Fumes cause evacuation in Engineering Building

Chemical fumes caused evacuation of the Engineering Building for approximately two hours Monday.

UI senior Ken Kaufman was mixing nitric acid and alcohol too quickly and in too high of concentration when the fumes formed, Iowa City Fire Department Captain Jerry Blank said.

Kaufman alerted Public Safety around 6 p.m. and ICFD trucks were dispatched to the scene. Blank said the incident was minor, but the ICFD was forced to break a window to the room in order to vent the fumes.

Replacing the window could cost up to $500, but the window is under warranty, Blank said.

"(Kaufman) took the precaution to call Public Safety," said Professor Dave Rethwisch, in charge of the lab where the spill occurred. "Which is a wise thing to do when your not sure."

Gable opts for year-long leave

Brian Ray/The Daily Iowan

Iowa wrestling coach Dan Gable gestures while announcing his plans to take a year off from the wrestling team Monday. Assistant coach Jim Zalesky, a former UI wrestler, was named acting head coach.

Dan Gable's health and obsession with his team were key factors in his decision to take a year off.

By James Kramer
 The Daily Iowan

Dan Gable's perfectionism brought him to unprecedented heights, but left him with enough pain to drive him from coaching.

And chances are, he won't be back. Gable, Iowa's wrestling coach for 21 seasons, announced his decision Monday to take a one-year leave of absence. After 15 NCAA titles and 21 Big Ten crowns, the program will be turned over to assistant coach Jim Zalesky. Gable's health problems, which include an assortment of joint ailments, were a major factor in his decision to step down. He said he hopes to spend more time with his wife and four daughters.

But what may have pushed Gable past his threshold was the agony of defeat. Early in his speech Monday, Gable listed a number of Iowa wrestlers who failed to win national titles. He said it has become more and more difficult to handle frustration. "Those are young men that never reached the pinnacle," Gable said, who had a 355-21-5 dual record. "Stuff like that eats at me every day."

"It bothers me, and I'm not sure I want to continue with that situation. I can write books about losses like that." Tom Brands will move up a spot to become Zalesky's top assistant. Terry Brands will be the second assistant and Lincoln McIlravy will serve as the team's volunteer assistant.

The announcement had been expected since last week when several reports outlined Gable's plan for a year-long break from coaching.

Gable said his family supported his decision, with the exception of his youngest daughter, nine-year-old Mackenzie, who wants to experience Iowa wrestling like her older sisters.

Aside from himself, Gable said the person who would best understand the plan would be his mother, Katie, who died in 1994.

Summit Street fire

Fireman injured, garage, vehicles damaged in blaze

A fire Monday caused $20,000 of damage and injured one firefighter.

By Jenn Snyder
 The Daily Iowan

Neighbors say a smoldering cigarette may have caused an early-morning garage fire that injured one firefighter and left several vehicles and landscaping scorched Monday.

At around 4 a.m., fire consumed the garage behind 910 S. Summit St., damaging neighbors' vehicles and landscaping. The garage was completely destroyed along with its contents, which included a 1987 Chevy mini-van and a motorcycle. Neighbors' vehicles had melted tail-lights from the severe heat.

Firefighter Crovin Justice was treated and released at Mercy Hospitals for heat exhaustion. Fire investigator Brian Greer said heat exhaustion often occurs when a firefighter becomes overheated or dehydrated while extinguishing the fire. Neighbor Jeanne Thompson, who has a shed just feet from the burned garage, had little property damage. She said she owes her good fortune to the direction of the wind. The red glow of the fire woke her up early Monday morning.

"It was really freaky," Thompson said. Another neighbor, who wished to remain anonymous, said she was worried about her home during the blaze, but fire officials were on the scene before the fire could spread. None of her vehicles were damaged.

Iowa City Fire Department officials estimate the damage at about $20,000. Greer said the cause of the fire is undetermined because of severe destruction at the scene of the blaze. The property owners were unavailable for comment.

Supreme Court hears Shaw issue

The Iowa Supreme Court is scheduled to hear arguments in the Shaw case today.

By Scott Lester
 The Daily Iowan

The issue of who should present the Eric Shaw shooting case to the 1997 grand jury will make its way to the Iowa Supreme Court today.

In a hearing scheduled for 9 a.m. in Des Moines, Iowa City attorney Joseph Johnston and Assistant Attorney General Bridget Chambers will present their positions. Chambers, on behalf of the state, will argue that Judge William Eads overstepped his authority when he ordered the grand jury to hear the Shaw case.

The state's argument is on legal points of the authority of the court, the grand jury and the prosecution, said Bob Brammers, spokesperson for the Attorney General's office.

"This has little to do with the tragic death of Eric Shaw. It's on the issue of judges' authority," Brammers said the state will argue that Eads exceeded his authority in three ways: directing the grand jury to investigate, disqualifying the county attorney and appointing a special prosecutor.

Johnston will argue that Eads' order was appropriate.

"The court correctly found the Johnson County Attorney disqualified to present the matter of the death of Eric Shaw to the Johnson County grand jury," Johnston wrote in his statement to the court.

Johnston could not be reached for comment Monday because he was preparing for the case.

Brammers said it is the authority of the county attorney to call for a grand jury hearing, unless there is a conflict of interest, which some have said exists in Johnson County Attorney J. Patrick White's case.

"White has conflict of interests and should have removed himself from the case," said Osha Gray Davidson, a member of the Committee for Justice and Accountability in the Death of Eric Shaw (CJADES). "He said already he has made up his mind, now he says he can be impartial — that's ludicrous."

White previously recommended that the 1996 grand jury not investigate the Shaw case. White has since modified his position, Brammers said, and believes the Shaw case should be heard by the next grand jury.

White would not comment on today's case and said the purpose of the Supreme Court hearing is to look at the legality of Judge Eads' decision.

Antique dealers shed light on lamp fraud

Coralville residents pleaded innocent to alleged crimes involving the replica of a Tiffany lamp.

By Kevin Ho
 The Daily Iowan

After traveling to and from the east coast twice, the replica of a Tiffany lamp has finally found a home in Waterloo and landed two Coralville residents in court.

A Coralville auctioneer entered a written plea of not-guilty last Tuesday to charges that he repeatedly sold a fake Tiffany lamp to antique dealers on the East coast and then stole the money they paid for it.

Howard Hammes, 50, of Coralville, pleaded not guilty in Johnson County District Court to charges of first-degree theft and simulating objects of antiquity or rarity. His wife, Sandra Hammes, pleaded not guilty to charges of aiding and abetting her husband on both counts. Court records state that Hammes allegedly advertised and sold a "signed Tiffany Turtle Black Lamp," to Macloew Gallery in New York City for $11,450. The gallery identified the lamp as a fake and returned the lamp to Hammes for a repayment.

Records state that Hammes then sold the returned lamp again as being a genuine Tiffany lamp to Andrew Mark Fine Art and Antiques in Connecticut four days later for $8,900.

The alleged transactions reportedly took place at the end of January. Prosecutors say the Hammeses sent both dealers personal checks for $19,350 in refunds, but stopped payment on the checks, claiming the dealers were harassing them.

The Hammeses then sued the collectors for breach of contract and emotional distress. The lamp was sold again in February to a man in Waterloo for $5,750. Their trial is set for Oct. 20.

City High student dies in car accident

Lindsay Hudgens, a 16-year-old City High student died Sunday after the car she was riding in went out of control.

By Will Valet
 The Daily Iowan

A 16-year-old girl on Sunday became the second Iowa City City High School student to die in a car accident this summer.

Lindsay Hudgens, 16, who was preparing to enter her junior year at City High this fall, was riding in a car driven by Kari Burns, 16, of Lowden when the accident occurred.

According to reports by the Iowa State Highway Patrol, the car went out of control and rolled over into a ditch on 140th Street, a gravel road three miles east of Clarence around 4:30 p.m.

Burns and two other passengers, Amber Mixdorf of Cedar Rapids and Samantha Tenley of Clarence, were treated at St. Luke's Hospital in Cedar Rapids and released.

Trudy Day, principal of City High School, said the deaths have been difficult for students and teachers. Tony Senepimmachak, a City High junior, was also killed in a car accident last month.

"It's been a tough summer," she said.

"It's not the way things should be, to lose children.

Day said two students dying in a single summer can be hard on the students who knew them because classmates aren't together to help each other cope with the deaths.

"It's hard for us to grieve the way we want to, because we're not together," she said. "Students handle their grieving through being together and being able to talk, and they can't do that because everyone's on vacation."

Ann Huyck, a junior at City High School who had homeroom and an art class with Hudgens, said Hudgens was an accomplished student artist. She said she has been trying not to think about the two deaths.

"I really liked the stuff she drew," she said. "It's kind of sad. I haven't really been thinking about it a lot."

A visitation for Hudgens is scheduled for Wednesday from 3-8 p.m. at Hayden Funeral Home, 221 N. 2nd St., in Oxford Junction. A funeral will be held on Thursday at Oxford Junction United Methodist Church.

There's no place like the Dark Side

So many good things in life come about by sheer coincidence: penicillin, cottage cheese, Democratic Party presidential nominees. Coincidences litter history like body hair on your Uncle Al. That's just what they do. They're coincidences.

So imagine this scene: a college party during the mid-seventies. The partygoers are completely out of their collective gourds. Someone has shaved "Lynyrd Skynyrd Rulz" into the cat. Someone else has thrown up in the flower garden. Following the typical party doctrine of sensory overload — to avoid discomfort stemming from actual contact with other human beings — the stereo and the television are blaring. On the stereo, Pink Floyd's classic Dark Side of the Moon. On the television, the MGM classic "The Wizard of Oz."

Patrick Keller

Some stoner who happens to be paying attention notices that something strange is happening between the two. Dark Side matches up almost eerily well with "Oz." Songs change when scenes change. Lyrics match up with the action within scenes. He tells his friends, who tell their friends, and so on.

At least, that's how I hope it happened. If there is just some guy out there who spends his days looking for coincidences between albums and movies, it's fairly compelling proof that maybe the human herd could use some thinning ("If you watch 'The Parent Trap' while listening to the new Hanson album, it proves that those kids are actually Disney animatronic robots... Hey, what are you doing with that ice pick? Urk!").

The "Oz"/Dark Side thing has been around for years. God only knows why it didn't catch on until now. I don't want to toot my own horn, but I knew about it for some time. I gave it no real credence. To paraphrase Bill Clinton, "Tried it once... didn't like it."

But somehow or another, the rumor hit the right people, and suddenly everyone thinks it's some new thing. Dark Side's recording engineer, Alan Parsons, blew it off as happenstance. Even Floyd keyboardist Rick Wright expressed bewilderment at the theory that the band had planned such a matchup. Still, the rumor rages on, and much to the band's chagrin I'm sure, album sales continue to skyrocket.

Personally, I find other Floyd/movie connections much cooler. A friend of mine turned me on to the even eerier associations between the end of Stanley Kubrick's epic "2001: A Space Odyssey" and Floyd's 25-minute "Echoes." (For the curious, start the song exactly as the "Jupiter and Beyond" title begins to fade.) Best of all, you're not going to miss any dialogue with the sound turned down.

The New York Times did their own little study, where they played Dark Side along with several movies: "Forrest Gump," "Psycho," "2001: A Space Odyssey," "Beach Blanket Bingo" and, yes, "Oz." This is why The Times gets the big bucks, folks.

"Beach Blanket Bingo"? "Money" playing while Annette Fulleo jiggles? No thanks. Now, matching "Bingo" with the latest from Marilyn Manson would have been a lot more fun. But I digress...

Anyway, The Times said that "Forrest" and "2001" were better matchups than "Oz." Both got a four out of ten for convincingness, while "Oz" got a three. The first half-hour of "2001" rated "simply awesome," according to The Times. "Psycho" rated a two, and "Bingo" a one.

Why stop there? Why not try matching up other albums with movies. Do it at parties. Play the Fat Boys' Big & Beautiful with Orson "The Original Fat Boy" Welles' "Citizen Kane." The Beatles' White Album with "Birth of a Nation" (that stinker could use some better music anyway). How about Soundgarden's Superunknown and "The Black Hole"? Or try any John Tesh disc with any "Police Academy" movie.

I smell a trend here. Screw Beanie Babies and Six Degrees of Kevin Bacon, this movie/album matching game is The Next Big Thing!

Very few people know that Dark Side of the Moon is about things in modern life that drive people insane. I suppose, then, it's appropriate for something this insane to have sprung from it.

Just remember: Pay no attention to the man behind the curtain... or the lunatic in the hall.

UI wrestling coach Dan Gable, on a number of Iowa wrestlers who failed to win national titles. Gable announced a one-year leave of absence Monday.

Gable: The legend moves on 10 a.m. on Monday, July 14th an era ended at the University of Iowa. UI's winningest coach in history took a leave of absence for this year. Gable also made notice that his leave will probably be permanent. This is the first time in a quarter century that the Hawkeye wrestling team will be without Gable in a coaching capacity.

Gable's leave of absence follows one of his most dominant seasons where his team scored an all-time high team total of 170 points at the NCAA finals in Cedar Falls. The success of the program is owed to a man who has never settled for second best in anything.

Dan Gable's incredible reign as a coach on the NCAA and international levels is the most impressive coaching run in athletic history. In twenty-one seasons as head coach Gable has amassed a record that will probably never be equaled. He has never lost a Big Ten title and he has produced 106 Big Ten champions. His wrestlers have won four Olympic golds, 45 NCAA championships, and 152 of them have been named to the All-American squads over the years. The irony is not lost on the fact that the man most identified with Iowa wrestling was a Cyclone.

John Wooden, the Wizard of Westwood and coach of 10 NCAA basketball championship teams at UCLA, knows what it takes to be great.

Wooden had this to say about Gable's tenure at Iowa: "...I just think he is extremely focused on the sport that he's loved and he's never satisfied... That's the thing. You can never be satisfied."

Despite the fact that wrestling has no real professional competition potential after college and that names from the wrestling squad hardly have the same recognition as Tim Dwight and Jess Settles, the Hawkeyes are always loaded with talent. Youth baseball players want to play like Cal Ripken or Frank Thomas. Young men of the gridiron have dreams of Walter Payton and Joe Montana. Young wrestlers want to be Gable. Someday they want to be part of the mystique that is Iowa wrestling.

People outside the wrestling community may not understand what Gable means to every wrestler in the United States and the world. Gable is the embodiment of excellence. He is intensity and drive incarnate. One need only attend a meet and watch as Gable writhes and bends with the ebb and flow of the match. He is out there wrestling each match. He rejoices in their victories and aches in their defeats.

It is this vicarious participation in each athlete's career that has, in part, led to his taking the year off. Gable named off several athletes that were incredibly successful, yet they did not "...reach the pinnacle" as he sees it. Lincoln McClravy's loss at the NCAA's in 1995, in which a win would have provided his third straight title, devastated Gable. The fact that Terry Brands does not have an Olympic medal is another weight on Gable's conscience. As he said himself, "...it can drain you."

Now that it is likely Dan Gable is done coaching, he can rest at ease that his legacy will live on. Each time one of his wrestlers, either a camper or a UI athlete, dons a singlet and straps on the headgear, they are trying to be him. What is learned from Gable goes deeper than medals and farther than championship streaks. The key to success in anything is to be constant in your direction and never be satisfied.

Having said that, Mr. Gable, enjoy your vacation and the world that thinks you can be satisfied. At least for a few days.

Letters to the Editor

'Redneck' language use should be consistent

To the Editor:

I thought Brian Sutherland made a good point about tolerance and hypocrisy in his July 3 column, "You might be a hypocrite if..." Regarding redneck humor, Sutherland writes, "I feel there is a certain amount of hypocrisy in criticizing one form of stereotypical humor while accepting another."

What I found interesting was a variation on that theme within the same edition of The Daily Iowan. Instead of a joke, however, the hypocrisy comes in the form of hard news. The story, "Fugitives spotted by TV watcher," made it clear that the subject of the story was "uncultured." The subject's words were quoted with the 'g' dropped from 'ing' words. "We were fixin' to go to church...flippin' channels...dooin' about 70...gettin' fidgety."

The hypocrisy comes from the inconsistency in the use of this technique. For example, I have often seen televised post-game news conferences of university athletes whose diction was less than perfect. Yet in the newspaper versions the next day, the quotes were cleaned up. Omitted g's reappeared in print.

Did the Associated Press writer display some form of intolerance or prejudice by capturing the quotations in this manner? What motivated The Daily Iowan editor to highlight that quotation technique in the teaser blurb?

In any case, I'm sure the statement about the subject being a hero to the victims' families was correct — even if he was just one of them church-goin' Southern rednecks.

Reader congratulates Jaycees on fireworks

To the editor:

I want to thank the Iowa City/Coralville Jaycees and Monte Whitlock of Iowa Fireworks Productions for putting on a decent, crowd-pleasing Fourth of July fireworks display this year at City Park.

I must admit I was a bit skeptical before the event, but was surprised by the nice variety of fireworks that were shot off in rapid succession. Since everyone could be closer up, the fireworks looked just as big as they were at the Airport, even though smaller shells had to be used for safety reasons.

My fiancée Angela and I heard several people say they were really glad that fireworks had returned to City Park, many of whom hadn't been to the event since it left the park in '93 due to flooding.

Thousands upon thousands of people came down to the celebration, and everyone was in a cheery mood, primarily because the park, the river, and the open sky create such a peaceful and cozy atmosphere for our yearly tradition.

Having fireworks in this central location made it more easily accessible to Iowa City residents, and it allowed many people to take a nice walk from the popular Jazz Festival down along the river to City Park.

There were three main reasons that were preventing a return of the fireworks to City Park: safety, traffic and parking. But the Jaycees planned well, and were able to solve all of these problems without sacrificing the quality of the show.

I am proud to have led the effort to return fireworks to City Park. I believe I helped people in Iowa City become more aware of our wonderful 50 year tradition and to call attention to what a great service the Jaycees have done by bringing back our annual celebration to an appreciative community.

After this year's City Park fireworks display, I made my first donation ever to the Iowa City/Coralville Jaycees, and I encourage others who appreciate having Fourth of July fireworks in City Park to do the same.

Reflections on the river of life

Last week, my friend Gregor and I were walking by the river when we came upon a flock of sleeping ducks. They were lined up on a dock in rows, their bills tucked under their wings. Their bodies looked like Easter chocolates in that shape, and we were breathtaken by the absolute stillness. Here was real life.

We tip-toed down the dock, hoping not to frighten them away. But the ducks looked so ridiculous. I started giggling. Gregor tried to stop me, but it was too late. One of the ducks woke, shook its feathers and pushed into the water. From the safety of the river it quacked until every duck was awake. They dove straight in without looking at us, splashing furiously with their wings.

I felt as restless as a clockface watching them transform from potential to kinetic energy. I wanted to be one of them, feel the simplicity of their motivations. Jump wildly into the river without hesitation. But the stillness of human life is not so easily disturbed.

My friend was telling me about the Berlin Wall coming down, how excited he and his friends were. They beat a section of the wall down themselves, hoping to become part of history. Or maybe just to see a tangible result of political change. They did it just before the "official" ceremonies, not knowing the futility of their effort.

"We went back the next day," he said, "and the police had filled in our hole with concrete." He lit a cigarette and shook his head. "There was already graffiti on it."

I thought of the river, its waters calming as the ducks slowly emerged back onto the dock. In five months, that water would be frozen over and covered with snow, a stillness that has always fascinated me. Water is the only substance on earth which is less dense when it freezes. The only substance whose stillness is buoyed by restlessness. We can walk across the ice and feel the danger of movement below. The danger of denying the impermanence that is life.

The Germans felt this danger when they decided to take down the wall. Below the stillness of acceptance was an undercurrent of fear. If political stability was threatened, the entire nation could fall through the ice. So they chose to patch what they could not stop from breaking. My friend understood an essential truth the police did not: We cannot force stillness onto the world. The river may appear to be still, but there are fish swimming in the dark below.

By now there was only one duck in the water. It raised itself into a vertical position, beating its wings against the river's surface. The wet feathers were brilliant in the moonlight, and the eyes expressed an almost human passion. It was one of those flash moments which are beautiful precisely because they cannot last. The kind of moment a photographer longs to capture.

The kind of moment a photograph destroys with its permanence.

I thought, "I am here, right now, in this moment, and 'right now' does not exist." It does not exist because time is not a series of separate points we can graph out. With each tick forward of the second hand, the memory of this duck would fade, and I was sick in the heart thinking about it. Gregor missed what I saw, and I couldn't give the moment back to him. In this way, because of these thoughts, the moment bled into other moments, the way water molecules seamlessly flow as one.

We started talking about people we've said goodbye to: old friends, boyfriends, girlfriends. "It's like your squinting at this light," Gregor said, "and you want it to darken a little." He stopped and closed his eyes for a second. "But then it just shuts off completely." It is the frustration we all feel with binary oppositions. Either we are together or breaking up. Moving or not moving. Awake or asleep.

I looked at the water, now calm without waves or ripples. The river is always moving and not moving. Frozen and not frozen. It always has a surface like glass, always appears to be one solid force rather than slippery molecules. Yet the undercurrent rages on below the winter ice and calm surface waters of summer.

Perhaps this is the reconciliation. That we can know the impermanence of life and hold on anyway. We can fight against the fading of memory by savoring each moment completely. Accept the walls we tear down will be built again. And tear them down again until we have won.

Natalie Goldberg once said, "Every moment is all we have, and it is enormous." She is right. Wake up and dive into the river.

friend Gregor and I were walking when we came upon a flock of ducks. They were lined up on their bills tucked under their heads looking like Easter chocolate. We were breathless by the water's edge.

Gregor, hoping not to frighten the ducks looked so ridiculous. I tried to stop me, but it was too late. The ducks were awake. They dove into the water, splashing furiously.

Gregor was watching them transmute their energy. I wanted to be a part of their motivations. Gregor without hesitation. But the ducks were not.

Gregor had filled in our hole with a cigarette and shook his head at the graffiti on it.

Gregor, its waters calming as the ducks backed onto the dock. In five minutes the ducks were frozen over and the ducks had always fascinated me. Only substance on earth when it freezes. The only substance is buoyed by restlessness. The ducks and feel the danger of denying the impermanence of their existence.

Gregor decided when they decided. Below the stillness of acceptance, current of fear. If political stall, the entire nation could fall. They chose to patch what they were making. My friend understood the ducks did not: We cannot deny the world. The river may be there are fish swimming in the water.

Gregor's position, beating its wings. The wet feathers were brilliant, and the eyes expressed an emotion. It was one of those flash moments precisely because they were a moment a photographer longed for.

Gregor's photograph destroys with its beauty, right now, in this moment, it does not exist. It does not exist as a series of separate points we can pick forward of the second hand. It would fade, and I was sick in my head. Gregor missed what I missed. The moment back to him. In these thoughts, the moment behind the way water molecules seam.

Gregor talking about people we've said goodbye to: old friends, girlfriends, girlfriends. "It's like a quilt at this light," Gregor said and you want it to darken and close his eyes for a second. It's off completely. It is the moment with binary oppositions. Gregor or breaking up. Moving or staying.

Gregor, now calm without waves or always moving and not moving. It always has a surface like a lake to be one solid force rather than a surface. Yet the undercurrent of winter ice and calm surface.

Council ponders street name, roofing

A street extension and roof remodeling topped the council's agenda Monday.

By Jenn Snyder
The Daily Iowan

"Captain Irish Parkway" will be the name of — not a new downtown bar — but a proposed east side street extension.

A proposed extension of Scott Boulevard will be the namesake of Captain Frederick M. Irish, who owned the land that is now Hickory Hill Park. Irish was an early settler, major landowner and prominent Iowa Citian in the mid-to-late 19th century.

Research may have turned up some "unsavory" activities in Irish's past, joked JCCOG assistant director Jeff Davidson — he was a tavern-owner. Traditionally, streets in the area are named after local historical figures.

In other matters, progress on a new roof for the Iowa City Public Library was made Monday night at the City Council's work session.

The roof, which was severely damaged in a May hailstorm, is set to undergo a complete replacement. Temporary repairs were made to the roof when the council deferred an emergency roof replacement resolution in order to collect bids on the project.

Library director Susan Craig said although the library staff had hoped to not spend additional money making temporary repairs, what they can do now will have to suffice until council proceedings are complete.

"We've had several minor problems, but not multiple problems like in May," Craig said. "The roof certainly isn't water tight."

A public hearing to discuss bids on the project is scheduled for July 29. Engineer's estimates for the roof were presented Monday night, projecting a cost of about $160,000 for the type of roof the council recommends.

Craig said patching on the roof held through last weekend's rain. She said the bidding process will ensure a better value in the long run.

"We're hopeful (the repairs) will see us through until the public hearing," Craig said.

The council endorsed a resolution suggested by the Quad Cities Regional Planning Commission calling for the study of an Amtrak route from Chicago to Omaha routed through Iowa City.

Other agenda items included a redesign of the Civic Center main entrance to meet updated standards of the Americans with Disabilities Act, and a proposal to locate the new Iowa City Transit interchange within an Old Capitol Mall storefront on Clinton Street.

Current transit interchange designs call for a free-standing building in the middle of Washington Street near an existing bus stop shelter. The storefront proposal will be presented to Old Capitol Mall management before entering the design phase.

Raytheon sells Amana to Texas company

A $750 million deal puts the Iowa company into Texan hands.

AMANA (AP) — A privately owned Texas company has purchased the Amana home appliance operations from Raytheon Co. as part of a $750 million deal.

Monday's announcement of the sale to Goodman Holding Co. of Houston came after Raytheon announced in February that it was looking into the possible sale of its home appliance operations.

"We saw it as a perfect match for us," said Frank H. Murray, Goodman's chairman and chief executive. "They have an extraordinarily high quality brand image and brand name in the market."

"Their product line, we think, was one that is outstanding for that premium market," Murray said. "We saw that as a very good vehicle for future sales growth."

Speculation on potential buyers reared from nearby Maytag Corp. in Newton to foreign companies wanting to get a toehold in the U.S. appliance market. Industry giants GE and Whirlpool were considered unlikely buyers because of antitrust laws.

"We had 10 offers — a number of serious discussions with many of the players in the industry," Raytheon Vice President Bob McWade said Monday.

Maytag's $180 million investment in a new line of refrigerators cooled its interest in Amana, which has a strong refrigerator line. Other buyers might have been reluctant to bet heavily on entering the highly competitive U.S. appliance market.

"It's a very competitive industry," McWade said. "The competitive dynamics increase every year."

He called Raytheon's home appliances operations "modestly profitable."

Goodman, which owns Goodman Manufacturing Co., a heating and air conditioning business, will pay $550 million for the home appliance, air conditioning and commercial cooking segments of Raytheon Appliance Group.

"We had been interested in getting into the appliance business for quite some time," Murray said. "We saw this as a way to significantly increase our exposure."

Other buyers, which Raytheon declined to name, bought the rights to collect $200 million in bills owed to the three units.

"Goodman very much wanted to buy the business. It is our belief that they have every intention to grow the business," McWade said.

Goodman is buying four manufacturing plants: a refrigerator and microwave oven plant in Amana; a heating and air conditioning plant in Fayetteville, Tenn.; a cooking equipment facility in Florence, S.C.; and a home dryer plant in Searcy, Ark.

About 5,500 people work at the plants. The flagship Iowa plant employs about 2,850 people.

"I think she'd say, 'Enough's enough,'" Gable said. "She told me when to get out of competition as an athlete, and I think I'll go with her now, as well."

After his year-long sabbatical, Gable expects to make the move permanent and retire. In the interim, he will work under Athletic Director Bob Bowlsby as the UT's Assistant to the Director of Sports Operations.

Gable, 48, said he will leave for good if current conditions do not change.

"Unless something really changes my thinking, it might be a permanent absence," Gable said. "I'd like to satisfy a lot of people who would like to see me coach longer. My intentions right now are not real strong in that area of coming back."

Bowlsby expressed his desire to have Gable back as head coach, but said he was confident in Zalesky's ability to lead the team. Gable and Bowlsby are lifelong friends who both grew up together in Waterloo.

"I'll do my darndest to convince Dan that he misses the kids and he misses the highs of coaching," Bowlsby said.

Zalesky, Iowa's top assistant and recruiter for seven years, will take over a team that stomped to its third straight NCAA title last season. The Hawkeyes have won six of the last seven team titles.

Zalesky, whose title will be acting head coach, said he was anxious to start his new job and continue Iowa's success. If Gable decides to retire, a search will be conducted to fill the position — with Zalesky as a top candidate. Zalesky said he doesn't mind the one-year arrangement.

"I take coaching one year at a time, anyway," said Zalesky, whose team will return five All-Americans and four national champions.

UI president Mary Sue Coleman issued a statement Monday, saying, "The standard of excellence that Dan has achieved is truly awe-inspiring. It will always provide a model for the rest of us in the University of Iowa community to emulate."

Like Bowlsby, Coleman stated she would like to see Gable return to his head coaching post after the year off, but said she respects "his right to choose to step back."

On Oct. 3, White announced although he felt Officer Gillaspie acted negligently, he would not pursue charges against the officer.

On March 3, Eads issued a judicial order to appoint a special counsel to handle all aspects of the Shaw shooting before the grand jury and stated "it is in the interest of the public that a disinterested body examine Shaw's death."

lessening the power of the County Attorney. He said it is essential for judges to be able to step in.

"If there's no one over (White) to stop him in the county system then without court involvement, he's almost a dictator," Shaw said.

Many people will lose faith in the decision made by the grand jury if the case is presented by White, Davidson said. He said he and the other members of CJADES would prefer that Judge Eads' order stand.

"I think that it is vital that an independent prosecutor that has no ties to the Iowa City Police Department be the one to present the case to the grand jury," Davidson said.

THE LEGEND

Highlights of Dan Gable's career

◀ Coaching domination

Gable is Iowa's all-time winningest coach with a career record of 355-21-5 at the UI and a winning percentage of .932. On only five occasions has a Gable-coached team lost more than one duel in a year. Gable has also coached many United States teams in international freestyle competition.

▲ Olympic glory

Gable has coached 10 Olympic athletes and four Olympic Gold medalists. The '84 team, which he coached, featured four Hawkeyes and won seven gold medals.

Gable won his own gold medal at the Summer Olympics in 1972 without surrendering a single point to any opponent.

▼ National recognition

Gable has coached 152 All-Americans and 45 NCAA champions, including five last season.

Iowa won nine consecutive NCAA championships from 1978-1986. The championship stretch equals the longest title run in any sport, set by Yale golf (1905-1913) and Southern Cal track (1935-43).

After the streak was broken Iowa went without a national title for four years. Since then Gable's Hawkeyes have brought home the trophy six of the last seven years.

▲ Big Ten stars

Under Gable's 21-season reign, Iowa has won every single Big Ten championship. In fact, the Hawkeyes have won 24 straight titles. Gable has also coached 104 Big Ten champions, including two last season in Lincoln McClravy and Mark Ironside. Iowa holds conference records for most champions, most consecutive titles, largest margin of victory, most four-time champions and most three-time champions.

THE WRESTLERS

Wrestlers react to coach's departure

By Andy Hamilton
The Daily Iowan

By leading the Iowa wrestling team to 15 national titles and 21 consecutive Big Ten titles Dan Gable put a mark on college wrestling in numbers. But statistics don't measure Gable's affect on his wrestlers.

"I owe him a lot," former Iowa wrestler and assistant and current Wisconsin head coach Barry Davis said. "I just remember the times when I needed him, he was always there. Everyone you ask would say the same thing about him."

Gable, who said he talked of stepping down as head coach for several years, announced he will take a one year leave of absence Monday. But he also added, "unless something really changes my thinking, it might be a permanent absence."

"I always thought he would be (around after I left)," said two-time NCAA champion Joe Williams, who will be a senior next season. "I always thought he would finish up coaching after I was done wrestling. I think that would be selfish for myself to be upset, but I don't think he's out of it personally. I think he's just doing something different because he wants to try to help out everyone."

Wrestling coach Dan Gable talks with Heavyweight Wes Hand during the NCAA Championships. Brian Ray/The Daily Iowan

Gable's intentions and assistant coach Jim Zalesky's promotion to acting head coach were widely reported last week. Gable informed the team of his plans last week after the completion of wrestling camps.

"I kind of expected it," Williams said. "But it's one of those things where you don't believe it's true until you actually hear it from the person. I was still somewhat shocked, but at the same time I'm happy he's made the decision to retire if that's what he wants to do."

One factor that contributed to Gable's decision was his constant drive for perfection. He listed 11 of his former wrestlers that became three and four time All-Americans, but fell just short of winning a National Championship.

"Stuff like that eats at me everyday, even though there's so much more to it," Gable said. "There's a void in their lives that I've been a part of."

"Dan loves his athletes," Davis said. "He's so close to his athletes, it's almost like they're his own kids."

"He always wants the guys to win. And if they don't win he sees that as a reflection on himself and that's hard to take."

Gable's absence next season will leave a void as a recognizable name for college wrestling on the national sporting level.

"It will have an impact," Davis said. "When you talk about wrestling, it doesn't matter if it's Olympic level or college level, the first name you think of is Dan Gable. Now us coaches have to do our job to keep wrestling at that high level."

Davis said Zalesky, along with assistants Tom and Terry Brands and Lincoln McClravy should keep the Iowa program as the measuring stick for other college programs.

"Just because Dan Gable's gone doesn't mean that now (other schools) have a chance," Davis said. "It still takes putting the time and effort and dedication in."

Gable's daughters, wife adjust to life away from the mat

By Chris Snider
The Daily Iowan

After her father announced his decision to take a year off from the Iowa wrestling team Monday morning, nine-year-old Mackenzie Gable looked up to her mother Kathy.

"I didn't hear," the youngest of four Gable daughters said. "What was his decision?"

Mackenzie — who laid with her head on her mother's lap during most of the press conference, refusing to smile even when her father mentioned her specifically — is the only member of the Gable family yet to accept the decision.

"She's pretty stubborn," Dan Gable said. "She's known (my decision) a long time now and she hasn't seemed to waiver about changing her mind."

Gable will remain with the athletic department as Assistant to the Director of Sports Operations.

"My kids have grown up in Carver-Hawkeye Arena," Kathy Gable explained. "It's hard for (Mackenzie) to understand that she will be coming back here and not go to the same office."

"I think it hurts that when they go to the wrestling meets, it won't be Dan there coaching. I don't know how it's going to be until I get to that first wrestling meet and see what it's like."

Mackenzie said she plans on telling her father not to retire "a thousand times a day" before he makes his final decision in a year. She said she still plans on going to meets, but will miss riding on the bus with the team.

"I keep saying, 'Dad, just stay for a couple more years for current Iowa wrestlers' Mark Ironside and Lee Fullhart,'" Mackenzie said. "I say that every day, but it never works."

"She's goal-oriented," Dan Gable said. "She got that from me."

As Mackenzie continues to wrestle with accepting her father's new position, her three sisters have started to

Dan Gable's oldest daughter, Jennifer, cries as he makes his announcement Monday. Brian Ray/The Daily Iowan grasp the idea.

"I've been around Iowa wrestling for so long and I love it," said Jennifer, a UI junior and the eldest Gable daughter. "It's part of my life. I'm kind of scared what our future is going to be like without him as head coach. I'm kind of scared because it's change, I guess."

The most emotional part of the press conference for the Gable family was when Dan Gable brought up his mother, who died in 1994.

"I think besides myself, the person that would have me step down is my mother. And she's deceased now," Dan Gable said, holding back tears. "I think she would say, 'enough is enough.'"

Gable's mother was someone he always went to when he had a tough decision to make, the Gables' second daughter Annie said.

"When he started talking about my grandma, that's what choked us all up," Annie said. "We wish that she could be here for him. I think he really misses the fact that she would be someone for him to go to and talk to."

"If my grandma was around, she'd be there to give him advice. I think that kind of is looking for that — someone to tell him what to do."

Annie, who is leaving Iowa City to attend college in Kansas next month, said she has seen her father's retirement coming for some time now. But it doesn't make it any easier to deal with.

"A few years ago, he kept saying, 'I'm just going to stay until the Brands leave,'" she said — referring to Tom and Terry Brands, who ended their Iowa wrestling days in 1992. "I knew it was coming up close. I was really upset about it at first because our whole life has been going to be different. Our lives have revolved around the wrestling program after all."

Molly, 14, said she will not be affected as much as her older sisters by her father's decision because they have been around the program longer, but still will seem different not being directly involved in Iowa wrestling.

"I went to my first wrestling meet a couple days after I was born," she said. "It's going to be really weird not seeing my dad on the bench."

But nobody is taking it as badly as Mackenzie. Although she seemed content parading around the room at the press conference in the "redhead" Iowa Athletics Director Bob Bowlsby presented to her father, her mother said she had trouble when the first newspaper reports surfaced saying her father was stepping aside.

Mackenzie was at YMCA Camp Waukegan when the first reports came out. One of the counselors read the article and mentioned it to Mackenzie that night, her mother said.

"She just went nuts," Kathy said. "She had to go back to her cabin and cry in her bed and cry. One of the counselors had to go and console her a little bit."

Apparently, the consoling has begun.

Johnson said after learning of the unprecedented move by the International Amateur Athletic Federation.

The IAAF is allowing the current world champs to compete even if they failed to qualify for national teams.

"I wouldn't be going unless I was 100 percent healthy," Johnson said. "Now, if I can run a smart race I can't be beat."

Johnson, the 1995 world champion and 1996 Olympic gold medalist in the 200 and 400 meters, will run the 400 but not the 200 in Athens.

"I haven't had enough time to get ready for both races," he said. "There is no reason for me to try to double again."

Johnson, who is training in Waco, Texas, under Baylor track coach Clyde Hart, said he would run on a relay if asked.

"I would enjoy being part of the relays," Johnson said during a conference call.

McCauley said. "He's giving us what he can and it's nice to have that inside force. It gives the defense a little something else to worry about."

McCauley hit five-of-seven three point attempts to break out of a shooting slump in which he hit just six-of-27 from behind the arc over a three game stretch.

Ricky Davis led Gatens Real Estate with 41 points on 18-of-31 field goal attempts. Kenyon Murray added 21 points and seven rebounds.

Michael Johnson accepts IAAF wild card with gusto

Current world champions, including Michael Johnson, received wild cards to compete in the world championships next month in Greece.

By Denne H. Freeman Associated Press

DALLAS — Michael Johnson, happy for the invitation, will be going to the world championships next month in Greece.

He received a wild card Monday as much as his older sisters by his decision because they have been around the program longer, but being different not being directed in Iowa wrestling.

Johnson, unable to qualify at the U.S. championships because of a leg injury, will defend only his 400-meter title.

"Training is going well and I was but nobody is taking it as badly as I am," he said. Although he seemed to be parading around the room after a press conference in the "redskins" Athletics Director Bob Bowlsby's office, he had trouble when the newspaper reports surfaced saying he was stepping aside.

McCauley was at YMCA Camp Wagon when the first reports came out. One of the counselors read the article and said it to McCauley that night, he said.

She just went nuts," Kathy said. "I had to go back to her cabin and hold her and cry. One of the counselors went to console her a little bit."

Apparently, the consoling has just begun.

Johnson, who played in his second consecutive game after missing five games with an ankle injury, gives ISGP a much needed inside presence.

"He's laboring a little bit," Johnson said.

Author to bring 'Frequency' to I.C.

By Ben Schnoor
The Daily Iowan

Mary Kay Zuravleff has received high praise, as well as the American Academy's Rosenthal Foundation Award, for her first novel, "The Frequency of Souls," but ironically, she feels that many people didn't understand the focus of the book.

"I always thought of the book as a cosmological journey. When it came out everybody called it a 'midlife crisis story,' which really surprised me," Zuravleff said in a telephone interview Monday.

Whatever you call it, "Frequency" has been making waves for its unusually humorous characters and plot.

"I thought her book was maybe the funniest book I had read in five years," said Paul Ingram, buyer for Prairie Lights Books, 15 S. Dubuque St.

"It was so good that after I read it I found out where she lived and called her, and I never do that," Ingram said.

Ingram was so impressed that he enlisted Zuravleff to read in Prairie Lights' Summer Reading Series. Zuravleff is scheduled to read from "Frequency" tonight at 8 at Prairie Lights.

"Frequency" is the story of George Mahoney, a family man and electrical engineer who has long since settled into a belief system and life with his beautiful wife and two children.

"The question for George is, 'Is he content or is he stagnant?'" Zuravleff said. "You may choose a life, but years later how do you keep on living?"

This question is provoked by Niagara Spence, the unattractive, near-sighted and hearing-impaired woman who shares a cubicle with George at a company where they design refrigerators.

However, this is just a day job for Niagara, who is learning how to contact the dead with a satellite dish in her spare time. Because of their differences, George falls head-over-heels for his eccentric officemate, although she is less than interested.

"George has to catch up with the style of the book, which is to pay attention to exquisite detail, and George hasn't been paying attention for a long time," Zuravleff said.

Growing up in Oklahoma City, Zuravleff was surrounded by engineers, and also held summer jobs in engineering in case her writing career didn't work out. This background gave her a base for the writing of "Frequency."

"She knows how these guys act," Ingram said, "and because she has a great sense of humor, she knows what's funny about them."

Zuravleff said her experience with the engineering community raised questions in her that were vital throughout the creative process of "Frequency."

"The engineers I knew defined the world in a certain way, and then closed the door. I was trying to ask, 'How do you know what you know?' and 'Why do you believe what you believe?'"

"What if you had powers that you don't believe in?"

These questions created the motivation for Zuravleff in persisting through multiple revisions of the book while working full-time and having a baby.

"For me, there is the obsessive element," Zuravleff said.

"The questions that caused me to write the book were still with me when I would put it down," she said.

Zuravleff again is facing obsession as she is currently at work on her second novel.

White House objects to film's use of Clinton's image

WASHINGTON (AP) — White House lawyers, objecting to an unauthorized "appearance" by President Clinton in a science-fiction film, are sending a message to Hollywood: Don't mess with Bill.

"Contact," starring Jodie Foster, uses special effects to show Clinton commenting on messages beamed from the star Vega by aliens. At one point, the president appears to appeal for calm in the face of alien contacts.

The quotes were clipped and reshaped from Clinton's statements last summer regarding the discovery that a rock from Mars might have signs of ancient life.

"You have manipulated images of the president's public statements, taken them out of the context in which they were uttered and adapted them to fit the plot of your film," the White House's top lawyer, Charles F.C. Ruff, said in a letter to the film's director and producer, Robert Zemeckis.

That effectively gave Clinton a role in the film "without his authorization," Ruff said.

The letter does not demand that the movie be edited or shelved; spokesperson Mike McCurry said the White House found out about Clinton's role too late for that.

No legal action is planned. Either Aides said Ruff sent the letter to make a point to other television, movie and advertising executives: The president's image and words should not be used for commercial use.

"We hope that the purpose of the president's letter and having publicized it is to remind people that there are certain restrictions on the use of the president's image, the image of the White House, for commercial purposes," McCurry told reporters.

"We'd advise those in the creative community that there are some restrictions, so that as they are doing their own creative work, they can understand better what those restrictions are," McCurry said.

A Warner Bros. spokesperson, who asked that her name not be used, said Clinton should see the movie before objecting. A print of the film was sent to Clinton earlier this month, she said.

McCurry said there is still nothing wrong with poking fun at the president on TV or in the movies. "There's a difference between legitimate ... satire, parody, political commentary" and cases "in which the president's image, which is his alone to control, is used in a way that would lead a viewer to imagine that he had said something that he didn't really say," McCurry said.

Purdue agreed to pay Dunn $100,000 to settle grievance

WEST LAFAYETTE, Ind. (AP) — Purdue agreed to pay former women's basketball coach Lin Dunn $100,000 to settle a grievance she filed over her 1996 dismissal, the university announced Monday. The settlement was signed March 31 but was not released to the media until Monday, ending The Journal-Gazette of Fort Wayne's lawsuit to obtain information about Dunn's case.

Under the settlement, Dunn agreed to drop the grievance she filed against the university following her dismissal. Dunn also waived any right to "reinstatement to employment with the university."

Frank Koonitz, assistant director of the Purdue News Service, said the agreement bars the university and Dunn from making any further comment about the grievance or its settlement.

Dunn, along with assistant MaChelle Joseph, were fired in March 1996.

At the time, Purdue officials said it was in the best interests of the program and Dunn said she was shocked but understood that it happens in coaching.

In the following months, six players were released from their scholarships and transferred to other schools.

Prosecutor: Limo driver had marijuana in system

PONTIAC, Mich. (AP) — The driver of the limousine that crashed last month injuring three members of the Detroit Red Wings had marijuana in his system, a prosecutor said Monday.

A second toxicology report that came back Monday from an out-of-state independent laboratory showed traces of the drug in Richard Gnida's system, Oakland County prosecutor David Gorceyca said.

He added the second test was more intensive than the first toxicology test, which came back last week showing no signs of drugs or alcohol in the driver's system.

The new test does not contradict the first test, Gorceyca said. He said traces of marijuana can stay in the bloodstream for up to a month, so more testing will be done to see how long and how much was in Gnida's system.

DA drops assault case against Michael Irvin

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Prosecutors said Monday they will not file assault charges against Dallas Cowboys wide receiver Michael Irvin over an incident at a San Francisco nightclub last month.

"The DA's office has reviewed all the evidence presented to us by the police department and we are declining prosecution," said Assistant District Attorney Chuck Haines.

He said the case came down to Irvin's word against the complainant, Aaron Waller, 31, who told police the All-Pro receiver punched him and held him captive in a club basement after a dispute over a cellular phone.

"There is not enough evidence to prosecute the case," Haines said.

Prosecution could have been a serious blow for Irvin, 31, who is on probation for cocaine possession in Texas.

Liberty 68, Rockers 57

CLEVELAND (AP) — Rebecca Lobo scored 18 points, her best offensive showing so far in the WNBA, to lead the New York Liberty to a 68-57 victory over the Cleveland Rockers on Monday night.

It was the second straight win for the Liberty (9-2), who opened the season with a seven-game winning streak. The Rockers (3-7) remained winless against teams from the Eastern Conference.

Janice Braxton scored 18 points for Cleveland, while Eva Nemcova added 16.

Comets 79, Starz 56

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston raced to a 23-2 lead and eased to a 79-56 blowout of the Utah Starz in a WNBA game Monday night.

Wanda Guyton and Janeth Arcain each scored 17 points for the Comets (7-4).

After the Comets' early spurt, Utah fought back to 32-25 at halftime. But Houston turned it on in the second half and pulled away for the lopsided victory before 6,882 fans at The Summit.

Zalesky takes the reins

Top Iowa assistant coach Jim Zalesky was named acting coach of the Hawkeye wrestling team for the next year Monday.

By Becky Gruhn
The Daily Iowan

Seven-year assistant wrestling coach Jim Zalesky won three national titles and was a four-time all-American in his days at Iowa.

But Monday he received perhaps his most coveted title ever — acting Iowa head wrestling coach.

After Dan Gable's announced year of leave from coaching, Zalesky was promoted to act as Iowa's head coach next fall. Tom Brands will serve as his top assistant. Terry Brands will be also be an assistant and 1997 NCAA champion Lincoln McClravy will become a volunteer assistant.

All four coaches are former wrestlers at the UI under Gable. "There was never any doubt in my mind that I wanted to do this," Zalesky said. Zalesky was so sure he wanted a chance to inherit Gable's legacy that he turned down several coaching offers at other institutions while waiting for Gable to decide his future with the Hawkeye program.

"I thought this was coming up," Zalesky said. "There are certain jobs I'd like to have and certain ones I wouldn't, and I just felt like this is the one I've always wanted. And now I'm going to make the most out of that opportunity."

As the 1992 NWCA Assistant Coach of the Year, Zalesky isn't worried about making the transition to a higher position.

"I have a lot of confidence in my coaching abilities," he said. "I think I'm a very good coach and now I have to prove it next year not just to myself, but to the whole staff."

Gable informed Zalesky and assistant coach Tom Brands that he would probably step down more than a month ago. But it wasn't until last Thursday that the Iowa coach told them it was official.

"The rumors had already been out there for long enough so it really wasn't a great shock for anyone," Zalesky said.

"It wasn't real emotional. If anything I think Gable was trying to fire the team up. It was more of, 'Hey here's a challenge for next year, let's see what you can do with it. Are you going to take it or wilt from the pressure?'"

When Gable missed four Iowa meets last season while recovering from a hip replacement, Zalesky and Brands stepped up to guide the Hawkeyes to victory. Because of that experience, Zalesky isn't looking at next season as merely an experiment.

"I look at it as a challenge not so much a trial year," the former NCAA champion said. "I think people really want to see how we will do next year. We actually got a lot of experience as a coaching staff this year when Gable was out and that will move us along into next year."

And although Gable will be reduced to merely a spectator at wrestling meets, Zalesky says the 'Gable mentality' will linger on the sidelines.

"I think with our coaching staff we'll have a really good chance at continuing the Iowa success," Zalesky said. "Coach Gable has inflamed the expectations of this program and they're not going to change any."

IOWA WOMEN'S TENNIS

Wardlaw named new Hawkeye coach

Paul Wardlaw, who won three Division III national titles as coach at Kenyon College (Ohio) was hired as the new Iowa women's tennis coach Monday.

By Becky Gruhn
The Daily Iowan

A void that had been missing since mid-May was finally filled Monday as the Iowa women's tennis coach.

Paul Wardlaw was named the new head women's tennis coach. Wardlaw replaces Jenny Mainz, who announced her resignation in May to accept a coaching position at the University of Alabama.

"I'm extremely happy to take over as the women's tennis coach at the UI," Wardlaw said. "I was very impressed with all aspects of the university and athletic department when I visited Iowa City for my interview. I was awe struck by how much emphasis was placed on women's athletics."

The new Iowa coach will be looking to rebuild a struggling Hawkeye tennis program. Iowa ended the 1997 season with a 7-14 record and a ninth-place finish at the Big Ten tournament.

"In Paul Wardlaw we sensed a real good fit to our departmental goals as philosophers," Women's Athletic Director Dr. Christine H.B. Gray said. "We are convinced he will help student-athletes develop both on and off the court, plus make us a top-10 tennis program."

Wardlaw will become the third women's tennis coach in four years at the UI. He says one of the keys to turning the program around is to create stability that has been missing in the frequent coaching changes.

"I don't want to get hung up on time table," Wardlaw said. "But the first thing I want to do is create stability, develop the players and establish a program. We have a nice group of players coming in next fall to work with."

Wardlaw will be looking to duplicate the success he enjoyed as the women's head coach at Kenyon College (Ohio) for the last eight years. The program has been a Division III powerhouse, winning three of the last five NCAA championships. During his tenure at Kenyon, Wardlaw compiled a 46-26 record of 171-37, and his teams never finished lower than 11th nationally.

"I really think Jenny (Mainz) was moving the team in the right direction last season," Wardlaw said. "One of the keys of building success is creating team unity. One of the things I noticed right away was how tight the players were as a team. They were a cohesive unit and all liked each other. That makes for great foundation to work with."

With the construction of a new recreation facility on the horizon at the UI, Wardlaw says the new tennis court will be nice to have in the future, but that wasn't the reason he chose to apply for the UI coaching vacancy.

"The key issue is people," the new coach said. "One of the reasons I wanted to come here is because of the academic reputation. Kenyon College is a very good school academically. The students there are very much like Iowa students."

"Also, I wanted an opportunity to work in the Big Ten and at a university that supports its athletics like Iowa does."

In addition to coaching, Wardlaw has developed a system of tactics that have impacted intercollegiate tennis known as "Wardlaw Directionals." The strategies have been published and adopted by other tennis programs.

Wardlaw also served as head coach of women's soccer at Kenyon College, and was in charge of the men's tennis team from 1990-1994.

PRIME TIME LEAGUE

Walker joins 40-40-40-40 club

Jeff Walker's fifth consecutive 40-point game helped lead Hills Bank to a victory over Powers/Nike Monday night.

By Andy Hamilton
The Daily Iowan

Jeff Walker continued his torrid shooting, topping the 40 point mark for the fifth consecutive game as his Hills Bank team beat Powers/Nike 120-108, in Prime Time League action Monday night.

Walker hit 18-of-24 field goal attempts and finished the game with 44 points, pushing his PTL scoring average to 36.5 ppg.

"I'm shooting well," Walker said. "I really don't know how to explain it. This is probably the best I've ever played. It seems like everything's dropping right now."

Walker isn't just shooting the ball well. He finished with 20 rebounds against Powers/Nike, boosting his average to 9.5 per game.

"I'm rebounding a lot better than I usually do," Walker said. "I feel more active right now and I've got a lot of energy."

The win gave Hills Bank a 3-7 record going into the PTL playoffs, which begin Thursday. With Walker on a scoring binge, Hills Bank could be a team to be reckoned with if it can get Andre Woolridge and James Winters back in the line-up.

"We need them," Walker said. "We could win it if we got those two back. We've just got to play together."

Former Coe star Jeff Hrubes and South Dakota State's Casey Walker led Powers/Nike with 32 points apiece.

Pirates rally to beat New York

PITTSBURGH (AP) — The Pittsburgh Pirates pulled off the comeback this time, rallying three times before Jason Kendall's RBI double in the eighth inning gave them a 5-4 victory over the New York Mets on Monday night.

The Mets had won six of seven, all after trailing, and had rallied from a 6-0 deficit the night before to win 7-6 in 10 innings in Atlanta. They also had won six of their first seven against the Pirates.

But the NL Central-leading Pirates, who have not lost since Francisco Cordova and Ricardo Rincon pitched a 10-inning no-hitter Saturday night over Houston, rallied with four consecutive hits off Greg McMichael (6-7) and Cory Lidle in the eighth to win it — their 10th victory in 12 games.

Making things right

After being charged with forgery for using a stolen ATM card last fall, a class D felony in the state of Iowa, Jeff Walker dropped out of school and returned home to Springfield, Ill. There were offers from other schools, places where the 6-foot-4 first-team Illinois all-state basketball player would easily fit in, criminal past or not. But Walker wasn't interested. He returned to the scene of his crime and enrolled at Iowa for the spring semester of last year. See story, Page 14.
