UI may get rare Ph.D. program

Regents approval of a Ph.D. program in women's studies would make Iowa just third school in the nation with a freestanding program.

By Jenn Snyder
The Daily Iowan

A new athletic facility and a Ph.D. program in women's studies are among the UI projects the Iowa state Board of Regents could approve Wednesday.

The regents are scheduled to meet Wednesday and Thursday at the Iowa Lakeside Laboratory in Okoboji.

The Ph.D. program will supplement the UI's undergraduate minor and graduate concentration in women's studies. The program, established in 1974, has been growing and establishing distinction among women's studies programs nationwide.

"The Ph.D. program will put Iowa on the map," said program chairperson Florence Babb. "It's setting a precedent in the Midwest."

Babb said if the program is approved by the regents, it will be one of only three freestanding women's studies Ph.D. programs in the nation. Babb said the UI will be advertising nationwide to fill the proposed four spots per year in the doctoral program.

"It's going to be hard to choose students," Babb said. "We're expecting many very well-qualified applicants."

Babb said the program has been under consideration by the graduate college for years, working its way through several committees before making it onto Wednesday's docket. Babb said the original proposal for the program was drafted two years ago.

"We're a growing program, and we're still growing," she said. "We're larger now than we were when we wrote the original proposal."

The women's studies program has seven joint-appointed faculty. The first full-time women's studies faculty member will begin work this fall, and another will be added soon. Babb said the program does not plan to appoint additional faculty to support the Ph.D. program.

"We in the program are very pleased," Babb said. "It's going to be a strong program — I've been getting calls from all over the country wondering how soon we're going to launch (the Ph.D. program)."

A Ph.D. program in social work and a B.S. degree program in oral health science are among the other academic programs up for discussion at the meeting.

Also on the docket is a proposed athletic and recreational facility, planned for the corner of Mormon Trek Boulevard and Melrose Avenue. The facility would include an aquatics center, tennis courts, a visitors center and outdoor fields for soccer and softball.

The aquatics center is a strong selling point for the campus, UI officials say, because the pool located in the Fieldhouse is too small, to shallow and too short for modern competition. If a new facility were to be constructed, the Fieldhouse pool, built in 1928, would serve as a recreational and instructional facility.

The UI is requesting permission from the Regents Wednesday to proceed with project planning and start the architect selection process. The project would be funded by department earnings, through department gifts and other university resources yet to be finalized. Fund raising will be solidified when the facility goes further into the planning stages.

Other UI topics of discussion:

- Construction of a new parking facility on Newton Road
- Remodeling/Renovation of the Communications Center
- Financial arrangements for the new scoreboard at Kinnick Stadium
- Addition of 384 new courses, removal of 232 courses, and renaming of 122 courses
- A new medical education and biomedical research facility

Revamped sex offender laws questioned

Due to new state regulations, the public is more likely to be told who is a repeat sex offender.

By Kevin Ho
The Daily Iowan

A recent Coralville case of a sexual assault by a repeat offender has led to new state regulations meant to make the tagging of potential re-offenders more consistent.

Under the plan, all sex-crime offenders released from state custody will be evaluated on a case-by-case basis by Department of Public Safety officials as to whether they pose a threat to the public, said Steven Conlon, Department of Criminal Investigation Special Agent in-charge.

"It's just better defined and clarified. It's going to be resource demanding though," Conlon said. "Before there wasn't an assessment for each registrant."

However, Johnson County Attorney J. Patrick White said the regulations, which took effect Friday, make people feel safer than they should. Although Iowa has had notification laws since 1995, no one has ever been notified about a potential repeat offender.

"Any change is good, but to be honest, I don't think anybody is satisfied with the current system, and I don't think anybody will be," White said. "I have been dubious about the merit of the registration system. It tends to make people feel safe, and safety is not particularly increased."

White said the logistical coordination of notification also has hindered the effectiveness of such measures.

"Let's say John Doe sex offender is released under some new procedure that says he is likely to re-offend, how is broad notification going to work?" he

State misses tax deadline

Some tax returns have been delayed, and late checks will have interest added.

By Steven Cook
The Daily Iowan

Almost a quarter of Iowa residents are still waiting by the mailbox to receive their 1996 state tax refund — and when the check arrives, it may be larger than expected.

Additional data entry on the '96 tax returns has caused a delay for state tax officials, and for each month a return is delayed after June 1, the state will pay an additional .08 percent to filers, said Department of Revenue and Finance spokesperson Renee Mulvey. More than 300,000 Iowans who filed have not yet received their refunds.

Returns have been delayed an additional two weeks more than the average processing time for Iowa returns, which is usually 8-10 weeks, Mulvey said. But in order for the state to pay up, taxpayers must have filed a perfect return.

"If people file on time and have a clean (error-free) return, they should receive their refund by the end of July," Mulvey said.

This year, more information from tax returns is being entered into the DRF databases, including federal tax information, which is a major cause for the delays, Mulvey said. The information has always been on tax forms, but preparers are entering the information into the computer to speed DRF functions, such as audits.

Compared to this time last year, the number of returns that have been processed by the DRF is down about eight percent, Mulvey said.

To help in data entry, the DRF has brought in extra workers, and Mulvey said she believes they will be better prepared next year.

Errors could be another factor causing delays in returns, Mulvey said. She said math errors could delay checks an additional

Michael Conroy/Associated Press

Chicago Bulls fans flood the streets after the team's NBA championship celebration in Chicago's Grant Park, Monday.

The party continues in the Windy City.

CHICAGO (AP) — Hundreds of diehard Chicago Bulls fans crowded into Grant Park as the city awoke Monday, scrambling for a choice spot to pay homage to their basketball heroes.

The city's traditional championship celebration was scheduled to begin at mid-morning, despite the rain that soaked the early arrivals. The crowd was expected to grow into the tens of thousands by then, city officials said.

All of the Bulls players and coaches were expected to attend the rally — the fifth in the past seven years.

While fans gathered in the park to celebrate Friday's championship victory over the Utah Jazz again, police and prosecutors continued to tally the arrests and charges from over-exuberant fans who caused problems in the hours after the game.

Flag burning amendment is misguided

The Fourth of July is my favorite national holiday because it represents our shared pride as Americans. People from all sides of the political debate celebrate the principles of America's past and the promise of America's future. As we anticipate Independence Day, our elected representatives try to capitalize on the surge in patriotism. Members of Congress are introducing legislation to amend the Constitution to allow Congress to prohibit flag desecration. Debates on the amendment in the House and Senate are expected sometime between Flag Day (June 14th) and July 4th. Coincidence? Yeah, right.

The flag-burning amendment controversy is not new. Red-blooded patriots (mostly Republicans) have been all in a bunch since the Supreme Court ruled laws prohibiting flag burning unconstitutional in Texas v. Johnson (1989). Forty-eight states justified anti-desecration laws saying the government can limit offensive conduct or behavior that might disturb the peace or incite riots.

Kedron Bardwell

In a slim 5-4 decision, the Court disagreed. The Court ruled that burning the flag is protected expression, guaranteed by the First Amendment. The majority opinion eloquently states, "If there is a bedrock principle underlying the First Amendment, it is that the government may not prohibit the expression of an idea simply because society finds the idea itself offensive or disagreeable."

In response, Congress passed the Flag Protection Act of 1989, which the Supreme Court ruled unconstitutional in 1990. In 1995, the newly Republican House passed a flag burning amendment 312-120, well above the two-thirds majority needed. The amendment died in the Senate, just three votes shy of the two-thirds threshold. Supporters of the amendment are at it again, marketing it as a cure-all for our nation's supposed patriotic malaise. On June 11, the amendment passed by a margin of 310-114 in the House. The scary part is that it has a darn good chance of passing the Senate and being ratified by three-quarters of the American states.

Don't get me wrong. I don't throw a party every time I see some nut on the Capitol steps lighting ablaze and then trampling "Old Glory." I am personally disgusted by the lack of respect such a person shows for a symbol honored by most Americans. Yet, in the name of personal freedom, we Americans tolerate actions that we find morally reprehensible. That is the ideal, anyway. Unfortunately, the political left and right are better characterized by "free speech for me, but not for thee." I support a climate free from the politically correct "speech codes" of the left and the flag-burning laws of the right.

Amendment supporters cite polls showing 80 percent of the public favors a flag protection amendment. If America's respect for the flag is so deep, there is nothing to fear. A few flag burnings will not turn public opinion against our most cherished symbol. So why do we need the government to mandate respect for the flag? The power of the flag as an American symbol comes from the fact that respect for it is freely given. If disrespect for the flag becomes illegal, what principles will the flag come to represent? The flag symbolizes not public opinion at any point in time, but the enduring founding principles of the nation: individual liberty and freedom of protest.

When the American founders supplemented the Constitution with the Bill of Rights, they addressed the worry that the government might trample on the people's rights. The first ten amendments protect individual liberty. An amendment giving Congress the power to restrict flag burning does the exact opposite.

I am frustrated by the inability of my conservative colleagues to see the amendment for what it is: a government intrusion on personal freedom that could just as easily be used against their values as for them. All Americans should protect their right to protest a government when they feel it has done wrong. We are a nation born of protest, and it would be a shame if that ever changed.

I hope this Fourth of July is an opportunity for all Americans to reflect on the principles that define us. When this amendment comes before Congress, challenge those who would have you fear freedom. As for me, I will fly the flag with pride. And I will thank God for the freedom to do so, and the freedom of another to choose not to.

Any time spent on 'keg law' is wasted

The City Council of Iowa City may soon begin discussing a 'keg permit law' to be enacted in our fair city and there have been concerns expressed about the law's impact (or absence of one!) in Iowa City.

As of June 11, the City Attorney's office is collecting data and investigating the law as it is presented in other cities' municipal codes. Mayor Novik, who is in favor of some sort of measure, did not know when the council may actually address the issue. Some council members advocate waiting until the students come back in August.

"Should Iowa City do something like this?" is the question that will be posed, and the answer should be "No." Even debate on the issue would be a waste of time. Furthermore, any monies spent on enforcement could certainly be put to better use elsewhere.

Passing a 'keg permit' law would be redundant, unless it is intended for revenue and not public safety. The law enforcement arm of Iowa City is already empowered as it is to shut down any assembly that they deem a threat to public safety. Anyone who has been in Iowa City for more than twenty-four hours has witnessed this. A vote for this 'keg permit law' measure in any form is a vote of no-confidence in the law enforcement officers and, lest we forget, the citizens of Iowa City.

It is impossible to legislate responsibility. The Council, as much as they may try, cannot save us from ourselves. In this instance they have to trust in Providence and the inherent good in all men and women. Obviously, Iowa City is suffering from 'VEISHEA Fever' after witnessing Kevin Fair's soiree during RiverFest this year.

Extending too much power to the city that would be issuing the 'keg permit' is also a concern. A Cedar Falls statute states "the proposed event will not unreasonably interfere or detract from the promotion of the public health, welfare, safety, and recreation." This is a condition of issuance that is open to the interpretation of the Chief of Police, and if not met is grounds for revocation of the permit. It does not take a scholar of the Talmud to see just how broadly or narrowly this provision can be interpreted. A cranky Chief equals a multitude of disappointed partygoers.

The Iowa City Council should not waste time with this issue. Those people who would actually apply for, and get permits, are not the concern. Enacting a punitive law to try to prevent large parties by going after the pocket-books of the not-so-wealthy-but-trying-to-get-there college student is not the answer.

As stated by Todd Hefferman in last Wednesday's Viewpoints Page, "Drinking is a reflex to twentysomethings." The police already have the power to deal with rowdy parties, and exercise these powers on parties, with or without said permits.

Old bones create new controversy for science and Native Americans

When two college students from Kennewick, Washington, stumbled over a skull on the Columbia River bank last summer, they ignited a bitter controversy. Thinking they had found a missing murder victim, they called the police.

Forensic anthropologist James Chatters was called to examine the skull. The bone color alerted him to its age. He searched the river bank for the rest of the skeleton, finding it remarkably intact and lying in shallow water.

Archaeology, an online publication of the Archaeological Institute of America, describes the skeleton: "He had a long, narrow skull, a projecting nose, receding cheekbones, a high chin, and a square mandible. The lower bones of the arms and legs were relatively long compared to the upper bones. These traits are not characteristic of modern American Indians in the area, though many of them are common among Caucasoid peoples." Forensics experts who were asked to examine it and who were not told how old it was unanimously agreed it was a dead white male.

CAT scans revealed an Archaic Indian spear point embedded in the pelvis, while radiocarbon tests dated the skeleton at 9,200 years old, a little early for hitchhiking with Columbus.

Because of the skeleton's age, the Umatilla, Yakama, Colville, Nez Perce and Wanapan Indians have demanded the skeleton be repatriated to their tribes for immediate reburial. Under the Native American Grave Protection and Repatriation Act (NAGPRA), "any Native American human remains, funerary objects, sacred objects, and objects of inalienable communal property that are found on Federal or tribal lands after the date of enactment would be considered owned or controlled by (in this order) lineal descendants, the tribe on whose land it was found, the tribe having the closest cultural affiliation with the item, or the tribe which aboriginally occupied the area."

The Army Corps of Engineers determined the skeleton, dubbed "Kennewick Man," fell under NAGPRA and locked it away. Currently, tribal requests for the bones are under review.

Eight anthropologists filed suit, claiming the Army Corps of Engineers has violated the law in three ways. First of all, there is no evidence the skeleton falls under NAGPRA. The Caucasoid characteristics and age of the skeleton actually indicate no cultural affiliation with modern tribes, which are relatively recent. But NAGPRA never allowed for the possibility that current theories of North American human origins were wrong, and anything over a certain age has to be considered indigenous.

Their second complaint is that NAGPRA itself has been broken. NAGPRA allows for study of remains when the outcome of the study would be "of major benefit to the United States." Lawyers noted in a memorandum that the skeleton was critical to the Smithsonian's ancient populations project, which "will be of major benefit not only to the United States, but to the world."

The anthropologists also feel they are being denied access to the bones because of their race and religion; an interesting claim considering how Native Americans have framed the debate.

Sebastian LeBeau, repatriation officer for the Cheyenne River Sioux, was quoted in the Tri-City Herald as saying, "We never asked science to make a determination as to our origins. We know where we come from. We are the descendants of the Buffalo people. They came from inside the earth after supernatural spirits prepared this world for humankind to live here. If non-Indians choose to believe they evolved from an ape so be it."

Since the skeleton may be of European ancestry, withholding it from the scientists denies them inquiry into their ancestral past essentially because of their ancestral past.

According to the Seattle Times, Grover Krantz has theorized that "Caucasian-like people represented by the skeleton died out in a severe Western drought about 9,000 years ago and were replaced a few thousand years later by the ancestors of today's Indians." What if this, or countless other theories, are never investigated because Native American religions dictate they were first?

In Hourglass, Colorado, Native Americans allowed non-harmful study of bones before repatriation, showing peaceful compromise is possible. But the Umatilla feel any compromise represents total loss to the white man. This is understandable considering the historical treatment of Native Americans, even by anthropologists. They used to dig fresh graves and sell skulls like souvenirs. But anthropology has come a long way, and Kennewick Man may be an ancestor common to many peoples.

As Chatters said to The New Yorker, "We need to look at things as human beings, not as one race or another. The message this man brings to us is one of unification: there may be some commonality in our past that will bring us together." At least in theory.

Karrie Higgins' column appears Tuesdays on the Viewpoints Pages.

Offenders determined to be at-risk will then be reviewed to determine whether the public should be notified. Conlon said notification could range from informing neighbors to advising surrounding communities.

Local law enforcement authorities said they were not aware of the exact changes in policy, but procedures needed to be modified.

Coralville Chief of Police Berry Bedford said Coralville police wanted to notify the general public about James E. Johnson of Coralville, who had been convicted twice of sexually related crimes, but DCI officials denied their request. Six weeks after his release from jail, Johnson allegedly assaulted a 9-year-old boy in the Coralville Recreation Center May 21.

"We follow the law either way," Bedford said. "But it's definitely frustrating — the fact that we couldn't tell the public about other people who could commit crimes."

Police statements said Johnson was arrested on May 21 after police were dispatched to investigate the report at the Coralville Recreation Center.

Johnson allegedly confronted the boy in the men's locker room and forcibly performed oral sex on the boy and attempted anal penetration. The 9-year-old was not physically injured in the assault.

Johnson, charged with first-degree kidnapping, pleaded not-guilty to the charges and is currently awaiting trial, scheduled for August.

Conlon said state officials were trying to strike a balance between the public's right to know if a potential re-offender was moving to the area and that person's right to privacy.

"It's a delicate balance," he said. "These rules contain the most current legal background from other states that are currently in litigation."

The newly-adopted procedures will involve more public agencies, even allowing for members of the general public to voice any pertinent information that might affect the resulting categorization, up to and after the time of registration, Conlon said.

Conlon said the administrative changes were effective immediately, while a required public hearing to examine the new regulations is on the calendar, scheduled for July.

HUMAN RIGHTS

UI senior Ken Burkhart, who is openly gay, said if a state law is passed to protect gay workers, it will do much to improve working conditions for them.

"I moved here from California, where they have protection rights," he said. "I'm looking to be a teacher here, but I'm thinking would I want to live in Iowa, which I really like, or move back to California where I can never get fired (for being gay)?"

Burkhart says he rates Iowa "good, but not excellent" in its treatment of homosexuals in the workplace, and thinks that passing laws to protect them will make gay workers more comfortable.

"I think it would help a lot of people come out of the closet if they knew they couldn't get fired for it," he said.

The federal government discussed the issue last year, and it was defeated by only one vote, Shank said. Past efforts to convince Iowa legislators to protect gay workers in the Iowa Civil Rights Act have received a non-partisan response.

"In the past, they haven't chosen to say how they feel about these issues one way or another," she said. "But even if they discuss it, it's a big step."

The Iowa City Human Rights Commission addressed the ICRC on gay worker protection in December. Shank said they are addressing the group again to get information to the five new members that were appointed to the ICRC in May.

The Iowa Socialist Organization is staging a protest outside of St. Katherine's Wednesday at noon. The protesters will have three demands, said Tom Lewis, UI associate professor and member of the ISO.

"First, we want the rehiring of the six workers," he said. "Second, (we demand) the firing of Roger Crow, whose bigotry has to be kept out of the workplace. And third, we want the Iowa legislation to include protection for sexual orientation in the Iowa Constitution."

Iowa City protesters plan to meet Wednesday morning to travel to Davenport, where they will chant and carry signs outside St. Katherine's, Lewis said.

between rival gangs during the celebration, authorities said.

Conception Diaz, a 32-year-old printing company employee, was waiting for a bus home from work Friday night when he was shot, police said.

First-degree murder charges were filed against 17-year-olds Ariel Gomez and Jose Dominguez, 16-year-olds Cragon Jovanovic and Paul Yalda, and 15-year-old John Yacob, said spokesperson Marcy O'Boyle of the Cook County State Attorney's office. The five were charged as adults.

Bond was set at $500,000 each for everyone except Gomez, who was awaiting a bond hearing scheduled for Monday, O'Boyle said. Prosecutors said Gomez was the shooter and the incident was gang-related, O'Boyle said.

Police said several people were throwing rocks at passing vehicles in a predominantly Hispanic section of the city's northwest side shortly after the game. A gunman got out of a pickup truck and fired one bullet into the crowd, hitting Diaz in the back, officers said.

The death was the only one linked to the Bulls' celebration on Friday. Three people were killed following the team's 1993 title victory.

The escalating violence comes during a deadlock in the Israeli-Palestinian peace talks following the failure of the latest mediation attempt, this time by Egypt. The battle for land is at the heart of the Israel-Palestinian conflict.

"The peace process is hitting an impasse because of Israel's provocative policies and its refusal to implement agreements," Palestinian leader Yasser Arafat said Monday.

Palestinians were also angered by a non-binding resolution approved by the U.S. Congress last week recognizing Jerusalem as Israel's capital, despite Palestinian claims to the eastern sector of the city as a future capital.

Dozens of Palestinians, led by the senior PLO official in Jerusalem and the chief Muslim cleric, protested the resolution Monday at a rally outside the U.S. Consulate in Jerusalem.

"This is a blatant declaration of war against us," said the cleric, Ikrema Sarbi. In a letter to U.S. diplomats, the protesters warned that American interests in the Middle East would be hurt because Washington is increasingly losing credibility among Arabs.

The Gaza clash began when 30 Palestinians tried to tear down a fence near the Gush Katif settlement, arguing it was part of an illegal land grab. Israeli officials said the fence stood on land that was always part of the settlement.

After the protesters arrived, a bearded settler riding on a tractor shouted "Get out of here!" and began firing his pistol. He also tried to run down Palestinian cameramen and photographers.

Israeli troops eventually threw stun grenades to disperse the Palestinians, and shoved away journalists covering the protest.

But only about 100 people showed up Sunday at a "Father's Day greeting" to the masses from Alfredo del Mazo, the PRI candidate for Mexico City mayor. Few joined in the "Del Mazo" chants by about 100 based-in PRI activists.

Del Mazo's lackluster campaign in the first direct election of a Mexico City mayor in nearly 70 years is a sign of how his party's power has eroded in recent years. The capital's mayor has been appointed by the president since the PRI's 1929 founding.

Many Mexico City voters, sick of plunging wages, rising crime and enduring political scandals, say they are ready for a change when they vote July 6.

"The (PRI) candidates come and talk, but it's all lies. They say they'll help, but then they win and nothing happens," organ grinder Antonio Flores Pera, 40, said near the city's historic Zocalo Square.

He passed a hat while a partner turned the crank of a battered organ. Each earns about $3 a day, just more than half what they earned three years ago.

Still, the ruling party is running a traditional populist campaign.

Residents of Lomas de Zaragoza, a poor neighborhood on the southeastern outskirts of this city of 8.5 million, said the PRI distributed rice and beans a few weeks before the campaign rally.

Gregorio Alcantara Vallejo, making fragrant tortillas on a squeaking machine, said party members painted over graffiti on the walls the day before del Mazo arrived.

Jose Israel Cortes Santos, a 24-year-old truck driver, said PRI officials distributed plots of land in late May. Two of his friends were recipients; he hopes for a handout too.

"That's why I'm voting for him," he said of del Mazo.

Del Mazo laughed when asked about the food and land, saying the PRI never gives out such things. Maybe it came from the government, he said.

Maybe it did, but it hardly matters. For decades, party and government have been synonymous.

The PRI's colors — green, white and red — are the same as those of the Mexican flag. Its power is based on a patronage system that rewards groups pledging their members' votes. The PRI handed out jobs, assigned bus routes, gave taxi permits — even distributed school lunches.

But electoral reforms have made it harder for the PRI to use government resources for political benefit. The government also has fewer disposable resources following the December 1994 peso devaluation, which began an economic crisis.

The privatization of hundreds of state enterprises over the past decade also has weakened the PRI. Many workers once beholden to government — and thus the ruling party — for their jobs, are now in the private sector.

"The government is no longer in the position it was before to distribute populist goodies," said Rodolfo Stavenhagen, a sociology professor at the private Colegio de Mexico. "Basically, the system is breaking down because it isn't delivering any more."

Historic Ellis Island placed on preservationists' 'endangered' list

By Larry Neumeister Associated Press

NEW YORK — Preservationists called on Congress Monday to put up a few million dollars to save parts of Ellis Island, including a hospital where immigrants too ill to be admitted to America were isolated.

"It will be a national disgrace if we forget this side of the story, if we let the buildings crumble," said Peg Breen, president of the New York Landmarks Conservancy.

Breen spoke at a news conference against a background of broken windows and general disrepair on the south side of the island, where the hospital stands.

The National Trust for Historic Preservation has placed the island on its list of "America's 11 Most Endangered Historic Places."

The National Trust said a lack of funding for the National Park Service had led to poor maintenance on the island in New York Harbor, and it blamed Congress.

The restored Main Building was re-opened with great fanfare in 1990 and other buildings have been restored as part of the Ellis Island Immigration Museum. But Richard Moe, the trust's president, said many buildings badly need repairs.

"This is a wake-up call to all Americans," Moe said. "We cannot take our past for granted. Once these links are gone, they cannot be replaced."

The 26-acre island is part of the Statue of Liberty National Monument.

Breen said a couple of million dollars will keep the structures dry and standing while preservationists figure out a permanent rescue; she did not specify a dollar amount.

The New York Times reported Monday that preservation groups estimate costs ranging from $1.5 million to protect the buildings against the elements to as much as $40 million to make them safe for visitors.

Moe estimated that 40 percent of all Americans can trace their ancestry to Ellis Island immigrants.

Twelve million immigrants are estimated to have passed through Ellis Island between 1892 and 1954.

The other "endangered" sites on the National Trust's list are the Congressional Cemetery in Washington, D.C.; the Flathead Indian Reservation in northwestern Montana; the Bridge of Lions, St. Augustine, Fla.; the Cranston Street Armory, Providence, R.I.; and the Montezuma Castle, Montezuma, N.M.

Also, the Stillwater Bridge, Stillwater, Minn.; the Vicksburg Campaign Trail in Louisiana and Mississippi; historic buildings infested with Formosan termites in various Gulf Coast states; the Cathedral of St. Vibiana in Los Angeles; and Wa'ahila Ridge in Honolulu.

The National Trust, chartered in 1949, is a nonprofit organization with more than 270,000 members.

'Guru' fugitive caught in France

By Steve Farr Associated Press

PHILADELPHIA — A counterculture guru, convicted in absentia of murdering his girlfriend two decades ago and hiding her body in a trunk, has been captured in Europe after 16 years as a fugitive, the FBI said today.

Ira Einhorn, 57, was arrested without incident Friday at his converted windmill home in France's Bordeaux region, the FBI said in a statement this morning.

He had been using the alias Eugene Mallon, the name of an Irish friend, officials said.

Einhorn was captured in part with leads developed after a story was broadcast about him on the syndicated television program "Unsolved Mysteries," officials said. His Swedish girlfriend's application for a French driver's license also alerted authorities to Einhorn's whereabouts.

"I feel a tremendous (sense of) gratification and relief," District Attorney Lynne Abraham said at a news conference this morning. She said she looked forward to seeing him come before the judge who sentenced him.

"I guess persistence pays off," said Richard DiBenetto, a district attorney's office investigator on the case since 1981.

A judge in 1993 sentenced Einhorn to life in prison for murdering Helen "Holly" Maddux in 1977 and hiding her body in a trunk, which he put in a closet of his apartment.

Police found Maddux's mummified remains in Einhorn's apartment in 1979, 18 months after they say she was killed. The remains were discovered after the stench filtered into neighboring apartments.

Witnesses testified that Maddux, 31, had been trying to break off the relationship with Ein-horn. Einhorn's attorney, Norris Gelman, said that his client would challenge extradition to the United States.

"That may prevent him from coming back because the European courts don't like trials in absentia," Gelman said. "I think that essentially what one would look for in this kind of case, he would be sent back (only) if he gets a new trial. ... That's the best scenario."

Challenges could delay extradition up to a year, officials said.

Gelman said he had not spoken to Einhorn since 1981, when his client disappeared just before he was to stand trial.

Before making the arrest, French police put Einhorn under surveillance and reported that he was "very cautious, almost wary and suspicious," said FBI Special Agent Bob Reutter. After the arrest, he said, Einhorn was "cool, cold."

A brilliant and charismatic bear of a figure, Einhorn was a ladies' man and counterculture oddball given to such habits as answering his door stark naked.

Though he dressed in a dashiki and dirty jeans, sported shoulder-length hair and frequently smelled bad, Einhorn established a successful place as a New Age corporate guru-consultant in the 1970s with a global network of scientists, corporate sponsors and wealthy benefactors.

At his preliminary hearing in 1979, the courtroom was packed with professors, lawyers, civic leaders and other prominent Philadelphians who wanted to testify about his good character.

Supreme Court rules on abortion in Montana, Utah

By Richard Carelli Associated Press

WASHINGTON — In a ruling called "devastating" by one abortion-rights advocate, the Supreme Court on Monday let Montana outlaw abortions performed by physician assistants.

But the court also rejected Utah's bolder bid to make abortions more difficult to obtain.

The court's unsigned opinion in the Montana case was only its second abortion-rights decision since 1992, when the justices reaffirmed the core of the landmark 1973 ruling in Roe vs. Wade: Women have a constitutional right to end their pregnancies.

Most of the highest court's recent focus in the continuing social, political and legal battle over abortion has been on picketing and other demonstrations outside abortion clinics.

In a March 31 decision, the court unanimously upheld a Montana law requiring unmarried girls to notify a parent or get a judge's approval before undergoing an abortion.

By a 6-3 vote Monday, the justices reversed a federal appeals court ruling that had blocked enforcement of the Montana's 1995 law on who is allowed to perform abortions.

The court said past rulings made clear that states can require all abortions to be performed by physicians.

"Today, some of our worst fears about the limits of constitutional protection for women's reproductive health care decisions have come true," said Janet Benshoof of the Center for Reproductive Law and Policy.

"A majority ... has said that an abortion restriction ... designed to limit access to abortion — not protect women's health or promote informed choices — is constitutionally," Benshoof said. "It's a devastating acceptance of discrimination against abortion providers."

The court's ruling said the 1995 Montana law did not place an "undue burden" on women's right to abortion.

For the previous 21 years, the state had allowed licensed physician assistants working under the direct supervision of a physician to perform early-term abortions.

The 1995 law actually affected just one person. Susan Cahill who works in Kalispell, Mont., under the supervision of Dr. James Armstrong, is the only non-physician in the state who performs abortions.

Armstrong and Cahill challenged the law, and a federal trial judge refused to block its enforcement of the law.

But the 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals did by ordering the judge to restudy the case.

Monday's ruling said the 9th Circuit court was wrong.

"Even assuming ... that a legislative purpose to interfere with ... abortion without the effect of interfering with that right ... could render the Montana law invalid, there is no basis for finding a vitiating legislative purpose here," the court said.

Chief Justice William H. Rehnquist and Justices Sandra Day O'Connor, Antonin Scalia, Anthony M. Kennedy, David H. Souter and Clarence Thomas joined in the unsigned opinion.

Justices John Paul Stevens, Ruth Bader Ginsburg and Stephen G. Breyer dissented.

The challengers of the Montana law still can pursue a separate attack and argue that it is an unconstitutional "bill of attainder" — a criminal law aimed only at Cahill. But Monday's ruling called that claim "implausible."

Mother and 7-year-old daughter raped by man in woods

ANNANDALE-ON-HUDSON, N.Y. (AP) — A woman and her 7-year-old daughter were bound with wire and raped by a man whom they had as for directions while hiking in a Hudson Valley nature preserve.

The attacks occurred Saturday afternoon in the densely wooded T. Bays Unique Area, which borders Bard College campus.

No immediate arrests were made. The attacks were similar to unsolved rapes reported in April and October 1995 in the same area, Sheriff Scott Scoralick said.

The woman told authorities when she and her daughter got lost a maze of hiking trails and asked a man for directions, he pulled a carving knife and dragged the two into the woods.

After the man fled, the woman herself and her daughter. They were ferred cuts and bruises.

Police put up roadblocks and searched the area 90 miles north

Horror movie premier postponed because of unsolved killing

TOKYO (AP) — The Japanese premiere of the popular U.S. horror movie "Scream" has been delayed because of the recent slaying and beheading of an 11-year-old boy in the city of Kobe. "Scream," which depicts a series of killings of high school students in California, was to have opened at 50 theaters across Japan on Saturday. The Japanese distributor, Asmik Ace, delayed the opening, saying it worried about the film's effect though its plot bore no resemblance to the Kobe killing.

The boy's head was found near a junior high school in Kobe on March 11. A note stuck in the boy's mouth read "fools" and the killer bragged of enjoying nothing more than watching people die.

Japanese have been fearful the murderer is a serial killer. A girl died March 18 after being bludgeoned in the Kobe neighborhood where the head was found. On the same day, an girl was stabbed in the chest almost died to death.

More than 100 detectives have been investigating the case, but police have few leads. Another 500 police officers are patrolling the area daily. No suspect has been arrested in any of the crimes. "Scream," a scary spoof of horror movie cliches, has earned more than $100 million in box-office profits. Its U.S. release is in December.

New quarters feature state designs

By Dave Skidmore Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The majestic eagle gracing the back of the quarter for more than half a century may soon temporarily cede its place to such critters as California's bear and Louisiana's pelican.

A proposal before Treasury Secretary Robert Rubin would direct the U.S. Mint to produce 50 new designs, one for each state.

The familiar profile of George Washington would remain and the quarters would be the same size and weight, so they'd work in vending machines. But starting in 1999, five new designs for the quarter's reverse side would be issued each year for 10 years, replacing the eagle.

Collectors bored with the same old coin designs are enthusiastically lobbying for the plan. Under a law enacted last October, Rubin has until Aug. 1 to decide.

"This would be the biggest thing to happen in numismatics (coin collecting) in my lifetime," said Kenneth Bressett, president of the 106-year-old American Numismatic Association.

Critics worry that the plan would subject the Treasury Department to a flood of commemorative proposals from Congress. But backers say the new quarters would earn the government billions of dollars and teach children about the heritage of their states.

"Forgetting everything else, I just think it's fun," said Rep. Michael Castle, R-Del., whose own state, the first to ratify the Constitution, would lead the cavalcade of commemoratives. "When you get quarters for change, now you're going to look at them."

Castle, chairperson of the House Banking monetary policy subcommittee, sponsored the law requiring Rubin to mint the quarters or explain his reasons for declining. It also provided for a feasibility study, which was prepared by the Coopers & Lybrand accounting firm and released by Rubin's department.

The March telephone poll of 2,032 adults aged 18 and older, with a margin of error of 2 percent, found far more respondents favored the program, 51 percent, than opposed it, 11 percent. A substantial minority, 38 percent, was indifferent.

But, more importantly, 75 percent of those polled said they'd likely save some of the new quarters, just as Americans squirreled away an estimated 1.8 billion of the slightly more than 2 billion Bicentennial quarters produced in 1975 and 1976.

The study estimated 34 percent of American adults are still saving an average of 27.5 of the Bicentennial coins, picturing a colonial drummer on the reverse. It projected that 98 million adults each would collect an average of 7.8 percent of the 50-coin state sets. That doesn't include the quarters that might be saved by 52 million school-age youngsters.

Because the government spends about four cents to mint a quarter but sells them to the Federal Reserve for face value, it would earn between $2.6 billion and $5.1 billion over a decade, the study said.

Rubin, in a letter to Castle last week, said, "I have some personal reservations in light of the serious public policy concerns surrounding this unique program."

He didn't specify his misgivings, but the study raised several issues. Before the government earned any money from the program, it would need to spend money on a promotional campaign. There could be potential squabbles between state and federal officials over the designs for each state.

And the usual method for distributing coins, from the Federal Reserve through banks, couldn't guarantee the availability of all designs in every area of the country. When Canada issued 12 different quarters honoring its provinces and territories in 1992, there were shortages.

During the past 30 years, the only changes to American circulating coinage have been the introduction of the Eisenhower and Susan B. Anthony dollars and the Bicentennial quarter.

British Columbia will allow class action tobacco suits

VANCOUVER, British Columbia (AP) — Following the lead of U.S. state governments, British Columbia on Monday became the first Canadian province to demand that tobacco companies pay for health costs associated with smoking.

Premier Glen Clark said his government plans to enact legislation allowing class-action lawsuits against the tobacco industry. He called on Canadian tobacco companies to admit their products are toxic and addictive.

Clark said the tobacco industry would be given a chance to cover smoking-related health costs voluntarily before any steps were taken to force it to do so.

Eric LeGresley, legal counsel for the Non-Smokers Rights Association, described the British Columbia proposal as ground breaking in Canada.

"For the first time, this is recovering the cost of smoking-related health costs directly from the tobacco industry, not via the tax system," LeGresley said.

But an industry spokesperson said the government initiative is just a disguised bid to raise money.

"It appears that they've imported a U.S. idea that isn't working very well there and is likely to be inapplicable here," said Rob Parker, president of the Canadian Tobacco Manufacturers Council.

He said Canadian provincial governments already get higher tax revenues from cigarettes than U.S. states.

The British Columbia government makes $370 million a year in tobacco tax revenue, he said, while spending only $1.1 million on anti-tobacco programs.

"Those kind of figures lead me to say this (proposed legislation) is a thinly disguised tax grab," Parker said.

Canada's federal government has expressed general interest in seeking compensation from tobacco companies, but has yet to take any concrete action. Last month, premiers of the four Atlantic provinces pledged to look into suing tobacco manufacturers for health-related costs of smoking.

Global warming focus of summit

By Charles Hanley
Associated Press

UNITED NATIONS — Environmentalists, West European governments and others want to use next week's U.N. Earth Summit in New York to set firm targets for reducing carbon dioxide emissions to fight global warming.

But the Clinton administration is balking at specific goals, playing for more negotiating room before a critical conference in Japan in December, when governments are supposed to complete a treaty rolling back "greenhouse gases."

At the five-day Earth Summit, a U.N. General Assembly special session, more than 60 world leaders — from President Clinton and Russia's Boris Yeltsin to the president of the Pacific island nation of Micronesia — will review progress made since the 1992 Earth Summit in Rio de Janeiro.

At that historic gathering, governments agreed to pursue "sustainable development," global economic growth tied to environmental protection.

One outcome of the 1992 summit was a "framework" treaty on climate change in which developed countries pledged to cut greenhouse-gas emissions — carbon dioxide from automobiles, for example — to 1990 levels by 2000.

Such emissions add to an atmospheric blanket of gases trapping Earth's heat. Scientists estimate global warming may, among other things, cause ocean levels to rise almost two feet by 2100, flooding coastlines and islands.

But since few countries were meeting 1992's non-binding emissions goals, governments decided in 1995 to negotiate more demanding, legally binding reductions by the end of this year.

The framework treaty calls for such amendments to be presented to governments six months beforehand — in other words, this month. But the talks have bogged down.

"I would really not expect any closure on this issue until ... December," U.N. Undersecretary-General Nitin Desai said Monday.

Desai told reporters, however, that negotiations over a lengthy final document for the Earth Summit "will give us some indication of where people are headed," since global warming is a key item under discussion.

Island countries have taken the toughest stance in the talks here, proposing the summit document endorse a treaty that would cut carbon dioxide emissions by industrial countries to 20 percent below 1990 levels, with a 2005 deadline.

European summit eases tension

By Paul Ames
Associated Press

AMSTERDAM, Netherlands — Defusing a crisis that threatened the launch of Europe's single currency, EU leaders reached a compromise deal Monday that satisfies German concerns for a stable "euro" and French demands for job creation.

With that agreement out of the way, EU leaders can spend the rest of their mid-year summit focusing on future expansion into Eastern Europe — their next great turn-of-the-century project.

Monday's accord aims to keep the euro as strong as the deutschmark after its 1999 launch while agreeing to do more to reduce the ranks of Europe's 18 million unemployed.

"We avoided a huge conflict that could have threatened monetary union," Italian Prime Minister Romano Prodi said on the first day of the two-day summit. "That's creating a stronger Europe."

many insisted on tight finances while France's new Socialist government — facing record 12.8 percent unemployment — sought a commitment to spur growth and employment.

The German-inspired "stability pact" ratified Monday underpins the euro by fining nations that run up big budget deficits. "It is imperative to give a new impulse for keeping employment firmly at the top of the political agenda," the leaders said in a resolution.

Despite Monday's deal, the plan for a single currency in 1999 is still not certain. France and Germany both are struggling to meet the strict financial requirements for joining the euro.

Supporters insist the euro will bring long-term growth and jobs by easing trade among member countries and by giving Europe the economic strength to compete with the United States and Japan.

But ordinary citizens, stung by high joblessness, are increasingly dissatisfied with government austerity measures needed to qualify for the currency.

Having settled the Franco-German dispute, the leaders turned to what was supposed to be the main item of the summit: adopting a new EU treaty to prepare the union for a dozen newcomers. Officials said a deal there, too, was at hand.

An agreement on a new EU treaty would enable the EU to take in up to 12 new members — mostly from eastern Europe — over the next decade. Poland, Hungary and the Czech Republic are seen as front runners for membership.

An overhaul of the EU will involve modernizing its institutions and decision-making rules that have become unwieldy as the EU grew from six to 15 members.

France and Germany want the new treaty to give the EU sweeping more powers in areas currently left to national governments, including foreign affairs, defense and immigration. Britain, Denmark and others oppose that.

On the table are proposals allowing EU governments to take more decisions through a majority rather than a unanimous vote without abolishing any nation's veto right.

The draft also would allow those nations that want to forge ahead with closer cooperation in given areas to do so, while doubters stay on the sidelines.

In an example of that new policy of "flexibility," Britain and Ireland will opt out of the treaty clause handing control of immigration policy and border controls to the EU.

ANNANDALE-ON-HUDSON, N.Y. (AP) — A woman and her 7-year-old daughter were bound with wire and raped by a man whom they had asked for directions while hiking in a Hudson Valley nature preserve.

The attacks occurred Saturday afternoon in the densely wooded Tivoli Bays Unique Area, which borders the Bard College campus.

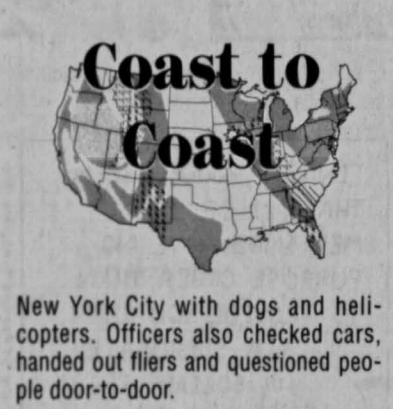

No immediate arrests were made.

The attacks were similar to unsolved rapes reported in April and October 1995 in the same area, Sheriff Fred Scoralick said.

The woman told authorities that when she and her daughter got lost in a maze of hiking trails and asked the man for directions, he pulled a camping knife and dragged the two into the woods.

After the man fled, the woman freed herself and her daughter. They suffered cuts and bruises.

Police put up roadblocks and searched the area 90 miles north of

Nichols' attorneys want McVeigh trial details kept secret

DENVER (AP) — Afraid of the spillover effect from Timothy McVeigh's conviction, lawyers for Oklahoma City bombing defendant Terry Nichols have asked to keep some details of McVeigh's trial sealed, including the cost of his defense.

In papers made public Monday, Nichols' attorney Reid Neureiter said releasing the taxpayer cost of defending McVeigh and the transcripts of sidebar conferences, could prejudice potential jurors and give prosecutors an unfair advantage when Nichols goes on trial. No date has been set.

McVeigh was condemned to death Friday for the April 19, 1995 bombing of the Oklahoma City federal building that killed 168 people. His attorney Stephen Jones has declined to say what McVeigh's defense cost, although estimates have been as high as $10 million.

U.S. District Judge Richard Matsch said June 3 that some of McVeigh's transcripts could be made public after a verdict. During the trial, he ordered sidebar arguments kept secret. He also barred disclosure of some evidence, and Jones' expenses, saying it could tip off prosecutors to the defense's strategy.

Neureiter said the cost of McVeigh's defense could be used to estimate the cost of Nichols' defense, and added that "speculation and criticism would be rampant."

Neureiter cited criticism from Sen. Lauch Faircloth, R-N.C., who said "many taxpayers are appalled by the very fact that they are paying for McVeigh's defense. ... But they don't realize how much they are paying. If they did, they would rise up and revolt."

Horror movie premiere postponed because of unsolved killing

TOKYO (AP) — The Japanese premiere of the popular U.S. horror movie "Scream" has been delayed because of the recent slaying and beheading of an 11-year-old boy in the city of Kobe.

"Scream," which depicts a series of killings of high school students in California, was to have opened at 50 theaters across Japan on Saturday. But the Japanese distributor, Asmik Corp., delayed the opening, saying it was worried about the film's effect even though its plot bore no resemblance to the Kobe killing.

The boy's head was found near a junior high school in Kobe on May 27. A note stuck in the boy's mouth called the police "fools" and the killer boasted of enjoying nothing more than seeing people die.

Japanese have been fearful that the murderer is a serial killer. A girl died in March after being bludgeoned in the Kobe neighborhood where the head was found. On the same day, another girl was stabbed in the chest and almost bled to death.

More than 100 detectives have been investigating the case, but police have few leads. Another 500 police are patrolling the area daily. No suspect has been arrested in any of the crimes.

"Scream," a scary spoof of horror movie cliches, has earned more than $100 million in box-office profits since its U.S. release in December.

Glimpse at the Globe to escalate their war as many fear, or hammer out a peace deal with the help of mediators.

France, Congo's former colonial power, had said all along that the only mission for its 1,200 troops was to evacuate foreigners.

With most foreigners gone, French soldiers loaded crates of computers and furniture onto planes Monday and began their withdrawal to neighboring Gabon and nearby Chad. The pullout was expected to take the rest of the week.

The French troops have evacuated nearly 6,000 people since fighting broke out in this Central African country on June 5. Officials say most of those who want to leave are gone.

Fighting subsided Monday between the forces of President Pascal Lissouba and those of Gen. Denis Sassou-Nguesso. Fierce battles took place Sunday as the two sides appeared to be preparing for an all-out fight for the airport, now controlled by French troops.

There have been calls to replace the French soldiers with a multinational peacekeeping force. United Nations spokesman Fred Eckhard, speaking at U.N. headquarters in New York, said the idea was raised Monday at talks in Libreville, Gabon, attended by representatives of both Lissouba and Sassou-Nguesso.

The region is awash with refugees and weapons because of fighting in recent years in Somalia, Rwanda, Burundi and the former Zaire.

Only weeks ago, thousands of U.S. and European soldiers were deployed here because of the civil war in neighboring Zaire, now called Congo. When the war ended, most of the soldiers —

IRA double-killing threatens peace talks in Northern Ireland

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) — The Irish Republican Army killed two policemen with point-blank shots to the head Monday — slayings that threaten the British government's peacemaking efforts in Northern Ireland.

Britain's new Labor government immediately broke off contacts with the outlawed group's allies, the Sinn Fein party.

Two IRA members shot police officers John Graham, 34, and David Johnston, 30, about noon near an Anglican church in the religiously divided town of Lurgan, 35 miles southwest of Belfast. Both men were married and fathers of young children.

The gunmen abandoned their car a few miles away in Lurgan's biggest Catholic district, Kilwilkie, where walls are painted with Sinn Fein slogans and murals of armed IRA figures. The car was then set on fire.

The slayings make street battles all the more likely next month between pro-British Protestant marchers and Roman Catholic demonstrators determined to block Protestant parades on their turf.

A showdown over the annual Orange Order parade in Portadown, next to Lurgan, caused widespread rioting last summer. The parade, by Northern Ireland's largest Protestant fraternal organization, is scheduled for July 6 this year.

Prime Minister Tony Blair's government had restored contact with Sinn Fein on May 21, three weeks after his victory in a national election in which Sinn Fein also prospered, winning two of Northern Ireland's 18 seats in Britain's Parliament.

Prairie Lights Books presents its own summer blockbusters

The Iowa City bookstore continues its tradition of quality, nationally known guest readers this summer.

By Ben Schnoor and Liz Schuerman The Daily Iowan

An author reads in a hypnotic voice, drawing the audience into a plot and scenery far removed from the bookstore where they are gathered.

The Summer Reading Series features poets, fiction writers and non-fiction writers reading from their own works.

Paul Ingram, buyer for Prairie Lights, said the series gives the people of Iowa City a wide range of literary opportunities.

"For a town like Iowa City that has a lot of writing activity, it is a nice addition to what a bookstore has to offer," Ingram said.

Ingram said the series also helps to get the Prairie Lights name out into the community and improves business.

"Just knowing that there will be readings every week gets people excited," Ingram said.

"It's just one more reason to come down to the bookstore. It's also great publicity, because it gets the name of the store out on the radio."

The diverse lineup for this summer includes gay mystery writer Mark Zubro (June 17), New York Book Critics Circle Award-winner Bharati Mukherjee (June 27), Iowan poet Rustin Larson (July 10), humorist Mary Kay Zuravleff (July 15) and neurosurgeon Marc Flittner (July 28).

Tonight's reading will feature Lance Olsen, a post-cyberpunk science-fiction writer and an alumnus of the UI Writers' Workshop.

Olsen will join the long list of well-known writers who have read at Prairie Lights in the past, including Michael Ondaatje, Jane Smiley, Lee Smith and Amy Tan.

"We always get a good lineup," Ingram said. "All of the readings this summer will be good to listen to."

Hanson, Spice Girls bring pop back to life

The downtrodden mood of early '90s music has subsided and made way for the sugary sweet sounds of pop music.

By Katharine Horowitz The Daily Iowan

Put on a happy face and don the white go-go boots, because pop music is back on the charts and more bouncy than ever.

With groups like the Spice Girls and Hanson scoring in the Top Five on the Billboard Charts, it may not have the '80s hairspray or blue eyeshadow, but pop is making a comeback.

"The Top 40 pop bands have always been a happy music place," said Dick Stadlen, program director of radio station 104.5 KDAT. "Music is kind of cyclical with the times, and times are getting better now. The economy is up, people are happier, so it's time again to not be so serious and have some fun and that's what pop music is reflecting."

The Spice Girls were at No. 1 one last week on the charts, dropping this week to No. 3, while Hanson scored No. 5 this week, down one from No. 4 of the previous week. Sharing the Top 10 Billboard albums was Paul McCartney who also is making a large comeback, said Rebecca Hansen, manager of Musicland, Old Capitol Mall.

"You'd be surprised, because there are a lot of kids who like the classic groups from back in the '80s," Hansen said. "Larger, older artists like James Taylor and McCartney are making a big return. It's a trend, though. It goes in cycles like styles of clothing."

However, trend or not, the return of pop has been giving managers like Hansen and Mike McConnell, manager of The Field House bar, 111 E. College St., good business.

Pop music will keep growing, getting bigger. Right now for this latest generation of kids, it's something new and fresh and different. It's uplifting and upbeat — a part of a phase of a generation that is happening now.

Rebecca Hansen manager of Musicland, Old Capitol Mall, on the surge of pop music

"We get enough requests for the Spice Girls and Hanson," McConnell said. "And as long as the crowd wants it, that's what they're going to get. Pop music is good to listen to and appeals to everybody. It's not really a male or female or race thing, it's good music that's broad-based and simple. You don't have to be a dance expert to dance to it."

The dance appeal also coincides with an appeal to kids of an older generation, namely that of parents, Stadlen said.

"Pop music is upbeat, has no heavy message, is toe-tapping and you can hum along to it," he said. "It's also nice to hear music that parents can listen to without scratching their head and wondering 'What's the appeal of this?'"

Musicians have made numerous sales of the Spice Girls and Hanson, the latter group's popularity Hansen attributes to their clean-cut image, a change from the grunge look or the somber, quiet artist portrayal, she said.

In addition to their talent, she said, the trio is well-mannered and polite in public, succumbing only to the expected prepubescent humor. But their conduct is the secret to their success, Hansen said, and their popularity with the public.

"Pop music will keep growing, getting bigger," Hansen said. "Right now for this latest generation of kids, it's something new and fresh and different. It's uplifting and upbeat — a part of a phase of a generation that is happening now."

"Hanson are very talented young boys," she said. "They're very well-mannered and polite, which has a lot to do with their success. The public appearances they make to promote their album go over very well with people."

The success of the squeaky clean image and sound will continue hitting big in the charts and the ears of listeners, Hansen said, primarily thanks to a new generation of fans tuning in.

Music is kind of cyclical with the times, and times are getting better now. The economy is up, people are happier, so it's time again to not be so serious and have some fun and that's what pop music is reflecting.

After 'Ellen,' Southern Baptists may boycott Walt Disney

DALLAS (AP) — Last June, the Southern Baptists gave Disney one year to change its ways. Instead, Disney offered the coming-out of "Ellen."

At a three-day meeting beginning Tuesday, the 15-million-member Southern Baptist Convention will decide whether to boycott the Walt Disney Co. because of its "gay-friendly environ-ment."

Leaders of the nation's largest Protestant denomination said Disney dug its own grave when Ellen DeGeneres and the character she plays on Disney-owned ABC disclosed that they are lesbians.

"There seems to be a feeling that Disney has ignored us, and the crowning blow was the out-coming of Ellen," convention spokesperson Herb Hollinger said.

Riled by Disney's offering of health benefits to partners of gay employees, "Gay Days" at Disney theme parks and some Disney movies, the Southern Baptists last year put Rev. Richard Land in charge of monitoring Disney. He is president of the convention's Christian Life Commission.

Land said he will recommend a boycott of Disney theme parks and stores.

"We heard complaints, from Disney employees even, that there was a corporate change on top to move Disney from a family-friendly environment to a gay-friendly environment," he said.

More to Herky than meets the Hawkeye

Becky Gruhn

From donning a military uniform during the Korean War, to marching alongside Hayden Fry's troops at the Alamo Bowl, Herky the Hawkeye has represented the University of Iowa for nearly 50 years.

The lovable yellow bird that has become an icon of the Hawkeye state was born in 1948 when Richard Spencer III, an instructor of journalism at the UI, created a nameless cartoon character.

After approving the drawing as the university's official mascot, the UI athletic department staged a statewide contest to acquire a name for the newly born symbol that represented the Hawkeyes. John Franklin, a Belle Plaine alumnus, was the man who suggested the name Herky.

"You are seen as Herky. People expect Herky to be more nuts, they expect Herky to do crazy things and to just have fun."

Matt Hannell, the 1997-98 Head Herky

For five years, Herky remained merely a symbol confined to paper. It wasn't until a football game in the mid-1950's that Herky came to life and became the crazy, stunt-pulling bird fans have grown to love.

Members of the Delta Tau Delta fraternity house, decided to transform the character in a walking, talking mascot.

The transformation was the beginning of a longstanding tradition. Ever since the first Delta Tau Delta was fitted for the Herky costume, it has been passed on yearly to members of the fraternity.

"It's the treasure of our house," 1997-98 Head Herky Matt Hannell said.

Because Herky has so many obligations representing the UI, duties for the 1997-98 academic year will be divided among house members Marcus Dunstin, Jason Dickens, Slater Bayliss and Hannell.

"We don't get paid for this, we don't get early registration or any compensation like that," Hannell said. "Primarily, it is just an extracurricular activity our house does so that people like myself can enjoy the games and do something that not too many other people can do."

Delta Tau Delta members who accumulate the most hours of community service are chosen for the Herky team. Hannell estimates he'll put in between 80 and 110 hours of "Herky time" during his year as Head Herky.

"We basically try and accommodate everyone who gives us a call and wants us to make an appearance as Herky," Hannell said.

Although pumping up the crowds is high on Herky's priority list, it is the looks on small children's faces that puts the job in perspective for Hannell.

Julie Bill/The Daily Iowan

Herky the Hawk waves to the crowd at Kinnick Stadium during a Hawkeye football game last fall. Herky leads the team on to the field and also harrasses the other school's mascot.

"You can go to the Ronald McDonald House, spend an hour there, and feel better than you have in weeks because you've made so many little kids happy." From passing the ball to Andre Woolridge to leading the football team out of the tunnel with Hayden Fry, Herky has a role in nearly every major sporting event at the UI.

"That is one of the best parts about being Herky," Hannell said. "Having the crowd go completely nuts is just an awesome feeling. The crowd is the best part and that's what I do it for."

Hannell said once he and the other Delta Tau Deltas put on the black-and-gold gear, they are transformed into "the bird."

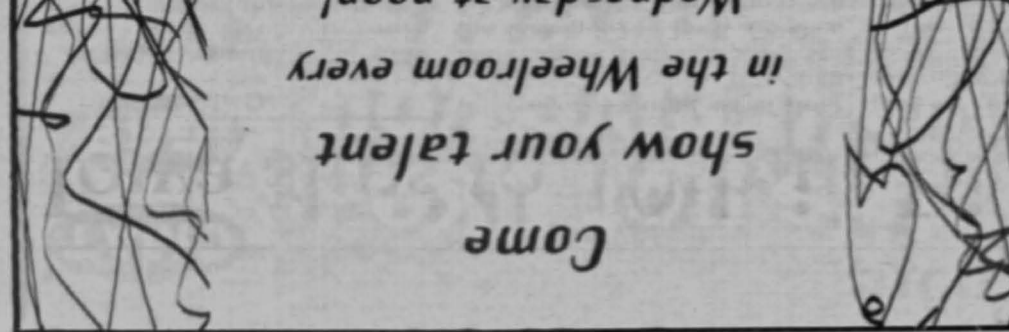

"I really think we change when we get into the suit," Hannell said. "You don't have to worry about people looking at you and saying, 'hey, that's Matt Hannell.' You are seen as Herky. People expect Herky to be more nuts, they expect Herky to do crazy things and to just have fun."

"It's one of the biggest blasts you could ever have on campus and you don't have to drink to do it. I can vouch that when you see Herky out there he is sober everytime. The adrenaline is what makes us wacky."

If Hannell has it his way, the wackiness will only grow during the 1997-98 athletic seasons.

"We were hoping to add a little golf cart to the routine this year," Hannell said. "But we didn't think Hayden Fry would appreciate us doing doughnuts on the grass in Kinnick."

"The amount of stunts we can do in the suit is expanding because we have new heads that are lighter and make us more mobile. You should expect a little more craziness and more pranks out of Herky this coming season."

Hawks rule Big Ten, finish 5th in nation

Becky Gruhn

Three years ago when Iowa coach Gayle Blevins and the Hawkeye softball squad stepped on the diamond at the Women's College Softball World Series for the first time in school history, it was an accomplishment that surprised many.

Three years later, it has become a tradition.

After back-to-back third-place finishes at the World Series, Iowa made a return trip in 1997 hoping to top an already stellar season. The Hawkeyes opened the double elimination tournament with a 3-2 victory over conference foe Michigan and were one win away from the semifinals.

But consecutive losses to West Coast powers Washington and Fresno State forced the Hawkeyes to settle for a fifth-place tie and end the season with an impressive 52-9 record.

"This was a real special team for me," Blevins said following the season-ending loss to Fresno State. "I'm incredibly proud of our team."

Although Iowa fell short of reaching the national championship game, it was able to reach a goal that had eluded the team for seven years — the Big Ten title.

The Hawkeyes didn't just win the conference championship, they rewrote the record books. Iowa became the first team in league history to finish the season undefeated at 22-0.

Because of that accomplishment, prior to the Big Ten post-season tournament Michigan State coach Jacquie Joseph said Iowa had set a new standard for other conference teams to follow in the future.

An aspect Blevins took an extreme amount of pride in was the Hawkeyes' composure in tight ballgames and all-around desire to win. That desire to play was never as clearly visible as on April 13 in a double-header against Indiana.

Two days prior to the contest, over five inches of heavy, wet snow had accumulated at the Hawkeye Softball Complex in Coralville. Instead of surrendering to the wintry conditions and canceling the series, the entire roster and coaching staff grabbed shovels and spent countless hours removing load after load of snow from the diamond and outfield.

The motivation to tackle the seemingly impossible task was simple said second baseman Erin McGee.

"We love our field and our fans," McGee said after defeating the Hoosiers. "Anytime we have the opportunity to play here with these people supporting us, we want to do that."

The pair of victories against Indiana turned out to be the 10th and 11th of a Div. I leading 24 straight. The streak ended in the Big Ten Tournament against Michigan.

Six Hawkeyes who donned the black and gold for the last time in the '97 World Series were Brandi Macias, Kari Knopf, Lea Twigg, Brigit Cornish, Christy Hebert and Jenny

McMahon. "Our six seniors have been a part of all three World Series," Blevins said. "When we came here for the first time it was uncharted territory. I can't say enough about what they've given this team."

Men's gymnastic team finishes strong in NCAA

Chris James

A third-place finish at the 1997 NCAA Men's Gymnastics Championships capped a stellar year for the Iowa men's gymnastics team. The Hawkeyes also broke numerous team records and finally defeated Ohio State — the defending NCAA champions.

Iowa's finest day came in the first round of the NCAA meet on April 17, when the Hawkeyes not only knocked Ohio State out of the team competition, but qualified for the second round along with California and Oklahoma. Iowa was given a shot at its first national title since 1969.

The California Golden Bears ultimately were too much for the Hawkeyes and the Sooners and won the national title with an NCAA record 233.825 points. Iowa finished third with 231.800 team points.

But defeating the Buckeyes for the first time in seven tries and getting an opportunity to win the national crown was what everyone was talking about afterward.

"We had a terrific season," Iowa head coach Tom Dunn said after the NCAA meet. "Knocking off Ohio State was a good feeling but that wasn't our goal coming into the championship meet. We had a shot at a national title and that's a big accomplishment."

Iowa missed the cut for the second round of competition in 1996 and finished fourth. This year's finish was the highest for the Hawkeyes since the championship season in '69.

The Hawkeyes capped off the NCAA meet by crowning six All-Americans in the individual competitions including junior Chris Camiscioli and senior David Nemovitz on the still rings.

Freshman Brian Hamilton, who won the floor exercise during the first day of competition with a 9.875, grabbed All-American Honors in the same event. Iowa freshman Anthony Petrocelli was the Hawkeye's top All-American finisher during individual competition, grabbing second place on the vault.

Petrocelli threw a scare into Ohio State All-American Blaine Wilson as Wilson had to nail his final vault to edge out Petrocelli for the vaulting title with a score of 9.81.

"I didn't look when he vaulted," Petrocelli said after losing out to the Olympian.

Dunn said he was especially pleased with the way his team finished strong after the team finals on Friday.

"Three of the four guys who were All-Americans are coming back," Dunn said. "I'm excited to know that we have such talent returning."

Although the '98 season will be something to look forward to, the '97 season will be one to be remembered. The Hawkeyes were ranked as high as second in the nation at one time, notched a 4-2 dual meet record and a pair of second place finishes at the Big Ten meet and the NCAA East Regional.

Iowa also set team records during the year for best team score (230.70 at Big Tens), and scores on the pommel horse (39.050 vs. Michigan State), the still rings (38.975 vs. Minnesota), the parallel bars (38.65 vs. Nebraska), and vault (38.65 at Big Tens).

In addition, Iowa senior Tyler Vogt tied an individual record when he scored a 9.85 on the still rings. Paul Wozniak had the same mark for Iowa in 1989. Junior Jason Rogers also tied an individual record when he scored a 9.80 on the vault, matching the score by former Hawkeye Stu Breitenstine in 1992.

California coach Barry Weiner said Iowa will be a team to watch in the near future.

"They had a great meet and have some solid talent returning, so I wouldn't doubt them being one of the top teams in the country again next year," Weiner said after the meet.

Iowa loses six seniors from this year's team but, according to Vogt, will be back in the national title hunt next year.

"They have a great team returning," Vogt said. "Our (senior) class accomplished a lot, but I think with the guys they have coming back, they could be in this same spot or better next year."

Times change. Peace rallies, beads and draft cards have been traded in for e-mail, body piercing and gold cards. And while a dollar's worth of gas got you to school in the old VW, today's students need to be a lot more financially smart. The smart money is in Perpetually Free Checking at Perpetual Savings Bank. It's easy to see why:

- No minimum balance
- No monthly service charges
- No per check fee

Hey, I guess that would be...free. And if you want an ATM or Check Access Card, they're only $7.50 for the year, with no transaction fees. Iowa slips to 10th in Big Ten

In a sport dominated by individual egos, Tom Derouin stands out from the rest. The Iowa tennis captain said at the beginning of his senior season that he would trade all the personal accolades in the world for team success. Unfortunately for Derouin, that wasn't quite enough. The Hawkeyes started out the season winning six of their first eight matches, but then fell on hard times, closing out the season 8-14. Iowa finished 10th at the Big Ten Conference Tournament on April 24. Head coach Steve Houghton said despite the low finish, he was not disappointed by his team's effort. "Obviously, you're not excited to be playing for 10th, but I told the team I thought we played real well," Houghton said. "We played about as well as we could." The Hawkeyes picked up their first Big Ten win in over a year on Feb. 23, when they upset Ohio State 6-4. J.R. Childley, who played at the No. 6 singles position, defeated Buckeye Shaun Crichlow, 5-7, 7-5, 6-4 to clinch the win for the Hawkeyes.

Coach Larry Wieczorek's men's cross country team had a very solid season despite falling just short of a few goals. Iowa was pushing for a top-four finish in the Big Ten, but came up in the sixth spot instead.

"At the Big Ten meet we ran pretty well, but not as well as we'd hoped," Wieczorek said. "I think overall it was a real positive, although in athletics you usually fall a little short of your goals."

As a team, the Hawkeyes took the top spot at the UW-Parkside Invitational and recorded the highest finish at the NCAA district meet under Wieczorek.

Individually, Hawkeye sensation Stetson Steele was Iowa's top finisher at the Big Ten meet and earned All-Conference honors. Jared Pittman also made the All-District team after his great performance at the district meet.

Coach Wieczorek will have a very strong nucleus returning. Steele and Pittman will join forces with Mike Bakker, Ravi Bhawe, Michael Marotta and Chad Schwitters to give the Hawkeyes a talented and experienced group of runners.

Someone who could prove to be very valuable to the team is track star Michael Layne, who red-shirted in cross country last year.

"Mike is an All-American who has done a great job in track," Wieczorek said. "By the end of the cross country season last year, he was training with our best guys. He was running right there with Stetson (Steele) and Pittman."

The biggest loss will be Chris Peters, who served as the captain and leader for the team this year.

Peters, a fifth-year senior who walked on as a freshman, turned into one of Wieczorek's most solid performers. Peters drew a lot of praise from Wieczorek throughout the year, especially after the Big Ten meet, where he placed 18th.

"I always feel that anyone who places in the top 20 in Big Ten cross country has really done an outstanding job," Wieczorek said.

"For him to finish up his career like that, it meant a lot to me and I know it meant a lot to him, too. That was someone who really stepped up in his fifth and final year."

Welcome to the University of Iowa Loveline and hypnotizing on deck for the 'Hawkeye Hello'

Kristin Bauer
In a quest to help students ease into the new college lifestyle, the UI Welcome Week will introduce new students and refresh old students, to the ups and downs of college life.

The program is coordinated by UI Residence Services, Orientation Services and the Iowa Memorial Union. Celine Hartwig, the education program coordinator of residence halls said they designed Welcome Week so new students can feel comfortable with the UI and be familiar with the environment.

The week starts off on Sunday night with a new event called "WOW (Week of Welcome), Here at last" at Carver-Hawkeye arena. New students will be able to talk to UI President Mary Sue Coleman, learn about traditions at the UI and listen to a local band. The Campus system will be bringing students to the arena from the Residence Halls and other parts of campus.

"We are expecting about 3,000 students to attend, which is really great," Hartwig said. On Monday night in the Triangle Ballroom, Professor Jay Holstein is scheduled to give his annual "on stage live" speech to a traditionally packed house.

"Professor Holstein is an excellent speaker. If you have never seen him, it is well worth your time," Hartwig said.

Holstein said he will talk mostly about what the incoming freshmen have a right to expect from the UI.

"I just want to talk to them about what they put into college is what they are going to get," Holstein said.

The week continues on with a range of activities for the new students including an ice cream social in Hubbard Park, a job fair at the Union and a popular hypnotist.

"We usually have the most students turn out for the hypnotists," Hartwig said. "It is in the Main Lounge at the IMU and it is usually full."

The last event scheduled is "Brighten your day the IMU way," which will help introduce student to the activities and offices at the IMU.

Welcome Week

This year's Welcome Week activities include:

- August 24 at 7:30 p.m., "WOW...Here at Last!" in Carver-Hawkeye Arena
- August 25 at 7 p.m., "Jay Holstein...on Stage, Live!" in the Triangle Ballroom of the IMU
- August 26 at 7 p.m., "Ricky Kalmon...Get Hypnotized!" in the Main Lounge of the IMU
- August 27 from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m. at Hubbard Park, an ice cream social
- August 27 at 7:30 p.m., "You're on the Loveline with Dr. Drew & Adam Carolla" in the Main Lounge of the IMU
- August 28 from 9 a.m. to 6:30 p.m., "Brighten Your Day the IMU Way" at the IMU interesting things to do at the Union," Hartwig said.

The activities are all open for all students even though they are directed at the freshman, Hartwig said, it will be great if everyone comes out to enjoy the events.

Hello! My name is Dave, and I don't go here anymore

Do you know me? You shouldn't, and you probably never will - I am the ghost of Hawkeye past. Actually, I'm a graduate from last May. An alum. A Hawkeye through and through 'til the day I die. And you will be, too, if you have the character to persevere.

Not that there's any rush. You've heard it all before, but you're in for four-to-six of the best years of your life. There are times ahead you'll never forget. Or, if you're lucky, there will be times you'll be unable to remember, like football tailgates, late-night poker games or fulfilling your foreign language requirement.

I remember once I got so messed up before an Iowa-Northwestern game that I have no recollection of opening kickoff... umm... never mind. I sometimes forget parents read this thing, too. Which is why I'm so high on the Newman Center, Hillel and Old Brick, three very upstanding religious centers to teach you in the ways of 2 percent and skin.

Anyway, by now many of you have either concluded or currently are attending your orientation. You're carrying glossy black-and-gold folders with orientation leaders putting on skits like, "The Joys of Being in bed by 10 p.m.," and "Is that the Enchilada Platter or Syphilis Scabs from my Night of Excessive Partying and Unprotected Relations?"

I remember my orientation, but I'd rather tell you about some options outside of the traditional UI programs.

The first thing you'll need to do is get involved in as many legal activities as possible with your residence-hall neighbors. There are dozens of people per floor, many of with whom you will get along with and literally become lifelong friends. This is what forms the trunk of the UI Friend Tree. You meet... say... six people over the course of the first year. Of those six, you stay in contact with four into your sophomore year.

By this time, most of you are 19 and able to frequent most establishments around Iowa City. Since you'll be joining at least one organization, as will your four friends - unless of course they go Greek, then they have many, many "brothers" or "sisters" who are more than happy to take their dues. Anyway, through the magic of networking, you'll suddenly find yourself with thousands upon thousands of friends, three months from graduation and wondering what in the hell to do with your life.

But I'd like to stay focused on the tasty cream filling, the stuff in between that is the most enjoyable.

After you've met at least one person, you find what is to be -

Men's Sports

Future is bright for Iowa track

Chuck Blount

Under the guidance of a new, optimistic coaching staff, the Iowa men's track and field team established itself as one of the most up-and-coming programs at the UI.

At the Big Ten Indoor Championships, hosted by Iowa, the Hawkeyes broke into the upper echelon of the conference with a fourth-place finish. It marked the highest finish since 1967 for an Iowa track team.

Despite the overly impressive team tally, Wiecezorek was still grinding his teeth due to missed opportunities that kept his team from third, exemplifying the new coach's drive to thrust the program into the national scene.

"We're real happy with fourth, but disappointed we didn't get third," Wiecezorek said following the meet. "The (4x400) relay would have pushed up into third, that is perhaps our best event on the track."

Anchored behind conference indoor championships from George Page (200-meter dash) and Bashir Yamini (long jump), Iowa finished just one and one-third points behind third-place Minnesota.

Yamini later went on to the NCAA Indoor Championships where he came out of the shadows to finish second in the nation. Yamini, who took time off from track due to football obligations, continued his impressive feats through the outdoor season. In his first jump back in the outdoors, he cleared a lifetime best 26' 2 1/2" en route to snagging an NCAA outdoor qualification.

"On paper he's not the best (in the country)," Wiecezorek said. "But I can see him close that gap in a hurry. He's such a great competitor. I think we'll see him in the hunt just as he was in the indoors."

The return to the oval from former Iowa high school prep legend Tim Dwight was another highlight for the team. Dwight proved to be a welcomed addition throughout the indoor and outdoor seasons, competing in the 200-meter dash and various sprint relays, including the provisionally qualifying 4x400-meter relay.

Dwight rose out of the depths of conference track anonymity at the Big Ten Indoors to take second in the 55-meter dash, fifth in the 200-meter dash and sixth in the long jump.

The 1997-98 season looks increasingly bright for the team with almost a complete roster returning. The Hawkeyes could possess one of the strongest sprinting cores in the nation and have a distance team comprised of many up-and-coming runners.

One of the team's weaker spots throughout the outdoor season was the lack of competitors in the field events realm. That deficiency has been an aspect that Wiecezorek and the rest of the coaches have emphasized in the recruiting wars.

"I would like to develop a total program," Wiecezorek said. "In this day and age in the sport you truly need a well-rounded program that incorporates the distance runners and the field events to compete. You just can't do it anymore with specialization."

Brian Ray/The Daily Iowan
Iowa's Eric Martinez slides into home in a game against Minnesota. The Hawkeyes finished the 1997 campaign 17-30 overall

Baseball team hopes to erase bad memories of '97 season

Chris James

For the Iowa baseball team, 1997 was one season the Hawkeyes would rather forget.

Iowa finished with its worst record since 1973 at 17-30 overall and came in last in the Big Ten at 7-16. In addition, Duane Banks, Hawkeye head coach for the past 28 years, retired at the end of the season after an incident occurred between him and one of his players.

Hawkeye pitcher Steve Rasmussen said that even after all the ups and downs of '97, Iowa still has plenty of reasons to stay positive for next year.

"It was a rough season," Rasmussen said. "But we've got the heart of our order coming back and if we can be more consistent with our pitching, then things will turn around."

Iowa stumbled right out of the gates losing their first six games before defeating Butler 9-3 on March 8. But throughout the season the Hawkeyes could never quite get things to fall into place. The longest winning streak for Iowa was four games while the longest losing streak was eight.

The Hawkeyes will have ample opportunity to improve their hitting as they return their top three hitters led by Brian Mitchell who hit 20 home runs and had 50 RBIs.

Iowa pitching also returns their team leaders in wins and strikeouts. Senior Jeremy Meccage had five of the Hawkeyes' 17 wins in '97. He also added 56 strikeouts. Junior Nate Frese was Iowa's top fan man. Frese whiffed 61 batters this past season to lead the team.

With promising talent returning, and if the weather stays off Iowa's back (nine lost games in '97 due to cancellations), Iowa should be back on track in 1998.

"Staying focused and putting this year behind us is going to be the key if we want to be successful next year," Rasmussen said.

Pete Thompson/The Daily Iowan
Iowa had its best Big Ten finish since 1967 this past season, finishing fourth at the Big Ten Indoor Championships.

Hawkeye golf team grabs 6th place in the Big Ten

James Kramer

An up-and-down season ended in satisfying fashion for the Iowa men's golf team.

Iowa finished sixth at the Big Ten Championships in Columbus, Ohio, to close out the season. The Hawkeyes were just two strokes away from fourth-place Indiana.

In 1996, Iowa finished 11th at the conference meet. After one round of the 1997 tournament, it appeared to be déjà vu as the Hawkeyes were in last place again.

"We did all right," coach Terry Anderson said. "I'm really excited and thrilled about how we came back."

Senior Sean Rowen shot a 294 for a fifth-place finish while fellow senior Chad McCarty tied for 12th with a 302. Earlier in the season, McCarty shot a round of 62 — the lowest spring collegiate score in the nation.

In other spring tournaments, the Hawkeyes either finished in the middle of the pack or at the bottom.

Anderson's team had two 18th-place finishes, two ninth-place finishes and a 10th-place effort.

Underclassmen Chris England, Adam Turner and David Hersch will return this fall for Iowa.

"I'm optimistic, the (1997) Big Ten tournament was kind of a boost of confidence that hopefully we can carry into the fall," Anderson said.

Tennis will have to reload in '98

Tony Wirt

Despite a strong 5-1 start in dual meets, the 1996-97 season did not exactly turn out the way Coach Glenn Patton would have liked.

Despite high expectations, Iowa's tankers fell to eighth place in the Big Ten, the first time in 19 years the Hawkeyes did not place in the top five.

"We were very, very disappointed to fall out of the upper division in the Big Ten," Patton said. "It was devastating to our team."

While Patton's swimming team had a disappointing finish to the 1996-97 season, the team had many positives to fall back on.

The Hawkeye coach always has stressed the importance of academics, and this year he saw his team achieve many academic honors, including numerous Academic All-Big Ten awards.

"We had a great year academically," Patton said. "We had the highest GPA of any team on campus. Counting every course that everyone has ever taken at Iowa, we had 3.12 GPA."

Next year could be a difficult one for the Hawkeyes, as there

"We were very, very disappointed to fall out of the upper division in the Big Ten. It was devastating to our team."

butterfly, individual medley, the freestyle sprints and diving.

"With our top two divers graduating, Bob Rydze's diving core is left decapitated down to three walk-on divers," Patton said.

Co-captains Marc River and Todd Harvery are among the nine graduating seniors. Harvery, however, will take on the role of volunteer assistant during the '97-'98 season.

"I hope that I can continue to bring leadership to the team in this role, but being a coach will be from a different standpoint than being a swimmer," Harvery said. "I'll have to be a little more professional, which may be hard."

Also returning are Marco Minonne, who qualified for the NCAA meet; Dan Abel, Iowa's top distance freestyler, and Bogdan Deac, who gave the Hawkeyes depth in the individual medley.

Future is bright for Iowa track

Chuck Blount

Under the guidance of a new, optimistic coaching staff, the Iowa men's track and field team didn't get third, Wiecek said. Perhaps our best event on the track is in a hurry, he said. "But I can see him close (in the country)," Wiecek said. "On paper he's not the best outdoor qualification."

The faces behind the administration

 UI President Mary Sue Coleman has addressed many complex issues in her tenure at the UI.

Coleman: Leading the UI to the future

Patrick Keller

Get used to seeing UI President Mary Sue Coleman. She's everywhere, and that's a good thing.

Coleman has made a point of involving herself with students from the very start. After her 1995 inauguration as the first female president on New Year's Eve, Coleman's first action was to attend the Sun Bowl in Albuquerque, New Mexico, to get in touch with Hawkeye fans.

"It was a wonderful way to start my tenure," she said of the event. "I met many loyal friends of the UI that way, and a lot of students."

But Coleman's time as president has been spent doing far more than just cheering on the Hawks. She's had to deal with everything from the death of a fraternity pledge to the university's sesquicentennial anniversary.

Before arriving at the UI, she served as provost and vice president for academic affairs at the University of New Mexico, Albuquerque. Her arrival as the UI's 18th president, replacing Hunter Rawlings III who vacated the office to serve as Cornell University's president, was historic in many ways: not only was she the first female president of the UI, but she also was the only female president in the Big Ten.

One of the other groundbreaking things Coleman has

The UI vice presidents are an important part of the university's decision making process. Each VP has a different role to perform and then reports back to Mary Sue Coleman with the findings. There are many individuals who also work closely with the VP's to keep things running smoothly.

 True is in charge of the budgeting, financial management and the accounting for the UI. He is also responsible for UI facilities, construction, human resources and all other non-academic support services.

Phillip Jones
 Vice President for Student Services
 Jones is in charge of student support services such as student health, student government, and disciplinary action for UI students. He also oversees the Iowa Memorial Union and UI's performing venue, Hancher Auditorium.

David Skorton
 Vice President for Research
 Skorton oversees the Oakdale Campus and Research Park. Grants, contracting and a variety of special purpose programs fall under Skorton's guidance.

John Colloton
 Vice President Statewide Health
 Colloton is responsible for keeping UI President Coleman up to date about health trends. Colloton not only advises Coleman in these areas but also helps in developing strategies for the UIHC to deal with current issues in health care.

Ann Rhodes

Rebuilding begins with new coach

Becky Gruhn
After finishing in the cellar of the conference during the 1995-96 Big Ten season, the Iowa women's swimming program was in search of answers as to how to turn the program around.
One problem was solved by introducing Mary Bolich as the new coach in the fall of '96. Bolich, who served as an assistant coach at Penn State for seven years, brought a new attitude and a new work ethic to Hawkeye swimming.
Despite the gradual improvement, Iowa was unable to capture a win in Big Ten competition, finishing 0-5 in dual meets for the season.
The Hawkeyes placed 10th at the Big Ten Championships in late February. After the competition, Bolich applauded her team's performance.
"I though we had a great team performance based on a lot of good individual performances," Bolich said. "We've improved our times and this is what we were

Women's tennis must overcome loss of coach and seniors in 1998

Becky Gruhn
At the conclusion of the 1996-97 season, the underclassmen belonging to the Iowa women's tennis team learned just how quickly a bright future can turn fuzzy.
When Iowa ended its season with a 4-1 loss to Purdue in the first round of the Big Ten tournament, it had no idea it would be coach Jenny Mainz's last meet shouting instructions to the players.
Mainz, whose goal was to restore past glory into the future of the Iowa program, unexpectedly announced in May that she was stepping down from the position she held for two years in order to accept a coaching job at the University of Alabama.
"This was a difficult decision," Mainz said in a statement released after her resignation. "I felt privileged to have been a part of the Iowa women's athletic program."
Assistant coach Jennifer Hyde also decided to leave the UI to return to her home state of Georgia.
Iowa ended the season 7-14 overall. Despite the lopsided number of defeats, Mainz did not call the season a disappointment.
"We did move the program forward," Mainz said following the Big Ten tournament. "We made the necessary steps to take the program to a higher level. Wins and losses aren't always indicative of the success of a season."
Ironically, the Hawkeyes' biggest win of the season also turned out to be their last.
Iowa upset No. 68 Penn State, 4-3, on April 9, but then dropped its final four matches.
In addition to replacing the coaching staff, Iowa will lose three seniors, Kristen McCracken, Lisa Harris, and Robin Niemeier.
Sophomores Shera Wiegler and Natayla Dawaf along with junior Erin Wolverton and senior Carolina Delgado will return.

Injuries and sickness spoil Hawkeyes' season

Becky Gruhn
When first-year coach Rachelle Roberts came to the UI to guide the women's cross country team, she didn't have to worry about adjusting to life in Iowa City.
Roberts returned to the UI in 1996 to coach her alma mater where she was an All-American in the mile in 1990.
Roberts came with the goal of elevating Iowa to a top-five finish in the Big Ten in 1996.
However, the season did not go as planned.
The Hawkeyes started the year strong, finishing fourth out of 15 teams in the Bradley Open.
But then the injuries came.
Freshman Maggie Griffin sustained an injury the next week in the Iowa Invitational and was forced to withdraw from the race, marking the first race of her career she did not finish. Senior captain Kiersten Pauling, Iowa's top runner, also suffered a strained hamstring midway through the season.
The injuries healed just in time for the Big Ten championships — just in time for Coach Roberts to be handed another dose of bad luck.
Three of Iowa's top runners, Kiersten Pauling, Becky Coleman and Briana Benning, all became sick days before the race and were not completely healthy for the competition.
Iowa finished ninth in the Big Ten and 19th at the NCAA District IV meet.
"We certainly had our ups and down this season," Roberts said after the district meet. "We ran better at the beginning and middle of the season, but came up short at the end."
With the loss of four seniors, Iowa will rely heavily on the talented trio of Maggie Griffin, Alienor Gilchrist and Haley Newbrough. Roberts said Griffin and Gilchrist had tremendous potential and had yet to scratch the surface their freshman year in the Hawkeye program. Newbrough chose to redshirt her first year.

Settle-ing in for the Big Ten title run

Mike Triplett

The 1996-97 Iowa men's basketball season was marked by three things: the remarkable play of Andre Woolridge, the absence of Jess Settles and a trip to the NCAA tournament.

The '97-'98 season will be drastically different — Woolridge is out, Settles is back in — but the Hawkeyes will have the same post-season goal in mind.

Iowa advanced only to the second round in March of '97, but the eighth-seeded Hawkeyes didn't exit without making quite an impression on the nation.

"I would have made them a three seed based on film," former Kentucky coach Rick Pitino said of Iowa after his Wildcats squeaked past the Hawkeyes. "That's the type of team you face in the Final Four. They were awesome."

Kentucky, which advanced to the NCAA championship game before falling, edged Iowa 75-69 in Salt Lake City. The Hawkeyes went home with a 22-10 record, an amazing feat for a team that started the season so poorly.

Iowa lost four former starters in the off-season (Russ Millard, Mon'ter Gasper and Kenyon Murray graduated, and Chris Kingsbury left early for the CBA). Then the Hawkeyes lost a highly touted recruit when freshman guard Jeff Walker redshirted after being arrested for credit card fraud.

Things got worse. During a trip to the Maui Invitational, the Hawkeyes lost Settles to the first in a series of injuries that led to his redshirting.

They also temporarily lost starters Ryan Bowen and Kent McCausland to two separate heartbeat irregularities.

And to top it all off, they lost games to unheralded California and LSU to drop their record to 1-2.

With walk-ons Darryl Moore and Jason Bauer thrust into the starting lineup, Iowa looked primed for a season of struggle. But the Hawkeyes turned it up several notches and won 13-of-14 games, including a 5-0 start in the Big Ten Conference.

Said Indiana coach Bobby Knight: "They put a team together that is better, having lost more, than perhaps any team since I've been in the Big Ten."

Iowa finished in a tie for second in the Big Ten with a 12-6 record. And most, if not all, of the credit belonged to Woolridge, who was named a third-team All-American.

The point guard became the first player in Big Ten history to lead the conference in both scoring (20.2 points per game) and assists (6.0 per game).

Woolridge, who played his freshman season at Nebraska, also became the all-time leading scorer over a three-year period in Iowa history (1,525 career points).

He had plenty of help throughout the season, though. Bowen was named third-team all-conference as a junior, averaging 11.8 points and 9.1 rebounds per game.

Redshirt freshman Guy Rucker started 31 games at center and averaged 10.6 points and 5.7 rebounds. He also led the team with 39 blocked shots.

And sophomore McCausland, in his first season as a starter, led the nation with a .522 3-point field goal percentage (70-134).

McCausland reflected on what he and the rest of the team had been able to accomplish during a press conference in Salt Lake City prior to the Kentucky game.

"This whole season's been a dream," McCausland said. "You just look back on it all and wonder, 'How the heck did I get here? How did this all happen?'"

Woolridge's departure will put a damper on this upcoming season, but Settles' return, along with the addition of two of the nation's top recruits, will soften the blow.

Ricky Davis, a forward from Davenport North high school, and Dean Oliver, a point guard from Mason City, are ranked by several among the top 40 preps in the nation. Walker, a first-team all-stater from Springfield, Ill., also will be making his Hawkeye debut.

Settles, a fifth-year senior, was a first-team All-Big Ten player in 1996. Following that season, he announced his intentions to leave college early for the NBA, but he chose to return two days before the draft. He then went down with a series of injuries that forced him to redshirt his 1996-97 season.

Highlights

Noteworthy achievements of the '96-'97 Hawkeye team:

- Kent McCausland lead Div. I in 3-point shooting percentage
- Tom Davis picked up his 500th career victory against Purdue on March 1
- Andre Woolridge was the first player to lead the Big Ten in both scoring and assists
- In the past two seasons, Iowa has only lost three home games.
- In Big Ten play, Iowa ranked 2nd in scoring defense, allowing an average of 62.2 points
- Ryan Bowen had 10 double-double games in points and rebounds
- Iowa outrebounded opponents in 29 of 32 games with a margin of +9.8, first in the Big Ten

Brian Ray/The Daily Iowan

Brian Ray/The Daily Iowan

Jess Settles will return for his senior season after sitting out the 1996-97 campaign with a back injury. Settles will be a part of an imposing frontcourt with sophomore Guy Rucker and senior Ryan Bowen. Iowa will be aiming to capitalize on its second-place finish in the Big Ten last season and hopefully return to the NCAA tournament for the third consecutive year.

Andre Woolridge goes in for a layup against Northwestern earlier in the season. Woolridge became the first player in Big Ten history to lead the conference in scoring and assists Circulation clerk Norm Sterzenbach has some easy advice for students frustrated by the intimidating Main Library, simply "Ask questions." Contrary to the beliefs of many students, the vast resources of the library can be tapped with a little effort.

There are close to 200 librarians and staff members employed by the Main Library in the attempt to make it as user-friendly as possible. The information desk located on the first floor provides one of the library's greatest resources. Workers at the information desk can provide answers to basic directional questions, give advice to students about research topics, or help in locating information.

These all-knowing librarians are not the only chance to find the answers to your questions. The Main Library has Internet access as well as two supplemental computer programs to help out - Library Navigator and Library Explorer - available through computers located close to the reference desk and in the Instructional Technology Centers. Library Navigator is an introduction to the university libraries, focusing on the Main Library. Library Explorer is a more detailed program that provides a simple format and more interaction with the user. Library Explorer also can give instructions about how to use the online library catalog and information system, OASIS. OASIS can access various database programs that can be used to locate items in the library or in other libraries. The Periodical Abstracts Data Base contains abstracts and indexes for more than 1,600 general journal publications. Specific databases also are available through OASIS that include indexes for individual departments.

"The library is confusing at first, but the more you are around it the easier it is to understand," Sterzenbach said. This statement is one UI students will have to test for themselves. Sterzenbach insists that the set-up and labeling system for the endless rows of books is in fact quite organized.

"There is usually a simple answer to most questions that I get; Just ask, that's what we're here for."

The rows of books at the Main Library can seem intimidating if students are unfamiliar with the system.

Inconsistency dooms Iowa

James Kramer

Looking to improve on a disappointing 1995 season, the Iowa volleyball team only found more frustration in 1996.

For the second straight year, the Hawkeyes posted a 10-21 overall record. In Big Ten conference play, Iowa finished 5-15.

"We were so close in so many matches," Iowa coach Linda Schoenstedt said.

The Hawkeyes were led by graduated senior Jennifer Webb, who had 571 kills. During the course of the season, Webb broke Barb Willis' all-time Iowa record for career kills.

Senior Jennifer Bell led the team with a .222 hitting percentage, while junior setter Barb Zvonek compiled 1,280 assists.

Another highlight of the season was the solid play of sophomores Julie Williams and Sharla Johnson. Williams was third on the team with 278 kills, while Johnson added 133.

Schoenstedt said her team's problems started early and never went away.

"We were not consistent all season long," she said. "We either played toe-to-toe or we couldn't sustain any momentum."

Iowa women's crew team glides down the Iowa River last fall. They earned six medals last season.

Last performance was not the least

Chuck Blount

Saving its best for last was the pervading theme for both the fall and spring seasons for the Iowa women's crew.

The Hawkeyes walked away with a total of six medals in the 26-event fall season that ended with the Head of the Iowa Regatta. Much of the fall season fell victim to cancellations, including a trip to the Boston Regatta, which was canceled for the first time in the event's 32-year history.

Unfortunately, the rowing team had problems in the spring against the Big Ten competition.

Showing a lot of composure to be four seats down and come from behind in the last 500-meters for the win.

Iowa's novice team also put together a tremendous weekend on the water at the championships, qualifying for the grands finals in the I and II Novice Eights. Iowa took bronze in the I Eight.

"I was really pleased with the first Eight," novice coach Lisa Glenn said. "They had difficulty in the first 500-meters and were disadvantaged, but they displayed the confidence to take it stroke by stroke and move into second place."

Most teams might consider a 10th-place finish at the Big Ten Tournament a disappointing end to a down season.

But for coach Diane Thomason and the Iowa women's golf team, the final tournament of the year proved to be a deception that was not indicative of the kind of year the Hawkeyes really had.

"I'm disappointed in this tournament," Thomason said after the season finale. "But it doesn't make me feel bad about the whole year."

Led by three freshmen, the Hawkeye golfers' biggest problem wasn't talent - it was consistency.

M.C. Mullen, Stacey Bergman and classmate Kelli Carney became a constant as the top three players for the Hawkeyes.

"They're going to be the core of this team as it continues to build each year throughout their four years here," Thomason said.

Before the start of the season, Thomason said her goal was to see one of the three win a tournament. Mullen's second-place finish at the Big Bird Invitational in Brooksville, Fla., was the closest any of the three would get.

Upset mars stellar season

Chuck Blount

The UI field hockey team maintained its stranglehold of Big Ten dominance last season, but once again fell short of overall team goals in the post-season.

In the regular conference season, the Hawkeyes, who were ranked No. 2 nationally throughout most of the season, rifled off a perfect 10-0 mark. It was the second straight year — marking a new conference record — Iowa was able to accomplish the feat.

The post-season, however, was not as easy.

Iowa ran into the first sign of trouble at Evanston, Ill., during the conference field hockey tournament where it suffered a disappointing loss to Penn State in the finals.

Still considered one of the top-four teams in the country after the loss, Iowa was selected to host the first and second round of the NCAA tournament. The Hawkeyes received a first-round bye.

With a two-goal lead and only 10 minutes in between Iowa and a Final Four berth, the Hawkeyes self-destructed in a tough 5-4 overtime loss to Princeton.

The Tigers, ranked No. 17 nationally, were the lowest ranked team to make the NCAA field. For Iowa coach Beth Beglin, it was a tough loss to swallow.

"I can't even put the game into words," Beglin said following the game. "This is almost enough to send me out of coaching altogether. I have absolutely no idea what I'm going to tell those girls when I get into the locker room."

Individually, Iowa had a star-studded line-up.

After taking a year off to play for the United States National Team, senior Kristen Holmes returned to lead the Hawkeyes in '96. Holmes was named the conference's Most Valuable Player and was later named First-team All-American.

The Hawkeyes also had All-Americans and All-Conference team members in Mary Casabian, Lisa Celluci, Diane DeMiro, Quan Nim and Emily Smith.

Young women's gymnastics team finish strong at NIT

Chuck Blount

From the first flip to the final vault, it was an off-and-on season for the Iowa women's gymnastics team during 1997.

At times the Hawkeyes looked as if they could compete with the nation's best, with team totals in the high 192s, including a season-high 193.325. But for every surprising performance came a disappointment.

The biggest disappointment came at the most inopportune time for Iowa — the Big Ten Championships.

The Hawkeyes struggled to a last-place finish at the meet, despite entering with the fifth-best team average.

But just like the Iowa weather, improvement was in the forecast and came at the team's next meet — the NIT Championships.

The Hawkeyes hosted the meet in Carver-Hawkeye Arena and finally received the team balance it had been shooting for all season. Iowa took a fifth-place 192.600 finish out of the eight-team field.

Gymnasts Robyn Gamble, Stephanie Wessely, Courtney Burke and Lori Whitwer landed high totals in various events to each gain first-team USAG National Team status.

"Words cannot give justice to how proud I am of this team right now," Iowa coach Diane DeMarco said after the NITs. "Everybody came through for us and we were hitting our landings. It was an attitude."

Through all the season's inconsistencies, sophomore Lori Whitwer was the cornerstone of the young Hawkeye squad. The team's best all-arounder, Whitwer, advanced to the NCAA Central Gymnastics Regional.

The future looks bright for DeMarco's team with everyone on the roster returning. So bright, in fact, the team couldn't help but spill its beans of excitement immediately following the season's close.

"We really try not to talk about it, but you can't help but look in the back of your mind and know that is there (the return of the entire team)," Whitwer said.

"The possibilities look extremely good, and I can't wait to start up again. No one's leaving, no one is going to get away from us."

Pete Thompson/The Daily Iowan

Iowa's Quan Nim dives for a ball during action against Northwestern earlier in the season. The Hawkeyes missed the Final Four for the second straight year after a 5-4 overtime loss to Princeton in the NCAA Tournament.

Talk show hosts Adam Corolla and Dr. Drew will discuss love and sex with UI students when they bring their well known radio and TV show "Love Line" to the Welcome Week festivities Aug. 27.

This is the first time the knowledgeable duo will take their show, which runs daily on MTV, on the road, lecture Committee Chairperson and UI junior Emily Gerdtts said. The event is sponsored by the UI Lecture Committee, a faculty-, staff- and student-run group which meets once a week to decide which speakers to invite to the UI each semester.

"It's great that the committee is run in part by students," UI junior and committee member Joseph Harrington said. "We have a wide variety of people in the group that can take care of a lot of different interests."

Harrington said that one of his favorite speakers was Sister Helen Prejan, the nun depicted in the film "Dead Man Walking," because she was very motivational. He also enjoyed the lecture by Stephen Jay Gould because he likes the books Gould has written.

"We are really privileged to get a chance to hear some famous people who come to the UI," Harrington said. "Students should take advantage of these great opportunities."

Some famous speakers in the past have included the late acid-culture guru Timothy Leary, "TV Nation" creator Michael Moore, poet Maya Angelou and anchorman Tom Brokaw, Gerdtts said.

Potential candidates for the committee can submit applications to the UI Student Government during the spring semester, Gerdtts said. UI President Mary Sue Coleman approves the nominations and helps in the selection process. The new committee will convene Sept. 1.

The Lecture Committee selects speakers based on input from the group or from anyone at the UI. They decide who they will invite by majority vote.

"The more input from UI students the better," Anthropology Professor Tom Charlton said. "That way we can bring in speakers who will interest many people."

The committee also brings in topical debates and lectures to keep students up to date with current events and issues, such as the Internet decency debate hosted last semester.

"We try to provide both sides of an issue," Charlton said. "Our committee is far from dogmatic — we are very wide open."

One of the more entertaining lecturers to come to town was David Silverman, chief animator of the hit television show "The Simpsons".

Audiences packed in the Main Lounge of the Union to hear Silverman discuss the evolution of the hit TV show on the Fox network.

Silverman said the first few years of creating "The Simpsons" was the hardest.

"We all worked ridiculously hard," Silverman said. "We're still working ridiculously hard."

Funding for the committee comes from student fees. The group also co-sponsors speakers from other UI organizations.

Honors Program lets students be students

Jeff Clayton

The Honors Program at the UI provides a plethora of academic and cultural opportunities for incoming students interested in getting involved in campus life.

"It's a place you can come where being a student is a number one priority," said Junior Nicole Johnson, a staff member of the program.

The Honors Program sponsors various honors seminars, as well as honors sections for General Education Requirement classes, said David Klemm, director of the Honors Program.

"The jewel of the Honors Program is the Honors seminar," Klemm said. "Seminars consist of 20 or fewer students that are taught by top university professors."

Klemm said that Honors seminars are no more difficult than other courses, but create a vibrant learning environment.

"Discussions come alive," Klemm said. "Learning is more active and less passive."

There are even Honors classes designed specifically for freshmen, such as the Honors Rhetoric.

Johnson said the focal point is Shambaugh House, the home of the Honors Program.

"It's a home away from home," Johnson said. "If an honor student has a problem, this is where they can come."

The Honors Program sponsors various cultural programs as well, such as providing free tickets for students to attend performances at Hancher Auditorium.

Last year, Honors students attended a concert given by the Lincoln Jazz Orchestra and attended the play "Merchant of Venice".

"It's one of the perks of being an honors student," Johnson said.

The Honors Program also sponsors the multicultural luncheon program.

"The jewel of the honors program is the Honors seminar. Seminars consist of 20 or fewer students that are taught by top university professors."

David Klemm, director of the Honors Program

"Speakers come and talk about some topic of interest regarding cultural diversity while we serve lunch to students," Klemm said.

Usually the meal is an ethnic lunch, such as African or Indian cuisine, that coordinates with the speaker's area of topic.

The Honors Program provides various organizations for students to get involved with, including Associated Iowa Honors Students, which sponsors various social events open to all students at the UI.

Past activities have included bowling and raising money through the Study-A-Thon prior to finals week.

The Honors Program also is starting a new volunteer program for students to be paired up with an organization in the community, Johnson said.

Sophomore Aprille Clark said she has benefited from honors courses.

"It seems like the instructors put more into the classes," Clark said. "They respect the students more and work harder to challenge them, so the classes end up being more interesting."

Incoming students are automatically selected for the Honors Program if they are in the top 10 percent of their class and have an SAT composite of 1250 and above, or an ACT of 29 and above. National Merit and National Achievement Scholars are also eligible for the program, Johnson said.

Furthermore, students in the top 15 percent of their class with an SAT of 1140 and above, or ACT of 26 and above can apply to the Honors program with two letters of recommendation.

For those already attending the UI, a 3.2 gpa is needed.

Klemm said students should take the classes they are interested in, regardless of their concerns about its difficulty.

"If you're passionate about what you're studying, you'll do well," Klemm said. "Failure is a factor of being bored."

Klemm said he hopes incoming students will be active in the program.

"We would love to meet them," Klemm said.

Iowa rolls to 17th national title

James Kramer

In one of the most dominating performances in wrestling history, Dan Gable's Iowa team crowned five champions and won its third straight team title.

After the Hawkeyes wrapped up the championship with 170 points — an NCAA meet record — coach Dan Gable was almost speechless.

"The 1986 team was kinda supposed to (dominate)," Gable said. "This one pretty much mesmerized everybody."

Iowa was not favored to win the championship going into the tournament. Oklahoma State was considered the favorite after having defeated the Hawkeyes in the National Duals.

The Cowboys performed relatively well at the national tournament, but Gable's team was not to be denied. Oklahoma State finished second with 113.5 points.

"There were a lot of things coming out of Oklahoma that really helped us build an edge," Gable said. "I had people in Oklahoma send me newspaper clippings. When you win, you have little edges that put you ahead, and we had several in this tournament."

Graduated seniors Jessie Whitmer and Lincoln McIlravy, seniors Mark Ironside and Joe Williams and junior Lee Fullhart won individual titles for Iowa. McIlravy's title was his third — making him the fifth Hawkeye wrestler to accomplish the feat.

"I'm very proud to be a part of this team and what Gable has established here," McIlravy said. "I'm just lucky to know him, he's a great man."

Mike Mena earned his fourth All-American honor, finishing second at 126. Kasey Gillis finished sixth at 142, while Mike Uker was fifth at 167.

The championship was the 17th in Iowa's history. In 21 years as coach, Gable has been responsible for 15 of those titles. At the 1997 Big Ten Championships, Iowa held off Minnesota for its 24th straight conference crown.

Iowa's incredible victory increased the speculation that Gable would retire. During the past two years, Gable has frequently spoken about the possibility of his career taking a different course.

"If I'm not the coach from now on, I just hope people don't expect that this (dominance) is going to happen all the time,"

Gable said. As the season went on, Gable's situation brought an enormous amount of media attention to the Iowa wrestling program. USA Today and ESPN had features on Gable, while Iowa Public Television produced a special hour-long program highlighting the coach's life. In addition, a major documentary will be released during the summer of 1997.

Should Gable decide to leave, assistant coaches Jim Zalesky and Tom Brands are considered the top candidates to replace him. Both assistants were three-time NCAA champions during their Hawkeye careers.

Brian Ray/The Daily Iowan

Iowa's Joe Williams takes down his opponent at the 1997 NCAA Wrestling Championships. The Hawkeyes will be looking to snag their fourth straight national title this upcoming season.

Tom Brands wins gold during the Atlanta Olympics

Armed with an iron will and a powerful repertoire, former Iowa wrestler Tom Brands became an 1996 Olympic champion.

Brands rolled to a gold medal at 136.5 pounds, allowing only one point to his opponents. In the final match, Brands defeated Jang Gae-Sung of South Korea, 7-0.

Brands became the fifth gold medalist from the UI. Terry McCann won in 1960, while Randy Lewis and brothers Ed and Lou Banach won golds in 1984.

During the 1996-97 college season, Brands announced his retirement from wrestling competition. He had been an assistant coach under Dan Gable for five years.

"With the gold medal, I went out well so I wanted to put more time into coaching," Brands said. "You cheat yourself if you try to coach and compete at the same time."

Oakdale brings technology and community together

Kevin Ho

When someone says "Oakdale" some people think prison. However, the 500 acre Oakdale Campus is not a prison, but it is near one. In fact the Oakdale campus houses some of the UI's most important research and technology programs, Bruce Wheaton, Director of the Oakdale Research Park said.

"It benefits the students, faculty and the image of the UI in the general case," Wheaton said. "I think that the companies offer research opportunities for the UI faculty. It gives, at least in some disciplines, recent graduates a place to work."

Tom Bauer, associate director of the Innovation Center and Research Park at Oakdale, said the main purpose of the Oakdale campus is as a go-between the UI and the public.

"The objective of our tech transfer programs is to enable and strengthen relationships between industry and research resources at the University."

Bauer said there were several components that called Oakdale home.

"First, there is the Oakdale Research Campus that's part of the University and houses research units," he said. "In the last 15-20 years it has become a location of several technology transfer programs too."

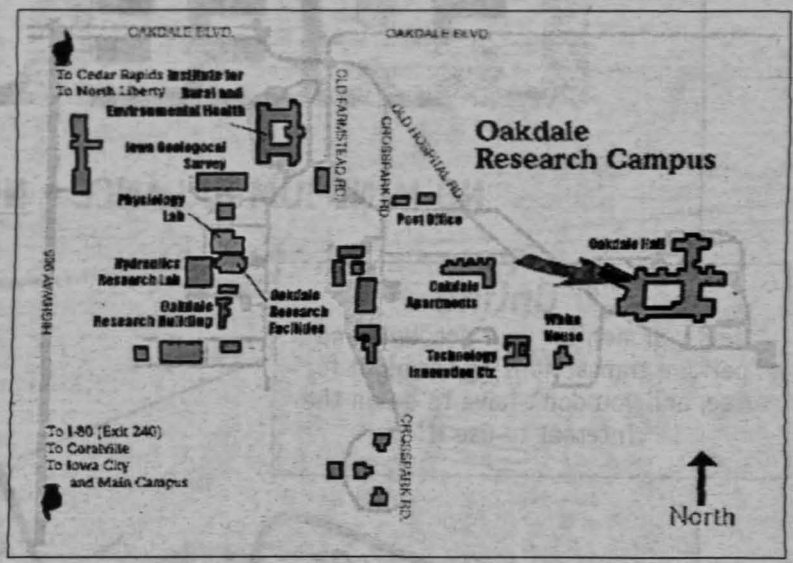

Bauer said the two largest labs at the Oakdale campus were the hygienic laboratory and the Institute for rural and environmental health. Bauer said the Oakdale Campus also housed the UI Research Foundation.

"The objective of our tech transfer programs is to enable and strengthen relationships between industry and research resources at the University."

"The UI Research Foundation manages the UI's intellectual property, inventions that arise from the UI's activities by students, faculty and staff," Bauer said.

benefited the UI but benefited the area and state as well. "The park benefits the state and the area," Wheaton said. "It benefits the university economically, and since the university is a public institution that benefits the state. Therefore the whole state benefits from the park."

Wheaton said many TIC companies also offered UI students assistantships and internships. Both agreed the activities at the Oakdale campus not only

'Sensational' Seven to make final run

Wayne Drehs

The Iowa women's basketball team started the 1996-97 season ranked No. 4 in the nation. Unfortunately for the Hawkeyes, it was downhill from there.

After reaching the Sweet Sixteen in the 1996 NCAA Tournament and returning all but two players from that squad, hopes were high for the Iowa women. But a 4-4 start, including losses to unranked Nebraska and Drake, was a sign of things to come.

The Hawkeyes reached rock bottom on Jan. 26 when, for the first time ever, Michigan beat Iowa in Carver-Hawkeye Arena by the score of 75-63.

After that loss, Iowa realized the only way it could make the NCAA Tournament was by winning the Big Ten Tournament.

And the Hawkeyes did just that.

Iowa took care of Northwestern and Indiana en route to the Big Ten's championship game against No. 18 ranked Illinois — a game in which they knocked off the Illini 63-56 to earn the automatic NCAA bid.

"Illinois knew they were already in, but we had to win this game to make it to the tournament," Iowa coach Angie Lee said after the win. "This is the only thing we had on our mind and we did it."

Iowa rallied from a 30-26 halftime deficit to take a 49-37 lead with 10:55 left, but the Illini used a 15-3 spurt to tie the game at 53-53 with 4:08 remaining. Clutch free throws by Shannon Perry and Amy Herrig put the game away and gave the Hawkeyes the conference tournament title.

"I told the team at halftime to relax," Lee said. "We were so keyed up for the game we couldn't keep our hands on the ball and we were juggling it."

"And I said to them, 'You've got 20 minutes left in the game. Either the 20 minutes leads us into practice next Thursday, or it's 20 minutes until we practice on Oct. 15.'"

But when the NCAA announced its tournament pairings, the Hawkeye smiles turned to frowns as Iowa realized it would face a solid N.C. State squad in the first round with the No. 1 University of Connecticut Huskies awaiting in round two.

The Hawkeyes squeaked by the Wolfpack, 56-50, but the task of knocking off the nation's top team on its home floor was too much, as the Huskies spanked Iowa, 72-53.

Connecticut led 34-22 at the half, and a 16-8 second-half spurt put the game away at 56-36 with 10:52 to play.

After the game, Lee was clearly frustrated with the loss.

"Watching practice, we were attacking the zones like nobody was going to stop us," she said. "We look great in practice and then get out there and freeze. If anybody knows a cure for that, then please tell me."

The loss ended Iowa's season at 18-12, and sets up an interesting situation for the 1997-98 season. It will mark the final season for the "sensational seven" recruiting class of 1994 — a class that has never advanced past the Sweet Sixteen in the NCAA Tourney, and has a 56-33 overall record in its first three years.

"With so many tears in the lockerroom," senior forward Angie Hamblin said after the UConn loss, "I think that's a big sign of motivation for next year. I don't think we want to feel this kind of hurt ever again."

One big factor for next year's success will be the health of forward Tiffany Gooden. The senior tore her second ACL of her career in the spring and will go through a difficult rehabilitation routine in order to prepare for her last season.

"It is very unfortunate that happened," Lee said. "Tiffany is a very strong-willed person though and she is going to work extremely hard to get back for the start of the 1997-98 season."

The pressure will be on Gooden, along with fellow 1994 recruiting class members Nadine Domond, Tangela Smith, Malika Willis, Perry, and Hamblin to produce. But with that level of talent, anything is possible.

Highlights

Noteworthy achievements of the '96-97 Hawkeye team:

- Finished the year at 18-12
- Before losing to UConn, Iowa won seven straight games
- Swept three games to win Big Ten Tournament Title to gain an automatic berth to NCAA
- Amy Herrig scored 40 points against Boise State, hitting 16-of-18 field goals
- Iowa upset then No. 15-ranked Western Kentucky on Jan. 2, 61-48
- Angela Hamblin grabbed a career high 13 rebounds in a 68-58 loss to Florida
- Ranked as high as No. 3 in pre-season Top 25 polls
- Kristin Holmes, an All-American field hockey player, joined the squad for her final year of athletic eligibility
- Nine of Iowa's 11 losses were by 10 points or fewer
- Herrig was named MVP at the Kona Women's Basketball Classic (Dec. 6-8)
- Tangela Smith became Iowa's all-time block shot leader
- Hamblin was a Third-team All-Big Ten selection in '96-97
- Eight players return for '97-98

Steven Cook

Compared to other regents schools in Iowa, Michael Barron, UI director of admissions, said the UI is at the top of the heap in terms of minority enrollment.

"The University of Iowa is the only regents university to fulfill the (Iowa state) Board of Regents diversity goal for student enrollment," Barron said.

Currently, the UI has a minority enrollment of 9.5 percent. Barron said that after meeting the goal set by the regents of 8.5 percent, the UI's minority enrollment goal was increased to the current 10.5 percent.

"We've done a good job," Barron said. "But we want to do more."

But compared to other schools in the Big Ten, the UI comes in at the bottom of the list, said Joe Coulter, interim associate provost and director of Opportunity at Iowa.

With a Big Ten average of 16 percent minority enrollment, the UI has its work cut out for it, Coulter said. He said that one reason for the low percentage of minority students is because there is a low percentage of minorities in Iowa's general population — less than four percent.

"When you have a state with a 96 percent majority, it makes (minority recruitment) a little difficult," Coulter said.

University numbers on minority enrollment have been on the upswing in recent years, going from 7.5 percent total minority enrollment in the fall of '90, to the most recent number of 9.5 percent for fall '96.

Although total minority enrollment has gone up, the number of African-American students has gone down slightly. Other ethnic groups, including Native American, Hispanic and Asian, increased in numbers over the six-year span.

Coulter said a "first-class" university like the UI must prepare students to live in an increasingly diverse world. Coulter said in order to accomplish this, the university is attempting to convince minority students to come to Iowa.

Several programs at the university attempt to recruit minority students. Scholarships are offered to top minority students through the Opportunity at Iowa scholarship program, and minority students with financial need may turn to the UI's Images Program, Coulter said.

Also, programs such as the university's Affirmative Action Program, help to bring a diverse staff.

The program, initiated by President Lyndon Johnson, mandates bodies that receive federal funding, such as the UI, must maintain an affirmative action program.

"With respect to employment, we try to use publications that are directed at female and minority audiences," Susan Mask, director of the UI's Affirmative Action Program said.

The Office of Affirmative Action deals with the day-to-day recruitment of faculty and personnel, attempting to achieve a diverse faculty. Mask said by throwing the "widest net possible" the university can acquire the best qualified applicants as well as the most diverse.

Vice President for University Relations Ann Rhodes said she believes that the UI population is inclusive of minorities.

"A university could have the best policies in the world but unless you have a university community that's inclusive, you're going to have problems," Rhodes said.

Centers offer home for minorities

Jennifer Cassell

Coming to a school with more than 25,000 students, some minority students may wonder if they will find the friends who make them feel at home.

Those students who are apprehensive about leaving home and heading to the UI can find refuge in two houses on the UI campus that offer ethnic students a place to congregate, converse and "chill."

The Latino and Native American Cultural Center (LNACC), 308 Melrose Ave., and the Afro American Cultural Center (known as the Afro House), 303 Melrose Ave., provide students a place to mingle and exchange ideas with people from their own community, said Carlos Serrato, director of both cultural centers, and assistant director of the Office of Campus Program and Student Activities.

Some of the services the Afro House offer include: a "Welcome picnic" in the fall, a Kwanzaa celebration in December and numerous activities throughout Black History Month. The center also participates in Cultural Diversity Day and holds an annual Black Awards reception.

"If you go there on day when there's something going on, you can meet lots of people," Serrato said.

social resources, both human and university wide, that are available" Akyea said.

Manuel Arredondo, manager of the LNACC, said the center is a place where different student groups can meet and plan activities. He said students can take part in the UI community by getting involved in functions that LNACC holds.

"Students get out of it how much they put into it," Arredondo said.

On the first Friday of each month LNACC holds Cafe Latino, which Serrato calls an impromptu social gathering that includes music and food. In December, the center celebrates Las Posadas and Latino Heritage Month throughout September and October.

The Afro House and LNACC were established in 1968 and 1971, respectively. Both the centers collaborate with one another on different activities. For example, both houses worked together to sponsor a forum titled "Women of Culture," held to discuss black and Latina women's issues.

UI junior Stephenie Brem credits Student Health Service for helping her get through finals week last December.

Brem fell very ill a few days before finals week and she ended up making two trips to Student Health to get on the road to recovery heading into some tough finals.

"It's such a horrible time to be sick," Brem said. "But I got the help I needed to feel better and finish all my finals on time."

Student Health Service is located in the Steindler Building close to the Nursing Building on the west side of the Iowa River. Hours for student visits are from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m., Monday through Friday, and from 9 a.m. to noon on Saturdays, when school is in session.

Student Health Service is supported by a fee paid by all full-time students which offers students free unlimited office visits. However, students can be charged for other procedures done in the office, such as blood tests. Student Health Service is committed to offering students the best health care they can provide, said Student Health Service director Dr. Mary Khowassah.

"We give our students many opportunities to provide input to our care, including Student Health Advisory Committee and patient satisfaction surveys given twice a year," Khowassah said.

No appointment is necessary when visiting Student Health, although Khowassah said scheduling one could cut down on the waiting time. The busiest times for seeing patients is in the afternoons during the peak cold and flu seasons from after the holidays to the end of March.

There are also a multitude of programs offered through Student Health to promote healthy living in college. For example, they offer a stop-smoking program for students and free condoms located in the office.

In addition, there are suggestion boxes on both floors of the building for comments from patients.

100 years of Hawkeye sports with a twist

Chris James

The University of Iowa has a very rich sports tradition and has been the innovator of many advancements in sports. There are also a few other little known "facts" that the average reader may be unaware of.

- 1876: First intercollegiate sporting event at Iowa. Baseball vs. Cornell College. Several players disappeared back into the corn after the game.
- 1887: Students vote to make Old Gold official color. The reason for black is unknown. New gold has inferiority complex ever since.
- 1889: Iowa's first football game, 24-0 loss to Grinnell. This is largely due to the fact that Hayden Fry wasn't born yet.
- Jan. 18, 1896: First intercollegiate basketball game in the nation with 5-on-5 rules. Iowa lost to Chicago, 13-12. Iowa coach Henry Kallenberg was friends with James Naismith, the father of basketball, and was informed of the rules through him. Kallenberg sent the information via E-mail.
- Nov. 23, 1912: Iowa's first homecoming football game. Tailgating wasn't far behind.
- 1927: The UI Fieldhouse is built. At this time, the swiming pool is the largest indoor pool in the world. Shark infestation was a problem during the first few years, but installation of elephant guns near the pool soon phased out the problem.

- Oct. 19, 1929: The dedication of Iowa Stadium. Later to become Kinnick Stadium. At the time, the entire state of Iowa probably could have fit inside the stadium.
- May 25, 1929: Iowa suspended from the Big Ten for recruiting violations. Suspension lasted just one month. The real reason for the suspension was live chickens were thrown on the field during UI football games.
- 1935: The first Iowa-Minnesota football contest for Floyd of Rosedale. Since the depression was going on, they thought of this to take their minds off all that pesky poverty and misery.
- Dec. 6, 1939: Football player Nile Kinnick wins the Heisman Trophy. Kinnick was late to the ceremony after saving nuns from a burning building.
- 1948: Herky the Hawkeye adopted as Iowa's official mascot. Some of the rejected names for the mascot include: Satan, Vicki, and Big Bird.
- 1950: The Iowa fight song is heard for the first time. Written by Meredith Willson. Other tunes by Danzig and Marilyn Manson were rejected.
- Jan. 1, 1957: Iowa's first appearance in the Rose Bowl. Iowa wins 35-19 over Oregon State. Shortly after, the Hawkeyes were black listed for leftist affiliations and didn't return to the Rose Bowl until the 60's.
- November, 1963: The Iowa-Notre Dame football game is canceled due to the assassination of President John F. Kennedy. Oliver Stone is investigating the possibility that a second assistant coach was involved in the decision.
- March 12, 1970: The Iowa basketball team lost to Jacksonville in the Mideast Regional, 104-103. The rules specified you could only shoot half-court shots.
- 1972: Iowa State's Dan Gable won a gold medal at the Olympic games in Munich. Not soon after, Gable is made one of only two men who has the key to triggering nuclear war.
- 1973: The Iowa Women's Athletic Department is founded. Immediately, the local Super Friends demand their own department.
- Aug. 24, 1976: Dan Gable named head Iowa wrestling coach. Gable soon saves universe from giant radioactive dog.
- March 22, 1980: Men's basketball team makes it to the Final Four for the first time since 1956. Iowa lost to Louisville 80-72. An eight point play was the difference at the buzzer.
- 1983: Carver-Hawkeye Arena opened its doors. Construction cost is $18 million. The U.S. space program soon announces plans for Carver-Hawkeye space station by the year 2000.
- Dec. 26, 1984: The football team clobbered Texas in the Freedom Bowl, 55-17. The Hawkeyes are led by Chuck Long who throws for 461 yards and six touchdowns. Long also healed the blind and cured the deaf.
- Feb. 3, 1985: 22, 157 fans piled into Carver-Hawkeye Arena to watch the Iowa women's basketball team beat Ohio State, 81-41. Several Buckeye players are still unaccounted for.
- May 28, 1985: Nan Doak won Iowa's first-ever women's championship, the 10,000 meters at the NCAA outdoor track and field championships. Doak actually won the event the day before since she ran so fast she went back in time.
- 1986: Iowa women's field hockey team won the National Championship. The Hawkeye women soon give their autographed sticks to charity to help fight hunger in Ethiopia.
- March, 1993: The women's basketball team advances to the Final Four and Coach C. Vivian Stringer is the first Iowa women's basketball coach to be named national coach of the year. Shortly thereafter, I advance to the Final Four of my local chess tournament.
- May 21, 1995: Iowa's women's softball team stuns the nation by winning the California regional and advancing to the Final Four of the Softball World Series. It would be the first of three straight appearances for the Hawkeyes. Two days later the Chicago Blackhawks and St. Louis Blues protest the Hawkeyes play saying "it was just too rough for them."

Disability service allows participation for all

Will Valet

Whether it's to attend a major, once-in-a-lifetime event or just to attend class, the UI's Student Disability Services works to make sure students who are mentally or physically disabled can participate.

Donna Chandler, director of Student Disability Services, said the staff takes an individualized approach to helping students who are disabled.

"Each student with a disability should be thought of as a group of one," she said. "Some need more assistance than others."

Disability Services, which consists of five full-time and three part-time staffers, helps a wide variety of students, which totalled about 1,000 last year. Chandler said the numbers of students requesting assistance has risen drastically in the 12 years she has worked there.

"Our numbers, from year to year, never go down," she said. "More students are becoming aware of their rights and needs and what's available for them. (Disability Services) is a place for them to get information and front-line assistance."

Students assisted by Disability

Services include those with learning disorders such as attention deficit disorder, mobility impairments and psychological disorders. Last year, a coordinator was added for hearing impaired students.

"Each student with a disability should be thought of as a group of one. Some need more assistance than others."

Donna Chandler, director of Student Disability Services

Among the services offered are exam services for students who need to take examinations under special circumstances, tutoring and counseling, bionic bus system referrals and providing guide books of handicapped-accessible areas on campus.

Disability Services also provides needs for specific services in classes. Class syllabi can be converted to Braille for blind students. Textbooks can be made available on audio tape, some of which are read by volunteer readers. Classes to be held in buildings that are not handicapped-accessible can be requested to move elsewhere, Chandler said.

"That works especially well for students with non-visible disabilities," she said. "It legitimizes their need for assistance and makes sure they get it."

Students can fill out Student Academic Accommodation Requests if they require assistance, which allows staffers to work with students based on their individual needs.

One new service that started last year is remote real-time captioning, which allows hearing-impaired students to read the lecture being spoken. The class instructor wears a microphone that sends the spoken lecture to a communications company, which sends the typed lecture to the student's laptop via a modem.

UI senior Nathan Burnette, one of the first UI students to use remote real-time captioning, said the system makes understanding classes much easier.

"I've always been very good at lip reading, and last year I used an interpreter," he said. "But it's harder to understand science teachers because there are so many technical terms."

UI sophomore Alicia Healy, who also used the system last year, said real-time captioning allows hearing-impaired students to understand the lecture without constantly looking at an interpreter.

"Captioning helps because not only can I understand what the instructor is saying, (but) I can have all the information on the screen so I can look up at the board to get all the information," she said.

General Sherman leads Iowa into 1997

Chris Snider

Forget about Tim Dwight and the Heisman hype. Forget about whether or not Tavian Banks can replace Sedrick Shaw at tailback. Forget about whether or not Jared DeVries is the best lineman in the Big Ten.

The fate of the 1997 Iowa football team rests on the shoulders (make that the right arm) of one man — quarterback Matt Sherman.

Sherman, a senior from St. Ansgar, Iowa, has started 26 consecutive games dating back to his freshman year — more than any player on the Iowa roster.

Entering his senior season, he ranks among Iowa's career leaders in nearly every statistical category as a quarterback. He is fourth in touchdown passes (32), passing yards (5,200), completions (366) and total offense (4,838) and fifth in pass attempts (618).

"You always feel comfortable going into a season when you have a solid, veteran quarterback," Iowa coach Hayden Fry said. "Matt gives us that. But it's important we develop a good back-up."

Sherman goes down, there is not an experienced back-up to fill the void.

Sophomore Randy Reiners is listed as Iowa's No. 2 quarterback entering the fall, but Reiners has yet to throw a football with an Iowa uniform on in anything other than pregame warm-ups.

If Sherman stays healthy, the Hawkeyes could have a solid season. A total of seven starters return on each side of the ball. The biggest losses will be offensive tackle Ross Verba and defensive back Tom Knight, both first-round selections in the 1997 NFL draft.

Another big shoe to fill will be that of All-

Big Ten punter Nick Gallery, who led the league in punting for two straight seasons. Gallery holds Iowa records for career punts (188) and punting yardage (8,113).

But don't count the Hawkeyes out of the Rose Bowl hunt just yet.

The Hawkeyes are expecting a big season from Dwight, who will play receiver, tailback, defensive back and return punts and kicks this season. In fact, the team has already started publicizing Dwight as a Heisman candidate. Dwight had 100 receiving yards in three of Iowa's final four games last season and set the Iowa single-season record with 440 punt return yards on 24 attempts.

Banks is another explosive player on the offensive side of the ball. He ran for 629 yards last season as Sedrick Shaw's back-up, starting only two games.

"Tavian Banks was the best No. 2 running back in the country last year," Fry said. "He could have a banner season if he stays healthy."

Junior Jared DeVries will anchor the Hawkeye defense after earning third-team All-American status from Football News last season. DeVries collected 22 tackles for a loss and 13 sacks last season.

The Hawkeyes will be strong up the middle with the linebacker duo of Vernon Rollins and Matt Hughes, both juniors.

Hughes and Rollins were one-two on the team in tackles last season with 136 and 126, respectively.

The Hawkeyes open the season on Sept. 6 against Northern Iowa at Kinnick Stadium.

Iowa dominates Texas Tech in the Alamo Bowl

Iowa football coach Hayden Fry figured out a way to make a trip to his home state of Texas the past two years without it costing him a cent — and it's not even illegal.

The Hawkeyes have played bowl games in Texas each of those years, including a 38-18 pounding of Washington in 1995 and a 27-0 trouncing of Texas Tech in the Alamo Bowl last season.

The latter of the two came on Dec. 29, 1996, at the Alamo Dome in San Antonio. It was a fitting end to a roller coaster season that saw Iowa lose at Tulsa, win at Penn State and even get booed at home on occasion.

It was also a fitting end to the record-breaking career of running back Sedrick Shaw. Shaw outshone 2,000-yard rusher and Doak Walker Award winner Byron Hanspard, nearly doubling the Texas Tech star's total of 64 yards with 113 of his own.

"It's not bad," Shaw said afterwards. "I can't complain." Iowa's other star on offense was ESPN's Player of the Game, Tim Dwight. His performance unofficially kicked off his campaign for the 1997 Heisman Trophy.

Jared DeVries earned Defensive Most Valuable Player honors while Shaw was named offensive MVP.

Heisman hopeful Tim Dwight returns as one of the Hawkeyes' main weapons in an offense that returns seven starters. In total, 14 starters are back looking to top 1996's 9-3 finish and make the Hawkeyes' first trip to the Rose Bowl since 1990.

UI's bargain status not affected by tuition increase

Kevin Doyle

Attending the UI may seem expensive, but it's still a bargain in the Big Ten. For the 1997-98 school year, the UI tuition will increase $96 for in-state students and $354 for out-of-state students — the lowest increase in several years. UI freshman Anthony Lane said he's not worried about the increase.

"It's a fact of life," Miller said. "Iowa's tuition increase is minimal compared to other schools." The UI has the lowest rates of all the Big Ten schools in almost every college — including Liberal Arts, Business Administration, Engineering, Education and Law — for both in-state and out-of-state students.

Miller said each semester many UI students ask what they're getting for increased tuition. "The increase raises the entire pot that the UI divies up in departments, financial aid and scholarships throughout campus," Miller said. "Everyone will feel a tiny bit of the increase."

Miller said the UI bases their increases on the Higher Education Price Index (HEPI). The UI has never gone above the HEPI, she said.

In-state students will see an addition of about $96 from last year's $2,470.

National leader in health care here at the UI

Chris Gardner

Breakthrough transplants, innovative technology and internationally recognized physicians help make the University of Iowa Hospitals and Clinics a national leader in health care and research.

The UIHC is located on the west side of campus across from Kinnick Stadium and offers a wide spectrum of clinical services for patients, serves as the primary hospital for the UI and provides a base for pioneering research to improve health care.

UI Vice President for University Relations Ann Rhodes said the UIHC strives to provide the best possible care for patients in all aspects of health issues and research.

"The UIHC is among the finest institutions in the nation and is a valuable asset to the UI community," Rhodes said.

Research is a driving force behind the UIHC's leading edge in health care.

This year alone, the UIHC has made groundbreaking work in such areas as prostate cancer, heart disease and organ transplants. The UIHC performs about 40 liver transplants every year.

The Iowa State Board of Regents serves as the governing body of the UIHC, which first opened in 1898 and has grown enormously over the past 100 years on the UI campus.

In 1994-95 the UIHC admitted over 37,000 patients, making it by far the largest hospital in Iowa and one of the largest in the country.

The various areas of the UIHC include the general hospital, the Colleton Pavillion, Carver Pavillion, Pappajohn Pavillion, the Boyd Towers and the Pomerantz Family Pavillion. These areas house several departments and clinics that make up the UIHC.

Members of the Iowa field hockey team make Christmas ornaments with Rachel Bucher, a patient at UIHC's children's hospital last December.

The UIHC also sponsors a variety of programs to benefit the Iowa City community, including a variety of events geared towards children and UI students. There are also a multitude of events and exhibits located throughout the hospital. In November, a photo exhibit was on display in the Colleton Atrium displaying the portraits of medicine and health care and biographies of women who have died of breast cancer. In addition, the Medical Museum displays many photos and exhibits concerning the history of medicine and health care.

Becky Gruhn

So you were an All-Conference basketball player in high school, but weren't quite good enough to play for Tom Davis' or Angie Lee's Hawkeyes. Heading to the UI, it probably seems as if your competitive basketball days are over.

Think again. The UI Fieldhouse offers the perfect solution for students on campus who need a cure for their basketball withdrawal symptoms, and it has received national recognition in the process.

In April of 1997, Sports Illustrated tabbed the facility as the Best Pickup Basketball Gym in the nation.

Shooting hoops at the Fieldhouse — which, by the way, is free — is what elevated Darryl Moore from a no-name pickup player to a part-time starter on Tom Davis' 1996-97 Iowa basketball team.

Moore was discovered by an Iowa assistant coach while participating in an afternoon pickup game at the Fieldhouse.

The name, Fieldhouse, should sound familiar to all you die-hard Hawkeye fans out there. Prior to the construction of Carver-Hawkeye Arena in 1982, the Fieldhouse was home of the Iowa men's basketball team from 1926 through 1982.

After the construction of Carver-Hawkeye Arena, the Fieldhouse underwent major renovations.

Where Ronnie Lester once dazzled fans is now an open area devoted to several different sports courts. An upper-level walking/running track also was built in the historic location.

Overall, the Fieldhouse offers 10 regulation basketball courts that are available 364 days a year from 7:30 a.m. until 10:30 p.m. Past 3:30, the courts are usually jammed with high-school-have-beens showcasing their stuff.

Women don't ever have to worry about being "bullied" off the court, as they have priority if enough are present to initiate a game.

Basketball is just one of many sports the Fieldhouse accommodates. The facility also includes a swimming pool, 22 racquetball courts, 10 volleyball courts, four squash courts, five badminton courts, a martial arts and table tennis area, a mat room and five other activity areas.

For those of you who aren't interested in sports but want to prevent that "freshman 15", the Fitness Loft, located inside the Fieldhouse, is your answer.

Located on the fifth floor of the building (just follow the signs located in the stairways), the Fitness Loft offers a high-tech fitness area with a "club" atmosphere.

The Loft features a free-weight room along with an area packed with cardiovascular equipment. It also features selected pieces of strength and conditioning equipment.

The Fitness Loft is air conditioned, carpeted, and has three TV monitors and stereo system.

Perhaps the most enticing aspect of the Loft is the price. While most downtown workout facilities will cost students over $100 to join, the Fitness Loft charges students merely $50 a semester and only $35 during the summer session. Daily rates are $4.

Unlimited Aerobics passes also are available at higher costs.

Kim Silbernik/The Daily Iowan

A pickup basketball game always can be found at the Fieldhouse. Students can drop by anytime to play for free. If there are enough women present, they have priority on the courts.

UISG: student involvement creates change

Kristin Bauer

As the president of the UI Student Government, Allison Miller believes getting involved is the key to success in college.

"The recruitment of students to get involved with UISG is important for the future of student government. It is the basis for all we do," Miller said.

UISG serves students by overseeing campus organizations and representing student views to the administration. Executives and senators also allocate funds to campus organizations, award monies for research grants and scholarly presentations and provide funds for self-help and childcare scholarships.

Under the present system, three branches constitute the UISG. The Undergraduate Activities Senate (UAS) and Undergraduate Collegiate Senate (UCS) represent undergraduate students, while the Graduate and Professional Student Senate (GPSS) represents graduate students.

The UAS addresses non-academic concerns with constituents including students living in residence halls, off campus, in UI Family Housing and the Greek system. The UCS focuses on academic concerns in which senators represent various majors throughout the UI. The GPSS represents concerns of graduate and professional students.

In the past year members of the UISG have made great strides toward the publication of teacher evaluations and the enforcement of "dead days" before finals week.

Senators also serve on various committees and commissions such as the Association of Big Ten Students, Student Legal Services and the Rape Victim Advocacy Program.

"I'm looking forward to getting more involved this year," said UCS senator Janelle Johnson. "There are numerous committees and we get information pertaining to each committee before we sign up — you can find a committee according to your interests."

UISG executives and senators also have gained personal rewards through their services to the campus community.

"Being in the UISG is a different type of education," former vice president Rob Wagner said. "The involvement gives you skills to motivate and direct people, which is an

I.C. is more than just a college town

College towns are not just fraternity houses, liquor stores and bars. Iowa City has many historical, recreational and superstitious attractions to visit when students just need to get away.

Old Capitol

One of the most recognizable sites in Iowa City is the big golden dome on top of the Old Capitol building in the heart of downtown.

Iowa City's most historic and famous site was laid on July 4, 1840. The Old Capitol was the site of the first governor inauguration, first six Iowa General Assemblies and where the state's Constitution was drafted.

The capital of Iowa moved to Des Moines in 1857 and the Old Capitol was dedicated to the UI. It was the first building owned by the UI and is now the focal point of the UI.

Museum of Natural History

For the student that is forced to attend a lecture with 700 other students in Macbride Hall, take advantage of it. Skip out of class a few minutes early and check out the Museum of Natural History.

Founded in 1958, it is the oldest museum west of the Mississippi River and many collections rank among those of the top museums in North America.

The Museum of Natural History contains more than one million specimens from microscopic fossils to mastodon skulls to a stuffed giant panda. The museum includes a Bird Hall, Mammal Hall and Iowa Hall to please all science buffs.

Black Angel

Iowa City's most superstitious site is located at the Reno Street entrance of Oakland Cemetery. The Black Angel was commissioned by Teresa Dolezal Feldevert to be put at the grave of her late son, Eddy, and husband, Nicholas.

The angel was originally bronze when it was created in 1912, but over the years oxidation has turned it black. On the Black Angel there is an epitaph that ends with, "I'm at peace in my cool grave."

Many legends have circulated around the Black Angel in Iowa City. It has been said that it is the protector of the dead and moves around at night. Other tales involve kissing the angel or being kissed beneath it at midnight.

Pedestrian Mall

One of Iowa City's biggest tourist attractions is the Pedestrian Mall. Lined up and down with shops, restaurants and bars, it is a great place to just hang out.

It is the perfect place to sit outside and enjoy a great Iowa day. Such activities as chess, hackysac or listening to live music can take place all in one day in the Pedestrian Mall.

Coralville Lake

Just north of Iowa City is nature's playground. The Coralville Lake is primarily a flood-reduction project, but offers the public a wide variety of outdoor recreational opportunities.

For the outdoor person, the Coralville Lake has it all. It offers picnic shelters, mountain biking, hiking, snowmobiling, swimming, boating, hunting, fishing, camping, frisbee, golf and cross-country skiing. The best part is that it is the right price - free. It doesn't cost anything to enjoy nature.

Above: The Pedestrian Mall is where students and locals alike can mingle and enjoy live music, shops and food. There are plenty of benches and places to just hangout.

Right: The Black Angel has been an Iowa City legend for 85 years now. There are many stories associated with it and it is a popular attraction for students to scare themselves with.

Look where a UI degree got these people

The UI has been called home by many famous and very successful people over the years. People from all walks of life have attended here—judges, educators, authors and even many star athletes. The education students receive at the UI allow them to reach their highest potential. Every year, the list of prize winners and powerful people grows.

Branstad

UI that led to the establishment of the American Institute of Public Opinion (the Gallup Poll) in 1935.

• Jane Smiley, novelist. Smiley has written "Moo" and "A Thousand Acres."

• Mildred Wirt Benson, author and journalist. Benson wrote the first Nancy Drew book, "The Secret of the Old Clock" and other Nancy Drew novels under the pen name of Carolyn Keene.

Smiley

• Margaret Walker Alexander, author, director and professor. Alexander is the former director of the Institute for Study of Black People, professor at Jackson State University and author of "Jubilee," which preceded "Roots."

• George Gallup, creator of the Gallup opinion poll. Gallup founded the Quill and Scroll Society. He developed opinion survey techniques while at the basis of the 1989 Oscar-nominated film "Field of Dreams."

• Tennessee Williams, Pulitzer Prize winner for his screenplays "A Streetcar Named Desire" and "Cat on a Hot Tin Roof." Williams received his bachelors degree in 1938.

Law

• Juanita Kid Stout, first African-American woman to become a federal judge. She received her bachelor's degree in 1939.

• Nile Kinnick, football player, a Phi Beta Kappa member and liberal arts senior class president, won the 1939 Heisman Trophy while playing tailback for the Hawkeyes.

ter's degree in psychology from the UI in 1964.

• James Van Allen, space physicist and UI professor emeritus. Van Allen, who received his doctorate in 1939, discovered the Van Allen radiation belts. He has continued to do research and work in space physics.

Jarreau

• Brad Lohaus, center, now with the Toronto Raptors. He is also the co-owner of the Airliner Bar, 22 S. Clinton St.

• Mary Beth Hurt, actress, starred in "The World According to Garp" and "The Big Chill."

• Shirley Rich Krohn, casting director. Krohn directed casting for several Broadway shows and Hollywood films, including "Kramer vs. Kramer."

• Nicholas Meyer, film director: "Star Trek II:"

The Wrath of Kahn," "Star Trek VI: The Undiscovered Country" and "Time After Time."

• Hope Ryden, filmmaker and author. Ryden made the documentary films on animal life in Africa. She also wrote a book titled "America's Last Wild Horses."

Gallup

• Robert James Waller, author. He penned the popular success "The Bridges of Madison County" that was made into a movie. Waller attended the UI for a year on a basketball scholarship.

• Richard Maibaum, script writer. Maibaum received both his bachelor's and master's degrees at the UI and wrote scripts for all of the James Bond films from "Dr. No" through "The Spy Who Loved Me."

• Gene Wilder, actor, producer, director and screenwriter. Wilder starred in "Woman in Red" and "Stir Crazy."

The UI makes it easy to find a good job

Will Valet
After working out one's class schedule, finding a reasonable place to live and getting as far away from one's parents as possible, UI students find they only need one more thing — money.
But never fear, student jobs are available all over the UI campus. Finding them is the fun part, and the UI Office of Student Financial Aid is trying to make that process easier.
There are more than 13,000 jobs for students available on the UI campus, earning more than $24.5 million in wages for students per year.
There are many ways by which students can find those on-campus jobs. One of the most popular, the Jobnet Computerized Job Network, was established seven years ago as a modernization of bulletin boards.
It can be accessed through the Iowa Student Information Services (ISIS) network, and this fall also will be made available on the World Wide Web.

Mark Warner, director of the Office of Student Financial Aid, said Jobnet is a critical and constantly updated medium through which to find employment on campus.
"Jobnet is the vehicle by which we advertise jobs that come through our office, and it is updated daily," he said. "It's also extremely user-friendly."
At student orientations throughout the summer, computer terminals will be made available for students seeking jobs, and current UI students will be available to help newcomers use Jobnet.
Of course, Jobnet hasn't completely replaced other means of finding jobs on the UI campus. The Campus Information Center at the Iowa Memorial Union (IMU) has an employment board for job seekers.
Also, an annual Job Fair will be held Aug. 27 from 9:30 a.m. to 3 p.m. in the IMU's Main Lounge. Warner said approximately 2,000 students attended the event last year, some of which were interviewed and hired for on-campus employment on the spot.

"A student could attend the Job Fair and walk away with a job and work authorization," he said. "We've been getting very positive feedback about that."
Students also should keep their eyes open to advertisements in The Daily Iowan and their ears open to student word-of-mouth to find current employment, Warner said.
"Student employment is very important in terms of paying for education," he said. "Our hope is that the jobs students are finding are related to their academic pursuit. Without student employees, the UI wouldn't be able to function."
Carol Mennenga, clerk at the Office of Student Financial Aid, said there is a wide variety of jobs on campus, from the normal to the unusual.
"You can find jobs in office work, in the library or in food service, but you can also exercise lab rats as a job," she said. "You really run the gamut here."

Kim Silbernik/The Daily Iowan

At the UI Job Fair, students have the opportunity to talk with many different companies about job openings. This service is a good way for students who are looking for a job to find one.
Anything imaginable is available.
Some off-campus, work study jobs also are available through the Financial Aid Office's services, but they are limited to those that pay hourly wages and not full-time, Mennenga said.
Although many jobs fill up quickly, Warner said students should never be discouraged in their on-campus job search.
"We are active throughout the year finding jobs for students, and we are always adding jobs to the Jobnet," he said.

ITCs give students access to free computing

Will Valet
Whether it's for writing a final paper under an excruciating deadline or checking e-mail just for fun, Instructional Technology Centers (ITCs) are popular for giving students a technological connection — for free.

There are currently 26 ITCs on campus, housing approximately 1,000 computer terminals, both Macintoshes and personal computers. A new ITC will be added in the fall in Schaeffer Hall when renovations to the building are finished.

ITCs are an inexpensive alternative to students who don't have the kind of money to buy a complete computer system of computer, modem and printer, which can cost $2,500 or more. At ITCs, all costs are covered on the UI computing fees that are paid with one's U-bill.

Additional costs include printing on laser printers, which can cost around 10 cents per sheet.

Virginia Drake, computer consultant for the UI Information Technology Services (ITS), said ITCs are most popular among students who live in residence halls and on-campus locations who cannot afford or don't have room for their own computer.

"ITCs give students a place to check e-mail, access the Internet, type papers or do any other homework, some of it on-line, for free," she said. "It's economical and practical to use them."

Five of the UI's nine residence halls (Burge, Mayflower, Quadrangle, Hillcrest and Stanley) have ITCs of their own, and those that don't are near a residence hall that does house an ITC. The ITCs range in size from the Main Library, which has 145 computers, and the Shambaugh Honors House, which has seven.

Because of the large demand of students using the ITCs on a regular basis, there are certain hours of the day when ITCs are less crowded. Drake said the best times to use a computer are during meal times, Friday nights and all day Saturday.

"The frequency of use really depends on the ITC," Drake said. "The ones in Burge Hall and Pappajohn (Business Administration Building) are busy from the time it opens to the rest of the day. Sunday nights and weekday afternoons are the busiest times for ITCs, but it also depends on the time of the semester."

Brian Moore/The Daily Iowan

Long lines often result from students waiting to use computers in ITCs. UI graduate student Susan Schmitt said she has been consistently frustrated with long lines to use computers and print off papers.

"I've waited 25 minutes to get stuff printed off, with 13 people in front of me," she said. "It gets really annoying after a while."

Most ITCs open around 9 a.m. and close around 1 a.m. The Weeg ITC, located in the Linquist Center, is open 24 hours a day.

Craving late night food? Pick your poison

Chris James

Whether you're hungry after the bars close or you're just craving a late night snack to get you through the night, Iowa City offers a fine array of food establishments that stay open late to satisfy that burning hunger.

It's just around the corner

• If your right smack downtown, then your bound to pass by an Iowa tradition. Pancho's Mexican Grill, 32 S. Clinton St., is open till 3 a.m. and offers tons of great Mexican food. The two pound burrito is the biggest this side of the Rio Grande.

• Big Mike's Super Subs, 20 S. Clinton St., offers delivery or dine in. There is a small charge for delivery. Big Mike's offer's eight and 16 inch sandwich's to fill your tummy.

• In the pedestrian mall near the Union and the Field House is a quaint stand that sells gyro's. Check it out after dancing the night away.

Studying with Pancakes

• If you like to study while woofing down coffee to stay awake, Country Kitchen, 1402

S. Gilbert St., is a place to sit and gather your thoughts. The skillet's make great brain food.

• Village Inn Pancake House, 9 Sturgis Corner Dr., is another place where you and a friend can discuss the many complex issues surrounding the idea of sleeping in and skipping class. Try the pigs in a blanket.

• Sam's Pizza IC, 321 S. Gilbert St., offers something different with occasional bands coming in. They also have a variety of beer and pizza specials and are open till midnight every night except Sunday.

Pizza! Pizza!

• Gumby's, 702 S. Gilbert St., You can get a large pizza for around $5 on certain days of the week. Gumby's is open till 3 a.m. and has pokey sticks. Need I say more? Gumby's is delivery only.

• Pizza Pit, 214 E. market St., is open till 2:30 a.m. on week-ends and additionally offers chicken wings and drumsticks. They also offer a variety of deals involving coupons that cater to college students.

• Scott Lebeck of Pizza Pit said pizza is the choice of many residence hall students for late night meals and snacks, and most Iowa City pizzeria's are busy well into the morning.

• "It's great dorm food," Lebeck said. "Pizza is really not that expensive and if you split the cost up, it's a really great deal."

• Home Team Pizza, 922 Maiden Ln., has a variety of deals and you don't have to mess with coupons. Try the zesty cheesebread.

• Paul Revere's Pizza, 325 E. Market St., Revere's has sandwiches and spaghetti in addition to the pizza. They also have free delivery and are open till 1 a.m. on every night except Sunday. Get the garlic breadsticks.

Brian Ray/The Daily Iowan

There are many late night places open to cure your craving for food. Pancho's is a popular favorite.

• The distinction of being the only drive-up pizza place in Iowa City belongs to Falbo Bros. Pizzeria, 230 Kirkwood Av. Falbo's has free delivery and is known for their famous Italian style pizza.

• Happy Joe's Pizza and Ice Cream Parlor, 225 S. Gilbert St., is a great place to dine in, carryout or have delivered. Joe's ice cream parlor is a delight.

Try the taco pizza if you get a chance.

• Of course no city would be complete without a Domino's, Godfather's, Little Caesar's, and Pizza Hut. Iowa City is no exception to the rule, with all of these pizzeria's having locations in Iowa City.

• Finally, if you can figure out where Secret Pizza is, well good for you.

Let there be no doubt about it, Iowa City has a busy and thriving social life. The downtown bars and restaurants are central to any student's daily existence. Here's a guide to going out and getting in.

Places to quench your thirst

- The Deadwood, 6 S. Dubuque St., Don't let the scary name frighten you away. This primo establishment features good beer, studying until 7 and "The Simpsons" every day at 3:30. After 7, you must be 21 to get in.
- The Vine Tavern, 330 E. Pretiss St., has hot wings spicy enough to injure your unborn children. A pool table, dart boards and many televisions make this a great bar to watch sports or just hang out.
- Fitzpatrick's, 525 S. Gilbert St., offers home brewed beer for those looking for something a little different. Fitzzy's beer garden is a great place to hang if you don't want to go home smelling like a chimney.
- The Dublin Underground, 5 S. Dubuque St., is an ideal place to test your wits at checkers or chess after a night of slamming brew. A quiet refuge from the pounding bass of dance bars, the Dublin is a perfect place for deep conversation.

Holiday Inn. 50-cent draws on Thursday bring in the locals and occasionally bands will rock this other wise relaxed lounge.

Places to boogie

- Union Bar, 121 E. College St. Known as the biggest bar in the Big Ten, the Union offers two floors of rump-shaking action. You'll never know what future big-name music acts might show up on the stage. The Union offers these nights almost every day of the week to go with a pool room and giant TVs. You gotta be 19 to get in.
- The Field House bar, 111 E. College St., is a great place to get the "other" kind of workout. With a relaxing restaurant atmosphere in the front and mirrored dance floor in the back,

"I think there's two different bar scenes in Iowa City. There's the college bar scene that competes for customers with drink specials and things like that. Then there's the alternative bar scene that specializes in different things like places people can go and have a nice quaint place to talk."

- Places to lose your hearing
•Gabe's, 330 E. Washington St., has been around for 15 years and plays to all sorts of musical tastes. While the music has a dance floor upstairs, and fine drinkin' and eatin downstairs.

•G.A. Malone's, 121 Iowa Ave., boasts steaks, pasta and pizza along with weekly evening entertainment, including comedy and music.

Malone's manager Josh Hengas said with all the quality restaurants in the downtown area, bringing in the crowds can be quite a task sometimes.

"There's a lot of competition," Hengas said. "People tend to favor certain downtown restaurants but they also have to remember to try a variety of places in the downtown area."
•Bo James, 118 E Washington St., has a variety of good old American food in a cozy environment.

•Diamond Dave's, Old Capitol Mall, offers you the chance to enjoy Mexican food in the comfort of the mall. While you're there, take some time to ponder this: who is Dave and where are the diamonds?

•Gringo's, 115 E College St., has the perfect atmosphere to sit and talk with your friends while enjoying fine Mexican cuisine, as well as a wide variety of Margaritas.
•The Great Midwestern Ice Cream Company, 126 E Washington St., has more than just ice cream. They boast some of Iowa City's best soup and sandwiches, as well as a great environment to study in.

•Masala Indian Vegetarian Cuisine, 9 S. Dubuque St., is just what the name implies. If you want to get away from burgers and fries, drop on by.
•Micky's, 11 S. Dubuque St., sells their famous burger baskets on Sundays and Wednesdays, a bargain that no hungry college student can refuse.

•The Mill, 120 E. Burlington St., has food ranging from great pizza to excellent pastas and your good old sandwiches. Stay for the entertainment.

•Mondo's Sports Cafe, 212 S. Clinton St., has televisions to enjoy sports programming and steaks, pasta and seafood.

•Yen Ching Cafe, 130 S. Dubuque St., and Ko's Kitchen, 18 S. Clinton St., are cheap ways to satisfy you hankering for Asian cuisine. You can get a full meal for around $4.

•Giovanni's, 109 E. College St., is a classy restaurant serving marinara, alfredo and Capellini Neapolitan pasta, as well as Italian drinks and desserts.

•The Hamburg Inn, No. 2, 214 N. Linn St., established in 1948, features cheap, delicious down-home cookin', as well as the famous Zadar omelette.

Jason Liniger, a bartender at Martini's 127 E. College St., serves up a cold brew to some lucky patron. Iowa City has over 30 bars, restaurant, and night clubs to choose from. Activities can range from catching live music to dancing, or just relaxing and having a beer with friends.

the Field House is an ideal place to have a cold one or dance the night away. The "house" is 19 and up.

•One-Eyed Jake's, 18-20 S. Clinton St., Jake's recently remodeled downstairs is great place to get your courage up to go upstairs and tackle the dance floor. Comedy night and dart boards entice crowds of 19 and up to visit this downtown establishment.

•Vito's, 118 E. College St., is an excellent place for the over-21 crowd to get down. The DJs spin tunes from the 70s, 80s and 90s so that you can have a fashion complex by the time you leave.

•The 620 Night Club, 620 S. Madison St., is near the Cambus barn and offers a perfect mix of bigger-city tunes. This alternative dance club is a great place at Gabe's is four-star, the actual bar wouldn't be mistaken for the Taj-Mahal. Since the stage is on the second floor, the audience can have their molecules shaken by the floor when the band gets the crowd going. 19-year-olds and up only, please.

•Gunnerz, 123 E. Washington St. While this live music venue features mainly alternative rock bands, it has brought in blues, techno raves and reggae. Don't let the tie-dye tarps fool you, this is a rockin' bar. You must be 19 to get in the doors.

•The Wheelroom, Iowa Memorial Union, books bands on a weekly basis, often with no cover charge. Don't go looking for a beer at the bar, however, the university recently decided to phase out alcohol sales. All ages are admitted.

ty of drink specials to help drown those sorrows after losing your house to the bookies. Must be 19 to enter.

•The Q Bar, 211 Iowa Av, This is pool hall central of Iowa City. Throw in darts, video games and drink specials with live music upstairs and you've set for an evening of spending the "grocery" money Mom and Dad gave you.
•RT Grunt's, 826 S. Clinton St., a sand volleyball court and basketball hoop highlight this dance/pool hall as the place where you can Wang Chung.

From home cooking to bunk beds

Jennifer Cassell

UI sophomore Rahni Spencer loves dorm life so much, she's decided to spend all four years living in the residence halls. Spencer had her first stay in Burge Residence Hall during a summer program at the UI when she was a high-school student. Since then, she has lived in Burge for two consecutive years and plans to live there through graduation.

"I enjoy being there so much I decided to make it my home," Spencer said. The nine residence halls on the UI campus house more than 5,000 students. All residence halls are co-ed, and can house students of all levels, including graduate students. However, all halls are at least 50 percent freshmen.

The Iowa River separates the nine halls on campus. There are five residence halls on the east side of the river and four on the west side.

Chad Doellinger, president of Associated Residence Halls (ARH), said living in residence halls can be helpful to new students because it opens up the door for many opportunities.

By getting involved with floor, hall or ARH government, students can meet lots of people and gain leadership skills, Doellinger said. ARH is a student-run governing body that acts as a liaison between administrators and students. ARH runs social and educational programs including casino nights, barbecues and an alcohol-free night at The Field House bar, 111 E. College St.

"There's a lot more to college than just getting an education," Doellinger said. "Students should get involved in something, meet people and take full advantage of things (dorms) offer."

Spencer has been involved in floor government both years in Burge and currently serves as her floor's president. She said because so many students are living under one roof, people need to learn to share with one another.

Brian Ray/The Daily Iowan

UI freshman Ryan Williams searches among his belongings while living in the lounges at Daum. Due to overcrowding in dorms, students can often live in lounges for several weeks.

"It's important for a floor to have unity," she said. "Property is communal, and it's important for people to take part."

Front desk clerks also are available 24 hours to assist residents with any emergency or other dorm room problems.

UI residence halls rank third out of the other eleven Big Ten universities. The dorms provide laundry facilities, vending machines, study areas, TV lounges and nearby Cambus service.

Rooms are equipped with beds, sinks, desks and chairs, telephones, mirrors, peepholes and wastebaskets. Access to cable TV is also available.

RAs: your new parent for the next academic year

Will Valt
 There may be no place like home, but UI Resident Assistants are trained to make newcomers feel more comfortable in the residence halls.

There are 112 Resident Assistants (RAs) at the UI's nine residence halls. When homesickness sets in, RAs are there to help residence-hall students with any problems and provide a shoulder to lean on, said Cheryl Hoogerwerf-Reardon, UI coordinator of residence life.

"RAs need to be trainable, have good common-sense skills and be interested in helping students make the adjustment to college," she said. "They should also be good role models for students."

Among the criteria RAs are to have a 2.5 cumulative grade point average, 30 credit hours completed by the fall semester and previous residence-hall experience. Many RAs find the experience so satisfying they keep the job for most of their college careers. Martha Vandervoort, who has lived in Slater Hall for seven years, has been an RA for the past four.

Vandervoort sees her job as having many roles to assist the students on her floor. "I see the title they give RAs as being an educator about college life, and a helper," she said. "We're someone to talk to at all hours of the day."

Cheryl Hoogerwerf-Reardon, UI coordinator of Residence Life
 "They (RAs) should also be good role models for students."
 "We're trying to create a community on the floor," she said. "I just want to make it a comfortable environment for them. The floor has always been really cooperative, and they enjoy doing things. It just makes it more fun if there's a community of people you know to live with."
 Vandervoort said she tries to teach her residents to be self-sufficient.

"I've really grown up with this job," she said. "I know every day I might have to tell someone to turn their stereo down or something. But they have a responsibility, too, to work things out themselves."

Vandervoort said her favorite part of the job is working with people and helping them adjust to college. "I wouldn't have done it if it wasn't fun," he said. "It's a lot of responsibility, but it's all in the way you handle things. You can discipline someone without having you hate them afterwards."

Planned Parenthood® helped me make the right choice for me

Marina Decenas, 24 years old, knows what happens when women become mothers before they're ready to take care of a child - "Planned Parenthood's counselors helped me get ready. Now they're helping me make sure my son and I stay healthy."

Nathaniel Burns, 17 years old, is just like other kids his age. They don't always think about getting AIDS or herpes - or getting pregnant. "Maybe the right answer for you is not to have sex. Or if you do, use birth control. Kids don't need a lecture - we need the facts. Planned Parenthood gives them to us."

Melanie Bostic, 31 years old, isn't ready to have a baby so she came to Planned Parenthood for counseling and birth control. She learned Planned Parenthood also offers breast exams, HIV tests, options counseling, and more. "I always knew Planned Parenthood was there for me. I just didn't know in how many ways."

Best law bet for the money

Jeff Clayton

For 133 years, the UI College of Law has provided opportunities for students seeking education beyond an undergraduate degree. "Overall, we are the best legal education for the money, certainly among private schools and among many public schools," said Linda McGuire, assistant dean of the law school. McGuire said the law school at the UI particularly excels in three areas, including an excellent student to faculty ratio. The school also provides personalized attention to students in their first year through small section writing classes of 20 to 30 students. In these sections, students work intensely with faculty members to learn research and writing skills. Finally, McGuire said the facility itself makes the UI unique. "We have a beautiful building and one of the best law libraries in the country," she said. The Boyd Law Building was completed in 1986 and consists of 200,000 square feet, McGuire said. The library is ranked fourth in the number of titles and seventh in the total volumes. Law student Liz Norris said she made the right decision in attending the UI and that professors are particularly helpful. "There are some wonderful professors," Norris said. "They make sure you understand the material." "Overall, we are the best legal education for the money, certainly among private schools and among many public schools." Linda McGuire, assistant dean of the College of Law

Law student Eric Nelson agreed. "The professors have been incredible. They make a point of being approachable," Nelson said. "After the first year, most of them tend to treat students more like junior colleagues. Most of them are not only experts in their fields of study, but they are honestly enthusiastic about sharing their knowledge," Nelson said. Professor Patrick Bauer, who teaches commercial law, said the students are just as enthusiastic as the faculty. "Our students generally remain quite engaged in their coursework throughout their three years of study," Bauer said. He agreed that the small section program facilitated student-teacher interaction. Nelson said the best aspect of the law school is the amount of clubs, groups and service organizations available. "It would be difficult to not get involved in extracurricular activities," Nelson said. "Being involved in outside activities enhances the whole experience." McGuire said the law school offered 125 courses in 1997 for students completing a degree in Juris Doctor (J.D.) and Masters of Law in International and Comparative Law (LL.M.). She had advice for freshmen interested in attending law school at the UI. "There is no such thing as a pre-law degree, but students interested in law school should take courses where they learn analytical skills and research and writing," McGuire said.

The DI: connecting you to the 'outside'

I've never met an average reader. That's what we newspaper types call readers when we think about The Daily Iowan. What would the average reader want to read? We ask each other. What can the average reader get from this?

That kind of thing happens every day. The question is not what the average reader can get from the DI. The question is what you can get from the DI. You certainly are not average. You're above average.

So it's my job as editor to make sure there's something for you in the DI every day, from your first day to your last. That first day of college is killer. You have get up at dawn because all the decent Spanish or rhetoric classes were filled. Your room is barren, there are no good posters left over from last year's poster sale. Mom and Dad left 10 bucks, which bought last night's pizza. If you're lucky, the air conditioner is roaring and the tile floor is cold enough to make you hurry to the door. But when you leave the dark room to head for the crowded showers, there greeting you is your morning paper, The Daily Iowan.

Now, a cynical fifth-year student would tell you that the DI is the worst part of your day. But this fifth-year student is here to tell you it could very well be the best thing that will happen that first day and every day after that for the next few years.

Of course, I'm the editor, so you're thinking, Yeah, right. You're not biased. Why the hell should I care about the DI?

Good question. I'm here to tell you why. In a nutshell, it's this: The DI brings you your world. It's a world you've never really experienced. High school is nostalgia, a bygone era, but your life at the UI is here and now. The DI gives you a glimpse of the events around you; it gives you information about the UI, the nation and the world.

Our mission at the DI is to show how these events impact your life and your world. Of course, each reader is different, but I think there's something for everyone in the DI.

Interested in sports? We've got the greatest collegiate sports coverage available. And what a place to cover the University of Iowa and the Hawkeyes! Whether it's Hayden Fry and the Hawkeye football team or Angie Lee and Hawkeye basketball, there is always something exciting going on in UI athletics. Or maybe you like men's basketball, or women's field hockey. The list of great sports events and men's and women's teams goes on and on.

Perhaps you want to know what's going on in the realm of arts and entertainment. You've come to the right place; Iowa City, called the Athens of the Midwest, offers countless opportunities. Long renown for its literary connections, Iowa City draws authors and poets of all kinds. Or maybe you're a die-hard movie fan. The Biju in the Union offers the best independent and foreign films. The DI will inform you about these events, delivering outstanding movie, TV and book reviews along the way. Every Thursday look for Eighty-Hours, a special arts and entertainment section filled with great things going on in Iowa City for that weekend.

Living in a diverse and educated environment is probably the best thing about Iowa City and the UI (definitely the most enlightening). You'll be exposed to a wide spectrum of ideas and ideologies, many of which are a whole new way of thinking and seeing the world. The DI offers you the Viewpoints Pages to contribute to this community discussion. Viewpoints gets you thinking seriously (and sometimes not so seriously) about the news and events at the UI and beyond.

Of course, there's also one other thing you'll find in the DI news. Every day I go to work the question is the same. "What's going on in the world?" Fortunately, the answer is always different. That's what keeps my job and our world exciting. That's the nature of the events in our world. Every day, there's something new a new story, a new idea, a new way of thinking about things. To me, that's the most important thing in a newspaper, and it's the first thing I look for in the morning. I'll make sure that if you do the same, you'll be well-informed. More importantly, you'll understand your world, and you'll find that it too is above average.

See you in the morning.

The mall is coming

Jeff Clayton

Students coming to the UI will soon have 1 million square feet of new shopping space when the Coral Ridge Mall opens in the spring of 1998.

Located in neighboring Coralville, the mall will enhance the existing shopping opportunities in the area and provide new entertainment options for students.

Along with 90 specialty stores, Coral Ridge will be anchored by Dillard's, Younkers, JCPenny, Target and Sears, said Cindy Reid, the assistant communications manager for General Growth Properties.

Another entertainment option will be an indoor ice skating rink located next to the food court. Currently, no ice skating facilities exist in the Iowa City area.

Reid said General Growth felt the time was right for a mall in the community.

"The demographics are up and income is increasing," Reid said. "We thought Iowa City could support a mall."

However, several Iowa City business owners have expressed concern that the Coral Ridge Mall will mean a decline in shoppers at the Old Capitol Mall and in the Pedestrian Mall. Some UI students have said Coralville is too far for those without cars, while others say the new stores are what they have been waiting for.

"I love the plans so far," said senior Matt Cunningham, who plans to work at the Target store. "Everyone (at Target) can't wait for the new store."

UI sophomore Audra Edelen said the mall will provide new job opportunities for students and bring money into the area.

Although students are pleased with the anchor stores planned, they are hopeful several other specialty stores will locate in Coral Ridge.

"I'd like to see a Gap, more music stores, and more bookstores," Edelen said. "I'd also like new stores with different styles of clothes."

Reid said General Growth plans to release the names of specialty stores signed to locate in the mall this summer.

"We want to give out all the names at once," Reid said.

election day. Still, the results were better than the rest of the country. More than half of America's eligible voters stayed away from the poles on election day. Students said they were either turned off by negative advertising, too busy, didn't register in time, or just couldn't relate to the candidates.

Creighton Cox, a UI graduate and member of the College Republicans last year, said many students find it difficult to get involved because they are away from home. He said students need to be involved in politics because even though many of the issues didn't concern students in the 1996 campaign, they will have considerable effects on their future.

"I hope students will get involved more either by being more informed or helping out with a campaign," Cox said. "Issues on welfare and Social Security affect all of us and we need to let our voices be heard."

A DI reader survey conducted in October found that the top five issues concerning UI students were education, abortion, health care, taxes and welfare.

For information about the candidates' stances on these issues, students turned to the Internet for the first time. The Internet proved to be an invaluable tool for students to educate themselves in 1996, the first election cycle in which the Internet was used by constituents and campaigners.

UI sophomore Dave Jones said coming to college during an election year was a unique opportunity to get involved and become more educated. He said he can only imagine what the presidential election at the end of the millennium might hold.

"Who knows what lies ahead for American politics," Jones said. "With the possibilities of the Internet, the constantly changing political environment and increased voter apathy, it's hard to tell what the future holds in store."

UI museums filled with history, beauty offer great relief from the summer heat

Katharine Horowitz

Students interested in taking a break from the heat and the homework this summer may want to check out some of Iowa's history or its art at one of the UI's many museums.

The UI Museum of Natural History

The museum, located in Macbride Hall, represents four major divisions of natural science — anthropology, botany, geology and zoology.

An exhibit of extinct or endangered species of birds includes whooping cranes, passenger pigeons and the Carolina parakeet — all of which were once found in Iowa.

The Mammal Hall exhibit contains rare animals, such as the giant panda from China and the black-footed ferret of the western United States.

Located in the Iowa Hall Gallery are exhibits of such events as the Europeans' first arrival in Iowa, the geology of Iowa throughout the last 3 million years, a display that traces human history in Iowa from the Ice Age through the settled village farmers of the early historic period and the ecology of Iowa.

Hours are Mondays through Saturdays, 9:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m., and Sundays from 12:30 p.m. to 4:30 p.m. Admission is free.

Old Capitol Museum

The museum represents three historical periods of Iowa's government: the territorial government period, the state government period and the UI's long and continuing use. The House Chamber and Senate Chamber have been restored to the original 1920s decor to reflect these periods. Other rooms have been authentically refurbished, some with what may be original pieces used by state legislators in the 1840s.

The Old Capitol Museum also is offering a special sesquicentennial exhibit, featuring artifacts from the UI and a timeline of events. The exhibit runs through January of 1998.

Hours are Mondays through Saturdays, 10 a.m. to 3 p.m., and Sundays from noon to 4 p.m. Admission is free.

The UI Museum of Art

The museum's ongoing exhibits include African Art from the Stanley Collection, including over 650 pieces of Oceanic, pre-Columbian, Native American and Near Eastern art and an exhibition of 20th century painters such as Picasso, Matisse and Gris.

On June 21, the museum will open its Joan Mammenheimer collection of American ceramics. Other special exhibits include Nazi Drawings by Mauricio Lasansky, running through Aug. 10; a pop art exhibit featuring such artists as Claus Oldenburg, Roy Lichtenstein, Jim Dine, James Rosenquist, Jasper Johns and Robert Rauschenberg; prints by Robert Motherwell, running through Aug. 10; and a surrealism exhibit also running through Aug. 10.

Hours are Tuesdays through Saturdays, 10 a.m. to 5 p.m., and Sundays from noon to 5 p.m. Admission is free.

Greeks give academic and social opportunities

David Schwartz

President of the Panhellenic Council Nicole Hoch has a message for the student body: Going Greek doesn't mean sacrificing your independence.

"I consider myself pretty independent," Hoch said. "You don't have to join, but it's a great way to meet people."

With 22 fraternities and 18 sororities on the UI campus, the Greek system offers students a chance to mesh with people with whom they are comfortable.

Hoch said the system offers a variety of benefits, from personal development to life-long friendship to leadership skills. Last year's UISG President and Vice President, Marc Beltrame and Rob Wagner, were both in a fraternity.

"We supply a majority of the campus leaders," Hoch said. "Being a leader means earning responsibilities you otherwise couldn't get."

Hoch brushes aside the Greek system's elitist reputation, citing community service and philanthropies as events offering chances to get involved with the entire UI campus.

"It's not an exclusive thing, it's inclusive," she said of the Greek system.

Hoch said she expects the teamwork displayed last year with Beltrame, who was also a member of the Phi Gamma Delta fraternity, to carry over into the Allison Miller presidency.

"Definitely, I think we can work together," Hoch said. "We can have a really good year."

If a student is interested in joining a fraternity or sorority, there is a formal rush offered the first week before classes begin in the fall.

It is a five-day process that involves visits to different houses so the pledges can see what Greek life is about within each chapter.

Greek members who put aside their affiliations, lead potential rushees to all the of the fraternities or sororities to meet the members of each chapter.

If a student decides to wait until the spring semester to rush a house, there is an informal rush offered during the first week of classes. The informal setting is just that, more relaxed and casual than a formal rush.

Among the community services performed by fraternities and sororities: the Hospice road race, Communities in Partnership and a blood drive in conjunction with UISG.

This year Dance Marathon raised over $106,000 for children with cancer. This was double last year's figure of $50,000.

Black and Latino/Latina fraternities and sororities are not uncommon at the UI. Currently there are 4 fraternities and 5 sororities on campus that were founded when the communities did not feel that the traditional Greek communities met their needs.

Several times a year, the UI's African-American Greek community holds step shows to celebrate African culture. The shows are used to help promote an understanding of African traditions and values.

With the wide variety of Greek houses, students looking for their particular type of community at the UI are sure to find a chapter that suits their personal tastes.

If students have questions, they can contact the Interfraternity Council at 335-3252 or the Panhellenic Association at 335-3267.

Fraternity functions are not uncommon to gather new pledges. Delta Sigma Phi was a new colony started this year.

Apartment dwellers have their advantages

David Schwartz

Becky Bennett, an Iowa City native, spent her first year of college in St. Paul, Minn., with a roommate who thought a little too highly of herself. When she decided to transfer to the UI in 1993 to major in education, there was no way she was going to move into the residence halls.

After all, she was acting on the advice of somebody who knows the UI scene fairly well: Her mother - also a UI financial aid counselor.

"Unless you were trying to meet people, there was really no financial reason to live in the dorms," Bennett said.

Were she not from Iowa City, Bennett said she may have considered the residence halls. But since she already had established friends in the area, dorm life would have been pointless.

Bennett cited several reasons she prefers a house to the residence halls.

She loves to cook. Unless a dorm dweller has access to a kitchenette, they have no chance to test their culinary expertise.

Even the kitchenette lacks practicality. Imagine cooking Tuna Helper in a casserole dish, then having to walk down six flights of stairs, pulling the bowl out of a 425-degree oven and having to walk back up the stairs with only worn-down oven mitts to protect you.

Even worse than the kitchen, imagine having to share a toilet with 40 people.

"I like having my own space and my own bathroom," Bennett said. "I just like the personal space."

UI senior Tonya Carr offered several benefits of apartment life.

"One: I could cook my own food.

"Two: I'm not under anybody's restrictions. I can play my music as loud as I want.

"And, especially, because I don't have to use a key to get in the bathroom. Also, there's more space and living in an apartment lets you feel more independent."

Carr said the residence halls do have their advantages, such as meeting people and what she calls, "building a family atmosphere." Still after a year in Burge and another in Stanley, she's had her fill of neighbors living in at all hours of the morning, making noise and throwing up in the hallway.

"I'm glad I lived in Burge my first year. It's pretty good for freshmen," said Carr, a fifth-year senior. "Stanley was a little more quiet and not as loud, but neither were really good for studying."

Cambus: 25 years of free transportation

Will Valet

Celebrating its 25th year and still going strong, Cambus is one of the UI campus' most recognizable and defining symbols.

And, it's almost entirely student-run.

Brian McClatchey, Cambus manager, said Cambus' endurance can be attributed to the UI students that both run and ride it.

"It was initiated and run primarily by students since the beginning," he said. "It's an attribute to the work and creativity of students on the UI campus."

Cambus started as an experiment, when students in west-side residence halls Rienow and Slater noticed a need to get many students to the Pentacrest area more quickly. The experiment was a success, and Cambus continued to grow, McClatchey said.

"I think we're here to stay," he said. "It's a real attribute to the UI. Everyone knows what Cambus is on this campus."

Out of 150 Cambus employees, 145 are UI students. McClatchey said Cambus is a national example for other college campuses seeking a student-run transportation organization.

"We get calls from around the country asking how an organization such as Cambus is so successful," he said. "The fact that it's almost entirely student-run is what fascinates a lot of people. Cambus is student employees. (Students) aren't just supplementing to the system."

At 40 feet long and 16 tons, the yellow-and-black Cambuses are impossible to miss on campus, especially to the students, staff and faculty members who depend on them for transportation throughout the day.

On a typical day, there are 19 buses running 11 bus routes all over the UI campus. Sixteen of them are standard-route busses, which can hold up to 90 students each, while the other three are bionic busses that shuttle mobility-impaired students from their homes to classes.

The earliest Cambus routes start at 5:45 a.m., and the latest run until midnight each night. Per year, the Cambus system performs 60,000 hours of service and 3.8 million rides for students.

Cambus is not only run by students, so are the buses themselves. Potential drivers must train a minimum of two weeks and go through Department of Transportation testing before they are allowed behind the wheel.

Brian Moore/The Daily Iowan

Jenni Franson, a cambus driver and trainer, waves to a passing bus on her route by the Art Building. Drivers are trained extensively before they can take on passengers.

Warren Vandenberg, a four-year Cambus veteran and former UI student, said driving Cambus is one of the campus' best jobs.

"It's a total glamour job," he said. "Everyone looks at the Cambus driver when they get on to see who's driving — everyone."

McClatchey said aside from the flexible work schedule, Cambus drivers' favorite job attribute is being able to meet people on campus.

"I can't tell you how many marriages have resulted from Cambus," he said. "A lot of young, single people work here."

Cambus drivers' pay starts at $6.05 per hour and raises every six months. Promotions also are available at that time.

RiverFest '97 saw largest crowd ever

Renee Bovy

After a long winter UI students come out in full force to bask in the sun and enjoy Iowa City's springtime celebration, RiverFest.

RiverFest literally has something for everyone. Food, fun and music are staples for an exciting weekend.

RiverFest 1997 was the biggest ever with over 33,500 people attending. Organizers attributed the huge crowds to a lot of sunshine, warm temperatures and the headlining band RUN-DMC.

"There were a ton of crazy people there, everyone was having a great time and waving their arms in the air," UI junior Mike Chung said.

Over 11,000 people attended the free concert in Hubbard Park making the RUN-DMC show the biggest RiverFest ever staged.

"RUN-DMC put on a great show, I think that is the most people that have ever been in Hubbard Park at one time," RiverFest executive committee member Kate Knauer said.

Headlining bands like RUN-DMC are only one of RiverFest's many attractions. The four-day spring celebration really has something for everyone.

A myriad of live music can be found from jazz to blues at RiverFest. At all times of the day or night, UI students and Iowa City residents can be found swaying side by side to the music.

UI students also can get an earful of the local band scene as the bands tough it out in The Battle of the Bands to see who will be the reigning winner.

RiverFest is also host to RiverRun. In 1997, over 550 athletes laced up their running shoes to take part in either a 5K or 10K run around Iowa City in the 18th annual event.

For those who prefer a slower paced event, a stroll through the Riverbank Art Fair is perfect. The fair features hand-crafted items such as pottery, woodwork, hemp products, and jewelry all created by Midwestern artists.

"Taste of Iowa City," features Iowa City restaurants finest cuisine. Thousands of hungry UI students and Iowa City residents attend the event to nibble on delicacies like pizza, gyros, and icecream.

The event is organized by Acacia Fraternity, who donates part of the proceeds from "Taste of Iowa City" to the Ronald McDonald House. In 1997 "Taste of Iowa City" raised $7,500-$8,000 for the Ronald McDonald House.

RiverFest '97

Highlights of RiverFest:

- The RUN-DMC concert brought more than 10,000 people to Hubbard Park.
- Local band Bottledog won The Battle of the Bands
- Around $8,000 was raised for the Ronald McDonald House at "Taste of Iowa City"
- At "Taste of Iowa City", Jimmy's Bistro was awarded best over all, Hy-Vee in Coralville won best sub sandwich, Hometown Pizza and Hy-Vee in Coralville tied for best pizza and Heyn's Ice Cream won for best dessert
- In one of the most successful RiverRuns in history, over 550 people participated
- The total turnout was estimated at 33,500 people, the most ever for RiverFest

UI offers many ways to explore religious diversity

Joseph Leavitt

Students at the UI have ample opportunity to explore faith and belief because of the diversity of ministries associated with it.

At least 14 different religions compose the Association of Campus Ministers which focuses its attention toward educating and supporting UI students. Many other religions are represented in the Iowa City area.

Most of the ministries have multiple services to accommodate the variable schedules of students, and many have volunteer opportunities outside of church services to promote altruism beyond traditional service time.

Rev. Julia Easley of the Episcopal Chaplaincy said the chaplaincy has ongoing service and study programs that are designed to have little overlap with service ceremonies. A volunteer group works at the Agape Cafe Wednesday mornings to serve food to low-income and homeless people.

"I don't believe that going to church is the only way to deepen your spirituality and connection to God," Easley said.

Easley said the church tries to reach out and include everyone by offering different opportunities to learn about the church.

"The Episcopal church has a very broad understanding of what it means to be church. We have mission groups to meet the variety of spiritual needs for people," Easley said.

Aliber/Hillel Jewish Student Center director Leah Girnun said Shabbat dinners, cultural educational programs, and retreats are popular ways for students to explore Judaism without pressure.

"It's a place to come and relax, and be friends — stress free," Girnun said.

Girnun believes it is vitally important to create a harmony between the different religious groups in Iowa City. She said people need to become aware of who they want to be in the community. Girnun said the Aliber/Hillel Center helps to develop students into mature, established human beings. "We are here to educate people on Judaism. We want to teach because ignorance creates prejudice," Girnun said.

Father Fitzpatrick of the Newman Roman Catholic Student Center said the center is primarily concerned with helping students during a transition period.

"We're trying to make a faith-home connection between their rootedness in faith to the next community they will join," Fitzpatrick said.

Fitzpatrick emphasized that it is important for students to realize that the center has many service times. He believes that informed students will be able to find a time that will fit their schedule.

Area support services ready to lend a helping hand in a crisis

Chris Gardner

When sexual discrimination, abuse, rape and domestic violence occur in the Iowa City area, three local resources are there to provide a haven for students and Iowa City residents.

Domestic Violence Intervention Program

The Domestic Violence Intervention Program is one of the largest programs in the state for battered women and children. It started as a 24 hour crisis hotline in 1976 and then grew to include a shelter in 1978.

The DVIP shelter can house up to 45 women and children a night and services five Iowa counties. DVIP also provides informational support groups and individual counseling for victims and families.

The DVIP is an integral part of the Iowa City community for those who are seeking shelter from violent behavior, said Marlene Clowers, office coordinator at DVIP.

"I feel it's beneficial because it's a resource for anyone whose experiencing abuse in their lives because a lot of communities don't have resources like this," Clowers said.

Rape Victim Advocacy Program

The Rape Victim Advocacy Program is another resource for people who have experienced the trauma and horror of a life-changing experience at the hands of another individual.

RVAP, located at 17 W. Prentiss St., was one of the first comprehensive rape crisis centers in the country. RVAP provides peer counseling, support groups, individual counseling, a 24-hour rape crisis line and a resource library.

In addition, RVAP also has started a free, 12-hour self-defense class for women that is held once a month.

Women's Resource and Action Center

Another resource available for women in the Iowa City area is the Women's Resource and Action Center, located at 130 N.

Madison St. across from the Union.

WRAC provides counseling, information, referral services and advocacy for women on a variety of issues affecting their lives, including body image and rape.

In Iowa City, rape victim advocates are available for victims to get through the process of post-rape medical examinations, said Monique DiCarlo, director of the Women's Resource and Action Center, 130 N. Madison St.

"Rape victims, men and women, should know that if they decide to go to the doctor, they do not have to be alone in the situation," DiCarlo said. "Rape advocacy volunteers are there to help support them, hold their hand or tell the doctor to slow the examination down."

WRAC also sponsors an annual donation drive that benefits DVIP.

"The donation drive gives the women and the children in the shelter a reminder that they aren't alone and people outside the shelter care about them," DiCarlo said.

Broadway invades Hancher's 25th season

Student Life

Hancher marketing director Katharine Horowitz said that what is surprising is how many people of Hancher's ongoing major goals for upcoming seasons are to expand people's perceptions of art and entertainment and to improve audience awareness of them.

The 1996-97 season proved to be one of the most financially successful years Hancher's has had. "We (Hancher) thought because of Simon's ties to the University of Iowa — he comes from Iowa, he was a student at Broadway performances. With a splash of silver and a variety of musical, dance and Broadway performances."

Workers lay a setion of Melrose Avenue during the spring while traffic is backed up. Although construction on the bridge will begin in July, it should be finished by football season.

I.C. facelift continues

Will Valet

Every summer, Iowa City and the UI campus experiences a rash of demolition, construction and renovation. Students returning to the UI campus are seeing a campus face-lifted in progress.

Larry Wilson, UI campus planner, said most construction projects go into full swing during the summer.

"We essentially construct year-round, unless the weather is bad. We like to do it whenever we can," he said. "But summer is the time we have fewer people and less disruptions. It's just a more productive time for us."

One of the biggest renovation projects was a $300,000 river terrace to be located on the west side of the Union. Construction will begin in July and plans call for an end in December. Wilson said the outdoor sitting area is an effort to bring the Iowa River closer to the forefront of the campus atmosphere.

"We did a river corridor study a year and a half ago, and it said this would be a good place to build a river plaza," Wilson said. "It's just a place for people to sit and enjoy the river. The Union may install outdoor food service, and it will make it possible to hold the occasional performance on the bank of the river."

A total of 223 trees have been planted along the river banks.

Among the other campus construction projects that have started this summer are improving the streetscape on the east side of Burge Hall, landscape renovations on the east side of the Fieldhouse and the west side of the Art Building, bicycle parking improvements near many residence halls, and lighting improvements at several campus locations.

Among the biggest renovations this summer are lighting, ceiling, painting and floor work in Burge Residence Hall's recreation room, new furniture and a new air-conditioning system on the north side of Currier Residence Hall. There is new telecommunications wiring in the north rooms of Quadrangle Residence Hall.

Mayflower residents can see new carpeting and stoves in certain floors of the building. Also, there are updated bathrooms, electrical service and laundry rooms in Hillcrest Residence Hall.

Streets in Iowa City also are being renovated. Two major projects are underway on Melrose Avenue and First Avenue for increased automobile capacity and road deterioration, said Iowa City Engineer Rick Fosse.

"We want to improve the function of the streets and better accommodate bikers and pedestrians," he said.

The $3 million reconstruction of Melrose Avenue includes new pavement added to the street and a bridge, as well as the addition of a bicycle lane, Fosse said.

"We hope to have the Melrose reconstruction done by the time the first football game starts, but there will most likely still be cleanup and landscaping to finish," he said.

Renovations to First Avenue, between Muscatine Avenue and Bradford Avenue, cost $1.3 million.

The mission: kegs, music and Verko?

As many UI students will tell you, you never forget your first party at college — a house, kegs of beer and too many drunk people. Way too many.

My first weekend at the UI was no different.

But before I begin my story, let me say this: The following is an account of my weekend, some students choose not to be involved in the drinking scene at college. There are other alternatives. But drinking is a part of college, and whether you agree with it or not, it will surround you. Still, you make the choice.

A Party on Prentiss

It was Saturday. I had just spent six hours moving into Daum Residence Hall — my new "home" for the next nine months — unpacking boxes of clothes, picture frames and other random items my mother said would "come in handy." Yeah, Mom, I'm sure I'm going to need that compass or those colored pencils.

My mom had left my dorm room to go back to her hotel and I sat on the bed — which she had just made — wondering what I was going to do now.

I am from Milwaukee, and knew very few people here. I also knew I hadn't been counting down to this night since February just to go to a movie or walk around the campus. I knew I wanted to go to a party, put back a few beers, dance in the street naked or whatever you do when you are finally in college. I knew I was supposed to have the time of my life, and ordering pizza wasn't going to cut it.

The solution: a party on a street called Prentiss.

My goal: to get the so-called "buzz." (I didn't drink in high school, and my only previous boozing had been with strawberry daiquiri wine coolers after graduation and vodka mixed with just about anything — but let's just say the anything made up 99.9 percent of the drink. Like I said, I didn't drink in high school.)

My accomplices: Becky, a girl who was my roommate during orientation, Carol, her friend from high school and another Becky, my best friend who made the four-hour journey to help me move in and see what college was all about before she started classes at the University of Wisconsin-Madison a week later.

The adventure: The four of us went to this party. When we arrived at the large house, people already were flowing out onto the streets. I remember sneaking in the back door, which led to two kegs of beer and hundreds of college students.

Everything was new to me — everything. In one corner of the house, a group of people were playing drinking games. I'm not sure which ones, but cards and shots of liquor were part of it. At the front of the house were several couches where people sat and socialized — "What's your name? Where are you from? What dorm do you live in?" And at the back of the house were the kegs, which is where most people congregated.

My friends and I pretty much made two trips — to the kegs and back to the couch, where we chose to do our mingling. I don't remember paying for the beer. I believe my friends and I brought in cups from another party we stopped by earlier in the night. (This is a good tip, if you get away without the hosts of the party realizing that you didn't pay for their beer.)

When I first approached a keg, I didn't know how to get the beer to come out. I stood there watching everyone else tap cups with ease. I still couldn't figure it out. Luckily, I met a guy named Verko who had a pitcher of beer and was happy to share his wealth with everyone, including me.

Evelyn Lauer

Verko walked around the party, introducing himself to people, offering them beer. By the end of the night Verko knew everyone and everyone knew Verko. To this day, anytime I mention the name Verko, people remember him from the Prentiss party.

The night became morning rather quickly, and after a few beers and making fun of Carol, who got stuck talking to dorky twin brothers the entire night, one sitting on each side of her, we decided to head back to the dorms.

The results: I didn't get a buzz. My friends did. But the Prentiss party was worth the 15 minutes walk to get there. It still provides laughs. I'll never forget it. It was by no means the best weekend of my college career, but it definitely opened my eyes to the harsh reality of it.

No matter how you choose to spend your first weekend at the UI — enjoy it. You only live it once. Some day you too will have a story to tell.

Broadway invades Hancher's 25th season

Katharine Horowitz

With a splash of silver and a flurry of musical, dance and Broadway performances, Hancher Auditorium will celebrate its 25th anniversary season with a world-renowned lineup.

Kicking off the 1997-98 season with jazz musicians Joshua Redman and Nicholas Payton on Sept. 12, Hancher will host its silver anniversary celebration Sept. 16 prior to the performance by vocalist and UI alum Simon Estes. Estes was chosen because he reflects the diverse history of entertainment at Hancher, said Judy Hurtig,

Brian Moore/The Daily Iowan
 Bobby McFerrin came to Hancher last spring to conduct the St. Paul Chamber Orchestra.

Hancher marketing director.

"We (Hancher) thought because of Simon's ties to the University of Iowa — he comes from Iowa, he was in the university's Old Gold Singers — he'd give a particular resonance to the anniversary with his concert," Hurtig said.

Other performances include the return of Broadway hits "Cats" and "Grease!", Irish folk/pop band The Chieftains, quartets Anonymous 4 and the Kronos Quartet and dance performances from such companies as the American Ballet Theatre, the Sydney Dance Company, The National Ballet of Canada, as well as Australia's Tap Dogs.

Hancher director Wally Chappell said it is often difficult to bring many of the performances and companies to Hancher due to its Midwestern location.

"A well-known group such as the Chieftains will not just go to Iowa and return to Ireland," he said. "They have to not only be on tour, but be touring through the Midwest. And sometimes these companies will come through only every second, third or fourth year, or only at certain times of the year. It is very tricky scheduling. It is more of a function of what's available rather than what is particularly good."

The 1996-97 season proved to be one of the most financially successful years in Hancher's history, establishing a record for ticket sales this past year. 1996-97 ticket receipts of $2,542,786 broke the old Hancher record of just over $2.2 million, set in the 1991-92 season. And the number of tickets sold during the 1996-97 season was a near-miss from the 100,000 mark, finishing with 99,787.

Among the most popular events of the season were Stomp, Baxter Black and Riders in the Sky, "Les Misérables," "Joseph and the Amazing Technicolor Dreamcoat," the Joffrey Ballet's "Nutcracker," "Kiss of the Spiderwoman," the Lincoln Center Jazz Orchestra performance of Wynton Marsalis' "Blood on the Fields," Mikhail Baryshnikov and the White Oak Dance Project, and the St. Paul Chamber Orchestra conducted by Bobby McFerrin.

Chappell expects this year's lineup to be equally well received.

"'Cats' and 'Grease' sell very well because they're family shows, not just geared towards students," he said. "Whole families come to see them. You'd be surprised how many people have heard of these Broadway shows but have never seen them."

Also expected to fare well with the crowd and the box office is The Children's Theatre Company's production of award-winning author Tomie De Paola's "Strega Nona," performed in a loft setting right on the Hancher stage.

Though there is limited seating of 250 bleacher seats, the four children's performances and two public performances are expected to be sell-outs, Chappell said.

However, despite Hancher's heavily publicized events, it is its classical music lineup that excites UI sophomore and Hancher employee Sarah Bleden.

"I love the classical music that comes to Hancher, so I am pumped for next season," she said. "I'm going to see as much classical stuff as I can. I think they've made an amazingly good season, the best I've seen so far. I'm just disappointed I'm going to have to work for half of it!"

Among attempting to schedule the Broadway hit "Rent" and the Irish dance group Riverdance, Chappell said two of Hancher's ongoing major goals for upcoming seasons are to expand people's perceptions of art and entertainment and to improve audience awareness of the various performances.

"We got a great response from Baryshnikov's White Oak Dance Project, but a few of our audience members were more than surprised when they discovered it was not classical but modern dance," Chappell said. "They didn't read the articles or press information, didn't know what to expect at the performance and became upset when it was different than what they expected."

Hancher always will continue to strive for only the best and excellent in its seasonal performances, goals and contribution to the culture of Iowa City, said Armando Duarte, UI assistant professor of dance.

"What Hancher is able to bring to the community and even to the Midwest is incredible," Duarte said. "It is one of the most important cultural centers around and is able to bring amazing kinds of high-caliber art and culture to the community. I hope they continue for another 25 years, even another 125 years."

Learning in another world

Joseph Leavitt
 Study in another country may seem like a foreign concept for many people, but the Study Abroad Center at UI makes the experience possible for hundreds of students every year. The center offers students the opportunity to study abroad for an academic year, a single semester, or a summer. Study Abroad Center Director Janis Perkins said as a general rule students should prepare in advance for a session the equivalent amount of time they plan to be away. Last year, UI undergraduates studied in 36 different countries, but Perkins said arrangements can be made to study almost anywhere if they decide early. "The sooner a student begins planning study abroad, the more options they will have," Perkins said. Nearly 400 UI students studied abroad during the '95-'96 school year. Preparation is perhaps the biggest challenge students face before traveling. Perkins said the appropriate time to study abroad is different for different majors. Business majors would want to go when they are sophomores, before they get involved in their serious classes, whereas an English major might benefit by studying abroad as a junior, when they have a larger base of knowledge to take advantage of the experiences they encounter. "The sooner a student begins planning study abroad, the more options they will have." Janis Perkins, Study Abroad Center Director

Perkins said the perspective and experience that students gain while studying abroad greatly influences their ability to make choices. "They find they are better problem solvers. They make better decisions and are more confident," Perkins said. UI senior Caryn Park went to England to study. She said the experience allowed her to discover more about herself because she could begin a fresh start. "It gives you a glimpse of what your life might look like if you could just jump right in and be who you have always wanted to be," Park said. Park said she loved the romantic countryside in England. She said even during her toughest moments she knew that if she could get through them, then nothing else would seem too difficult for her again. When she arrived back in Iowa, Park said she felt strange because she was in familiar surroundings that were somehow not quite familiar anymore. She did not want to forget the experience. "I couldn't stop thinking about it until I got a job at the Study Abroad Center. You don't want to lose those feelings," Park said. UI junior Kevin Johannesen said he studied in Wales to experience a different style of teaching. "It was due to me being not content with the University of Iowa and I wanted to study somewhere else for a semester," Johannesen said. He said study abroad offers students the chance to do some soul-searching and test themselves. Although he said a person gets out of the experience what he or she puts into it, he cautioned that students must be flexible. "People have to have a tolerance for it, to be able to accept ambiguity," Johannesen said.

The University of Iowa • Division of Continuing Education • Center for Credit Programs

We're making your education flexible and convenient wherever you live!

Saturday & Evening Classes

If you cannot attend classes during daytime hours, you can choose from over 400 courses offered on campus each year by the University at times that are especially convenient for part-time or nontraditional students. It's easy to register by phone, in person, or by computer. Part-time students receive registration priority—full-time students may also enroll. Both undergraduate and graduate course work is available.

Guided Correspondence Study

University of Iowa GCS courses allow you to learn independently with personal attention from your instructor. More than 160 courses are available. They can be a great way to progress toward your college degree, stay on track for graduation, complete educational requirements, or take courses of interest—wherever you live or work. There are no semester deadlines. You may enroll at any time, set your own pace, and take up to nine months to complete a course. Assignment submission and return by e-mail is possible in some courses.

Off-Campus Courses & Programs

Off-Campus Courses & Programs extend The University of Iowa's degree-related course work, in-service training, or professional development opportunities to those of you who live in Iowa and neighboring states. Graduate and undergraduate courses are offered in a variety of instructional formats. Classes are provided in your area, taught by instructors who are available in person or via the state's fiberoptic network—the Iowa Communications Network (ICN). In another format, UI telecourses feature public television broadcasts of educational series with instructor-developed and guided-study materials.

Current Off-Campus degree programs include the Master of Business Administration (MBA), offered in Cedar Rapids, Quad Cities, and Newton; Master of Social Work (MSW), offered in Des Moines and Quad Cities; Bachelor of Science in Nursing (BSN), offered in Fort Dodge, Mason City, and Emmetsburg/Spencer; Master of Science (MS) in Computer Science, in Cedar Rapids; Master of Science (MS) in Electrical and Computer Engineering, in Cedar Rapids; Master of Science (MS) in Science Education, offered at several sites in Northwest and Central Iowa, and a Doctor of Pharmacy (Pharm D) program statewide.

Bachelor of Liberal Studies

If your job, family, or community responsibilities prevent you from attending college full-time or on campus, UI's external degree program—the Bachelor of Liberal Studies—may work for you. Our educational advisers can help you develop a curriculum that fits your personal and professional needs and opens the door to your future success in your career or graduate education. You've cheered at the graduations of spouses, children, and friends. Now it's your turn to enjoy the personal satisfaction of completing your college degree while learning about topics that interest you.

Local bands give I.C. flair

Ben Schnoor

In Iowa City, diversity is not only a part of the UI student body, but also can be experienced in the music performed by local bands.

"Bands in Iowa City tend to be a lot more experimental and willing to try something different," said Kylie Buddin, a veteran of the local music scene.

The diversity of Iowa City bands translates into something of a vast taste-test for the musical connoisseur, with flavors ranging from blues to techno, hard rock to folk, and pop to jazz.

Pompeii V

Pompeii V employs keyboards and sequencers to give its pop-rock sound a definite techno twist. Influenced by the Manchester sound of the early '90s, this band is known for their extensive jamming and feel-good sound.

"It's a party atmosphere when we play live," drummer Michael Hardy said. "There's a lot of dancing and everyone is having a good time."

Pompeii V also has released two CDs and played shows throughout the Midwest and Europe.

Blues Instigators

A blend of rock, blues and jazz, the Blues Instigators' music has attracted audiences and a reputation that most local bands only dream about.

Big Wooden Radio

This band has made a name for itself by playing original folk music in the Iowa City area.

Sugar Engine Red

A tight groove and intricate lead guitar riffs lay the foundation of Sugar Engine Red's pop alternative sound, while their female vocalist provides the energy that makes the engine run.

High and Lonesome

"This popular bar band is known for its heavy rock and blues sound.

Bottledog (above) is one of the most popular bands in Iowa City due to its great rock sound and excellent songwriting abilities.

Alto Maiz

With a spicy Latin flavor to its music, this band features funky Latin percussion, an excellent brass section and some of Iowa City's most accomplished musicians.

Destrophy

This heavy metal/hard rock band has been playing around the Iowa City music scene for several years. Destrophy performs with a head-banging vigor that is reminiscent of bands like Metallica.

Mr. Blanding's Dreamhouse

This young "punk pop" band has played shows at many local bars as well as performing benefit concerts for Iowa City Free Radio and Feedlot Music.

"At first it's an advantage to be younger because people are curious about you, but it's also a disadvantage because some people don't take you seriously," lead singer/guitarist Grace Sinclair said.

Greg Brown

One of the few Iowa City musicians who also has achieved popularity on a national scale, Greg Brown's folk music really connects with an audience. His great voice and songwriting talent make him an excellent live performer.

Bo Ramsey and the Backsliders

This appropriately named blues band is fueled by a mean slide guitar.

Kelly Pardekouper and Kylie Buddin

This country pop duo, which consists of two veterans of the Iowa City music scene, was formed fairly recently and has played a few acoustic gigs. They also are working on playing their music with a full band and electric guitars.

Stickman

A self-proclaimed "power pop" band, Stickman's songs are filled with catchy melodies and clever lyrics.

Stuff

Watching Stuff perform may be a frightening experience for many college students. The band, which plays almost solely at Gabe's, 330 E. Washington St., intends to shock its audience.

"It's a multimedia extravaganza incorporating the schlock of performance art with the fun of noisy punk rock," bassist Josh Mead said. "We like to dress in drag. Basically, we're here to fuck with all the college students in this town."

"Why Birds Fly" was part of the Playwrights Festival. Students and professionals teamed up to create quality productions.

Break a leg with the UI Theaters

Liz Schuerman

The Theater Department at the UI is featuring a full cast of premiere opportunities for its audience this year.

The biggest thing the theaters at the UI have to offer to its students can be summed up in one word—opportunity.

The three theaters at the UI offer students a chance to become involved in the production process of a show all the way from helping with the stage art to producing.

"The students have a large say in the shape of the productions and the department," UI student Christi Kathol said.

Kathol went on to say the department is very supportive and in fact eager to hear any input or ideas students might have. Since the department produces so much each year, the opportunities for students are even greater.

Last year the Theater Department celebrated its 75th anniversary. The department's staff is also well established. Judith Keith, director of Theater Relations describes them as nothing less than excellent.

"The professors are so passionate about their work. The students feel it and become passionate themselves," Kathol said.

As announced at this year's graduation, the theater formally known as Theater A will now be known as the David Thayer Theater, named after exiting professor David Thayer.

The Main Stage Season for the theaters consists of five or six big productions. The production of "Summer and Smoke" marks the shows 50th anniversary by its author Tennessee Williams, who was a graduate from the UI Theater department in 1938.

The Playwrights Festival, which is held the first week in May, brings in professionals to work with the students. Over the course of the week there will be five of six shows that these quests help produce.

The Black Action Theater is a theater department within the department that also does work written by students.

Big-city movies come to small-town theater with Bijou

Greg Kirschling

"Bijou" — French for "jewel." An appropriate name considering the UI's Bijou Theater is one of the country's rare student-run university theaters still devoted to showing the kind of movie fare unavailable in all but the biggest cities.

The Bijou screens the latest foreign, independent and cult films every day in either the Terrace Room or the Illinois Room of the Union. The theater also makes room for older "classics" and underground cinema, but don't look for anything starring Pauly Shore.

"Without the Bijou, Iowa City would be stuck with a lot of Hollywood stuff," said Bijou co-director Ryan Bartelmay. "This way there's some diversity."

For $4 a ticket, theatergoers can even see features that other independent theaters won't touch. For example, the Varsity Theater, Des Moines' lone independent theater, refused to show "Crash," the disturbing new film about a band of adults who are sexually excited by car crashes. The Bijou plans to screen "Crash" this fall, said Bartelmay, who's seen the film and advises viewers to prepare to be challenged by its graphically violent and sexually explicit content.

"Some of it is pretty offensive, and it's not the kind of movie you go to to be entertained, but

Also this fall, the Bijou hopes to schedule "Chasing Amy," the latest film from Kevin Smith, creator of "Clerks." Calendars for the semester are available on the first day of classes outside the Union box office.

Last semester, the Bijou was the only theater in the area to offer Iowa City residents the chance to see "Secrets & Lies," the British film that was nominated for five Oscars, including Best Picture. The film sold out several times during its run in the spring, during one of the most financially successful semesters ever for the Bijou, thanks to big-name independent films like "Swingers," "Bound" and "Breaking the Waves."

Last year's co-director Michael Rivera-Dirks said he's excited that people are turning out in big numbers for the Bijou, although he thinks patrons should pay more attention to the smaller films, such as last semester's "Calling the Ghosts," a documentary from Women Make Movies, the collective that has advanced the form of female film making.

"I think we're appreciated for big films like 'Secrets & Lies' and 'Swingers' but not for the even more obscure films we show," Rivera-Dirks said. "Some of those films really deserve to be seen by more people." It's that kind of risk-taking on smaller films that UI senior Dan Kraus said he admires about the Bijou. Kraus works at the Campus Theaters in the Old Capitol Mall, but he said there needs to be an alternative to mainstream theaters.

"(The mainstream theaters) can't and will not book smaller films for financial reasons, so it's invaluable that there's a theater here that takes chances to bring in high-quality alternative movies," Kraus said.

Kraus, director of a Bijou film called "Jefftowne," has nothing but praise for the Bijou. "It's definitely worth checking out," he said. "It's a class act."

The Iowa weather roller-coaster

Renee Bovy

UI students never know what to expect when heading to class - the nicest of mornings can quickly turn into the fiercest of days. So bring an umbrella and a warm jacket and prepare for the wild Iowa weather ride.

Iowa weather is known for its unpredictability ranging from 100 degrees with 99 percent humidity in the summers to minus 10 degrees with minus 40 windchills in the dead of winter, and UI students have learned to adapt to even the worst conditions.

KCRG meteorologist Rob Cook said Iowa is a variable climate which causes weather extremes. Cook said Iowa springs and summers are usually warm and humid with occasional thunderstorms. Iowa has a late season fall, which means more football games can be enjoyed with nice weather. Cook said the reason Iowa has a bad reputation for its weather is the winter.

Extreme temperatures and occasional heavy snows provide plenty of opportunities for UI students to cuddle down and get a lot of studying done.

UI graduate student from Georgia Joe Milford said he has had a difficult time adjusting to Iowa weather, particularly the winter.

"In a way Iowa winters are good because it is so cold you stay inside and get a lot of school work done," Milford said. "There also really bad though because staying inside all the time makes you suffer serious cabin fever."

Milford said, however, that Iowa autumns are alluring as the trees change colors and the brisk air urges students to bring out there favorite sweaters.

He also noted Iowa springs are a welcome change after a long, cold winter, although they can often be unpredictable with temperatures near 70 one day and 40 the next.

However, as soon as the weather warms up UI students are quick to take advantage of every second. The first day the snow melts also is the first day students in shorts are sprawled on the Pentacrest catching some rays. As the days get warmer, whole classes even leave their dim confines to hold discussion outdoors in the bright Iowa sunshine.

Iowa weather may leave UI students frustrated some days when the wind chill is well below zero and the side walks are caked with ice, but rest assured for all the terrible days the Iowa climate can conjure up, there are just as many glorious ones right around the corner.

Above: UI students take the opportunity to study outside when the weather warms up. Taking a nap in the warm sunshine is a popular activity to help shake off the winter blues. The spring in Iowa City can be deceiving though, as the temperatures fluctuate often.

Right: Students brace against the wind and falling snow as they head to class last winter. Iowa winters can be brutally cold and windy with large snow fall amounts. It is a good time for students to stay indoors and catch up with their studies.

Writers' Workshop rated above all others

Emily Shack

The UI Writers' Workshop graduate program, ranked number one in U.S. News and World Report, accepts a mere five percent out of its over 700 applicants, said Assistant Director of Arts Center Relations Winston Barclay. With numbers like that, the famous program is more competitive than Harvard Law and Business schools.

The number one ranking came as no surprise to anyone familiar with the program because the program has long been regarded as the most reputable and influential in the country, Barclay said.

"This program is the grand-daddy of all writing programs," he said. "It was the first creative writing program in the country; thus it has been a blue print for all others that followed."

The Writers' Workshop is a tradition in itself, having produced many Pulitzer Prize and Guggenheim winners, Barclay said. Three of the last five poet laureates have come from the UI. Some famous writers associated with the program are John Irving, Flannery O'Connor, Robert Bly and Jane Smiley.

Obviously, the success of workshop graduates reflects the quality of teaching. Fiction writer Kurt Vonnegut taught here, teacher Joy Graham won the Pulitzer Prize for poetry and current director Frank Conroy was nominated for the National Book Award.

"The program has a history of getting many of the best young writers as students and of having some of the best older writers as teachers," Conroy said. "It's really a self-fulfilling prophesy."

Graduate student Erin Ergenbright, a fiction writer, came across the country to attend the Writers' Workshop.

"My creative writing teacher at Oregon State always said that if you're serious about writing, the UI is the place to be," Ergenbright said. "It's great because the program is very intense but the people here are really friendly and open."

Ergenbright said that Workshop students are given a lot of freedom and time to write. She is currently working on seven stories which she must stop and start whenever she gets "writer's block" or has further inspiration.

"We have a workshop once a week and also attend seminars," she said. "We talk about what works and what doesn't in our pieces." Obviously they expect us to spend a great deal of our time writing."

Although the program does not attempt to force any particular style upon students, teachers do try to impart the philosophy that writing is hard work. And it is necessary to read and respond to other authors and poets while you write, Conroy said.

When reviewing prospective students, the workshop looks for writers with a seriousness of purpose. Of course, with such intense competition the UI must also turn down hundreds of excellent writers, Barclay said.

"We need to see that the writers have something important to say, now or in the future," he said. "We only take 25 fiction writers and 25 poets, so they need to be in love with what they do."

UI Band important part of team spirit

Kevin Ho

The more than 70,000 Hawkeye football fans that fill Kinnick Stadium in the fall are a hard crowd to quiet down. But when the 260-member Hawkeye Marching Band plays everyone listens.

"I think the marching band does a great job," Bob Bowsby, director of UI men's athletics, said. "They contribute greatly to the atmosphere of the events."

Bowsby said the band's influence draws people together.

"I think the music and the pageantry that goes along with the marching band contributes to the overall environment," he said. "The traditional songs that are played - the fight song, some of the rousers. It's something that current students, former students and those who have been associated with the university can identify with."

The marching band plays at all home football games, one to two away games, and bowl games, Interim Marching Band Director Morgan Jones said.

He said the Pep Band, which is made up of members from the marching band, plays at men's and women's basketball games and at wrestling matches as well.

However, Jones said all that pageantry takes devotion on the part of band members.

Jones said a lot of hard work goes into the performances. He said the band starts with 12 hours of rehearsal a day in late August. When classes start, two-hour practices are the norm four days a week, with the entire day of home game Saturdays devoted to practice and performance.

"These students are dedicated," Jones said. "They have to be dedicated, otherwise he or she will not give that much time to one course."

Jones said it wasn't all work, though.

"Aside from the hard work and performances and the athletic events, we all enjoy ourselves," he said. "Generally, we consider ourselves an energizer for sports."

UI senior and Marching Band drum major Chad Smith said the marching band adds a lot to the game day atmosphere.

"We are the largest organization on campus. We're known wherever we go," Smith said. "Even away from Iowa City we commitment to all the hard work and long hours devoted to practice, band members became a part of a huge family.

"Yes, you have to be very committed. If you didn't want to be there, you wouldn't be," Smith said. "It's just a very large part of our lives. Most of us are friends. Most of them get very close. After all, they're the first people you meet on campus."

Council decisions affect UI students

Renee Bovy

UI students may only be temporary residents of Iowa City, but decisions made by the City Council have quite an impact on the years they spend here.

"Local government is the level that has the most effect on daily life," said Councilor Karen Kubby.

Decisions made by the City Council affect areas such as transportation, police matters and housing costs. Although it is not subject to Iowa City laws, the UI does work with the City on some issues. Kubby said because the majority of UI students live off campus, it is important for them to be aware of what is happening in local government.

Top concerns for UI students in the past have been parking and transportation. Addressing the city's shortage of parking is an ongoing issue in Council meetings. And in the fight to balance the City budget, the Council has raised Iowa City Public Transit prices and the price of water rates.

In 1997, the City Council met with the UI Student Government (UISG). Mayor Naomi

Novick said during the session the two government bodies discussed issues important to both the UI and Iowa City. Novick said the communication between the UI and the city is very good and she looks forward to further communication with students.

One issue that had a lot of UI students up in arms in 1997 was an ordinance that would further restrict the areas where skateboarders and rollerbladers could skate. Skateboards, rollerblades and bicycles currently are prohibited from the Pedestrian Mall and sidewalks in the downtown business area.

The revised ordinance would prohibit skateboards and rollerblades in all alleys, parking lots and parking ramps. Iowa City skateboarders — many of whom were UI students — attended City Council meetings in full force to express their concerns about the ordinance. In the end, the City Council set up an area specifically for skateboarders to alleviate the loss of other riding areas due to the ordinance.

Kubby said the Council is always willing to hear student complaints and UI students can get in touch with the Council by calling or e-mailing the councilors. Novick said the Council will respond to all correspondence.

Students also can speak to the Council by attending the formal meetings held Tuesday evenings in the Iowa City Civic Center, 410 E. Washington St. During formal meetings anyone may speak during the public hearing.

Barhoppers under 21 years old may have to find alternative weekend activities unless they don't mind paying a hefty fine after getting caught with a beer in their hand.

A new law requires people charged with possession of alcohol under the legal age to pay $100 for a first offense, not including court costs. The bill, which will take effect July 1, is part of Iowa legislation's plan to "get tough" on juvenile crime.

Prior to the passing of the Juvenile Justice bill, Senate File 515, underage drinkers paid $34.50 for a first offense for underage drinking.

Individuals charged with possession of a fake ID will be fined $100 under the new law. Currently, a judge sets a fine between $50 and $100 for the crime.

Iowa City Police Department Sgt. Mike Brotherton said the ICPD makes routine bar checks every weekend to both the downtown area and the outskirts of town. Despite the harsher penalties, the ICPD does not plan to change their bar-check system.

He said officers keep an eye out for underage drinkers by looking for stamped hands and fidgety behavior.

"People that look too young or make a sudden move get our attention," he said. "It's obvious to us when you freak out when you see an officer."

"Be good, and if you can't be good, be careful."

Sgt. Mike Brotherton, Iowa City Police Department

Brotherton said students who try to lie to avoid getting in trouble will only make their situation worse. He suggests that students be honest and non-defensive with the officers while getting questioned.

"If you get caught, the best thing to do is answer truthfully. Officers have heard every story, every rhyme and every reason," he said. "It's like when you get caught with your hand in the cookie jar, you have to face the consequences."

Jim Pohl, manager of the Union Bar, 121 E. College St., said his bar, along with other downtown bars, try to prevent under 21 bargoers from drinking by instructing bartenders and waitresses not to serve customers without legal stamps on their hands.

He said this would be an efficient way to keep minors from drinking, except that many people have their friends that are over 21 buy drinks for them.

Because of the large amount of students heading to downtown bars overindulging in alcohol, the UI Student Government spent time and money last year finding alternatives to drinking, said Meghan Henry, UI junior and UISG vice president.

In order to help curb this problem, UISG is providing students with some choices, besides partying and drinking.

"There's a lot of things going on besides going to the bars," she said. "What student government wants to do is provide cool things to do without the risk factor the bars have."

One of UISG's most successful events of last year was "Sneak Preview" movie night. Before the release of a blockbuster movie, UISG offered a free showing of the movie at the Union.

It included such titles as "The Chamber", "Jerry Maguire", "Gross Pointe Blank" and "Ransom." UISG also offered showings of "Dead Man Walking",

"Grease" and "That Thing You Do!"

Brotherton said students who do choose to go to the bars should be responsible and remember the dangers of binge drinking.

"Be good, and if you can't be good, be careful," he said.

Juvenile Justice Bill

Gov. Terry Brandstad signed a bill that will force individuals who are charged with possession of alcohol under the legal age to pay a $100 fine for a first offense. Currently, the fee is $34.50 for 19- and 20 year olds. Persons 18 and under pay a fine of $44.50, which includes a $25 fine, a $4.50 surcharge and a $15 court cost. The new law will not distinguish between the two age groups.

Council decisions affect UI students

Renee Bovy

UI students may only be temporary residents of Iowa City, but decisions made by the City Council have quite an impact on the years they spend here.

"Local government is the level that has the most effect on daily life," said Councilor Karen Kubby.

Decisions made by the City Council affect areas such as transportation, police matters and housing costs. Although it is not subject to Iowa City laws, the UI does work with the City on some issues. Kubby said because the majority of UI students live off campus, it is important for them to be aware of what is happening in local government.

Top concerns for UI students in the past have been parking and transportation. Addressing the city's shortage of parking is an ongoing issue in Council meetings. And in the fight to balance the City budget, the Council has raised Iowa City Public Transit prices and the price of water rates.

In 1997, the City Council met with the UI Student Government (UISG). Mayor Naomi

Novick said during the session the two government bodies discussed issues important to both the UI and Iowa City. Novick said the communication between the UI and the city is very good and she looks forward to further communication with students.

One issue that had a lot of UI students up in arms in 1997 was an ordinance that would further restrict the areas where skateboarders and rollerbladers could skate. Skateboards, rollerblades and bicycles currently are prohibited from the Pedestrian Mall and sidewalks in the downtown business area.

The revised ordinance would prohibit skateboards and rollerblades in all alleys, parking lots and parking ramps. Iowa City skateboarders — many of whom were UI students — attended City Council meetings in full force to express their concerns about the ordinance. In the end, the City Council set up an area specifically for skateboarders to alleviate the loss of other riding areas due to the ordinance.

Kubby said the Council is always willing to hear student complaints and UI students can get in touch with the Council by calling or e-mailing the councilors. Novick said the Council will respond to all correspondence.

Students also can speak to the Council by attending the formal meetings held Tuesday evenings in the Iowa City Civic Center, 410 E. Washington St. During formal meetings anyone may speak during the public hearing.
