 Of columnist Brian Silberland: While electronic music is mentioned around people who have never listened to it they steadily dredge up a memory of a night at the Fieldhouse Bar, where pop hits are played to a drum machine. Recent fires may be arson

The house at 901 Walnut St. caught fire early Wednesday morning in what officials are suspecting as arson.

The fire marshal believes three recent fires all may be connected arson cases.

By Jenn Snyder
 The Daily Iowan

Three recent fires in a neighborhood just south of downtown may be a string of arson cases, fire department officials said. Iowa City Fire Marshall Roger Jensen said he believes the fires that burned Wednesday at 1104 Marcy St. and 901 Walnut St. were arson, and may be connected to the Monday morning garage fire at 910 Summit St., about two blocks north. Jensen said the fire at 901 Walnut St. was set early Wednesday morning. He said an accelerant was detected where the fire was started.

"We do believe that that fire was a set fire," Jensen said. "We believe this is a neighborhood thing."

He said samples of the burned home were sent to the Division of Criminal Investigation in Des Moines to determine the blaze's official cause.

Although the cause of Monday morning's garage fire at 910 S. Summit St., is officially undetermined, Jensen believes it is part of the series of suspected arsons.

"Any evidence was consumed in the fire," he said. "We couldn't even tell where the fire started in the garage."

About two hours after the Walnut Street fire was reported to officials on Wednesday, the fire department was called to a garage fire at 1104 Marcy St. Jean and Larry Manasmith, resi-

VanAllen ON MARS

Reporter Mose Hayward interviews James Van Allen about his views on manned spaceflights, the supposed Pathfinder hoax and pursuing science for science's sake.

By Mose Hayward
 The Daily Iowan

James Van Allen's large office on the seventh floor of Van Allen Hall is a testament to the physics and astronomy professor emeritus' lifelong quest in search of answers in the cosmos.

One book resting on his desk dates from 1948. Titled "The Mars Project," it gives detailed computations on how a manned mission to Mars might be accomplished.

"There wasn't a reason for (such a mission) then," Van Allen laughed. "All these calculations still hold true, but nobody's found one since."

On the other side of the office is his most modern apparatus — a computer he uses to access the Internet. But for computation and plotting there is a 20-year-old Hewlett Packard calculator and plotter.

Rob Mellett/The Daily Iowan

James Van Allen discusses the importance of the Mars expedition Wednesday afternoon.

"Even though I know what I'm doing on the other machine (his computer), I like this one better," Van Allen said.

Van Allen combines the old and the new in his scientific perspective as well — an intense interest in modern discovery combined with very traditional views of the role of science.

DI: The $266 million dollar Pathfinder mission is much less spectacular for some people than watching a manned space mission. They see a toy-sized wagon digging around in the dirt. It moves at a rate of two feet per second — at top speed. What can those who don't get a kick out of chemical analysis of rocks get out of this mission?

Van Allen: Well, you might be interested in knowing the scientific results — the composition of the surface and the atmosphere. It's a totally new world ... It's perhaps less interesting than seeing a manned mission, but it's a step between just observing from a telescope and actually sending human beings to Mars because it's interactive.

DI: What are the advantages of unmanned space flight?

Van Allen: The most important is that you don't have to keep people alive under perilous conditions. The

Sojourner paws Yogi, finds age discrepancies

Pathfinder scientists have found Yogi is older than the average rock.

By Jane E. Allen
 Associated Press

PASADENA, Calif. — A fat-bottomed rock named Yogi turns out to be much more primitive than its quartz-rich neighbor Barnacle Bill, Mars Pathfinder scientists reported.

The preliminary analysis offered Tuesday by scientists found Yogi to be a soil-covered rock, probably volcanic in origin. It also could have resulted from a meteorite impact.

Barnacle Bill — the first rock touched by the Sojourner rover — contained a large amount of quartz, crystallized by repeated heating in the martian crust.

This is exactly the kind of geologic variety scientists expected when they decided to land Pathfinder on a flood plain. All different types of rock are believed to have washed down from the Martian highlands.

The rover's next planned move is to a nearby patch of soil for an abrasion test performed by spinning a wheel in place. Scientists hoped the resulting gouging would yield clues to the soil's makeup.

The rover is also expected to test other rocks in the vicinity.

County 911 service lacks medical help

911 callers expect the same service they see on TV but don't always get it.

By Steven Cook
 The Daily Iowan

People often expect the same 911 service they see on popular TV shows, but in Johnson County, that may not be the right call.

Emergency Medical Dispatch (EMD), a system that allows dispatchers to provide scripted medical instructions over the phone, is currently being used in Iowa City, but not in the rest of Johnson County.

This means that in Iowa City, when a 911 caller reports that someone is choking, the dispatcher can provide instructions on how to perform the Heimlich maneuver while the caller waits for emergency vehicles. In other parts of the county, dispatchers are not trained to give medical instructions.

Miranda Meyer/The Daily Iowan

Iowa City 911 dispatcher Dawn Gerst works the 3 to 11 p.m. shift Wednesday. The dispatch office, located in the Civic Center Building on East Washington, reports close to 1,400 emergency 911 calls a month.

Mike Hartley, UIHC EMS instructor, trains Iowa 911 dispatch agencies to provide the service. Hartley said about one third of Iowa agencies use the system. Compared to nationwide numbers, this is about average, but is much lower than people think, he said.

"Unfortunately a majority of all centers do not provide first-aid over the phone," Hartley said. "And that's what the public expects."

Gearing up for RAGBRAI

The "carnival on wheels" is scheduled to hit the roads of Iowa this Sunday.

Every year for the past 10 years, Dan Mulholland travels across a third of the country, from Washington D.C. to Iowa, to meet and ride with 10 friends he only sees on RAGBRAI.

"You develop friendships along the ride and we all met on RAGBRAI," he said. "It's like an extended community that only exists because of RAGBRAI."

This year is the 25th anniversary of the Register's Annual Great Bike Ride Across Iowa (RAGBRAI). Kicking off in Missouri Valley, this year's RAGBRAI travels 464 miles across the state, finishing on the Mississippi River in Fort Madison July 26.

This Sunday, Mulholland, his friends, and about 8,500 other bicyclists will brave the heat, humidity, beer slides and gigantic hills all to bike across the state of Iowa. And they'll be enjoying every moment of it.

Mulholland, a radar consultant for the U.S. Army and Navy, said he enjoys going on RAGBRAI for the help me HARLAN

Dear Harlan,
I have a relationship problem. My boyfriend is, I think, ignoring me. He hardly calls me and whenever we're together, all he wants to do is talk about his problems and make out. I tried talking to him, but he just doesn't seem to want to listen. I don't want to break up with him, so, is there anything else I can do?

Ignored

Dear Ignored,
I understand how you feel - All day long, I hear about other people's problems. Never does anyone ask about me. No one wants to hear about Harlan's problems. It's just take, take, take. It's safe to assume your boyfriend is also your best friend. Part of being a best friend means being a good listener. At the same time, a strong relationship means being supportive and understanding.

Try and determine if he's ignoring you or simply having a tough couple of weeks. Give him a chance to get out of this funk. If he's still playing deaf in another week or two, either he opens up to you or you open the door and walk.

No listen, no kissin, no girlfriend.

Dear Harlan,

Up until a month ago, I was living in North Carolina with my boyfriend of four years. We decided things weren't working out and broke up.

We argued a lot and he said he didn't want to try and fix our problems. I have never felt pain like this. He's all I think about. And now, just one month later, I think he's already started seeing someone else!

How can I get rid of the awful feeling in my stomach? I've recently stopped talking to him, thinking it would help, but I don't want to lose his friendship, too. I've never felt so alone!

Lonely and still in love

Dear Lonely,

That awful feeling might be something you ate... maybe? A fantastic resource on relationships is Dr. Mark Knapp, professor at University of Texas and co-author of the book, "Interpersonal Communication and Human Relationships." I had the chance to discuss your letter with him and share his insight.

As for your friendship, this guys "lack of an ability to talk over problems is one of the biggest, if not the biggest problem, in close relationships not being able to sustain themselves." Until he communicates, his friendship is near impossible.

As for this hurt, a great approach to coping is to change your routine. Try taking part in an activity that requires some thought and emotional energy. Things like volunteering at a shelter, working on a political campaign or counseling a friend with your problems may help ease your mind.

And take consolation this relationship ended before getting tangled with marriage, kids and a family dog. You're a wonderful person and certainly not alone. This hurt will go away, but only can help the healing begin!

Relief through reflexology could be just what the doctored ordered.

By Kevin Ho
The Daily Iowan

The remedy to various ailments may be only an appendage away.

Local area massage therapists and reflexologists can stimulate more than 7200 nerve endings in the feet in order to relieve stress and "energy blockages."

"We can't promise anything, only that a person can experience deep relaxation with reflexology," Iowa City reflexologist D.D. Sunner said.

Reflexology involves stimulating specific areas of the feet and hands, which supposedly mirrors a specific body part, to relieve energy blockages that arise from stress and pain, Sunner said.

Reflexology has a 4000-year history with roots in ancient India, Egypt and China, Sunner said.

She said there is no conventional medical proof or basis for reflexology, but that people should maintain an open mind.

"I believe the proof is in the pudding, you can tell when you go, it's mystifying," she said. "We think it has to do with nerve endings and how organs are connected, but we're not certain."

Sunner said she was encouraged by the growth in popularity of the stress and pain relief movement.

"You see it and read about it more and more. The more you see in mass culture you know it's becoming more popular," she said. "I really find that it helps reduce my stress level - I believe in it because it works."

Sunner said she provides service to a cross-section of society that includes UI students, professors and area residents.

"Everyone holds their stress in a different place. I try to focus on where they hold their stress and relieve it," she said.

Sunner said the growing success can be attributed to such relaxation treatments to a rising mentality of taking care of the body.

"It's like taking your car in for a tune up, by taking care of ourselves like this we make our bodies last longer," she said.

Iowa City massage therapist Lori Van Allen said reflexology is similar to acupuncture and acupressure, which she incorporates in her line of work.

"The feet are really sensitive and according to reflexologists they are a reflection of the body - a microcosm," she said. "It's become a staple in learning massage at massage school."

Iowa City resident Elizabeth Jackson said while she hasn't had reflexology treatments specifically, that she has received professional Shiatsu massage therapy.

Jackson said Shiatsu treatment was more effective than a simple massage and recommends that people with stress in their lives try treatments like Shiatsu and reflexology.

"I think that anything working towards the relaxation of the body is going to work towards the relaxation of the mind," Jackson said.

Van Allen said people could try reflexology at home using charts that show which nerve endings are stimulated in the feet.

These charts are available at local stores such as Vortex, 211 E. Washington St.

"It helps to have someone do it for you though," she said. "Someone who knows how to push, how hard to push and where exactly to push."

Van Allen said she agreed with Sunner that people have to first try the treatment in order to believe in its effectiveness.

"I don't think there are hard facts that would suggest reflexology is better than conventional medicine," she said. "But you have to try to believe in it, it's not something you can believe in on faith."

Earprint used in trial ends in murder conviction

VANCOUVER, Wash. (AP) - A jury convicted a man of killing his ex-wife's fiancé in a trial that included the rare evidence of an earprint taken from the crime scene.

David Kunze, 46, was expressionless as the Clark County Superior Court jury convicted him Tuesday of aggravated first-degree murder and other felonies after 11 hours of deliberations.

Sentencing was scheduled for Aug. 12.

Kunze was arrested last year in the slaying of James McCann, the fiancé of Kunze's ex-wife, Diane. He was beaten to death at his home in 1994 in what police said was an attack staged to look like a violent burglary. McCann's 13-year-old son, Tyler, was injured in the attack.

Kunze told police he was jealous of McCann and acknowledged that he paid a private investigator $25 to trace the license plate of McCann's truck to obtain his address.

The pivotal evidence was an earprint lifted from McCann's bedroom door.

A Dutch crime expert, Cor van der Lugt, testified he was "100 percent certain" that the earprint belonged to Kunze. He did acknowledge that no scientific studies prove earprints are unique.

Defense experts said the earprint could not be positively linked to Kunze.

The use of earprints as evidence at a criminal trial is unusual in the United States. In 1986, a murder defendant was convicted based partly on earprint evidence in a California case.

One year later: Pennsylvania town still mourns its missing

Mark Lennihan/Associated Press

In a Pennsylvania town, sorrow still abounds on the anniversary of the TWA Flight 800 explosion.

By Michael Raphael
Associated Press

MONTOURSVILLE, Pa. — The signs of sorrow are no longer as stark as a teen-ager's funeral or a crowd of crying schoolmates.

One year after 16 high school students, a teacher and four chaperones from Montoursville died in the explosion of TWA Flight 800 while on a French Club trip to Paris, the grief is more private, represented by such things as the stars strung from Monica Cox's bedroom ceiling and the soccer ball still in Will Rogers' dining room.

Townpeople still talk of the tragedy, but the mundane events of everyday life have begun to overshadow what many feel will always be the defining moment in this north-central Pennsylvania community of 5,000, situated 128 miles northwest of Philadelphia and 157 miles west of New York.

"I try to put it out of my mind," said Lou Bassler.

At the traditional gatherings — high school basketball games, church picnics, softball tournaments — the talk about Flight 800 grows less frequent, an encouraging sign to Mayor John Dorin.

"You can almost sense that normalcy returning," he said. "The community healing is coming at a very fast pace."

But, he added: "You don't see that with the families."

Rogers, a paper-thin 44-year-old with sunken cheeks and a whisper of a voice, looks as if only hours, not months, have passed since he learned from CNN that his daughter, Kimberly, was dead at 17.

The decorations in his modest home in surrounding Fairfield Township memorialize his daughter. Photos cover every inch of the piano and mantel in the living room: Kimberly with friends, Kimberly playing soccer, Kimberly at the prom. In the dining room her artwork hangs next to her soccer ball.

Kimberly was his shadow, a guardian angel who twice saved him from a diabetic coma, a loyal daughter who always called to say where she was and where she was going.

He still cringes with regret over the off-the-cuff remark he made to his nervous daughter as they drove to meet the bus that would take them to the airport. He told her she had more of a chance dying in his Toyota than on the plane.

"There is no sunrise each day," he said. "It's a grim time. I try, but I can't let her go."

Lately he has spent his waking hours trying to change the Death on the High Seas Act, a nautical law that limits damages in offshore accidents.

Compensation is based on future earning capacity, meaning TWA will owe the Rogers family little because Kimberly had almost no annual salary. Lawmakers have taken up his cause, and Rogers testified in Washington last week.

Cindy Cox has joined Rogers' mission. If nothing else, the work keeps her mind free of reminders of her 16-year-old daughter, Monica, who also was killed in the July 17, 1996, explosion in the sky off Long Island. All 230 people aboard died.

"I think a lot of people expect it's one year, you should be over it by now. I've got news for them: you never get over it," she said. "You learn how to deal better, but you never get over it."

Simple things can cause her to break down: a barrette, folded towels, a coffee mug. Cooking may be toughest of all — her recipes feed one too many.

Sitting near a rose she placed in the sand at Smith Point beach in Fire Island, N.Y., a woman mourns the loss of some of her friends from TWA Flight 800 in this photo last year. A year later, pressing for an answer to what doomed the flight, the FBI has requested a test to check for the kind of heat source that could attract a missile, a source close to the investigation said on Wednesday. The one-year anniversary of the explosion is Thursday.

FBI tightens Versace manhunt

Hundreds of agents and officers continue their search for the prime suspect in the Versace murder.

By Tom Wells
Associated Press

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. — Hundreds of FBI agents watched the airport and handed out photos in gay bars and hotels Wednesday in a hunt for the alleged prostitute-turned-serial killer suspected of gunning down Gianni Versace.

Andrew Phillip Cunanan dumped a stolen truck in a parking garage, perhaps hopped in a taxi and vanished after the most brazen slaying linked to him so far: walking up behind the fashion designer on the steps of his mansion Tuesday morning and shooting him twice in the back of the head.

As many as 400 FBI agents scoured a 250-mile stretch of the Atlantic Coast. But authorities conceded they couldn't be sure if Cunanan was still in Florida.

They offered no motive for the slaying and would not say how Cunanan and the designer came to cross paths.

Cunanan, described by his mother as a high-priced gay prostitute, has eluded authorities since May, after police identified him as the suspect in a three-week killing spree that left four bodies through Minnesota, Illinois and New Jersey.

Long-term plan to improve roads

The state's Transportation Commission approved a $12.9 billion plan to improve Iowa's highways and byways.

AMES (AP) — The Iowa Transportation Commission has approved a long-term plan to take Iowa's roads, airports, railroad tracks, bike trails and buses through the next 25 years. Now officials have to figure out where all the money will come from.

A $10.8 billion highway package is the biggest chunk of the $12.9 billion plan approved Tuesday. The plan comes after 3 1/2 years of public hearings.

"This will be a very good vision statement," said Iowa Department of Transportation Commissioner Ron Langston of Des Moines. "It is not a final or perfect document, but it certainly starts a strategic direction for us."

The DOT expects about $11 billion from state and federal governments, and the focus now will turn to financing. Commissioner Tom Aller of Cedar Rapids said he had no intention of supporting a budget deficit.

"We may decide we are not going to do certain things, or that we are only going to use the money that we have coming in," Aller said.

The highway projects face a $1.2 billion funding shortfall, but commission Chairperson Catherine Dunn of Dubuque said she is confident the money can be found.

"It can't be funded in ordinary ways. So it should be a wonderfully creative discussion," she said.

DOT planners said some possibilities include a gas-tax increase, removing the state's ethanol exemption, establishing toll bridges, increasing truck registration fees and raising registration fees for certain cars and trucks.

Proposed highway improvements include repairing and preserving interstate highways, upgrading two-lane highways, widening some highways to four lanes and repairing bridges.

The commission's plan also calls for investing in a core system of regional airports and assisting with commercial air service development.

The commission's report said better bicycle and pedestrian routes are needed, both for recreation and direct routes to work.

Iowa one of first states to tax Internet

State officials quietly imposed a $4 million tax on Internet use leaving the governor and other legislators fuming.

By Mike Glover
Associated Press

DES MOINES — Though state officials brag about their commitment to new technology, they've quietly slapped a new $4 million tax on those who access the Internet.

Gov. Terry Branstad and legislative leaders say they oppose the tax, but it's survived all efforts to strip it from the books. The result is that Iowa may well be the first state in the nation to slap a tax on cyberspace.

"We're kind of leading the charge on taxing Internet services," said House Speaker Ron Corbett, a Cedar Rapids Republican who is distinctly unhappy with that status. Lawmakers tried and failed to head off the new tax during the last legislative session, and it went on the books May 1. There are conflicting views of how seriously it's being enforced.

Leaders admit they goofed. The Legislature approved more than $270 million in tax cuts this year — including a 10 percent reduction in income tax rates — and some smaller issues fell through the cracks, said House Majority Leader Brent Siegrist, R-Council Bluffs.

Kurtz told police he was jealous of McCann and acknowledged he paid a private investigator to trace the license plate of Carr's truck to obtain his prints.

The pivotal evidence was an print lifted from McCann's bedroom door.

A Dutch crime expert, Cor van der Gt., testified he was "100 percent certain" that the earprint belonged to Carr. He did acknowledge that no scientific studies prove earprints are unique.

Defense experts said the earprint did not be positively linked to Carr.

The use of earprints as evidence in a criminal trial is unusual in the United States. In 1986, a murder defendant was convicted based partly on earprint evidence in a California case.

Investigators say Huang was not qualified

WASHINGTON — Senate investigators zeroed in Wednesday on the government post John Huang held before his controversial fund raising. A former Commerce Department boss declared he was "totally unqualified" and should never have received intelligence briefings on China.

"Mr. Huang didn't make the cut" to be included in a small, trusted group of officials who could handle sensitive foreign trade issues, former Undersecretary for International Trade Jeffrey Garten testified at Senate hearings into campaign fund-raising abuses.

Garten also said he was surprised to learn that his advice that Huang be "walled off" from China issues in his job was not passed on to the CIA officers who provided Huang hundreds of classified reports on Asia.

"I was never consulted about who should receive what kinds of briefings, but in retrospect he certainly didn't need that information for any of his administrative responsibilities," Garten said.

The hearings were punctuated by political sniping between Sen. Fred Thompson, R-Tenn., chairperson of the Governmental Affairs Committee, and the top Democrat, Sen. John Glenn of Ohio.

Universities squabble over King's papers

ATLANTA — The Rev. Martin Luther King Jr.'s estate has suspended talks with universities that want to house his most recent papers, at least until Emory University apologizes for a professor who warned that the material should stay in the South.

Phillip Jones of Intellectual Property Management, which manages the King estate, said Wednesday he was angered by Rudolph P. Byrd's remark that transferring the papers to an institution outside the South would "create a rupture in our collective memory that would have unknown and far-reaching consequences."

The remark was published Wednesday in The New York Times.

"We will not be threatened or held hostage by those type of comments," Jones said.

Shelton to be named chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff

WASHINGTON — Green Beret commander Army Gen. Henry Shelton is almost certain to be President Clinton's choice for chairperson of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, administration officials said Wednesday.

Defense Secretary William Cohen planned to formally recommend Shelton Wednesday in a meeting with the president, who has known for days that the general was Cohen's top candidate, the aides said. Officials said Shelton attended the White House session — raising expectations that he would get the nod.

But the officials, speaking on condition of anonymity, said Clinton may move slowly because he wants to give any unknown problems with Shelton's background time to surface. They also said there was an outside chance that Clinton would decide to look elsewhere after his interview with Shelton.

Clinton's reason for caution is obvious: Cohen's first choice to succeed Army Gen. Joseph Ralston, who withdrew from contention last month after disclosure of an adulterous affair several years ago. Ralston remains as vice chairperson of the Joint Chiefs.

American soldier stabbed in Bosnia

TUZLA, Bosnia-Herzegovina — With foreigners moving against war crimes fugitives, Bosnian Serbs have lashed out with whatever's at hand. One U.S. soldier was stabbed from behind with a sickle on Wednesday, and a grenade exploded near the house of a U.N. employee — the third such blast this week.

The stabbing occurred less than a week after NATO troops made their first raid to seize Serb war crimes suspects. It was the first assault to wound or target a member of the NATO-led peace force since last week's raid on war crimes suspects in northern Bosnia.

The tougher Western approach has stirred Serb anger, particularly with Americans. Bombs have destroyed vehicles and damaged buildings housing international officials. Leaflets have threatened Americans and others.

Early Wednesday, a hand grenade exploded near the house of a U.N. employee in Prijedor, the third blast this week targeting international officials.

Few details were released of the attack on the U.S. soldier at a lonely outpost in Serb territory. Western officials and local Serbs said the attacker may have been nothing more than a foiled thief. U.S. soldiers said they felt comfortable with security.

"I feel more secure here than at home," said Staff Sgt. Mark L. Geiger, 32, of Pittsburgh, "because here I have 8,500 soldiers who are ready to help at any time."

Health ministry head calls AIDS a waste of money

TOKYO (AP) — The head of a health ministry panel has enraged Japanese AIDS patients by saying it is a waste of money to provide them with free medical care.

"From the taxpayers' point of view, using public money for AIDS treatment is like throwing money into the garbage," a ministry spokesman quoted Dr. Akira Nakajima as saying at a panel meeting Tuesday. Five people suffering from the disease were present.

The ministry expressed shock over the remarks.

The outrage over Nakajima's remarks was the latest blow to the ministry, already under fire for a delay in banning untreated blood products. The deaths of 2,000 Japanese hemophiliacs from AIDS have been blamed on the delay.

Nakajima's panel has been discussing a plan to allow AIDS patients to receive medical and welfare services similar to those designed for handicapped people. It includes possible free medical care for terminal AIDS patients.

Food shortages hurt children in North Korea

BEIJING — Food shortages in North Korea have grown so acute that more than a third of its children under 6 are malnourished, said an aid worker who displayed photographs Wednesday of youngsters with stick-like limbs.

Devastated by two years of flooding and poor harvests, the communist country still needs massive foreign aid to stave off widespread famine, said Kathi Zellweger, who had just returned from a North Korean tour for Caritas, a Roman Catholic aid agency.

But even as the nation teeters on the brink, North Korea's own efforts to get help have been hampered by its ideology of fierce self-reliance and its military standoff with South Korea.

The border between the Koreas — the world's most heavily armed — flared anew Wednesday in an exchange of fire each side blamed on the other. North Korea said several of its soldiers were wounded; South Korea reported no injuries.

The Clinton administration is hoping for what it calls a soft landing for the communist regime in the north. The other option would be a regime dominated by a strong military that might see its only salvation in acts of conflict.

Zellweger reported that North Korea officials, desperate over the growing food calamity, have become increasingly flexible and eager for help from foreign aid groups.

"He's very excited about it," agent said Knight. "I have to coach draft vice presidents) Bill Bidwell Jr. says. They were very fair, and they're things done."

Cubs end four-game losing streak at New York

Sammy Sosa's running catch with the bases loaded to end the seventh inning was a key play in the Cubs' 6-5 victory over the Mets.

Golf battle begins in Britain

The 126th British Open will begin today with Tiger Woods, Ernie Els, and defending champion Tom Lehman amongst the golfers battling to win the title.

By Ron Sirak
Associated Press

TROON, Scotland — Moving cautiously beneath iron-gray clouds and playing careful shots through the relentless wind, two generations of golfers made their final tuneups at Royal Troon on Wednesday for the British Open.

The fortysomething crew of Greg Norman, Nick Faldo and Nick Price searched memory banks accumulated from a total of 57 British Opens and six victories and relied on experience culled from every kind of links golf condition.

The twentysomething gang of Tiger Woods, Ernie Els, Jim Furyk and Lee Westwood — with only 11 British Opens and no victories among them — trusted youthful enthusiasm and staggering new skills.

The 126th British Open begins Thursday and there is no more appropriate place than the world's oldest golf competition to stage what has the potential to be a tournament for the ages.

And if the baton is to pass this week from those who have dominated the game for more than two decades to a younger set, it may have to make a stop at the group in between — the thirtysomething crowd of defending champion Tom Lehman, hometown hopeful Colin Montgomerie and Steve Elkington.

Added to the mix is the fact that all of those mentioned are playing very well right now.

"Anytime you play the British Open or win the British Open you know you have beaten everybody," said Faldo, who turns 40 on Friday and played in his first British Open in 1976, before Woods had his first birthday. "That's why it is the Open."

But winning the British Open requires more than pure skill. It requires the special knowledge and patience to survive an ordeal that is as much against nature as it is against other players.

"I think we're going to get weather," Faldo, a three-time Open winner, said Wednesday about the wind and rain that has been moving off the Firth of Clyde and across Troon all week.

"You have to be a strong ball-striker to survive four days," Faldo said. "The wind moves the ball a lot more than you realize on a links," he said. "You only have to hit it a little off ... then it will be in the rough and you've got to start playing now."

Handling the wind, dealing with the deceptive rough, negotiating the treacherous pot bunkers and developing the feel to run the ball on the green instead of shooting for the flag all come with experience.

Faldo, who is playing in his 22nd British Open and won in 1987, '90 and '92, has that experience. So does Norman, 42, playing in his 20th Open and a winner in 1986 and '93. Price, 40, the winner in 1994, is playing his 18th British Open.

Among them they have won six of the last 11 British Opens.

"It's all about game management this week," Price said. "You have to go out there and manage your game well and put the ball in position off the tee. The British Open is the ultimate test in one's strate-

Els looking to become first to take U.S. and British Opens back-to-back

By Stephan Wade
Associated Press

TROON, Scotland — The way Ernie Els is playing, it may take more than just an ill wind off the Firth of Clyde to keep him from finally winning the British Open.

The mellow South African with the rhythmic swing won his second U.S. Open last month and followed by taking the Buick Open a week later.

Hard work. So he took a two-week vacation. "We actually changed our phone number so no one would reach us," he said.

The break didn't matter. Els came back to take second last week up the road at Loch Lomond in the warmup for this week's third major of the year.

"It's probably the best I've played in a two-week stretch ever," Els said Wednesday. "Obviously, I'm pretty high on confidence at the moment."

"I've had some good tournaments the last three weeks," he added. "I'm really fresh upstairs. My mind is playing golf, thinking golf at the moment. There are not too many distractions."

That may be just what Els needs to get over the hump at the British Open, which opens Thursday on the seaside links of Royal Troon on Scotland's west coast. A victory would make Els the first back-to-back U.S.-British Open winner since Tom Watson in 1982.

Els is 27 years old and this is his 21st

Women's boxing championships continue

Patricia Martinez won the first bout Wednesday in the inaugural USA Boxing Women's championships.

By Paul Newberry
Associated Press

AUGUSTA, Ga. — Patricia Martinez danced in a corner of the gym, shadowboxing with confidence.

When her name was called, she smiled and began trotting to the ring, accompanied by her husband and coach, Carlos. Suddenly, as they reached the edge of the ropes, she was overcome by the significance of the moment.

"I was so nervous," Martinez admitted later, after winning the first bout Wednesday in the inaugural USA Boxing Women's National Championship. "When I went up those stairs, my stomach was turning, my mouth was dry, my legs were weary."

It was quite a burden for Martinez, who began boxing only three years ago and had never been in an actual bout because she wasn't able to find any competition in her weight class back home in Miami.

But, like all the others who strapped on their gloves for the first day of this landmark tournament, Martinez proved women can do more in the ring than carry the round cards. They can jab, counter, hook, bob, weave and bounce back when a handful of leather smashes them in the face.

"These girls can box as well as men," said Giulio Gallucci, also known as Johnny Duke, a legendary amateur coach who has been around the sport for more than 50 years. "They can give a punch and they can take a punch."

Coming from Gallucci, that is high praise. A few years ago, as women were stepping up the pressure for the opportunity to box at the amateur level, he vowed that no female would ever be allowed in his Hartford, Conn., gym.

NFL NOTEBOOK

Veteran Joyner, rookie Booker agree to contracts

Seth Joyner is heading to the top of the NFL, Green Bay. Michael Booker is going to the bottom, Atlanta.

Joyner, a linebacker entering his 12th NFL season and who has played in three Pro Bowls, signed as a free agent with the Packers on Wednesday. He was waived by Arizona.

Joyner, who also played in Philadelphia, where he became a star, is expected to replace George Koonce, out following reconstructive knee surgery. According to his agent, Jim Solano, he will earn $6 million for four years; he was due to get $2.75 million from the Cardinals.

It's believed the contract is heavily backloaded, with a signing bonus of about $1 million and a salary this year in the $300,000 range.

Joyner, 32, is reuniting with Reggie White, his teammate and buddy with the Eagles, in hopes of finally reaching the Super Bowl.

"He's played a long time, he's made a lot of money, maybe getting a ring or a chance to get the ring or pairing up with Reggie White, maybe that's the most important thing for him," a delighted coach Mike Holmgren said. "He's really a nice piece of the puzzle for this season for us. He's still a very, very fine football player."

Booker, a cornerback out of Nebraska and the 11th overall pick in this year's draft, agreed to a five-year contract, assuring the Falcons that all nine draft choices will be in training camp.

Booker, 6-foot-1, 203 pounds, reportedly will receive a $2.2 million signing bonus and a guaranteed base salary for the first three seasons: $800,000 this year, $1 million next year and $1.2 million in 1999.

"My goal is to be in the starting spot. I expect that of myself," Booker said. "I'm feeling more comfortable now after the minicamp."

Coach Dan Reeves also expects a lot of Booker.

"Michael has done everything we've asked of him since we drafted him. He's worked hard from Day 1 on the field and off the field in meetings with his position coach," Reeves said. "I like his work ethic."

Redskins

Washington is facing a threat from defensive tackle Sean Gilbert to sit out the season in a contract dispute. Given that the Redskins may be starting rookie Kenard Lang at end, Gilbert's absence would not bode well for a team that ranked last against the run last year.

The Redskins designated Gilbert as their franchise player to keep him from becoming a free agent. Unhappy with the decision, Gilbert is demanding a contract worth more than $4.5 million per year.

"He's been very firm on his conviction on how much he should be compensated," said Gilbert's agent, Gus Sunseri. "All he wants is what he would have received as a free agent, so it comes down to when and if the Redskins are willing to pay him a fair amount. His position will not change."

Oilers

The Oilers have a big hole in their offensive line: 11-year veteran right tackle Irv Eatman is out until at least October.

Eatman ripped a bicep muscle in his shoulder at minicamp in early June and had surgery June 13. But he's still in a sling.

Vying for his job are second-year player Jon Runyan, former University of Tennessee star Jason Layman and Melvin Hayes, who joined the Oilers after two seasons of virtual inactivity with the Jets.

Colts

Defensive starters Ray Buchanan, Tony Siragusa, David Tate, Jeff Herrod and Eugene Daniel left the Colts in the offseason. Missing from the offensive line is center Kirk Lowdermilk, who started every game the past four years.

"That's a part of this game, people come, and people go," defensive tackle Tony McCoy said. "You've got to be able to suck it up, you miss them. But, you go on. This is a season I feel we can get to the Super Bowl. ... I really feel the talent is there."

The Colts hope free agents Robert Blackmon, Carlton Gray, Al Fontenot and Dan Footman will ease the losses on defense. Jay Leeuwenburg likely will replace Lowdermilk on an offensive line that again is one of the big question marks.

Rams

Mark Rypien is determined not to allow any quarterback controversies develop in St. Louis.

"I don't think that's what I want and it's not what the team needs," said Rypien, a former Super Bowl MVP back for a second stint with the team as insurance for starter Tony Banks. "We need to let Tony relax, get a good feel for this team and an opportunity to lead this team."

Banks was the only rookie starting quarterback in the NFL last year. He showed promise with a strong arm, passing for more than 2,500 yards and 15 touchdowns in 14 games, but he also set a league record with 21 fumbles.

Patriots

Running back-kick returner Dave Meggett, scheduled to make $1.5 million this season, isn't expected to report for Thursday's opening of camp. The Patriots, seeking more salary cap room, want to cut that salary about in half.

Meggett missed a mandatory minicamp last month and was the only player who didn't show up for Wednesday's physicals and conditioning drills.

Saints

Mike Ditka believes fate sent him to coach the New Orleans Saints. The team hopes fate will be kinder now than it has been in the first 30 years of the NFL's worst franchise.

"I think I'm here because I'm supposed to be here," Ditka said. "And there's only one reason for being here, that's winning. It's why we're doing everything we're doing."

New Orleans did not have a winning season during its first 21 years and has had only five of them in 30 years. The Saints' flirtation with respectability under Jim Mora ended in 1992 when they made the last of four trips to the playoffs without a single postseason victory.

Thursday bears little resemblance to the one that went 3-13 last year. Nine starters from 1996, including quarterback Jim Everett, are gone. At least four more positions will likely have new starters.

A third of last year's team is gone. By the time the Saints head home from La Crosse, that number will probably be even higher.

"I was brought in to make changes," Ditka said. "If they wanted things to stay the same, they shouldn't have hired me."

The players are scheduled to take the field Friday. Ditka planned practices for twice a day, in pads, during training camp. It's the only way to prepare for the tough hitting that takes place during the season, he said.

Mets fire GM McIlvaine

The New York Mets fired their general manager Wednesday and promoted Steve Phillips to take over the position.

By Ben Walker
Associated Press

NEW YORK — Joe McIlvaine was fired Wednesday as general manager of the surprising New York Mets, the apparent victim of a personality conflict with co-owner Fred Wilpon and manager Bobby Valentine.

Steve Phillips, 34, was promoted from assistant general manager to the GM job, and will be given a contract through the 2000 season. McIlvaine, who was offered another job in the organization, was the Mets' scouting director when they picked Phillips in the 1981 June draft.

The Mets, coming off their sixth straight losing season and beset by injuries at the start of the year, have rebounded neatly. They took a 51-41 record — fourth-best in the league — into Wednesday night's game against the Chicago Cubs.

New York began the day 2 1/2 games behind Florida for the NL wild-card spot.

The Mets have enjoyed a certain degree of success in the first half,"

Wilpon said. "Our decision to restructure the baseball department, however, is not founded on the team's recent performance."

Wilpon and Valentine both praised McIlvaine's skill in player evaluation and development. McIlvaine was offered an unspecified job in that area, and has not yet decided whether to take it.

"He really enjoys that. He's really good at that," Valentine said. "I think the job description is more than that."

Wilpon said it was in other areas, such as finance, traveling with the team and meeting with the media, where McIlvaine was not as strong.

"There was no specific incident or action that led to this decision," Wilpon said.

The switch came only two weeks before the trading deadline.

"I think it may be considered by a lot of teams as a strange happenstance," Valentine said of the timing.

Valentine replaced Dallas Green as manager last Aug. 26, a move strongly supported by Wilpon. McIlvaine did not want to fire Green, and Valentine was seen as Wilpon's choice.

Wilpon said he and co-owner Nelson Doubleday decided 2-3 weeks ago to dismiss McIlvaine, whose contract was to expire at the end of the season. The circumstances were not right to announce the move until now, Wilpon said.

A&E Hollywood may have seen last of CNN

The president of CNN is looking to put a stop to his anchors appearing in films, as they have in this summer's "Contact" and "The Lost World."

NEW YORK (AP) - CNN is rethinking whether its news anchors and reporters should be allowed to play themselves on the big screen, as they have in films like "Contact" and "The Lost World: Jurassic Park."

"I think the use of our journalists and correspondents is not a good idea," CNN President Tom Johnson told TV critics Monday. "We've tried to police these things. This summer we've let go. I'm responsible."

CBS, NBC and ABC all said they don't allow anchors or news reporters to appear in movies and won't lend their network names to fictional newscasts.

Thirteen present or former CNN journalists and on-air personalities, including anchor Bernard Shaw, portray themselves in "Contact," the science-fiction movie starring Jodie Foster. Shaw also appears in "The Lost World: Jurassic Park," delivering a news report about rampaging dinosaurs.

"Contact" is notable because CNN's parent company, Time Warner, also owns Warner Bros., which produced the film. Johnson said he wasn't pressured to lend his news service to the movie.

"It has created a concern among the professional community that we are being manipulated by Time Warner," he said. "We are not. Categorically we are not. This did not come down because of anyone from Time Warner. It's fair to say it does blur the line."

CNN White House correspondent Wolf Blitzer said he's been asked to appear in more than 20 movies and always turned them down.

"I didn't want to confuse what I do for a living, which is stand on the north lawn of the White House and report real news, with being in a full-screen motion picture and report what is not real news," Blitzer said.

The movies offered greater exposure for CNN at a time when its ratings are down.

"This was a spectacular opportunity to get exposure in a slow summer," Johnson said. CNN also is reviewing its policy of letting its logo appear in movies with actors appearing as newscasters, CNN spokesman Steve Haworth said. Mock CNN reports appear in the upcoming Harrison Ford thriller "Air Force One."

CNN said any movie policy is not likely to apply to talk show host Larry King, who appears in "Contact" and has also shot scenes for upcoming movies "Primary Colors" and "Mad City."

Even though he interviews presidents and other newsmakers on his show, CNN considers King's role different from that of journalists and anchors, Haworth said.

Judge rules Hollywood madam guilty of slander

LOS ANGELES (AP) - Heidi Fleiss slandered two police officers and an Olympic gold medalist when she described them as homosexuals and sexual deviants on radio, a judge has ruled.

Superior Court Judge Arnold Gold awarded $250,000 to ex-Olympic diver Samuel Lee, a diving coach who said he was ridiculed after Fleiss' comments were broadcast.

The judge also awarded $45,000 each to Lee's son, Beverly Hills police Officer Samuel Lee II, and to Los Angeles police officer Patricia Corso. The two officers were involved in Fleiss' arrest on pandering charges.

The elder Lee is a retired doctor who won gold medals in 1948 and 1952.

Fleiss, dubbed the "Hollywood Madam" after being charged with running a pricey call girl ring, made the statements on KROQ's "Love Line" program in 1996.

She is serving a 37-month federal prison sentence for tax evasion and money laundering, and a concurrent state sentence of 18 months for attempted pandering.

Alleged supermodel extortionist claims to have been 'boy toy'

LOS ANGELES (AP) - One of two men charged with trying to extort money from Elle Macpherson says he was her "boy toy," not a burglar.

Lawrence Young, an attorney for Michael Robert Mischler, said Tuesday that his client can't be guilty of burglarizing the supermodel's home and trailer last month. Young said Mischler, 29, was an invited guest. "He stayed with her six times," Young said. "His statements are that he just found out he was used as a 'boy toy.'"

Co-defendant, William Ryan Holt, 26, pleaded innocent last week to extortion and attempted extortion charges.

The men threatened to post sexually explicit photographs of Macpherson on the Internet unless she paid them $80,000, investigators said. The photos, taken by Macpherson's boyfriend, apparently were stolen.

Rejoice, O young Bard, in thy youth

By Liz Schuerman
The Daily Iowan

The classics are clashing with modern youth tonight as the Riverside Theatre's Young People's Company takes the stage to bring Shakespeare to life once again.

The Young People's Company will be performing "The Comedy of Errors," one of the Bard's first written plays and his first comedy, tonight at 8 at the Riverside Theatre.

The confusingly funny play is about two sets of identical twins who were separated when they were young.

Where: Riverside Theatre
When: tonight at 8
The right sibling, and about the father of one set who is in search of the sons he raised, who themselves are in search of their siblings, who end up living in the same city where the other set arrived that morning and also where the old man receives an instant death sentence when he arrived that morning as well. To only add to the confusion both sets of twins were conveniently given the same names. Got that?

"I play the badly beaten servant," said 14-year-old Nicholas Hamel, "I love it!"

To play the parts of the characters in The Comedy of Errors is a group of 26 high-school students from surrounding communities ages 14-18.

Due to their youthful energy, director and Riverside Theater founder, Ron Clark said these younger actors can put the play into a different perspective than professional actors can.

"They have the innocence and passion that older actors can't muster anymore," Clark said.

Clark also added that working with younger actors can change the directing experience as well. They are there because they want to be and they put their whole heart into the performance. They have a wildness that is captivating, Clark said.

This is the sixth year for the Young People's Company and Clark's second year in the director's chair. The company does one classical production a year.

The program was designed for high-school students who have a serious interest in the theater. Over 60 students auditioned for this year's production last April. After receiving the parts, they step into the world of professional acting. They are treated and have expectations of them that are as similar to that of professional acting as it can be.

"Whether I decide to go on in acting or not, this is a good starting point, a good base," Jackson Doran, a 15 year old cast member said.

Most of all, Clark said, being a part of the Young People's Company gives the students a chance to build strong relationships with other students with the same interests as them. Here they are encouraged to express their love of theater as opposed to in high schools where that interest group is sometimes a minority.

"It helps you discover yourself and find out what you can really do," 15-year-old Jessica Bergman said.

Justin Turner/The Daily Iowan

Several teen-age thespians, members of the Riverside Theatre's Young People's Company, perform a scene from William Shakespeare's "The Comedy of Errors" Wednesday in the Pedestrian Mall. The company will be performing the play tonight at 8 in the Riverside Theatre.

Concert to sweeten up I.C.

By Ben Schnoor
The Daily Iowan

Matthew Sweet has changed his musical approach many times in the course of his career, which has spanned seven albums and several tours, but one thing has always remained the same: his sweet pop melodies.

On his latest album, Blue Sky On Mars, Sweet delves even deeper into the pure pop sound.

"I've always wanted to make an album that really stood up for the pop idea, something with melody and strength," Sweet said. "And while there are melancholy parts, ... I wanted the end result to be somewhat more upbeat, more light-hearted."

Sweet, who is presently on tour, will bring his upbeat pop music to Iowa City tonight. Sweet is scheduled to perform at the Union Bar, 121 E. College St., at 10:15. Tickets are on sale at Apollo Compact Discs, 13 S. Linn St., BJ's Compact Discs, 6-1/2 S. Dubuque St., and also will be available at the door.

"I expect it to be an excellent concert," said Joe Muran of the Union Bar. "If you like alternative/pop music, you definitely shouldn't miss this show."

Sweet grew up in Nebraska, but moved to Georgia to join the Athens club scene in his 20s, playing at many of the same clubs as Pylon and R.E.M. After playing in various post-punk bands, he was encouraged to go solo and record under his own name.

He recorded two albums in the '80s that went unnoticed, but broke through with Girlfriend in 1991. That effort was followed by Altered Beast (1993), the EP Son of Altered Beast (1994) and 100% Fun (1995). His albums have featured several Top 40 hits, including "Girlfriend" and "Sick of Myself."

"I write a lot about relationships," Sweet said, "and sometimes the songs are about my real life, sometimes about an alter ego, some are about joy, some are about feeling hopeless. They're all about living life — how to understand it, tolerate it, change it."
