"Wonderful Life" star dies

Jimmy Stewart, the stammering, aw-shucks actor who embodied the small-town values of decency and moral courage both in his life and on the screen, died Wednesday. Satellite tuition may soar

UI students learning from off-campus could face tuition hikes or lose the option all together.

By Jeff Bloomquist
The Daily Iowan

Off-campus learning may be more expensive this fall, as subsidies for the Iowa Communications Network are redirected to K-12 education.

A two million-dollar government subsidy designed to help fund long distance classrooms through two-way video broadcasting was abolished by a Congressional amendment July 1, said Sen. Bob Dvorsky D-Coralville, at a meeting with the Johnson County Democratic Central Committee Wednesday.

The ICN is a statewide fiber-optic network that connects various colleges, high schools, hospitals and government institutions throughout the state. It plays a pivotal role in the broadcasting of UI classes to other schools outside of the UI and also has the capability to transmit other classes back to the UI.

When the subsidy was in place, the price of using the ICN was a minimal six-dollars-an-hour for the outside classroom. With the amendment, the price of accepting the signal from ICN will skyrocket to $46 an hour.

"If you raise the costs from six dollars to $46 you are raising the costs of low-cost education," Dvorsky said. "It cuts into the idea of long distance learning."

In addition to the price of broadcasting to outside classrooms increasing the number of outside classes offered may also be affected, said Ann Rhodes, Vice President for UI Relations.

"This is a situation that we are monitoring very closely, hopefully we can maintain the level of services that we have now," Rhodes said.

If the changes are going to affect the system too harshly, Rhodes said the UI will not be afraid to protest.

"If the changes are going to go up so that the university is paying more than the prices of the instructors, it is something we are going to fight," Rhodes said.

The UI currently has locations equipped to handle two way broadcast

FACTS

• UI students learning from off-campus, fiber optic up-links could see their classes eliminated or their tuition raised this fall.

• Enrollment at the UI off-campus locations has skyrocketed since 1994.

• The federal funds being taken away from the Iowa Communications Network will likely be redirected to K-12 education.

Jazz Fest kicks off today

Eight musical acts are set to make sweet sounds downtown tonight and Friday.

By Kevin Ho
The Daily Iowan

With attendance expected to be 50 times the size it was in 1991, the 7th annual Amana Iowa City Jazz Festival isn't just tooting its own horn.

More than 35,000 people are expected to attend the event, which is scheduled to run today and Friday downtown.

"This is the single largest event outside of the football games and the Iowa State fair," Mark Ginsberg, festival executive producer, said.

"And, it's free to the public." Friday, July 4
6 p.m. Poncho Sanchez: Called the "father of salsa band music in the United States."

8 p.m. Kenny Garrett Quartet: Renowned alto-saxophonist to wrap up the festival.

Now, more than 30 sponsors spend an estimated $108,000 on the festival, Ginsberg said.

"Since the first year there's been exceptional talent and there's been exceptional talent every year since," Ginsberg said.

Ginsberg said eight major bands are scheduled to perform on the main stage located at the corner of Dubuque and Washington streets.

Ginsberg said he hopes the educational part of the festival, a youth jazz clinic for 17- and 18-year-olds, will continue to grow and expand. The festival is meant for entertainment and education to share the stage, he said.

"It's just such a dynamic opportunity to grow, so people don't think that jazz is just elevator music."

Ginsberg said the festival's growing success is indicative of Iowa City's growing success as well.

"There's nothing like this city in the state, it's nirvana for me, this place is

The new dean of the College of Liberal Arts recently finished her first official day in office.

By Mose Hayward
The Daily Iowan

At 4 p.m. July 1, her first official day as Dean of the College of Liberal Arts, Linda Ellen Resnick Maxson played with a rainbow-colored stuffed frog as she discussed her plans for the UI.

Maxson, the fourth candidate in the CLA's search for a new dean, was chosen in June to replace former CLA Dean Judith Aiken, who resigned to return to teaching.

Maxson's office is temporarily located in Macbride Hall, and the only moving in she has done is scattered piles of paper along with the distinctive marks of her scientific interests — two small stuffed frogs — creeping out from the corners.

"The business of being the dean is my priority here. I've made a commitment to that and if I can't carve out enough hours in the day (for research), that's the decision I'll have to make."

Changing Posts

Maxson came to the UI from the University of Tennessee in Knoxville, where she was an associate vice chancellor for academic affairs and dean of undergraduate academic affairs. Before that, she was a professor and head of the department of biology at Penn State University, with a strong research background in genetics.

When Aikin resigned from the dean post, she told The Daily Iowan that she had never wanted to be an administrator, but she had been pressured into the position partly because she was a woman.

Skateboarders and snowboarders will have a new place to shop beginning Saturday.

That's the official opening day for B&B Skate, Snow & Outdoor, a store that will specialize in medium and high end skateboards and snowboards.

One of the store's main features is an in-store skating ramp and a large cement lot immediately outside where skateboards can be tested.

Some of the skate lines carried by B&B, located at 1214B S. Gilbert St., behind Hagen's video, are Alien Workshop, Stereo, Zoo York. Snowboards will be on sale beginning in August,

HARLAN

Dear Harlan,

I think I hate my best friend. We've gone to school together for three years and have been friends since freshman year. This summer, though, I've been spending a lot of time with her, and I realize, I just don't like her very much. We've had lots of good times, but she's hurt me on many, many occasions. Sometimes, I think I'm the only one giving in this friendship. This summer, I've noticed just how self-centered she is and I don't like it.

We'll be seniors in college next year and I don't know what to do. I can't put up with her taking my friendship for granted, but I feel obligated to stay friends with her because we've known each other for so long and have experienced so much together.

What should I do?
Friends not forever

Dear Friends,

I found the perfect birthday card for your friend, "A Birthday Greeting From a Friend to Friend - I hate you, you're selfish, it's finally the end - HAPPY BIRTHDAY EX-GIRLFRIEND!" If her birthday isn't around the corner, consider putting some space between you and your friend. Over the past few years, you've both grown and matured. Somewhere along the line, you might have outgrown what was once a wonderful friendship. This can happen in all kinds of relationships. You have no obligations to be her friend, but if you're concerned about loyalty, try finding out why she's been acting so hurtful and selfish. Maybe, her actions are her way of expressing to you something is wrong. All you can do is talk to her and tell her you're hurt. You never know, she might just need a friend...

Dear Harlan,

I have a 40-year-old male friend who hooked up with this 26-year-old chick at the office. She moved out of her old boyfriend's house into his after about three weeks of dating. He says he's in love, so he broke off a four year relationship with a nice thirtysomething chick who had lots going.

The twentysomething is now staying at his house and "painting" all day. She says she's going to leave for France to paint. She owns nothing more than the clothes on her back. He pays for just about everything.

I care for my friend and I'm afraid he's getting used. They've been together for four or five months and I want to say something. I think he's setting himself up for a big time hurt. But then again, could they really be in love? What should I do?

Painting an ugly picture

Dear Painting,

I appreciate your interchanging of "chick" and "babe." You can only refer to a woman as "chick" only so many times before she insists you call her "babe." Sure, there might be good reason to be concerned, but at the same time, other than speculation, you have no evidence of this alleged use. And if he's really being used, what makes you so sure he doesn't see what's happening? He might be setting himself up for big disappointment, but it's a decision he must make. Besides, if you're wrong, you might risk an invite to the wedding.

Vendors keep the Ped Mall fed

Downtown vendors, growing in number, bring food, customers and energy to the Pedestrian Mall.

By Jen Malek
The Daily Iowan

Around lunch time, hundreds of Iowa City residents pass through the Pedestrian Mall, many stopping to eat or drink at one of the many vendors' carts. In recent years, outdoor business has been booming, leaving room for even more people to wheel into town — like the Tropical Sno Stand, which opened this summer. The flavor of the Pedestrian Mall isn't limited to the 37 different flavors of ice at the Sno stand or the 24 flavoring syrups available at the Seattle Coffee Company.

But some say much of the plaza's flavor does come from the downtown vendors, which number about seven on an average day. On Wednesday, Dave Burt was running the World Fruit Market, which came to downtown three years ago. There customers can get their choice of grape, mango, orange, banana, pineapple, peach, etc. in their own concoction. The vendors provide a service to shoppers and students, as well as people who work in the downtown area. As for the downtown business, the vendors keep the people coming downtown and staying downtown. The vendors seemed to agree that the job is seasonal. Good weather means good business, and events downtown, like the Friday night concert series, bring in more customers. George's Best Gyros stays open year round, rain or shine, selling their Greek fare. They also stay open late on weekend's to provide for the bar-goers. Even in the winter, they are open on Thursday, Friday and Saturday nights. "The action is after the bars get out on weekend nights," said Luther Moss, manager at George's. For some vendors, downtown supplies a learning experience. Circus Time Popcorn has been run by Mayor's Youth, a non-profit employment training organization for youth. Todd Mathews, a worker at Circus Time said staying downtown is interesting. "I learned a lot about people," he said. "I see every walk of life, and there's always something going on." While spending time in the Pedestrian Mall for some is a relaxing time, for others it is a job — but not the typical desk-sitting, nine-to-five gig. "You get to sit in the sun, drink fruit drinks, and talk to people," Burt said.

Jamie McMahan denies firing the gun that killed a woman on July 11, after bragging about his crime spree to fellow cell mate.

OSKALOOSA, Iowa — McMahan was incarcerated Wednesday when he read a national complaint charging him with first-degree murder, telling him that he did not fire the gun that killed the woman.

"He said, 'This is B.S. That's right. I didn't pull the trigger on the cell mate, Trevor Moran,'" McMahan said Wednesday after watching a news report that had read the criminal complaint against him. "He told me that he was not the one who fired the shot," McMahan said.

While "fixin" to go to church on Sunday, Michael Davidson called the end of "America's Most Wanted." On Monday he helped capture two Iowa fugitives.

CEDAR RAPIDS, Iowa — Michael Davidson seldom watches television, but he's glad he saw the day night.

After watching "America's Most Wanted" that night, Davidson called the tip to authorities in Osceola, Fla., that ended a wide manhunt for two young men from Iowa wanted for a bank robbery in one of the most sensational crime stories of the decade.

In less than four hours, Davidson's tip was received by McMahan, 22, of rural Rose Hill, and Christopher Kauffman, 21, of Osceola, were in custody in Osceola.

"I don't watch much TV," Davidson, 26, told the Cedar Rapids Gazette in a telephone interview from his Mobile, Ala., home. "We were fixin' to go to church on Sunday night. I was real well, my wife, Jessica, was quite ready."

"I was flippin' channels around on 'America's Most Wanted' was the part where they were interviewing the two girls. The program, televised

Stepbrother explains to his cell mate, 'I didn't pull the trigger'

Jamie McMahan denies firing the gun that killed a woman on June 11, after bragging about his crime spree to fellow cell mate.

By Greg Smith
Associated Press

OSKALOOSA, Iowa — Jamie McMahan was incredulous Wednesday when he read a criminal complaint charging him with first-degree murder, telling a cell mate that he did not fire the gun that killed the woman.

"He said, 'This is B.S. This can't be right. I didn't pull the trigger,'" the cell mate, Trevor Money, said Wednesday after watching McMahan read the criminal complaint against him. "He told me he was not the one who fired the shots."

"He didn't know what had happened until he heard the shots," McMahan, 22, of Rose Hill, and stepbrother Christopher Kauffman, 18, of Oskaloosa, are charged with first-degree murder in the June 11 shooting death of Barbara Garber, 52, of What Cheer. They also are suspects in the shooting death of Island Schultz, 18, of Gibson, and the robbery of the Gibson Savings Bank.

The stepbrothers, wearing shackles and black-and-white striped jail uniforms, made an initial appearance in Mahaska County District Court via closed-circuit television. Magistrate Scott Campbell ordered each held on $1 million bond.

A July 10 preliminary hearing was set for Kauffman while McMahan's court-appointed attorney waived his preliminary hearing.

Money, interviewed by reporters after being released from jail, was arrested about noon Tuesday on a domestic assault charge in which authorities say he slapped his wife across the face.

McMahan and Kauffman, who were captured Monday in Pensacola, Fla., ending a 20-day manhunt, were flown from Florida to Oskaloosa and taken to the jail late Tuesday night.

Sheriff's officials confirmed that Money and McMahan shared a cell Tuesday evening and into Wednesday morning.

"He asked me if I knew who he was. I said, 'Yeah, I know who you are. I can't believe you are in the same cell with me,'" Money said.

Money said McMahan's demeanor was "cocky" at first and that he had even bragged about robbing a What Cheer bank several weeks ago and getting away with either $18,000 or $28,000.

"He said he had planned the perfect robbery in What Cheer and if anybody wanted to know how to rob a bank, to ask him," Money said.

He said McMahan told him he blew the money on "booze and drugs" and that he was high on the drug methamphetamine while they eluded a nationwide dragnet that developed after the crime spree in Mahaska, Keokuk and Poweshiek counties.

McMahan also told Money that he didn't think he or Kauffman would get caught, Money said. The suspects had planned to swap the 1997 green Dodge Dakota truck, which had been owned by Garber, with an Acura just before they were apprehended.

Money said he told McMahan that he thought it was stupid that the two stepbrothers didn't ditch the truck earlier. A witness recognized the vehicle's description Monday on Interstate 10 in Florida and tipped Pensacola police.

"He said, 'Yeah, but we didn't get caught' for nearly three weeks, Money said McMahan told him.

Money said McMahan did not mention a bank robbery in Gibson or anything about Mandi Smith and Amanda Miller, best friends from Oskaloosa who traveled with the stepbrothers for more than a week before returning by train to Ottumwa on June 21.

The girls have not been charged although authorities say they are not ruling out filing charges.

Meanwhile, the first court documents to be filed in the case show that a witness has identified McMahan and Kauffman "as procuring a handgun on the day prior to the murder." The witness wasn't named in the criminal complaint.

Authorities have said Garber and Schultz were both shot at home, execution style, roughly 3 1/2 hours apart the morning of June 11.

"Spent shell casings were recovered at the (Garber) scene and in a vehicle used by Jamie McMahan," the complaint said. "A slug was recovered at the scene of the murder."

Fugitives spotted by TV watcher

While "fixin' to go church on Sunday, Michael Davidson caught the end of "America's Most Wanted." On Monday he helped catch two Iowa fugitives

CEDAR RAPIDS, Iowa (AP) — Michael Davidson seldom watches television, but he's glad he did Sunday night.

After watching "America's Most Wanted" that night, Davidson provided the tip to authorities in Pensacola, Fla., that ended a nationwide manhunt for two young southern Iowa men wanted for murder and bank robbery in one of Iowa's most sensational crime sprees this decade.

In less than four hours after Davidson's tip was received, Jamie McMahan, 22, of rural Rose Hill, and Christopher Kauffman, 18, of Oskaloosa, were in custody in Pensacola.

"I don't watch much TV," Davidson, 26, told the Cedar Rapids Gazette in a telephone interview from his Mobile, Ala., home Tuesday. "We were fixin' to go to church Sunday night. I was ready and, well, my wife, Jessica, was not quite ready."

"I was flippin' channels and landed on 'America's Most Wanted.' It was the part where they were interviewing the two girls."

The program, televised Sunday night on a delayed basis in the Florida Panhandle and south Alabama, interviewed Oskaloosa teen-agers Mandi Smith and Amanda Miller, who accompanied McMahan and Kauffman to Florida before returning home June 21. It also described the green pickup truck the suspects had been driving when last seen on June 16.

On Monday morning, Davidson, who services electronic bank equipment for a suburban Birmingham, Ala., company, had to go to Pensacola on a call.

"I was traveling east on I-10 in Alabama," he said. "It was about 11 a.m. Before I got to the Florida state line, this vehicle passed me. I was doin' about 70, but it passed me and I always look at cars on the road, the tags, the make. It keeps me awake."

"When he passed, I noticed it was one of those new Dodge Dakota trucks, dark green, and I could see two young white males in the cab."

"It went through my mind that this seems familiar. I just saw the program the night before. I saw the Iowa tag, but I couldn't remember if it was an Iowa truck on TV. That tag 910 BUF stuck in my head. I didn't write it down. I said, that really looks familiar."

Davidson wanted a better look and pushed his Mazda pickup to 75 and followed for 10 miles until it looked like the truck's passenger "was gettin' fidgety."

But because he was "still iffy" about the pickup's occupants, he increased his speed to 80 so he could pass and look back to see the faces of those in the truck.

"But when I got up next to the truck, I got scared and looked over to the westbound lane," he said. "I didn't want to spook them, but I got in front of them."

Davidson said he kept the Iowa truck in his sights until they crossed the Florida line. He exited and watched as the green truck continued east on the interstate.

He drove three miles to the bank where he was expected and told the tellers he thought he'd seen the Iowa fugitives but didn't know what to do.

He was finishing his service call when one of the tellers made a telephone call and handed him the phone.

"She said, 'This is my daddy. He is a detective in Pensacola.'"

The officer on the other end was Sgt. Al Mezza of the Escambia County Sheriff's Department.

Davidson told him what he'd seen, and Mezza said he'd check it out.

It was shortly before noon. By 3 p.m., both suspects were in custody and police were asking Davidson if they could release his name to the media.

He talked to his wife. He called his minister. He said OK.

"Everyone calls me a hero, and I don't want to be called that," he said. "My wife said, 'You are a hero in the eyes of (the victims') families.' But I want God to have the glory. I was blessed with good health to get out of bed Monday and have a job to go to and be there at the right time."

Leaky library roof needs repair

The leaky library needs fixing, the library director told the city council Wednesday.

By Jenn Snyder
The Daily Iowan

Library Director Susan Craig says the public library is in dire straits.

The City of Iowa City proposed an emergency plan to repair the roof of the Iowa City Public Library, which was severely damaged during June's hail storm. The roof has between 50 and 70 holes in the plastic membrane that serves as the roof, causing water to leak on top of books and equipment.

T & K Roofing of Ely, Iowa, bid $212,729 for a new roof for the library. The roof would be a modified bituminous roof — made of tar, not a plastic sheet.

Because this type of roof would cost about twice as much as replacing the current, plastic roof with a similar plastic roof, the council deferred the vote until July 15, when more proposals can be presented.

The hail damage has forced library staff to make makeshift repairs to the roof, such as adding duct tape to the roof, Craig said.

"This is a serious situation — it's not like any other situation we've seen," she said.

City Manager Steve Atkins said despite the leaky library, the council is interested in getting the most cost-effective roof.

"While they're taking a risk by deferring, they want to see some other proposals," Atkins said.

Craig said the library has gallon buckets under leaks and plastic sheets over the stacks to protect books when it rains.

She said she is more concerned with having a roof that doesn't leak than what the roof is made of.

"I really don't have a preference," Craig said. "I want it done."

The council was also concerned about each roof's warranty. The bituminous roof has approximately a 15-year life with a 10-year warranty, whereas the plastic membrane roof already on the library has lasted for 18 years, under a 15-year warranty.

"It does not seem prudent to spend the higher amount," said Councilor Karen Kubby.

Craig said the city budgeted sufficient funds for a new roof at a cost exceeding the bid from T & K Roofing in the general fund. However, the council was reluctant to spend the money if other, less expensive options were available.

"Even though it's budgeted, it's still money," Kubby said. "I want to protect the library and its contents, and I want to do it the most cost-effective way possible."

Atkins recommended the council take the time to request bids from several contractors before making a decision to replace the roof. He said city engineers would have to determine specifications for each type of roof before bids could be submitted to the city.

"It's a Wonderful life" star dead at 89 RU-486 pill coming

Jimmy Stewart, who starred in more than 75 films, died in his Beverly Hills home after fighting illness on Wednesday.

By John Horn
Associated Press

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. — Jimmy Stewart, the stammering, aw-shucks actor who embodied the small-town values of decency and moral courage both in his life and on the screen, died Wednesday. The star of "It's a Wonderful Life" and "Mr. Smith Goes to Washington" was 89.

Stewart died at his home in Beverly Hills. Fighting illness and mourning the death of his wife, he had become something of a recluse toward the end of his life.

Stewart conjured up some of the most memorable performances in cinema history. In more than 75 films, a distinguished military career and exemplary private life, Stewart emerged as a symbol of old-fashioned American values.

"America lost a national treasure today," President Clinton said. "Jimmy Stewart was a great actor, a gentleman and a patriot. We will always remember his rich career of great performances that spanned several decades and entertained generations of Americans. Like all Americans, Hillary and I will miss him greatly, but his works live on, and for that we can all be grateful."

In his most memorable roles, Stewart played earnest, sometimes bashful heroes, slow to anger but possessed with bottomless reserves of perseverance. In an age of elegant, drop-dead handsome matinee idols, the lanky Stewart was more the average-looking guy next door. He was best known for his role as a suicidal businessman who finds redemption in the 1946 movie "It's a Wonderful Life," one of the most beloved films ever and Stewart's personal favorite.

In "Mr. Smith Goes to Washington" in 1939, he was an idealistic young senator who challenges the backroom deals and opportunism on Capitol Hill. In one of Stewart's most famous lines, he says: "I wouldn't give you two cents for all your fancy rules if behind them they didn't have a little bit of plain, ordinary kindness and a little lookin' out for the other fella."

Stewart won a best actor Academy Award for 1940's "The Philadelphia Story" and was nominated four other times.

"He was just a great human being. I think Jimmy on the screen was what he was off the screen," said Betty Hutton, who starred with Stewart in 1952's "The Greatest Show on Earth." "That's him. He doesn't act. He doesn't have to."

Stewart's life reflected a small-town, religious upbringing and sense of responsibility: He was politically conservative. He married only once, for 45 years. In World War II, he was sent to Europe as a bomber squadron commander, flew 20 combat missions and earned the Distinguished Flying Cross. A dutiful son, he often returned to help the family hardware store in Indiana, Pa., where his best actor Oscar was displayed in the window for 20 years.

"This is where I made up my mind about certain things — about the importance of hard work and community spirit, the value of family, church and God," Stewart said at his 75th birthday party in the small town.

Stewart's acting seemed effortless and natural. Frank Capra, who directed "Mr. Smith" and "It's a Wonderful Life," once said that Stewart was one of the few actors to achieve that level of performance at which there is "no acting at all, when the actor disappears and a real live person appears on the screen, a person the audience cares about immediately."

Self-effacing in life just as he was on screen, Stewart was more likely to credit his directors. "I won't let it get me, but too much praise can turn a fellow's head if he doesn't watch his step," he once said.

He worked with some of Hollywood's most distinguished directors, including Alfred Hitchcock, who put him in such stylish thrillers as "Rope," "Vertigo" and "Rear Window," and John Ford ("Two Rode Together," "How the West Was Won").

Born in 1908, James Maitland Stewart was a spindly, bespectacled youngster who staged plays in the family basement and first acted in a Boy Scout production. He studied architecture at Princeton University.

He played accordion with the university drama group, dabbled in magic and, after graduation, got a job in summer theater with the University Players in Massachusetts, working with Henry Fonda and Margaret Sullavan.

Stewart made his feature film debut in 1935 in "The Murder Man" as a newspaper reporter opposite Spencer Tracy. "I was all hands and feet, and didn't know what to do with either," he once said.

Abortion-rights group to give pill to 10,000 U.S. women

NEW YORK (AP) — With plans to market the French abortion pill in this country held up again, an abortion-rights group is sponsoring research trials to make RU-486 available for free to 10,000 U.S. women.

The Abortion Rights Mobilization said Wednesday it has obtained funding from the John Merck Fund to distribute the pill at additional clinics in New York, Texas, Maryland and Florida. It already has provided RU-486 to 1,000 women in New York, Nebraska, Vermont, Montana, California and Washington.

"These new clinics will bring RU-486 within reasonable traveling distance of all U.S. women," said Lawrence Lader, president of the nonprofit group.

The French-made pill is sold in Europe, and about 200,000 women have used it to end pregnancies since its introduction in 1988.

The New York-based Population Council holds rights to market the drug in this country but, in the latest in a series of setbacks, has been unable to find a manufacturer.

The nonprofit organization said it doesn't expect mass production and distribution to begin until next year.

Military's anti-gay law ruled unconstitutional

Judge strikes down 'don't ask, don't tell' for a second time

By Tom Hays
Associated Press

NEW YORK — The Clinton administration's "don't ask, don't tell" policy for gays in the military is unconstitutional, a federal judge ruled Wednesday, reaffirming his earlier ruling.

The 48-page ruling by U.S. District Court Judge Eugene Nickerson concludes that the policy violates the First Amendment's free speech protections.

A military "called on to fight for the principles of equality and free speech embodied in the United States Constitution should embrace those principles in its own ranks," the judge wrote.

The judge also argued that for the policy "to single out gay and lesbian members denies them, without legitimate reason, the right to openly participate as equals in the defense of the nation."

Nickerson first declared the policy unconstitutional in 1995, calling it "nothing short of Orwellian" and a violation of free-speech rights that barred people from saying "I am gay." But last year, a three-judge panel of the 2nd U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals sent the case back for review because it disagreed with the judge's reasoning.

It is plain to us that governmental restrictions on speech that would run afoul of the Constitution if imposed in civilian life can pass constitutional muster in the military context.

2nd U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals

"It is plain to us that governmental restrictions on speech that would run afoul of the Constitution if imposed in civilian life can pass constitutional muster in the military context," the appeals court said.

Under the "don't ask, don't tell, don't pursue" policy, gays can serve as long as they keep their sexual orientation to themselves and do not engage in homosexual acts. Otherwise, they can be honorably discharged. In addition, commanders may not ask a service member his or her sexual orientation.

The New York case is one of several around the nation challenging the policy, which the Clinton administration adopted in 1993 as a compromise between the views of gay-rights advocates and those flatly opposed to homosexuals in the military.

Fires rage in California

Fast-moving fire chars 1,600 acres in Southern California

Chris Roddy
A musician and electrician

AZUSA, Calif. (AP) — A fast-moving fire charred 1,600 acres of brush in the foothills of Southern California's San Gabriel Mountains, injuring four people and destroying two homes and two out-buildings.

The blaze Tuesday was caused by a private landowner clearing vegetation with a weed-whacker, which could have hit a rock and possibly produced a spark that ignited the fire in the dry brush, U.S. Forest Service spokesperson Linda Christman said.

Aided by seven air tankers and 12 helicopters, more than 600 firefighters attacked the blaze 25 miles east of Los Angeles. It was moving toward an area that burned last year, which officials hoped would slow the fire down and make containment easier.

The blaze was 10 percent or surrounded at dawn today, U.S. Forest Service spokesperson Bruce Quintelier said. He added there was no time or date estimate for when it would be completely surrounded. "It could burn for a few days yet."

It could burn for a few days yet.

Chris Roddy, a musician and electrician, said a 100-year-old cabin that was his home of seven years burned to the ground. His new motorcycle also was incinerated, leaving him with a car and three dogs as his sole possessions.

"I can't even cry," Roddy said. "Everything, all my guitars ... all the songs I ever wrote. Everything. Everything."

Twenty miles away, wildfires moved into steep, remote Angeles National Forest terrain, where it burned 80 acres. It was extinguished Tuesday night.

One firefighter was treated for heat exhaustion, an elderly couple in their 80s was treated for panic attacks, and a bystander watching the fire had a heart attack, Christman said.

Power lines may not cause leukemia as previously thought

Study finds no evidence of power lines causing childhood leukemia

By Daniel Q. Haney Associated Press

BOSTON — The largest, most exacting study ever of electricity and cancer found no solid evidence that living near high-voltage lines causes childhood leukemia, as some have feared.

The researchers say their work is the strongest indication yet that this much-discussed concern is groundless. Two other large studies, coming out within the next year in Canada and England, could help settle the issue for good.

Fears about exposure to magnetic fields from high-voltage electrical lines were first raised in the late 1970s. Since then, several studies have looked into the question, with mixed results. However, some have suggested that exposure might triple the risk of acute lymphoblastic leukemia, the most common childhood cancer.

The latest study was designed to overcome many of the shortcomings raised by critics of the earlier research.

"All in all, this study indicates that if there is an association between magnetic fields and cancer, it is very weak. It makes one wonder how much more money we want to throw at this subject, because basically we can't see anything definite," said Dr. Lawrence Fischer, director of the Institute for Environmental Toxicology at Michigan State University.

Fischer headed an advisory committee for the $4.5 million study, which was conducted by the National Cancer Institute and published in Thursday's issue of the New England Journal of Medicine.

The study was based on 638 children under age 15 with acute lymphoblastic leukemia. The researchers checked the youngsters' exposure to magnetic fields generated by nearby power lines and compared it with that of 620 healthy children.

The researchers measured magnetic fields in all the houses where the children had lived for five years before the discovery of their cancer, as well as in the homes where their mothers lived while pregnant.

"We found no evidence that magnetic field levels in the home increased the risk for childhood leukemia," said Dr. Martha S. Linet, who directed the study.

The only bit of data to the contrary was a 24 percent increase in leukemia risk for children exposed to especially high magnetic fields. However, this was not statistically meaningful and could have been a fluke, especially since the risk did not rise steadily as power levels went up, as would be expected if there truly was a link.

Even though acute lymphoblastic leukemia is the most common childhood cancer, it is still rare, striking about 1,600 youngsters in the United States annually.

GOP tax cut goes to wealthy

Tax bill would deny key benefit to working poor

By Rob Wells Associated Press

WASHINGTON — One of the most intense political arguments over the $135 billion tax-cut bill involves whether low-income working families qualify for the main benefit — the $500-per-child tax credit.

House Republicans would deny many such families this break — since their taxable incomes generally are so small that they owe no income taxes — leading Democrats to charge the bill is unfair to the poor.

Now, the House GOP faces the task of defending its position, a reversal from the original "Contract With America," which would have given the new child credit to many working poor families. Rep. Charles Rangel of New York, the ranking Democrat on the House Ways and Means Committee, said the House GOP made the change in order to free money for capital-gains tax cuts for the wealthy.

"If they know they would be embarrassed publicly for taking away benefits away from working families of lower incomes, that's the risk they would take," Rangel said Wednesday.

For their part, Republicans say the Clinton administration is equally guilty of reversals, having proposed a child credit in 1995 that wouldn't benefit working poor families — similar to the current House bill.

"I'm not sure history is the best guide to the future on these positions because both Republicans and Democrats have swapped positions over time," said Ari Fleischer, spokesperson for the House Ways and Means Committee.

Just who qualifies for a $500 child credit, which takes up roughly half of the $135 billion tax bills the House and Senate passed last week, will be a focal point of White House and congressional negotiations next week to iron out differences in their bills. The Senate version of the credit is closer to the Clinton administration's position.

Ford adds fuel to a JFK conspiracy

Gerald R. Ford changed a single sentence in the Warren Commission's evaluation of the Kennedy assassination, to help support the single gunman theory.

By Mike Feinsilber Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Thirty-three years ago, Gerald R. Ford took pen in hand and changed — ever so slightly — the Warren Commission's key sentence on the place where a bullet entered John F. Kennedy's body when he was killed in Dallas.

The effect of Ford's change was to strengthen the commission's conclusion that a single bullet passed through Kennedy and severely wounded Texas Gov. John Connally — a crucial element in its finding that Lee Harvey Oswald was the sole gunman.

A small change, said Ford on Wednesday when it came to light, one intended to clarify meaning, not alter history.

"My changes had nothing to do with a conspiracy theory," he said in a telephone interview from Beaver Creek, Colo. "My changes were only an attempt to be more precise."

But still, his editing was seized upon by members of the conspiracy community, which rejects the commission's conclusion that Oswald acted alone.

"This is the most significant lie in the whole Warren Commission report," said Robert D. Morningstar, a computer systems specialist in New York City who said he has studied the assassination since it occurred and has written an Internet book about it.

The effect of Ford's editing, Morningstar said, was to suggest that a bullet struck Kennedy in the neck, "raising the wound two or three inches. Without that alteration, they could never have hoodwinked the public as to the true number of assassins."

Officer who shot 16-year-old won't be charged

NEW YORK (AP) — The family of a 16-year-old black boy is outraged that a grand jury has refused to indict the white police officer who shot him in the back as he ran down the street with a machete.

"My entire family is in a state of disbelief," said Kevin Cedenno's 22-year-old sister, Carlina. "How can they shoot my brother in the back, murder him, and say it's justifiable? It's coldblooded murder."

The grand jury had determined that the April 6 shooting of Cedenno was justified. A reasonable person would have thought that the 23-inch machete the teen was carrying on his shoulder at night was a sawed-off shotgun. District District Attorney Robert Morgenthau said of the grand jury's findings Tuesday.

Morgenthau said police officer Anthony Pellegrini, who had ordered the youth to stop, thought Cedenno was turning to shoot him.

The shooting had spurred complaints of police brutality and racism.

The Rev. Al Sharpton, a civil rights leader and candidate for the city's Democratic mayoral nomination, called the grand jury's action "outrageous and unacceptable" and said he would ask U.S. Attorney General Janet Reno to order the Justice Department to investigate.

A man who wanted to die in church got his wish

OZARK, Mo. (AP) — Harry Watts always told his wife that when his time came, he wished to die in church.

On Sunday, the 76-year-old man sat with his wife in their usual back row pew, he got his wish.

"The service started at 11, and he was gone by 11:30," said Oneda Watts.

Watts also had relayed his wish to the pastor at Sparta Assembly of God.

"Maybe the Lord just gives them the desire of their heart at the end," said the Rev. Darrell Mead.

Watts' suffered from diabetes which affected his vision and he used a portable oxygen tank to help him breathe.

"On Tuesday of this week ... he had me sit down and write out a three-page obituary for him," Mrs. Watts said.

And on the way to church Sunday, Watts told his wife he had a bad feeling.

"He said, 'This is a bad day or something, because my eyes won't let me see,'" she said. "I think God filled his wishes."

Killer storm hits Michigan, Ohio, Indiana

DETROIT (AP) — Severe thunderstorms tore through Michigan's Lower Peninsula on Wednesday night, lifting houses off foundations, uprooting trees, toppling power lines and killing at least six people.

Storms also rolled across Indiana and Ohio, where a tornado destroyed some mobile homes and knocked out power in southwest and central parts of the state.

Three children and one adult who had sought shelter under a gazebo in the Detroit suburb of Grosse Pointe Farms were killed when the gazebo was blown into Lake St. Clair.

Nine others were rescued from the water, said sheriff's spokeswoman Nancy Mouradian.

A woman was killed by a fallen tree in Flint, Mich. where an estimated 50 homes were damaged.

SUBSIDIES

in North Hall, Pappajohn, the Nursing Building, the Lindquist Center and the Engineering Building.

UI junior Pete Loew, who takes classes at Kirkwood in Iowa City through the ICN system, said the current set-up is convenient for him.

"I couldn't go to the Cedar Rapids classroom because I don't have a car," he said.

When the camera in Loew's class of 25 pans to other classrooms hearing the same lecture, he said he sees only a couple of people at the other locations. Those low-enrollment classes are the ones most in danger of losing the service.

Enrollment in off-campus learning centers has skyrocketed in recent years, leaving a high number of UI students affected by the loss of funding. Since fall 1994, the Cedar Rapids center saw enrollment jump by 50 percent, and 55 percent more people attended UI classes in the Quad cities.

Kirkwood, a national leader in long distance learning will also be affected by the cut, Dvorsky said.

Dvorsky said he has been an advocate for the ICN since its inception in 1989. Since 1995, 480 locations using ICN were added to schools throughout the state. Every county in the state is currently connected.

Instead of being used toward video transmission through ICN, the two million dollar subsidy was given to the Iowa Department of Education to be put primarily towards the K-12 education in the state this year.

"An educational subsidy for long distance learning that doesn't allow the AEA, the Board of Regents, and the schools to use them is not an educational subsidy," Dvorsky said.

Dvorsky said there may still be a chance to save the subsidy, by tapping in to a fund set up for the K-12 level in 1996 by the Federal Communications Commission.

going into administration," Maxson said. "I think I was oblivious to what administrators did, but it was an opportunity to do something about undergraduate education, which is something I've always been interested in."

Maxson said she does, however, miss working in a laboratory. But when the opportunity at Iowa came up she "realized that I would much rather do administration at this level."

While at the UI, Maxson said she would like to continue doing research if time allows. She's also interested in teaching again in at least a small way — something she seems to have genuine enthusiasm for.

Life at the UI

Maxson will have a small lab in the biology department at the UI but said her emphasis will always lie in liberal arts.

"The business of being the dean is my priority here. I've made a commitment to that and if I can't carve out enough hours in the day (for research), that's the decision I'll have to make," she said.

She still talks about the same goals and ideas she had for the CLA when she was interviewed in early May, but currently, she is just trying to learn as much as possible about the UI.

Increasing communication and visibility is her top goal, Maxson said. During the interview process she spoke of starting a College of Liberal Arts newsletter, writing a column for a local paper and forming a dean advisory committee made up of students.

"I would like to form (an advisory committee) and meet two or three times a semester," Maxson said, noting that she had already spoken to an Assistant Dean about how to select representation. "It's a way of getting information to the college about what students need, what they're interested in and how we can do things better."

Maxson said she plans to visit every department in the CLA over the course of the fall semester, to get a feel for things.

Right now, however, she is just getting used to being in Iowa City and adjusting to her new job. At one point in her interview with The Daily Iowan she pulled out a laminated chart of the hierarchy of the so electric and expressive," he said. "It's a good thing the community does for its citizens."

Iowa City Police Captain Patrick Harney said officers will be brought in on overtime because of the jazz festival and the fireworks on Friday night.

"We don't anticipate any problems," Harney said. "Since alcohol is not allowed on the plaza or in the streets, we think things will be run smoothly."

Harney said police officers will be used to direct extra traffic and patrol the downtown area.

He said despite the large numbers of people converging on the downtown area, common sense and taking time for parking should prevent problems.

Johnson County Department of Health officials said festival-goers should take note a few things when purchasing food from one of the 15-plus food vendors at the festival.

"Well, it's the old standard," Flora, manager of disease prevention, said. "Cold food should be cold, and hot food should be hot, to ensure that there aren't any incubating bacteria."

Flora said food vendors have had a good precedent with complying with health regulations and said there haven't been any reported cases of food-related illness from past jazz festivals.

Ginsberg said the eventual goal of the event's organizers is to make the jazz festival an endowed event.

"I want to encourage everyone to get out and participate in one of the best events in the nation, perhaps the world," he said.

SKATE SHOP

featuring Atlantis, LibTech and Morrow lines.

Tony Bierman opened the first B&B in Muscatine two years ago, and said he decided to open a store in Iowa City based on its climate.

"It seemed like there was a need up here," he said.

Bierman said he determined the need by speaking with Iowa City residents who are active in both sports.

Another feature of the store is several large murals of skate and snowboarders, painted by Iowa City resident Tony Rench, an employee of the store who enjoys both snowboarding and skateboarding.

Rench said people seem to be very receptive to the opening of the store.

"The store offers an opportunity we don't have in terms of skateboarding," Rench said.

UI junior Brandon McCullough, who skateboards and snowboards, agrees. Although Big Daddy's, an Iowa City store that opened earlier this year, sells skateboards, McCullough said that B&B offers different brands.

"This is the perfect store," McCullough said. "The setup is really nice. There's different kinds of everything, and it's bigger than anything here."

Bierman said B&B will have a free snowboard and skateboard raffle at the store's grand opening Saturday. There will also be a free merchandise toss from the roof before closing that night, as well as a ramp demonstration in the store.

begin to fight. After about 30 seconds, Seldess said, the women stopped fighting and one of them was wounded.

"When they stopped I saw the woman's face and her neck was bloody," Seldess said.

Seldess said the injured woman then jumped into the front seat of his cab and her husband got into the back seat. He then transported them to Mercy Hospital where Carter was rushed into emergency surgery.

Police said Carter had deep lacerations on the neck and had lost a significant amount of blood. Carter is currently in fair condition at the hospital.

"I was disturbed by the whole occurrence," Seldess said. "I'm just glad there was a taxi behind Gabe's."

Sgt. Jim Steffen of the Iowa City Police Department said Fisher misrepresented herself to police upon arrest.

"She gave a false name when she was booked," Steffen said. "And during the process she signed the false name."

He said after booking, her true identity was established.

Fisher is currently charged with willful injury, which carries a penalty of up to ten years in prison and a $10,000 fine. As a result giving police a false name, Fisher is also charged with an aggravated misdemeanor, carrying a penalty of up to two years in jail and a $5,000 fine.

There are also three warrants for Fisher's arrest in Black Hawk County. She is wanted on charges of 3rd and 5th degree theft and contempt of court.

Alto saxophone virtuoso Garrett is finally a jazz grown right.

In the course of his career he has played with jazz such as Miles Davis, Fats and Woody Shaw.

Garrett, whose Pursuing Music of John Coltrane is the prestigious Alto Sax Year honor in Down Beat magazine's 1996 Readers Poll, led to perform with the The Kenny Garrett Quintet the Amana Iowa City Jazz Festival Friday at 8 p.m.

"It should be one of the highlights (of the festival)," organizer Mark Ginsberg said. "He's one of the hottest alto sax players in the world. He may start off playing kind of predictable, but then he goes completely wild. His experimental and avant-garde sound will push the crowd to extreme, which is fun. Hornheads to help kick off local Jazz Fest

After performing with such artists as Prince, and making appearances on MTV Europe, the Hornheads arrive in Iowa City.

By Mose Hayward
The Daily Iowan

The group that formerly performed with the artist formerly known as Prince is coming to the festival formerly known as the Iowa City Jazz Festival.

That is, the Hornheads, a punchy, funky horn quintet, is playing tonight on the Pedestrian Mall, as part of the Amana Iowa City Jazz Festival.

The Hornheads were brought together as a horn section in 1991 to play with the artist formerly known as Prince, and since have toured worldwide, also playing with big names such as Sammy Davis Jr., Dizzy Gillespie, Tony Bennett, Doc Severinson, Janet Jackson, Rod Stewart, James Brown, Aretha Franklin and many others.

Michael B. Nelson, who composes and arranges songs for the group, said playing as an a cappella ensemble is technically the most difficult playing the Hornheads have ever done.

"There's nowhere to hide," he said. "It's definitely a challenge, but it's also the most rewarding playing we've done as well." Not to say the Hornheads haven't enjoyed playing for crowds of 110,000 people with the artist formerly known as Prince. The group has traveled the globe, playing in Australia, Europe and Japan, and have performed in Prince music videos and on MTV Europe. Nelson said the group still enjoys playing for small crowds, however, where it's easier to interact with the people.

Still, with an estimated crowd of 40,000, they can't expect a very small audience in Iowa City tonight — sharing the stage with The Neville Brothers and United Youth Ensemble, among others.

Nelson said the appeal of the Hornheads' music is their unique writing style and funky precision. This renders unnecessary the rhythm and accompaniment that's already provided when they play as part of a larger group.

"The idea behind the ensemble is kind of different than someone writing for a brass quintet," he said.

Nelson said there are three parts to his arrangements; the rhythm and bass (saxophones), the harmonic structure (which he plays on trombone), and the melody (trumpets). Only after these elements are in place does Nelson put in the solos.

Nelson said the result is a horn group that needs nothing else. There is a lot of staccato, energetic horn playing where each performer plays an integral part.

The group's six years together have helped them become tight performers and a tight group, Nelson said.

"Playing together for so long gives us familiarity," he said. "We have the same feel of time and phrasing. It makes performing fun and makes it easy to be tight."

'Alto Saxist of the Year' highlights Amana Iowa City Jazz Festival.

By Ben Schnoor
The Daily Iowan

Alto saxophone virtuoso Kenny Garrett is finally a jazz great in his own right.

In the course of his career, Garrett has played with jazz legends such as Miles Davis, Freddie Hubbard and Woody Shaw.

Garrett, whose Pursuance: The Music of John Coltrane earned him the prestigious Alto Saxist of the Year honor in Down Beat magazine's 1996 Readers Poll, is scheduled to perform with his group, The Kenny Garrett Quartet, at the Amana Iowa City Jazz Festival Friday at 8 p.m.

"It should be one of the highlights of the festival," organizer Mark Ginsberg said. "He's one of the hottest alto sax players in the world. He may start off playing kind of predictable, but then he goes completely wild. His experimental and avant-garde sound will push the crowd to an extreme, which is fun. Improvisation and experimentation is what jazz is all about."

half years with the orchestra, Garrett left to pursue work with such famous artists as the Mel Lewis Orchestra, Dannie Richmond, Freddie Hubbard, Woody Shaw and Art Blakey & the Jazz Messengers.

In 1986, Garrett was offered a spot touring with Miles Davis' group. The five years Garrett spent with Davis presented him with an opportunity to solo extensively and build a reputation as one of the best alto saxophone soloists in the world.

Following the stint with Davis, Garrett went to work on several solo albums, most notably Trilogy, his 1995 work dedicated to Sonny Rollins and Joe Henderson, and last year's Pursuance: The Music of John Coltrane, his biggest success to date.

The album features Garrett playing John Coltrane songs with a freshness and beauty that few alto players today could match.

"To me, Coltrane set such a precedent of playing the saxophone," Garrett said in a June '96 interview with JazzTimes magazine. "Coltrane had a sound, he had a band and he had the music. And just spiritually what he did ... I mean, I would like to be able to get to that point at some point in my career."

Prodigy's phat with Fat

By Katharine Horowitz
The Daily Iowan

Move over Spice Girls, there's a fresh new sound on the dance floor — gritty, dangerous and definitely more hard-core than you could ever "Wannabe."

With their latest and much-awaited album The Fat of the Land, electronica group Prodigy will be feeding ravers everywhere with plenty of sound to freak on.

Slamming beats combined with the neurotic vocals of lead singers Keith Flint and Maxim, The Fat of the Land makes for an incredible heavy metal electronica album with an attitude.

The Fat of the Land literally slaps its listeners awake with the first track "Smack My Bitch Up." Despite the title, the song manages to pull the listener into its chaotic world of magnetizing sound and mesmerizing beats. An Indian chant placed over the eerie pounding makes for one of the most hypnotizing effects next to a strobe light.

Fortunately for the title and unfortunately for the sound, "Smack My Bitch Up" will probably not be heard on any self-respecting dance floor. Crank it up at parties, however, and you'll have the police at your door getting their groove on.

After putting the single "Firestarter" on their list of heavy rotation, MTV is now grabbing their next Prodigious hit, "Breathe," and it's not a bad choice.

A "duet" of sorts by Maxim and Flint, it's all the listener can do not to get the wind knocked out of them as they become filled with an insane fury of metallic electronic sound.

Prodigy The Fat of the Land ☆☆☆ out of ☆☆☆☆

There are a few less than terrific tracks on The Fat of the Land including the techno/rap song "Diesel Power."

Maxim cannot rap any more than Madonna or Prince. "My intellect's full speed/with diesel power."

It wasn't on this song, though, that's for sure. Neither was it on "Fuel My Fire," a track with quickened beats and an angry Flint screaming. The track sounds like Metallica on speed. Not a pleasant sensation.

Whether or not Prodigy, along with the Chemical Brothers, sets the tone for the popularity of electronica and techno in America remains to be seen.

Suffice to say the scene will never reach the height it has in Europe, and whatever height it does reach will be mainstreamed by MTV-diluted music.

However, for the true and passionate fans of electronica/techno, the scene and the sound will always be pulsating in stereos, raves and frenzied minds across America. And the latest thing in their CD players? Prodigy's The Fat of the Land. Feel it burn, baby.

Fighting for more than their lives

For some Los Angeles teen agers, fighting is a way out of trouble — not into it.

By Michael Fleeman
Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — In a sweltering East Los Angeles gym, they spar to Latin rhythms blaring from a boom box, every sharp crack of the glove the sound of opportunity and second chance.

Teens from gang-plagued neighborhoods turn to boxing at the Sheriff's East Los Angeles Community Center as a way out of trouble, not into it.

It's a side of the sport that many say has been obscured by the Mike Tyson fight-and-bite fiasco.

"I thought I was going to be nobody when I grew up," said David Flores, 17, who is preparing for his first amateur bout next month. "Now, it's like it's all changed. I'm the opposite man I used to be."

Flores, who had fallen out of school and into juvenile hall for robbery, turned to boxing at the suggestion of a jailhouse priest. Now, Flores is a 1997 high school graduate heading for Santa Monica Community College with dreams of becoming a computer engineer.

And he didn't have to bite anybody to get there.

"That thing with Mike Tyson, that's not good sportsmanship," Flores said. "That fight... was more of a street thing or settling a personal disagreement. That's not boxing."

That sentiment is underscored by a sign hanging in the gym: "Champions never take the easy way out. Pay the price."

Saturday's heavyweight bout between Tyson and Evander Holyfield brought disgrace to the already suspect world of big-money professional boxing. Nevada boxing

Chris Urso/Associated Press

Jorge Espinoza practices his punching on a large swinging bag Tuesday at the East Los Angeles Sheriff's Community Youth Center in Los Angeles.

commissioners are considering whether to suspend Tyson for a year or more for biting Holyfield's ears.

But boxing's supporters say there is a starkly different and seldom-seen side of the sport — one that is less savage and has saved kids sliding toward gangs, crime and drug use.

Bruton wants quick answer from ISU

Australian C.J. Bruton, selected by Portland in the NBA draft, has given Iowa State until Thursday to decide if he is going to be eligible to play next year.

AMES, Iowa (AP) — C.J. Bruton wants to know by Thursday whether he is eligible to play for Iowa State.

Bruton is the Australian who was drafted by Vancouver and traded to Portland in the NBA draft last month. He played for the Indian Hills Community College in Ottumwa the past two years and wants to preserve his options of playing college ball. He signed with Iowa State last November.

But the NCAA ruled he is ineligible because he played professionally as a 17-year-old in a league in Perth, Australia, in 1994.

Iowa State has filed an appeal, but Bruton said he needs to know an answer immediately so he can make plans.

"The letter C.J. sent to Iowa

State was not done out of immaturity or impatience," said Dave Adkins of Des Moines, who serves as Bruton's guardian. Adkins operates Overseas Basketball Services, which recruits foreign basketball players for professional teams.

"He didn't decide to impose an arbitrary deadline out of anger. The fact is, this thing has dragged out painfully long and there has been no action on it," Adkins said.

Iowa State Athletic Director Gene Smith said he called NCAA officials Tuesday and is "optimistic that we'll have a solution by Thursday."

If the NCAA restores Bruton's eligibility, he could still attend Iowa State as long as he doesn't hire an agent or play as a representative of the Portland Trail Blazers. Portland would still retain his rights. The pro club would not mind if Bruton played more college ball, Adkins said.

Adkins said Bruton needs to know soon whether he has the option to play for Iowa State or for any college because he faces deadlines on committing to summer leagues in which his participation would classify him as a professional.

Johnson determined to reach top shape

DALLAS (AP) — After losing a 400-meter race for the first time in more than eight years, Michael Johnson is determined to get back to his gold-medal form.

Johnson is working out three times a day and hopes to be back in shape by the time he competes in Stuttgart, Germany, on July 13.

"At this point, I'm not in the shape I need to be in to go and run the way I want and run the way I need to be able to run," Johnson said. "I want to be 100 percent next time I run, instead of 90 or 95 percent."

Johnson missed two weeks of training after straining his left quadriceps muscle in his 150-meter match race against Donovan Bailey on June 1.

Johnson then had only one week of light workouts before finishing fifth in a 400-meter race in Paris on June 25. It was the first time he hadn't won at that distance since Feb. 24, 1989, ending a 58-race win streak.

Belfour goes from Sharks to Stars

DALLAS (AP) — Ed Belfour, the San Jose Sharks goalie who twice won the Vezina Trophy, signed with the Dallas Stars on Wednesday in the first big move by the club since the free-agent market opened.

Belfour

Belfour agreed to a three-contract, and the Dallas Morning News reported he will be paid a total of $10 million, making him the highest-paid player in Stars' history.

Free-agent bidding opened Tuesday across the league, and the Stars moved quickly and expensively after failing to resign Andy Moog on Monday. After rejecting a better offer from San Jose, Belfour agreed to join the Stars.

"The background Eddie Belfour brings to the goaltending position puts us in strong hands," Stars general manager Bob Gainey said. "He's 32, and so we have an accomplished player at that position while (Roman) Turek continues to develop."

'Henmania' continues

Britain's Tim Henman defeated defending champion Richard Krajicek to advance to the quarterfinals at Wimbledon. Pete Sampras and Martina Hingis also advanced with wins Wednesday.

By Stephen Wilson
Associated Press

WIMBLEDON, England — The Union Jack was flying high at Wimbledon today, with two British men in the quarterfinals for the first time in 36 years.

In a country desperate for its first men's champion since 1936, "Henmania" reached new heights when Tim Henman knocked out defending champion Richard Krajicek in the fourth round.

In a match that was suspended Tuesday after three sets, Henman needed just 36 minutes to complete a 7-6 (9-7), 6-7 (7-9), 7-6 (7-5), 6-4 victory before 13,000 wildly cheering and chanting Centre Court fans.

"I'd say today, for the sustained quality of tennis, this is the best I've ever played," said Henman, who also reached the quarterfinals last year. "It's probably the biggest win of my career so far."

With fellow Brit Greg Rusedski already in the quarterfinals, it's the first time two British men have reached the final eight since Mike Sangster and Bobby Wilson did it in 1961.

Henman is the first British player to beat the defending Wimbledon champion since Roger Taylor downed Rod Laver in the fourth round in 1970.

In another men's fourth-round match that resumed today, top-seeded Pete Sampras was stretched to five sets by Petr Korda before completing a 6-4, 6-3, 6-7 (8-10), 6-7 (1-7), 6-4 victory.

Sampras advanced to the quarterfinals against fellow three-time champion Boris Becker, a match that many view as worthy of the final. Sampras leads 10-7 in career meetings, including victories in their two previous matches at Wimbledon.

"We've had some unbelievable matches in the past," Sampras said. "We have a lot of respect for each other. I've always admired Boris. He's a class act. That's what it's all about — walking out with Boris to a packed house."

"I'm going to walk into it like a final. You have to against Boris. He has that aura and presence about him. That's what the game needs now is a rivalry. We kind of have that."

While Sampras vs. Becker headlines the men's quarters, a showdown between 16-year-old rivals Martina Hingis and Anna Kournikova will showcase the women's semis. The other semifinal pits No. 3 seed Jana Novotna against No. 8 Arantxa Sanchez Vicario.

Kournikova displayed remarkable poise on Centre Court in downing French Open champion Iva Majoli 7-6 (7-1), 6-4 to reach her first Grand Slam semifinal.

After winning the match, the unseeded Russian turned to her boyfriend, Detroit Red Wings star Sergei Federov, and her mother, Alla, and pushed up both arms in a raise-the-roof salute.

Despite ailing from a cold and fever, the top-seeded Hingis breezed to a 6-3, 6-2 win over Denisa Chladkova.

Hingis has never lost to Kournikova, defeating her twice in junior competition and beating her 6-1, 6-3 on clay at the French Open last month.

"She's now a different player on grass courts," Hingis said. "She's much better here. I played very, very well in Paris, but on this surface, she feels much more confident."

Novotna dismissed Indonesia's Yayuk Basuki 6-3, 6-3, while Sanchez Vicario downed Nathalie Tauziat 6-2, 7-5 to continue her run of matches without dropping a set.

Picking up at 6-4, 4-2 against Korda, Sampras appeared headed to a straight-set win when he quickly finished off the second set. But Korda fought back to win the next two sets in tiebreakers, saving two match points in the third. After winning the sets, he celebrated by doing scissor kicks.

But Sampras broke in the first game of the fifth set and lost only two points on serve the rest of the way, finishing the match with his 28th ace. Sampras was never broken during the match.

"I could have made it a lot easier on myself," Sampras said. "I worked a lot harder than I would have liked."

Henman has generated huge support from the Wimbledon crowds as he bids to become the first British man to win the title since Fred Perry captured his third straight championship in 1936.

"Everyone that's been out there knows they are continually behind me, lifting me to greater heights," he said. "They give you that confidence and keep willing you on. It's also tough for my opponents. They know every point of mine will be shouted about."

Liberty remain undefeated

NEW YORK (AP) — Sophia Witherspoon scored 14 points Wednesday night and the New York Liberty remained the only unbeaten team in the WNBA with a 70-67 victory over the Houston Comets, the 100th straight game Rebecca Lobo has played in without losing.

Lobo, who had nine points and five rebounds, has not played on a losing team since March 26, 1994, when Connecticut was beaten by North Carolina in the NCAA tournament in her junior year. The next season the Huskies went 35-0 in winning the national championship.

Ewing to stay with Knicks

NEW YORK (AP) — One day after becoming a free agent, center Patrick Ewing signed a new four-year contract with the New York Knicks on Wednesday.

Terms were not available but there had been speculation that Ewing — one of the most prominent players in the free-agent market — wanted to end his career in New York.

Salary cap constraints limited Ewing's options. Only a few teams like Detroit and Cleveland had room under the cap for a player with a Ewing-sized contract. Agent David Falk had been expected to demand between $65 and $70 million for four years.

Fox plans catcher camera for All-Star game

NEW YORK (AP) — Fox Sports will use a camera mounted in a catcher's mask during its coverage of Tuesday night's All-Star game and if it goes well, the network could incorporate the device in coverage of regular and postseason games.

"It's possible," said John Filippelli, the network's senior coordinating producer. "We'll see how it works. Right now, it's experimental. We'll see how it works and go from there. Let's see what we get out of it."

Filippelli said the camera provides a different perspective for the viewer. "What we are trying to do is bring the viewer closer to the game, give the catcher's view of what the batter would see," he said. "It's also useful on plays at the plate."

Commission to rule on Tyson's fate next week

Mike Tyson will be able to give his side of the story to the Nevada State Athletic Commission before it decides his fate.

By Tim Dahlberg
Associated Press

LAS VEGAS — Mike Tyson might be better off leaving his lawyers and handlers at home when Nevada boxing regulators meet to determine his fate for biting a chunk out of Evander Holyfield's ear.

The chairman of the Nevada State Athletic Commission said Wednesday there's only one person who can explain what happened in the ring that night — Tyson himself.

"I really think there's only one guy who has to justify his actions in the ring and that's Mike Tyson," Dr. Elias Ghanem said. "I don't want to press anything and tell him he has to show up, but we are really talking about Mike Tyson here."

Tyson signed papers Wednesday allowing the commission to go ahead with a meeting next week where he could face a lifetime ban from boxing along with a $3 million fine.

Tyson has said he will not fight the sanctions, but pleaded earlier this week to be allowed to box again when the commission meets at 9:15 a.m. PDT July 9 at the Las Vegas City Hall.

"I only ask that I not be penalized for life for this mistake," Tyson said.

Tyson, his lawyers and promoter Don King remained quiet Wednesday, but sources indicated that the plans are for Tyson to appear before the commission at the hearing and ask for leniency.

The state attorney general's office asked for the revocation of Tyson's boxing license in its formal complaint, a legal move that allows the commission to impose its stiffest fine, 10 percent of Tyson's $30 million purse.

If Tyson's license were revoked, he would have to wait at least a year before reapplying, but the commission has the authority to make that even longer. A suspension could be up to five years with a maximum fine of $250,000.

Ghanem said that any speculation about possible penalties is just that. He said he hasn't discussed Tyson's fate with any of the other four commissioners, and won't until the hearing, which is tentatively set for Wednesday.

"I'm not the type that would stand for a secret deal and I don't know how we could do a secret deal," Ghanem said. "It's pure speculation from everyone that isn't involved. There is no done deal and there won't be one."

However, if the way the commission handled Oliver McCall's quitting in the ring during his heavyweight title fight with Lennox Lewis in February is any indication, Tyson figures to face more than a year out of boxing.

McCall has agreed to a one-year suspension for quitting against Lewis, but commissioners have said they view Tyson's biting of Holyfield as more serious.

Joe Rolston, a deputy attorney general prosecuting the case, said the state doesn't plan to call any witnesses during the hearing and will simply play the tape of the fight for commissioners.

Orioles sweep Phillies

President Clinton was in attendance as the Orioles defeated the Phillies, 10-6, in round two of interleague play.

BALTIMORE (AP) — Two rare events occurred Wednesday at Camden Yards — President Clinton showed up and Jeff Rebutlet got an extra-base hit.

Rebutlet snapped a tie with a three-run double in the seventh inning as the Orioles swept three from the Phillies.

Scott Rolan hit two homers and Ruben Amaro and Mike Leiberthal also homered for the Phillies, who have lost a season-high nine straight and 17 of 18.

Clinton, who addressed the sellout crowd in a pregame ceremony, left after the fourth inning with game tied 2-2.

With it 4-4 in the seventh, the Orioles loaded the bases with two outs against Jerry Spradlin (1-4). Rebutlet, making his first start since June 18, hit a sinking liner that eluded diving center fielder Rob Butler. It was only the second extra-base hit of the season in 80 at-bats.

Jeffrey Hammonds hit a two-run homer in the eighth for a 10-6 lead.

Braves 2, Yankees 0
NEW YORK — For Greg Maddux and the Atlanta Braves, victory over the New York Yankees came 8 1/2 months too late.

Maddux, the loser in Game 6 of the World Series at Yankee Stadium last season, dispatched New York with machine-like precision Wednesday, pitching a three-hitter in the Braves' 2-0 victory.

Atlanta lost four straight games to New York last October after taking a 2-0 Series lead. This time, the Yankees won the opener of the three-game interleague series before dropping two.

Maddux (11-3) walked none for the fifth straight start, went to three balls on just one batter and went to a two-ball count just twice.

Athletics 8, Giants 1

SAN FRANCISCO — Mark McGwire became the first player with 30 homers this season, hitting a three-run shot as Oakland beat San Francisco in the first regular-season game between the neighboring clubs.

Other than spring training exhibitions, it was the first game between the teams — their ballparks are about 30 miles apart by car, a lot closer by ferry — since the earthquake-interrupted 1989 World Series.

Scott Spiezio added a two-run homer as These aren't your typical baseball awards

This seems to be the time of year when baseball analysts spend their time disagreeing on All-Star selections and pennant races.

Here are some topics you would never hear out of the mouth of Peter Gammons.

Best comparison of the year: ESPN's Dan Patrick, who referred to Mariners reliever Bobby Ayala as Jerry Seinfeld with a goatee.

Biggest stretch for a good luck charm: Texas team president Tom Schieffer requested local handlers bring in two pet llamas to stand around the batting cage while the Rangers took batting practice before a 7-6 loss to Anaheim. Schieffer said llamas are a sign of good luck in Peru. A shortstop, second baseman or center fielder might add a little more to the offense.

Worst ballpark promotion: Fishing rod day at the Cinergy Field in Cincinnati turned out to be a fiasco — twice. When the Mets came to Cincinnati, the Reds planned to give away fishing rods to the first 7,500 fans 14 years old or younger, but rain forced the postponement of the game. The Reds gave away the remainder of the fishing rods Sunday when the Cardinals came to town and once again the fans had to sit through a two hour rain delay.

With a 36-46 record, the Reds marketing department shouldn't promote anything that might be more interesting than having to sit through watching them play.

Best ballpark sign: For years the Mariners have had trouble finding starting pitchers to put behind Randy Johnson in its rotation. Mariner fans are taking a scientific approach. "Forget sheep, clone Randy," a sign hanging in the Kingdome said.

Best pitcher-hitter rivalry: Phillies pitcher Curt Schilling against Reds outfielder Deion Sanders. After

Woods shooting to regain his form at Western Open

After a week of rest and adjustments, Tiger Woods will return to competition during the Western Open this week looking to break out of a slump.

By Mike Nadel
Associated Press

LEMONT, Ill. — Tiger Woods has retooled his swing, reshaped his putting stroke and, he says, recovered from an overdose of golf.

Fresh off a week of rest and adjustments, Woods is returning refreshed to a sport that has reached new heights of popularity since he turned pro last August.

Nevertheless, the 21-year-old Masters champion doesn't necessarily expect to win the Western Open, which starts Thursday at Cog Hill Golf & Country Club's Dubsdread course in southwest suburban Chicago.

"I expect me to win every week, I think that's unrealistic," said Woods, who leads the 1997 PGA Tour with more than $1.4 million in earnings. "I don't expect myself to win every week because that's just physically impossible. I'm human. I'm going to make mistakes. You can't hit the ball well and putt well every week."

It's been several weeks since his entire game has clicked.

After shooting 11 consecutive rounds under par — a stretch that included victories in the Masters and Byron Nelson Classic — Woods has been under par in only one of 12 rounds.

He's a cumulative 15 strokes over par during that span. And in his last three tournaments (Memorial, U.S. Open, Buick Classic), his average finish was 43rd, his average winnings $13,428.

"Anytime you slump, you just go back to fundamentals. You start from ground one and work your way back up, and that's exactly what I did," said Woods, who skipped last week's St. Jude's Classic after finishing 43rd in the Buick. "I tore my swing apart, worked from the ground back up. Same thing with my putting stroke, and yeah, it's coming around."

And when he wasn't hitting buckets
