UI quick to give gays benefits

The Iowa City community remains supportive of benefits for same-sex couples in light of recent protests.

By Jenn Snyder
The Daily Iowan

As the Walt Disney Company comes under fire by Southern Baptists for offering health benefits to same-sex domestic partners, the UI and the City of Iowa City are proud to be among the first who offered such benefits.

UI Associate Vice President for Finance and University Services Mary Jo Small said the UI was one of the first universities in the nation to offer health benefits to same-sex couples. The UI policy was instituted about five years ago, at about the same time as Scripps College in California and the University of California system instituted similar policies.

"Since there were no other universities to look to for ideas, the recommendation was to start conservatively," Small said.

The conservative start led to full benefits for domestic partners of UI employees in all deductible brackets. The coverage must be purchased by the UI employee to be extended to the partner.

Ann Rhodes, UI Vice President for University Relations, said although benefits aren't collected by a large number of employees, it's the principle that matters.

"It sends a message to the world that we do not discriminate."

Pat Cain
UI law professor

"Even though it's not a huge number of people taking advantage of the benefits, it's important that it's available," Rhodes said.

Pat Cain, UI law professor, said she thinks offering benefits to same-sex partners is essential to fulfilling the UI's human rights statement.

"It sends a message to the world that we do not discriminate," Cain said. This policy of non-discrimination is exactly what the Southern Baptists disagree with. Some planned to promote the boycott called for last week at a national church convention because Disney provides health benefits to partners of homosexual employees. Others lacking the same conviction planned to ignore the boycott in sermons, while some ministers remained unsure what to do.

The Southern Baptist Convention voted Wednesday to boycott Disney and all of its subsidiaries, including movies, theme parks and TV outlets — the Disney Channel, ESPN, A&E and Lifetime on cable and the ABC network, which aired the sitcom "Ellen," in which Ellen DeGeneres came out as a lesbian earlier this year.

The office paper bin at the City Carton recycling center shows the amount of waste locals go through. Many residents use this easy drop-off site instead of the recently implemented curb pick-up.

Residents recycle, but more need to follow guidelines

Recycling saves space in city landfills, but many residents have trouble separating the paper from the plastic.

By Nathan Hill
The Daily Iowan

Recycling in Iowa City is faring well, but officials say residents could do more to assure that their trash doesn't end up in the landfill.

Brad Neuman, Solid Waste Management Planner for Iowa City, said the effort can begin at the supermarket.

"People need to make sure they buy items that are recyclable," Neuman said. "That's a choice they have to make at the grocery store."

But recycling in Iowa City goes beyond smart consumer decisions. A curbside pick-up program was instituted in March of 1996. The program distributes free recycling containers to homes in Iowa City, which the city picks up once a week. Curbside pickups have been a marvelous success, and Neuman said that recycling has doubled since the advent of the program.

"We've got a lot of information out there and people need to follow the directions to make sure their stuff is picked up," Neuman said.

However, the proper method to separate recyclables can sometimes be complicated.

According to City Carton, the company responsible for waste processing in Iowa City, residents can recycle anything from plastics and glass to car batteries and steel, but some restrictions apply.

The city asks residents to separate their recyclables into seven different categories: newspapers, glass, plastic bottles, cardboard, office paper, tin cans and magazines.

Jumper identified by VA

An Iowa City man who dropped from a bridge Monday was a Vietnam veteran being treated for schizophrenia.

By Steven Cook
The Daily Iowan

An Iowa City man who jumped off the Burlington Street bridge Monday has been identified as Vietnam Veteran John Wesley McConnell, 45.

McConnell, who died Monday in what officials said may have been a suicide, was released Friday from the Veterans Administration Medical Center (VA) after being treated for schizophrenia. Witnesses said McConnell climbed over the railing of the bridge and dropped into the river. He was not carrying any identification.

A veteran of the Vietnam War who enlisted in 1969, McConnell had been a regular patient at the medical center since 1986, VA Public Relations Specialist Kirt Sickels said.

Police are still looking for McConnell's relatives.

McConnell was admitted to the center on June 17 and stayed for three days. Sickels said McConnell was fine and willing to leave when he left the hospital on Friday.

With the help of the medical center, McConnell moved into a boarding house at 716 N. Dubuque St. on Saturday. Sickels said he was unsure of any medications McConnell was taking.

The owner of the boarding house, Theresa Kopatich, said she had no problems with McConnell during his short stay, and found him to be friendly and in good spirits when he signed the lease.

"He was a very pleasant person," she said. "He told me how happy he was to be there and how happy he was to live in such a pretty house."

UI holds Staff Celebration Day to showcase contributions

The UI will honor staff members Thursday.

By Mose Hayward
The Daily Iowan

After a life threatening situation, UI professor Jay Holstein said he recognizes the importance of UI staff.

After being denied a spot in one of the professor's evening classes, a student threatened to kill him, Holstein said. The incident was reported and Holstein said the problem "was handled promptly" with the help of security guards who walked him to class.

"It's hard to imagine how we could function without these people," Holstein said.

To show his gratitude to UI staff, Holstein plans to give a keynote speech at Thursday's Staff Celebration Day. The event, co-sponsored by Staff Council and The Office of Staff Development, is set to run from 3-6 p.m. in the Main Lounge of the Union.

Also scheduled to speak are UI President Mary Sue Coleman and the new Associate Vice President Bob Foldsie.

Holstein said he plans to speak about how the work of the staff contributes to the goals and ideals of the UI — an opportunity he said is very important.

"I've been here 27 years and I don't remember anything like this," Holstein said.

The celebration is the first of its kind for the UI, said UI Education Specialist Maureen McCormick, who helped plan the event.

"[Staff Celebration Day] is an opportunity to recognize the important contributions of the staff on campus," McCormick said.

Vanity plates: FUN4U

Vanity plates give Iowa City residents license to identify themselves.

By Kevin Ho
The Daily Iowan

Iowa City residents who don't want to be just another number are spelling out their true identity on vanity license plates.

"It's for the sheer pleasure of the motorists. I think it is just a special thing," said Dennis Ehler, director of Vehicle Services for the Iowa Department of Transportation. "They're called vanity plates after all."

Instead of getting the luck of the draw with a random license number, more than 110,000 Iowa motorists have opted to come up with their own, often quirky, vanity plates. The idea behind vanity plates began as a novelty in the 1970s, Ehler said.

Ehler, who has two sets of personalized plates, said there are over 110,000 vanity plates among the more than 3 million plates in the entire state. His own plates read "LUV2FRM" and "74NHS," a reference to the seven people in his family who are "4" Nevada High School.

Iowa City lawyer Davis Foster said his customized plates, which read "ICLAWYR," were a gift from his sec-

Small stone blocks about a foot high have been popping up all over campus, but they are not intended as a place to tie your shoe.

The 19 commemorative plaques, recently dedicated by the UI Alumni Association, honor the UI's oldest and most historical buildings. The bronze plaques are mounted on limestone bases and provide brief narratives, highlighting building histories and other bits of information.

The idea for the "historic plaques," which took about two years, was first realized during the planning for the UI's sesquicentennial celebration.

There was a long list of criteria met by the chosen buildings. Historical background of the buildings and importance to the UI was weighed heavily. Vince Nelson, UI Alumni Association director, said.

Johnson County plans to coordinate local bus routes

Several changes may be in store for Iowa City area bus systems.

By Steven Cook
The Daily Iowan

In an attempt to provide more efficient bus service, three local transit services will look at ways to streamline their routes.

To be conducted this fall, the Johnson County Council of Governments (JCCOG) will be looking at possibilities aimed at eliminating route duplication in the area.

The JCCOG study will evaluate overall service and attempt to abolish any duplication of service, Iowa City Transit Manager Ron Logsden said. Cambus, Iowa City Transit and Coralville Transit will be participating in the study.

Cambus Manager Brian McClatchey doesn't believe many changes in service will come from the study.

"Our basic structure is sound," McClatchey said. "There won't be any dramatic changes. But we'll brainstorm and look at the possibilities."

One route McClatchey said would receive scrutiny is the one servicing Hawkeye Court Apartments. Several students said Cambus should take over the Hawkeye Court Route because they say it's the UI's responsibility.

They say they pay for Cambus service through their tuition, but object because they must pay for service from Iowa City Transit.

Currently, Cambus only services Hawkeye Court starting at 7 p.m. and Iowa City Transit services the apartments the remainder of the day.

UI Graduate Student and Hawkeye Court resident Sheila Sitterly is worried about safety.

"We need to do everything we can to make (Hawkeye Court) residents more secure," she said.

Sitterly believes with the UI involved in housing and security as well as transportation, safety would increase with the heightened attention the apartments would receive.

"There are some ways where (Hawkeye Court) is treated like a different part of the UI community," she said.

Transportation Director and head of the JCCOG Jeff Davidson is "pretty sure" the study will allow Cambus to take over the Hawkeye Court route. He said if that happens it will create other changes in service between the bus companies.

"If we don't service Hawkeye Court there is a potential for increased service elsewhere," said Logsden. He said he isn't sure where the service would be targeted.

Other options that will be explored with the survey Davidson said, would be a "free fare zone," which is still in the discussion stage. A free fare zone would consist of a 10-12 block section of downtown that would allow students and non-students to ride both Cambus and Iowa City Transit free in the downtown area, Davidson said.

Any changes that stem from the survey would be implemented during a UI intermission, Davidson said. Full Cambus service to Hawkeye Court would most likely begin over Christmas Break, he said.

If that couldn't be accomplished, Davidson said the switch would be delayed until summer '98.

Coralville Transit Operations Manager Roger Fisher said he doesn't expect many changes involving the other two systems, but he does expect to look at other areas of service.

Cambus celebrates 25 years of service

By Will Valet
The Daily Iowan

Cambus, you've come a long way, baby.

The UI's student-run transit organization, Cambus, is celebrating its 25th anniversary at the UI, making it one of the longest-running, student-run transit organizations in history.

Brian McClatchey, Cambus manager, said Cambus' endurance can be attributed to the UI students that both run and ride it.

"It was initiated and run primarily by students since the beginning," he said. "It's a tribute to the work and creativity of students on the UI campus."

Cambus started as an experiment when students in west-side residence halls noticed a need to get students to the Pentacrest area more quickly. The experiment was a success, and Cambus continued to grow, McClatchey said.

"I think we're here to stay," he said. "It's a real attribute to the UI. Everyone knows what Cambus is on this campus."

Out of 150 Cambus employees, 145 are UI students. UI junior Ryan Ward, Cambus personnel supervisor, said Cambus is a model for other college campuses.

"There are many student-run transit organizations, and I'd like to think they see us as an example," Ward said.

McClatchey said schools such as the University of New Mexico and the University of Indiana have called for advice on how to set up a student-run transit organization.

"The fact that it's almost entirely student-run is what fascinates a lot of people," he said. "Cambus is student employees. (Students) aren't just supplements to the system."

At 40 feet long and 16 tons, the yellow-and-black Cambuses are impossible to miss on campus, especially to the students, staff and faculty members who have been depending on them for transportation since Jan. 24, 1972, the day the unnamed "campus bus system" began its service to the UI.

The name "Cambus" was bestowed in fall of 1972.

Cambus has had a resounding effect on many other organizations on campus, primarily the sports organizations.

Phillip Haddy, sports information director for UI Men's Athletics, said Cambus keeps Hawkeye fanatics coming back for more.

"Anything that keeps people coming to sports events is a benefit," he said. "The harder it is to get there, the less they want to return."

McClatchey said because of the number of students working for Cambus, the organization has been the student organizational equivalent of a singles bar.

"I can't tell you how many marriages have resulted from Cambus," he said. "A lot of young single people work here."

OSKALOOSA, Iowa — One of the Oskaloosa girls who traveled with two stepbrothers wanted in two shooting deaths and a bank robbery led investigators Tuesday on a search for evidence discarded by the fugitives.

Mandi Smith, 17, climbed into a light blue van shortly before 10 a.m. with Mahaska County Sheriff Charles Van Toorn and two other investigators and spent the next several hours looking for a piece of evidence discarded by either Jamie McMahan, 22, of Rose Hill, or Christopher Kauffman, 18, of Oskaloosa.

The two men, targets of a nationwide manhunt, have eluded an army of law enforcement officers since June 11, when they left Iowa with Smith and Amanda Miller, 16. In a span of about 4 1/2 hours that day, two women were killed in separate execution-style slayings and a bank was robbed.

McMahan and Kauffman are charged with first-degree murder in the death of Barbara Garber, 52, of What Cheer. They also are suspects in the slaying of Island Schultz, 18, of Gibson and the robbery of the Gibson Savings Bank.

Smith and Miller were with the fugitives for eight days. They have not been charged, although authorities haven't ruled out the possibility.

Authorities on Tuesday released a new photo of the suspects, taken by the girls when the foursome was at Disney World in Florida, but they refused to comment about the investigation.

Mandi's mother Gayla Smith, however, provided some insight.

"She was trying to remember a place where she thinks the boys might have thrown something out the window ... on the way out of town," Gayla Smith said. "She remembers a flash of something, so they want to find the place."

Miller, meanwhile, didn't go on the search Tuesday and was at home Tuesday with her parents, Al and Phyllis Robertson. The couple didn't comment.

Van Toorn was out of the office late Tuesday and didn't return a phone call to explain whether investigators were looking for a gun or some other item while out with Mandi Smith.

Both victims were shot with a .22-caliber handgun.

Gayla Smith, speaking to a reporter for the first time since the crime spree unfolded, said her daughter's world has been shattered.

"In Mandi's world, everybody is nice. She trusted everyone. She's changed a little bit now. I think it'll be a long time before she has friends again," she said.

Gayla Smith said Mandi is having nightmares but is trying to remember events that will help lead to the capture of the fugitives.

"Mandi wants so desperately to find these guys," Gayla Smith said. "She's very sick that she ever went with somebody like that."

She also said her daughter had no inkling of the crime spree.

"When she got back and saw the pictures of the people that got killed, she just got sick," Gayla Smith said. "She goes crazy when a puppy gets sick."

The ordeal also was difficult for Gayla Smith and boyfriend Tim Hunolt.

"I know my daughter very well," Gayla Smith said. "I was very terrified. There were several moments that I thought she was dead."

McMahan called home Wednesday and was told there was a nationwide manhunt. That's when the girls knew their companions were in trouble.

The next morning, Smith and Miller awoke to find the boys were not in the room, Gayla Smith said. They grabbed cash that was there and bought Amtrak train tickets and headed out for Ottumwa, arriving Saturday night.

The girls never called authorities when they were alone in the room that Thursday and didn't notify anyone of their situation or that they were coming home aboard the train.

Iowa Officials wrap up big birthday celebration

DES MOINES, Iowa (AP) — Officials have put the finishing touches on Iowa's big 150th birthday celebration, giving Gov. Terry Branstad a thick report on activities that stretched for years.

Scott Raecker, who headed the celebration, said Tuesday that officials spent $8 million over five years to pay for the celebration. The bulk of that money — $4.9 million — came from the sale of special license plates.

There will be a continuing legacy of the birthday celebration. Officials donated $300,000 to launch a new non-profit group aimed at promoting character education, particularly among young people.

Raecker will also lead that effort, which will be headquartered at Drake University.

White House aids search private quarters

WASHINGTON — Whitewater prosecutors suggested last year they might seek a warrant to search President Clinton's private living quarters for a box relevant to their investigation, according to lawyers and others familiar with the matter.

Horrified at the prospect of investigators rummaging through the first family's rooms, the White House reached a compromise with prosecutors for three White House aides to search the rooms instead.

Then-White House attorneys Jane Sherburne and Miriam Nemetz and usher Gary Walters scoured the presidential living quarters and other parts of the building but turned up no box, said individuals familiar with the subject, speaking only on condition of anonymity.

"Sherburne and Nemetz were given a general description of a box and they combed the place high and low, top-down, looking in the Clintons' closets, under the beds, in all the rooms," one person said.

The search was in connection with independent counsel Kenneth Starr's probe of White House handling of documents from the office of Vincent Foster after his death, said the individuals, who are outside the prosecutor's office. The box was described as having handwriting on it.

Nike recalls shoes, will apologize

For fear of a Muslim-led boycott, the Nike Corporation Tuesday agreed to recall 38,000 shoes with logos that resembled the word "Allah."

By Donna Abu-Nasr
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Nike Inc. will recall 38,000 pair of shoes carrying a logo that offended Muslims because it resembled the word "Allah" in Arabic.

Under a written agreement announced Tuesday, Nike will also apologize to Muslims for any unintentional offense. In exchange, the Council on American-Islamic Relations will urge Muslims worldwide not to boycott Nike products.

Nike officials said they were pleased with the settlement.

"While we never intended to offend, we did; we have done everything possible to communicate our sincere apologies and to address issues related to the distribution of any products offensive to the Muslim community," said Martin Coles, a Nike vice president, in a statement from Beaverton, Ore.

"I believe we emerge from this process with a deeper understanding of Islamic sensibilities and a stronger bridge into Muslim communities," he added.

Nike spokesperson Roy Agostino noted it was the first time the shoe-maker has recalled a product.

In addition to the 38,000 pairs that will be recalled, 30,000 pairs with that logo have been diverted from Saudi Arabia, Kuwait, Malaysia, Indonesia and Turkey to less-sensitive markets.

CAIR executives called the agreement a victory for the estimated six million Muslims in the United States.

"We wanted to reinstate confidence in our community that whenever they see something offensive, there could be something done about it, that through organized work they can stand up for their principles and show people they have to be respected," said Nihad Awad, the Islamic council's executive director.

He said his group would have called for a global boycott of Nike products, especially in affluent Muslim communities in the Middle East and Asia, had the two sides failed to reach a settlement.

"Many ... may not understand how offensive it is to have the name of God on a shoe," said Awad. "The shoe gets dirty. It gets muddy. It gets sweaty. We believe this is disrespectful to the name of God."

The dispute between CAIR and Nike began when the athletic footwear company used a logo meant to look like flames on a line of shoes to be sold this summer with the names Air Bakin', Air Melt, Air Grill and Air B-Que.

The Washington-based Islamic advocacy group said the design resembled the word Allah, Arabic for God. It is used by Muslims and Christian Arabs to refer to the deity.

Dennis Cook/Associated Press

Nihad Awad, executive director of the Council on American-Islamic Relations, points to the Arabic "Allah" during a news conference in Washington on Tuesday to announce a settlement with Nike Inc.

Nike said it caught the problem in September, long before the shoes went into production, and designed a new logo. But Muslims rejected the new design because they said it still resembled the word Allah.

In addition to apologizing and recalling the shoes, the two sides said Nike would work with the council to improve the company's understanding of Islamic issues and would donate a $50,000 playground to an Islamic elementary school somewhere in the United States.

This is the second time in recent years that Nike was criticized by the council.

Teen faces charges after killing her newborn in bathroom at the prom

A New Jersey teen who gave birth in a bathroom stall during prom festivities was charged with murder Tuesday.

FREEHOLD, N.J. — A teen-ager who gave birth at her prom and then returned to the dance floor was charged with murder Tuesday after an autopsy concluded the baby was strangled or suffocated in a plastic bag taken from the sanitary-napkin receptacle in the bathroom.

Prosecutors said 18-year-old Melissa Drexler may have even used the sharp edge of the receptacle to cut the umbilical cord before dumping the body of the newborn boy in a trash can June 6.

"Go tell the boys we'll be right out," Drexler yelled to a friend in the bathroom before coming out of the stall, according to prosecutor John Kaye. He said she put her loose-fitting black gown back on and went back to the prom dance floor, leaving the bathroom splattered with blood.

A grim-looking Drexler, wearing a flowered skirt and a blue denim top with matching nail polish, surrendered with her parents and stood before a judge Tuesday to face the charges of murder and endangering the welfare of a child.

If convicted, Drexler could get life in prison. Prosecutors said they do not plan to seek the death penalty.

A young woman (left) identified in media reports as Melissa Drexler, 18, arrives at the Monmouth County Courthouse in Freehold.

Her attorney entered a plea of not guilty on her behalf. She spoke only to answer "yes" to questions from Superior Court Judge John A. Ricciardi.

About an hour later, after posting $50,000 bail, Drexler emerged from the courthouse and walked into a sea of reporters, photographers and cameramen. She got into a black Chevy Blazer and appeared on the verge of tears.

"She's not very happy," attorney

Steven Secare said as he walked alongside the young woman. "She's very nervous."

Drexler's 19-year-old prom date has said that he believes he was the father, but that he was unaware she was pregnant.

Before any charges could be filed against Drexler, the county medical examiner's office had to determine whether the 6-pound, 6-ounce boy could have lived independently of the mother.

Live from Iowa City, it's... Bob Bowsby and Norm MacDonald

Everyone loves a laugh. As Bob Newhart said to a graduating class at Catholic University recently, humor is an indelible part of being human. "It helps distinguish us from the animals. No matter what hyenas sound like, they are not actually laughing."

It's that universal need to laugh that allows comedy to have some incredible powers. It can cut across social boundaries faster than any political speech or public service announcement. More people probably know a joke about the horse who walked into a bar, than which president said, "We have nothing to fear but fear itself."

I went to see the infamous Norm MacDonald show on Sunday. I, for one, was not surprised at the subject matter. Having followed MacDonald and his career for some time, I know he can be abrasive beyond all boundaries. Heck, that's what I liked about him.

For those of you that didn't see it, Norm came on after some funny — but tame by comparison — performances by fellow Saturday Night Live cast members Darrel Hammond and Jim Breuer, and the improvisational comedy troupe Comedy Sportz. They joked about politics, family relationships and, yes, goats.

Norm came on, looking slightly disoriented. He might have been expecting a slightly smaller venue than the 2,500-plus seat auditorium. It didn't take long for him to find the hot button issues. Within seconds, he was making AIDS jokes. Even Norm himself seemed a little taken aback by his subject matter. He quickly moved into a tirade about Abs and Buns of Steel, and being out of shape. For a moment, his comedy seemed to be on the same path as his predecessors, momentarily risqué, but mostly muddled of the road.

But then Norm snapped. I suspect he saw the people leaving, the ones who didn't like the moderately off-color or direction he was headed. What the hell... I'll show them! Damn the torpedoes! Full steam ahead! And from then on, it seemed to be a contest — with himself, I guess — to see how many people he could get to leave.

No taboo was left untouched. Actually, 'touch' is a little mild compared to what MacDonald was doing. He was slapping the taboos upon the head. Then, when they were still dazed, he clubbed them with a steel bat. The moment things really turned was when MacDonald made some bizarre pig-beastiality jokes.

UI Men's Athletic Director Bob Bowsby estimated that 80 percent of the crowd left by the time the performance was over. I think he's overestimating; I'd put the number closer to 30 or 40 percent, at most. But that's beside the point.

Once the shock wore off, what seemed to be left was simply a frank discussion of things that society never speaks about, at least not in public: masturbation, societal hang-ups, sex roles and practices.

Historically speaking, taboos have always been first approached in the comedic medium. Minority groups are accepted first in the realms where humor is the point. Blacks and homosexuals, for example, have traditionally been represented in comedy first, simply because laughing makes it easier for those who object to deal with the subject matter.

We would never have seen a show like "Ellen," with a homosexual lead character, if it hadn't been a comedy. Comedy is rooted in discomfort, and dealing with something we don't understand or accept is certainly uncomfortable.

I am not condoning what MacDonald did. I found it funny, even hilarious at moments, but kids were present. Is this MacDonald's fault? Nope. Whoever was responsible for hiring the comedians should have researched and communicated with them beforehand to see what their stand-up is like. If it was inappropriate, either don't hire them or warn people. That way, people who do come have only themselves to blame. I equate it to people who brought their children to "Jurassic Park" movies. They knew it was PG-13. The MPAA doesn't just assign their ratings arbitrarily, folks.

I blame Bowsby and Co. How could you think that Norm MacDonald, the man who popularized the term "Crack Whore," was going to be tame? Asking him to would be a crime, and everyone would pay the price.

As Bob Newhart said, "Laughter gives us distance. It allows us to step back from an event we have no control over and deal with it."

Deal with it, Mr. Bowsby.

Prepare for China takeover or for war

Earlier this month, Hong Kong citizens stood holding candles in a vigil to commemorate the Tiananmen massacre, but once the Chinese government takes over control of the colony from Great Britain, vigils like this will no longer be allowed.

On June 23, Great Britain announced that they will allow the Chinese government to move troops into Hong Kong three hours early, on June 30th. This action will undoubtedly be followed by many more troop movements into Hong Kong by China's People's Liberation Army.

The Chinese government has said they will place limitations on rallies that the citizens of Hong Kong have become fond of holding. One is currently scheduled for moments after Hong Kong officially reverts back to China's control. The leaders of the protesters have been quoted as saying that they will revert to civil disobedience if necessary.

This could spell the end for the democratic system living under China's proposed "two government, one country" system. China has said they are going to try and retain Hong Kong's current system while imposing their own rule.

The transition period could be the proving ground for China and the position they are going to hold among the world leaders. If this goes smoothly, they could strengthen their tentative grasp on Most Favored Nation status. However, if China reneges on the guarantees they have made for the future of Hong Kong they will harm future relations with the NATO nations.

Taiwan is also waiting anxiously as the date of the takeover nears. The people of Taiwan fear that if mainland China is successful in their attempt to run two governments under one country they will get the idea that the same will work with Taiwan. In a move to show their military strength, Taiwan has begun live fire drills. If China moves to Taiwan, it could lead to war, possibly world war.

What everyone should be asking is what would happen if China decided to crush the current government in Hong Kong. The United States and Britain are both in a situation where they would only be able to place economic and trade sanctions on China. Neither is willing to open themselves up for being involved in a full scale war with one of the largest countries in the world.

These countries must make a firm stand now on what they would do if China decided to crackdown on the democratic system in Hong Kong, and institute policy to back it up. If they don't, it may be too late to stop China's next move.

Goodbye fat! Hello olestra

Imagine that you could eat or drink any food or beverage that tripped your trigger, unwary of its possible fat content or contribution to your impending heart disease. Thanks to the arrival of a new product from Procter and Gamble, your dream may come true faster than you think.

It's called olestra, and it could be the medical savior of the country. According to www.cnn.com, olestra is a fat substitute developed by Procter and Gamble after 25 years and a $250 million investment. It was originally biochemically produced to be a drug that would reduce cholesterol, but when it didn't work out that way, it was developed as a fat substitute. It is currently marketed under the brand name Olean, and is now featured in Lay's, Ruffles, and Doritos potato chips in Indiana, Ohio and Colorado. Ritz, Wheat Thins and Pringles have followed with their own versions.

Approved by the Food and Drug Administration in January of 1996, olestra works as a mixture of sugar and vegetable oil, going through the body without clogging arteries or extending curves. Its molecules are too big to be digested, so it leaves behind no calories as well.

Procter and Gamble is currently demonstrating olestra-made meals in select cities, and Frito-Lay plans to make their olestra-containing Wow! potato chips available nationwide next year, bringing the fat substitute to Iowa.

Unfortunately, there is some bad news. After nine years of reviewing the product, the FDA found that olestra had some problematic side effects. Their study found that olestra causes gastrointestinal problems and abdominal cramps in some, as well as limiting the body's capacity to absorb four essential vitamins.

According to The 1996 Statistical Abstract of the United States, heart disease was the No. 1 killer in this country in 1993, as it was in 1990, 1980, and 1970. The United States is a country that dies by what they eat.

Dr. Jeff Field of the UIHC Center For Digestive Diseases says

anything that helps to reduce our intake of fat could be helpful in curbing our death toll from heart disease. "Anything that (people) would do to reduce the consumption of fat in their diet would definitely be beneficial," says Dr. Field.

Eating foods with safe olestra would substantially decrease the amount of fat in our diets and reduce our chances of heart disease in the process. Procter and Gamble needs to continue their experiments and see if olestra can be manufactured without its current health risks.

Fortunately for the world, Procter and Gamble has motivation to improve its product. The U.S. Department of Agriculture will soon be releasing its fat substitute, called Z-Trim, which in early studies, does not feature the health risks of olestra.

Either way, the consumer wins.

Don't worry about losing some battles when you win the war

The message that conservatives should hearken to right now is, "Lighten up a bit." In the last two months or so numerous conservatives have expressed extreme dissatisfaction with the Republican leadership in Congress. Most of the discontent has focused on the budget deal that Republicans struck with President Clinton. The deal, it seems, is far from ideal.

The ideal budget agreement for conservatives, myself included, would balance the budget while cutting taxes at least $200 billion over five years, and slow the growth of Medicare by reducing the Consumer Price Index about 1 percent. New spending on government programs? We wouldn't even be discussing that in an ideal world.

As the cliché goes, however, we don't live in an ideal world. The agreement does balance the budget by 2002, but only cuts taxes by $85 billion over five years. It does slow the growth of Medicare, but only reduces the CPI by .15 percent and it includes new spending that Clinton wants for education and environmental programs. Because the agreement is far from ideal, numerous conservative pundits are upset.

Columnist George Will has argued that Republicans have given into a deal that does very little to promote conservative ideas.

Former Republican candidate for President, Steve Forbes, has been running commercials criticizing the deal. The editors of The Weekly Standard urged the Republicans to back out of the deal. "The budget deal is a profound act of political self-mutilation because it commits the Republican party...to the status-quo," they argued. "Worse, the budget deal will mean a Republican legitimization of Clintonism."

Political self-mutilation? Legitimization of Clintonism? Come on. The deal is no where near that bad. Let's start with the downside. This agreement includes spending on new education and environmental programs that the President wants. These programs probably won't amount to much, but Republicans have to give Clinton something he wants or he will veto the budget.

On the upside, look at what Republicans do get. They obtain a balanced budget that cuts taxes. Four years ago Clinton and the Democratic Congress tried to convince America that we couldn't balance the budget without raising taxes. Now, Republicans have gotten Clinton to agree to a deal which does the exact opposite. That's not exactly a score for the liberals.

Next, the deal preserves Medicare by slowing its growth and adjusting the CPI slightly. For years entitlements like Medicare and Social Security were called the "third rail" of politics. It was political suicide for any politician to touch them. During 1996, Clinton and the Democrats hammered the Republicans for "wanting to cut Medicare." Less than a year later, Congress is going to reduce the growth of Medicare, and hardly anyone is complaining. That shows just how far conservatism has come in a short time.

What conservative commentators are trying to do is compel Republicans to take an all or nothing stance on the budget. They seem to be suffering from a hangover due to the revolutionary fervor that infected conservatives when the Republicans took over Congress in early 1995.

The thinking back then was that America had sided with the Republicans and it was time to drastically cut taxes and spending all at once. Unfortunately, it doesn't work that way. Taking an all or nothing stance makes the Republicans look inflexible and unreasonable, damaging their ability to win reelection. Without a Republican majority in Congress, there is little chance at all that the government will be reduced.

Conservatives should acquire some patience (last time I checked, it was still a virtue.) We would do well to keep in mind that the enormous growth of the federal government did not occur overnight. It has taken the better part of 60 years since the onset of Franklin Roosevelt's New Deal.

We will not reduce government overnight either. It will take considerable time and must be done in increments. We need to take the long view. Keeping the pressure on; in two or three decades government can be substantially smaller than it is today.

By all means, conservatives must insist that the Republicans stay on such a path. We should demand that they propose more tax cuts, propose more deregulation and deal with another entitlement that is growing too fast — Social Security.

But conservatives shouldn't become apoplectic when these things don't happen immediately. That does little good and creates a lot of headaches. So just lighten up a bit, OK?

Report: 'Aliens' were dummies

To UFO buffs, Air Force 'aliens' explanation falls flat.

By Robert Burns
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Air Force is sticking to its story. Those weren't alien bodies secretly recovered from a UFO crash site in New Mexico half a century ago. They were dummies.

"Case closed," the Air Force insists in a 231-page report released Tuesday on the so-called Roswell "incident."

Not so fast, say believers. "If you've seen an alien, you would know the difference between that and a stupid crash dummy," said Barb Sauerman, the switchboard operator at the Roswell mayor's office.

And Deon Crosby, director of the International UFO Museum and Research Center in Roswell, said the report raised more questions than it answered — and certainly was not sufficient to let the Air Force wash its hands of the controversy.

"It's not going to do that at all," she said.

The most likely explanation for the unverified alien reports made in July 1947, the Air Force said, relates to life-size dummies dropped from the skies during a series of experiments in the 1950s. What is not fully explained, however, is how people could have confused events that happened a decade apart.

Associated Press

This photo from the Air Force's "The Roswell Report" was released Tuesday. The book debunks the UFO incident at Roswell, N.M. in 1947.

"If you find that people talk about things over a period of time, they begin to lose exactly when the date was," said Col. John Haynes, an Air Force declassification officer who presented the report at a Pentagon news conference.

"I have no other explanation."

To illustrate the room for confusion, Haynes showed file footage from the 1950s of dummies dressed in Air Force flight suits pulled aloft by enormous high-altitude balloons, then dropped to earth. The object was to devise a way pilots or astronauts could reach earth if forced to escape at extremely high altitudes.

The black-and-white footage is a one-of-a-kind collection of Air Force film and photos, including a shot of a fully outfitted dummy called "Sierra Sam" standing upright with his arms outstretched over the shoulders of two officers.

Texas Homeowners return to 8 feet of water

LAKEWAY, Texas (AP) — Many areas of central Texas picked up between 5 and 10 inches of rain on Sunday in a matter of hours. The rain turned quiet streams and rivers into raging rapids that flooded homes along a 100-mile stretch from just west of San Antonio to just west of Austin.

Skies were mostly clear in the area Tuesday, but scattered showers remain in the forecast through Thursday.

The Lower Colorado River Authority, which provides water and electric service to about 1 million residents in 58 Central Texas counties, said Lake Travis has risen from a normal of 681 feet above sea level to 703 feet Tuesday. It could rise to a peak of 706 feet by Thursday.

Virginia Tobacco deal could spur 'safer' cigarettes

WASHINGTON (AP) — The peace deal signed with anti-smoking forces may spur tobacco companies to finally sell versions of the "safer cigarettes" they've known how to make for decades.

A tiny Virginia company is poised to beat Big Tobacco to the market by removing one cancer-causing chemical from cigarettes. Tennesseans are testing smokeless cigarettes that may send fewer toxins into the lungs. And Duke University researchers are creating tobacco-free "cigarettes" that offer the nicotine kick of a regular smoke without the cancer.

But just when does a cigarette become truly safer? And does last week's tobacco settlement ensure cigarette makers won't merely lure back would-be quitters with false safety promises?

"Say you've got 16 known carcinogens and you take one out — you'll get killed by the other 15," warned Greg Connolly, head of Massachusetts' tobacco control program.

"There is no such thing, nor will there ever be such a thing as a safe cigarette," warned longtime anti-tobacco attorney Cliff Douglas.

More quakes rattle Washington state; no serious damage reported

SEATTLE (AP) — Two earthquakes rattled separate areas of Washington state today, a day after another tremor shook an area that included Seattle.

A quake of magnitude 4.6 was felt widely this morning across north-central Washington and in the Spokane area of eastern Washington, said Bill Steele, coordinator of the University of Washington's seismology laboratory in Seattle. It was centered about 14 miles west of the north-central town of Okanogan.

No major damage was reported, Steele said.

Three convicted in stop sign deaths released pending appeal

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — Three friends sentenced to 15 years for pulling up a stop sign, leading to an accident that killed three teens, were freed pending appeals.

Nissa Baillie, 21, and Christopher Cole, 20, posted bail Monday. They were met by their friend Thomas Miller, 20, who made bail Friday, the day all three were sentenced.

All three were found guilty of manslaughter last month in the deaths of three 18-year-olds killed when an 8-ton truck broadsided their car.

Judge Bob Anderson Mitcham allowed the defendants to remain free until an appellate court hears the case.

The three have appealed the convictions, claiming one witness said a prosecutor forced him to lie.

Defense attorneys want the court either to throw out the verdict or order a new trial. That process could take two years.

Cole testified he and his friends stole as many as 19 signs along the rural roads east of Tampa the night before the Feb. 7, 1996, accident. But he told jurors they didn't touch the stop sign at that intersection.

Summit to address global warming issues

Island nations voice concerns about global warming at Earth Summit Plus 5.

By Charles J. Hanley
Associated Press

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — In an urgent plea for help, island states at a summit on the Earth's future told an alarming tale Tuesday of the here and now: The seas already may be encroaching on their fragile lands.

The president of Maldives said global warming threatens his nation's very existence while industrial countries engage in "sterile debates" about economic gains and losses in doing something about it.

"Today, I leave here with the fear that unless we all act now and with a renewed commitment, my country and many countries like us would neither have their voice nor seat at a future (summit)."

TODAY'S EVENTS

Researchers have detected a slight rise in the Indian Ocean around the Maldives, and Pacific Ocean island states report losing low-lying atolls to the sea. However, scientists have yet to clearly link these events to global warming.

The island states hope President Clinton offers them some reassurances in his speech here Thursday, the fourth day of the week-long "Earth Summit Plus 5," convened to review progress since the historic 1992 Earth Summit in Rio de Janeiro.

A major U.N. scientific study has concluded that global warming in the next century, through heat expansion and melting glaciers, would cause oceans to rise one or two feet by 2100.

Under a December deadline, governments are negotiating a new treaty to legally require cutbacks in emissions of carbon dioxide and other "greenhouse gases" that trap the Earth's heat in the atmosphere.

But so far, the Clinton administration has balked at committing to any specific timetable of targets.

Congo

Brazzaville residents risk lives to flee

BRAZZAVILLE, Republic of Congo (AP) — It's a sobering choice: risk being killed by a stray bullet in Brazzaville or risk drowning while trying to reach safety on a dangerously overcrowded river barge.

High school teacher Eugene Baka chose the second option, paying $20 each so he, his wife and his four children could get on a barge and motor north, away from this chaotic African capital.

Sporadic gunfire echoed through Brazzaville on Tuesday, a continuation of fighting that has prompted thousands to flee Republic of Congo's capital.

Still, it was worse Monday, when artillery and mortar fire smashed into the parliament building. Soldiers took up positions around parliament late Monday, some using rolls of ceremonial red carpet as makeshift bunkers.

Nicaragua

Federal judge blocks deportation of 40,000 Nicaraguans

MIAMI (AP) — A federal judge blocked efforts Tuesday to deport as many as 40,000 Nicaraguans, saying the court has rarely seen such a "dramatic, heart-rending and powerfully persuasive case of irreparable harm to literally tens of thousands of people."

U.S. District Judge James Lawrence King granted a preliminary injunction barring government efforts to deport the Nicaraguans, setting a trial in the dispute for January 1998.

The 67-page ruling means that as many as 40,000 Nicaraguans of an estimated 200,000 living in south Florida will now be able to pursue their attempts to gain permanent residency in the United States.

Hong Kong

With countdown in final week, questions mount over handover protests

HONG KONG (AP) — One week before Hong Kong reverts to China, prickly questions cropped up Tuesday about handover-night displays of democratic activism.

Members of Hong Kong's elected legislature — who'll be out of a job once the switch occurs — want to deliver a manifesto from the balcony of the legislative building just after the handover at midnight June 30.

The new legislature set up by China wasn't happy, saying such a gesture would be "propaganda" and "might not be appropriate." The issue is still being negotiated with the incoming government, but some outgoing lawmakers have hinted they might defy a ban.

Martin Lee, leader of the Democrats, Hong Kong's biggest party, has said he will clamber up a ladder to the second-floor balcony if he is barred from the legislative building after midnight.

Community invited to open forum on athletics

As part of the self-study of the University's athletic programs (part of the NCAA certification process), an open forum is scheduled Thursday, June 26, 3-5:30 p.m., in the IMU Illinois Room. Comments from the University community are important to this process.

Athletics certification was approved at the 1993 NCAA convention as a key part of the NCAA's reform agenda. It is meant to ensure the NCAA's commitment to integrity in intercollegiate athletics.

A final self-study report will be submitted to the NCAA in the fall of 1997, and a visit by a certification team will take place late in 1997. This team of peer reviewers will conduct interviews on campus and will make recommendations to the NCAA Committee on Athletics Certification, which will make a final decision on certification.

Miss Wisconsin chooses pageant over Playboy

The Wisconsin-Madison senior withdrew her "Women of Big Ten" application due to her crown.

By Sharon Preiser
Associated Press

MADISON, Wis. — New Miss Wisconsin Nicole Locy entered Playboy's "Women of the Big 10" competition, but withdrew rather than lose her chance at the crown, a pageant official said Monday.

Locy's participation in the magazine's screening process was "an error in judgment," pageant director Sue Captain said. No nude photos were taken.

"She was curious and that was it," Captain said. "She was flattered by somebody thinking she was pretty."

Locy, 22, then Miss Western Wisconsin, was interviewed May 5 by Playboy photographer David Chan and had pictures taken in a yellow blazer and black dress. She was told to return the next day for bikini poses.

She told The Associated Press after her interview at The Madison Concourse hotel that she had wanted to be in Playboy since seeing a copy of a Playboy Big 10 issue when she was about 10.

"I think that any woman would be flattered if Playboy thought they had the type of look they wanted for their magazine," she said at the time.

Locy, a former Miss Appleton who aspires to a career in broadcast journalism, told the AP she realized that Miss America wants "squeaky clean" contestants and "has a tendency to look down on" participation in competitions like Playboy's.

But the University of Wisconsin-Madison senior, who since has graduated, said posing could lead to new career options, such as modeling.

Captain said Locy contacted her after her Playboy interview and told her she had made "an error in judgment" by participating.

Shabazz's grandson may face murder charges

The grandson of Betty Shabazz could be charged with murder after the fire he allegedly set killed her.

NEW YORK (AP) — The troubled grandson who bears Malcolm X's name could be charged with murder now that his grandmother, Betty Shabazz, has died of burns he allegedly caused.

But even if 12-year-old Malcolm Shabazz was charged and convicted of homicide, he would spend no more than 18 months in custody under juvenile law. Specific charges against the boy have never been made public, but Mrs. Shabazz's death Monday means prosecutors could upgrade them to include murder. There was no word Tuesday on any decision about charges.

Mrs. Shabazz, who had carried on her husband's civil rights causes after witnessing his murder in 1965, died Monday of burns suffered in the fire June 1.

News organizations have petitioned to open the Family Court case to reporters. A hearing was being held Tuesday afternoon.

Malcolm had been sent to live with his grandmother about three weeks before he allegedly set fire to her suburban Yonkers home. He reportedly wanted to be sent back to his mother, Qubilah.

Qubilah and Malcolm Shabazz had lived together in Texas for several stormy months marked by his long absences from school and calls to the police over fights between mother and son.

Qubilah Shabazz broke the news of her mother's death to Malcolm on Monday night at the jail where he is being held.

to live in such a pretty house."

Terry Brown, boarding house manager, met McConnell when he moved in. "He was of sound mind when I met him," Brown said. "He didn't say anything that would give an indication of what he was going to do."

The Iowa City Police Department identified McConnell Tuesday with assistance from the VA.

"An officer at the police department thought it was him," ICPD Sgt. Jim Steffen said. "Photos were shown and the VA confirmed it."

Because family members have not been notified about McConnell's death, there are no plans for services.

UI Hospitals and Clinics is keeping McConnell's body. As of Tuesday night, UIHC had not yet been notified about McConnell's identity, and he remains "John Doe" in its records.

McConnell was pulled out of the river near the Highway 6 Bridge Monday and transported to UIHC, where he was pronounced dead.

Workers in the area saw him drop into the river and surface downstream with his face down in the water.

ICPD said after being taken from the water, McConnell showed no signs of life. Anyone with information concerning McConnell's relatives can call the ICPD at 356-5275.

BENEFITS

Dr. Wesley Paul is the pastor of University Baptist Church, a Southern Baptist church in Iowa City. Paul said his church is aware of the boycott, but is not participating as a congregation on moral grounds. He said he is leaving the decision to participate in the boycott up to individual members of his church.

"Our business is to really avoid things that are condemning of people's lifestyle and choices," Paul said. "Our mission is to love people with the grace of God, and open our hearts and our church to all people of all backgrounds, regardless of choices they make."

Heather Shank, human rights coordinator for the City of Iowa City, said a complete boycott would be hard to pull off because Disney is everywhere — from television to movies to newspapers nationwide — it's difficult to avoid the company's influence.

Paul said this type of boycott is flawed in his eyes because it forces the church to make judgments on behalf of corporations.

"If a company chooses to offer benefits, it's fine with me, because that's the way they want to honor their workers," Paul said. "Even though homosexuality is not compatible with the Christian faith, I don't expect them to honor Christian principles — I don't expect the company to be Christian like I am."

The City of Iowa City has made sexual orientation part of its non-discrimination policy since 1977, Shank said.

VANITY PLATES

retary. "I had gotten some for my wife as a gift, but I never spent the money for myself," Foster said.

Foster's wife Cathy Foster has plates that read "CFSRAM."

Personalized license plates cost motorists $25 initially, with an additional $5 per year on top of normal renewal fees.

Not everyone is excited by the idea of having their own personalized plate. UI graduate student Jason Mezey said he thinks they are "kind of dorky."

"It just seems like a lot of money to spend on a license plate," Mezey said. "I can't think of a way of summing myself up on a license plate. I feel it's a legitimate form of expression, but it's just not me."

Foster said his plates were not an advertisement, but he worried about the attention they would draw.

"They're just for fun," he said. "I'd worry if I got more traffic tickets though."

Elhert said state officials rely on a two-inch thick bound list of "inappropriate" messages that are deemed offensive. The list comes from other states, as well as Iowa and is constantly being updated.

Elhert said the clerks in the office relied on a slang dictionary to determine inappropriate messages.

"State code (prohibits) any message that is offensive, inappropriate or implies that the car is part of federal, state, or local authorities," Elhert said.

Elhert cited "FBI 007" as an example of a rejected plate because it refers to government authorities. He said motorists who want vanity plates must fill out an application explaining what their message is supposed to mean.

CELEBRATION

Following the speeches, there will be a picnic with music and a "Staff Showcase and Poster Fair" at 4 p.m. The showcase will give staff a chance to highlight and discuss the work being done on campus, such as research, instruction and service.

Organizers plan to have about 55 different posters celebrating the work of individuals, divisions and departments within the UI, said Laura Reed, the outgoing president of Staff Council.

"We want to recognize the staff and their achievements and the contributions they've made," Reed said.

The staff recognition day has been a goal of the Staff Council since August 1996.

alogs, phone books, junk mail, envelopes and anything with glue will be left at the curb.

Many people can make mistakes when separating their trash. For example, City Carton only recycles clear glass, but many people include shaded glass. Plastic jugs can be recycled, but only if residents take the lid off. Many cardboard boxes are acceptable, but freezer packages or pizza boxes with food in them are not.

Any mistakes made in separation contaminate the entire batch, causing the whole container to be thrown away.

"The rules can be confusing," Neuman said. "We can't change our program a lot. The more changes, the more confusing. We felt we made it simple."

"We find a lot of mistakes to start with," said Andy Ockenfels, Vice President of City Carton. "It's a matter of education. People get the hang of it sooner or later."

"Part of the reason people don't recycle is because they don't know the rules," said Iowa City resident Jodi Mozena. "People have no idea what can and can't be recycled. The more information we have, the better." The best advice to Iowa City residents, according to Ockenfels, is to recycle everything they can and make sure they buy recycled products. "It doesn't make a difference if they recycle, if there's not a market for recycled materials," he said.

And though he wants to go early, Woolridge says to have a grasp on that.

"Once I get with a team, I can know what goals I have to accomplish, and what I have to work for to be a starter and then to be one of the best point guards in this game," he said.

Krause weren't introduced at last week's celebration rally, for fear of being booed by 100,000 people.

This isn't the first time Pippen trade rumors have swirled around draft time. In 1994, a deal that would have sent Pippen to Seattle for Kemp was done. But at the last minute, spurred by negative public reaction, Sonics owner Barry Ackerman called off the deal.

And in 1987, Pippen was traded on draft day — to the Bulls, who sent their first-round pick that year, Olden Polynice, to Seattle in probably the best deal in Chicago history.

after the draft, when Pippen's fate likely would be decided.

"Then we'll be in a position to talk with Phil about whether he wants to coach," said Reinsdorf, who is concerned about the age of his team's marquee players. "Then, if we know Phil wants to coach that team, we'll talk to Michael."

Jordan, 34, has threatened to retire if Jackson doesn't stay and has intimated that he'll quit if Pippen, 31, goes. Jordan made $30.14 million last season, when he led the Bulls to their fifth title of the 1990s, and could command upwards of $40 million for 1997-98. Pippen is to make $2.7 million next season as he wraps up an eight-year contract.

Jackson said he will stay another year only if he likes the team's makeup.

Dennis Rodman, 36, is a free agent, too. While the return of Pippen, Jordan and Jackson wouldn't guarantee Rodman's return, the departure of those three would ensure the Worm's departure.

The situation upsets Chicago fans, who can't understand why Reinsdorf would even consider breaking up a team that would be favored to win titles as long as Jordan is around. Reinsdorf and unexpectdly, or pass on a point guard unexpectdly. But the important thing to keep in mind is that where he gets picked is simply not that big of a deal.

And though he wants to go early, Woolridge says to have a grasp on that.

K.J. to stay with Suns one more season

PHOENIX (AP) — Phoenix Suns guard Kevin Johnson, who toyed with the idea of retiring after last season, is returning for one more year and a reported $7 million salary.

After the Suns were eliminated from the playoffs by Seattle in the first round last month, the three-time All-Star said he would call it a career at age 31. "I intended to play 10 years and that would be it. At the end of the season, I still felt that way," Johnson said Tuesday at a news conference at America West Arena. "But Jerry (Colangelo) said we had to talk. I dug down deep in my soul for a decision and this is it."

Radja fails physical

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The Philadelphia 76ers announced Tuesday night that Dino Radja, obtained in a trade Friday with the Boston Celtics, failed his physical and the deal was off.

"Dino Radja has failed to pass his physical examination conducted today by team doctors," 76ers vice president of basketball operations Billy King said in a statement.

"Therefore, per the contingency included in the Philadelphia-Boston trade of June 20, the trade is null and void."

The 76ers traded forward Clarence Weather- spoon and center-forward Michael Cage to the Celtics for Radja, a 6-foot-10 center-forward, in the first deal between the teams' new coaches, Boston's Rick Pitino and Philadelphia's Larry Brown.

Weather- spoon and Cage passed their physicals in Boston, Celtics spokesman Jeff Twiss said Tuesday.

Celtics general manager Chris Wallace said Tuesday night the team would not have any comment on Radja failing the physical.

Even as the deal was made, Brown expressed concern that Radja's left knee, which was operated on last January, had not healed sufficiently to allow him to play.

CBS adds Holtz and Notre Dame road games to fall season

NEW YORK (AP) — Former Notre Dame football coach Lou Holtz will get a chance to second-guess his successor on national television as a full-time studio analyst for CBS Sports.

CBS announced Tuesday that it will televise two Notre Dame road games during Bob Davie's first season as head coach. Davie had been an assistant at Notre Dame, where Holtz coached for 11 seasons before retiring.

The network also said it was expanding its coverage by one game to 25 games over 13 weekends, and adding a new half-hour pre-game show, "College Football Today."

Purdue forward faces four charges

WEST LAFAYETTE, Ind. (AP) — Purdue basketball forward Mike Robinson faces four counts of criminal conversion in the thefts of compact discs and university parking permits, Tippecanoe County prosecutor Jerry Bean said Tuesday.

The charges allege "he exerted unauthorized control," Bean said. "That may mean that even if he did not individually steal them, he knew they were not his."

Robinson, from Peoria, Ill., and freshman Gary McQuay were arrested last December for allegedly taking compact discs from a West Lafayette bookstore. Both of them were suspended for one game, by coach Gene Keady and were ordered to perform eight hours of community service.

Broghamer named head Iowa baseball coach

Scott Broghamer, former Iowa pitching coach will take over immediately for Duane Banks, who retired in May.

By Andy Hamilton
The Daily Iowan

SCOTT BROGHAMER

Age: 40
Experience:
■ Iowa assistant coach, 1989-97
■ Iowa graduate assistant, 1987-88
■ Urbana High School baseball and basketball coach, 1979-86
■ Urbana H. S. Athletics Director, 1984-86

The Iowa Athletics Department decided the best man for the Iowa baseball job was the man who knew the job best.

Iowa assistant coach Scott Broghamer was named head baseball coach Tuesday after working 11 years under coach Duane Banks, who retired in May after compiling a record of 810-575-4 at Iowa.

Broghamer has served as pitching coach and top assistant at Iowa since 1989. He has also had administrative responsibilities within the Athletics Department.

"Scott was highly recommended by our search committee and was the leading candidate among our baseball players," Iowa Athletics Director Bob Bowsby said. "The preference expressed by those two groups strongly influenced my decision."

After narrowing a list of more than 60 applicants to four finalists, the 40-year-old Broghamer was chosen over Arizona State assistant Doug Schreiber, Pittsburgh coach Mark Jackson and Cal State Northridge coach Michael Batesol, whose program recently was dropped.

The decision was originally slated for late last week, but moved back until Tuesday.

"The selection of our new coach was very difficult and took a few days more than we anticipated," Bowsby said.

After interviewing for the position almost two weeks ago, Broghamer was forced to wait for the decision.

"I had to sit back and wait for everything else to happen and I'm not very good at waiting," Broghamer said. "My patience sometimes gets thin on that."

But after having to wait to get the nod, Broghamer doesn't have to wait to take over. He has already started on his first task — finding someone to take over doing his former responsibilities.

"Mr. Bowsby also advertised for the assistant coaching position," Broghamer said. "We've already got a stack of applicants and I'll start going over those (Tuesday)."

Broghamer takes over a team that finished last in the Big Ten and 17-30 overall. But Iowa returns seven of the top 10 hitters and their top five pitchers from last season.

"We've got some good talented players coming back," Broghamer said. "They know me, they know my expectations. The first day of practice, we'll start right back to it. We're all looking forward to that. I'm certainly excited about it."

After winning a record 22 conference games in 1990, the Hawkeyes have had been on a steady decline to the basement of the Big Ten since. Broghamer said he hasn't set any goals concerning when the Hawkeyes will make it back to Big Ten prominence.

"I don't have a timeline, but in order to be a successful baseball team, we have to be consistent," Broghamer said. "We're going to play pitch by pitch, inning by inning and game by game, and make the routine plays and do what we can do with the talent we have to be competitive."

As well as looking forward to next season, Broghamer is putting an emphasis on recruiting the best players available, especially in the state of Iowa.

"I think that we've done a great job with in-state kids this year," Broghamer said. "Being a state institution, we should work very hard to keep the best kids in the state of Iowa. If not, we'll go wherever we have to go."

MAJOR LEAGUE BASEBALL ROUNDUP

Benes' 100th win downs Cubs

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Andy Benes allowed four hits in seven innings for his 100th career victory and Ron Gant busted out of a slump with three hits and three RBIs as the St. Louis Cardinals beat the Chicago Cubs 7-2 Tuesday night.

The Cardinals, who were shut out by rookie Jeremi Gonzalez's four-hitter in the series opener Monday, have won three of four. The Cubs have lost six of seven and have been outscored 32-15 in that stretch.

It took Benes (6-3) three tries to get the milestone win, and he left little to chance. The Cubs didn't have a hit until Dave Hansen singled through shortstop to start the fifth inning and no Cub made it past first base until the seventh.

Benes struck out seven but struggled in his final inning, allowing two hits. The Cubs broke the shutout when third baseman Gary Gaetti pulled first baseman Dmitri Young off the bag on a grounder by Shawon Dunston, allowing Mark Grace to score from third.

Gant, in the second year of a five-year, $25 million deal, was 3-for-39 and batting .217 before going 3-for-5 with a two-run triple off Terry Mulholland (5-8) in the fourth and a run-scoring single in the seventh. Willie McGee, a late lineup insert after Brian Jordan was scratched due to soreness in his lower back, had a season-high three hits and an RBI.

Giants 4, Padres 1
SAN FRANCISCO — Barry Bonds hit his 17th homer and Shawn Estes allowed one run over eight innings.

Estes (10-2) won his sixth straight decision, allowing seven hits. He struck out six. Rod Beck pitched the ninth for his NL-leading 25th save.

Reds 7, Expos 6
MONTREAL — Lenny Harris singled home the winning run in the 10th inning to snap a three-game Cincinnati losing streak. Eduardo Perez homered, drove in three runs and had a career-high four hits for the Reds.

St. Louis Cardinals' Delino DeShields is safe at the plate while the Chicago Cubs catcher Scott Servais (9) waits for the throw during the fourth inning at Busch Stadium in St. Louis on Tuesday. DeShields scored from first on a double by Ron Gant.

Jeff Shaw (2-0) got the win despite allowing a Mike Lansing homer in the ninth to tie it 6-6.

Marlins 4, Phillies 1
PHILADELPHIA — Al Leiter allowed only one run in six innings and Jim Eisen-

1997 NBA DRAFT

Charlotte, N.C.

Woolridge's position will hurt him in draft

For Andre Woolridge, today is judgment day. The NBA Draft begins tonight at 6:30 p.m., and the former Iowa point guard will surely be in the mix.

He wants to be drafted in the teens. He'll probably be disappointed.

The problem is his position. If the NBA's coaches and general managers got together and decided on the 20 best players in the draft, regardless of position, Woolridge would be a sure thing.

But they don't draft regardless of position.

An NBA team has to really want a point guard to draft him in the first round. A Utah or Miami or Seattle just isn't in the market. Even teams that draft the "best available athlete" firmly when he said Woolridge is a late first-rounder or early second-rounder, but that's not necessarily a bad thing.

Woolridge's next problem is that he's landed himself in somewhat of a point guard-heavy draft. Colorado's Chauncey Billups and Bowling Green's Antonio Daniels will go in the top five, then Kansas' Jacque Vaughn, Stanford's Brevin Knight, Minnesota's Bobby Jackson and Providence's God Shammog will all be hoping to go first round along with Woolridge.

Maybe five or six teams will take point guards in the first round, and Woolridge is probably the fifth or sixth best prospect.

But Dallas Mavericks GM Don Nelson offers hope. Said the former Hawkeye, "If somebody loves you, it's just like winning the lottery."

Of course, Nelson also spoke firmly when he said Woolridge is a late first-rounder or early second-rounder, but that's not necessarily a bad thing.

Draft should clear up Bulls' future

By Mike Nadel
Associated Press

CHICAGO — As the NBA draft approaches, the rumor mill churns, Scottie Pippen's stomach turns and Chicago fans do slow burns.

By late Wednesday night, Pippen should know if he is staying or going. And the future paths of Michael Jordan, coach Phil Jackson — and of the entire Bulls organization — should be clearer as well.

Bulls general manager Jerry Krause refused to discuss specifics but acknowledged he was listening to offers. Rather than lose Pippen as a free agent a year from now, the Bulls could decide to trade one of the game's best all-around players.

Right now, however, everything is just a muddle of rumors and speculation sur-

He also knew "it's a weather balloon" is standard-issue cover-up. My suspicion is that the weather balloon excuse has been used so many times that aliens have begun to build their aircraft in the exact form of weather balloons, so they can cruise Earth's atmosphere undetected.

Court: Congress went to

In a key ruling affecting religious freedom, the Supreme Court decided Wednesday that Congress went too far when it passed a law aimed at curbing governmental interference with Americans' spiritual lives. Wednesday's decision in a dispute between a small town and the local Roman Catholic church makes it tougher to challenge successful government actions that are seen as infringing on religious freedom.

Don't hate Wyclef Jean because he's a solo album. The Fugees' memorable remakes and choruses propelled the band into stardom but made it easy to forget the group's groundbreaking musicality. Their debut solo release, "The Carnival," is a tribute to its creativity, encompassing worldwide sound.

Quote of the day

"They came with the hope that renowned throughout the civilized world, justice, fairness and respect for human rights would help them in their time of need." — U.S. District Judge James L. King, who on Tuesday blocked government efforts to deport as many as 40,000 Americans who were allowed to enter the United States in the 1980s because of wars in their homelands.
