Tenure procedures may change

The UI Faculty Council passed a preliminary draft that changes procedures for granting tenure and promotion.

By Erin Jordan
The Daily Iowan

UI professors up for a promotion may now have to receive approval not only from students, but from their peers in the classroom.

The UI Faculty Council discussed a proposal Tuesday afternoon to change the evaluation guidelines to include peer observation for the tenure and promotion decision-making of UI faculty members.

The Council took a preliminary vote of 10-6 to include the evaluations of other faculty members' classrooms for such decisions. Currently, only student evaluations of classrooms are required for faculty members to be considered for tenure or promotion.

The motion will be brought up for voting at the Sept. 16 Faculty Senate meeting.

Former Faculty Council President Sheldon Kurtz said there is a need for faculty members to observe each other, as well as having students observe and evaluate them in the classroom.

"I think if we're basing tenure on student evaluations alone, we've got a problem," Kurtz said. "I think student evaluations are important, but there is a core responsibility we have to assume as members of a the faculty," he said.

The Council discussed allowing the various UI colleges to use their own way of evaluations versus a uniform method of evaluating throughout the UI.

Mary Stone, associate professor in the UI Dermatology Department, said special circumstances of peer observation, such as in a clinical classroom, would involve a much more strenuous evaluation because of abnormal classroom circumstances.

"Peer observation wouldn't work for clinical. A person would have to follow this person around for two days to get an hour of teaching to evaluate," Stone said.

Barry Butler, professor in mechanical engineering, said each UI college should set their own guidelines for promotions and tenure because each department is different.

"Individual colleges should be deciding for themselves," he said. "Everyone has their own cultures — let us decide."

proposed CHANGES

The college's written policy governing promotion decision-making must specify a method of peer evaluation of teaching — which may or may not (to be replaced with must) include peer observation of teaching—as well as which teaching activities and materials will be evaluated by peers.

The Council's preliminary vote was 10-6.

The proposed changes were discussed by the Faculty Council Tuesday and are scheduled to be voted on by the Faculty Senate Sept. 16.

Paparazzi named as manslaughter suspects

Paparazzi were formally named as suspects Tuesday, but one photographer's lawyer called the charges "theater justice."

By Jocelyn Noveck
Associated Press

PARIS — A French judge declared seven paparazzi to be manslaughter suspects Tuesday in the death of Princess Diana, including one aggressive photographer said to have felt the princess's pulse while snapping shots of the car wreck.

A lawyer for one photographer dismissed the investigation as "theater justice," a sop to public outrage over the fact Diana, her millionaire boyfriend and their driver were killed while being chased by paparazzi.

But an attorney for boyfriend Dodi Fayed's father, Mohamed Al Fayed, said there was "causality" between the photographers' pursuit and the fatal crash, and the elder Fayed was joining the case as a civil party to prove it.

Diana

Fresh disclosures, however, pointed anew at a combination of deadly factors in Sunday's accident, including the apparently drunken condition of the driver, a Fayed employee.

A police analysis found that chauffeur Henri Paul's blood alcohol level may have been almost four times the legal limit at the time of the crash — higher than originally believed.

The photographers who went before the judge Tuesday, one by one, all had been in custody since being arrested at the crash scene Sunday morning.

Judge Herve Stephan placed them under formal investigation for "involuntary homicide" — the French equivalent of manslaughter. It does not mean they will necessarily be formally charged with any crimes.

They also will be investigated for failing to aid people in danger, a crime under the French "Good Samaritan" law requiring onlookers to assist victims of road accidents.

All were freed, two on bond. Both involuntary homicide and Good Samaritan violations can be punished by up to five years in prison and fines of almost $100,000.

In central London on Tuesday, a grieving human tide engulfed St. James's Palace, where Diana's body lay in a chapel closed to the public, as the British monarchy and government.

Princess Diana 'Queen of hearts'

The myth of Diana is remembered in peoples' hearts around the world.

By Mort Rosenblum
Associated Press

LONDON — In life a controversial princess of uncertain status, Diana in death is being crowned by public acclamation with the title she once said she wanted most: Britain's queen of hearts.

"She is the symbol of an age, an icon for her generation, set in the collective memory and imagination of this country," said Sir John Elliott, an Oxford history professor whose position is funded by royal subsidy.

"It's frightening, isn't it, when a whole nation seizes onto somebody and elevates her to such heights?" he added. "Rather like Evita Peron."

For Britons and the world at large, a beautiful yet star-crossed princess has been snatched away in a shocking manner. And just when so many people needed a symbol to get them through troubled times.

"This is how myths are enshrined," said Dariane Pictet, a psychotherapist and writer in London who knew Diana. "She was everyone's private dream: a wife, a mother, a goddess who would fix it all."

Diana had a natural ability to make a direct, intimate human connection, Pictet said. She was not afraid to touch people, to hug children, to change convention, to display emotion.

Students asked to give up drinking to keep VEISHEA

No alcohol and no out-of-town drinkers — including UI students — will help calm future VEISHEA celebrations, officials say.

By Laura Heinauer
The Daily Iowan

Administrators at Iowa State University are giving students one last chance to save a 75-year-old tradition, but they have to give up alcohol to do it.

At the first meeting of the Government of the ISU Student Body last week, ISU President Martin Jischke told students to keep alcohol off campus or the administration will eliminate VEISHEA all together.

"I have asked student leaders to make a sincere pledge on behalf of the students they represent to abstain from drinking alcohol during VEISHEA," Jischke said. "I don't want VEISHEA to be seen as a big party where a lot of drinking takes place. If anyone has that expectation I'd rather them not come."

UI students are still invited to attend, but if they plan on drinking alcohol, they should stay home, said Rob Wiese, ISU president of the government of the student body.

"We are going to work with (UISG President) Allison (Miller) and (Vice President) Meghan to keep other universities from coming here and causing problems," Wiese said.

Being the DI Webmaster has many advantages. For one, you get the coolest title in the newsroom. You don't see any storymasters or copymasters, do you? Second, you get to pretend you are an expert on all things cyber. If these first weeks of class leave you with too much time on your hands, check out some of Wegby's favorite websites:

The Daily Iowan (www.uiowa.edu/~dliowan): If I have to upload it every morning in the wee hours, the least you can do is read it. Remember, the DI is always as close as the nearest computer lab. Newsprint is optional.

FASTweb (www.fastweb.com): There is one thing you can never get enough of: other people's money. This site is a great resource for grants, scholarships, and other money for college. It's up-to-date and they even provide form letters to request the various applications.

El Online (www.eonline.com): TCI may not think you deserve El, entertainment television, but you don't have to be out of the loop because of them. Get all the celeb gossip you need, and if you need a list of every film Tom Cruise has starred in, fire up their search engine and make it yours.

The Onion (www.theonion.com): Where else can you find a restaurant review that focuses on prison chili? This satirical newspaper will have you rolling, but it isn't for the easily offended.

WhoWhere (www.whowhere.com): Think of this as stalking made easy. Long hours of surveillance and cost-prohibitive private investigation work is a thing of the past. Find anyone's telephone number, address, or e-mail with this locator search engine.

Virtual Florist (www.virtualflorist.com): So you virtually remembered your date? You're virtually a nice guy but you need proof? Send some free virtual flowers, available in a variety of bouquets. And if you are feeling really bad, punish yourself and pay the exorbitant price to send real flowers using this site.

Internet Phone (www.vocaltec.com): Talk long-distance for free using this cutting-edge program download able here. If you have a digital video camera and a decent modem, you can transmit and receive video too. The future is here, and the phone company has nothing to do with it.

Bert is Evil (fractalcow.com/bert/bert.html): Pop culture addicts, discover the true nature of someone you thought was an old friend. Internet wackos will give you a laugh with this look at the darker side of Sesame Street's "Bert."

Hospital workers unhappy with restructuring Gov. Branstad speaks on urban sprawl in Iowa

■ UIHC food and nutrition workers say they are still awaiting changes to alleviate work overload.

Cori Zarek
The Daily Iowan

Despite efforts by UIHC food workers to improve labor conditions, many say they're not yet satisfied.

On July 31, a petition signed by 82 people was presented to the UIHC food and nutrition department in protest to the restructuring of patient services. Despite the petition, the restructuring was carried out and many are unhappy with the results.

Chris Clark, part time food service worker and union steward for AFSCME Local 12 — the food service workers' union — said the restructuring has created problems in her department.

"I don't think management thought before they did this," Clark said. According to the July 31 petition, the restructuring has involved moving some food workers to different departments within the UIHC and leaving some positions vacant after workers' retirement or relocation.

According to Loren Schutt, chairman of the AFSCME Local 12 anti-downsizing committee, the committee is just trying to make decent working conditions where people can do their job and do it well.

"The management has made this hard to do," Schutt said. UIHC Information Director Dean Borg said the UIHC is involving the staff in the restructuring plans that are being spaced out over several weeks.

"This is being done in by hospitals and health care organizations across the country," Borg said. "We have to shift the people to where the work is."

President of AFSCME Local 12 Steven O'Donnell said the employees are not worried about long hours and double shifts, it's the patient safety and quality of care that concerns them.

"They are being put in situations where they are forced to change procedure and compromise the quality of care," O'Donnell said. "People that I've talked to are just not comfortable doing this."

In the past two years, the UIHC has been restructuring their departments. This restructuring has led to the budget cuts of more than $65 million in spending in a five year period.

"They have to reduce expenses because the hospitals are being paid less," Borg said.

The petition stated that many of the patient service positions are not being filled by the UIHC after employees' retirement, termination or relocation leaving not enough people to work.

"The part timers are running themselves ragged," said Todd Taylor, staff representative for AFSCME.

These open positions have led to the compromised quality of care and health issues with the employees, including stress, Taylor said.

"I'm sure stress levels are really high right now at the hospital," O'Donnell said. "Whenever stress levels go up, so does the use of sick leave."

Although there are fewer employees to work with, legitimate sick leave is still encouraged, Borg said.

"If people are sick, we encourage them not to come in. We'll make arrangements to get the food out," he said.

The AFSCME participants disagree, O'Donnell said, and they feel there is little freedom in granting employee sick leave.

"It's a hazard to the patients to have unhealthy workers around," O'Donnell said.

The UIHC and the dietary staff have been in talks since the petition was handed in, Clark said.

"We're trying to build support not just with union contract workers, but with others in the UIHC as well," Clark said.

■ A legislative panel meets this week to outline plans to minimize urban sprawl in cities across Iowa.

By Jeff Clayton
The Daily Iowan

Speaking at his weekly news conference, Governor Terry Branstad expressed concerns that unmanaged growth is costing the state precious farmland.

A solution to controlling problems associated with "urban sprawl" is pushing for growth in stagnant rural sections of the state, Branstad said.

Critics of urban sprawl in Iowa have said growth concentrated around the Iowa City—Cedar Rapids corridor and the Des Moines and Ames area has negatively affected rural Iowa and increased the decay of inner cities.

Seemingly constant suburban development around those cities is reducing farm acreage at what critics see as an alarming rate.

"In a sense we can avoid some of the problems with expansive growth in the larger urban areas if we make our rural areas more competitive," Branstad said.

However, Branstad said he does not favor state regulations of development, believing it could lead to corruption.

"That could lead to favoritism," he said. He said he was worried state officials would be in a position to pick which developers could make huge amounts of money by developing farmland and which would have to keep it pristine.

Instead, Branstad said the negative impact of urban sprawl would be diminished if development in rural areas could be increased.

Former Iowa City resident Colt Valenti said he was surprised and dismayed at the rate of development in Iowa City over the last few years.

"The beauty of Iowa that I see is diminishing rapidly due to urbanization and strip malls," Valenti said.

Valenti said he feels urbanization could change Iowa for the worse.

"I think rural family values are dissipating as development increases," he said.

In July, State Representative Ed Fallon of Des Moines said the unregulated growth also threatens Iowa's agricultural industry.

"Sometime in the next century we will become a net food importer," Fallon said. "Not just rural Iowans, but all Iowans who eat need to be concerned about this."

Child OK after a night in bean field

NEOLA, Iowa (AP) — A frantic overnight search for a 3-year-old girl had a happy ending when volunteer firemen found her in a soybean field not far from home.

Courtney Simons suffered scratches and bug bites after spending 13 hours on her own but was otherwise unharmed when she was found Monday morning.

The child was found by Jeremy McDermott and Brian Rohatsch, members of the Neola fire department who were using a four-wheel-drive vehicle to search an area near a creek.

McDermott said the child's first words were, "My mommy is looking for me, I have to go home."

Chickens dig up lost letterman's ring

FAIRBANK, Iowa (AP) — Peggy Pharris' chickens don't lay golden eggs, but they did dig up a little treasure as far as former UI wrestler Dennis Wegner is concerned.

Pharris noticed last month that her chickens were scratching at a clod of dirt with a metal object embedded in it. She took the clod, rinsed the dirt away and found an Iowa Letterman's Club ring.

"I could see 'Herky the Hawk' perfectly engraved on the side of the ring," she said. "I just wanted to get it back to its rightful owner."

That was Wegner, who lettered for the Hawkeyes from 1965 to 1967. Wegner's family had owned the land before Pharris, but Wegner had moved in the mid-1970s.

Engraved on the ring was "D. Wegner 1967." Pharris spoke to Fairbank Postmaster Ray Weber, who knew the Wegners.

WRAC unveils fall community programs

■ The UI's Women's Resource and Action Center will attempt this semester to make more students aware of their organization.

By Nathan Hill
The Daily Iowan

The Women's Resource and Action Center (WRAC) has scheduled a full slate of new events and seminars aimed at the Iowa City community this fall.

Monique DiCarlo, director of WRAC, said the purpose of the new events is to build camaraderie among the participants.

"The one thing we hope to accomplish with the group services is to help people build a sense of community," she said. "In doing that we hope to end the isolation people feel around that specific issue."

Even though WRAC serves over 10,000 people a year, many students are unaware of the organization.

"I've never heard of it," said UI sophomore Sonja Dodge. "The university doesn't do a good job of informing students about it." DiCarlo said she encourages new students to stop by the WRAC and inquire about volunteer opportunities.

"There's always a need for more creative ways and more inclusive ways to address the challenges that women face," she said. "Once people are linked in to making a difference in their community then they learn more the programs offered and how they can help."

Some of WRAC's new services and groups for the fall semester are:
Social Change Training: A program that is designed to provide seminars which teach practical skills to use in progressive social change work and focuses on culturally competent organizing.

DiCarlo said this is one of the most important new services offered by WRAC.
"It's a way that folks who are kind of interested in doing activism work can build skills and meet other activists," she said.

Both men and women are invited to participate. The program begins Oct. 18.

Women Wanting Joy Without Another: This group will provide support for women who feel they are either dependent on having a significant other or feel they need the attention of someone in order to feel attractive and confident. It will meet Mondays at 7 p.m., beginning Sept. 8.

Transcending Gender Stereotypes: A group, which also meets at 7 p.m. starting Sept. 8, which explores the gender stereotypes faced in society. Topics include issues of beauty, sexuality, higher education, sports, religion and health.

Coming Out: An educational group, which is still forming, will address the concerns surrounding the coming out process. There will be no pressure to come out and all confidentiality will be maintained.

disAbility Group: A six-week group beginning Sept. 11 at 6:30 p.m. will provide a forum for women with disabilities to discuss the challenges and joy that come with being disabled. The group will also focus on learning about the Americans with Disabilities Act and other types of disabilities.

Bernadita Llanos, a WRAC group facilitator volunteer, said that the groups and services offered by the center are an important resource to area women.

"It's a way of creating dialogue for people inside and outside the University," she said. "It's important to have a safe space where ideas and problems are shared. It creates a very supportive atmosphere."

Llanos said most of her group discussions revolve around the self and family, intimate relationships and the challenges of being a woman today.

UI senior Jodi Dreiesen said the WRAC is a helpful organization for women at the UI.

"Women still have a disadvantage in our society," she said. "There should always be more done for women's rights."

UI junior Shirin Sadeghi said women's empowerment involves receiving more information than just how to protect themselves from rapists.

"There needs to be more information out there for women other than just on sexual assault," she said.

Postal worker wounds two, kills himself

■ Clerk wounds two at Miami Beach post office, then kills himself.

By Tom Bayles
Associated Press

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. — A postal clerk left his counter to get a gun from his car Tuesday, then walked back in and shot and critically wounded his ex-wife and her friend as the two women waited in line. After the shooting, the clerk walked outside and fatally shot himself.

The gunman was a longtime counter clerk at the post office, said a witness who had gone to check on her mail said.

"I have known him for a long time and he has been nice," said Judy Rivas. "I even smiled at him as he walked behind me."

The U.S. Postal Service identified the gunman as 64-year-old Jesus Antonio Tamayo, and said he worked for the service for 21 years.

When he saw the two women walk in about 1 p.m., Tamayo went outside to his car and returned a few minutes later with a gun, said police spokesman Bobby Hernandez.

"As soon as they walked in, they saw him leave through the back," he said. "Then he came back in through the front doors and shot them."

Each victim was shot once and Tamayo then left.

"He exited the post office, went to a tree, looked up in the air and shot himself in the face," Hernandez said. Another witness, Amy Reed, said she saw people fleeing the post office. "Dogs were barking, people were screaming and running towards me," she said.

Hernandez said Tamayo had divorced his ex-wife, Manuela Acosta, 62, four years ago. She and the other victim, Mirna Mendoza, 55, shared an apartment in Ocean Beach, a few blocks from the post office.

The women were in critical condition after surgery at Jackson Memorial Hospital, said spokesperson Lorraine Nelson.

The post office is only a few blocks from the oceanside mansion where designer Gianni Versace was shot to death in July. Suspect Andrew Cunanan, who had been linked to killings in three other states, was later found dead of a self-inflicted gunshot wound.

Oprah may drop King World

■ Oprah's alleged decision moves the stock market.

By Heather Lalley
Associated Press

CHICAGO — Stock in King World Productions Inc. slipped in heavy trading Tuesday after a report that talk show queen Oprah Winfrey would not renew her contract with the company for the 1998-1999 season.

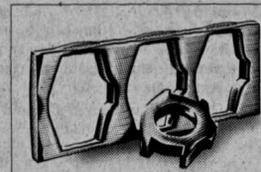

Los Angeles television station KTLA reported Tuesday that Winfrey would not to renew her contract for a 13th season. But King World and her company, Chicago-based Harpo Productions, said Winfrey has not made a decision on continuing the show. She has a Sept. 15 deadline to decide under her contract.

King World's stock fell 68 3/4 cents per share, or 2 percent, to $39.06 1/4 on the New York Stock Exchange. About 478,900 shares changed hands, compared with average daily volume of 142,900.

King World distributes the program which airs in 119 countries.

Bounty hunters under scrutiny

■ The recent shootings by bounty hunters have many people worried over the lack of restrictions placed on them.

By Matt Kelley
Associated Press

PHOENIX — The five bounty hunters who mistakenly kicked in Christopher Foote's door over the weekend didn't need a warrant — or even a state license.

But after the deaths of Foote and his girlfriend in a hail of gunfire, some are demanding that the shadowy world of bounty hunters be more closely regulated.

"It created an image that this is the Wild West," said Matthew William Maricopa County Attorney Rick Romley. "People should not be dying because of mistakes such as this."

Even many of those who track down bail jumpers for a living say it was only a matter of time until in-cent people got killed. "We knew that something like this was going to happen, because there's no standards or regulations across the country," said Bill J. Bryant, president of the National Association of Bail Enforcement Agents.

Added Bob Burton, who runs the National Institute of Bail Enforcement, a training center in Tucson: "This is our Rodney King."

Police said the bounty hunters, wearing black military-style clothing, ski masks and body armor, kicked in the front door of Foote's house early Sunday in search of a California bail jumper.

They tied up several people inside the home — including three children — and a gun battle broke out when the bounty hunters tried to force their way into Foote's bedroom.

Foote, 23, and his girlfriend, Spring Wright, 20, were killed. Two of the five men were wounded on their arms, which were not covered by the bulletproof armor.

Authorities arrested three men, including the two wounded, on suspicion of second-degree murder. One of the three, 40-year-old Michael Martin Sanders, was charged Tuesday with two counts of second-degree murder and ordered held on $1 million bail. Two other men were still being sought.

Police spokesperson Michael Torres declined Tuesday to release further details about the bail jumper the men said they were seeking. Investigators have said the victims had no connection to the fugitive.

Foote's parents, Kay and Tom Foote, started circulating petitions Monday calling for tighter regulations on bounty hunters.

"Myself and my daughter had a hard time getting to sleep at night because it could have been us," said neighbor Mary Baker. "I didn't realize they could just break into somebody's house like that."

Bounty hunters don't need warrants and are largely unregulated because they are enforcing a bail bond contract, not the law. A person who signs a bail bond contract agrees that he will be subject to seizure by an agent of the bail bondsman if he flees.

In Arizona and Sanders most other states, bounty hunters can break into homes if they believe a fugitive is inside. But they can be sued or face criminal charges if they are mistaken.

Apple buys competitor

■ In a multi-million dollar deal, Apple buys the main source of competition in sales

By Catalina Ortiz
Associated Press

SAN JOSE, Calif. — Apple Computer Inc. is buying key assets of Macintosh clone maker Power Computing Corp. for $100 million, neutralizing some of the competition that has eaten into Apple's sales and giving the company new expertise selling machines directly to the public.

Apple, in a deal announced today, is getting back the license that allows Power Computing to sell Macintosh-based machines. Power Computing, a successful and highly visible maker of Macs, will stop selling the clones at the end of the year and instead make clones of machines using Windows operating software.

"Power Computing has pioneered direct marketing and sales in the Macintosh market, successfully building a $400 million business," said Steve Jobs, the Apple cofounder who has been leading the company while it looks for a new chief executive. "We look forward to learning from their experience, and welcoming their customers back into the Apple family."

Power Computing, the first company Apple allowed to make Mac clones, had been embroiled in a messy licensing dispute with Apple over how much it would pay to keep making the machines.

The deal follows the Aug. 19 resignation of Power Computing's outspoken president, Joel Kocher, who two weeks earlier publicly chastised Apple for not quickly licensing its latest technology.

Clone makers, customers and industry observers had been alarmed by what they fear will be a reversal of Apple's 1994 decision to allow licensing, a move that was opposed by Jobs.

"It's very clear Apple wanted... the clonemakers to be partners, and in this particular case, they're taking it a step further," said Tim Bajarin, president of Creative Strategies Research International in San Jose.

"By making Power Computing the direct selling arm of the company, Apple gets into an area they desperately needed to participate in," he said.

Many people believe Apple's delay in licensing the Mac cost it the opportunity to set the industry standard with its easy-to-use operating system. IBM's decision to allow clones led to the domination of PCs using Microsoft Corp.'s software.

By allowing clones, Apple hoped to sustain and expand the Macintosh platform.

But Apple maintains that clones only ate into its share of the Macintosh market. Conflict arose with licensees when it came time to discuss rights to Apple's latest version of the Mac operating software, Mac OS 8.

Other Mac licensees include Umax and Motorola; there was no immediate indication how today's announcement would affect them.

VEISHEA/Officials hope less alcohol will tame party

ISU's VEISHEA celebration has been under the microscope since April when Uri Sellers was fatally stabbed outside a fraternity. The stabbing was the latest incident in a string of riots and other disturbances that have tarnished VEISHEA's reputation over the past few years.

Jischke is scheduled to meet with the Intrafraternity Council this week to get feedback on his ultimatum. Jischke said he has received mixed reactions to a dry VEISHEA in meetings with student leaders, faculty and Ames residents.

A public forum is scheduled for Sept. 22 to discuss the dry approach to the VEISHEA celebration. A final decision is expected to be made in early October, Jischke said.

Kasey Powers, an ISU student and president of Delta Tau Delta Fraternity said he was in favor of an alcohol-free VEISHEA. However, he said having a dry VEISHEA would be a challenge in some areas. "It's going to work in my house," said Powers. "I see there being some problems in the residence halls, and other Greek houses though."

The Intrafraternity Council refused to comment Tuesday on Jischke's proposal.

VEISHEA co-chairperson, Kathryn Whitaker, said most of the disturbances with VEISHEA in the past didn't involve ISU students or Ames residents. She said eliminating these problems and increasing safety measures could decrease repeat incidents.

"The troublemakers in the past don't feel responsible for the consequences of their behavior," Whitaker said. "Most ISU students don't want to be the generation that loses VEISHEA and I hope we can all cooperate to change the character of this tradition."

Wiese said ISU students were lucky to even have an opportunity to decide on the fate of VEISHEA.

"We need to be responsible and tone it down or we will lose VEISHEA forever," Wiese said. "Either we give up alcohol for three days or lose a 75 year tradition. I'm hopeful that students will be responsible and make the mature decision."

TENURE/Peer evaluations may be added

dent, said he supported mandatory peer classroom observations for the UI faculty.

"Peer observation lets us share with other faculty members what works and what doesn't," President Ed Wasserman said.

David Jepsen, professor in the College of Education, said the change to including mandatory peer evaluations would be good "as long as it doesn't diminish or override students' views of faculty members."

Jepsen said peer evaluations could also cause a potential problem.

"It could become strictly politicized," he said. "For example, if I asked a friend to evaluate my teaching, and in turn I evaluate his or hers, it wouldn't serve the purpose. But I value my colleagues' feedback, and it often leads to constructive criticism."

The council also discussed the number of peer recommendations an applicant needs in each department to be considered for a promotion or tenure.

Currently, each department sets up its own number of peer recommendations required. Some UI departments, like English, Nursing, and Medicine, are set at three recommendations, while the Engineering department is set at eight.

The tenure and promotion decision-making guideline document first stated that each department would require five recommendations.

Wasserman stated four recommendations would be "the critical number," and the Council voted unanimously to limit faculty members to an average of four to eight recommendations, going no lower than three.

INVESTIGATION/Witnesses blast photographers

ment prepared for Saturday's grand funeral.

Thousands of Britons waited hours to sign books of condolence at St. James' — ordinary people with special places in their hearts for the young princess.

"Actually, I think the royal family should be done away with," said Irene Treble, 85. "But Diana was amazing as she had a real common touch that appealed to so many people."

The circumstances of her death — a high-speed chase by celebrity-hunting photographers on motorcycles, an alcohol-loaded driver who may have been pushing the armored Mercedes-Benz sedan over 100 mph as it roared through a Paris tunnel — have outraged people worldwide.

An American businessman who said he happened on the scene just after the crash called the photographers "disgusting."

"I mean (they were) all over the car," said Jack Firestone, of Hewlett Harbor, N.Y., "climbing all over the car as if they were mosquitoes ... clicking away like mad. ... It was obvious these paparazzi knew they had struck gold."

Some witnesses said photographers even pushed aside rescuers and policemen, saying they were ruining their pictures.

Police accused Romuald Rat, of the Gamma photo agency, of obstructing the work of the first officers on the scene. Rat's lawyer, Philippe Benamou, said in defense that his client merely took Diana's pulse when he was taking pictures of the wreckage.

"He wanted to see if she was dead or alive," the lawyer said.

The other paparazzi under investigation are Nikola Arsov, of the Sipa agency; Jacques Langevin of Sygma; Laslo Veres, a free-lancer; Stephane Darmon, a motorcyclist for Gamma; Serge Arnal of the Stills agency; and Christian Martinez of Angeli; and Romuald Rat of Gamma.

Rat and Martinez were the only ones who had to post bond — the equivalent of $16,000 — and were forbidden from working as journalists pending resolution of the case.

"This is theater justice, aimed at satisfying the expectations of the public," said William Bourdon, a lawyer for Arsov.

"There is no crime here, the file is empty," he said. "I will demand that the case be dismissed immediately."

QUEEN/Diana remembered

"Lots of people are charming," she said, "but if you add five or six more attributes and a royal position, that's myth material. Then add the tragedy, and it is instant canonization."

For Auberon Waugh, an often curmudgeonly essayist with royal sympathies, Diana was a complement to Queen Elizabeth, her former mother-in-law.

"She was an alternative queen, and each did the other proud," Waugh said.

In her most famous interview, a soul-searching evening on the BBC two years ago, Diana dismissed any interest in the throne, saying, "I'd like to be a queen in people's hearts but I don't see myself being queen of this country."

The reaction to her death shows she achieved that goal, Waugh said. He declared himself amazed at the outpouring of fervor, which recalled the death of John F. Kennedy.

"It's quite rare for a whole nation to show such genuine, genuine grief," he said, adding emphasis to the repeated adjective. "She will be greatly missed."

Professor Elliott agreed that the princess was part-queen, in a way. "No head of state can cover every dimension," he said, "and Diana reached certain parts of society more effectively."

But, he added, it was too soon to assess what permanent impact the phenomenon of Diana might have on the monarchy.

Fayed relative said Dodi and Diana planned to marry

LONDON (AP) — A relative of Dodi Fayed says the movie producer told him that he and Princess Diana planned to marry, an Arab-language newspaper said Tuesday.

The Saudi-owned daily paper Asharq al-Awsat, which is published in London, quoted Hussein Yassin as saying he talked with Fayed at the Ritz Hotel in Paris on Saturday night shortly before the car crash that killed Fayed, Diana and their driver.

Yassin's brother, Anis, married Fayed's mother, Samira, after her divorce from Fayed's father, Mohamed Al Fayed, the Egyptian owner of the Ritz Hotel and the London department store Harrods.

The newspaper quoted Yassin as saying: "Dodi said that they were deeply in love and that the relationship was serious and they had decided to get married."

First lady to represent White House at Princess Diana's funeral service

By Lawrence Knutson
Associated Press

EDGARTOWN, Mass. — Hillary Rodham-Clinton will represent the president at the funeral of Princess Diana in recognition of her "deep personal association" with her, the White House said today.

White House deputy press secretary Joe Lockhart said Rodham-Clinton also has "deep respect for her humanitarian work."

"We believe she will be passing along the American peoples' conferences," Lockhart said.

The invitation to the first lady read: "It is the wish of the Spencer family and of the Royal family that Mrs. Hillary Rodham-Clinton should receive a special invitation because of her close personal association with Diana Princess of Wales."

Lockhart said Rodham-Clinton will attend the funeral in Westminster Abbey on Saturday, then return to the United States.

He said there will not be an official U.S. state delegation because "this is not a state funeral."

He said William Crowe, U.S. ambassador to Great Britain and former chairman of the Joint Chief of Staff, will be the only other American attending in an official capacity.

Asked to detail the personal relationship between Diana and Rodham-Clinton, he said they had met on several occasions and added: "There was certainly a confluence of interests between the first lady and the late Princess Diana, particularly if you look at some of the charity work she did on breast cancer, children and people with AIDS."

It was announced on Monday that President Clinton would not attend because of the unofficial nature of the ceremony.

The officials said the announcement that Clinton would not attend was not made until the British government decided that while the funeral would be ceremonial, it would not be a state event.

During his presidency, Clinton has only once traveled abroad for the funeral of a foreign dignitary. That was in November 1995 after the assassination of Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin.

While Gore has represented the United States at the funeral services of international dignitaries, Rodham-Clinton enjoyed the closest relationship with Diana, visiting with her on the princess' trips to Washington.

In a condolence letter released Monday, the president wrote British Prime Minister Tony Blair: "We fondly recall her last visit to the White House in June when she met with Hillary. The British people, indeed all of us, have lost a friend and a strong voice for those less fortunate."

Lockhart said the other condolence letters, which were sent by diplomatic cable to Queen Elizabeth, Prince Charles and Diana's family, would remain private.

Grand jury investigates Mo. vote buying

A grand jury investigation has been launched into allegations that Democratic votes were bought for beer.

By Scott Charlton
Associated Press

CHARLESTON, Mo. — As many as 200 voters last fall were rewarded with yellow coupons good for a $1 purchase at the Gas-A-Mat — enough for a cold can of Old Style beer at the convenience store.

And enough to trigger a federal grand jury investigation into allegations of Democratic vote-buying.

"Thank you for your support!" read the mass-printed coupons that Republicans say were handed out to departing voters in mostly black, mostly poor areas to re-elect the Missouri Legislature's senior member, a good ol' boy who took office on the 1960 Democratic ticket headed by John F. Kennedy.

"In no way did we cheat," said Harry "Joker" Warren, owner of the Gas-A-Mat and a Democratic loyalist for more than half a century. "The Republicans just got mad because they got beat."

Several figures in what has been dubbed southeastern Missouri's Beer for Votes case have testified before the grand jury. No one has been charged.

"If people are to go out and pay people a dollar or two to steal their votes, I think that's the most degrading behavior," said David Barklage, director of the Missouri House Republican Campaign Committee.

The GOP's evidence: videotapes shot at Barklage's behest through a van's darkened windows outside Charleston's heavily black polling places. They show a Democratic effort to haul voters to the polls. A half-dozen voters at a time are seen climbing out of cars and vans to vote.

Barklage acknowledges the videotapes did not capture any actual vote-buying. And he concedes that the 200 or so votes involved would not have changed the outcome of the election, which Rep. Gene Copeland won by an 1,166-vote margin, or 55.3 percent.

But he said Tuesday: "Votes were bought. The focus ought to be that someone attempted to buy the election."

The conservative southeastern Missouri region has long been dominated by Democrats. But in recent years they have faced spirited challenges from the GOP.

Lester Gillespie, a Democratic activist in Mississippi County's black community, acknowledges paying the owner of the Gas-A-Mat $200 to accept 200 coupons good for $1 worth of merchandise apiece.

He also acknowledges distributing the coupons to black voters whose names were checked off a list outside the polls to verify they cast ballots.

But Gillespie, who testified before the grand jury, insists the coupons were merely "a token of my appreciation" for participating in the political process — not a reward for voting a certain way.

Barklage said he spoke to several of the voters — conversations not picked up by his camera — and he said that one black woman acknowledged receiving a bottle of whiskey for voting, and that other blacks confirmed they received coupons after casting ballots.

But when an Associated Press reporter went back and made a door-to-door check on some of the people shown on the tape, they refused to talk.

"I ain't got nothing to say," one man said before slamming his door.

"I don't know nothing," said a woman at another home.

It's a federal offense punishable by up to two years in prison to "knowingly and willingly pay, offer to pay or accept payment for registering or for voting."

Barklage said the GOP is not asserting that the Democrats made any organized effort to spread the word about the coupons prior to Election Day. Dispensing rewards for voting is not a new practice, he said.

“Lots of people are charming, but if you add five or six more attributes and a royal position, that's myth material. Then add the tragedy, and it is instant canonization.”

Darlane Pictet,

a psychotherapist and writer in London who knew Diana.

Scoping out your Teaching Assistants

Friday's discussion section meeting left me thinking, "How bizarre, how bizarre." I arrived two minutes late, and slid into the nearest chair. From the first, I could tell that something was wrong with the teaching assistant. She seemed to be in a very dark mood, as though someone had just told her that her students were plotting to kill her.

After the perfunctory roll call, she began speaking to the chalkboard about some rudimentary facts, writing symbols, and occasionally turning around to demand that we speak of their significance. At one point, she picked a name at random from the roll sheet and ordered the poor subject of her demonic intensity to continue discussion of the topic. When he replied that he wasn't exactly able to do so, she grew irate: "We're not here to have fun," she admonished, "If you can't follow along, maybe you shouldn't be here." And you thought your TA was mean.

About 25 students sat stunned as she unrelentingly grilled the student for not understanding her incoherent mumbling. By the end of her tirade, she had overwhelmed herself with her own bile, threw down the chalk and declared that class was over. We'd been there for all of 15 minutes.

Brian Sutherland

It would be tempting to use this minor incident as a launching point into a column about why all TAs should go to hell. I don't want to do that. Just as there are bad TAs, there are also wonderful TAs. Some are more informative and entertaining than the professors themselves.

But, as it should be, TAs are usually not as adept at conveying information as are professors, who have years of experience in their area. Walking into a classroom governed by a TA is like playing roulette: You're not really sure where the "quality ball" is going to land.

The term "teaching assistant" is not always appropriate. In many instances the TA is the only instructor with whom the student will have contact. They would not be assistants, then, but substitute teachers, filling in for professors whose precious time cannot be squandered on a small group of unseasoned undergrads.

Although there is surely room for improvement in graduate student teaching, students at the UI largely get what they pay for. That is to say, at a relatively cheap public university, one must expect that teaching assistants will be employed to shoulder some of the burden of educating undergraduates. If you would like to attend a school where it is guaranteed that classes will be limited to 30 persons and instructed only by Ph.D.-holding professors, expect to pay upward of $20,000 for that privilege.

A large research institution such as the UI attracts some of the best professors, as well as the best graduate students, but their number is small compared to the number of undergraduates. A student at the UI must fight for scarce resources, that resource being the best possible instruction.

As usual, in this fight the better equipped have the best shot at getting their way. For example, those qualified can take honors sections in their respective fields, which are almost always better than their not-so-designated counterparts.

This aside, any student can research which classes are better than others (as opposed to which classes are easier than others) and seek those out. When confronted with a poor instructor, drop the class and find another one. The younger you are, the more latitude you have to make these decisions. Older students may have major requirements which must be satisfied, and sometimes there is nowhere to turn. But if you start early enough in the semester, you should be able to side-step professors and TAs who aren't up to par.

Your college days are limited. The clock is ticking and your dollars are being spent. Don't waste your time and money on classes that don't deserve them, when there are so many great classes (and TAs) out there who are worth every penny.

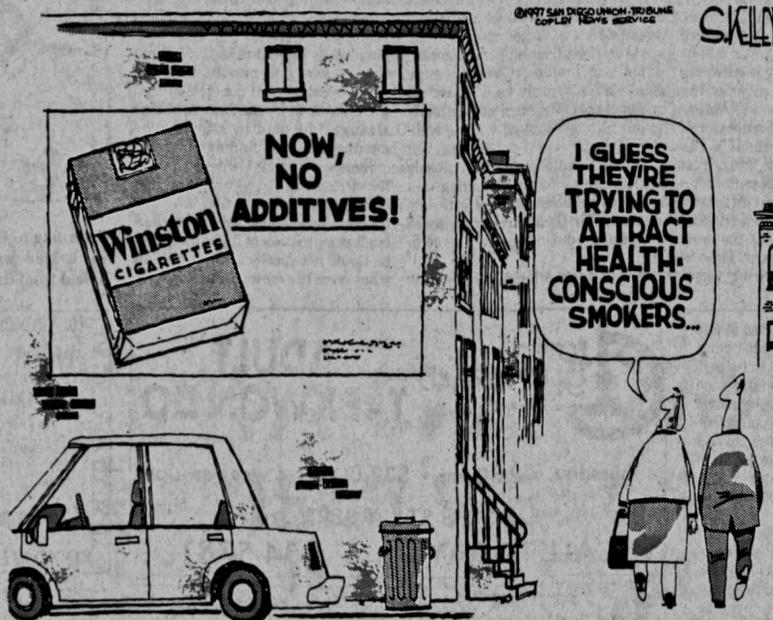

As for last Friday's discussion section meeting, I can tell you that it wasn't worth my time, and that particular TA will never see me again. I've got better things to do.

Mental illness isn't a laughing matter

Just like a ceiling fan in a wind tunnel, Wesley Willis is powerful, too much, and then some — to quote his press from American Recordings.

Not only that, Willis, playing Gabe's Oasis tonight, is mentally ill with chronic schizophrenia. And his fans love him for it.

Willis' fans and record label celebrate that his music writing — including such gems as "Ply the Donkey with a Whip," "The Chicken-Cow" and "Suck a Horse's Ass" — is therapeutic. During concerts Willis is famed for towering over the screaming throngs and blurring out anything that springs to mind, such as "Rock over London, rock on Chicago — Pontiac, we build excitement."

Even though Willis plays no instrument and only shouts out scarcely comprehensible lyrics, he has been heralded a genius, since, as American records claims, "insanity and brilliance often go hand-in-hand."

But music fans are attracted to Willis' shows and CDs for neither reasons of brilliance nor interests of the therapeutic nature of music. Wesley Willis is out there for a patronizing guffaw. In the name of "rocking," a sideshow of mental illness is deemed acceptable.

Willis' disease is the show. The incoherent stream of consciousness ranting, the random obscene outbursts — all-natural rock n' roll. Eat your heart out, ska bands!

Willis' disease is the show. The incoherent stream of consciousness ranting, the random obscene outbursts — all-natural rock n' roll.

In a recent California interview, Willis is questioned about his song, "Rock and Roll McDonald's," in which he blasts, "McDonald's hamburgers are the worst! They are just like Dr. Frankenburger. At least I'm gonna do it like f—ing Dr. Know. I'm gonna keep busy like Dr. Kuh-No."

Wesley Willis is not alone in finding appeal as a mentally ill musician. David Helfgott of "Shine" fame is packing auditoriums throughout the country playing less than perfect performances of "The Flight of the Bumblebee" and the Rach Four. The music is an afterthought as audiences scrutinize Helfgott's quirky babbling and facial expressions as he races across the keyboard. His on-stage struggling with mental illness is the centerpiece.

This is not to say that Willis or Helfgott shouldn't have the opportunity to take the stage. Both are sincerely making music and money, and they profess happiness about their projects. It's only the sincerity of the promoters and fans that is in question.

As a note to those who stop in Gabe's tonight — if Wesley Willis trips your trigger, check out the blind singer Ray Charles. It's sure funny how he bobs his head around. Or the drummer from Def Leppard — he only has one arm!

In any case, audiences have the responsibility to themselves to admit they are peeking in the Bearded Lady tent on the Barnum & Bailey midway. At least on the circus grounds, there's no pretense of viewing l'arte. The Willis show is not about the opportunity to see truly "honest" music being made; it's about having the chance to stare and laugh at someone strange.

See how the conservatives run!

This is an astonishing place, this thing called America. Especially its politics, or at least what passes for politics these days. It's all pretty much on the level of "See Dick run," "See Spot jump" — particularly in conservative politics.

Conservatives pride themselves on their practical expertise in governing — not for them any of this wimpy, touchy-feely type of leadership that liberals shamelessly use to siphon away women's votes. The conservative mantra goes, more or less, elect them and they'll run the country like a business. This could prove to be interesting to watch, if nothing else. During the conservative heyday in the '80s, running a big successful big business usually meant throwing 30 percent of the work force out on the street and then pilfering the pension fund (quite legally, under laws passed during the Reagan administration).

All of which, not surprisingly, tended to leave the workers jobless and pensionless, the corporations lean and mean, and the conservatives beaming like a baby who's just had his diaper changed. The equivalent on the federal level, I suppose, would be to axe most of the government workers not involved with the Department of Defense and ship the Social Security trust fund to numbered accounts in the Grand Caymans. I'm not sure how the voters would take to it, but the Dow would probably leap 200 points or so.

Conservatives also love to yak on and on about the failure of the liberal programs from LBJ's so-called Great Society. I sometimes think they love it better than sex, given the amount of time and energy they put into it. (Of course, when I try to think about conservatives and sex, my mind always goes completely blank — it must be a failure of imagination or something.)

What conservatives always neglect to mention is that during the lifespan of most of the liberal programs, the 24-year period from '69 through '92, conservative Republicans controlled the White House, for the vast majority of the time (20 years or 83 percent); they were in charge of administering those programs. Which brings up an interesting question: If conservatives are so damned good at running things, how come the liberal programs failed on their watch?

The first thought that comes to mind is that the conservatives scuttled the programs on purpose so they could point to the failure of the liberal agenda. Given that conservatives had utterly no interest in seeing these programs succeed, having them in charge was a bit like Salmon Rushdie having the Ayatollah as his literary agent.

The second thought that comes to mind is that conservatives are not so good at running things. I don't know why they would be, actually — they're only human, and humans have proven themselves to be remarkably inept at running things. Neither the Pentagon nor the defense industry seem to be particularly well-run, and they've got more conservatives per square millimeter than many states have square millimeters. In fact, the conservatives over in military-industrial land seem to practice what the conservatives are always accusing the liberals of preaching: throwing money at problems — they even throw money at things that aren't problems, which is why the military has a nice collection of platinum toilets and diamond-encrusted hammers.

But you won't find conservatives complaining about the failure of Defense programs. No, they'd much rather bash affirmative action, to pick one of their favorites. I'd have a whole lot easier time trusting the conservatives on eliminating racial preferences in hiring and college admissions if they'd extend their self-ballyhooed sense of color-blindness to crime. If, for instance, they demanded, using the same energy, moral indignation and decibel level with which they bash affirmative action, that the police stop preferring blacks as criminal suspects.

Of course, it could be that the liberal programs just weren't thought out very well and they were doomed to fail. To borrow from an old joke, a horse, designed by a liberal we call a camel. It doesn't do horsy things very well. On the other hand, a horse designed by a conservative we call an Abrams tank. It also doesn't do horsy things very well, at a cost of $100 million per horsepower. Around my household we call that real thoroughbred money.

But if nothing else, the liberal programs were an attempt to redress some of the many wrongs perpetuated by America throughout its history. Eliminating the programs may help the conservatives' sense of self-satisfaction in downsizing government, but it does diddly to eliminate the effect of the wrongs. Apparently the conservatives can live with this. No surprise, I guess; they've lived with it all through the history of this country.

Like I said, this is an astonishing place, this thing called America.

HEBRON, West Bank — A funded project to renovate a street for Palestinian traffic in Hebron became the focus of violent confrontation Tuesday, a week before Secretary of State Madeleine Albright arrives in the region.

Jewish settlers threw stones at Palestinian workers renovating Shuhada Street, a main downtown thoroughfare that passes by settler enclaves in this West Bank town. They fired pellet guns, smashing the window of a building.

Renovating the road, which had been demanded by Palestinian workers, would “endanger our lives and allow for masses of troublemakers to come,” settler leader Nasser Arnou said. “We need to prevent this for peace and security in Hebron.”

CHACALTE, Guatemala — When the armed men came, 9-year-old Roberto Sanchez hid with his sister under their bed. His mother was shot dead, apparently shielding the children with her body.

He fled while flames destroyed their house, killing his little sister. It is the sort of story that has become routine as Guatemala pieces together the bloody history of a three-decade civil war that ended in December. But here, survivors say, it was not the army blamed the butchery.

It was the rebels. A new project to exhume mass graves at Chacalte is the first project into guerrilla war crimes since forensic anthropologists five years ago started digging up the secret graves left over from the war.

“This was a dirty war,” said Sanchez, who on his way to adulthood learned much about the rebel from older villagers over the years. Survivors say at least 120 people were killed in the attack on Chacalte in June 1982 at the height of the war.

It is a bitter lesson for some human rights activists accustomed to blaming the army alone for the war that claimed an estimated 140,000 lives.

Controversy continues over Hebron road construction

■ Palestinian workers were stoned by Jewish settlers on a Hebron road project.

HEBRON, West Bank — A U.S.-funded project to renovate a street for Palestinian traffic in Hebron became the focus of violent confrontation Tuesday, a week before Secretary of State Madeleine Albright arrives in the region.

Jewish settlers threw stones at Palestinian workers renovating Shuhada Street, a main downtown thoroughfare that passes by two settler enclaves in this West Bank town. They fired pellet guns, smashing the window of a bulldozer.

Renovating the road, which had been demanded by Palestinians, would "endanger our lives and allow for masses of troublemakers to come," settler leader Noam Arnon said. "We need to prevent this for peace and security in Hebron."

Israeli police arrested the project manager, David Muirhead of Sherman, Conn., and two Palestinian employees for refusing to cooperate with them. Muirhead accused police of failing to stop the attack.

"I was arrested for holding up the police in arresting the driver," said Muirhead, who was released on bond with the other two and ordered to appear in court Wednesday.

The Israeli army closed Shuhada Street to Arab traffic after a Jewish settler killed 29 Muslim worshippers in a Hebron mosque in February 1994.

The street was partially reopened after Israel withdrew troops from most of Hebron last January. The Palestinians demanded the street be fully opened, and as part of the withdrawal agreement, the United States pledged $1 million to fix up the street, which is in the Israeli-controlled area of Hebron.

Muirhead said he was trying to make substantial progress on the $1 million project, which is one-third complete, before Albright arrives in the region on Sept. 10.

The State Department said Tuesday that American mediator Dennis Ross would help set up Albright's visit to the Middle East during meetings this week with Israeli and Palestinian negotiators.

Department spokesperson James Foley declined to list the issues Ross would discuss when he meets separately with each delegation in Washington.

Albright hopes to restart Israeli-Palestinian peace talks, which broke off six months ago in part over Palestinian charges that Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu is evading peace accord obligations.

The Palestinians — who fully or partly control almost a third of the West Bank — say they expect Israel to carry out a further troop pull-back in the territory by Sunday, which they say is the deadline implicit in past accords.

Netanyahu has said Israel would not withdraw unless Palestinians arrest Islamic militants in Hamas, the group blamed for a July 30 bombing that killed 17 people at a Jerusalem market.

Netanyahu adviser David Bar-Illan said Israel demands that Arafat arrest 150 militants, including Hamas leaders Mohi a-din Sharif and Mohammed Def.

Netanyahu's maneuvering room may be narrowing, too: Right-wing lawmaker Michael Kleiner said Tuesday that hard-line legislators warned the prime minister in a secret meeting two weeks ago that they would topple his government if he turned over any more West Bank land.

Kleiner said 10 members of his parliament lobby, known as the Eretz Israel Front, pledged to vote against Netanyahu in such a case — enough to bring down his coalition, which controls 66 of 120 Knesset seats.

Israel's Channel 2 TV reported that Israel was offering a deal whereby it would considerably slow down settlement building in exchange for the Palestinians agreeing to forego the further troop pullout and immediately begin talks on a final peace settlement.

The offer would be discussed in Washington on Wednesday by an Israeli delegation, it said. Bar-Illan could not confirm the report.

Guatemala examines atrocities same way — but if this massacre was done by the guerrillas, they should take responsibility for it," said Rosalina Tuyuc, a human rights campaigner.

Survivors blame the Guerrilla Army of the Poor for the massacre. Most say it apparently was retaliation for the community's collaboration with the military's armed civilian patrols, which later earned international condemnation for their human rights abuses.

Since a peace treaty in December, the Army of the Poor has been transforming itself into a political party.

Arnoldo Noriega, spokesperson for the former rebels, denied that his group massacred civilians at Chacalte. He said the rebels got into a shootout with civilian patrols. But the forensic evidence tells a different story.

Since mid-August, a team sponsored by the Roman Catholic archbishop's human rights office has been digging in what was once the heart of the village. In two weeks, the team has uncovered 53 bodies in seven mass graves.

"Here we've found everything. Men, women and children killed by bullets, machetes and burned," said Mariana Valdizon, a member of the forensics team.

The survivors dispersed after the massacre, but some have come back since Chacalte was resettled six years ago. They often stop by the site to help the team dig and tell of their memories of the massacre.

Bills' Smith is convicted of DUI

VIRGINIA BEACH, Va. (AP) — A former NFL player convicted of drunken driving Tuesday was found asleep in his car after a star defensive end failed a sobriety test. Smith received a 30-day suspension, was fined $250 and had his license suspended for one year. He appealed the traffic court conviction, with trial set for Oct. 2. He reportedly played for the Bills on Sunday. New York NFL players in alcohol-related incidents are typically one-half of one game, with a maximum of $20,000.

Because Smith was suspended in 1988 after violating the NFL's policy, he could face a stiffer fine, could be suspended, but that is not what Smith did not have any problems. NFL spokesman Greg Aiello said he is reviewing the matter, and commissioner would decide Smith's punishment. The Bills said the team would not coach Marv Levy and general manager spoke with Smith, last season's MVP player of the year. Officer A.M. Fletcher testified that he found Smith at the wheel of his car in a field with the engine running shortly after 6 p.m. She said Smith smelled of alcohol and she had to tell him to get out of the car. "He just kept saying, 'I want to talk to you,'" Fletcher said. After Smith got out of the car, Fletcher said he was unable to stand on one leg and his balance. Smith refused to take a breathalyzer test. The trial came two days after Smith's six-year contract worth $28.2 million was the highest-paid player in Bills history.

Bills' Smith is convicted of DUI

VIRGINIA BEACH, Va. (AP) — Bruce Smith was convicted of drunken driving Tuesday after a police officer found him asleep in his Mercedes and the star defensive end failed a sobriety test.

Smith received a 30-day suspended jail sentence, was fined $250 and had his license suspended for one year.

He appealed the traffic court conviction to Circuit Court, with trial set for Oct. 23.

He remains eligible to play for the Buffalo Bills on Sunday against the New York Jets.

NFL players convicted in alcohol-related violations are subject to fines — typically one-half of one game check with a maximum of $20,000.

Because Smith was suspended for four games in 1988 after violating the NFL's substance abuse policy, he could face a stiffer fine. Technically, he could be suspended, but that is not likely because Smith did not have any problems for eight years.

NFL spokesman Greg Aiello said the league is reviewing the matter, and commissioner Paul Tagliabue would decide Smith's punishment, if any.

The Bills said the team would not comment until coach Marv Levy and general manager John Butler spoke with Smith, last season's NFL defensive player of the year.

Officer A.M. Fletcher testified that she had a difficult time waking Smith, who was slumped over the steering wheel of his car in a traffic lane with the engine running shortly after 6 a.m. on July 27.

She said Smith smelled of alcohol, his speech was slurred and she had to tell him several times to get out of the car.

"He just kept saying, 'I want to go home,'" Fletcher said.

After Smith got out of the car, Fletcher said, the player was unable to stand on one leg without losing his balance. Smith refused to take a breath test.

The trial came two days after Smith signed a six-year contract worth $28.2 million, making him the highest-paid player in Bills history.

The Daily Iowan

Hayden Fry has no idea what his next opponent will offer, so he's preparing his team for everything.

The Iowa football coach feels like he's searching for a light switch in the dark as he prepares for Saturday's season opener at home against Northern Iowa. The Panthers feature a new coach, Mike Dunbar, with different schemes — a combination that deeply concerns Fry.

"We keep a book on all the coaches, but we can't even get our finger on (UNI's) people," Fry said at his press conference Tuesday. "We're going into this completely blind."

Dunbar took over the UNI job after Terry Allen left the school to become the head coach at Kansas. Allen set a high standard of excellence, as UNI has posted the second-highest Division I-AA winning percentage over the last five years.

In six years as Central Washington's head coach, Dunbar compiled a sparkling 54-9-1 record. He then moved to Toledo, where he served as offensive coordinator and assistant head coach.

Dunbar is one of five new head coaches the Hawkeyes will face this season. Fry, now in his 19th season at Iowa, is not thrilled about that statistic.

"I hate it," Fry said. "It's extremely difficult (to prepare), particularly with UNI. I can't find anything good about the game, other than we're playing at Kinnick Stadium."

The game will be played on Iowa's home field, but that doesn't necessarily mean it will be home-sweet-home. A new playing surface was installed at Kinnick during the offseason, and the Hawkeyes have yet to practice on it.

Fry said he hopes to get his team on the new grass Thursday, "just to check the traction."

Iowa has at least one significant personnel change in its depth chart. Junior Jeff Kramer, of Weatherford, Texas, will start at right defensive end. At the Hawkeyes' media day in mid-August, Tariq Peterson was listed No. 1 at that position.

Kramer, who transferred from Notre Dame after his sophomore season, was previously the team's No. 2 left end.

"I feel very fortunate to be able to come to a program like this," Kramer said. "Just being here in this atmosphere has changed my attitude on life."

Fry likes the enthusiasm Kramer brings to the Hawkeyes, who finished 9-3 last year and won the Alamo Bowl. "Kramer has that extra heartbeat," Fry said. "He's redheaded and has a temperament to go with it. He's emotional and a free spirit."

Junior Kerry Lessard returns this year to help Iowa defend its Big Ten championship.

Reloading season

The 1997 Iowa field hockey team doesn't have to rebuild, but the Hawkeyes have plenty of holes to fill.

By Tony Wirt
The Daily Iowan

Change is the key word for the Hawkeye field hockey team this fall.

The lineup will change drastically in places, with five seniors gone from last year. Another thing the team is looking to change is the way the year ends.

The Hawkeyes had a stellar regular season, going 18-1 with a 10-0 record in the Big Ten. But the postseason wasn't as kind, as the Hawkeyes closed with two very disappointing games for coach Beth Beglin's squad.

Iowa lost to Penn State in the finals of the Big Ten tournament then lost the first game of the NCAA tournament after blowing a two-goal lead with 10 minutes left to Princeton.

Although change will be sweeping through the program, one thing that will remain the same is the goals of the team.

"Our goals don't ever change," Beglin said. "It doesn't matter how many graduate, how many we have coming back and what kind of incoming freshman we have. Our goals are always a team GPA of 3.0 or better, a Big Ten title, a Big Ten tournament championship, a spot in the NCAA tournament and a Final Four berth. That's kind of the standard of expectation here at Iowa."

For the Hawkeyes to accomplish their goals, they are going to have to do it with youth. Only two seniors remain on the squad.

Gone is Big Ten MVP and first-team all-American Kristen Holmes, along with all-Americans Mary Casabian, Diane DeMiro and Emily Smith.

The backfield was hit especially hard by graduation, and as a result, there are only two years of experience on defense.

"We have a very young team in terms of age and a very young team in terms of experience," Beglin said. "We graduated five outstanding seniors and have a lot of people stepping into positions for the first time."

"While they are gaining experience, there are going to be times that they are going to get their heads handed to them. You know it's going to take a while for them to really understand what we're trying to do, and they're going to take their lumps early. You learn by getting pounded."

Although the defensive unit will be young, it will have a rock behind it in all-American goalkeeper Lisa Cellucci.

IOWA SOCCER

Hawkeyes remain unbeaten

By Becky Gruhn
The Daily Iowan

If the DePaul soccer team learned anything for future reference from Tuesday's game against Iowa, it was probably not to make Hawkeye forward Jenna Sorensen mad.

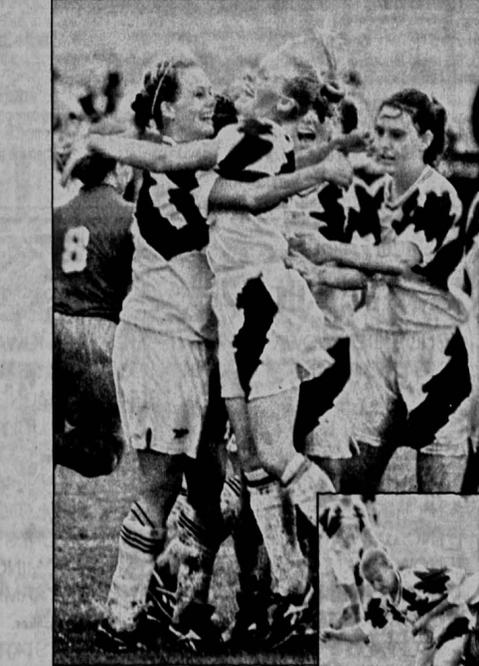

Sorensen connected on a pass from Julia Meyer to score the game's only goal at the 45:48 mark and put Iowa on top, 1-0.

But the score actually marked the second time a shot of her's went past the goalie. The first didn't count because of an offside call.

"I was mad because I got that goal in the first half and then they took it away from me," the Iowa senior said. "So I wanted to come out right away in the second half and get another one."

It took merely 48 seconds after the halftime break for Sorensen to fire the winning shot into the goal.

"I kind of know how Julia (Meyer) serves it, and she usually has a really nice serve right into the center,"

with Beth Oldenburg

Iowa forward Beth Oldenburg is a freshman standout on the first-year UI women's soccer team. Oldenburg was a first-team all-State selection and conference and region player of the year in 1997 at Hickory High School in Conover, N.C. Oldenburg is already an Iowa starter with a promising future ahead in the Hawkeye soccer program. This week DI reporter Becky Gruhn talked with her.

DI: What made you decide to take a chance and come to Iowa when it is only a first-year program?

BO: I came to Iowa because I really wanted to play in the Big Ten conference and be a Big Ten athlete. When I visited the campus, I thought the campus was beautiful. I knew Coach (Stephanie) Gabbert was a good coach and that I'd be in good hands here.

DI: Did you turn down other offers to come here?

BO: Yes. I turned down Marquette, NC-Charlotte, and a bunch of other local schools.

DI: What has been your biggest soccer-related thrill?

BO: I played for a semi-pro team, the Carolina Speed, this past year. We made it to the playoffs and lost to Atlanta. It was such a tremendous experience being able to play on that team.

DI: What was one of the highlights of playing in that league?

BO: Probably the biggest thrill was the fact that I was only 18 and I was playing with people a lot older than me. Most people were close to age 30. Playing in front of Atlanta's huge crowd was also a terrific feeling.

Buckeyes' Pearson fights George's shadow

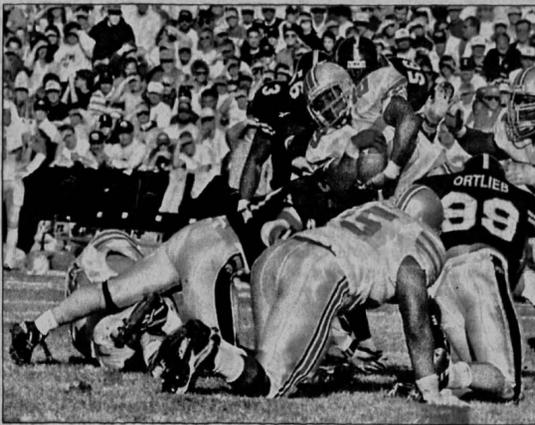

■ Ohio State running back Pepe Pearson is sick and tired of being told he isn't as good as former teammate Eddie George.

By Chris Snider
The Daily Iowan

Don't look at Pepe Pearson's smile — so kind and auspicious, so full of deception. Look instead into his eyes. And there you will see his rage. Pearson, a senior running back on the defending Rose Bowl champion Ohio State Buckeyes, is angry that no matter what he does he can't seem to get out of the shadow of former Buckeye running back Eddie George. He's angry that all of the preseason Heisman hype has passed him by. He's angry that he has had to listen to people tell him he is too small and too weak to make it as a football player in the Big Ten.

The Daily Iowan's
BIG TEN CONFERENCE
PREVIEW '97
Part three of a five-part series featuring the Big Ten's top players

But he's happy that football season has finally arrived and he can put all of those notions to rest. "I get tired of people saying negative things about me when I know they shouldn't," said Pearson, who can go from grin to game face as fast as he can change direction on a football field.

Julie Bill/The Daily Iowan

Ohio State running back Pepe Pearson finds himself in a mix of Iowa defenders during the Buckeyes game against the Hawkeyes last year.

"That's the type of thing that is going to motivate me — me feeling like I don't get respect. When big games come, I'm going to try to perform my best." Pearson carried the ball 14 times for 71 yards in the Buckeyes season-opener, a sloppy victory over Wyoming on August 28. Last season, he rushed for 1,443 yards, one yard more than George rushed for in his junior campaign. All George did was go on the win the Heisman trophy as a senior, as well as every other major award a running back can win. Both players played only sparingly prior to their junior seasons, and both players entered their senior campaigns as Heisman longshots.

But the similarities seem to stop there. At 6-3, 230 pounds, George is a prototype running back — big, fast and strong. He was drafted by the then-Houston Oilers of the National Football League and went on to take 1996 NFL Rookie of the Year honors. At 5-10, 206 pounds, Pearson is more of a Barry Sanders-type back. He has been clocked at 4.4 in the 40-yard dash, the fastest time ever by a Buckeye back. And although he has been criticized for not running between the hash marks, Pearson has shown that he is not afraid to run right up the gut of a defense. Yet, the Euclid, Ohio, native doesn't feel he has been given the respect he deserves. He said he has been told he is not big enough to run inside and is not durable enough to play in the Big Ten conference.

Ohio State coach John Cooper, who agrees that Pearson may not get the respect he deserves on the national level, said his star tailback has been a big-game player in the past. Cooper also put to rest the notion that Pearson is afraid to run the ball up the middle.

"He ran up the middle in the Rose Bowl," Cooper said. "We had the ball at our own two-yard line and he popped a 60-yard run, right up the middle."

Pearson is currently 11th on the all-time Ohio State rushing list. Another season like last year will boost him to third, behind two-time Heisman winner Archie Griffin and George. A 1,600-yard season would move Pearson past George.

So why isn't Pearson given the respect that fellow Big Ten running backs Ron Dayne of Wisconsin and Curtis Enis of Penn State are? That's a mystery to Pearson.

"I think I'm up in that group," he said. "I'm just looking forward to this season so I can prove to everybody that I belong to be rated that high."

Pearson said that lack of respect has motivated him to work harder in the offseason. It motivates him in practice and it will motivate him on game days.

"There are certain times in the game, certain opportunities you take advantage of," Pearson said. "There'll be times when I can release all that motivation and frustration, all that energy built up inside."

FRY/Reiners to see action against Panthers

On offense, Fry said backup quarterback Randy Reiners will play at some point Saturday, no matter how close the game is. Reiners, a sophomore from Fort Dodge, has yet to take a snap in an Iowa uniform.

"You're going to see Reiners regardless," Fry said. "It's important we get him in there."

Tight ends Chris Knipper and Jed Dull are both listed in the No. 1 spot. Fry said tight ends coach Mark Hendrickson will likely go with Knipper as Saturday's starter, because of his experience.

The Hawkeyes tossed around the idea of moving Knipper to left tackle after last season, but the Dyersville native told coaches he wanted to stay put. Sophomore Chad Deal is currently the team's top left tackle.

"I feel very good at tight end," said Knipper, an honorable mention all-Big Ten selection last year. "I'm improving over time, but Dull's a good player."

Fry is still unsure about his team's punting and long-range kicking games entering the UNI game. He said the punters "are all inconsistent" and the long-range kicking competition is "nip-and-tuck."

Iowa defeated the Panthers, 34-13, in the teams' last meeting, in 1995.

FIELD HOCKEY/ New faces, same attitude who already has one shutout to her credit this season, a 4-0 blanking of Miami of Ohio Monday.

Beglin knows she is going to have to be patient with her inexperienced team, and she is not overly concerned with how they play at the beginning of the season, but she is focused on the pot of gold at the end of the rainbow.

"The most important thing about this team is that we want to be playing our best when it counts the most, and that's obviously the Big Ten tournament," Beglin said.

One of the biggest hurdles Iowa is going to have to overcome is not a lack of experience, but a lack of depth. This is a small squad, with only 15 players on the roster compared to the 21 that donned the black and gold last year.

With that amount of people, conditioning becomes paramount, as many players will be required to play the full 70 minutes.

The injury bug has already taken its toll on the Hawkeyes, taking away all-American forward Quan Nim, who suffered a torn anterior cruciate ligament toward the end of preseason practice. Nim may not require surgery, however, and may be able to return to the team this season with the aid of a brace.

With or without Nim, the Big Ten race is sure to be a tight one with Penn State leading the way.

But despite all the changes happening with the Hawkeyes this season, coach Beglin stopped short of calling this a rebuilding year.

"We're not nearly as deep and not nearly as experienced as past teams, and that's a fact," Beglin said. "We've been fortunate in past years to never have a rebuilding year. I don't want to say this is a rebuilding year, but if we've ever had one, this is it, in terms of the amount of experience we have on the field."

Davie relaxed for Irish opener

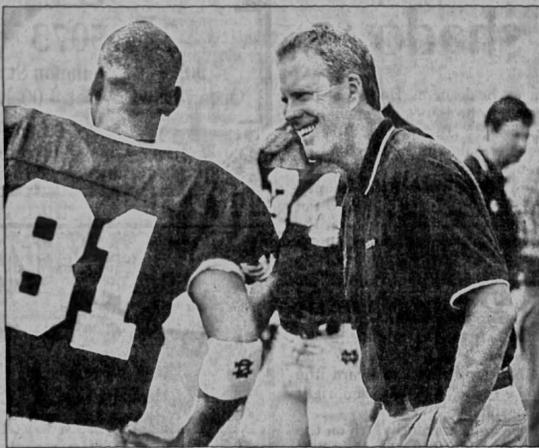

■ Notre Dame's new football coach, Ron Davie, prepares for his debut in South Bend Saturday against Georgia Tech.

By Nancy Armour
Associated Press

SOUTH BEND, Ind. — In just four days, Bob Davie finally gets to take the field for the first time as Notre Dame's head coach.

It's easily the biggest game of his career. There will be 80,000 fans in the stadium and millions more watching on television as the No. 11 Irish play host to Georgia Tech. Greatness is expected, nothing less.

So, Bob, are you nervous? "I don't mean to downplay it at all, but it's not a whole lot different than when I was the defensive coordinator," Davie said Tuesday. "It's all about preparation. You don't all of the sudden on Monday or Tuesday before the first game start worrying about winning. You concentrate on the things you can control, and that's great preparation."

Joe Raymond/Associated Press

Bob Davie, Notre Dame's new head football coach, smiles at a comment made by Lewis Dawson (81) on Aug. 13 in South Bend, Ind.

Come on, you're not even the least bit emotional? After all, you waited 20 years to be a head coach and you're starting at the pinnacle of college football.

"I really haven't thought a whole lot about the big picture," he said. "We've got too many immediate things to concentrate on and not worry about the big picture."

For as smooth as that sounds, Davie isn't just talk. The golf outings, the speeches, the dinners — all those things that go along with being a head coach are nice. But what he really likes about his new job is the game.

After 20 years as an assistant, he's the one making decisions. He's the one who decided to open up Notre Dame's offense. He's the one who decided to tinker with fall camp, moving practice times around each day to keep players from getting bored.

He won't be calling plays Saturday, leaving that to coordinators Jim Colletto (offense) and Greg Mattison (defense). But that's his decision, too.

"I have the veto power any time, and I won't be afraid to use it," he said. "But I also believe the person calling the game should have the opportunity to get into a rhythm, and I don't think it's fair to the coordinators of the players to break that."

Chang moves on, Seles falls at Open

By Steve Wilstein
Associated Press

NEW YORK — Michael Chang and Cedric Pioline shuffled as if they wore lead sneakers, the muscles in their legs pulsating with pain, their feet sore, shoulders slumped, mouths gulping for air.

And they still had a set to go. Chang, that most indefatigable of players, looked as if he had absolutely nothing left Tuesday, as if he most certainly would follow Pete Sampras and Monica Seles out of the U.S. Open on this hottest and muggiest of days.

There was no reasonable way Chang could come back, trailing 5-2 in the fourth set and down two sets to one. Yet, somehow, he did.

Chang dug into his incredible reservoir of desire, called upon those thick, sculpted legs to start moving, and won game after game — seven in a row and 11 of the last 12 — to produce a masterful 6-3, 0-6, 5-7, 7-5, 6-1 victory in 3 hours, 41 minutes to move to the quarterfinals.

A day after the top-seeded Sampras, the defending and four-time champion, succumbed to his own exhaustion, and right after Seles, the women's No. 2 seed, lost to Irina Spirlea, the second-seeded Chang barely escaped a similar early exit.

Chang's survival and Seles' surrender surpassed in drama, though perhaps not in historical significance, the ascension of 17-year-old Venus Williams to the semifinals of her first U.S. Open with a 7-5, 7-5 victory over Sandrine Testud.

Associated Press

Monica Seles wipes the sweat from her face Tuesday during her match against Irina Spirlea. Seles lost the match, while fellow American Michael Chang advanced.

The 6-foot-1 Williams grabbed a railing and hoisted herself up to kiss her mother after the match. Williams next meets Spirlea, who has made no secret of her dislike for the attention teens like Williams are getting before they win even one tournament.

No one, though, has paid his dues and gotten so much out of his body as Chang.

In 11 years at the U.S. Open, Chang had never lost a set 6-0. Rarely had he ever been pushed around from the baseline as he was against Pioline. And almost never did Chang hit the kind of sloppy, loose shots he hit in the second set when he committed 17 unforced errors to the Frenchman's three.

But Chang, as everyone in tennis knows, is most dangerous when he is down. At that moment, when he summons his last stores of energy and attacks, he can break an opponent's spirit. That's exactly what he did in this match against Pioline, a finalist at Wimbledon this year and at the 1993 U.S. Open.

"When you are out there, you try not to think about being tired," Chang said. "You try not to think about anything that has to do with the physical aspect of the game. I felt like I had a little bit more today than Cedric. He was getting tired, and a few more errors were starting to creep into his game. He was starting to shorten up the points. I could see he was cramping up, shaking his leg."

The unseeded Pioline served for the match at 5-3 in the fourth set, and Chang didn't give him a chance to put it away. At the end of a long rally on the first point, Chang tattooed the sideline with a winning forehand. Chang worked his way to two break points before Pioline struggled back to duce. Then, with another break point against him, the fatigued Frenchman sent a forehand long.

"I was too tired," Pioline said after his second consecutive five set loss. "That's why he's No. 2 in the world, and I'm not No. 2. I was cramping, and I think he saw I was tired and he tried to make me run."

Report: Earnhardt fell asleep at wheel

■ Neurological tests continue on NASCAR driver Dale Earnhardt following his accident last weekend at Darlington.

By Joe Macenda
Associated Press

MOORESVILLE, N.C. — The mystery surrounding Dale Earnhardt's health problems at the Southern 500 took a new twist Tuesday when a close aide said the driver twice nodded off at the wheel before the race.

The revelation by Don Hawk, president of Dale Earnhardt Inc., came as Earnhardt underwent more hospital tests to find out what happened at the start of Sunday's race in Darlington, S.C.

The results of those tests will determine whether NASCAR allows the 46-year-old driver to rejoin the Winston Cup circuit at its next race Saturday night in Richmond, Va.

"It's beyond Dale Earnhardt or whether he can race," said Kevin Triplett, a spokesman for the stock car racing sanctioning body. "We just want to make sure that he's OK."

Earnhardt's Chevrolet Monte Carlo slammed off the concrete retaining wall in both the first and second turns on the opening lap Sunday. He then failed to respond immediately to radio calls from car owner Richard Childress and also had difficulty finding the entrance to pit road.

It was a troubling sequence of events for a driver who has won a record-tying seven Winston Cup points titles and cultivated a cool, tough-guy persona, earning him the nickname of "The Intimidator."

That demeanor was the reason no one in his pit became concerned when Earnhardt first nodded off while sitting in his car waiting for the race to start.

"It's not unusual for Dale to doze off before a race or under red-flag conditions," said Hawk, who runs the Mooresville racing and marketing company owned by Earnhardt.

Team members became suspicious, though, when Earnhardt fell asleep a second time. But by then the drivers were being ordered to start their engines. So Earnhardt fired up the car and drove away with the rest of the field.

After Earnhardt wrecked, Childress repeatedly called him on the radio, trying to find out what happened and telling him to bring the car into the pits. Earnhardt didn't respond, said Hawk, who was standing near Childress and monitoring the radio frequency with his own headset.

Pirates 6, Indians 4
PITTSBURGH — Shawn Dunston, on his 19th win and also hit the third home run of the season to lead the Pirates past the Cleveland Indians 6-4 Tuesday night.
Dunston, acquired after the Pirates lost to the Indians in the first game of the season, hit a two-run home run in the second inning and a go-ahead three-run homer in the sixth — his fifth consecutive two-run homer — to lead the Pirates to a 6-4 victory over the Indians in their final game of the season before being traded Sunday night.
Both of Dunston's homers — his 10th of the season — came off Jared Wright, who was outpitched by Jose Silva (1-0) in a major league debut.
Phillies 5, Yankees 0
PHILADELPHIA — Mike Grace, who had a major-league win in 15 months last week, hit a three-run home run to lead the Philadelphia Phillies to a win over the New York Yankees 5-0 Tuesday night.
Grace (2-0) allowed a fourth-inning single to Derek Jeter — who was thrown out stealing eighth-inning single to Paul O'Neill, and a single to Charlie Hayes in the ninth.
The right-hander walked none and struck out only three batters in 6 1/3 innings. He pitched the minimum 27 batters, groundball outs.
Braves 5, Tigers 0
ATLANTA — Denny Neagle pitched a career-high 19th win and also hit the third home run of the season to lead the Atlanta Braves to a victory over the Detroit Tigers on Tuesday night.
Javy Lopez and Keith Lockhart also homered for the Braves, who knocked out Detroit starter Javy Lopez in the third for its 10th victory in 13 games as they attempt to fend off Florida in the NL East.
Expos 6, Red Sox 5
MONTREAL — Henry Rodriguez's second run of the game, a solo shot in the eighth, snapped a tie and sent the Montreal Expos to a 6-5 victory over the Boston Red Sox Tuesday night over the Boston Red Sox.
Rodriguez, who missed the previous night with a strained rib muscle, hit a two-out home run in the eighth to lead Montreal to a 6-5 victory over the Red Sox.
Reds 4, Royals 0
CINCINNATI — Dave Burba pitched five innings and Reggie Sanders doubled twice to lead the Cincinnati Reds to a 4-0 victory over the Kansas City Royals Tuesday night.
After Jose Posado (9-11) gave up a double to Mike Kelly and a walk to Eduardo Perez in the first, Sanders drove both runners in with a double to right-center.
Cubs 9, Twins 3
CHICAGO — Sammy Sosa hit a two-run home run and Tyler Houston drove in three runs Tuesday night to lead the Chicago Cubs to a victory over the Minnesota Twins.
Sosa hit his 32nd homer in the sixth inning.

DI: What do you think about the soccer team's performance?
BO: A positive mentality. They like to play physical and aggressive. I just try to keep the hard work going.
DI: What have you found the biggest transition from high school to college soccer?
BO: The biggest thing I've found is the quickness of play and the pace. The game is at a much faster pace and it is a lot more physical.
DI: How strong is soccer in the North Carolina area?

BASEBALL ROUNDUP

Pirates 6, Indians 4

PITTSBURGH — Shawon Dunston, out of contention all season with the Cubs, welcomed himself to the pennant race by homering twice in his Pittsburgh debut to lead the Pirates past the Cleveland Indians 6-4 Tuesday night.

Dunston, acquired after the Pirates lost two other shortstops to injury, hit a tying solo shot in the second inning and a go-ahead three-run homer in the sixth — his fifth consecutive two-hit game. He was 8-for-20 in his final four games for Chicago before being traded Sunday night.

Both of Dunston's homers — his 10th and 11th of the season — came off Jared Wright (5-3), who was outpitched by Jose Silva (1-0) in a matchup of rookie starters.

Phillies 5, Yankees 0

PHILADELPHIA — Mike Grace, who got his first major-league win in 15 months last week, pitched a three-hitter Tuesday night to lead the Philadelphia Phillies to a win over the New York Yankees.

Grace (2-0) allowed a fourth-inning single to Derek Jeter — who was thrown out stealing — an eighth-inning single to Paul O'Neill, and a leadoff single to Charlie Hayes in the ninth.

The night-hander walked none and recorded his only strikeout by fanning Tim Lincecum in the final out. Grace faced the minimum 27 batters, getting 15 groundball outs.

Braves 5, Tigers 0

ATLANTA — Denny Neagle pitched a four-hitter for his 19th win and also hit the third homer of his career, leading the Atlanta Braves to a victory over the Detroit Tigers Tuesday night.

Jay Lopez and Keith Lockhart also homered for Atlanta, which knocked out Detroit starter Greg Kettle in the third for its 10th victory in 13 games as they attempt to fend off Florida in the NL East.

Expos 6, Red Sox 5

MONTREAL — Henry Rodriguez's second home run of the game, a solo shot in the eighth inning, snapped a tie and sent the Montreal Expos to a win Tuesday night over the Boston Red Sox.

Rodriguez, who missed the previous 19 games with a strained rib muscle, hit a two-out homer, his 26th, off Mark Brandenburger (0-2).

Reds 4, Royals 0

CINCINNATI — Dave Burba pitched five scoreless innings and Reggie Sanders doubled in two runs as the Cincinnati Reds snapped a three-game losing streak by beating the Kansas City Royals Tuesday night.

After Jose Rosado (9-11) gave up a double to Mike Kelly and a walk to Eduardo Perez in the first, Sanders drove both runners in with a double to right-center.

Cubs 9, Twins 3

CHICAGO — Sammy Sosa hit a two-run homer and Tyler Houston drove in three runs Tuesday night to lead the Chicago Cubs to a victory over the Minnesota Twins.

Sosa hit his 32nd homer in the sixth for the Cubs, now 8-6 in interleague play. Houston hit an RBI single in the second, another in the third and a run-scoring RBI double in the fourth.

Mark Clark (11-7) improved to 3-0 since joining the Cubs on Aug. 11 in a six-player deal with the New York Mets. He gave up eight hits in his second complete game this season, walking none and striking out four.

Mets 8, Blue Jays 5

NEW YORK — Roger Clemens, starting at Shea Stadium for the first time since the Bill Buckner game in the 1986 World Series, was tagged for a season-high seven runs Tuesday night and the New York Mets beat Toronto.

Ray Ordonez hit his first homer of the season and drove in three runs as the Mets won their fourth in a row. Clemens (20-5), leading the majors in wins, dropped to 0-3 in interleague play as the Blue Jays lost their fifth straight game.

Jose Cruz Jr. homered twice and drove in three runs for Toronto.

Marlins 3, Orioles 2, 10 Innings

MIAMI — Edgar Renteria singled home the winning run with two outs in the 10th inning Tuesday night as the Florida Marlins handed Baltimore its fourth straight loss with a win over the Orioles.

Charles Johnson opened the 10th with a single against former Marlin Terry Mathews (3-4) and pinch-runner Gregg Zaun advanced on a sacrifice. Jeff Conine walked, and after both runners moved up on a groundout, Renteria singled to center on Mathews' first pitch.

Cardinals 6, White Sox 1

ST. LOUIS — Mark McGwire hit his fourth 500-foot home run of the year. Ron Gant homered twice and Andy Benes pitched seven shutout innings as the St. Louis Cardinals beat the Chicago White Sox Tuesday night.

McGwire's 4th home run, and 10th in 28 games with the Cardinals, was a 504-foot, two-run shot off the scoreboard in left-center off Jaime Navarro (9-13). The homer, which highlighted a four-run first inning, was the longest at Busch Stadium since the team began estimating distances in 1988.

McGwire hadn't started in two of the last three games due to a bruised shin caused by a foul ball off his leg. He now wears a protective guard.

Brewers 4, Astros 2

HOUSTON — Gerald Williams didn't take the easy way out of his hitting slump.

The Milwaukee outfielder hit Darryl Kile and Billy Wagner's best pitches for RBIs and helped the Milwaukee Brewers move up in the AL Central.

Williams, who entered the game with six hits in his last 49 at-bats, drove in the go-ahead run with a sacrifice fly in the ninth inning Tuesday night as the Brewers moved within 2 1/2 games of first-place Cleveland in the AL Central with a win over Houston.

Williams, who entered the game with six hits in his last 49 at-bats, drove in the go-ahead run with a sacrifice fly in the ninth inning Tuesday night as the Brewers moved within 2 1/2 games of first-place Cleveland in the AL Central with a win over Houston.

Sorensen said. "When I saw her with the ball I just looked and knew it was coming."

Despite sloppy field conditions caused by Tuesday morning's rain, Iowa out-shot DePaul 23-12. The Hawkeyes also drew six corner kicks while not allowing DePaul a single attempt.

"We're starting to see improvement in areas but it's hard to tell in games like this when the field is in bad shape," Iowa coach Stephanie Gabbert said. "That tends to interfere with style of play — especially the style we like to play. But our decision making is better and we're making decisions faster."

The 1-0 victory over DePaul marks Iowa's second win in as many tries. The Hawkeyes opened the inaugural season with a 3-2 victory over Northern Illinois on Saturday.

The winning start is exactly what Sorensen and the rest of the team hoped the newly-formed team could accomplish.

"We wanted to have two wins especially going into this weekend because it's a road trip and we will be going against good competition," Sorensen said. "One of our goals was to go into the road trip 2-0 and just to kind of make our mark and say 'we can play competitively against established programs.'"

DI: What do you think you bring to the soccer team when you step out on the field?

BO: A positive mentality. And I like to play physical and stay aggressive. I just try to keep the hard work going.

DI: What have you found to be the biggest transition from high school to college soccer?

BO: The biggest thing I've noticed is the quickness of play and the aggression. The game is at a much faster pace and it is a lot more physical.

DI: How strong is soccer in the North Carolina area?

BO: Everyone of course knows how successful soccer is at Chapel Hill. They've been NCAA champions for several years. When I first moved there the women's teams hadn't really developed yet, but right now soccer is growing very rapidly. It's developing into a very strong sport, not just there, but in the entire country.

DI: Why did you choose soccer as a young girl?

BO: I don't know. I started playing when I was about five years old and have played every year since. I learned to love the game. It's just something I know I want to continue for the rest of my life.

DiFranco to play Main Lounge

Web sites and an authoritative source say folk-rock-er Ani DiFranco will play at the UI Oct. 21.

By Mose Hayward
The Daily Iowan

Folk-rock-er Ani DiFranco is scheduled to play a concert in the Main Lounge of the Iowa Memorial Union.

The concert was announced on several Web sites last week, including "The Official What if No One's Watching Ani DiFranco Newsletter Web site." The sites pinpoint the concert to 8 p.m. on Oct. 21, and say to call 335-3041 for more information — the number for the University Box Office.

At this point, however, tickets are unavailable and no date has been given for their release.

The concert has not been officially announced by SCOPE Productions, but an anonymous, authoritative source within the UI confirmed the concert will take place.

DiFranco played a concert in Cedar Rapids on April 9 this year, showing off her powerful acoustic guitar playing and dynamic vocals. She considers herself to be a folk musician first, but with loud, rough playing and backing drums and bass, she stretches the persevering wail of the folk singer into the realm of punk rock.

DiFranco's lyrics are what mark her as a folk musician. She tells stories, struggles to understand them. Her approach is often both loudmouthed and introspective.

Ani DiFranco

DiFranco has gained popularity since she began playing in bars 15 years ago as a teen-ager. Her violent guitar treatment comes from her experiences in those bars, where she learned she had to fight distractions any way she could.

Her story from there is a remarkable one. At the age of 15 she was living alone in Buffalo, N.Y.; at 16 she graduated from her performance arts high school; and at the tender age of 20 she started her own music label, Righteous Babe Records.

Righteous Babe Records was formed to produce and help distribute her albums without any corporate pressures. DiFranco has recorded nine albums on the label.

However, DiFranco herself admits, these albums pale in comparison to her live shows. She seems to need a live audience in front of her to laugh and confide with.

"I refuse to accept the audience just being a passive, voyeuristic entity, and me getting up there and doing my schtick," DiFranco told the Washington Post. "I insist on implicating everyone."

Her latest work, Living in Clip, is a double-CD live album that compiles snatches of DiFranco's live performances from around the country.

Look for confirmation of the concert from SCOPE sometime this month. The Daily Iowan will provide ticket information as soon as it becomes available.

Willis brings unique rock-n-roll to I.C.

Admittedly bad lyrics, redundant melodies and a schizophrenic personality give Wesley Willis' music a distinct personality.

By Mose Hayward
The Daily Iowan

There's no one in the rock world like Wesley Willis.

The Chicago-based solo artist has written more than 5,000 songs and released over 40 albums under his loose contract with American Recordings. He will play at Gabe's, 330 E. Washington St., tonight at 9 with Randy Herman and the Sceptre of Benevolence and Naked Haselhoff.

Willis is nationally recognized — appearing on various MTV programs and "The Howard Stern Show" and giving a well-attended performance at the South by Southwest music conference.

However, all this attention is despite the fact Wesley Willis' music is not very aesthetically pleasing. On each of his songs, Willis' off-key singing is accompanied by the same keyboard melody — the "demo" button on his keyboard.

Part of Willis' fame is that he is promoted as a diagnosed chronic schizophrenic. Press releases tout Willis' health condition as "scattering, scatological rants, raps and metal-flaked supercharged diatribes," and his 6-foot-5-inch, 350-pound size. Willis' condition is said to be the result of some of the Chicago Housing Authority's most notoriously violent housing projects. He developed schizophrenia after an incident in which one of his mother's friends put a gun to his head and demanded money for cocaine.

His music career began when he met Dale Meiners, who fronted a hardcore punk band in Chicago. Willis went to some shows with Meiners, and gained an interest in being a rock-n-roll star. He purchased his keyboard and soon began touring and releasing albums, which featured both his solo work and performances with his backup band, the now-defunct Wesley Willis Fiasco.

Whether his career is an example of record company and media exploitation is debatable, but for Willis it has been therapeutic. Willis has been hospitalized less frequently since he began following his rock-n-roll dream.

Unlike many of his contemporaries, Willis' version of rock 'n' roll is uniquely his own. Most of Willis' songs are immediately grating, although there is something innately amusing, perhaps almost charming, about his lyrics.

Consider, from his album Mr. Magoos Goes to Jail Vol. 1: "Superman thought he was bad/He was messing with my girlfriend/I caught him in my room kissing her/(incomprehensible line about a rubber hose). Chorus: I whipped Superman's ass (repeated many times)."

Most songs end with a product plug by Willis, such as: "Shell/That's America's favorite gasoline," and Willis' catchphrase, "Rock over London, rock home Chicago."

An interview with Willis

The DI interviewed the solo rock artist by phone from a Kinko's copy store near his home in Chicago. What follows are excerpts from the brief interview:

DI: How would you describe your music?

Willis: I describe my music rock.

DI: You've written over 5,000 songs and released more than 40 albums. How did you accomplish this?

Willis: I make music. That's what I do. (...) I also draw.

DI: Do you draw your album covers?

Willis: Yeah.

DI: Where do you get the ideas for your songs?

Willis: I just think of them out of my head. (...) I just write them in sentences.

DI: What about "Rock over London, rock home Chicago?" That seems to be your theme. Where did that come from?

Willis: I got that from radio call XIT.

Unidentified Kinko's employee in background: You talk too long on the phone.

Willis: I talk too long on the phone?

employee: Yeah. (Incomprehensible.)

At this point, the interview with Willis was cut short.

Sweet Honey in The Rock

"Their name suggests a land so rich, honey pours from the stone. They speak to us with lush, perfect harmonies and powerful riveting lyrics of the wonder and strain of being Black women on this planet." - Essence Magazine
