Like a hoard of out-of-season fireflies, about 100 candles reflected off the Iowa River as local residents honored the 14th International AIDS Candlelight Memorial and Mobilization Sunday night.

Schweitzer, who attended the vigil last year, said it was unfortunate that many of his friends didn't want to go to the memorial because they thought it would be too depressing.

"You don't understand until you know someone up close and personal that has it," Schweitzer said. "Then it becomes real, and that's why it's important to be here.'

The memorial also featured four speakers, music from the Quire, Eastern Iowa's Gay Lesbian Bisexual and Transgender (GLBT) chorus, an open opportunity for audience reflections and the reading of names of those who have fallen victim to the disease.

Joe Wilson, a member of the Quire, a volunteer with ICARE and co-moderator of the GLBT Union, said he really enjoys being involved Terry Schweitzer, a former UI in the Gay and Lesbian community. "(The memorial) raises aware-

Rape awareness increases in dorms

Recent reports of campus rapes in the Midwest have caused UI dorms to heighten safety measures

ern college campuses. In addition to the posting of signs, residence-hall doors are locked at midnight and front desk Posters, in each residence hall clerks aren't allowed to give out

UI sophomore Nicole Blizek, who works at the front desk of Rienow Residence Hall, said resident assistants and front desk clerks were warned to be aware of suspicious activity when the UI campus had six reported assaults in the beginning of the school year.

Women working or studying late at night have been assaulted in five reported campus rapes in Iowa, Nebraska, Wisconsin and Illinois in February and March. Investigators have found the rapes have striking similarities, including DNA evidence and what the rapist says to the victim.

On Feb. 6, the first assault took place at Union College in Lincoln, Neb. A man wearing a ski mask attacked a woman who was playing the piano in the basement of an administrative building.

UI sophomore Christina McNamara said she doesn't think the serial rapist deserves to have a sign posted about him, and she said she believes men need to be just as worried as female students.

"People need to be aware," she said. "It's important now because people are going to be studying late

UI freshman Sarah Nelson said the signs about the recent Midwestern campus sexual assaults might help people make smarter decisions, but won't solve the problem.

"Things like this happen everyday, everywhere," Nelson said.

Because several of the recent assaults have taken place in computer labs and other administrative buildings, students such as Nelson vonder if posting signs will make a difference.

"There is such a big population in the dorms that if you get the word

Dean candidate Linda Ellen Resnick Maxson said Friday she would want advice from the people who know the college the best students.

The fourth candidate for the dean of the College of Liberal Arts, Maxson spoke on issues concerning undergraduate affairs at a public symposium Friday morning in the Union. She is currently an associate vice chancellor for academic affairs and dean of undergraduate academic affairs at the University of Tennessee in Knoxville, Tenn.

Maxson said she would like to have a student advisory group to the dean to help her confront issues that affect undergraduate students.

"This could only benefit everyone," she said. "And besides, I like working with students.

Enhancing general education requirements, supporting faculty research and providing an appropriate learning environment for students are a few of Maxson's goals. The goal of the college has to coincide with the how the UI defines itself, she said.

Recent internal and external reviews of the College of Liberal Arts have shown some faculty support of the separation of the college into smaller subdivisions. Maxson said she is against a division cause she was attracted to the position of dean of the CLA because of the diversity of the departments.

Murphy says fuss over prostitute is nutty

WEST HOLLYWOOD, Calif. (AP) — Eddie Murphy said he was just trying to be a nice guy when he picked up a cross-dressing male prostitute as undercover sheriff's deputies looked on.

Murphy was pulled over minutes after the man got into his car Friday morning. The prostitute was arrested on a warrant, but authorities said Murphy had not broken any law.

"It's not the first hooker that I've helped out ... I've seen hookers on corners and I'll pull over and they'll go, 'Oh, you're Eddie Mur-phy, oh my God,' and I'll empty my wallet out to help," Murphy told television's "Entertainment Tonight."

While the rest of the UI gears up for final exams and stresses over as opposed to the wish of staying have had the week off from classes.

They've found their own brand of stress: the Iowa Playwrights Festival, which takes flight tonight with "Why Birds Fly."

Performed, written and designed by UI theatre students, the annual festival is a six-day onslaught of full-length, original theatre productions, staged readings and group discussions. The festival will use all three of the UI Theatre Buildopening each day.

In addition to "Why Birds Fly," the festival features five debuting plays - all written by members of the UI Playwrights Workshop. Also, graduate play writing students, seven undergraduates will have their works read in two slots of cameo readings, both on Saturday.

"Everyone's environment is specific to each person," she said. "So, to deal with a topic that's as common as trying to leave home, I tried to use language and metaphor that would be considered different from naturalism or realism, because that way it gets closer to the experience.' That kind of interaction is part of the play's appeal, said UI graduate student John Beaird, the play's director (who also collaborated with Goldman on last semester's "Measuring the Pentagram"). "What draws me to the play is the parent-child relationships, Beaird said. "That's accessible to all people, and to me that's the most intriguing aspect of the play; the bond between parent and child, and issues of control and leaving research papers, theatre students and keeping someone a part of your Goldman said that the entire festival is a process of exploration not just for the writers, but for the production teams as well.

"Part of what's so exciting to me about Festival is that this is all brand-new work," she said. "No one, not even the playwrights in the workshop, know for sure what ing's facilities - with new shows has been going on behind each rehearsal door.'

POINTE NOIRE, Congo - Zaire's ailing president met face-to-face Sunday with the rival who has overrun nearly three-fourths of his country - but all they could agree on was to meet again.

President Mobutu Sese Seko did not announce his resignation, as had been predicted by diplomats aboard the South African naval vessel where talks were held. Mediators fear the talks were the last chance to secure a truce and prevent the rebels from marching on Zaire's capital, Kinshasa. All indications were that the rebels intend to keep advancing.

U.N. envoy Mohamed Sahnoun told reporters that Mobutu proposed a cease-fire and a transitional government to prepare the Central African nation for its first multiparty elections. Mobutu said he would hand over power to an elected authority, though he has never ruled out running himself.

But rebel leader Laurent Kabila, according to the statement read by Sahnoun, demanded that the rebels be allowed to take power as the transitional authority and that Mobutu cede power to them.

Sahnoun said there was "some tension from both sides" at the start

After the meeting, Kabila flew to Luanda, Angola. He did not comment to reporters. The Portuguese news agency LUSA said Kabila was to meet with Angolan President Jose Santos. Zaire and Western powers have accused Angola of aiding the rebels with troops and equipment.

Mobutu left the ship without addressing reporters and was expected to fly back to Kinshasa. He has insisted he never would bow to Kabila's demand to resign, but his prostate cancer and international pressure may force him to do so.

Sources close to the talks had said that mediators were seeking an agreement in which Mobutu would step down for health reasons and appoint an interim president until elections could be held. This would allow Kabila and his forces to peacefully enter Kinshasa.

2 Texas seperatists run, others jailed

By Mark Babineck Associated Press

FORT DAVIS, Texas - Using dogs, airplanes and troopers on horseback, authorities searched the woods early Sunday for two Texas separatists who did not join colleagues in a peaceful ending to a weeklong standoff.

Richard McLaren, the self-styled ambassador of the Republic of Texas faction, signed a "cease-fire document" with the Texas Rangers on Saturday afternoon. He and three others then abandoned their 'embassy," a trailer in the remote Davis Mountains. McLaren's wife had given up earlier in the day.

But two men disappeared hours before the surrender into a heavily wooded canyon wearing green camouflage. Richard Frank Keyes III and Mike Matson were believed to be carrying two rifles and a 9 mm pis-

McLaren, 43, believes Texas was illegally annexed by the United States in 1845. He heads one of at least three factions calling themselves the Republic of Texas.

The stalemate began a week ago when several McLaren followers stormed the home of two neighbors and held the couple hostage in protest of the arrest of a group member. Then, if the movie was still a hit, Pitt wouldn't have been around and Lee could have played in the sequel, therefore improving both the cast appeal and overall acting ability of the original's sorry sequel, "City of Angels."

Anybody who says Brad Pitt is a good actor needs a serious psychological evaluation. Hello? Anybody see "Se7en"? Casting Morgan Freeman in a Pitt movie is like taking your prom date to Wendy's. I think I'd rather let Roman Polanski babysit my kids than be subjected to "The Devil's Own." Which reminds me leave it to Brad Pitt to serve up Harrison Ford's worst movie since "Force 10 from Navarone."

· ... if the Hansons, that group of youngsters that sings "UmmBopp," or something like that, had been Susan Smith's kids? OK, maybe that's a bit over the edge, but I'd at least like to know if the middle kid is a boy or a girl. Why should it matter? It doesn't - and I'll probably get letters from people saying, "It's what is on the inside that matters," - but it's bugging the hell out of me. Its name, Taylor, is so sexually ambiguous that it doesn't help

And besides, the Bread Garden just isn't that good. It's not bad, either, but in terms of their other Mondo-type restaurants (e.g. Givanni's) the Bread Garden serves Iowa City about as much as if we were to build another fast-food joint in the Ped Mall.

• ... if Fuzzy Zoeller, the living, breathing example of walking stupidity, were to be shunned from the golf world. That would be a starting point.

Zoeller needs to be tied up, publicly ridiculed from now until the day he dies, embarrassed, made a spectacle and an example of how not to raise your children, stripped of anything that gives him pleasure on this earth and, finally, given a fate resembling that of the Greek god Prometheus.

The time for forgiveness and understanding is over. What Zoeller said about Tiger Woods and an entire race of people is far too common an occurrence in sports. Marge Schott, Al Campanis Jimmy "the Greek" - and now Fuzzy Zoeller. Saying of the racists, "It's OK, that's the way things were when they were growing up," no longer can be an excuse.

When a racist remark is made by somebody in the public eye - someone capable of forming the opinions of children - punishment comparable to assault should be enforced; and, no, I'm not joking. There's no doubt he said it, so there's no need for a trial except perhaps to prove the context. It's time to stop treating the defacing of a race as a minor infraction. But, of course it won't happen, not as long as we continue listening to remarks like Zoeller's, shaking our heads and saying, "What a fool," then shrugging it off to watch Letterman.

A friend recently asked me what I would eat if I could only consume one thing for the rest of my life, and things like sugar and cholesterol were not a factor. The obvious answer - Vine wings.

On a sad note, prices recently went up $1 per dozen, but it's still the best deal in town. Perhaps it's a good thing their kitchen closes so early before last call, otherwise cardiac arrest on the UI campus would be as common as people without rhythm who don't realize their deficiency.

No surprises in dean search

The UI's search for a new College of Liberal Arts dean is past the midway point.

Four candidates already have been interviewed as possible replacements for Judith Aikin, who leaves the post in June. Two more candidates are scheduled to be on campus this week, and a decision could come within a

The interviews have gone well with few if any surprises, and all the candidates seem earnest in their interest in the job. Any one of them would probably make a fine dean.

But the interesting thing about the interviews has not been what the candidates have said they would do, but rather what they would not do. And that is break up the massive bureaucracy of the CLA and divide it into five years to return to teaching, hersmaller, more manageable colleges.

The candidates who have talked about the issue have sided with the inefficient. UI administration and voiced an interest in keeping the CLA unified.

What a surprise "The breadth of the College of Libexcels in a wide range of disciplines," the Department of History at the University of Oregon. "Disciplines are fluid, and dividing the college would be a mistake."

Trying to keep in check the egos of so many faculty and department heads while trying keep in mind the interests of the multitudes of students is too much of too much.

Michael Fisher, interim dean of the College of Arts and Sciences at the University of New Mexico, shares Mohr's sentiments. "You have to be an advocate for the college as a whole," he said, "and a referee to make sure the funds are being split up equitably.'

Aikin, who is stepping down from the CLA's top administrative job after self favors keeping the CLA unified. But such a goal is impractical and

The CLA is by far the largest college at the UI.

The college is home to 16,000 students, 650 tenure-track faculty and should be talking now about dividing eral Arts at the University of Iowa 42 departments ranging from math the CLA. and chemistry to English and philososaid candidate James Mohr, head of phy. heads while trying keep in mind the interests of the multitudes of students is too much of too much.

It's almost too big of a task for a single college and definitely too much of a chore for a single dean. Dividing the CLA into two or three separate colleges with one focusing on the sciences and another one or two on the humanities makes sense.

The CLA's own faculty want such a division. According to a 1995 study, 59 percent of the CLA's overall faculty and 71 percent the college's science faculty favor splitting up the CLA.

"If you would have asked me 10 years ago, I would never have wanted to divide the CLA," Gary Gussin, chairperson of the Biological Science Department, told the DI last December. "But I've come to see that size and diversity make it really difficult to get a lot of things done in any sort of efficient way.

The new CLA dean, whomever it may be, will come to the same conclusion. That's why the dean candidates

I never felt like I fit into Iowa minority men (but, unfortunately, not City, like any part of me belonged here women) into higher-ranking positions Now, I'm about to leave, and yet, a part of than either academia or corporate me will remain.

Unlike most of my friends who are graduating, I don't feel a lack of direction. And each other's cultural background, but unlike most of my friends, I don't have by putting them through a common set any fear of moving on. Like Tracy Chap of experiences. man says: "I want to wake up and know where I'm going ... I'm ready to let the rivers wash over me." I don't have any hesitation about the future ... And yet ...

I remember arriving freshman year, a short brown girl with long hair, feeling awkward inside because of the transition. I was anxious to get to college after years of feeling stifled in my mother's house. Iowa City meant freedom. Although! missed Chicago, I wanted to move on. Yet Iowa City, for all its gentleness, was a shock. I started working as a reporter at the DI the day I moved into Burge Residence Hall. First semester, I nearly flunked out of school, lost my mind and How Does A Bomb decided I was not coming back.

But I did come back. Second semester was just a little easier and I was just a lit-tle more focused. My grades improved somewhat - and I took a couple classes! found more interesting. I did some volunteer work and felt like a I had more of a purpose. By the third semester, I was swamped again, trying to work two jobs and take 16 hours. Toward the end of the semester, I was exhausted and pretty much incoherent to anyone I tried to talk to. I needed clarity. So I left.

This semester it was Venezuela, to the Andes. For four months, I looked inside myself and tried to find peace and a center. I shaved my head and hiked through the mountains. When I returned, I had learned, not only about myself, but the outer world. The adjustment back to lows City shook me more deeply than it had my freshman year. I had changed when every one and everything else had not. I suddenly couldn't connect with anyone.

But that trip changed my life. Even if awareness meant loneliness, I had developed convictions I wanted to live by. The following December, I went to Mexico to work in orphanages, the summer of 1996 it was South Africa. December 1996! backpacked through Mexico and Central America. Overdosing on politics and inju-tice, I also felt a definite safety through the anonymity. But I always returned.

And now I'm leaving and I'm not coming back. And I'm ready. But I also feel as overwhelming sense of nostalgia. I think everyone needs to leave Iowa City regularly, to get perspective, gain awareness of the larger picture. My greatest personal growth was outside of Iowa City's borders in places that challenged me to be awake Those early mornings, I didn't get up and run. I got up and walked and understood life in a different way. The focus I have has nothing to do with a degree - it has everything to do with learning about this world and wanting to know my place in it. As Adrienne Rich, one of my favorite poets, says: "I'm alive to want more than life, want it for others starving and unborn."

And so these early spring mornings, when I get up and run, I'm cherishing Iowa City's beauty: the quiet streets, the trees, the peace. I'm scared to leave friends, not knowing when or where we'll meet again. I'm moving on. And yet, part of me will always remain.

Harmony comes from similarities, not differences

To the Editor:

In the two years I've lived in Iowa City I've seen a strong emphasis on cultural diversity from the UI administration. This follows a trend in well-meaning establishments all over the country. However, this approach to racial equality misses a huge point. If the intent is to get people to get along and treat each other fairly, why should emphasis be placed on how they are

For example, if I was sitting in a bar and the guy next to me said, "Hey, I grew up in a rich Chicago suburb and you grew up in a trailer in Arkansas. Let's drink a beer to our diversity." Immediately, all the ways in which we were different, and how these differences made me uncomfortable, would leap to mind. If, on the other hand, the guy said, "Boy, it sure is hard to talk to women in bars," there would be a kind of mutual understanding that comes from shared difficulties.

The point of this farfetched scenario is that to get folks to willingly treat others in an equitable manner, they must have a sense of being in the same boat. Later on, through natural curiosity, the differences will be brought up.

As an example, when I was in grade school, the black kids and the white kids got along pretty well together. If my friends brought a cool Hot Wheels car to school, it didn't matter that he was black or that his home life and culture were very different than mine. What mattered is that we both got a kick out of pushing a car around in the dirt. The military seems to understand this point much better than the population at large. They have been much America. # Explode?

A terrorist's most popular weapon is a nitrate bomb. The bomb used in Oklahoma City was made from fertilizer and fuel oil (ammonium nitrate and hydrocarbons). When these are mixed in the correct proportions and a primer explosive is detonated (you have to put in a little energy to make the reaction start, like striking a match. You add some energy friction — to start the match burning), the nitrate groups from the ammonium nitrate are transferred to the hydrocarbons and release hot, expanding gases: an explosion.

The expanding gases create a shock wave and cause more

McAlister does not speak for everyone in Iowa City

To the Editor I recently have begun subscribing to Playboy magazine, as it was the only one offered in a recent promotion for the Iowa Special Olympics that sounded remotely interesting. Boy, did I make a mistake! After only two issues I've noticed a serious deterioration in my attitude toward women, and even towards myself! Just the other day I was on my way to church when, from a full quarter-of-a-mile away, I noticed a large-breasted woman walking into a

Without hesitating, I chucked my Bible in the bushes (I never litter!) and went after her, instinctively feeling I had to see her more closely. Not even her, actually, but her breasts. I don't care what her "values, goals or accomplishments" were (Jon Knapp McAlister, member of the Sexual Equality Coalition, April 29); I didn't even want to know her name. I only wanted to see her boobs, whether she'd like it or

Well, I lost my nerve once I got inside, and I realized I was under a spell of some kind. An insidious, corporate-guided, misogynistic kind of sickness so ingrained in Playboy magazine, that even the women who let themselves be degraded like that for the sole purpose of denying people the opportunity to lead "erotic lives based on respect and equality," don't even know they're part of the

If it weren't for the aforementioned letter to the editor, I would never have realized how I myself, as well as all Playboy readers, are personally holding our society back. It only takes one to make a ripple, you know!

I was astounded by McAlister's ability to perceive the delusions inherent in the muddled thinking of all us pornographers (yes, even as a subscriber I cannot be excluded from that brand!); at his uncanny knack to see so clearly the effect of one magazine on thousands of people he's never met. It's comforting to know there is someone out there who can so effectively speak for the entire community when he writes that Playboy is not wanted in lowa City. Now I never have to worry about having my voice heard, because Mr. McAlister hears it before I do!

I also like his idea of having an "aid program that will leave women with alternatives to posing for pictures." I'd like to volunteer for that crusade. Maybe we could help them work on leather crafts, or keep their minds off posing nude by encouraging other handicrafts, like corset construction. These women need help. We all do!

This letter is in response to Sanjukta Paul's April 23 letter to the editor. #### Playboy is not to blame for men's behavior

To the Editor:

I am having a difficult time figuring out why so many people are making a fuss over Playboy's presence in lowa City. I do not believe a monthly subscription to Playboy has a great influence on the way men behave toward women in our society. Rather, I believe the behavior is due more to the 100,000 years of instinct that has evolved since the first modern male. Unfortunately, all the protest in the world cannot change this nature, nor can the retirement of such magazines as Playboy from the newsstands. For rape and sexual assault victims, they deserve the deepest sympathy and compassion. The notion of magazines like Playboy facilitating sexual assaults, however, may not be as directly correlated as many people think. Is not rape and sexual assault more of a violent crime and not a sexually motivated act? Would the absence of Playboy really subdue those who are violently bent on overpowering females? Regrettably, I do not think

Mercandante confused facts

To the Editor:

This is in response to Mr. Mercandante's letter on April 24. He claims that 50 years ago Jews were smuggled into Palestine. This may be true, but he neglected to mention that these European Jews were escaping murder at the hands of Nazi persecutors.

I believe Mercandante has his facts confused. When Jews were smuggled into Palestine they were sent to detention camps and there were no instances of backlash against the Palestinians and the British. There were no instances of terrorism, and Mercandante should take a history lesson before he makes false accusations.

Explode?

A terrorist's most popular weapon is a nitrate bomb. The bomb used in Oklahoma City was made from fertilizer and fuel oil (ammonium nitrate and hydrocarbons). When these are mixed in the correct proportions and a primer explosive is detonated (you have to put in a little energy to make the reaction start, like striking a match. You add some energy friction — to start the match burning), the nitrate groups from the ammonium nitrate are transferred to the hydrocarbons and release hot, expanding gases: an explosion.

The expanding gases create a shock wave and cause more destruction than the energy from the explosion, like suddenly sticking your hand out a car window.

The energy released by an explosion is stored in chemical bonds. When bonds are broken, energy is released, usually as

An important part of any explosion is not only the chemical's ability explode with a reaction that releases a lot of energy (combustion), but also the chemical's ability to keep the reaction happening (support combustion). The element that best supports combustion is oxygen.

The nitrate group is actually -NO3, which means that there are three oxygen atoms for every nitrogen atom. Because the oxygen atoms are in the compound, they are mixed all through the chemical, not in clumps like adding an oxygen-bearing substance, like if you mixed hydrogen peroxide into a chemical. Therefore, any chemical with a lot of nitrate groups can not only release the energy necessary to go bang, but can release the oxygen necessary to really go boom!

Other examples of nitrating substances are TNT (trinitrotoluene, tri = three, nitro = nitrate, toluene = a carbon compound), nitroglycerin and guncotton (nitrocellulose). See the "nitro" in each one?

The flurry of diplomatic activity raised hopes Sunday that the peace process's slide may have slowed and that progress was being made toward restarting talks.

Contacts broke off in March after Israel began construction of a housing project for Jews on a hilltop known to the Israelis as Har Homa and to the Palestinians as Jabal Abu

Located in a part of Jerusalem captured from Arabs in 1967 and claimed by Palestinians as a future capital, the project set off riots in the West Bank and was linked to a suicide bombing in a Tel Aviv cafe that killed three Israelis.

Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu reportedly has been under pressure from the United States to make a goodwill gesture to rebuild trust with the Palestinians.

David Bar-Illan, one of the prime minister's top advisers, told the AP on Sunday that Netanyahu will announce plans this week to build a housing project for Arab residents of Jerusalem near Har Homa.

The government would provide roads, utilities and other assistance - perhaps even government-backed mortgages - for a "very substantial

A Palestinian official, speaking on condition of anonymity, told the AP that Netanyahu's government had not build new settlements in the West Bank and would stop expanding them in the West Bank just north of Jerusalem.

The Americans also have proposed that Israel combine the initial two of three promised withdrawals from rural areas of the West Bank still under Israeli control - turning over 30 percent over to the Palestinians, the Palestinian official said Israel has not agreed to that proposal, the official added.

The Palestinians - who now have full or partial control of about 27 percent of the West Bank - were furious when Israel proposed yielding only 2 percent more of the land it still controls in the first withdrawal.

The Haaretz newspaper said Netanyahu also plans to work to change the law to ensure that Palestinian residents of Jerusalem don't lose their right to live in the city. Palestinians and human rights activists have said the Netanyahu government is deliberately revoking residency rights of Palestinians in Jerusalem to strengthen Israel's grip on the disputed city.

The issue was one of the demands raised by the Americans as a goodwill gesture to the Palestinians,

Senator pushes for roads in federal parks

By H. Josef Hebert Associated Press

WASHINGTON - As his Senate Appropriations Committee grappled with how to help victims of floods, chairperson Ted Stevens saw an opportunity he couldn't pass up.

Alaska's senior senator tacked onto the must-pass emergency bill a pet piece of legislation to make it easier to build roads through federal parks, refuges and wilderness areas

Environmental activists were outraged, and Interior Secretary Bruce Babbitt is urging a presidential veto if the provision added last week stays in the bill. It goes before the full Senate today.

The measure, also pushed by fellow Republican Sen. Bob Bennett of Utah, would give the government less say in what constitutes a valid right-of-way for roads built under a 130-year-old law.

"Such a requirement could effectively render the federal government powerless to prevent the conversion of foot paths, dog-sled trails, jeep tracks, ice roads and other primitive transportation routes into paved highways," Babbitt complained in a letter to

Bennett and Stevens have accused Babbitt of overstepping his authority by putting too many restrictions on such right-of-way claims and usurping the states' authority. They contend state law should determine validity of claims.

Road construction in federally protected parks, refuges and wilderness areas has been a growing worry among conservationists, especially in the West. Nowhere has it been an issue more than in Alaska and Utah, where hundreds of claims are pending for rights-ofway over federally protected land.

The controversy involves a law enacted in 1866, repealed by Congress 110 years later, then resurrected in part during President Reagan's administration as it began aggressively processing thousands of right-of-way claims it considered still valid under the defunct Civil War-era statute.

No one disputes valid claims exist, but the Clinton administration has waged a running battle with some state officials - particularly those of Alaska and Utah - over who should have the final say

Babbitt announced a new policy in January that requires states to examine closer whether a right-ofway actually once was a significant corridor, which would make it a valid site for road building.

Many environmentalists see it differently.

"It grants rights-of-way across millions of acres of federal land to virtually any person who asserts a claim," asserted William Watson of the National Parks and Conservation Association, a private watchdog group. "It threatens to carve up our national parks."

Most claims under the 1866 law are in Alaska and Utah, because those states have been the most lenient in considering what constituted a historic pathway. Conservationists say the Stevens legislation may bring old claims boiling to the surface in other states. Rumblings already have been heard in Oklahoma, Nebraska, New Mexico and the Dakotas, said Phil Vorhees of the park association.

Adam Kolton of the Alaska Wilderness League said hundreds of rights-of-way claims are pending in Alaska, including some through the Denali National Park and seven in the coastal plain of the Arctic National Wildlife Refuge.

"Senator Stevens wants to make" Swiss cheese of the Arctic refuge and other wilderness areas by building roads through them,' Kolton complained.

In Utah, where much of the land also is federal, an estimated 5,000 right-of-way claims are pending. Many are in federal parks and refuges, as well as in the recently declared 1.7 million-acre Grand Staircase-Escalante National Mon-

Clinton, GOP try to sell balanced budget to nation

By Sandra Sobieraj Associated Press

WASHINGTON - Having shakn hands over an admittedly imperfect budget deal, President Clinton and his Republican partners began Saturday the task of selling it to the nation. "Let us now reach across party lines and seize our chance to palance the budget," Clinton said.

The bipartisan pact to balance the federal budget in five years — through a net $85 billion in tax cuts, $115 billion in Medicare savings, $85 billion in cuts to other domestic orograms - came after weeks of ntense negotiations between the White House and Republican leaders on Capitol Hill.

"It proves that our political system can work when we put our partisan differences aside and put the American people and their future first," Clinton said Saturday in a weekly radio address meant to outline the deal for the public. He emphasized that negotiators agreed to about $34 billion for his domestic priorities, including children's health care and education

This balanced budget plan is in balance with our values. It will help to prepare our people for a new century," Clinton said. "And I urge members of Congress in both parties to pass it."

That plea, coming at a time when polls show that voters demand bipartisan cooperation and punish parties for gridlock, was echoed in the Republican radio address by Florida Sen. Connie Mack: "This agreement, while it is not everything we would like, is a positive step for-agreement become more than just another good idea filled only with unrealized potential." Amplifying the full-blown pitch for votes to pass the budget through Congress, Treasury Secretary Robert Rubin, House Budget chairperson John Kasich, R-Ohio, and White House chief of staff Erskine Bowles lined up to praise the deal on Sunday's television talk shows.

But even as Clinton showcased the plan's education and health "investments," and Mack highlighted its "tax relief for the American family," both sides acknowledged settling for less than they wanted.

And both anticipated dissension from within.

"While it is a compromise, this agreement does not compromise our principles of less Washington and more freedom," said Mack, whose party had sought broader latitude in cutting taxes.

Clinton, who accepted deeper Medicare savings even after waging his re-election campaign on a fierce attack on similar GOP proposals, said: "There were some problems in this budget. There still are some discipline problems in this budget."

A strong economy helped bridge the differences, as negotiators learned there was an estimated $200 billion to $225 billion in extra revenue available over the five

By planning to spend little more than 10 percent of the projected revenue, he said, "that small amount of a big pie shows, in fact, that we probably will balance the budget even libel, so if your Web page says someone has two heads and they do, you're fine. But say they're a murderer and you can expect someone to come asking for some proof - and possibly a bill for damages if you don't have any.

Then, there's invasion of privacy. It's one thing to pass along a juicy bit of gossip to a friend. It's quite another to post it to the Web.

"Let's say, for instance, you disclose some private fact about somebody - say, their medical records. Or you snuck into their house and took a nudie photo of them and put it up on the Net. That would be a no-no under civil law and they could sue for damages," says David Banisar, staff counsel for the Electronic Privacy Information Center in Wash-

'We can't forget all those idiots arrested for sending threats to the president. So don't send threats to the president over e-mail. It's a federal crime," Banisar says.

Fraud is another sticking point. It's illegal everywhere, of course. But the Federal Trade Commission has taken an especially hard line against fraud on the Net. Send a snail-mail chain letter asking for money and you might get a call from postal authorities. Try it on the Web, however, and you'll be investigated by the FTC forces who track on-line scammers.

But in the end, the biggest vulnerability of any self-publisher on the Web is probably the wrath of large corporations.

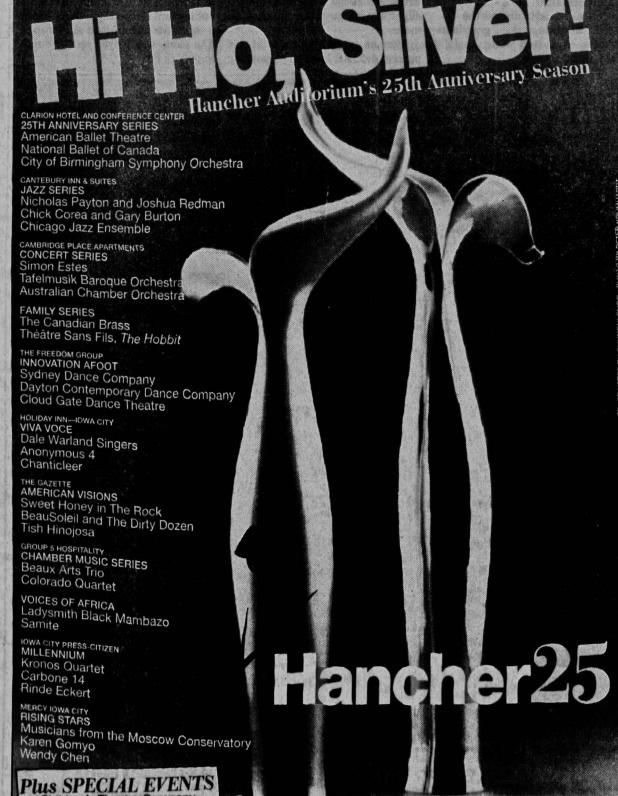

You can say their logos are ugly and their presidents are jerks and they don't flinch. But try using any variety of a heavily trademarked name or image on your site and watch the injunctions flow.

Generally speaking, it's other businesses who get into trouble. But, once in a while, an individual will set out to make a point - and get a legally phrased e-mail in response. Several cases have resulted in Web sites' being taken down, including individuals who posted statements against Kmart and McDonald's.

Prosecutors say the boys took turns shooting Eve and Vance Dingman, wrapping the bodies in plastic bags and stashing them in the attic and basement.

Jury selection begins Tuesday for Robert's first-degree murder trial and Jeffrey, now 15, has pleaded guilty to second-degree murder and agreed to testify against his brother.

They point to conflicting stories Jeffrey told in the days following the Feb. 9, 1996, murders in which he first denied any involvement and later said Robert made him shoot their parents.

According to court documents, Jeffrey is expected to testify that his brother had stolen money from his parents the day before the murders.

The next morning, Robert told Jeffrey that their parents knew he had taken the money. He said they would get more money if they killed their parents, and he asked his brother to help.

That Friday evening, they put on rubber gloves and waited for their parents, both 40, to arrive home from work. As their father climbed the stairs, Jeffrey fired a .22-caliber handgun. Authorities say Robert then took the gun and shot again. They say the two repeated the scene when their mother got home, this time in the living room.

That evening, Robert told his girlfriend he no longer had a prob-

ATLANTA - Career coach Al Stewart stands before a classroom of people seeking to reenter the corporate world and earnestly advises deception.

Don't tell them why you left your original job. Don't ask too many questions about health benefits. Don't tell them you have AIDS.

"You have to play the game," Stewart tells the class of mostly men who are learning how to get hired again and how to become financially stable. "I wish I could put it another way, but it's a cover-

TWA spokesperson John McDonald said in a statement issued in St. Louis the company was disappointed that "after 10 months and almost $30 million of taxpayer expense ..., the investigation still has not produced conclusive evidence or a probable cause as to why TWA Flight 800 crashed last

All Freeh's statement does, McDonald said, was "show the frustration of the investigators" in being unable to pinpoint the crash's cause.

On other subjects, Freeh rejected claims in a recent documentary that FBI agents opened fire on the Waco compound of the Branch Davidians in the 1993 siege, trapping the Davidians inside as the shots were fired by any of the federal agents outside the compound," he said. "The overwhelming evidence clearly shows that no shots were fired.

"Our conclusion is clear: No

He said the FBI still has no primary suspect in the bombing at the Atlanta Olympics last summer and Saudi Arabia's government has yet to allow U.S. agents to interview people arrested in a bombing that killed 19 American

"It is fair to say that we are looking at both potential criminal violations as well as national security issues," he said.

Freeh said he had "thought about" resigning earlier this year when the White House and the FBI quarreled over why information on alleged Chinese influencepeddling had failed to reach President Clinton. But he said he thought his leadership is still effective, and "I am very happy where I am.'

Labor party does first bit of policymaking

By Maureen Johnson Associated Press

LONDON — Cabinet ministers in Britain's new Labor government savored the novelty of making policy instead of protests, while surviving Conservatives maneuvered Sunday for the leadership of a shattered par-

Underlining the centrist platform on which it won a landslide election victory Thursday, Labor said it will not tolerate work-shy welfare claimants, and pledged to improve relations with the rest of the European Union.

Prime Minister Tony Blair named lawmaker Doug Henderson as Minister for Europe — a job that didn't exist in the previous Conservative administration.

Foreign Secretary Robin Cook said Britain will sign on next month to the EU's Social Chapter - regulations on labor union and employee rights that the Conservatives refused to accept.

Britain's policy, he added, will be "constructive engagement" with the rest of the 15-nation union.

"We want to take Britain out of the position of isolationism, out of inward-looking chauvinism and into being a leading member of the inter-national community," Cook said in an interview with The Observer, a liberal British weekly.

The issue of Europe split the Conservatives, with former Prime Minister John Major getting the worst of two worlds: He failed to placate right-wing "Euroskeptics," while his attempts to do so increasingly isolated Britain.

On the wider stage, Blair's office confirmed Sunday that he will meet with President Clinton during an international summit in the Hague, Netherlands, on May 28.

"The president has expressed an interest in an early meeting with the prime minister," a spokesperson said. No other details were available.

Blair attended church near his north London home Sunday, then returned to his official Downing Street residence and office to finish appointing his administration.

Blair gave Labor campaign manager Peter Mandelson a ministerial job that includes "effective presentation to the public" of government policies, a government statement

Harriet Harman, the new social security secretary, signaled a continuing welfare crackdown.

"When the welfare state was set up, it was for people who for one reason or another couldn't work," Ms. Harman said in a GMTV interview. "It wasn't for people who just didn't want to work. ... There won't be an option of simply life on benefits."

For the Conservatives, the party leadership contest expected in July threatens to again show the divisions that helped the party to its worse electoral defeat since 1832. Major announced Friday he would step down.

"The appalling disunity of the last two or three years — the constant rows inside the government - I think made the Conservative Party look as though it wasn't a party of government," Kenneth Clarke, Major's former treasury chief and a contender, said in a television inter-

Former Social Security Secretary Peter Lilley, on the party right, also has said he will run, and others are expected to enter the race.

Thursday's election defeat shrank the ranks of possible contenders. Seven Cabinet ministers lost their parliamentary seats, including the foreign secretary, the defense secretary and the trade and industry secretary, and are therefore ineligible to run.

DES MOINES - Iowa has slipped slightly, from third to fifth, in an annual ranking of the condition of its children.

The most startling shift in any of Crawford said Iowa gained the categories was in violent juveground in six of 10 ranking areas nile crime, measured in arrests of youths aged 10 through 17. In 1985, there were 110 arrests per 100,000 teen-agers. In 1994, there were 262

The rate of juvenile crime also jumped sharply nationwide. Thus, while Iowa slipped badly, the trend was even more pronounced elsewhere. Iowa ranked ninth-best in this category. Iowa's high school drop-out rate in 1985 was 6 percent compared to a national rate of 11 percent. In 1994, the Iowa rate dropped by a third, The same is true of the teen-aged down to 4 percent, compared to a national rate of 9 percent.

Debate over Shaw proceeding to take place Tuesday

The debate over who should present the Eric Shaw case to the 1997 Johnson County Grand Jury is scheduled to continue during court proceedings Tuesday morn-

The ongoing argument over who will direct the Grand Jury proceedings stems from the issuance of two bench orders filed by Judge William Eads, presiding judge of Iowa's Sixth Judicial District. On March 3, he ordered this year's Grand Jury to investigate the Shaw case. On April 1, Eads appointed Iowa City attorney Joseph Johnston special prosecutor to replace Johnson County Attorney J. Patrick White as head of the inquest.

Johnston's appointment prompted White and State Attorney General Tom Miller challenge both orders to the Iowa Supreme Court. The op Monday, May 5, 1997 returned the matter to Eads for 30 days in an attempt to allow the parties involved to resolve the controversy.

Tuesday's meeting orginal was scheduled for last Friday was postponed following an extended meeting between & White and Johnston. After the meeting Eads said the hearing should be rescheduled to give the court and counsel more to review the issue.

Miami's Austir

NEW YORK (AP) - Isaac Austin of the Miami Heat, who came back from a season in Turkey, was voted the NBA's most improved player on Saturday.

Austin, a 6-foot-10 center, averaged 9.7 points and 5.8 rebounds and shot 50 percent as the backup to Alonzo Mourning. When Mourning was injured late in the season, he started and averaged 15.1 points and 8.1 rebounds.

He received 41 votes of a possible 115 from a panel of media members, 24 more than Toronto's Doug Christie. Portland's Rasheed Wallace was third with 13 votes and Austin's Miami teammate, Voshon Lenard, was fourth with nine votes.

Austin played for Tuborg Izmir in Turkey in the 1995-96 season after spending parts of three seasons with Utah and Philadelphia. He and Lenard follow in the tradition of Anthony Mason and John Starks, two other well-traveled players who Pat Riley, now the Miami coach, made into solid NBA players when he coached the New York Knicks.

Austin was in double figures in points 39 times and had double figures in rebounds 13 times. He had 11 double-doubles and scored a career-high 26 points on March 11 against Milwaukee and a career high 15 rebounds against San San Antonio on March 2. Last year's winner of the award, which has been giving since the 1985-1986 seasons, was Gheorge Muresan of Washington.

the Boston Celtics to become either their coach or to take another position with the franchise for which he starred for 13 years as a player.

Bird, now a consultant for the Celtics, was quoted Saturday as saying if he left Boston, it would to be to join the Pacers.

"Indiana has made me a good offer — no, a great offer," Bird told The Boston Globe. "I've known the owners since college, through mutual friends, and I have great respect for Donnie Walsh. We are definitely talking, and if I decide to do something (other than remain with the Celtics in some capacity), it would definitely be there."

Bird, from French Lick, Ind., led Indiana State to the 1979 NCAA championship game.

Walsh, the Pacers president, had dinner with Bird last weekend to discuss the job offer.

Piazza bomb blows up Cubs

LOS ANGELES (AP) - Mike Piazza thinks it's possible to hit a ball completely out of Dodger Stadium, something that hasn't been done during a game in 24 seasons.

Piazza, who has made a career of hitting tape-measure home runs for the Los Angeles Dodgers, connected on a fastball from Steve Trachsel and drove it 430 feet off the back wall of the left-field bullpen leading off the fourth inning of Sunday's 5-2 victory over the Chicago Cubs.

"I didn't bring my car today, so I was hoping it would go," said Dodger reliever Todd Worrell, who didn't have to worry about finding a smashed windshield when he left the ballpark.

No Dodgers player has ever hit a ball completely out of Dodger Stadium, although Piazza and out-fielder Billy Ashley have cleared the left-field pavilion roof on numerous occasions during batting practice. Hall of Famer Willie Stargell cleared the right-field pavilion twice for Pittsburgh - in 1969 off Alan Foster (506 feet) and in 1973 against Andy Messersmith (470 feet).

"Some days you come out here and the ball carries pretty well, and some days it's like hitting it through peanut butter," Piazza said. "I guess under the right condi- stopped a three-game winning the second out of the inning, but you get a pitch up and out over the plate and really just extend on it, I think you could probably get it out fence counts the same as 600 feet."

Piazza also threw out a runner trying to steal second, and then tagged out Brian McRae on an attempted steal of home in the seventh with the Cubs down by three runs. Tom Candiotti had

"When I kicked my leg up, I saw him running to the plate and I thought we had plenty of time," Candiotti said. "It was kind of a rush right there because the count was 3-0, so I had to throw the ball down and in because I couldn't try to throw a strike. Mike made a great play on it."

"They kind of manhandled us today. They've got talent up and down the lineup and they've got a solid pitching staff," Oakland manager Art Howe said. "They're as solid as anybody we've seen. We haven't seen everybody yet, but I hope there is nothing better out Alomar earned two World Series rings in 1992 and 1993 with the Toronto Blue Jays. Asked if this Oriole team could be the best he's ever played for, Alomar responded, "It could be. ... Everything's working right now. We have better hitters here, we have almost the same defense. We had some real good pitchers in Toronto, but here we have a real good pitching staff, Coppinger came in with a 7.36 ERA and earned himself a meeting with manager Davey Johnson after complaining to the media about what he perceived to be an early hook in his last start Tuesday in Minnesota.

This time, he was exceptional. Coppinger (1-0) limited the Athletics to three singles, striking out nine and walking four, before leaving after facing two batters in the seventh. He even had a laugh with Johnson upon being pulled.

"We did a little joking, which was good. It helped break up the tension," Coppinger said.

"I knew he was beat, but I wanted him to say it," Johnson grinned. "He did, in a roundabout way. He needed it.'

In 1996, Baffert had thought momentarily that Cavonnier had won the Derby, but it turned out he lost by a nose to Grindstone.

Baffert said he told Capuano he shouldn't be disappointed.

"He did a great job with his horse," Baffert said. "He was ready to run. He scared the hell out of me down the stretch."

Capuano said he had bid on Silver Charm at a sale of 2-year-olds. Baffert, however, got the gray colt for $85,000 for Bob and Beverly Lewis. "The reason I bought him was I heard the name Silver Charm," said the silver-haired, 44-year-old trainer. "I said, 'I got to buy him.' I

Anita Snow Associated Press

MEXICO CITY — President Clinton opened his first trip to Latin America by trying to soften tensions with Mexico over immigration restrictions and illegal drugs Monday, declaring himself "a good friend to the people of Mexi-

In a modest symbol of the administration's support, the State Department announced it would give Mexico $6 million to help fight drug trafficking.

Clinton arrived Monday night after a four-hour flight from Washington and toured the National Museum of Anthropology with Mexican President Ernesto Zedillo. Their work begins Tuesday, with private talks and a news conference. At the museum, the two presidents posed for pictures before an Aztec calendar dating back somewhere between the 10th and 15th centuries

"We will be able to make further progress on the specific issues that concern both countries — such as trade, drug trafficking, migration, border issues," Zedillo predicted in a interview aired on U.S. public television Monday.
