Tour targets bad classrooms

By Keen Snyder

Associate Professor John Elliston glanced at a wall in one of UI's most troublesome classrooms — the same one he used as a student a dozen years ago.

"I'm a big believer in the fact that technology does not necessarily mean you're learning well," Elliston said.

Alison Miller, an administrative assistant in the Department of Chemical Engineering and Biotechnology, Monday pointed to a wall in room 100 of Chemistry Building, which was closed Monday after UI Student Government President Allison Miller and her brother Jason, a junior in chemistry, noticed a familiar periodic table of the elements — the same one he

Because of that, traditional judges, many have an incentive to get conviction numbers up just in order to keep their numbers down. That’s why some of them still do it. Accordingly, the state’s new law is one of an average not over 0.150 BAC.

Until today, judges had the power to reduce sentences for first-time drunken drivers, and routinely did so. In this case, the judges drove message which was they will not tolerate drunk drivers, of convicted drunk drivers and injured at least two other people. Learning to build instead of tear down

When I was 11 years old, I wanted to build a 50-foot wooden bridge. I started by using a 10-foot metal guard rail and then慢慢地加长了桥的长度。But little did I think about the consequences of my actions.

I knocked down a few trees, but then my bridge was met with resistance. People didn’t want to see it, and the authorities got involved. I was told that I had to stop building the bridge. It was a rude awakening for me.

I realized that I had to learn to build instead of tear down. So I started a new project: a garden. I planted flowers and vegetables, and I learned how to care for them. I also learned the importance of planning and foresight.

The garden was a success, and I continued to build it every year. I learned that if I had the right materials, the right tools, and the right skills, I could build anything I wanted. And I was able to share my love of gardening with others.

I learned that building is a lot easier than tearing down. And I realized that if I had my way, I would build instead of tear down. I would build bridges instead of walls. I would build gardens instead of wastelands. I would build communities instead of fractures.

I learned that building is a lot more fun than tearing down. It’s a lot more satisfying. It’s a lot more rewarding.

And I realized that if I had my way, I would never tear down anything. I would always build.

I would build bridges to understanding. I would build bridges to opportunities. I would build bridges to possibilities.

And I would never tear down a bridge again.

"Broadway Bound" starring Donald McClave and Stephen Thurle

By Anne Hayward

The set has a brilliant brown color scheme, with wood paneling and a mixture of high drama and revolutionary life. He expresses his desire to express truth in his work, and he understands how his music is just as binding as a confession. Marsalis requires careful balance of funny and poignant moments that nearly overtop one another.

Jazz oratorio finally sees light of day

Ultimate graduate student Donald McClave (left) and Stephen Thurle star as the Jerome brothers, in Neil Simon's "Broadway Bound." Despite being the most commercially successful playwright on Broadway, he is sometimes ignored as the two deal with their befuddled and profoundly expressing very human problems.

Sampson loves erving Wimbledon wins
By Vann Winfield

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) - John McEnroe romped 6-2, 6-2, 6-1 over Ivan Lendl on Monday, Aug. 1, to reach the quarterfinals of the only Grand Slam tournament he has never won.

McEnroe, who turns 35 on Aug. 2, has won only one match in his last 12 -- the Northern California Championship last week. But he never seriously considered skipping Wimbledon, the tournament where he's won three titles since 1979.

The 14th-seeded American, who began his Wimbledon campaign with a four-set victory over 34-year-old Ken Flach, dominated the Czech-American.

McEnroe, who was at his best early in the match, broke Lendl's serve in the first set and never looked back. He served out the match in 68 minutes, winning the first set 6-2 and second 6-1.

Lendl, who had reached the quarterfinals at each of the last three majors, had trouble dealing with McEnroe's serve and baseline game.

Lendl took a 2-0 lead in the first set when McEnroe double-faulted, giving the American a 0-40 lead.

McEnroe, however, managed to save two set points before losing the game.

He then had no trouble winning the third set, breaking Lendl's serve at 3-0 and serving it out with a 6-1 win.

McEnroe will play 12th-seeded Pete Sampras, who defeated 10th-seeded Rainer Schuettler 6-4, 6-3, 7-6 (7-4) in 2 hours.

Sampras, who won his second round the previous day, managed to lose only 10 points in his 16 games to get past the 34-year-old German.

Lendl lost three of his last four matches, including a quarterfinal loss at Wimbledon last year to 16th-seeded Ivan Ljubicic, who advanced Monday to the quarterfinals with his win over John McEnroe.

Lendl, the 1986 Wimbledon and 1988 U.S. Open champion, had yet to reach a quarterfinal at any major tournament this year.

He has not reached the quarterfinals at Wimbledon after winning the men's title in 1984 and reaching the finals in 1986.

Lendl, who was ranked No. 3 in the world at the start of the year, dropped to No. 8 after his loss.

The 1980s-era German, who ranks among the best players of all time, is trying to make his third Wimbledon return final.

He was off the circuit from 1993-95 after having one of his three operations in 1994.

He last reached the final in 1994, losing to Sampras.

Lendl lost in the quarterfinals this year at the French Open to Ivanisevic and the U.S. Open to Mark IV in the quarterfinals.

Lendl will play 13th-seeded Goran Ivanisevic of Croatia on Wednesday.

Lendl, who is 1-2 in matches against his Croatian opponent, told reporters he would play a loose, free-form game.

McEnroe, who ended up hitting 16 aces to one for Lendl, said he had practiced his serve and some other aspects of his game to ensure a repeat victory.

McEnroe has now reached the quarterfinals at each of the last 12 years. He is 3-3 in quarterfinals at Wimbledon.

McEnroe, who has reached the final at each of the last three majors this year, said his stamina and skills were not up to the task of eliminating Lendl.

Lendl had no complaints about his performance.

"I think I played my game," Lendl said. "I'll take my medicine and go home and wait for the next one and I will continue to work hard, play well and see how it goes from there."

Woolridge appears headed to Charlotte

After a three-day tryout, with the Charlotte Hornets, Woolridge will be invited to the team's full camp, a spokesperson said Monday.

By Chris Snider and Andy Hamilton

"A lot of these men haven't worked out at all since last season," said Horace Grant, one of the four players who signed last week to attend the team's three-day tryout. "I think people are doing some serious preparing to make this a season they can be proud of, and that's why we're here."

"We're just looking forward to the new start," said Grant, referring to the team's decision to play in Charlotte instead of its previous home in Raleigh.

"It's a new start, and we're ready to make the most of it," Grant added.
