fajitas and quesadillas wafting through the air on a sunny Sunday, Iowa City children swung madly at a rainbow piñata in celebration of Cinco de Mayo.

The New Pioneer Co-Op, 22 S. Van Buren St., hosted its annual Cinco de Mayo celebration Sunday. The holiday commemorates the Mexican victory led by General Zaragoza over the French army on May 5, 1862, although the day is commonly mistaken for Mexican Independence Day.

"In Mexico, all of the towns have military parades," said Raymond Rosales, who emceed the celebration and is from San Luis Potosi, Mexico. "In the States, we take the opportunity to celebrate Mexican and Latin American culture." The celebration often lasts all day.
