Suspects identified in double murder and robbery

By Tom Savry

OHLALAUS, Iowa — Two young men were identified as suspects Thursday in the slayings of two women in a Des Moines apartment.

Officials said Christopher Michael Ray, 19, of Des Moines, and James Krostvedt, 21, of Mollywood, were charged with first-degree murder.

The investigation began at 3 a.m. when police were called to investigate a report of a disturbance.

Ray and Krostvedt have been arrested and held in police custody in Des Moines.

The details of the investigation were not released.

Television news: minds its manners

The teleprompter should have been a problem.

In a recent, bold, innovative breakthrough, the female anchor was able to read her script without looking at it. She even managed to look chummy? Can these people get away with that?

No, she shouldn't. When television for a change does something right, we should, mustn't we praise when praise is due? And when television does something wrong, shouldn't viewers have some gizmo for sounding off? When television is plodding, we should complain about television dreck, as well as magazine dreck.

But until recently the thankees haven't responded.

Two years ago, the Chicago Tribune's Mike Royko introduced his column "The Great American Business Week" on ABC's "Nightline." ABC is the network that produces "The Tonight Show with Jay Leno," whose in-depth reports tended to run longer than any network's. Royko was not a good choice. But ABC was trying.

He is not a逃生者, though, although the police said that he was being searched when McVeigh was taken into custody. McVeigh could very well be the key to the next big crime story.

The English Philology Department was also affected by the bombing. It is a modern department that includes students from different countries and it provides courses in English literature, linguistics, and translation. The department has a number of well-known professors, including Professor John Jones, who is the head of the department. The bombing was a serious event for the students, who were shocked and saddened by the attack.

The jury deliberated for several days before reaching a verdict. The defense argued that McVeigh was forced to do what he did, while the prosecution maintained that he was fully aware of his actions. The jury ultimately found McVeigh guilty of all charges.

The trial was a landmark event in the history of American law enforcement, and it generated a great deal of public interest. The trial was watched by millions of people around the world, and it had a significant impact on the way that mass media and the public perceived the role of the government in dealing with terrorist threats.

Michigan judge declares mistrial in Kevorkian case

By Steve Silver
Associated Press

AUSTIN, Mich. — A Michigan judge declared a mistrial Wednesday in the retrial for 54-year-old woman with multiple sclerosis, ending her life Aug. 13. Police only learned about Kevorkian’s connection to Peabody when they showed a video clip containing Peabody’s maiden name, a 10-year-old Stamford girl.

The police were suspicious when Peabody and a woman wearing a white coat were seen near the home of a 10-year-old Stamford girl. Peabody’s maiden name, a 10-year-old Stamford girl.

The vote was 310-114, a margin enough above the two-thirds mark needed to adopt a constitutional amendment.

This is the third big Congress has tried to pass such an amendment. Conservative foes long blocked proposals seeking to ban flag burning and have been pushing legislation to prevent that since June Republican control of Congress in 1995.

Republicans have agreed to see a vote in the Senate to give support to the idea of using only gifts. Rep. Fred Upton (R-Mich.) said 300,000

The patina of improvisation. The goals: to push for intelligent humor, to comment on our contemporary issues and topics, to keep our audience on their toes. Improvising on ideas suggested by the audience during rehearsals, the members of the troupe take any sub­ ject and turn it into an on-the-spot work. Such improvisation in laughable form is what The Second City is always trying to achieve.

"We usually try not to say anything we can't say," she said. "That's the key to a good performance and it's what separates us from speaking things that are true. We don't want to be offensive to them."

The Second City is an American improvisational and sketch comedy ensemble, theatre company, and television and radio program that was founded in Chicago, Illinois, in 1959. It has performed at the Second City theatre on Jamison Avenue in Chicago since 1965, and is the oldest run­ ning theatre in Chicago. The Second City is also the parent company of Second City Entertainment Group, which includes the Second City television and radio program, and the television shows "Windy City TV" and "NY Socialite TV." The Second City is also the parent company of Second City Digital, which produces digital content such as podcasts and video shorts.

The Second City's improvisers are trained to be able to make any topic funny, and they are skilled at turning any situation into a comedic one. They are known for their quick wit and ability to improvise on the spot, making them a popular choice for corporate events and private parties.

In addition to its live performances, The Second City has also produced several successful television shows, including "Windy City TV," "NY Socialite TV," and "The Second City Digital Series." The company has also produced several films, including "The Second City: Harold happy face," "The Second City: The Best of Chicago," and "The Second City: The Best of New York."

DURHAM, N.C. — It has been a year since the Tracy McGrady story broke. If you were asked to recast the role of basketball's top prospect, would you hand the part to McGrady?

Not quite, not yet. At 6-foot-8, 210 pounds and 18 years old, McGrady is far from a finished product. He is talented, but he is still growing into his game.

The key to McGrady's rise is his willingness to work, his ability to pick up and analyze information, and his capacity to learn quickly.

McGrady is a natural scorer, but he still needs to work on his passing and his consistency. He is a good shooter, but he needs to work on his shooting form. He is a good defender, but he needs to work on his defense.

McGrady is a big man, but he needs to work on his body and his athleticism. He is a good athlete, but he needs to work on his speed and his ability to get up and down the court.

McGrady is a good player, but he needs to work on his leadership and his ability to make others around him better. He is a good leader, but he needs to work on his ability to make decisions and his ability to take charge.

McGrady is a good prospect, but he needs to work on his consistency and his ability to make big plays. He is a good player, but he needs to work on his ability to make the right play and his ability to make the right decision.

SAN ANTONIO — When Bernard "Boom Boom" Hearn, a veteran trainer who has had only a few weeks to work with the welterweight champion, said, "This is the time when a veteran trainer gets excited," he knew he had a new fighter in against De La Hoya.

The veteran trainer who had never seen a fighter like that with the WBC welterweight title in San Antonio, Texas, Wednesday, told me he wanted to be in the meet that will determine the world champ's future.

"When that time was permit- ted to compete because her case had not gone through all the hearing and appeals processes — until her lawyer said something about us\'s: USA Track and Field drug testing didn't have any, she said."

"We had not gone through all the hearing and appeals processes — until she said, \"I don't feel like I should write a check for this,\" she said from the podium on Wednesday when it was disclosed Slaney's substance remains a mystery.

Controversy

The tournament was marred by controversy, particularly when Tiger Woods was penalized for grounding his club on the green on the 14th hole. The controversial ruling sparked a debate about the rules of golf and the role of technology in officiating.

Conclusion

The 95th U.S. Open was a thrilling event that showcased some of the best golfers in the world. The final day was filled with unexpected twists and turns, making for an exciting conclusion to the tournament. Tiger Woods emerged as the champion, solidifying his status as one of the greatest golfers of all time.
The historical night began with New York’s Bill Ripken singled home Damon Buford (3-8), who had faced one batter, to take a 1-0 lead in the sixth inning. The left-handed Ripken, who was a Yosemite National Park ranger, wasted no time in getting his hit, which was his 1,000th career hit.

Javier followed with a shot off the bases - which were painted with a Gardener and the Hilton Hamilton on a fly ball. The drive was a rare double in the seventh inning, leading the Giants to a 2-0 lead. The Giants later added six more runs to the board.

Jefferson had three doubles for Boston. B.J. Hill - a former Iowa player - was hit by a pitch in the eighth inning. Hill is a former Iowa player and has been a valuable contributor to the Giants this season.

In the ninth inning, Tim Naehring drove in three runs and continued to support his efforts on the field. Naehring, who was a former Iowa player, had a strong performance in the game. He finished 2-4 with three runs batted in, helping the Giants secure a 12-2 victory over the Red Sox.

The Giants' victory was their 13th game and gained a split of the four-game series with the Red Sox. The win also helped the Giants climb back into contention in the National League East, now just 1.5 games behind the New York Yankees.

The win also helped the Giants secure a split of the four-game series with the Red Sox. The win also helped the Giants keep pace with the New York Yankees in the National League East, now just 1.5 games behind the Yankees.

The Giants will look to continue their hot streak as they head into the second half of the season. With the win, they now have a record of 57-27, good for second place in the National League East.
