DI: You were the first African-American Old Gold Singer. What was that experience like for you when you were a student here? Estes: I auditioned for the Old Gold Singers because I'd wanted to be in the University Choir and the choir director said my voice was not good enough. I think there were about 300 voices...He suggested that I try to audition for the Old Gold Singers. And I did that, and Old Gold director Gerald Lawson accepted me. He told me later that he went to the other students in the Old Gold Singers. He talked to them and he said 'I heard this student sing. I really like his group. But he's' - I think in those days we were called Negroes, I'm not sure, or black, I don't remember.

And the students all said, 'We don't care what color he is. As long as he can sing, we want him in the group.' And he accepted me, and I ended up being one of the main soloists.

DI: You created the Simon Estes Scholarship for music students here at Iowa. Why?

Estes: When I was a student here, I had no money. I worked all the time. I had a number of different jobs:

scrubbing floors, working at the Union, working at drugstores, cleaning dishes, working at Quad dorm, et cetera. I always thought that if I ever got in the position to be able to help other students I would love to do that. Therefore, I have three more scholarships, funds and foundations that I've established throughout the United States and in Europe to help students who need help financially with education needs and health needs. DI: Has Hancher Auditorium made Iowa City and the UI a noticeably different place in the last 25 years?

Estes: I definitely think so, because they've done a lot of operas and symphony performances there, and they've brought in a number of top artists to perform there, whether they be vocalsts or instrumentalists. It's a great auditorium and of course I knew President Hancher personally.

DI: How did knowing the real Hancher shape your perceptions of Hancher Auditorium?

Estes: I was very close to him and his wife because he enabled me to do a concert. When when I was a student

That evening, the Preservation Hall Jazz Band from New Orleans opened the new auditorium, but unfinished construction forced 400 of the 2,680 capacity crowd to sit on folding chairs.

On top of that, the curtain wench was broken, the backstage crew was short on flashlights and the plants in the lobby looked sick. That didn't quell the audience's enthusiasm. When members of the Jazz Band began parading up and down the aisles for "When the Saints Go Marching In," lines of audience members followed, dancing behind them. Later that week, on Sunday, Oct.

Diet pill combo pulled

After new evidence of heart damage, the popular diet drug combination was voluntarily recalled Monday.

> By Lauran Neergaard Associated Press

WASHINGTON - Two of the nation's most popular diet drugs were pulled off the market Monday after the government uncovered disturbing new evidence that they could seriously damage patients' hearts.

But Iowa City drug vendors say they will continue to hold the drugs in stock and leave it up to the buyers whether or not to purchase the products. The Food and Drug Administration urged millions of dieters to immediately stop taking Redux, also known as dexfenfluramine, and Pondimin, also known as fenfluramine. Pondimin is one-half of the wildly popular fen-phen diet combination; the other half, phentermine, appears safe when used by itself, the FDA said. But doctors said phentermine, the sole remaining prescription diet drug, has only mixed results - and they predicted a surge of patients dis-traught both at the possibility their hearts were damaged and at losing their treatments.

"We are anticipating lots of very desperate patients that need help," said Dr. John Foreyt, an obesity expert at the Baylor College of Medicine.

"Obesity does kill," said Dr. Richard Atkinson of the American Obesity Association, who said many Redux and Pondimin users will regain their weight.

The FDA asked Wyeth-Ayerst Labo-

Social work goes beyond classroom

Kate McCarron, a UI senior majoring in social work, said she wasn't aware of a social work major until entering college.

"I don't think it gets the publicity it deserves," said McCarron.

McCarron, who was a member of peer helpers and volunteered in nursing homes and a hospital in high school, said she knew she wanted to get into a "helping profession" at that time.

Students are finding the chance to help others by majoring in social work. But many have misconceptions of the careers associated with the major.

Weld gives up on nomination

■ Weld's long fight to be ambassador to Mexico ended Monday when he asked Clinton to withdraw his name.

> By Ron Fournier Associated Press

WASHINGTON - William F. Weld, the moderate Republican nominated by President Clinton to be U.S. ambassador to Mexico, abandoned his fight against conservative Sen. Jesse Helms today and told the White House to withdraw his nomination. Clinton agreed to do so.

In a White House news conference, the former Massachusetts governor said, "I asked President Clinton to withdraw my name .. so I can go back to New England, where no one has to approach the government on bended knee to ask it to do its duty."

He said he would have been nominated if a confirmation hearing had not been blocked by Helms — the conservative North Carolina senator he derisively called "that man."

He praised Clinton for fighting on his behalf. "The president has stood treetops tall on this entire next little while," he said matter," Weld said. Clinton did Perhaps positioning hi not appear with Weld, but "the man has a day job," he said.

Though the nomination was not made official until July 23, Clinton let it be known weeks earlier tap the popular Republican governor for the post. The nomination sparked an explosive debate in the Republican ranks, with moderates lining up behind Weld and conservatives siding with the prickly Helms. The White House's support of the nominee wavered from time to time, though Clinton's political aides immediately recognized the benefits of challenging Helms.

"To the extent that people look at Jesse Helms as the face of the Republican Party, I think that carries a certain amount of freight with it," Weld said.

Weld made his announcement in the White House briefing room, a setting normally used by presidents and their press secretaries not failed ambassadorial nomi-

He called Washington "a funny; town" and accused Helms of critithat he would cross party lines to cizing him "as though shot from

And he offered advice to Clinton's next nominee: "Stand up for your rights. If not, they'll run right over you."

Aides said today the president had no ready candidate to replace Weld. Gov. Bob Miller, a Democrat from Nevada, has been mentioned as a possibility, but aides note that the state's lieutenant governor, Lonnie Hammargren, is a Republican.

Weld said he was afraid Helms and conservative Republicans would attack other Clinton initiatives - such as "fast track" authority for trade agreements -

Cohen responded that it would be best to await the formal outcome of the Air Force investigation.

"I don't think we should ever rule out any aircraft participating in shows. It could happen to any other type of aircraft that we have as well. Let's wait and see what the facts show," Cohen said.

Mir crew cuts power, jerry-rigs computer following latest breakdown

MOSCOW (AP) - The fourth computer breakdown in two months left a darkened Mir drifting through space Monday, less than two weeks before a scheduled docking with a U.S. space shuttle.

The Russian-American crew kept essential functions operating and was in no danger, officials said. But the shutdown provided new fodder for critics who fear the Russian station is unsafe after 11

After a day of in-orbit tinkering, the Mission Control press service announced that everything should be back to normal on Mir within two days. The crew rummaged through the station's broken computers and found enough spare parts to assemble one functional system, which responded positively to tests late in the day.

Most of Mir's systems remained shut

As well as making life difficult on Mir, a computer failure would make docking with the shuttle Atlantis or any other spaceship "absolutely impossible," deputy Mission Control chief Viktor

Refinery fire continues to blaze as death toll rises to 34

Just who are you, anyway?

he first time I was assigned to write a "Who am I" paper, I was in sixth grade. I had a

'Who am I?" I had never tried to explain myself before. And I was supposed to write the essay and recite it with a self-portrait and my favorite song. When I was working on the assignment, all I could think about was how I didn't fit in. I was the tallest kid in my class, I had the huge, '80s plastic tortoise shell glasses and I owned only one pair of zipper-bottom Guess jeans. I felt different in every way. At 11 years old, I had discovered the underlying theme of Western civilization: alienation.

Unfortunately, the "Who am I" paper, sometimes disguised by professors and rhetoric TAs as the "biography" or "introductory speech," has since reoccurred every year of academic life. It is no longer the introspective journey that it was. Now it hits me with that busy work dread. They are supposed to make the teacher more like an interested student. Actually the assignment is merely a more "productive" version of the "What I did over summer vacation" essay.

And these papers aren't going to end when I graduate. I read in the October issue of the Utne Reader that the personal narrative is breaking into the corporate world. If and when I ever go assigned to do the "Who am I" song and dance as well. A professional storyteller named Richard Stone is working with companies in "guiding their workers towards a sense of camaraderie and deeper understanding" of each other's lives outside the office cubi-

Kati Phillips

His theory, which mirrors both my sixth grade humanities teacher and university professors, is if people tell personal stories explaining who they are, they can work together more effectively. He thinks it will establish a common ground and open communication.

He ultimately wants to bridge the gap between the chick in class with the nose ring and the guy in the frat hat, to unite the workers in the right cubicle with the left. The media has caught on to this - the alienated who am I storytelling kick - too, showering readers and watchers with news and videos saturated with the 'narrative. The '90s is the era of confession obsession.

If you can handle hearing one more time Princess Diana's name, she the most recent example. What could be more moving than a pretty, rich princess the realization of the traditional girlhood fantasy (not mine. I dreamt of being a Dallas Cowboy cheerleader and a librarian in the off season). She was a recovered bulimic - that targets one in four girls/women. She was depressed - "Prozac Nation" ring a bell? And she knew first hand the devastation of adultery and divorce. That's a ring off 50 percent of marriage-oriented couples. She is right up there in the trauma identification factor. She'd get an A for explaining herself.

I, like Stone, would like to think that the goal of confession media is to encourage conversations. A good storyteller is someone who inspires listeners to tell stories. In sixth grade, when I told my story, it only made people talk about me, not about similarities, differences or shared experiences themselves.

After watching an "Oprah" show, I have never started a conversation about my coping with date rape. When I turn off the television, I do it with a shake of the head and a, "Man, they had a hard life. I am glad I am not them," even if I am.

When the counselor at Emma Goldman tried to talk to me about what I would do if my HIV test came out positive, I said I'd write an exposé and sell my memoirs. I'd commodify my disease and maybe raise awareness along the way. She said I sounded, and was, healthy.

If reaction to confession on the screen or on the page is any example, confessions in the office or in the classroom are destined for failure. The cubicle bonding isn't going to go beyond favorite "Dilbert" or "Sylvia" cartoons. And the frat hat and nose ring aren't going absorb more than one is from Chicagothe-city and the other is from Chicago-the-'burbs.

I think it is more realistic for people to learn about each other by observing their actions in class interpret more about a person from how they enter and exit a room than I can in 500 words or 5 to 7 minutes of bullshit. And it puts people in an active role of participation if they have to listen and process what individuals say in class discussion and how that reflects personal experience. It is then that the stories are both heard and told.

"A lot of students think we're out to get them," said Iowa City Police Chief R.J. Winkelhake. "But two people who bump into each other on their way to class respond differently once they've had a few beers. We just want to keep the students safe."

If alcohol can be seen as a catalyst for trouble, it seems that those who provide the alcohol should be fined. The bars downtown often admit anyone with an ID, serving beer liberally without checking for a "legal" stamp. Why are the stuowners taking none of the heat? "It's the way the law is written." Chief Winklehake says that unless lives and you will find not a need to our country's attitude toward its the student will identify the actual bartender who served him or her, the bar cannot be held responsible. "And more often than not, a student will say 'Oh, the beer was just sitting there and I picked it up."

Many students would be even more reluctant to finger the server have this need?

lcohol-related arrests have if they knew they were assisting in skyrocketed over the last the fining of the bar or suspending up with alcohol as common at the its liquor license.

The pivotal question, then, is not why are the bars serving minors, but rather why is alcohol so important to these kids? So important that they are willing to risk $100+ fines and lie to protect their favorite bar?

For eighteen years, most students have lived under the (hopefully) wellintentioned guidance of their families, schools, and government - with a significant amount of lecturing and very little personal decision-making. They have also been told they cannot or should not drink until they are legal, with the very people who are telling them oftentimes enjoying a glass of wine, a Bud, a margarita between words of warning. Alcohol dents feeling harassed and the bar does not look like a dangerous foe but rational, controlled reaction is an enjoyable recreation.

They drink, but not with the sense of urgency many of our students feel

By making alcohol illegal until 21, a law with a positive aim turned drinking into a mythical, marvelous beast. Discriminate evenly or not at all

To the Editor. I had tickets to the Iowa Golden Harvest dinner at the Highlander Supper Club. My wife and I were having cocktails and a smoke during the social hour. However, when we started in for dinner the Athletic Director told us that we couldn't smoke. I couldn't believe they didn't have at least one table for people who smoke!

The Athletic Director said smoking can harm others besides yourself. I asked him if we could have alcoholic beverages. He said that's OK I replied, "It's OK to drink because that doesn't hurt others?" He replied, "That's correct." I said, "Tell that to some parent, or anyone who has had a loved one killed by a drunken driver. If you're going to discriminate against smokers, you should also discriminate against drinkers. I got my $50 back and left.

As a matter of fact, there is no way possible to come to the conclusion that secondary smoke harms others, unless you first eliminate all other variables such as automobile waste, carcinogens caused by factories, fireplaces, charcoal cookers, gas powered vehicles such as trucks, buses, trains, tractors, airplanes, auto and cycle racing, etc.

I went to Hamburg Inn. No smoking. Hy-Vee coffee shop. No smoking. The Zip Mart in Wilton, Iowa. No smoking. Most of these establishments sell cigarettes and other tobacco items! Not only are they discriminating, but they are also hypocrites! I feel all those who smoke should boycott these places (Hy-Vee, Zip Mart, etc.) until they at least stop selling smoking items: cigarettes, cigars, whatever. Also, let's do something about polluting vehicles, factories, tractors, etc.

I'll stop smoking when you, Mr. Athletic Director, and everyone else stops driving big air-polluting automobiles!! If you're really concerned about air pollution, start using horses and buggies like the Amish.

Reader to Drehs: Pay attention

To the Editor: Among the accomplishments of Wisconsin freshman Ron Dayne listed by Wayne Drehs (DI, Aug. 28) is leadership in the Badgers' victory over "WAC Champion Utah." Utah? Now, I realize we live in a state where you're more likely to hear TV sportscasters talk about local high school golf than professional sports elsewhere in the country. And I realize this is a University newspaper. Nevertheless, I expect a sports writer to have some clue of happenings outside of his/her own campus or conference.

To call Utah the WAC champion,

Drehs would have to have missed several events of the 1996 season: 1) Brigham Young pounded Utah 37-17 in the regular season; 2) 1996 marked the first WAC championship game, which BYU won, and Utah didn't even play in; 3) BYU won an NCAA record 14 games over the season, losing only one, while Utah was 8-4; and finally; 4) BYU finished the season ranked 5th nationally, while Utah finished unranked.

I don't ever expect Big 10 conference folks to pay much attention to lowly WAC teams, or to consider them to be in their league. That doesn't bother me it only makes the upsets sweeter. But let's at least get the story straight.

Princess made royalty attainable

To The Editor:

I was very disturbed when I read Beau Elliot's Sept. 9 column, which said in relation to Princess Diana's death that "It's as if someone important had died." Maybe the author of these words knew very little about Diana's life or maybe he was unaffected by her death. But speaking as a person who was affected by her death, I will be the one to say that someone important did die nearly two weeks

Diana represented the person many women wanted to grow up to be. Her Prince Charming, riding up on a gallant white stallion, swept her off her feet. He took her away to his castle and made her his princess. She got to live the fairy tale so many of us dreamed of so fondly not so long ago.

Through Diana, we were able to live that fairy tale. Only the life Diana lived was not a fairy tale after all, and would not have a happy ending. She was human, capable of fault and imperfection just like the rest of us. But this did not tarnish her in our eyes. She was one of us. In her, women saw a part of themselves. She publicly fought the battles many of us have had to suffer in that amount, $35 billion, on welfare

She was a wife who was scrutinized and disliked by her in-laws. She was a mother trying to do the best she could to raise her sons to be loving and generous. She was physically wreaked by bulimia and contemplated suicide. She was broken down by a cheating husband and a failed marriage. And she was not without her own faults and mistakes. But what human being in without fault?

This is why the world fell in love with Diana. Her death represents a life taken needlessly away. And while the circumstances surrounding that fateful crash in Paris are still shady and everyone is still trying to point a finger, one thing is certain: a part of us all died with Diana. She was the princess that lives inside all young girls' hearts and the need to be loved inside all women's hearts. More importantly, Diana was a shining example to women everywhere that in spite of all of their problems and fears, mistakes, and weaknesses, they could still persevere. They could still rise above it all and find happiness at last.

Elliot ignores the facts

Beau Elliot, in his Sept. 3 DI article, "See how the conservatives run!" calls Republican politics "astonishing."

What is astonishing is Elliot's thought process. His piece was imaginative, thought-provoking, and totally unmarred by the facts. He takes conservatives to task for bad-mouthing LBJ's Great Society (read 30-year, $6trillion flop). He says that "during the life span of most of the liberal programs from 1969-92, conservative Republicans controlled the White House" and therefore "were in charge of administering those programs." He then asks: "If conservatives are so damned good at running things, how come the liberal programs failed on their watch?"

If Custer was such a good shot, how come he let his 7th Cavalry get massa-

Beau, can you say "Democrat congress?" Republicans may have controlled the White House but the Democrats were in charge of congress at that time, and they were busily redistributing money faster than it was coming in, and it was coming in in record amounts. Presidents don't administer programs; congress does.

To illustrate the liberal sense of efficiency, in 1985 it would have cost $7 billion to give everyone in the U.S., living below the poverty level enough money to get out of poverty. Instead, the Democrat congress spent five times programs and still had people living below the poverty level.

Using Elliot's logic, and skirting revisionist history, let's pose a couple questions: With a Democrat controlled White House, why did the Democrats allow Clinton to shut down the government? (Sorry, the Republicans didn't.) And if liberals are so damned good at running things, how come the Democrats let the deficit explode on their watch?

As for the Republicans "throwing 30 percent of the work force on the street and then pilfering the pension fund," you might recall that most of the 80's (after the Carter years) was a decade of unprecedented economic growth and employment. And you may recall that Jimmy Hoffa, king of those big-time left-wing interest groups (read: labor unions), wrote the book on raiding pension funds, went to the slammer for it, and was whacked by the mob for shooting his mouth off.

Perhaps a better title for Elliot's article would have been "See how the lib-

"school should be a challenge," (DI, Sept. 5) I'm not sure I want to accept what she regards as "challenging," and certainly not what she regards as "tough." If I had been the young woman who asked about her class, I think I would have gone elsewhere based on her response.

Havaron says she wants to teach an intense and challenging course, but she confuses intellectual rigor with the sort of discipline ("lateness policy is," as she says, "'don't be'") normally imposed on factory workers, high school students, and other hapless people at the bottom of the food chain. She assumes students to be lazy and irresponsible based on what she assumes to be cultural conditioning ("it's cool to be bored.").

In other words, she not only wants to control (perhaps micro-manage) the behavior of her students, she also wants to dictate their emotional responses. She is therefore they must be passionate

What is wrong with this picture? The answer is simple. If her students are bored and apathetic (if they weren't, why would she be so concerned?) it's because she does not respect them. The balance of power in any student/teacher relationship is highly inequitable. And any one who doubts this need only check out the clot of students waiting outside a professor's closed door. They wait for what? God to figure out that they are there? People trained to behave in this manner, passionate about what she does, and who accept their demeaned (and demeaning) position, are not likely to provide Havaron, or anyone else, with the intense and exciting classroom experience she craves. In 1972, UI President Willard Dervishes, made up of Turkish "Sandy" Boyd spoke to the DI about Hancher. He said his hopes for Hancher were "almost undescribable," and he couldn't think of a better investment in culture.

In 1997, Boyd said he always knew Hancher would be here 25 years after its opening. In fact, he knew it was going to be here 100 years later.

"I think we had great expectations for it as a performing arts center, and those expectations have been exceeded," he said.

In the early years, every event sold out, but there was less regional arts competition, and Hancher hosted only about 20 events a year. Today, Hancher annually hosts 60 to 80 special events, 15 to 20 UI music or opera performances and a few dance events in addition to competing with auditoriums all over the state.

All in all, 2.7 million people have passed through Hancher either for music, dance, theatre or graduation events in the last quarter century, estimated Wally Chappell, who has been the director of Hancher Auditorium since 1986.

Famous Turkeys, Famous People

And, word-of-mouth from previous artists boosts Hancher's reputation as a sophisticated hall for sophisticated audiences. As a result, no artist shies away from munity loved it, but that was about Hancher because of unfavorable Iowa stereotypes, Chappell said.

Actually, performers are eager to come to the recently-renovated auditorium because of its strong reputation, its backstage staff and its excellent acoustics, said Chappell, who often hears that if Hancher has decided to book it, it must be

CDs, cassettes and commissions

Judging from Chappell's office, a Hancher performance date is in high demand. Literally thousands of cassettes, videos and CDs line his one year, Scott said, and he walls. One of his main responsibiliwatched the Homecoming parade ties is to watch and listen until he finds Hancher-worthy material.

Oddly, though, Chappell is most sions over the last 9 years - usually instances where Hancher sought out the talent, not the other way around

Two Hancher highlights for Chappell have been Bill T. Jones' controversial dance piece, "The Last Supper at Uncle Tom's Cabin" and the Joffrey Ballet's "Billboards," a January 1993 dance piece set to the music of the Artist Formerly Known as Prince.

Chappell called these commissions "part of a strong emphasis on the creation of new work," which he said has always been a part of both the UI's "niche" and its reputation here and abroad.

Hancher's financial future

And when these works travel, it helps Hancher get money.

"We do build up a certain notoriety that not only feels good, but also helps us get grants for other kinds of work," Chappell said.

With the National Endowment for the Arts always in jeopardy, Hancher needs all the monetary help it can get.

Hancher didn't even apply an NEA grant this year, relying instead on a $420,000 grant from the Lila Wallace-Readers Digest Fund.

Ninety percent of what Hancher offers loses money, especially classical music and dance. To balance the books, Hancher must rely on individual and corporate contributions and big shows like "Les Misérables" (which sold at 95 percent last year, turning a $85,000 profit).

Even if Hancher pays big money for a sure—fire seller, profit is not guaranteed. A few years ago, Mikhail Baryshnikov and Twyla Tharp were paid $220,000 for two shows - the highest Hancher artist fee ever. The sellout ticket sales generated $256,000, but the $36,000 in operating costs meant the total Hancher income was a meager $13.25.

This struggle to stay above the red could mean trouble in the years ahead. Chappell is already worried about the future of educational outreach programs to area children. And one day, the money crunch could affect the big shows, he said.

"My big fear is that we will slowly but surely be forced into doing fewer events. That's for starters," he said. "My corollary with that is not having as many expensive events."

Nevertheless, Chappell is still going after the much-in-demand Riverdance dance company. He already knows the 1999-2000 school year is the earliest we could

However, the new Broadway success, "Rent," is inked for next year. It will play at Hancher in late February, 1999.

That should be a big draw for students, which should please Miriam Canter, an Iowa City resident who, along with her husband Arthur, has been to over 500 Hancher shows over the past 25 years.

"There's still lots and lots of people who have never set foot in that building. Unfortunately a lot of those people are students," Canter said. "I would like to see more students come, because this is part of their education as well as part of their entertainment."

HEADLINER Baseball realignment looking doubtful

NEW YORK (AP) - Prospects dimmed for major eague realignment at this week's meetings in Atlanta with some baseball executives predicting Monday there will not be enough support for any plan.

Acting commissioner Bud Selig had hoped to call for a vote on Thursday, the final day of the owners' three-day quarterly meeting. Selig is in favor of radical realignment, in which 15 teams would switch leagues.

Less radical plans have been formulated, with most including the shift of the three AL West Coast teams to the NL. But the San Francisco Giants have threatened to sue, arguing they can't be forced to accept the Oakland Athletics in their market.

Ranking officials on two other NL teams, speakng on the condition they not be identified, said hey intended to support San Francisco.

After watching Minnesota's Tutu Atwell burn the Cyclones time and time again on kick returns, Iowa State coach Dan McCarney said he doesn't want to see the ball going to Tim Dwight in next Saturday's game with Iowa.

Even if Iowa State punts the ball away from Dwight, the Cyclones wouldn't necessarily be out of trouble. Iowa's other punt returner, Tony Collins, leads the Big Ten with a 13.3yard average. Plus, Collins has Dwight, who loves contact, blocking for McCarney, though, doesn't want to drop Iowa from the schedule in favor of a team the Cyclones would have a better chance of beating.

"I think it's a tremendous intrastate rivalry. It's great for both programs. It's great for the people of the state of Iowa," McCarney said. "They've got a lot of Iowa kids. I've got 55 players on my team from the state, including four of my coaches. So it's a very important game to us, it's very important to Iowa. "Iowa obviously has dominated the series for a number of years, but I wouldn't want anything to happen to this rivalry," he said. "I want it to get better, and hopefully the Cyclones will have more success in the future than in the past. I'm all for the series stay-

With one day of rest and one day of practice after a strong 3-1 finish at the Iowa State Invitational, the Hawkeye volleyball team is ready to host Bradley tonight at 7 p.m.

Entering the third week of the season with a 6-2 record, the Hawkeyes are gaining confidence and experience from every game. Although its schedule has left Iowa few days to relax, the team said it feels the quantity of games is only working to the Hawkeyes' advantage.

"We have so much momentum that we are just going straight up hill and getting better and better," sophomore Sharla Johnson said. "I don't see We have so much momenplaying games so close together as holding us back right now."

With a 6-3 record playing games so close on the year, Bradley has never beat the Hawkeyes now. in the four meetings they've had since 1984. Along with a number of returning starters, Bradley also features two native-Iowa freshmen. Abby Kohnen, a 6-foot-1 middle hitter, graduated from Cleer-Creek Amana High School; and Miranda Black, a 5-foot-11 middle hitter, graduated from West Liberty High School last spring.

"They (Bradley) play in a very strong conference and return a lot of seniors with a lot of experience," co-head coach Matt Sonnichsen said.

"We expect them to be a strong team just because of the amount of letterwinners they are returning. And we expect them to play at their best, because Big Ten teams are always the target of other schools."

In addition to their Big Ten status, Iowa also threatens teams by last week's listing of two Hawkeyes in national rankings last week. Senior Jenn Bell ranked as the nation's top kill player (averaging 6.0 kills per game) along with UCLA's Kara Milling. Freshman Katie Panhorst has also made an impact early as she was ranked third in the nation with her better and better. I don't see 5.25 dig average. "I think both together as holding us back of them are deserving of any recognition that they get Sharla Johnson just because they Sophomore Iowa volleyball player do their job very, very well," Son-nichsen said. "I'm proud of them. I think, because our team is so good, we encourage each other to do our best. And so that is a nice compliment for Katie, Jennifer, and for our whole team."

With strong play seen by a number of players, Sonnichsen sees new leaders for the team emerging in each

"There's really no one that stands out in terms of being the go-to leader," Sonnichsen said. "Jenn Bell is far and away the individual, but every match there seems to be someone that will step into the position and help Jenn to

Boxing tournament gets underway in honor of Ali

By Steve Bailey Associated Press

LOUISVILLE, Ky. - The city of Louisville welcomed home its most beloved son Monday to kick off an international amateur boxing tournament that bears his name.

Slowly, Muhammad Ali rose, smiled and rang the ringside bell three times to signal the opening of the inaugural Muhammad Ali Cup International Amateur Boxing Challenge at the Commonwealth Convention Center.

Members of the 21 countries represented in the event marched into the arena bearing the flags of their home

The event is expected to raise more than $1 million for a planned Ali museum and education center in Louisville and several USA Boxing youth programs. It also will help determine members of the U.S. team that will compete at the World Championships in Budapest, Hungary, in October.

"We are proud to be here on this unique occasion - a boxing competition in the name of the greatest of the great boxers the world has ever produced," said Anwar Chowdhry of Pakistan, the president of the International Amateur Boxing Association. "It is my wish and desire that this tournament should become an annual fea-

"For a long time, we have been thinking about having such a tournament. Unfortunately, it never became a reality. But the magic name of Muhammad Ali was responsible for making it possible to have this tournament in this beautiful city." Nearly 100 boxers from more than

BALTIMORE - The Baltimore Orioles had just rallied to a victory that assured them another trip to the playoffs, and all anyone wanted to talk about was a comeback of a dif-

Eric Davis appeared in his first game Monday since colon cancer surgery in June, playing five innings in the opener of a day-night doubleheader against the Cleveland Indians. Baltimore won the first game, 6-5, before Cleveland earned a split with a 4-1 nightcap

The crowd and Davis' teammates showed their appreciation by giving him a standing ovation on several occasions.

"That was the best rehabilitation I could ever have had," Davis said. "It was an emotional lift to my heart that made it gratifying. That was one of the main reasons why I wanted to have my first game here in Baltimore." Davis went hitless, but the 6-5 victory made Baltimore the first team in the majors to clinch a spot in the postseason. The Orioles also reduced their magic number to clinch the AL East title to nine.

In the second game, Chad Ogea (7-9) pitched six shutout innings and Marquis Grissom homered off Rick Krivda (4-1) to lead the Grissom's homer and an RBI double by Manny Ramirez gave Cleveland a 2-0 lead in the fifth. Omar Vizquel had three hits and drove in a seventh-inning run for Cleveland, which started the day with a 7 1/2-game lead in the AL Central.

Baltimore's Geronimo Berroa hit his 29th homer, off Mike Jackson in the seventh. Paul Assenmacher got two outs in the eighth and Jose Mesa finished for his 14th save.

Batting third and playing right field in his first game since May 25, Davis put up numbers that were rather ordinary - four catches and an 0-for-3 performance at the plate.

Yet the return itself was nothing short of remarkable, considering Davis had a cancerous tumor and one-third of his colon removed just three months earlier and has been undergoing energy-sapping chemotherapy treatments for several weeks.

Sheffield trying to break out of rut

A disappointment for most of the season, the Florida outfielder is looking to turn it around down the stretch.

That's the truly astonishing thing about Sheffield — the homer left his average at just .246. The biggest hit of the weekend for the Marlins, in their biggest series of the year, made everyone wonder anew how such a gifted player could have just 19 home runs and

"I focus the most when there's more pressure and a lot at stake and people are depending on me," Sheffield said. "This year, for some reason, I've struggled with my focus. Being in a playoff atmosphere is making me turn it up a

This is what I live for - getting into the postseason after nine years.

Despite such claims, Sheffield's desire has been questioned this season. He's reluctant to run out grounders or sprint after balls in right field because of a chronic hamstring strain. He admits falling into a rut at the plate when he began trying to pull every pitch over the fence.

Still, he remains one of the game's most menacing hitters. On the best team in Florida's five-year history, Sheffield ranks as the biggest disappointment. But a few timely hits can change that, and there have been signs of a Sheffield

Spartans face first big test

Notre Dame should provide a good measuring stick for 17th-ranked Michigan State.

EAST LANSING, Mich. (AP) What Nick Saban grants with one hand — Saturday's game against Notre Dame is a BIG game — he can take away with the other - it's just one game out of 11.

Saban was in his best "yes, but" of 11. form Monday as he discussed Michigan State's upcoming clash with the Irish.

"Notre Dame is a great national exposure school," he said at his weekly news conference. "Anytime you can play them and beat them, that certainly would be tremendous exposure for your team and your school.

"This is a good opponent. I think to be able to raise the standard we're talking about raising is to beat good opponents."

But having said that, Saban added that if Michigan State loses: "It means we've lost one game. We can make this as big a game as we want to make it, but it's one game

Michigan State travels to South Bend to take on the Fighting Irish on Saturday. And it finds itself in an unusual position - MSU is ranked 17th in the country, while Notre Dame is unranked.

Michigan State is coming off two thumpings of lowly opponents 42-10 over Western Michigan Dame and 51-21 over Memphis last Saturday — while Notre Dame is 1-1. The Irish defeated Georgia Tech, 17-13, but fell Saturday to Purdue, 28-17.

"I think Notre Dame is an out-standing football team," Saban said. "I think Purdue played a tremendous game against them."

"We definitely improved as a foot-ball team from game one to game two," he said. "We still have challenges ahead of us, in terms of becoming a really good football team. I was especially pleased about the progress we made on

"If we have matured as a team and have more character than we've had in the past, we will be able to overcome the adversity of playing a good football team on the road," he said. "We've shown more leadership and character, I think, so far this season, and maturity, but it remains to be seen if we're able to take that on the road to Notre Dame and play the kind of football we'll need to play against an opponent as good as Notre

Since his freshman year, everyone has wanted to test Green's speed, and he finally met his match this spring with freshman tailback Bo Carroll in four sprints, winning only one and tying him in another.

"He's a track guy," Green said in explaining the loss. "I'm a football player who happens to be fast."

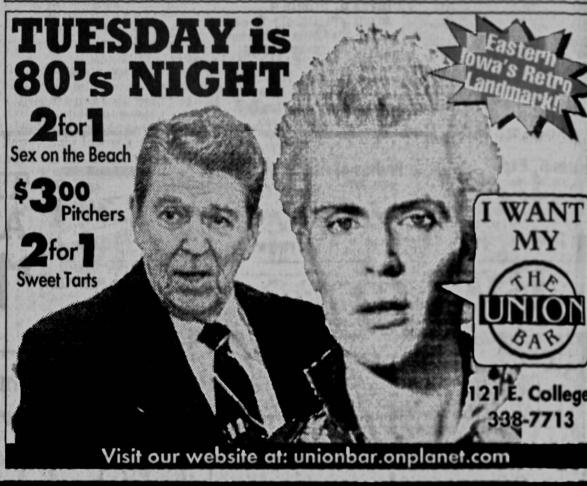

That much was evident last year against South Carolina. Green caught a quick out pattern on the short side of the field, then beat the cornerback on a five-yard sprint to the sideline and turned upfield for a 56-yard touchdown.

'Jacquez has a burst of speed that is very elusive," said receivers coach Dwayne Dixon. "And he actually looks faster running than he really is. Cornerbacks really tend to give him a lot of room because once he gets a step, he's gone."

Jets still running out of gas late in games lets kicker John Hall has his 30-yard field goal attempt blocked in the last minute of the a 24-24 tie with the Patriots at Foxboro Stadium.

Despite a change in attitide at the beginning of the 1997 season, the New York Jets still haven't learned how to win close games.

> By Barry Wilner Associated Press

HEMPSTEAD, N.Y. - For all the changes in attitude and atmosphere brought by Bill Parcells, one stark fact remains, particularly after this latest loss: These still are the New York Jets.

And that means they lose the close ones, usually in excruciating fashion.

Sunday night's 27-24 overtime loss in Parcells' return to New England was especially tormenting for the Jets because - as their fans have seen for decades - they came so close. After an impressive late rally to tie the game, they recovered fumble on the ensuing kickoff and were in position to register their biggest victory since making the playoffs in 1991.

But rookie John Hall's 29-yard field goal was blocked, although he duck-hooked it so badly it probably wouldn't have been good anyway.

"You've got to win those games when you get in position," said quarterback Neil O'Donnell, who was besieged by the Patriots' pass rush, yet played well. "No one cares when you lose. You've got to win ugly and you've got to win pretty."

Instead, the Jets lose ugly and they lose pretty. But, generally,

They are 1-2 this year. Under Parcells they have made monumental strides from the club that had the NFL's worst record the last two seasons. They are better organized, better coached and play with a sense of purpose. They're healthier, in better shape mentally and physically. They have faith in the coaches and in the system.

Yet, with all of those improvements, the Jets have lost two tight games in which they led and in which they had late opportunities to win.

In so many ways, they remain pro football's greatest tease, and until they begin winning games like Sunday night, they won't erase that label.

"You don't get any medals for this," Parcells said.

'We had the opportunities to put that team away and we didn't,' added running back Adrian Murrell. "That game would have given this team a lot of momentum and real confidence on top of it. I'm not saying we are not confident now, but we let that one go."

When will they stop letting such games go? When will the new egime's methods take effect?

When will they make the chipshot field goals or the key interception - Otis Smith had his hands on a pass to Troy Brown deep in New England territory on the first play of overtime, but Brown out-wres tled him for the ball - that lifts them to inspiring victory? "You don't get opportunities like we had last night very often," Parcells said. "Sometimes you have to wait a whole season to prove something to yourself. That was a genuine confidence-builder, but it didn't happen. Who knows when get another chance to prove that?"

Parcells knows he has to be wary of how consecutive close defeats could plague the team's psyche, particularly given the Jets' history. In general, this is a young team that is learning about playing in the NFL at the same time it's trying to win in the NFL. That's a difficult perfecta.

"I don't know if we ever could have controlled Drew's emotions going into this week. I just think it was that big of a deal," New England coach Pete Carroll said Monday, "and to me it's all about regaining your composure and he did.

The Patriots beat the New York Jets 27-24 in overtime Sunday despite 11 penalties, substitution them down the field for the score "We were very fortunate to win that game ... under the most diffied for ourselves," Carroll said.

said. "I know that I'll recall this one for a long time."

For now, he and his players are happy to get away from the side issues and prepare to play the winless Chicago Bears next Sunday.

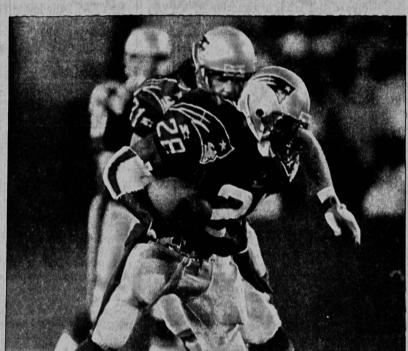

"I asked the team, 'Does everybody know who we're playing this week?" They all said 'Chicago,' so that was good," Carroll said with a laugh. He's already started working on the problems that cropped up against the Jets.

He said that the penalties, four of them against Bledsoe, are correctable, that running back Curtis Martin played "a phenomenal game from start to finish" and that "it was most difficult to beat a coach of that stature.'

Martin rushed 40 times for 199 yards, both career highs, and did most of the work on the drive that set up Adam Vinatieri's winning 34yard field goal 8:03 into overtime.

The ground game was critical, considering Bledsoe's passing problems. But he still found a way to

Perennial pushover Tampa Bay suddenly pushing teams around

■ The Buccaneers are finding themselves 3-0 after the third week of NFL play.

The last time the Tampa Bay Bucs started 3-0 was 1979. They went to the NFC title game that season, the first and last highlight for a franchise that for the past 15 seasons has led the NFL in futility.

age. He's begining to look like Barry Sanders; on Sunday, he turned a 4-yard loss into a 52-yard touchdown run. "I handed off and I thought 'Oh my gosh," said quarterback Trent Dilfer. "Then he made one move that was unbelievable."

Alstott, who blocks like Daryl

Johnston and probably runs better, has 132 yards and two TDs, and last year led the team with 56 receptions. On Sunday, he had a TD run that is one of the few 1-yarders to make all the highlight reels — he went into the pile, was stuffed, bounced back outside and rolled left, carrying two tacklers into the end zone.

Those two have made life easy for Dilfer, who was too often asked to win games the last two seasons. He has thrown 70 passes without an interception and his quarterback rating of 100 is 35 points better than it was last season.

Sapp, allegedly too slow and too troubled off the field, leads the team with 3 1/2 sacks. Like Dunn, he went lower in the first round than his college record should have indicated. Alstott, a workhorse at Purdue, was a second-rounder last year.

How did the Bucs, losers of 10 or more games in 13 of the last 14 seasons, find these guys? By looking at college achievement rather than 40-yard dash times and vertical leaps, which led the old Bucs to draft the likes of Charles McRae, Keith McCants, Broderick Thomas, Ron Holmes and Eric Curry, all top 10 picks who played like middle or low rounders.

"Every time we looked at Warrick on tape in huge games, he was the best player on the field," Dungy says of Dunn, who has also allowed the Bucs to shop Errict Rhett, their prime running back in 1994 and

Last season, Rhett got bad advice from his agent, Drew Rosenhaus, held out, and now stands on the sideline watching Dunn and Alstott. But his low salary makes him attractive to any team looking for a heavy-duty running back - and will allow Tampa to get another high draft pick

The way things have turned for the Bucs, they'll put it to good use. Dungy's coaching career has a familiar look to it. Last season, he lost eight of his first nine games, then finished 5-2, making him 8-2 in his last 10 games, if this year's start is counted. BLACK AND WHITE: Dungy is the fourth black coach in modern NFL history and (for now) the only one under .500 at 9-10 for his career.

The other three are Art Shell, who was 56-41 between 1989-94 with the Raiders, making three playoff appearances; Dennis Green of Minnesota, who is 49-38 and has made the playoffs in four of five seasons; and Philadelphia's Ray Rhodes, 22-15 going into Monday night's game, with two playoff appearances in two seasons

Dawn Villella/Associated Press

Tampa Bay Buccaneers' Horace Copeland (88) celebrates his 27-yard touchdown catch from quarterback Trent Dilfer in the third quarter Sunday Sept. 14, against the Minnesota Vikings at the Metrodome .

That means black coaches have made the playoffs in nine of a possible 13 seasons and have a winning percentage of .567.
HOME FIELD WHAT?: The

home-field advantage has meant little this season. Even Baltimore won on the road Sunday, beating the Giants 24-23 after going 0-8 away from home in its first season as not-the-Cleveland Browns.

Not counting Monday night's game, the score is Home 22, Visitors 20. It was 10-5 for home teams in Week 1, 9-6 for the visitors in Week 2 and 6-6 on Sunday, including two overtime wins by home teams - in Washington and New England.

Look at it more closely and the visitors have the edge. Green Bay, which was won 20 straight games at Lambeau Field, is 2-0 at home. So is Denver, which was 8-0 at Mile High in the regular season last year. They're also probably the NFL's two most talented teams, meaning that when you drop below the top, everyone's equal - at home or on the road.

GETTING THEIR KICKS: The foot may be more important now than the arm or the leg. The two New York teams found that out Sunday.

The Giants lost by a point to the Ravens when Brad Daluiso sent two kicks wide right from 41 yards and had an extra point blocked. This is someone who entered the season with 23 straight field goals, including preseason, and is dubbed "Mr. Automatic" by teammates...

The Jets lost in overtime in Bill Parcells' return to New England when John Hall, their impressive rookie kicker, hit the ball low from 29 yards with 20 seconds left in regulation and Mike Jones blocked it.

The snap was perfect. But the hold wasn't.

Aikman, hounded all night by a tough pass rush, took the Cowboys 62 yards in seven plays for the winning touchdown. A fourth-down pass interference call on Charles Dimry set Dallas up at the Philadelphia 45. Replays showed the ball was tipped by Eagles lineman Mike Mamula and that

Then Aikman, who had been booed in the first half, connected with tight end Eric Bjornson on a diving 24-yard completion to the Philadelphia 17. Two plays later, Miller, who was falling down, grabbed the ball away from safety Tim Watson in the back of the end 20 nations are to compete in the tournament, including the U.S. team's top-ranked boxers in 11 of 12 weight classes. The exception is lightweight, where the top-ranked boxer did not participate in the training camp.

Preliminary bouts are scheduled through Wednesday with the semifinals on Thursday and the championship bouts Friday. The week will be capped by a star-studded tribute to amateur boxing, featuring the first appearance of Mike Tyson and Evander Holyfield together since their June fight in which Tyson was disqualified for twice biting Holyfield on the ear.

The tribute will feature a mini concert by singer Natalie Cole; a reading of Ali's words by actor James Earl Jones; jokes by comedian and actor Jeff Foxworthy; and some lighthearted rounds of boxing, featuring the likes of Holyfield and Tyson taking on local celebrities, such as Kentucky basketball coach Tubby Smith and Louisville basketball coach Denny Crum.

There also will be three mini rounds of sparring with Ali and other boxing greats, with the cost of climbing into the ring starting at carry some of that burden.

"It really goes match to match. Sharla Johnson has done a good job stepping up when she's needed to, and Katie Panhorst, as a freshman, has done that. Katie O'Brien did a great job against Iowa State. Early in the match she really got us going by taking a very aggressive posture.

Tonight's match is the last time the Hawkeyes will play at home until they open Big Ten competition at Carver-Hawkeye Arena on September 26. Sophomore setter Barb Zvonek thinks fans won't be disappointed with Iowa's play on the court.

"We show fans a good time," Zvonek said. "Out of the past couple of years, things weren't there and didn't click. But this year we're having such a good time. We laugh on the court. It's just so much different than in the past. I think the fans like that and enjoy feeding it off of us."

■ Yo La Tengo is a rock group and a marriage that has stood the test of time, says bassist James McNew.

It's mature rock music, kids. Associated characteristics apply: Focused, mellowed, comfortable, occasionally boring, and -oh yes - laden with love songs.

Maritally joined band mates Ira Kaplan (guitar, vocals) and Georgia Hubley (drums, vocals) have been recording together as Yo La Tengo since 1985. They have worked with various bassists, settling finally on James McNew in 1991, who joins the couple tonight.

The band is scheduled to perform with David Kilgour opening at live music

"Things we like will come out of that - if we can remember them," McNew said. "It started off with me, joining and just learning old

When McNew joined, he was not only working with two musicians who had played together for many years, he was joining a band that is that couple's marriage. Does he ever feel like a third wheel?

"Sure," McNew said brightly. "But, you know, it's just sort of an occupational hazard.

McNew is witness to a marriage and band that has stood the test of time. Yo La Tengo has maintained a solid presence on the back-burner of the American pop scene for long enough that its devotion to music and ability to grow are sacrosanct.

"I think having no set goal helps," McNew said. "(Over time) you start to change your thinking about music. You hear more things. I think that happens to us."

Both McNew and Kaplan have backgrounds as music critics, but came out of the school of thought that we were fans more than critics, McNew said. 'I never wrote a negative review.

I didn't see the point," he said. We're critics of ourselves, fans of Yo La Tengo takes an easygoing

Oprah to remain host for several more seasons

CHICAGO (AP) - Talk show queen Oprah Winfrey will rule over daytime television for several more seasons, saying she wanted to go on helping people "lead better lives."

"I believe I'll run on to see what the end will be," she told a live audience at the taping of her show Monday, quoting an old spiritual.

Winfrey committed to being host of "The Oprah Winfrey Show" through the 1999-2000 season.

Winfrey said she was undecided about going beyond this 12th season as a talk show host when the summer break in her show came in June.

"I've thought long and hard about the reality of doing 400 more shows," she said. "I want to use television not only to entertain, but to help people lead better lives. I realize now, more than ever, that the show is the best way to accomplish these goals."

The show is distributed by King World Productions Inc.

"The Oprah Winfrey Show' has set and maintained television's highest standards of quality for more than a decade, and we're thrilled that Oprah has decided to continue on," King World Chairperson Roger King said.

Investors also seemed thrilled by the news, bidding King World's stock up $2.75, or 7 percent, to $42.06 a share in morning trading on the New York Stock Exchange.

"The Oprah Winfrey Show" got its start in 1984, when Winfrey was named local host of "AM Chicago." Less than a year later, the program was renamed and expanded to an hour long. It is now seen in 206 U.S. markets and 132 coun-

Winfrey produced and stars in the upcoming feature film "Beloved," based on a novel by Toni Morrison.

Familiar faces fill Tuesday night

By Frazier Moore Associated Press

Here's a look at the new prime-time television series on Tuesdays:

"Over the Top" Premieres: Sept. 23

He's an actor who was once in demand but, by now, the flamboyant and temperamental Simon Ferguson has alienated everyone in show busi-

Broke and out of work, he has only one recourse: to seek refuge with his favorite ex-wife, Kate, who happens to manage a Manhattan hotel.

Of course, Ferguson's style hasn't mellowed one iota, which makes him an object of fascination among the hotel's guests, not to mention Kate's two kids. And what's Kate's reaction to this thespian whirlwind re-entering her life? We'll have to wait and see, since no preview tape was available. The sitcom stars Annie Potts

("Designing Women") and Tim Curry ("Rocky Horror Picture Show"). "Hiller & Diller"

Premieres: Sept. 23

One of Hiller's kids wisecracks that Diller's kids seem like something out of "The Addams Family." And she's right.

The relatively normal personality and tender family life of Ted Hiller ("Saturday Night Live's" Kevin Nealon) belongs on a completely different show from his best friend, the pathetically inept single father Neil Diller (Richard Lewis) and his hooligan spawn.

Adding to "H&D's" problems is the nature of the Hiller-Diller partnership: They are TV writers, a device that hasn't clicked for a TV sitcom since "The Dick Van Dyke Show" more than 30 years

And don't forget the Richard Lewis jinx: Here's a funny guy who makes a habit of starring in flop sitcoms. Count him as a "Hiller & Diller" killer.

CBS

"Micheal Hayes" Premieres: Sept. 23

Welcome back to TV, David Caruso! All is forgiven. Almost.

Anyway, "NYPD Blue's" prodigal hero returns to TV crime-fighting as an ex-cop turned federal prosecutor, working not so many blocks from the Lower East Side station house Detective John Kelly stormed out of at the end of the 1993-94 season.

A preview episode suggests that, with Caruso at the helm, "Michael Hayes" will be pretty much what you'd expect: gritty, somber and not afraid to liven things up with a suicide by a cop gone wrong or a car bomb or some other pyrotechnics staged at judicious

Or maybe it will be even better. The brilliant Paul Haggis (who created last season's incomparable "EZ Streets") has since signed on as a producer.

All in all, "Hayes" should serve as a potent viewer stakeout — with "NYPD Blue" a reliable reinforcement the next hour over on ABC.

"Dellaventura"

Premieres: Sept. 23

Danny Aiello plays a former NYPD detective who was too tough, too downright dangerous to be an NYPD detective. So what else could Dellaventura do? He became a private detective, of course - then got a TV show.

In the take-no-prisoners hard sell of the CBS press department, Dellaventura has "built his business helping people who have nowhere else to go, stacking the deck for the underdog.

And although we haven't seen a preview episode (none was available) and don't know for sure, we're praying Dellaventura still tosses around the catchphrase Aiello uttered in a promotional clip we saw a few months ago: "If you need me (pregnant pause) ... I'll be Righteous blarney like that could make rock'em-sock'em "Dellaventura" right fun to watch.
