Clinton arrived Monday night after a four-hour flight from Washington and toured the National Museum of Anthropology with Mexican President Ernesto Zedillo. Their work begins Tuesday, with private talks and a news conference. At the museum, the two presidents posed for pictures before an Aztec calendar dating back somewhere between the 10th and 15th

"We will be able to make further progress on the specific issues that concern both countries — such as trade, drug trafficking, migration, border issues," Zedillo predicted in a interview aired on U.S. public officials met all day Monday to television Monday.

Clinton also was interviewed by Hispanic television. "The biggest threat we face is the intensified attention being given to Mexico by the narco-traffickers because they have so much money, so much powensions with Mexico over immi- er, so much capacity for violence and because Americans, frankly, pay so much money every year for drugs," the president said.

He said the drug fight is not a case of "the United States beating istration's support, the State up on Mexico or vice versa. This is something we must handle together. But if we can get through that, I think that I'm very optimistic about Mexico's future.

On immigration, Clinton said the United States has "the most open immigration policy in the entire world," allowing 160,000 legal immigrants from Mexico last year. He said a new law he signed last year will give the United States "important new tools" to deport illegal aliens, but also has "unintended harsh consequences" that he is seeking to modify. The Iowa Legislature, which adjourned last Tuesday evening, approved Senate File 515, a juvenile justice bill. In addition to increasing fines for possession of alcohol, the bill would make it Students under 21 who are harder for minors to get abortions and set fines for minors smoking

Gov. Terry Branstad is expected to sign the bill into law Wednesday at 10:30 a.m., a state legislator said. If signed, the bill will go into effect July 1.

Under the proposed bill, persons under the age of 21 who possess alcohol would be fined $100. The current fee is $34.50, which includes a $15 fine, a $4.50 surcharge and a $15 court fee.

Rep. Minnette Doderer, D-Iowa City, who opposed the bill, said she doesn't feel it will deter students from drinking.

"It won't have an effect on kids drinking, but it will have an effect on their pocketbook," Doderer said. "I don't want to make kids criminals before they're 21.'

Sen. Jeff Angelo, R-Creston, who supported the bill, said the bill was proposed because of an increase in Îowa's juvenile crime rate.

"Crime is holding at a steady rate but juvenile crime is increasing," Angelo said. "We are working hard to answer the public cry for juvenile crime in general. The public does demand that we punish those who break the law."

ICPD Chief R.J. Winkelhake said he hasn't seen the bill but is surprised it is going to the governor's

Cicadas to make first appearance since 1980

By Emily Shack The Daily Iowan

They may be noisy, but the cicadas set to hit Iowa this month also offer a "trill of a lifetime," according to one scientist.

The insects, who have lived as underground nymphs since 1980, will emerge together in May and June, said Iowa State University Extension Entomologist Donald Lewis.

The one-inch insects are black with iridescent wings and red highlights. Don't be frightened, Lewis said, although they have "a bit of an alien look to them." Their population density can run up to almost 1½ million per acre with up to 40,000 bugs in one tree, Lewis said. These periodical cicadas are a natural phenomenon that are found only in North America and only east of the Rocky Mountains.

Male cicadas "sing" by vibrating two shell-like drums located along the sides of the abdomen several times per second. They use their air sacs and wings to control sound volume and quality.

The males "sing" to call a congregation together, for courtship or to tell other cicadas to get out of their territory, UI Termite Control Program Coordinator Suresh Prabhakaran said.

"A single cicada can make itself heard up to a quarter of a mile away," Prabhakaran said. "A group of the bugs can make sound up to 100 decibels, equivalent to the sound of a jackhammer." Fortunately for the males, they can't hear their own noise because they close off their own ear drum, Prabhakaran said.

"I'm a pretty heavy sleeper, so hopefully they won't bug me," UI junior Jodi Navis said. "I'm not a big fan of bugs, but I won't be so frightened that I will stay inside." The insects may be sauteed in butter and eaten, though no one interviewed admitted to trying the While underground, the cicada nymphs feed on sap from tree roots. There are different cycles in

The bugs are remarkably synchronic for unintelligent beings who spend nearly their whole lives underground," Lewis said. "In a region, they virtually all emerge at the same time.'

The cicada nymphs climb up tree trunks, posts and poles. There, they will shed their crunchy shells in order to harden into maturity.

No significant damage will be caused by the cicadas, and they

In a crowded musical year, 'The Life' leads in Tony nominations

NEW YORK (AP) - In a season crowded with new musicals, "The Life" emerged Monday as the top contender for the 1997 Tony Awards, picking up 12 nominations in the race for Broadway's highest honor.

The Cy Coleman musical, a nostalgic look at the pimps, prostitutes and pushers of Times Square before Disney bought a theater and decided to clean up the area, received nominations in most of the performance and technical categories, as well as nods for best score, book, direction and choreography.

"Steel Pier," a Kander and Ebb musical about a 1930s dance marathon in Atlantic City, received 11 nominations, while a revival of "Chicago," the season's biggest hit, was nominated for eight Tonys.

"The Life" and "Steel Pier" will face "Titanic" and "Juan Darien," a South American carnival mass that closed in January, for the coveted best-musical prize.

Awards would boost "The Young Man From Atlanta" by Horton Foote and "The Last Night of Ballyhoo," Alfred Uhry's look at Jewish life in Atlanta in 1939. Both are nominated for best play along with two British imports, David Hare's "Skylight" and "Stanley" by Pam Gems, which already have closed. The Tony Awards will be broad-cast Sunday, June 1, with the first hour shown by PBS and the second two, with Rosie O'Donnell as host, by CBS. A committee of 26 theater people picked the nominees. Winners will be chosen by more than 750 the-ater professionals and journalists.

Play brings drug culture to forefront

The Daily Iowan

When a drug addict hits rock bottom, there's only two places he or she can go.

Death - or rehabilitation. That's the harsh reality of "Caseload," the second play of the UI Playwrights Festival, which is scheduled to be performed tonight at 5:30 and 9 in Theatre A of the UI Theatre Arts Building.

shop member Levy "Lee" Simon Jr., "Caseload" is the story of eight recovering drug addicts from all walks of life and the counselor who tries to give them their lives

Simon, who was a social worker in the early 1980s with the Bureau of Child Welfare in New York, said that drug issues are often ignored in society.

"The drug problem that is pervasive in America has been swept under the carpet," Simon said. "It's not as big an issue politically and socially as it should be.

"Caseload" is the third installment in Simon's "drug trilogy" of plays. The first, "In The Middle of the Bubblin' Tar," looked at drug dealers who had taken over the streets. It was followed by "God, The Crackhouse & The Devil," where, instead of dealers, Simon focused on users, which will be produced professionally off-Broadway this summer.

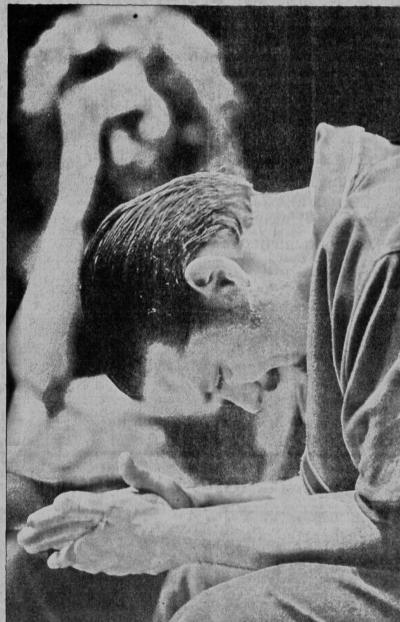

Last fall, Simon finished "Caseload." This one, he says, focuses on the recovery process.

"The eight clients are from different backgrounds," he said. "The disease of addiction does not discriminate.'

The play is directed by visiting UI faculty member Mary Beth Easley. She and Simon have known each other for 10 years and are both members of the Circle Repertory Theatre in New York City.

Easley, who also directed a production of "God, The Crackhouse & The Devil," said that she has a working relationship with Simon and when you do that you have two because of her respect for his work.

"Lee always writes about a subject that's important to hear," Easley said. "As a society, we tend to push drug use aside. But his play tends to personalize the problem; it makes us visualize these patients not as drug addicts, but as people. They're not all just losers and beggars and thieves; there are a variety of reasons that led to their situation." UI junior Molly Armour, who plays one of the former addicts, said that Easley's direction is what made the actors able to capture the desperation of their characters. "These people are here as a last-ditch chance," Armour said. "This isn't some kind of outpatient thing. These people have hit rock-bottom, options: Kick it and live, or go back out there and die. Mary Beth brought that passion; the play wouldn't have worked without it." Simon said that the play's themes are universal.

"Everyone is struggling with a personal catharsis," he said. "And that's not just drug addicts, but people in general. There's always baggage that we're trying to get rid of."

MFA students sponsor additional art exhibit

By Kristen Mullin The Daily Iowan

In true postmodern spirit, 13 Iowa City painters and printmakers are taking art beyond the tradition of museums or galleries.

In reaction to the annual Master of Fine Arts thesis exhibition being held May 9-June 7 at the UI Museum of Art, 150 N. Riverside Drive - 10 painters and three printmakers, as well as participating in the thesis event, are sponsoring their own show, called More Fine Art. The exhibit began Monday and runs through Thursday at Old Brick, on the corner of Clinton and Market streets.

"I think it's a wonderful idea because people will be able to see more than just what is at the museum," said Emily Vermillion, curator of education at the UI Museum of Art.

The MFA painters and printmakers conjoined for the event because of close departmental ties, said Jim Madden, an MFA painting student and conceiver of More Fine Art.

FORT DAVIS, Texas - One of the two Republic of Texas members who fled after a weeklong standoff was shot and killed by police Monday in a gun battle in the rugged Davis Mountains. The second man was apparently still at large.

The shooting took place at a bunker about a mile from the militant group's "embassy" headquarters, said Mike Cox, spokesperson for the Department of Public Safety.

The suspect was shooting at tracking dogs and a helicopter that police were using in their search for the fugitives, said DPS spokesperson Sherri Deatherage Green. The helicopter crew and searchers on the ground fired back, killing him.

The other man was still at large, Green said.

"We're on these guys," Cox had said after the dogs were wounded.

"The DPS is on their trail." There was no word on the identity of the man who was killed.

Matson, 48, fled the militant group's remote hideaway about four hours apart on Saturday before other members surrendered. Authorities let the two men go to avoid jeopardizing the negotiations that led to the surrender.

Also on Monday, Republic of Texas leader Richard McLaren and his wife were indicted on federal charges carrying potential penalties of hundreds of years in prison and millions of dollars in fines

Dogs and troopers on horseback initially were held back from the search because of possible booby traps left behind by McLaren's group. Authorities found more than 60 pipe bombs and 12 gasoline cans in the area, as well as several fortified bunkers.

Cox said the dogs, redbone hounds used as trackers by the Texas Department of Criminal Justice, were unleashed this morning near a campsite found in a canyon near the Republic of Texas "embassy."

nized criminal activity and kidnapping related to a hostage-taking April 27 that sparked the seven-day morning.

The Republic of Texas believes the state was illegally annexed by the United States in 1845. McLaren, jailed in Marfa, said he would continue seeking independence for Texas. Other factions of the group have disavowed him.

"We're still moving forward. We've not stopped it," he told NBC News on Sunday. He said then he wanted to face federal courts "because the courts in Texas are strictly military courts sitting under war powers."

McLaren, 43, was in jail Monday without bail, sharing a cell with his wife, Evelyn. He and three other members are charged with organized criminal activity; the others were held in lieu of $500,000 bail. An indictment unsealed Monday in Dallas accused both McLarens and five other people of issuing more than $1.8 billion in bogus Republic of Texas financial documents and using them to pay legitimate bills. They were charged with conspiracy, bank fraud, mail fraud and aiding and abetting. Names of the five others were not released because they are not in custody.

Experts link McVeigh to bomb materials

By Michael Fleeman Associated Press

DENVER - Prosecutors sought Monday to link Timothy McVeigh and Terry Nichols to the theft of bomb materials, with testimony that a drill bit found at Nichols' house likely broke open a lock on a quarry explosives bin.

FBI tool mark expert James Cadigan testified the bit found in a search of Nichols' Herington, Kan., home matched marks made on a drilledout padlock from a quarry break-in six months before the Oklahoma City bombing.

Prosecutors contend McVeigh and Nichols stole blasting caps and boxes of high explosives from the Marion, Kan., quarry and used them to set off the fuel oil-and-fertilizer truck bomb used in the blast.

Previously, prosecutors have produced evidence the pair were in the area of the quarry around the time of the theft. They also have noted that other items found in Nichols' house, including a receipt for the purchase of explosive fertilizer, bore McVeigh's fingerprints.

FBI lawyer Mary Jasnowski testified agents also found a prepaid telephone card that prosecutors contend was used to make dozens of calls in search of bomb components.

She said the phone card bore the name Darryl Bridges and was ordered from the Spotlight, an antigovernment newspaper.

The court week began with a new look for McVeigh. He entered the courtroom with a flat-top haircut. This replaced his uniformly short crew cut of last week.

Prosecutors spent much of Monday introducing into evidence a number of critical items seized from Nichols' home during several FBI searches after the bombing.

Among the items found was a battery powered Makita drill and a set

Using a microscope, Cadigan compared the marks made by one of those drill bits to the marks on the brass cylinder of a padlock at the quarry break-in site.

"This drill bit produced marks that were contained in the padlock," Cadigan said. He noted that the tip of every drill bit manufactured has unique markings, and that bits get new markings as they wear down

5th-grade 'marriage' ends in court

FARMINGTON, N.M. - With their pretend marriage in shambles, fifth-graders Cody Finch and Katie Rose Sawyer faced each other in domestic violence court Monday, their legs too short to reach the floor, and swore they'd never, ever speak to each other again.

Before he and 11-year-old Katie were called to testify Monday, their lawyers had struck an agreement to dismiss the case in exchange for a restraining order keeping the children apart. Their parents can be fined $500 and attorney's fees if either child contacts the other.

The case went before Dean after Katie's family filed a complaint media against Cody and his two teen-age rothers, alleging that Cody

he subject of the North American Free Trade Agreement (NAFTA) and its implications for Mexico, Canada and the United States has seen a great deal of newspaper ink. The subject of a parallel development in South America, however, rarely surfaces in the American press. Four countries are in the process of implementing the terms of a customs union - they are Brazil, Uruguay, Paraguay, and Argentina. The agreement is called "Mercosur," which stands for 'mercado común del sur," or southern common market. In Brazil, the union is known as "Mercosul" (mercado comum do sul, same meaning). In any language, that is what it is: a free trade agreement, consisting of the four southernmost nations.

Since the politically charged issues that often cloud the NAFTA debate are also pertinent to Mercosur's arrival, something can be gained by examining the same problems in a more remote environment, where the connection to Americans' everyday lives isn't as distinct. There are similarities which make the comparison worthwhile. Brazil is the "America" of the region in that it is the economic power around which everything revolves. Argentina and Brazil together account for 97 percent of the Mercosur nations' collective gross domestic product. This means that Uruguay and Paraguay have even less economic leverage than does Mexico in NAFTA when it comes to making decisions. Because they are so much smaller, their potential to be radically affected by the Mercosur agreement is much greater than

There are also differences: Whereas NAFTA, in theory, creates a free trade area, Mercosur will be a customs union. nations belong to a customs union, they have a common foreign trade policy with countries not belonging to the group. The nations of NAFTA, on the other hand, are free to set their own individual foreign trade policy. This has the effect of making Mercosur a more unified body than NAFTA, and thus will have increased bargaining power when negotiating with other regional trade unions or countries. of Mercosur signed the free trade treaty in Asunción, Paraguay. Since then, internal trade among the four has gone from about four billion in U.S. dollars to 14 billion. Per capita income is considerably higher in the four member nations as a whole than in the rest of South America. It would seem that if Mercosur is not helping the economies of the southern cone region, at least it is not harming them. The Argentine economy, in particular, has grown at a rate of 8 percent a year for much of the '90s, compared 2-3 percent in the United States.

It is true the Mercosur nations were the comparatively wealthy nations of South America before the trade treaty. It is also true that their relationship is somewhat different than the relationship of the NAFTA nations. Perhaps their economic circumstances would have improved without Mercosur. But then again, perhaps not. One could say the climate has improved in some part because of Mercosur. Free trade allows consumers to buy things from other countries at prices which are lower than they would be if they had to buy domestic goods, or tariffed foreign goods. Labor exploitation and reckless abandon of the environment are not the only reasons things are cheaper in one country than in another. A far more frequent reason is that one nation is simply better at producing something than the other. As common sense says, when you can buy something cheaply, you save money. You can take that money and buy more stuff. Essentially, your income has increased. This is the argument for free trade in a nutshell.

This rationale in favor of free trade can be received without prejudice when it is used to justify the presence of Mercosur, but dare one apply it to NAFTA? Oftentimes, politicians and journalists prefer to tell the story of an individual who has lost their job when their firm moved to Mexico, or of a worker in Mexico who is tragically underpaid. Certainly, these people deserve our compassion, and it is true there are some injustices that should be rectified. But just because there are some things to work on does not mean that free trade should be abandoned without further consideration.

I am suggesting that another view of the free trade debate can be gained by analyzing the situation in South America. I think it will be true in the years to come that Mercosur will do much more good than harm to the member nations. Could not the same be true for NAFTA? Think about it.

FTC wants to change 'Made in USA' labels

By Donna Abu-Nasr Associated Press

WASHINGTON - The government wants to give manufacturers more leeway in promoting their products as "Made in USA" even if some of the parts originate over-

In proposing new guidelines Monday, the Federal Trade Commission said it wanted to ensure that consumers are not deceived when they see a "Made in USA" label and also make sure that American manufactures have enough flexibility to meet global competition.

"The claim that a product is 'Made in USA' is important to many consumers as they make purchasing decisions," said Jodie Bernstein, director of the FTC's bureau of consumer protection. "Understanding what the claim means to consumers is difficult given today's world marketplace.'

The agency's proposal drew quick criticism from labor unions. The AFL-CIO said any weakening of the FTC's standards would make the label "a fraud on the American public and open the door even wider to the export of U.S. jobs."

"The words 'Made in USA' are on their face simple, clear and easily understood as long as they mean what they say," said an AFL-CIO statement. "The words no longer would mean what they say under the new guidelines."

But Robin Lanier, from the International Mass Retail Association, said the proposal was a step in the right direction.

She said it would allow manufacturers who use one or two foreign components in their products to make the claim honestly that they are making things in the United

Under current rules, companies can't make that claim if a product has more than a small amount of foreign content. While the percentage of non-U.S. content has never been specifically set, FTC officials said it is a very small or insignificant percentage.

The issue has become more complicated as products sold here increasingly have gotten components from several different countries or have been manufactured outside the United States.

The proposed guides, which do not cover automobiles, wool, fur or textiles, would allow a product to be called "Made in USA" if "substantially all" was made in America. This means that: · U.S. manufacturing costs constitute at least 75 percent of the total manufacturing costs and the product was last substantially transformed - a U.S. Customs Service term for assembled - in the

· Or the product was last substantially transformed in the United States along with all its significant components or parts.

In other words, if a bicycle is assembled in the United States, if its frame is manufactured in the United States, if only a few of its components are imported and if the overall U.S. costs are 75 percent of the total, the FTC says it "would likely not be deceptive for the bicycle to be labeled 'Made in USA.'" But if a toaster is made from primarily U.S. parts and is assembled in Canada in a process that constitutes a substantial transformation, it would be deceptive to call it -American-made, even if the U.S. costs accounted for 75 percent of the total costs.

If a product does not meet these standards, marketers may still make a qualified claim saying what portion was made in America and what portion was made abroad. The labels would read "Made in -USA of U.S. and imported parts" or "U.S. Content: 50%.

Peru digging LIMA, Peru (AP) - Twenty-four miners who dug tunnels for Peruvian commandos under the Japanese ambassador's mansion have yet to return home - two weeks after the end of the hostage crisis - their union said Monday. The union sent a letter to the government-owned Centromin mining company, which hired the miners and engineers, asking the firm to say where the men are and to let them return to their families, local radio reported.

Media reports that two of the miners were either killed or injured building the tunnels and the secretive nature of the operation has led family members to fear for their safety, Radioprogramas reported.

Centromin would not comment on the miners' whereabouts.

The miners spent several weeks building a network of tunnels under the diplomatic compound where left-ist rebels were holding 72 hostages. The military used the tunnels complete with electricity, ventilation and a telecommunications system - to stage a rescue on April 22.

One hostage and two soldiers died in the raid. The 14 Tupac Amaru rebels who seized the hostages during a Dec. 17 party also were killed.

HIV moms, babies face better odds with AZT

By Martha Irvine Associated Press

SAN FRANCISCO - No one knows whether or not Lisa O'Connor's baby will be born with the AIDS virus

More than three years ago, the baby - whose HIV-positive mother is due to give birth to her in June would have had about a 1-in-4 chance of contracting the virus.

Now, in some U.S. regions, that statistic has dropped to 1-in-20, and perhaps lower, mostly due to use of the drug AZT. And an increasing number of women with the AIDS virus are choosing to have children.

"We're going for our dreams," said O'Connor, who is married to Pete Iglesias and already has named her unborn daughter Marisa Tila Igle-

O'Connor, who lives in Oakland, has been HIV-positive for nearly nine years. She thinks she contracted the virus from a boyfriend who died of AIDS, although she also is a recovering drug addict.

San Francisco General, where the baby will be born, and the University of California-San Francisco medical centers - the two main hospitals in the city where HIV-positive mothers are treated - have had no cases of HIV transmission to newborns since April 1995, doctors say.

And city health records for 1995 and 1996 show no new pediatric

AIDS cases from birth to age 12. "People are just stunned when they hear the statistics," said Susan Haikalis, director of client services at the San Francisco-based AIDS

Foundation. "It's unusual for a city

Dr. Karen Beckerman, who works regularly with HIV-infected mothers, is cautious but optimistic. "It's unlikely that we'll never see an infected baby again," says Beckerman, a physician with the Bay Area Perinatal AIDS Center. "But this is a change in the epidemic that deserves to be highlighted." Nationwide, AZT has been given regularly during pregnancy since a successful 1994 clinical trial concluded.

HIV-positive pregnant women begin taking AZT after their first trimester. AZT is then given intravenously during labor. And the infant receives AZT syrup for six weeks after birth.

The results have been quickly not-

In North Carolina, for example, doctors say transmission rates have dropped from 20 percent to about 5 percent in the past two years. In New York City, public health officials recorded 22 cases of HIV-infected newborns last year, compared with 82 in 1995 and 111 in 1994.

O'Connor, 34, said the improved statistics convinced her that having a child was worth the risk.

"For me, it was too scary until recently," she said.

In the meantime, O'Connor is preparing her daughter's nursery. She says staying positive has helped keep her healthy.

"Maybe I will be able to be one of those moms who picks their kid up from high school," she says. "That would be wonderful."

It's a case that illustrates how medicine is business — because lucrative patent laws, not some charitable instinct, provide the incentive to create treatments, explained Paul Root Wolpe of the University of Pennsylvania's Center for Bioethics.

CellPro is "not the poor innocent company who got shafted," he said. "Everybody in business knows you don't use a patented product withchemotherapy. He is in remission a out a license. As so often is the unfortunate result, the people who end up suffering are the patients."

Patients typically freeze bone before high-dose chemotherapy, and then get back the thawed cells, but remaining tion, and continued experimental traces of toxic preservatives can cause serious side effects.

Tobacco Bowl, 111 S. Dubuque St., said he believes the state-approved "Minors should not be smoking,"

Connolly said. "I absolutely don't encourage smoking. It's a personal choice. I would stand behind the right to do it, though."

Connolly, who has been in business for 27 years, said he likes to focus his store on cigar and pipe smoking.

"I believe that cigarettes are a bad thing," Connolly said. "It is bad for your health. I wish someone could figure out how to make the adult things — like buying alcohol and smoking cigarettes - less attractive or eliminate it as a right of passage."

Connolly said he has spent only $250 to $300 on advertising in his 27 years of business. The Tobacco Bowl cards anyone who looks under the age of 27, he said.

UI sophomore Nate Kirley, who has been smoking since the age of 13, said the proposed bill will not stop minors from smoking.

"Me and my friends use to steal cigarettes or have someone older buy them for us when we were younger," Kirley said. "It's not going to stop people from smoking. The state should spend their time doing something else.

ORANJESTAD, Aruba - Brain scans costing thousands of dollars could soon become the norm worldwide in professional boxing if the sport's medical experts have their way.

Doctors at boxing's first medical congress issued a list of medical musts this week, ranging from bans on spectator smoking and 60-day fighting bans for boxers who are knocked out to mandatory yearly brain scans for professional boxers.

One African orthopedic surgeon said the costs involved made many suggestions "a mission impossible." But the WBC president Jose

Sulaiman warned that if the sport cannot be made "safe or safer, then there should not be boxing."

"We have to assume that boxing will continue as always, legal or not," said Peter Richards, a British neurosurgeon who is waging a British Medical Association campaign to ban boxing. "So we need to et a standard and (ensure) good medical care for the poorest boxer, ot only the richest.'

require boxing promoters to help fund research into boxing injuries. But the doctors from 83 countries attending the WBC-sponsored conference did not specify who would pay for other tests, such as mandatory brain scans, which cost between $250 and $3,000.

Magnetic resonance imaging tests, considered the most accurate means of detecting brain damage in boxers, are unavailable in any but the wealthiest countries. Doctors from Africa said most fighters on that continent cannot even afford AIDS tests costing $20 - about what they earn for an average professional fight.

Other guidelines, such as barring boxers under age 18 and over 35, could also be hard to enforce in the sport, which has no overall governing organization. The WBC is one of four major world regulating bod-

Tyson resumes training for rematch back on track.

Tyson's doctor has given the heavyweight fighter full clearance to resume contact training in preparation for his June 28 rematch against Holyfield. The rematch originally was scheduled for May 3, but was postponed when Tyson reopened a cut over his left eye originally sustained in his upset loss to Holyfield. John Horne, Tyson's co-manager, announced Monday that Tyson received clearance from Dr. Barry Markman to resume training.

At the time of the postponement, Marc Ratner, head of the Nevada Athletic Commission, said he was told the cut had reopened and the former champion had stitches.

It was the second time Tyson postponed a fight with Holyfield, and the latest in a string of fight postponements for the former Tyson also postponed a fight with Buster Mathis Jr. in November 1995 after breaking a thumb.

Last Nov. 9, Holyfield stopped Tyson in the 11th round to win the heavyweight title.

Holyfield will get at least $35 million for the June 28 fight, while Tyson is expected to make about $20 million.

Bowe, sister make up after reported split lips

WASHINGTON - Former heavyweight boxing champion Riddick Bowe and his sister reconciled Monday after a weekend spat in which both reportedly suffered split lips.

Bowe, who retired from boxing last week, and his sister Velma Melton said in a statement that they "remain loving and supportive of each other."

Bowe's former manager Rock Newman, who released the statement, refused to discuss the dispute or provide any more details. Police were investigating a reported assault in Fort Washington, the Maryland suburb where Bowe lives, but would not confirm that it involved the former boxer.

"We don't anticipate any charges being filed," said Prince George's County police spokesman Cpl. Mike Montgomery.

In the statement, Bowe and Melton said, "We love each other and hope this quick and peaceful reconciliation can be an example for others caught in the passion of family difficulties.'

The two also signed the statement, indicating they are committed "to ending our spat and getting on with our lives." They said they would have no further comment and asked the media to respect their privacy.

By Bucky Gleason Associated Press

BUFFALO, N.Y. -Snow made 29 saves and preserved an early lead as the Philadelphia Flyers beat the Buffalo Sabres 2-1 Monday night in Game 2 of the Eastern Conference semifinals.

Mikael Renberg and Chris The-rien gave the Flyers a 2-0 lead in the first 17 minutes, and they never trailed in taking a two-game lead going into Game 3 Wednesday night in Philadelphia.

Jason Dawe broke up Snow's shutout with a goal late in the second period, but the Sabres were unable to solve Snow again. Snow has allowed just one goal since the second period of Game

Steve Shields, playing while star goalie Dominik Hasek served the second of a three-game suspension for attacking a reporter, made 35 saves for Buffalo. Hasek is allowed to return Friday for Game 4, also in Philadelphia.

The Sabres also were without Michael Peca, their best defensive forward, who shut down Eric Lindros in Game 1. He was scratched with back spasms.

It didn't take long for Lindros'

Legion of Doom line to make an impact against Buffalo's second option - inexperienced center Wayne Primeau and aggressive forwards Rob Ray and Brad May.

Renberg scored 4:47 into the game after Primeau gave up the puck in the Buffalo zone. John LeClair capitalized on the mistake and took a hard slap shot from just inside the blue line. Shields made the initial save before Renberg swept up the rebound and backhanded it into an open net.

Therien gave the Flyers a 2-0 lead during a 4-on-4 situation at 16:49 when he took the puck off the backboards and beat Shields with a wraparound.

Dixon Ward took the puck from Sabres defenseman Darryl Shannon in the left circle and threaded a perfect pass through traffic to Dawe near the crease. Dawe waited for Snow to drop to the ice and stuffed the puck between the goaltender's legs.

Snow faced only eight shots in the final period, and the Sabres didn't threaten even when they pulled Shields in the final moments.

Reed, Martinez get weekly honors

NEW YORK (AP) — In a sweep for the New York teams, Tino Martinez of the Yankees was voted AL player of the week on Monday and Rick Reed of the Mets was selected NL player of the week.

Martinez, who set a major league record for RBIs in April with 34, was 13-for-26 last week with four homers

Reed, second in the NL with a 1.07 ERA, was 2-0 last week with a 0.60 ERA, allowing two runs — one earned — and 11 hits in 15 innings with eight strikeouts and one walk.

Frank Robinson hired by comissioner's office

NEW YORK (AP) — Frank Robinson, who in 1974 became the first black to manage a major league baseball team, was hired Monday as a consultant to acting commissioner Bud Selig for special projects.

Robinson, 61, will be director of baseball operations for the Arizona Fall League. Baseball officials are considering whether to move the league to Lake Buena Vista, Fla.

"Major league baseball is extremely fortunate to add a person with such diverse baseball experience as Frank Robinson," Selig said. "His baseball knowledge will be beneficial."

Bilbao named Big Ten pitcher of the week

Iowa senior softball player Debbie Bilbao was named pitcher of the week by the Big Ten Conference Monday.

The Sandy, Utah, native picked up two complete game wins on the week, including a perfect game against Northwestern than clinched the Big Ten title for the Hawkeyes.

Her win Sunday at Penn State was her 25th of the season, as she allowed one unearned run off four hits while striking out two.

Get those uniforms off basebal allowed to handle the grand managers

Once in a while it becomes r sary to look at things from a differed ble of conducting an impartial perspective and ask questions. Why the hell do baseball manage wear uniforms? There doesn't seem to be any behind managers dressing like their players. How much flexibility does it take to fill out a lineup card? It makes a person wonder if baseball managers use groin cups and athletic supporters. While they're at it, they might as well put on eye black and wear batting

The way I look at it, the notion that 55-year-old coaches should feel ated to dress like players is total ridiculous - not to mention irration Some of the more obese manage resemble mascots, which is why the needs to be a change.

I propose that managers follow style of Connie Mack when he coats the Philadelphia Athletics in the ear 20th century. Rather than embans suit and a derby hat. You have respect a man like that. Mack demanded reverence from BOSTON - Rick Pitino appears ready to take over the Boston Celtics, a job he called "the greatest opportunity ever afforded a coach."

Pitino, holding an impromptu news conference Monday after a book signing in Atlanta, said he will announce on Tuesday whether he'll leave Kentucky for the Celtics and a reported $70 million.

"Whoever gets the Boston Celtics job is getting a great honor, Pitino said after promoting his motivational book, "Success is a Choice."

Pitino planned to meet Tuesday morning with Kentucky athletic director C.M. Newton before revealing his

PHILADELPHIA - Larry Brown, a basketball vagabond who has won wherever he's gone, has a new address and a salary to top that of any NBA

Brown was hired Monday as coach of the Philadelphia 76ers, his sixth NBA team, with full control of personnel decisions. He is now the NBA's highest salaried coach and can thank Rick Pitino from the bottom of his bank account. Brown, who on Wednesday resigned as coach of the Indiana Pacers, signed a contract that sources familiar with the negotiations said was worth close to $5 million annually over five years.

Pitino's flirtation with several NBA coaching vacancies has bumped up the market price. But the 76ers - who finished 22-60 this season and have not been to the playoffs in six years were ready to pay.

"I've been overpaid my whole life," said Brown, 56, joking that he got $7,000 in his first year as an assistant coach at North Carolina in 1965. "I'm Brown once former 76ers coach doing something I love. I haven't gone to work one day of my life."

Brown's salary is well above Miss Pat Riley and New Jersey's John Co pari, who each earn $3 million a yel Riley's deal also reportedly gave 10 percent of the team. Pitino, however, is considering le ing the University of Kentucky for Boston Celtics, who are said to offering as much as $70 million f years, and part ownership. That wo easily top Brown's salary. This hiring is certain to set the

Shaw grand jury debate continues

By Brendan Brown The Daily Iowan

In the ongoing debate over who will head the grand jury investigation of the Eric Shaw case, the County Attorney said Tuesday he will step aside if Judge William Eads withdraws his previous

"I have clearly made a decision to change my position, and I'm asking the court to do the same," White said.

On March 3, Eads ordered the 1997 Johnson County Grand Jury to investigate the Shaw case. On April 1, he appointed Johnston special prosecutor to replace White as head of the inquest. Johnston's appointment prompted White and Attorney General Tom Miller to challenge both orders to the Supreme Court. The court returned the matter to Eads for 30 days with the hope that the parties involved could resolve the contro-

White called Eads' orders "illadvised and illegal" and said he was troubled that Eads had worked with 1996 grand jury himself with a baggy cotton and a foreperson Lori Klockau to draft uniform, Mack opted for a three the documents. Klockau previously had testified that she felt pressured by White not to bring the Shaw case before the grand jury.

White said Eads acted inappro priately by contacting Klockau and working with her to compose the orders without informing the County Attorney's office. He said by bringing Klockau and Johnston into the Shaw case, Eads is impeding the Grand Jury's progress. "This is an issue that needs penness and full disclosure but what it also needs is clear decision making," White said. "The 1997 grand jury should above all else be their own arbiters of what to do and what they want to do. The
