NEWS BRIEF

Walker allegedly violates parole

A former Iowa basketball player may serve time in jail for alleged probation violations, court documents said.

Jeff Walker, 20, was charged in Oct. 1996 with forgery for stealing $1,400 from an ATM account. He pleaded guilty in November 1996 and was given a deferred sentence of three years probation and ordered to pay restitution to the victim.

According to court documents, Walker violated four of 13 rules in his probation agreement.

Now living in Ottumwa and attending Indiana Hills Community College, Walker allegedly changed his address without gaining permission from his probation officer. He also allegedly failed to maintain employment, didn't write monthly reports on his activities and traveled outside the state without permission, court documents said.

Walker averaged 24.7 points at Lanphier High School in Springfield, Ill. He was recruited by the Hawkeyes and given a scholarship, which has since been taken away.

Walker is scheduled to have a hearing Dec. 5 on the parole violations. His probation officer recommends jail time, but he also may receive a fine.

Cassini Probe set to launch

Voyager, Galileo and now Cassini. Thirty-two years after starting a physics career that has been a part of dozens of space missions, UI physicist Donald Gurnett headed to Florida Sunday to watch his latest endeavor soar to the heavens.

"It's something I'm quite proud of, actually," he said. "I have a certain sense of achievement, not only for myself but for my group here."

Gurnett helped develop one of 12 instruments aboard the Cassini spacecraft set to launch at 4 a.m. CDT today. The flight was delayed last week due to a fuel leak in the rocket booster.

NASA says the probe will head to Saturn to study, among other things, the planet's moons, rings and lightning storms. Information will be trans-

■ Researchers and physicists say despite perceived health hazards, plutonium aboard the Cassini spacecraft is safe.

By Steven Cook
The Daily Iowan

The Cassini Space Probe is scheduled to launch into space at 4 a.m. today, taking with it 72 pounds of plutonium.

The plutonium has caused an uproar in the environmental community due to the potential risks caused by sending that much radioactive material into space. Plutonium's posing an environmental hazard concerns the UI physicists working on the project, but they say the activists are using scare tactics and aren't looking at the science involved.

"I believe the anti-Cassini activists really are doing something that I find extremely disturbing, because they're making statements that are totally unsupported from a scientific standpoint," said Donald Gurnett, UI physicist and head of a part of the mission. "It's too bad that it's gotten so far away from what I would regard as sensible scientific discourse."

But Greg Thompson, a member of the Iowa City Green Party, said there is too much risk involved in

I.C. celebrates gay pride in coming-out rally

■ Members of the Iowa City gay community came out to the Pentacrest Saturday in celebration of self-identity.

By Karmell Wehr
The Daily Iowan

Standing on a rainbow-colored platform and wearing a bold black-and-white T-shirt that reads, "Nobody Knows I'm Gay," UI sophomore Greg Braden declared, "We're here, and we're queer."

Braden, a member of the Gay Lesbian Bisexual Transgender Union (GLBTU), addressed a group of approximately 100 participants at Saturday's Coming-Out Day rally in the Pentacrest.

Braden, dressed as a drag queen named "Mercedes Aliah," was the "Mistress of Ceremonies" for the rally, held from noon until 1 p.m.; the program included speakers sharing their personal experiences, musicians and poetry readings.

"People who have just come out and are going through the pain need a sense of joy, and that is what today is about," Braden said.

Unlike pride rallies and parades held in major cities, Saturday's events, including a dance party at the Unitarian Universalist Society of Iowa City, 10 S. Gilbert St., were relaxed and provided GLBTU members the opportunity to support one another without protest.

National Coming-Out Day is considered one of the biggest events of the year for the gay and lesbian community and is recognized throughout the United States in observation of a 1987 march on Washington for homosexual rights.

The main goal of the rally, which was held in recognition of the UI's 27th consecutive National Coming Out Day, is to rejoice for being "queer" and being out of the closet, Braden said.

"We're not in a dirty bar or hiding in a dark corner," he said. "We're with people who are proud, and I think we deserve kudos."

Per capita, Iowa City is the second-largest gay community in the U.S., which, according to Braden, generates open-mindedness.

Picking up Pauline's pieces

■ Hurricane survivor bids farewell to family while the community tries to recover.

By Niko Price
Associated Press

ACAPULCO, Mexico — Her legs are wrapped in bandages, and she needs help from fellow mourners to climb the three steps to the cemetery plot.

Alicia Alvarez Gutierrez had been swept from her house by a torrent of mud and water that Hurricane Pauline sent coursing through Acapulco. She survived only because a power cable wrapped itself around her legs and neck, nearly strangling her.

It was her lifeline to reach the bank. Her parents and her little sister weren't so lucky. She watched as the current carried them away. And now, on a sun-drenched afternoon, she has come to the cemetery to lay them to rest.

The funeral is one of many taking place around Acapulco as families begin to bury at least 207 confirmed dead. Dozens remain missing, and rescue workers are digging up more bodies from the mud-filled streets every day. Thousands more were left homeless when Hurricane Pauline unleashed flash floods Thursday in the slopes above this Mexican resort's famed beaches.

Two hundred people surround 30-year-old Alicia, offering support and singing hymns as the three coffins are lowered, one atop the other, into a single grave. But she doesn't see the cloth-draped caskets. All she sees, she explains later, is her family.

She sees them praying in their living room as the waters rise around their concrete house. She sees a sudden surge of mud burst in, taking her sister, Margarita, and her mother, Maria.

She sees her father, Ernesto, holding onto a doorway beside her. Another wave crashes in, carrying them downstream as well.

She feels the metal cable gripping her neck — it has left a deep gouge — and remembers how she used it to haul herself to safety.

And she sees the bodies of her relatives a day later, scratched and bloated, set out in a morgue beside dozens of others who met a kindred fate. She nods to the coroner that, yes, she can identify them.

As mourners throw white flowers and clods of dirt upon the lowered caskets Saturday, Alicia rises from her plastic chair and tries to hurl herself into the hole.

"Let me go!" she sobs as friends grab her skirt, forcing her back into her seat. "I should be in there. I want to be in there. These are my three loves. Mine! Mine!"

She slumps back, defeated. "God bless you, little father," she says.

Regents to peruse UISG surveys

■ UISG members want recent survey results over UI student tuition concerns to kick the Regents into action.

By Nathan Hill
The Daily Iowan

While most UI students are in the midst of midterms, the UI Student Government (UISG) has decided it's time to put the UI and the Iowa State Board of Regents to the test.

Since the last meeting of the Regents in September, the UISG has been distributing and collecting small notecards listing five UI expenditures. Students were asked to rank which programs they thought were most important.

UISG Vice President Meghan Henry said the results showed maintaining student aid was the top priority, with student support services and funding improvements to classrooms and other campus gathering places finishing a close second.

UISG President Allison Miller said the exact results of the survey will not be released until she presents them to the Board of Regents at its October meeting Thursday in Iowa City in the Triangle Ballroom of the Iowa Memorial Union.

The survey was designed to determine where student priorities are when it comes to how their tuition money is spent, and the UISG is pleased with the results, Miller said.

"We got over 1,500 surveys in," she said. "Some of the results were predictable, and some were a blessing. It's about time we got (the students' opinions) recorded."

Miller said the survey's results can be used to see if the UI truly cares about students and their concerns.

"This effort started last year, and it will take whoever is in office next year to continue," she said. "We can spend all year to see if the University is accountable, to see if student priorities are important to them."

Iowa Regent Wayne Richey said most tuition money is spent where students can easily see what they're

Michael Jackson becomes tribe member

PHOKENG, South Africa (AP) — The King of Pop is now an African tribesman. Michael Jackson, with ex-wife Lisa Marie Presley and her two children nearby, was made an honorary member of the Bafokeng Ka Bakwena (People of the Crocodile) tribe Saturday. Dressed in a military-style jacket adorned with gold badges, Jackson walked slowly as Lisa Marie clutched his arm and ululating women lined a path in this town 90 miles northwest of Johannesburg. An aide carried a blue-and-yellow umbrella to provide shade for Jackson at all times as he took a day off between two Johannesburg concerts.

Statute of limitations?

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A pedestrian struck by Alicia Silverstone's car has sued the actress nearly a year later. Bruce Brodnax, who was 64 when the accident occurred Oct. 29, 1996, filed the lawsuit Friday. He was seeking unspecified damages for hospital and medical expenses, loss of earning capacity and lawyers' fees, court records showed. His attorney did not return a telephone message.

A police report said Silverstone, 21, was making a left turn when her car hit Brodnax, who was walking in a crosswalk. Silverstone, who starred in "Clueless" and played Batgirl in "Batman and Robin," was not cited. At the time, Brodnax was taken to a hospital for treatment of neck and shoulder pain before he was released.

Not a reason for celebration

Today marks Columbus Day but many UI students see it as little more than a day without mail.

By Cori Zarek
The Daily Iowan

In 1492 Columbus may have sailed the ocean blue — but some UI students don't think he should be praised for "discovering" America. Columbus Day, named for Christopher Columbus, who explored for Spain in the 15th century, is a day set aside in recognition for his "discovery" of the Caribbean islands, which led to Europe's "discovery" of the Americas.

However, because cultures already existed in the Americas, many question whether the Italian explorer really discovered anything. UI graduate student Alfonso Franklin said.

"There is a lot of contention in celebrating Columbus Day with African-Americans and Native Americans," he said. "The assumption is that Columbus discovered America, but there were already people here."

A movement to stop celebrating the holiday has been made in the

Facts on Columbus

- Real name is Cristóbal Colón.
- Land Columbus "discovered" was utilized for over 10,000 years before he found it.
- Columbus is Italian but received funding for trip from Spain.
- About 90 people went on trip in three ships: Niña, Pinta & Santa María.
- Took approximately two months to sail to the Caribbean.
- Thought he found a shortcut to India, which is why they called the natives "Indians."
- Colorado was first state to observe Columbus Day in 1905.
- President Franklin Roosevelt declared the day a national holiday in 1937.

past 20 to 30 years, UI employee John Schacht said.

"Lots of Americans who didn't have a voice before, like Native Americans and African-Americans, have a say in whether or not to celebrate it," he said. "They don't want to celebrate it because it doesn't affect them."

Columbus Day wasn't considered an official holiday in the U.S. until President Franklin Roosevelt declared it one in 1937. Before, celebrations by Italian-Americans commemorated the anniversary of Columbus' sailing.

People don't want to celebrate the holiday anymore because they realize that Columbus didn't discover America, UI freshman Jeff Valiga said.

"Some people don't want to celebrate it since it's a fraud," he said.

Columbus Day is not observed at the UI because there are too many other holidays that the university would have to celebrate, Ann Rhodes, vice president of university relations, said.

On the other hand, UI freshman Aaron Roussel said, the holiday should be important because it is seen as the beginning of European exploration of the New World.

"It's historically important because Columbus made the country known to the Europeans," he said. "It should get some recognition, more than it does now."

While questions linger over the importance of Columbus Day, today will come and go and many will not know they're observing a holiday, UI sophomore Jill Hunt said.

"I didn't even know it was Columbus Day," she said. "I don't think people even think about what happened (on the holiday) anymore, they should just save it for history class."

One of the few eligible legends gets honored

NEW YORK (AP) — The English Heritage's next honoree is shaking up some of those stiff upper lips with Jimi Hendrix, a rock star and a yank.

The society that has honored the likes of Winston Churchill and Lord Byron made Hendrix the first rock legend to get its distinctive blue plaques at his home.

"What's next? A plaque to Oasis?" said Clive Aslet, editor of the patrician monthly Country Life.

Others said Britain has more than its share of rock greats.

Elain Harwood of the English Heritage told Entertainment Weekly in its Oct. 17 issue that Hendrix, who died in 1970 at age 27, was selected last month because he was one of the few legends eligible.

Other musicians just weren't "dead enough," she said. "You have to be dead for at least 20 years to get a blue plaque."

Former Stark

■ A "trustworthy, unselfish" former professor died in week.

By Kelli C. The Daily Iowan

Former UI music professor Stark died Tuesday in Antonio, Texas, at the age of 67. Stark had been a UI School of Music professor, where he had been director of the Opera Theater. He held the Fisher Chair of Opera at UI from 1972 to 1976. James Dixon, a professor in the music department, said Stark was a trustworthy and unselfish professor. "On numerous occasions Stark prepared me before performing. I never worried about my students with him. Stark became an instructor after receiving his degree in education from UI in 1934. He became a professor in the department and retired in 1976. Stark performed throughout his life. He made several oratorio performances."

Former music professor Stark dead at age 89

■ A "trustworthy and unselfish" former UI music professor died in Texas last week.

By Kelli Otting
The Daily Iowan

Former UI music professor Herald Stark died Thursday in San Antonio, Texas, at the age of 89. Stark had been a member of the UI School of Music choral department, where he taught voice, and had been director of choral activities and of the Opera Theater. He held the Fisher Chair of Opera at UI from 1972 to 1976.

James Dixon, a professor in the music department, said Stark was a trustworthy and unselfish colleague and professor.

"On numerous occasions, Professor Stark prepared my chorus for me before performances," he said. "I never worried about entrusting my students with him."

Stark became a UI music instructor after receiving his master's degree in education from the UI in 1934. He became a professor in the department in 1954 and retired in 1976.

Stark performed throughout his life. He made several recital and oratorio performances throughout the Midwest and also performed with the Handel and Haydn Society of Boston.

This was the side of Stark his students and fellow staff members rarely saw, Dixon said.

"He sang the piece 'Song of a Wayfarer' with me, and it was beautiful," he said. "He was a wonderful singer. I wish more people could have cherished his voice."

Stark was a member of many professional music organizations. He served as president for the Iowa Music Teachers Association and as a board member for the National Association of Teachers of Singing.

During the time Stark taught at the UI, some of his students went on to successful professional careers, including soprano Costanza Cuccaro, who won the 1967 Metropolitan Opera National Auditions.

Himie Voxman, professor emeritus and director of the School of Music, said Stark, as a faculty member, set an excellent example for his students.

Even after his retirement, he continued to teach privately in his home in Texas, Voxman said.

"He worked really well with every one of his students," he said. "He will be missed by everyone he came into contact with."

He was a wonderful singer. I wish more people could have cherished his voice.

Downtown Godfather's may say, 'Ciao'

■ Faced with a decline in business, the downtown Iowa City Godfather's Pizza may have to close its doors.

By Kelley Chorley
The Daily Iowan

The Godfather of pizza is hoping the lunch buffet will bring in enough customers to save the restaurant from serving its last slice.

There hasn't been a final decision to close Godfather's Pizza, 207 E. Washington St., but the possibility hangs in the air, said Joel Schuff, Godfather's district manager for Iowa City and Cedar Rapids.

"No one seeks a lot of pleasure in wondering whether they will close a business," Schuff said. "I don't think we can survive on the buffets' alone."

If the Godfather's store closes, it will be the second loss of a pizza restaurant in the downtown Iowa City area. Pizza Hut, formerly located at 127 Iowa Ave., closed Feb. 19 after 11 years of business.

The restaurant's hours have been reduced to Monday through Friday, 11:30 a.m. to 1 p.m., giving the lunch hours a chance to keep the place in business, Schuff said. However, surprisingly enough, last week's business was booming.

"The managers were pleasantly surprised at how good the week went with only the lunch buffet open," Schuff said. "We don't know if more people are eating there because they know we are closed for dinner hours or if it was just a good week."

Downtown restaurant Godfather's Pizza, 207 E. Washington St., may be closing its doors if lunch sales cannot sustain the business.

and dinner buffet was such a good deal, the customers didn't want to spend the extra money to get a large, $16.99 pizza when they could save $13, Schuff said.

UI sophomore Gwen Komala only orders the buffet when she goes to Godfather's. The problem is, she rarely orders Godfather's Pizza when she is ordering out with her friends.

"I only ate there a few times last year, because I usually order pizza from Gumbly's or Paul Revere's for carry-out with my friends," Komala said. "I never order from Godfather's when I'm ordering out."

Schuff said the inconvenience of parking in the downtown area is to blame for slow business.

"We fall into the same trap," he said. "People ask themselves if they want to go downtown and find a place to park or go to the Highway 1 restaurant and pull into a parking lot."

The other Godfather's Pizza, 531 Highway 1, is doing "excellent" business, Schuff said; he doesn't see any change in the success or the reputation.

"Out of all the stores I manage, the Highway 1 store is No. 2 in the district," he said. "We have a good reputation, or else we wouldn't have the No. 2 store."

Happy Joe's Pizza & Ice Cream Parlor, 225 S. Gilbert St., doesn't expect to have increased business if Godfather's closes, said manager Todd Danneman.

"We don't worry about our competition," Danneman said. "For us, we hope our product speaks for itself. We do our own thing."

All of the employees from the downtown restaurant will have the opportunity to work at the Highway 1 restaurant, Schuff said. However, employee transportation could be a problem.

White House coffee-video probe still perking

■Reno says no one has been exonerated in fund-raising investigation.

By Jim Abrams
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Attorney General Janet Reno said Sunday she has found nothing in videotapes of White House coffees to incriminate President Clinton or other officials covered by the post-Watergate independent counsel law.

But she promised to keep investigating and said she ignores "name calling" by Republican critics who have demanded she resign.

"Nothing has been closed, and nobody has been exonerated," including Clinton, Reno told NBC's "Meet the Press." Claims that the Justice Department is winding down its investigation into suspect campaign fund-raising activities at the White House are mistaken, she said.

Republicans have pounded Reno in recent weeks, saying she should resign or face impeachment for failing to seek an independent counsel to investigate White House fund-raising practices.

"We believe, many of us, that she is trying to stand in the way of a good investigation ... She is fighting for the president of the United States instead of doing her job," Rep. Dan Burton, R-Ind., chair of the House committee holding hearings on fund-raising violations, said on CNN's "Late Edition."

Reno said this month that, while continuing to investigate fund-raising phone calls Vice President Al Gore made from the White House, she had found no evidence that Clinton had violated the law in inviting wealthy donors to the White House for coffees or sleepovers.

She has until Wednesday to decide whether to push ahead with an inquiry into phone calls that the president apparently made from the White House.

On Sunday she said that, after reviewing newly released videotapes of the coffees, "we do not have any evidence of criminal activity" among the president or other senior government officials covered by the Independent Counsel Act.

She emphasized there will be no pause in "one of the most complex investigations in this nation's history." She also has no plans to resign, she said.

Asked about comments Saturday by House Speaker Newt Gingrich that she "looks like a fool" for not seeking an independent counsel, she said, "When the speaker calls names I don't pay too much attention. What I try to do is listen to people who have constructive ideas and keep an open mind."

"I follow the evidence. I follow the law. I don't follow innuendo. I don't follow shrill accusations," Reno said she was angered by the White House's failure to notify her immediately about the existence of the videotapes. White House officials again apologized for delays but insisted there were no ulterior motives.

"I deeply regret that we did not get those tapes off earlier," White House lawyer Lanny Breuer said on CBS' "Face the Nation." But he said the White House has a "proud record" of providing more than 100,000 documents to Congress and the Justice Department.

White House chief counsel Charles F.C. Ruff said on ABC's "This Week" that he made a mistake in not telling Reno of the tapes at a meeting the day after they were discovered. But "it had nothing to do with any effort to conceal the information," Ruff said. "We would never do that to the Department of Justice or to anyone else."

Simulator gets green light

■Funding for the UI's driving simulator passed Congress last week and is expected to receive the green light from President Clinton.

By John Russell
The Daily Iowan

UI researchers are pleased the final piece of the puzzle is in place and the UI's driving simulator can now hit the road.

A $13.25 million federal appropriation bill was passed by Congress last week and is expected to be signed by President Clinton. The bill will partly fund the construction of a new National Advance Driving Simulator.

The new $45 million facility will be located on the Oakdale Campus in Coralville and is in the beginning stages of site preparation.

The $13.25 million bill was the last in a series of federal appropriations that totaled $39 million. The other $6 million for the project comes from the state level and will cover the cost of the building.

The driving simulator will be used to study all aspects of road travel, but in a virtual environment, said UI Associate Vice President for Research Derrick Willard.

"It is an advanced research institute that will enable the designers of automobiles and highways to study driver behavior in a real-time, simulated environment," he said. "Or put simply, it's a virtual proving ground."

The UI was selected by the National Science Foundation to be the home of the simulator, Willard said.

"The UI had a concentration of expertise, including concurrent engineering, computer-assisted design and dynamic simulation of mechanical systems, together with software experts that enabled them to put together a team that was recognized by the National Science Foundation as the No. 1 team in the country," he said. "And it was on that endorsement that the UI was awarded the simulator."

UI Principal Investigator Edward Haug said the UI's commitment to simulation research set it apart from other research universities.

"They have invested heavily in building a driving simulator and getting its base established," he said. "The UI has shown it is committed."

A formal ground-breaking ceremony for the driving simulator is scheduled for Oct. 24.

Campus Planning Committee preps Hancher for the millennium

■$1 million "Hancher Millennium Plaza" could be completed by the summer of 1999.

By Mark Lyons
The Daily Iowan

Part of the UI's celebration of the new millennium might be a million-dollar sprucing up of the Hancher Auditorium entrance and parking lot.

Jerry Schnoor, UI Campus Planning Committee chairperson, said the new "Hancher Millennium Plaza" is still in the preliminary planning stages but includes some extensive additions to Hancher's exterior.

"Possible design elements include a new fountain and a plaza area, as well as an avenue of trees going down to the river, and new planting in the parking lot to make it look nicer," Schnoor said.

Larry Wilson, a planning committee member, said the plaza is expected to be completed in the summer of 1999.

Committee member Dave Dennis said the Hancher project fits well into the UI's larger plans for the Iowa Center for the Arts campus.

"The plaza will enhance the visual part of the arts campus, which is something we have been working on for years," Dennis said.

Schnoor said no state or UI funds would be used to finance the project.

"The plaza will cost a little more than $1 million and will be paid with private financing," Schnoor said.

"The fact that we can do this with private funds shows that there is tremendous support for the university and for the arts."

"Hancher is a major function where the UI and the state of Iowa meet," Nagel said. "The fact that we can do this with private funds shows that there is tremendous support for the university and for the arts."

Nagel said the current plan for the plaza is tentative and the details might change in various committees.

"The whole idea is a good one, and we had a good discussion about the specifics," Nagel said. "I expect that some of the details will change, but that is what committees are for."

Committee member Gregg Oden stressed that, though the project is set for completion in time for millennium celebrations, it's still in the early planning stages.

"We want to make the approach to Hancher more inviting. We still need to raise the money and make adjustments," Oden said.

Another planning committee project that has now moved beyond the planning stages is the new Hawkeye Athletic Complex. The facility, which will be constructed near Hawkeye Court Apartments, will be a comprehensive athletic park incorporating, among other things, full-size soccer fields.

Denis said he is very pleased with Hebert, Lewis, Kuse and Blunt the Des Moines-based architectural firm that has been selected for the job. I think that HKLB is terrific."

"They are working on the museum and just finished Schaeffer Hall. And if you look at Schaeffer, the detailing is wonderful. They really had some fine ideas."

Nagel said the athletic complex is important because of the variety of students it will serve.

"Athletics are important in many different students' lives," Nagel said. "And if we can make those services available and (pleasing), then that is good."

Hotel owners frustrated with Kevorkian

DETROIT (AP) — It has become a familiar sight: a motel room, a body and a note to call Geoffrey Fieger, Dr. Jack Kevorkian's attorney.

Detroit-area hotel and motel owners are getting tired of it, and the Hotel Association of Greater Detroit plans to address Kevorkian's practices at its meeting Oct. 21.

"Shame on Kevorkian for putting innocent people through this kind of trauma," association President Michael O'Callaghan said.

"If he wants to do that kind of stuff, he should be doing it in his van or in his own garage."

The body of 65-year-old Kentucky woman Lois Carol Hawkins Caswell, the latest linked to Kevorkian, was found last week at a Quality Inn in Bloomfield Township. As with others, a note near her body instructed hotel employees to call Fieger.

Hotel officials say the discovery of a body brings problems. Police and reporters converge on the scene, employees must do a special post-death room cleaning, and some employees may even need counseling.

Another Kevorkian lawyer, Michael Schwartz, was unapologetic. He said hotels will have to do until assisted suicide is regulated.

"Dr. Kevorkian doesn't want to do this in hotels and motels, but he can't do it in the streets," Schwartz said.

"There is a reasonable alternative to this, and it's in the hospitals."

Abortion with late-1

Conservatives vow 'mother of all veto' battles on abortion bill.

By Sandra Sobieraj

WASHINGTON — Conservatives were mobilizing for what one activist calls the "mother of all veto-overrides" following President Clinton's latest rejection of a ban on a type of late-term abortion.

One Republican lawmaker said Clinton had earned the title "Abortion President."

Clinton, who signed the veto privately and without fanfare Sunday, chastised Congress for ignoring his oft-stated demand that the partial-delivery procedure be allowed in cases where a woman's health was endangered.

"As a result of this congressional indifference to women's health, I cannot in good conscience ... sign this legislation," the president said in his veto message to the House.

Clinton acknowledged that the procedure "appears inhumane." But he said that "to eliminate it without taking into consideration the rare and tragic circumstances in which it may be necessary would be even more inhumane."

Last year, Clinton vetoed similar legislation for the same reason. It was an election-year issue then, and he had an emotional veto ceremony surrounded by women who testified to the necessity of the late-term procedure.

Congress could not muster the votes to override him then. The Senate passed this year's bill in May by three votes less than the two-thirds majority that would be needed to override his veto.

The House's separate vote on Wednesday, 296-132, was by a margin that would be more than enough to override. But both chambers must

Abortion fight boils with late-term veto

Conservatives vow 'mother of all veto' battles on abortion bill.

By Sandra Sobieraj

WASHINGTON — Conservatives are mobilizing for what one activist calls the "mother of all veto-override battles" following President Clinton's latest rejection of a ban on a type of late-term abortion.

One Republican lawmaker said Clinton had earned the title "Abortion President."

Clinton, who signed the veto papers privately and without fanfare Friday, chastised Congress for ignoring his oft-stated demand that the partial-delivery procedure be allowed in cases where a woman's health was endangered.

"As a result of this congressional indifference to women's health, I cannot in good conscience ... sign this legislation," the president said in his veto message to the House. Clinton acknowledged that the procedure "appears inhumane." But he said that "to eliminate it without taking into consideration the rare and tragic circumstances in which its use may be necessary would be even more inhumane."

Last year, Clinton vetoed similar legislation for the same reason. It was an election-year issue then, and he had an emotional veto ceremony surrounded by women who testified to the necessity of the late-term procedure.

Congress could not muster the votes to override him then. The Senate passed this year's bill in May by three votes less than the two-thirds majority that would be needed to override his veto.

The House's separate vote on Wednesday, 296-132, was by a margin that would be more than enough to override. But both chambers must vote by two-thirds majorities. Although Clinton prevailed last year, Republicans revived the bill after learning the procedure they call "partial-birth abortion" was more common and used earlier in pregnancy than previously believed.

The legislation would ban the surgery — which involves the partial delivery of a fetus, legs first, through the birth canal followed by the drainage of its skull — except when needed to save a woman's life.

It would not permit such an abortion even when the pregnancy jeopardizes a woman's health. There is a "small group of women in tragic circumstances who need the procedure" to avert death or serious injury, Clinton said.

Within moments of Friday's veto, Don Hodel, president of the politically potent Christian Coalition, said in a statement: "We will now join forces with that vast majority of Americans who strongly believe the Constitution protects the life of these fully developed, innocent human beings ... This will be the mother of all veto-override battles."

Echoing the graphic and emotional debate that surrounds the issue, Rep. Charles Canady, R-Fla., chief sponsor of the House bill, said, "How could jamming scissors into the back of a baby's head be required for the health of the mother? It makes no sense."

Rep. Chris Smith, R-N.J., said that Clinton had, through his second veto, earned the title "Abortion President." "For nearly five years, President Clinton has pushed to make abortion available at any time, in every place, at any cost," Smith said.

He and other supporters of the ban compare the procedure to infanticide and insist there is no medically justifiable reason to use it. They also maintain that the procedure, more complicated than first-trimester abortions, is common and often elective.

Testimony begins in Paula Jones' suit

Lawyers in Jones-Clinton case to start taking testimony today.

By Sandra Sobieraj
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Sworn testimony in the sexual harassment suit against President Clinton begins this week with all sides scurrying for damaging evidence and digging in for a protracted standoff. Talk of an out-of-court settlement is dead for now.

The depositions start off simply enough in Little Rock, Ark., today: Paula Jones' mother and sister will testify to what she told them of the alleged 1991 hotel-room encounter. Next week, former co-worker Pamela Blackard and friend Debra Ballentine, both confidantes of Jones at the time, are to give depositions.

From there, scheduled testimony veers from the principals. Subpoenas betray strategies: his to prove her a profit-driven liar, hers to prove him a chronic adulterer. It is Clinton's often-ignored co-defendant who will peer into Jones' sexual past — a defense the president's team was forced to forswear months ago after an uproar by women's groups.

Some half-dozen witnesses to Jones' sexual reputation, including past boyfriends and a former employer, have been subpoenaed by Bill Bristow, attorney for Arkansas state trooper Danny Ferguson. They will testify in depositions beginning Oct. 17.

Both Clinton and Ferguson are named in the $700,000 suit, which U.S. District Court Judge Susan Wright Webber scheduled for trial next May. Susan Carpenter McMillan, a Los Angeles public relations professional who acts as Jones' spokesperson, accused Bristow of doing the president's dirty work.

"It disgusts me, and Mr. Clinton's lawyers are letting it happen. These are the same tired old tactics that have been used against rape victims and molested children," she said.

Clinton, who was Arkansas governor when he allegedly propositioned the former state employee, stands accused of sexual harassment. Jones sued Ferguson for defamation, fingering him as the source of a published account that depicted her as eager to be Clinton's mistress.

Bristow said he is not influenced by the president's lawyers. "I'm doing what is best for my client. If one files a defamation case, one puts one's personal reputation at issue," said the attorney, who once defended one of Clinton's major political foes in an Arkansas criminal matter.

The president's defense team, led by Washington powerhouse Robert Bennett, served subpoenas in the last two weeks on groups with ties to Carpenter McMillan or Jones' legal fund.

But Bennett and his partner, Mitchell Ettinger, say the fund-raising documents will lay bare Jones' motives. Their longstanding theory that she is bankrolled by Clinton's political enemies — a charge she vigorously disputes — seemed to gain some credence Oct. 1 when the Rutherford Institute, a Virginia conservative group, enlisted as her official fund-raising arm.

"We believe she is being controlled by people who are extreme right-wing political Clinton-haters, and that's relevant to issues of motive and bias," Bennett said.

As for an out-of-court settlement, he said no negotiations had been held since Jones' Dallas firm, Rader, Campbell, Fisher & Pyke, came on board this month. Other sources close to the case didn't expect talks to resume until closer to the judge's mid-April decision on summary judgment, if at all.

White House sources say first lady Hillary Rodham Clinton believes her husband's denials of misconduct but wants a settlement in order to avoid an embarrassing trial.

Calls to Rader, Campbell, Fisher & Pyke were not returned.

Bennett's team is also pursuing suspicions that Jones' income tax returns showed she has treated her legal fund as a business. "It will be instructive to see how she's using this money," Ettinger said. "If she is gleefully profiting from this case, it goes directly to motive and credibility."

The whole trip will take several years; the probe will travel around Venus twice, swing back by the Earth, then on to Jupiter and Saturn.

Gurnett and a team of 21 co-investigators from 10 institutions in six countries spent $10 million and nine years building a Radio and Plasma Wave instrument that will be used on Cassini.

The 82-pound instrument will study plasma, radio emission, space dust from Saturn. The researchers say they hope to pinpoint the length of Saturn's day, currently calculated at 10.4 Earth hours.

"There's already a number, but that was obtained by Voyager, which just flew by the planet and spent a week or so in the vicinity of the planet and flew away," Gurnett said. "With Cassini, we're going to get into orbit around the planet."

Willie Robison, a software programmer for the Radio and Plasma Wave Science (RPWS) project, said the team's main concern is getting the probe into space.

"As long as the thing makes it into orbit, we've got it made," he said. "Like anything, if it turns into a fireball when it goes up, everybody kind of has to go out and get their résumés ready."

Dating game heats up when weather cools

The vibrant greens that marked summer's heat are fast becoming crushed crimson as the seasons turn, and I am once again witness to a remarkable annual phenomenon: Midwest Mating.

Pardon a statement of the obvious, but it's going to be cold soon. Very cold. Cold enough to determine the course of every day's events. Cold enough to forge a bond between you and any other person struggling through the same season. Midwesterners have a down-home, friendly hick reputation that serves quite well come December, when you can't afford to offend the same stranger who just may have jumper cables for your '86 Oldsmobile.

Now although this year's unseasonable warm front has kept students in spaghetti-strap tops and sockless Birks, there will soon be a morning that's accompanied by a chilly nose and frigid toes. These occurrences trigger a primordial response in those who spend year after year through the crushing cold of winter. It's sometimes misdiagnosed as Midterm Stress, because the events coincide, but that preoccupied speculative look should rightfully be attributed to a more deeply rooted pairing pattern.

Lynnette Mozena

The change in season causes those with boyfriends or girlfriends to reavow their affection and sends singles scurrying for prospective partners. This is most apparent in the student population, as academic life often distracts from amorous pursuit until fall signals a pressing need for company.

There are a great number of benefits in having a significant other during the months of sleet, slush and sled dogs, which far outweigh any objections. A time will come when it will be handy to have someone around to split the cost of pizza delivery when the weather demands crampons and a ski mask. Consider dating delivery drivers themselves to cut spending even further.

Hundreds can also be saved as one party camps out at the home of another, and 98.6 degrees is much easier to maintain in dyads. Still, those fortunate enough to spark a romance now will have more than just the fiscal advantage of a sharp decline in heating bills. Case in point: the doubling of wardrobes, given the androgyny of winter apparel. Bonus points if your partner has cable, Sega Genesis and a membership at Blockbuster Video. No need to be both socially and sensory deprived when the sun starts setting at 6 p.m.

Even the calendar reflects this trend toward twosomes. Halloween is perhaps the only shack-sanctioned holiday. Dressing as a Playboy bunny or scantily clad caveman is not only acceptable, but encouraged. Last year, I went as a vapid, half-dressed fairy. To top that, I've only got a few weeks to come up with a Catholic schoolgirl outfit, complete with flask tucked into knee socks. Oct. 31 remains the day most combo-conducive, so don't let the opportunity leave you with the full moon and Ouija board for company.

If, however, you're still swinging stag in November, there are still slim pickings yet to be had. Generally, these can be put in three categories: emotionally arid, reality-challenged and bipolar. These categories aren't meant to be entirely undesirable, as each individual still has his or her own redeeming qualities. In order to secure one of these prototypes, use Thanksgiving to your advantage. Simply introduce the chosen one to extended family, shortcutting the dating process and establishing official mate status before the first snow.

There is a third holiday-helped option, which I hesitate to mention for it requires a mercenary mind. For those who still haven't hooked up, even under the mistletoe, there's one last-ditch recourse to make it through to spring. Simply string someone along long-distance, one that has moved to some solar-enhanced locale so that winter break remains affordable, and spend your Christmas in sand, surf, and Corona with lime. Then head home with seashells and great tan lines. That Mediterranean look will boost popularity with any hotties upon your return, and a Dear John letter will suffice to end ties with your coastal cutie.

So don't let this current respite from the season's normal chill lull you into complacency. The fish in the sea are going to become a scarce commodity soon. I myself have taken to roaming the streets at night, and casing Hardees after 2 a.m. for the naively unsuspecting. Who knows, you may get lucky and land a wealthy exchange student from Spain with a weekend villa in the Caribbean.

WHAT THE ABORTION INDUSTRY IS REALLY CONCERNED ABOUT...

Life in limbo for temporary residents

First-year college students can expect to live in a crowded dormitory room with another person.

Together, they will learn to live with someone from a different background. There will be fights, late-night conversation, uncomfortable silences and unforgettable memories. The first year in a dorm is definitely an experience unlike any other, unless one isn't assigned to a dorm room and ends up getting stuck in temporary housing.

Temporary housing. Even the name sounds ominous. The nine residence halls on the UI campus house more than 5,000 students, but the UI has not been able to properly house all incoming students for the past 15 years. The UI's inept inability to find housing for those whose housing applications have been accepted has led to numerous students being housed in the lounges on residence-hall floors.

Temporarily, of course.

Financially, temporary housing is a great deal — only $2-00 a night. Yet, instead of having just one person to live with, temporary residents get six. With seven people living in one non-air conditioned room crammed with bunk beds, tables, chairs, suitcases, clothes and other personal items, the students have been unable to unpack. It's no wonder people in temporary housing are given sympathetic looks whenever someone learns about their living situation. It doesn't matter how much money a student can save living in temporary housing. What matters is how much they can lose, experience-wise.

Students in temporary housing are not considered residents of the floor where their lounge is located. They are not allowed to take part in floor government or participate in intramural sports. And the regular floor residents do not always make the temporary residents feel welcome.

Temporary residents are resentful because they tie-up the lounge that should be available to the regular residents as an alternate place to study or socialize.

Temporary residents are resentful because they tie-up the lounge that should be available to the regular residents as an alternate place to study or socialize.

The lounge is closed off to hall residents, the hall is closed off to lounge residents. And the UI calls this a solution.

It isn't working.

This fall an estimated 350 students were put into temporary housing. As of Sept. 24, 220 students were still stuck in lounges, listening to empty promises from Residence Services. Residence Services hopes to have all 84 women housed by Thanksgiving break and the remaining 136 men placed in regular rooms by winter break.

There simply is not enough room in the Residence Halls to go around. The UI may have depended on people leaving the UI, or choosing apartment living of dorm life in order to free up the congested living in the past, but that dependency isn't working this year.

If the enrollment numbers stay steady, then the UI needs to think about building another residence hall or getting rid of single-room occupancy. Or the possibility of placing temporary residents in commercial settings.

The UI must do something, so that the lounges can again serve as lounges, not homes.

Kudos to Kersevich for social work story

To the Editor:

A special thank you to Sarah Kersevich for her excellent article in the Sept. 16 issue, in which she featured the School of Social Work in the weekly "Departmentally Speaking" column. She did an excellent job of culling out the salient facts after interviewing many people. There is one important correction I would like to make now, however. She listed Prof. Jeff Jenson as director of our new Ph.D. program, to begin next year. In fact, Prof. Lorraine Dorfman is the coordinator of that program, but she could not attend the interview session because she was teaching at that time. Jenson, who is on the doctoral committee, was representing her.

Thank you again for the good article and for the chance to correct one important point.

Pausing to praise Mother Teresa

To the Editor:

Mother Teresa's death has saddened the world. This humble woman of God won the hearts of every human being she touched. She won hearts not with money, power, status or fame, but by obediently following the call of God. She spoke words that were simple, yet each and every word penetrated the human soul. She lived to perfection the words of Jesus, "If anyone wants to be my disciple, they must deny their very self, take up their cross and follow me."

She died herself, and saw her savior in each and every human face. Her greatness didn't lie in superhuman abilities. She was the very extension of the risen Jesus.

Mother Teresa cared for the thousands of hopeless and dying people. While she was on earth, she looked into the eyes of each and every human being with love and compassion. As she entered heaven, I think she saw each of those eyes a second time in the eyes of Christ. May each of us look into the eyes of the poor and broken, knowing that we will see them again when we die. May we hear Jesus say, "When I was hungry you fed me. When I was thirsty you gave me drink. When I was lonely you comforted me. When I was imprisoned you visited me... Whatever you do to the least of my brothers and sisters you do unto me." As Mother Teresa proclaimed the gospel of life, my wife and I see Christ in the unborn, the poor, the dying, the sick, the elderly, the imprisoned, the widow, the orphan and the hopeless. May we see the incalculable worth of each human being.

Yes, we are all saddened by the death of this saintly woman, but we all rejoice with her, for she has entered the beautiful mansion God has prepared for her.

Hoover knew children are our future

To appreciate the kind of man Herbert Hoover was and to learn a bit about his many contributions during an extraordinarily long and productive life, drive out Rochester Avenue — a.k.a. Herbert Hoover Highway — to nearby West Branch. There you can enjoy the spacious grounds and restored prairie, stop in restored buildings and study the fascinating exhibits at the Hoover Presidential Museum and Library. These show the many benefits this public-spirited man bestowed on the country and the world, and demonstrate that no matter which of his many hats he wore, he was steadfastly devoted to the welfare of children.

In a large glass case, there's a large reprint of the "The Children's Charter." Issued with considerable fanfare in 1930, the result of President Hoover's White House Conference on Child Health and Protection, it proclaims "the rights of the child as the first rights of citizenship." Actually, explains archivist Dale Mayer, it is a refined and expanded version of the even earlier "Child's Bill of Rights," a document put out by the American Child Health Association, founded by Hoover in 1922 and headed by him at the time.

His solicitude for the nation's young, according to Mayer, was first aroused when he saw that, after America entered World War I, the armed services were forced to reject large numbers of applicants because their lack of education or poor health — or both — disqualified them.

Therefore, 74 years ago and again 67 years ago, officials and leaders acknowledged America's obligations to its children and proclaimed every child's right to love, nurture, health and education in a safe and stable environment.

Perhaps Hoover's memories of his own serene childhood in West Branch were, in part, the reason for his lifelong commitment to children. Although his father died when he was six and his mother when he was nine, after which relatives in Oregon took him in, Hoover recollected, "I prefer to think of Iowa as I saw it through the eyes of a 10-year-old boy. Those eyes were filled with the wonders of Iowa's streams and woods, of mystery and of growing crops."

One mark of the man's greatness is that he never took a penny for any of his years of selfless service because, he wrote, "I felt that I owed my country a debt that was repayable and I had no right to ask her to pay me."

When Sen. Tom Harkin, then, in a disgustingly tacky ploy, contemptuously called George Bush "George Herbert Hoover Bush," he was displaying his own bad taste and lack of discrimination. Hoover had principles, integrity and the courage of his convictions — the very antithesis of Bush.

Was Hoover a great president? That's unresolved. Some believe he might have been had not the stock market crash slammed him like a tsunami. His agenda when he assumed office, only seven months before the disaster, embodied, among other things, embarking on overdue reforms of our old-age pensions, prisons, child-health programs and our shameful policy toward Native Americans.

He certainly wasn't responsible for the depression. It had been brewing for years, had anybody seen that. In fact, there are those today who queasily detect in the current demented stock market gyrations similar warning signals.

Dale Mayer asserts that his failure to take drastic measures at the federal level in the crisis has been misunderstood.

"He didn't want to use government if it could be avoided," says Mayer. "He started out mobilizing gigantic public works programs but concluded that they worked in emergencies but not in the long run. It was this rationale which prompted Hoover's criticism of Roosevelt."

However you assess him as president, Herbert Hoover was a great humanitarian and a great and good man. He consistently promoted good public education, believing that "self-government can only succeed through an informed electorate" and that "... if we would prevent the growth of class distinctions and constantly refresh our leadership with the ideals of our people, we must draw constantly from the general mass. The full opportunity for every boy and girl to rise through the selective processes of education along secure to us this leadership."

So now, seven decades after the Children's Bill of Rights and the Children's Charter, where do we stand and how, if at all, have we progressed? At least one American child in five suffers in grinding poverty and squalor, many without homes, and the numbers are growing. Public schools, especially in the inner cities, are unsafe facilities in unsafe neighborhoods, understaffed, under-maintained and under-funded. And the sectarians out to raid the public treasury for their own purposes succeed in getting vouchers, a bad situation will become worse, spelling disaster rather than reform for public schools and the children who attend them.

If Hoover were alive today, he'd be disappointed, grieved, indignant and appalled at the plight of the nation's children. And you can be sure that tackling the multiple, interlocking problems which beset them would be a priority.

Where is the man or woman who will step into the giant shoes he left?

mitted to NASA scientists via a large antenna on the probe.

The whole trip will take seven years; the probe will travel around Venus twice, swing back by the Earth, then on to Jupiter and Saturn.
Gurnett and a team of 21 co-investigators from 10 institutions in six countries spent $10 million and nine years building a Radio and Plasma Wave instrument that will be used on Cassini.

The 82-pound instrument will study plasma, radio emissions and space dust from Saturn. The researchers say they hope to pinpoint the length of Saturn's day, currently calculated at 10.4 Earth hours.

"There's already a number, but that was obtained by Voyager, which just flew by the planet and spent a week or so in the vicinity of the planet and flew away," Gurnett said.
"With Cassini, we're going to go into orbit around the planet."

Willie Robison, a software programmer for the Radio and Plasma Wave Science (RPWS) project, said the team's main concern is getting the probe into space.

"As long as the thing makes it up into orbit, we've got it made," he said.
"Like anything, if it turns into a fireball when it goes up, everybody kind of has to go out and get their resumé ready."

"We depend on research contracts to pay our paycheck, and right now, everything is sort of depending on this thing making it to Saturn. If there's any problems, there'll be a whole load of sad people," Robison said.

Cassini is also carrying the Huygens Probe, which will drop into the atmosphere of Titan to study the moon's atmospheric makeup.

"Titan turns out to be a nitrogen atmosphere, which is really unique because the Earth's atmosphere is primarily nitrogen," Gurnett said.
"The really surprising thing was there's all kinds of organic molecules in the atmosphere."

The organic molecules have led scientists to believe that Titan may be like the Earth when life began.
"It was kept so far out in the solar system that it was kept in a deep freeze, so it looks like it was at the beginning of the solar system," Gur-nett said.

From the Voyager mission, Gur-nett said they found large storms on Saturn. The RPWS will be able to monitor any lightning that may be present on the planet.

The RPWS will also look for lightning on Titan, which Gurnett said would be very important if it's found.

"Lightning has been suggested as a mechanism by which you can convert organic molecules to more complex organic molecules," Gurnett said.
"There might be lightning there, and we'll certainly be able to tell with our instruments."

Along with monitoring radio and plasma waves, Gurnett's instrument also serves another function for which it wasn't originally designed.

"Strangely enough, our instrument is very good at detecting dust. When a dust particle hits the spacecraft it makes a little explosion, and we detect a pulse on our antenna," he said. "I'll have some of the best measurements of small dust particles of Saturn."

All the information they gather,
Gurnett said, will serve as data for Ph.D. theses. Gurnett has helped about 47 people with their Ph.D. and masters' theses since 1965.

"You've got to have data on some state-of-the-art topic," he said. "This state-of-the-art research on plasma physics has served as the data that other students have worked on and written their theses on."

In order to get a spacecraft to another planet, there are a lot of constraints that don't allow for much flexibility, and that takes a toll on what they can do, Robison said.

"You have mass limits, power limits, and you've got budget limits, which you have to stay in so you can buy parts," Robison said. "So there's all sorts of compromises you take when you build the hardware, so there isn't quite enough hardware to get the job done."

Programs must be worked so they use the minimum amount of power and time, which takes some doing, he said.

Scientists cannot begin full-scale studies until the craft arrives at Jupiter in 2002, RPWS co-investigator Bill Kurth said.

getting.
"Funds are spent on either student aid or construction programs so students benefit directly from these increases (in tuition)," he said.

The UISG proposed the survey as a response to increases in tuition.
The Regents are expected to raise tuition another 3.9 percent for the next school year.

"If the Regents choose to increase tuition, then at least the students should get to choose (where it will go)," Miller said.

UI President Mary Sue Coleman said she was concerned with student priorities but also said tuition increases are important to keep the UI a competitive school.

"Without tuition increases, we couldn't give students what they need," she said. "I want to listen to students about what they want."

Miller said the survey gives students a unique opportunity to see if the UI can put its money where its mouth is.

"We've given the University the facts and the information," she said,
"and now we're giving the University the chance to show us that student priorities matter."

The surveys were distributed proportionally to different parts of the campus, including mixes of graduate and undergraduate students.

The top five concerns listed on the survey were maintaining student aid; funding instructional equipment; funding library operations and technological support; funding improvements to classrooms and other campus gathering places; and funding student academic and support services.

The survey also included an "other" category for students to fill in the concerns which weren't listed on the notecard.

On Friday, the bodies of Ernesto, bound in death as they were in life,

somehow kept together in the raging river that carried them a mile downhill.

From the morgue, Alicia took the bodies to a funeral parlor, where she never left their side.

Yet before they were buried, Alicia suffered a final injustice.

Her family already had a choice plot paid for, in the middle of a grassy field, among the unpainted concrete tombs. The gravediggers put the hole in a far corner, beside a stream.

"I don't want them to be at the side of a river," she sobbed, pleading with the cemetery director. "At any moment another storm can come and wash them away again."

But the director was firm, and wanted a receipt — proof of purchase of a central plot. And that, like everything else she owned, was now entombed beneath feet of mud.

So she gave in.

"My parents and my sister," she said, "have got to rest."

Horrific images of slaughter haunt Algeria's 'war behind doors'

Algerians live in fear only to die in silence in war without a name.

By Elaine Ganley
Associated Press

PARIS — Children are murdered and their bodies incinerated. Throats are slit. Heads are severed. The instruments of death are crude: knives, axes, even hoes.

Years after disbelief greeted the first reports of atrocities, there is no longer any doubt.

Such nightmare images are slices of life, and death, in Algeria today. The terror unfolds night after night, less than 300 miles from the shores of Europe, and now within metropolitan Algiers, the nation's capital.

The horrors of the conflict between Islamic insurgents and the military-backed regime are largely invisible, and the victims' screams go mostly unheard.

The Algerian government, bent on economic reforms and attracting foreign investment, offers frequent assurances that the violence is winding down and declines foreign help. Most nations have stayed silent.

The Algerian media is censored. Foreign correspondents are rarely issued visas, are seriously restricted when visas are given and have been the target of death threats by militants.

A sense that "this can't happen" makes it hard for even Algerians to grasp the cruelty that defines the crisis.

In this war behind closed doors, one can only make an informed guess about the death toll, variously estimated at 75,000 to 100,000 since

Friends and relatives look at bodies lined up in the streets, trying to identify them after at least 300 people were massacred at Rais in the Sidi Moussa region, south of Algiers.

1992. That was the year the insurgency began, to win back votes "stolen" when the army aborted legislative elections the Islamic Salvation Front was winning.

Today, a new vocabulary is emerging to describe the horrors.

"It's genocide. There is no other word," said Djamil Benrabah, who co-heads Our Algeria, an organization that helps victims.

It is "the pure and simple extermination of a defenseless civilian population," said Benrabah, whose wife was killed in a 1995 attack by gunmen. He spoke in a telephone interview from Algeria.

There also is a psychological terror. It stems in part from the nature of the conflict, neither a full-blown civil war nor a classic urban guerrilla campaign. The majority of attacks occur in isolated areas, but intermittent car bombings in Algiers or at markets make everyone would-be victims.

There is a surreal aspect to this conflict that kills indiscriminately, but fails to derail political reform and leaves untouched Algeria's petroleum sector, which provides 95 percent of the nation's export income.

President Liamine Zeroual has promoted a sense of well-being, undertaking a vast revamping of the nation's institutions. In less than two years, he has staged presidential elections, a referendum and a parliamentary vote. Local elections are set for Oct. 23.

The Aug. 29 massacre of about 300 people in Rais, a bedroom community of Algiers, was a turning point. "It was the first time people understood it was really true," said Salima

Ghezali, a respected commentator and editor-in-chief of the newspaper La Nation, banned since December.

Rais, she said during a visit to Paris, is made up of emigrants from the capital. Families took the bodies of loved ones, many mutilated, back to Algiers for burial. Reality finally sank in.

The Armed Islamic Group said in a Sept. 26 communique that the massacres were "an offering to God." The group, said to be a volatile mix of Muslim extremists, desperate youths and common bandits, vowed to continue its bloody crusade to topple the regime and install an Islamic state based on their strict interpretation of Koranic law. Among other things, that would require women to wear veils and stay home and make Koranic education obligatory.

Since Rais, more than 600 people have been killed by armed groups in massacres around Algiers, finally rousing the international community.

In the latest violence, taking place overnight Saturday in a village south of the capital, attackers slit the throats of a family of 11, then hacked the corpses with axes, hospital sources said Sunday. They spoke on condition of anonymity out of fear of reprisals. No one claimed responsibility for the attack.

Zeroual has rejected an offer by U.N. Secretary-General Kofi Annan to mediate, equating any foreign initiative with interference.

The killings escalated in increments, first targeting government or security forces, then intellectuals, journalists and foreigners before exploding into random savagery.

More than three years ago, reports of decapitations filtered out of rural villages. Journalists were skeptical.

Today, atrocities are routinely confirmed by hospital medical workers and catalogued by newspaper photographers. Grisly evidence, like the recent photo of a child, his throat slashed, being pulled from a well, leaves no doubt.

One of the main insurgent groups, the Islamic Salvation Army, the Salvation Front's military arm, called a cease-fire Oct. 1.

Observers put little stock in the truce by a diminished, poorly equipped organization with no base in the Algiers region, where the Armed Islamic Group thrives.

But the unprecedented move — the fruit of negotiations with the military — underscores the complexities and alliances in Algeria.

Many Algerians are convinced there is at least passive complicity between various armed groups, particularly government-armed local militias and the military establishment — the real seat of power in the North African nation.

That theory was bolstered by the slow response of security forces to three recent massacres in less than a month, each carried out in the shadow of military barracks. Victims under siege banged on pots and pans to alert authorities, survivors recounted. But soldiers arrived to four hours after the carnage.

"Between the military, the militias, the armed groups, there are far too many people with the means to commit these massacres," said Ghezali, who, like most journalists in Algeria, lives in hiding.

"You never know who is standing in front of you. And, what is perhaps most terrifying, you don't know who kills."

Other landmarks fared less well in the three new quakes, which all hit within a six-minute spell around noon. The largest of the quakes had a magnitude of 4.5, the Civil Defense Ministry said.

Among the structures hit hard Sunday was the 15th-century bell tower above the city hall in Foligno, an Umbria town heavily damaged in the September quakes.

About 5,000 people, including many politicians, took part Sunday in a seven-mile march between Assisi and Perugia, Umbria's capital. Many of the participants urged the government to do more to repair buildings and shelter people left homeless.

Test pilot broke sound barrier for first time 50 years ago

NEVADA CITY, Calif. (AP) — Alone, he punched a hole in the sky at the dawn of the space age.

On an October day 50 years ago, hiding the pain of broken ribs, Air Force test pilot Chuck Yeager eased into the little X-1 rocket plane — known as the "orange beast" — and blasted toward the sound barrier.

Some scientists feared the invisible wall of air would smash any airplane that tried to pierce it. The X-1 bucked, the needle on the airspeed indicator bouncing. But no matter — there was no safe way to bail out.

Then suddenly, Yeager was doing what no one had ever done before, what a British pilot had died trying to do. Yeager was flying at 700 mph, slightly faster than the air could carry the shriek of his own speeding plane.

On the California desert below, an aircraft's sonic boom thundered into human ears for the first time.

First state beats cancer, now the tobacco industry

MIAMI (AP) — Norma Broin has a knack for beating the odds. After being told she didn't have long to live, she beat lung cancer. Then she took on the tobacco industry and its undefeated record in secondhand smoke lawsuits.

Broin declared victory Friday after the industry agreed to pay $300 million to establish a research foundation on diseases blamed on cigarettes.

But Broin, the lead plaintiff in the class-action case filed by 60,000 attendants, is not done yet. She plans to bring her own suit against the industry.

The settlement marks the first time the tobacco industry agreed to pay damages in a secondhand-smoke lawsuit.

The attendants, who had sued for $5 billion, get no money under the settlement, but they are now free to sue individually under terms that could make it far easier for them to win.

Antarctic ozone 'hole' returns

WASHINGTON (AP) — The ozone "hole" over the South Pole is back and it's as big as ever.

The National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration reported Friday that satellite measurements show the area of thinned ozone covers nearly 8.5 million square miles, about the same as in 1995 and 1996.

The hole is actually an area of thinned ozone, where the gas is depleted by chemical reactions in air trapped over the South pole during the Antarctic winter.

Ozone helps block damaging ultraviolet rays from the sun, and scientists have been concerned that, if it becomes depleted, there could be an increase in skin cancer and cataracts. Certain chemicals believed to damage the ozone have been banned, including the chlorofluorocarbons widely used as aerosol propellants and in refrigerators and air conditioners.

Aviation chief: Argentine plane may have broken apart before crashing

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (AP) — An Argentine airplane may have broken apart in the air before it crashed in Uruguay, killing all 74 people aboard, Uruguay's civil aviation chief said Sunday.

The Austral airline plane "may have come apart in the air because the remains are spread so far apart," Lt. Col. Walter Garcia said. He also said lightning may have damaged the plane, but did not elaborate.

The Argentine newspaper Clarín on Sunday quoted unidentified investigators as saying they suspected the plane may have come apart in the air, possibly losing a wing, as a result of violent turbulence.

Storms bearing strong winds, rain, hail and lightning were raging at the time of the crash Friday night, and the "extremely difficult weather" may have been to blame, officials have said.

Garcia previously had told the Associated Press that the storm "explains only part" of the accident, but he did not elaborate. He said the flight data recorders must be found to help determine the exact cause.

U.S. aircraft carrier arrives in Gulf following Iranian maneuvers

DUBAI, United Arab Emirates (AP) — The aircraft carrier USS Nimitz arrived in the Persian Gulf on Sunday, a day after Iran launched major naval maneuvers in the strategic waterway.

The United States ordered the Nimitz to the area two weeks ahead of schedule after Iranian warplanes bombed two Iranian insurgent bases in southern Iraq on Sept. 29. The raids violated the Western allies' "no-fly" zone.

Washington warned Iran and Iraq, which sent up two fighters after the Iranian raid, against further violations of the zone.

On Saturday, the Iranian navy started 10 days of war games, which state-run Tehran television said were meant to "display Iran's capability and increasing strength ... in the face of the onslaught of foreigners."

The broadcast showed warships, helicopters and submarines moving into place for the exercises, which will cover 15,000 square miles.

More than 50 warships, including two Russian-built submarines, and scores of planes and helicopters were to take part, the official Islamic Republic News Agency said.

Robinson to leave Hawkeyes

Junior Alvin Robinson has decided to leave the Iowa basketball program with less than one week remaining until the Hawkeyes begin practice.

The 6-foot-8, 225-pounder from Chicago averaged 0.9 points, 2.2 rebounds and 0.3 assists per game last season in his role as a backup center to Guy Rucker.

Iowa junior J.R. Koch said Coach Tom Davis informed the team of Robinson's decision Thursday. "We sort of thought he was happy," Koch said. "I guess he's going to move on. We wish him the best."

Robinson could not be reached for comment Sunday. He is currently enrolled in classes at the UI, but should be ready to transfer, he has two years of eligibility remaining. Koch said Davis "was really vague" in giving the team details of why Robinson was leaving.

Robinson's role in the upcoming season was expected to be similar to that of his sophomore season. "We were expecting Robinson to come off the bench and give us good minutes at the five position," Koch said.

"Nobody knew it was going to happen," senior Darryl Moore added. "Everybody was surprised. He got everybody hyped before the games."

Fisher out as Michigan basketball coach

By Harry Atkins
Associated Press

ANN ARBOR, Mich. — Steve Fisher is out as Michigan coach as abruptly as he came in.

Fisher was fired late Friday, less than a week before the Wolverines' first basketball practice. The move by new athletic director Tom Goss comes eight years after Fisher was named coach on the eve of the 1989 NCAA tournament which the Wolverines won.

"I have decided that it is time to make a change in the head men's basketball coach at the University of Michigan," Goss said at a news conference following the football team's 23-6 win over Northwestern on Saturday.

Goss said he did not give Fisher a chance to resign.

"I just felt we needed a new direction in Michigan basketball," Goss said.

The announcement came two days after a Kansas law firm hired by the university to investigate the Wolverines basketball program issued a report that called into question Fisher's role in arranging complimentary tickets for booster Eddie Martin.

"My conversation with coach Fisher yesterday did not focus as much on particular findings of the report as it did my sense of what we need to do to move forward with a program of which we are all proud," Goss said.

Goss said both he and university President Lee Bollinger were "troubled by evidence in that report that our basketball program has not been held to the standards we believe all programs at the University of Michigan should meet."

Goss said he met with Fisher on Friday and decided that a change was needed. Goss declined to comment further on his talk with Fisher.

"I respect Steve Fisher and his right to privacy, so I do not wish to discuss in any detail the substance of our conversation," Goss said.

A man who answered the door at Fisher's house Saturday said Fisher did not want to talk to the media.

Goss said a search for a replacement will begin immediately. Until a successor is named, assistant basketball coach Brian Ellerbe will run the team under Goss' supervision.

The coach who came up most frequently in media reports as a possible successor was California coach Ben Braun, a former coach at Eastern Michigan. Others possible candidates mentioned include Oklahoma coach Kelvin Sampson and North Carolina assistant Phil Ford.

Fisher told investigators with the Bond, Schoeneck & King law firm he was responsible for only a few of the 32 complimentary tickets Martin received during a three-year period. But investigators found that Fisher made out 16 of the passes, and that his secretary or other clerical workers made out 10.

Six other complimentary tickets bore the initials of former assistant Perry Watson, who has denied leaving tickets for Martin.

■ Behind the arm of rookie pitcher Livan Hernandez, the Florida Marlins put themselves one game away from the World Series Sunday, beating Atlanta 2-1.

By Ben Walker

MIAMI — When Livan Hernandez slipped the final pitch past Fred McGriff for his 15th strikeout, the Florida Marlins went absolutely wild.

Big celebration in the middle of the diamond, with players rushing from the bench and bullpen to join in. Fireworks overhead, mascot Billy the Marlin on the mound waving a banner and a crowd of 51,982 going crazy.

Just like they'd won the World Series. Suffice to say that sometime before the Marlins head off to Atlanta, manager Jim Leyland will remind his team, from experience: They're not even in the World Series yet.

Hernandez moved the Marlins within one victory of making it, however, pitching one of the great games in post-season history as the Marlins beat the Braves 2-1 Sunday for a 3-2 lead in the NL championship series.

The 22-year-old rookie set an NLCS record for strikeouts, allowing only three hits in outdueling Greg Maddux. Hernandez won his second game of the series, not bad for someone not originally in Leyland's playoff rotation.

"I'd like to say I expected this," Leyland said. "But I don't think there's a

LSU shocks top-ranked Gators

By Mary Foster

BATON ROUGE, La. — No more jokes. LSU stopped all the wisecracks by doing what coach Gerry DiNardo had spent the week saying was impossible — beating the defending national champions.

And the Tigers did it by doing the impossible — running against Florida and shutting down the Fun & Gun offense.

"We were sick and tired about hearing that we had no chance to win this game," running back Kevin Faulk said.

On Sunday, DiNardo noted that he had said LSU couldn't win if it was the same team that played Vanderbilt a week earlier.

Vandy lost 7-6 but only by shooting itself in the foot in the final seconds.

Florida may have thought the real LSU team was the one that had played the Commodores. "That's a possibility," DiNardo said.

Instead, the Tigers simply "played a better game" than the opposition. It's that simple, he said.

"From last week to this week, we were a different team," DiNardo said. "You just never know how young people will react. I guess that's why they play the game, why they keep score."

In an upset unlike any before in LSU's 104-year football history, the Tigers (5-1, 3-1 Southeastern Conference) shocked top-ranked Florida 28-21.

In the latest rankings, Florida dropped from No. 1 to No. 7 and LSU moved from No. 14 to No. 8.

LSU had never before beaten a No. 1 team and had never beaten Steve Spurrier, either as a player or a coach.

"I knew it was going to happen this way," LSU defensive tackle Chuck Wiley said. "We won the big game, the biggest game. No. 1 in the country, and we brought them down. They're out of the clouds now."

LSU defensive coordinator Carl Reese came up with a plan designed to cope with Florida's high-powered offense. Frequently, the Tigers replaced eight defenders and put in a new alignment of three defensive linemen, three linebackers and five defensive backs, and mixed zone and man-

Iowa soccer falls in weekend matches

■ Hawkeye soccer coach Stephanie Gabbert lost to her former team Wisconsin Sunday, 2-0.

By Becky Gruhn
The Daily Iowan

When Wisconsin coach Dean Duerst saw his team shut out the Iowa Hawkeyes Sunday at the Iowa Soccer Field, 2-0, it was hard for him to fully appreciate the sweetness of the win.

Even though the Badgers boosted their conference record to 3-4 and climbed up in the Big Ten standings, Duerst felt it was unfortunate the victory had to come at the expense of his former three-year assistant Badger coach and current Hawkeye coach Stephanie Gabbert.

"I think there were a lot of personal and sentimental aspects put into this game," Duerst said. "Stephanie gave a lot to the Wisconsin program and that's important for us to continue to carry that on."

"Iowa gave us quite a game and I was quite impressed with how they played. Our defenders stayed toe-to-toe with them and didn't give them any free opportunities at the goal."

The loss dropped Iowa's record to 5-8 overall, 2-5 in the Big Ten.

Under gray skies and steady rain, the Badgers wasted little time getting on the board as Wisconsin's Allison Wagner scored unassisted after only two minutes and 15 seconds had passed. Iowa stepped up its defense for the remainder of the half but fell victim to another quick goal to begin the second half.

Wagner gave Wisconsin its second goal 55 seconds into the second half. Gabbert said the two goals were given up because of momentary defensive lapses by her team.

"When you give up a goal in the first three minutes of each half, that's a problem," the Iowa coach said. "Teams are most susceptible in the first five minutes of each half and they attacked our little mistakes. "Other than those times we played really well. We were still putting pressure on them up until the last second and that's a very good thing."

Both teams recorded nine shots-on-goal. Iowa also drew six corner kicks. Forward Kate Walse said those numbers added up to missed opportunities for the Hawkeyes.

"We had a lot of opportunities we just weren't connecting on," Walse said. "We've been playing

PACKERS 24, BEARS 23

Bears lose, but 'when you're 0-6, you have to go for it'

CHICAGO (AP) — The Green Bay Packers don't care that they were 11-2 point favorites over the winless Chicago Bears.

And it didn't matter to the defending Super Bowl champions that they needed Chicago's unsuccessful 2-point conversion with 1:54 to go to hang on for a 24-23 victory Sunday.

"Everyone expects the defending champs to blow everyone out every week. Well, that's not going to happen," Packers receiver Antonio Freeman said. "We're satisfied where we are."

Brett Favre survived an early interception to throw three touchdown passes and help the Packers (5-2) pull into a tie with Tampa Bay atop the NFC Central.

"I told the guys the same thing I have told them all season — enjoy the win," said coach Mike Holmgren, whose Packers haven't beaten the point spread in 1997. "I don't think we have played our best football this season ... but it is a wonderful win. We are very, very happy."

The Bears (0-7), meanwhile, matched the worst start in their 78-year history and were defeated by their oldest rivals for the eighth straight time. Chicago also lost its first seven games in 1969, when it finished 1-13.

Still, Bears running back Raymond Harris was encouraged by his team's performance.

"I'm really excited because I've seen something in my team that I haven't seen in the previous six weeks," said Harris, who rushed for 101 yards.

Asked if the loss was nothing more than a moral victory, he smiled and said: "If that's what it sounds like, I'm feeling it."

The Bears pulled within a point on Erik Kramer's 22-yard touchdown pass to Chris Penn. Rather than go for an extra-point kick, Chicago coach Dave Wannstedt went for the lead. But Kramer's short pass sailed over Harris, who was covered on the play.

Everyone in Chicago's locker room, especially Wannstedt, defended the call.

"It was a no-brainer," Wannstedt said. "We told the team when we got the ball, 'If we go down and score, we're going for the win.' It was a play that our entire team was comfortable with."

Said tight end Keith Jennings: "We had to do it. We're trying to win it. Win it, win it, win it. If we win, you guys (in the media) would be calling Wannstedt a genius."

The Packers expected the decision.

"When you're 0-6, you have to go for it," Freeman said. "That's the game right there — no timeouts, no wins, nothing to lose. Go for it."

Of course, if the Bears had taken the lead, Favre might have marched the Packers right down the field. Even though he struggled, getting intercepted on his second pass and nearly getting picked off four other times, he's still the NFL's two-time MVP.

"Well, it was a winning performance, so I'll take it," said Favre, who was 19-of-35 for 177 yards.

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — So much for the demise of Dan Marino. All it took was seeing the New York Jets on the other side of the ball for him to start acting like the NFL's career passing leader.

Marino threw for 372 yards and two touchdowns Sunday in leading the Miami Dolphins to a 31-20 victory.

There were few breathtaking throws and not much gambling, the things that made Marino a superstar. But there were plenty of sharp short passes and key third-down conversions as Marino hit 27 of 38 passes.

Sanders breaks out in big way

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — Patience paid huge dividends for Barry Sanders and the Detroit Lions.

Held to 20 yards in a loss to Tampa Bay earlier this season, Sanders broke through for 215 and scored his first rushing touchdowns of the year Sunday to help the Lions end the Buccaneers' eight-game home winning streak with a 27-9 victory.

The three-time NFL rushing champion scored on runs of 80 and 82 yards and caught a 7-yard TD pass.

It was the fifth consecutive 100-yard-plus game for Sanders. He needed just 15 Sunday to move ahead of Jim Brown into fourth place on the league's career rushing list.

"I have to get my father to explain that to me," he said of climbing past Brown with 12,513 yards. "He says I'll never have the talent or skill to pass Jim Brown. It's just good to know that I've succeeded with my team. That's all the (recognition) I need."

National title race heats up

See ya later, Gators.
A trip to Death Valley turned into Florida's fall from No. 1 in The Associated Press' Top 25, and put Penn State back on top — where it started the season.

"The team's probably not quite near as good as everybody thought a No. 1 team should be," coach Steve Spurrier said after No. 8 LSU stunned his Gators 28-21 on Saturday night. Florida (5-1) fell to No. 7.

For now, the Nittany Lions are that No. 1 team following a thrilling 31-27 victory over No. 11 Ohio State (5-1) before a Beaver Stadium record crowd of 97,282.

Penn State was the preseason No. 1 pick and held the ranking until Sept. 21, when the Gators slipped ahead after a 33-20 win over then-No. 4 Tennessee.

The Lions (5-0), who extended the nation's longest winning streak to 10 games, can thank the Tigers for helping them get back to the top.

In beating Florida for the first time in 10 years, LSU (5-1) ended the Gators' 25-game SEC winning streak — two shy of the league record — and also halted the Gators' 19-game road winning streak.

No. 2 Nebraska 49, Baylor 21
At Waco, Texas, Ahman Green scored four TDs and rushed for 158 yards as Nebraska (5-0, 2-0 Big 12) won in the rain. Green scored on runs of 3, 58, 2, and 30 yards for the nation's top-ranked offense.

Enis steamrolls Buckeye defense

■ Penn State got revenge for last season's blowout loss to Ohio State.

By Richard Rosenblatt
Associated Press

STATE COLLEGE, Pa. — For Penn State, beating Ohio State was one small step toward a national championship. The victory was one giant leap for Curtis Enis.

A year's worth of frustration ended Saturday for No. 2 Penn State as Enis ran for 211 yards and a fourth-quarter touchdown in a 31-27 victory over No. 7 Ohio State.

Last season, the Buckeyes beat the Nittany Lions 38-7 — Penn State's worst defeat in 12 years — and went on to win the Big Ten and the Rose Bowl. This time, it is Penn State's turn for a run at the roses and a possible national title.

"When we looked at each other in the huddle," Enis said, tears beginning to well in his eyes, "we just said we worked too hard this summer. We got embarrassed by them last year and we weren't going to let it happen in our place."

And the 6-foot-1, 233-pound Enis was the main reason it didn't. As the game moved into the fourth quarter, it was Enis who got stronger as players on both sides tired, which was understandable since the teams combined for 1,010 yards.

With Ohio State ahead 27-24, Enis ripped off a 24-yard run to the Buckeyes 49. Five plays later, he broke outside, cut back inside and raced 26 yards for the winning touchdown with 10:31 left in the game.

"He got stronger and the other guys got a little tired," Penn State coach Joe Paterno said. "And really, you can't tackle him unless you put everything you got into it."

Added Enis: "I felt like I was on Amtrak going one way."

Enis, from Union City, Ohio, was recruited heavily by Ohio State. Last year, he was held to just 34 yards on 11 carries by the Buckeyes. His 211 yards on 23 carries was the second-best game of his career — he had 241 yards in his first start, a 24-7 win over Southern California to open the 1996 season.

The 21-year-old junior said he received one piece of hate mail saying Ohio State didn't need him, anyway. He kept the letter until just before Saturday's game, when he ripped it up.

In the interview area, Enis, with his mother, Thelma, nearby, cried as he talked about the game.

"We want to prove to people in college football we were a great football team," Enis said. Ohio State John Cooper won't dispute that.

"You could tell they wanted to beat us," Cooper, who had won three of the last four meetings against the Lions, said. "Their offense really kept us off balance and Harris and Enis are great backs."

Before a record crowd of 97,282 at Beaver Stadium, the Lions (5-0, 2-0 Big Ten) fell behind 27-17 with 1:42 left in the third quarter. That's when Enis and Aaron Harris took over.

Harris ran 51 yards for a TD — the longest run of his career — with 20 seconds left in the third quarter to bring the Lions within 27-24.

"We came out flat today," said Buckeyes linebacker Andy Katzenmoyer, who helped shut down Iowa's Tavian Banks last week but couldn't duplicate the feat against Enis. "Banks is more of a speed guy, Enis can run over you or run past you. He has the speed of a 180-pounder and he can run over you like a tackle."

(5-0, 3-0 ACC) took advantage of second-half turnovers by the Blue Devils.

No. 4 North Carolina 30, Wake Forest 12
At Chapel Hill, N.C., the Tar Heels (6-0) converted a fumble and blocked punt into two quick third-quarter scores as they improved to 3-0 in the ACC for the first time since 1983.

No. 5 Michigan 23, Northwestern 6
At Ann Arbor, Mich., Brian Griese threw two TD passes to Jerome Tuman and the Wolverines (5-0, 2-0 Big Ten) held an opponent without a TD for the fourth time.

No. 6 Auburn 49, Louisiana Tech 13
At Auburn, Ala., Dameyune Craig tied a school record with four TD passes for the Tigers (6-0). Craig, who threw for 355 yards, became the first Auburn quarterback to pass for more than 300 yards in four straight games.

No. 9 Tennessee 38, No. 19 Georgia 13
At Knoxville, Tenn., freshman Jamal Lewis gained 232 yards and Peyton Manning threw for 343 yards and four touchdowns to lead the Vols (4-1, 2-1 SEC) over the Bulldogs (4-1, 2-1). The teams combined for 1,069 total yards, with the Vols gaining 628.

No. 10 Washington 30, California 3
At Berkeley, Calif., Rashaan Sheheer ran for 123 yards and two scores for the Huskies. Brock Huard, leading the nation in passing efficiency, threw two TD passes as the Huskies (4-1, 2-0 Pac-10) beat Cal (2-3, 0-2) for the 15th straight time.

Curtis Enis (39), Penn State tailback, eludes the tackle of Ohio State tackler Matt LaVarr (48) with Damon Moore (13) of Ohio State at left, as Enis races 26 yards for the winning touchdown in the fourth quarter at State College, Pa., Saturday.

BIG TEN ROUNDUP

Wisconsin keeps Illinois winless

■ Penn State, Michigan, Michigan State, Wisconsin, and Purdue all recorded conference wins.

Associated Press

Penn State's Nittany Lions are on the right track to the Rose Bowl and a possible national championship.

"I felt like I was on Amtrak going one way," said Curtis Enis after he ran for 211 yards and a fourth-quarter touchdown in the Lions' 31-27 defeat of Ohio State on Saturday.

In other Big Ten games, No. 5 Michigan topped Northwestern 23-6, Michigan State downed Indiana 38-6, No. 24 Wisconsin kept Illinois winless 31-7 and Purdue outscored Minnesota 59-43. No. 15 Iowa did not play.

Brian Griese tossed two touchdown passes to Jerome Tuman at Ann Arbor, Mich., and the Michigan defense held an opponent without a touchdown for the fourth time in five games.

"Against these guys, I'm just happy to win," Griese said. "This is the Big Ten, and we can't look past anyone. Northwestern is the defending Big Ten champion the past two years and we knew we couldn't look past them."

Michigan (5-0, 2-0 Big Ten) leads the series 45-13-2, but the Wildcats (2-5, 0-3) had upset the Wolverines in the previous two meetings.

Sedrick Irvin didn't act like a sophomore in Bloomington, Ind. He was more of a one-man show for 12th-ranked Michigan State (5-0, 2-0).

Irvin rushed for a career-high 178 yards and two touchdowns and returned a punt 80 yards for a score. He totaled 306 yards in rushing, punt returns and receptions against the Hoosiers (1-5, 0-3).

"Last year, I was a baby trying to crawl. This year, I learned from the mistakes and the things that I didn't know last year. So now I'm beginning to walk," Irvin said.

Ron Dayne bullied his way over winless Illinois for 207 yards and two TDs — including a 66-yard romp — at Madison, Wis., as the Badgers (6-1, 3-0) extended its winning streak to six games.

"We expected to do a better job of controlling the running game than we did," Illinois coach Ron Turner said.

The Badgers, who needed last-second kicks the last two weeks to escape with one-point victories over Indiana and Northwestern, put this one away early against the Illini (0-6, 0-3).

Purdue (4-1, 2-0) overwhelmed Minnesota (2-4, 0-2) on Saturday night at Minneapolis with its highest-scoring game in 50 years.

Billy Dicken tied a school record with five TD passes, one more than his total from the previous three seasons, and ran for another to lead the Boiler-makers.

The 4-1 start matches the Boiler-makers' start in 1994.

Shocker/LSU's plan: Keep defense fresh

to-man coverage. Though Florida (5-1, 3-1) demolished Arkansas 56-7 last week, Reese saw something on the film that he felt was a key — the Razorbacks kept pressure on Gators quarterback Doug Johnson. Arkansas got 16 hits on Johnson, forced him to scramble four times and recorded two sacks.

"I thought they had the right idea," Reese said. "The problem was their good players wore down."

LSU committed to keeping fresh players in the game by pulling most of their starters and substituting players who don't regularly play.

"My defensive staff told me there was no way we could stay with these guys except by using fresh people," LSU coach Gerry DiNardo said. "We kept running people in and out — guys who don't ordinarily play that much. They kept the defense fresh. They helped us take Florida out of its usual game."

Johnson completed 32 of 57 passes for 346 yards but was sacked five times and had four interceptions — including one Cedric Donaldson returned 31 yards to score — and no touchdowns, snapping an NCAA-record touchdown pass streak of 62-straight games for the Gators.

"We wanted to get enough bodies in to chase the quarterback," Reese said. "And it provided us some enthusiasm. Fresh legs and fresh minds can make it happen for you."

In addition, LSU, which gained just 28 yards rushing total against Florida last year, gained 330 yards, 158 of that and three touchdowns on the ground. This against a team that had allowed only 32 yards a game rushing.

LSU quarterback Herb Tyler ran for two touchdowns and although he completed just 10 of 17 passes he gained 172 yards and had no interceptions.

"No one thought we could pull this one off," said receiver Josh Booty, who had four catches for 101 yards, including a 15-yarder that gave the Tigers a game-icing first down. "A lot of people didn't give us a shot."

LSU cornerback Cedric Donaldson dances into the end zone after intercepting a pass from Florida quarterback Doug Johnson Saturday.

Fourth-quarter rally lifts LSU

BATON ROUGE, La. (AP) — Florida's reign as the nation's top-ranked team expired at Death Valley.

Cedric Donaldson returned an interception 31 yards for a touchdown and Herb Tyler scored on an 11-yard run during a 93-second span in the fourth quarter as No. 14 LSU shocked the Gators 28-21 Saturday night.

"The team's probably not quite near as good as everybody thought a No. 1 team should be," Florida coach Steve Spurrier said.

The Tigers (5-1, 3-1 SEC) beat Florida (5-1, 3-1) for the first time since 1987 and avenged last year's embarrassing 56-13 loss to the Gators.

"Our defense won tonight," Donaldson said. "If their defense was good, ours was better. If their offense was good, ours was better. We had a total team effort and that's what it takes."

LSU snapped a 14-1 tie with two quick scores early in the fourth quarter.

Donaldson picked off Doug Johnson's pass and returned it all the way to put the Tigers up 21-14 with 13:13 left before the second-largest crowd ever at Tiger Stadium.

On the ensuing kickoff, Florida's Bo Carroll fumbled and Troy Twillie recovered for LSU — one of five turnovers by the Gators. Four plays later, quarterback Tyler ran 11 yards untouched for the score to make it 28-14 with 11:40 remaining.

NHL ROUNDUP

Ottawa's Andreas Dackell, left, falls back after sliding into Los Angeles Kings Sean O'Donnell's glove in the second period Sunday.

Flames 4, Red Wings 4

DETROIT (AP) — The Calgary Flames are still looking for their first victory this season, although tying the Detroit Red Wings was a pretty good trick.

"The last two games we've played really good hockey and it's starting to come," Calgary's Theoren Fleury said after a 4-4 tie with the defending Stanley Cup champions on Sunday night.

Leading the way for the Flames was Cory Stillman, who scored the first hat trick of his career.

"Anytime you play well in Detroit it's great because they're the best," said Stillman. "We battled hard and we're happy. But we would've been happier to get out of here with two points."

The tie left the Red Wings still unbeaten at 4-0-1, but ended their chances of matching the franchise-best 6-0-0 start in 1972-73. The Flames are 0-3-2 after tying their last two games.

Stillman scored his third goal of the night with just 54 seconds left in regulation, forging the tie after the Red Wings took a 4-3 lead with three straight goals earlier in the period.

"It's nice to get three goals," Stillman said. "When I got my chances I capitalized on them."

Vyacheslav Kozlov scored two goals while Brendan Shanahan and Steve Yzerman added one apiece for Detroit, which also got two assists from Nicklas Lidstrom.

Kings 7, Senators 4

INGLEWOOD, Calif. — Luc Robitaille scored the go-ahead goal in the third period and Jozef Stumpel added an insurance goal 21 seconds later as the Los Angeles Kings defeated the Ottawa Senators in their home opener.

The Kings got their first victory after an 0-2-3 season-opening road trip in which four of the five games went into overtime.

Stephane Fiset stopped 21 shots for his first victory in his fifth start.

Robitaille and Stumpel were two of the Kings' off-season acquisitions. Robitaille returned to Los Angeles, where he was a fan favorite and prolific scorer in eight previous seasons. Stumpel was Boston's leading scorer last season.

They teamed up to stun Ottawa goaltender Damian Rhodes. He deflected Aki Berg's shot off to the goalie's right side and into the path of Robitaille, who broke a 4-4 tie at 12:53.

The chants of "Luuuuu" had barely subsided when Stumpel's shot sailed high into the net and caught Rhodes out of the crease.

Glen Murray, playing his 300th career NHL game, added an empty-net goal with 20 seconds remaining on an assist by Stumpel.

The Kings led 4-3 at the end of the second period on a goal by rookie Donald MacLean.

The 20-year-old is one of the youngsters the Kings are building a future around. He scored his third goal in six games by directing a shot from Craig Johnson through Rhodes' legs.

Rhodes' legs.

Turmoil in TV-land

Television stars continue to make more demands on the networks, as their audiences steadily decrease.

By David Bauder
Associated Press

NEW YORK — Della Reese needs time off. David Duchovny wants production of "The X-Files" moved from Vancouver. The cast of "Seinfeld," the cast of "Friends" — seemingly a cast of thousands — fought for more money.

Is anybody on television actually happy these days?

The changing economics of a TV industry starved for viewers and starved for hits has emboldened many of its biggest names to flex their muscles for better deals, adding real-life cliffhangers to some favorite shows.

And don't be surprised if Hollywood doesn't always write happy endings.

Reese went public last week with complaints that CBS wasn't raising her salary as fast as "Touched by an Angel" co-star Roma Downey. She also wants to make sure she has enough time off for her work as a minister.

Duchovny wants to be closer to his actress wife Tea Leoni, who's on NBC's "Naked Truth," and says he'll leave his hit show after this year if production isn't moved to Los Angeles.

Money hasn't been mentioned yet, but Ellen DeGeneres has been exceptionally cranky: complaining about a parental advisory placed on "Ellen," arguing with ABC over scripts and even grumbling about not getting a congratulatory phone call for winning an Emmy.

These are just skirmishes next to the high-stakes game of chicken played last spring by "Seinfeld's" supporting cast, who finally agreed to come back this fall after quadrupling their salaries.

"Seinfeld" came so close to not coming back — it was really within minutes," said Marc Schwartz, "Seinfeld" agent Jason Alexander's agent.

Stars will be stars, and contract fights are nothing new to Hollywood. But the squeeze is on now as never before.

Broadcast television is relentlessly losing viewers; so far this season, ABC, CBS and NBC have each lost an average of 1 million prime time viewers since last fall. The pressure to produce new hits is enormous, yet all but a handful of the 35 new series premiering this fall will fail.

"Look at the new season so far — there aren't many hits," said Robert Morton, executive producer of the new ABC comedy, "Over the Top."

Networks lucky to have hits desperately want to protect and nurture them. If "Seinfeld" were to leave, not only would NBC lose a show that Schwartz estimates earns it $150 million a year in profits, its

Associated Press

After much negotiation, the "Seinfeld" cast agreed to come back this fall after quadrupling their salaries. The changing economics of a TV industry starved for viewers and starved for hits has emboldened many big names to flex their muscles for better deals.

"Seinfeld" came so close to not coming back — it was really within minutes.

Marc Schwartz, agent of Jason Alexander from "Seinfeld"

entire Thursday night juggernaut could begin to crumble.

If stars weren't already aware that hit TV shows are increasingly valuable, an army of agents and lawyers are only too happy to tell them, said Richard Lawrence, agent for the Hollywood firm Abrams, Rubaloff and Lawrence.

Quietly last week, success paid off for "Home Improvement" star Tim Allen. He's finishing up a deal that will reportedly pay him $1.25 million an episode next year, an eye-popping half-million per show raise. It vaults him past Jerry Seinfeld as the highest-paid sitcom actor on television.

Struggling ABC had little choice. While many critics consider "Home Improvement" well past its peak, it's the only ABC entertainment series to regularly land in Nielsen Media Research's top ten.

"Home Improvement" and "Seinfeld" are also the two hottest shows for selling reruns in syndication, where TV networks and studios hit the jackpot. Alexander, Julia Louis-Dreyfus and Michael Richards held out for a salary of $600,000 per episode because they were getting little of this syndication money, Schwartz said.

"In the scheme of life, what I think they were paid was obnoxious," he said. "But in the scheme of 'Seinfeld,' it was very little."

Agents say stars deserve the big money because the ratio of failures to hits keeps increasing. Piling up dead series on the résumé can cause real damage; how many more chances will Ted Danson, for example, have at another show?

"It's a question of getting it while you can, using leverage while you have leverage," Lawrence said.

The fragmentation of the television audience means the price of talent will "forever escalate," said NBC Television President Neil Braun. Seinfeld, who makes $1 million per show, could be in line to nearly double that if he decides to stay another year, said television analyst Bill Croasdale of Western International Media. It's all a question of how much NBC is willing to pay.

Many in the television industry wonder if "ER" will be the next place for a salary fight to erupt. The medical drama has been peaceful so far, at least publicly.

Since "ER" is an ensemble, agents say a salary holdout there will be more difficult. "ER" stars might have to band together in an all-for-one demand, like the cast of "Friends" did when it became a success.

At some point, analysts say it's inevitable a network will say no to a demand and a hit show will disappear and leave its audience disappointed.

"You can't go into any negotiation where you're not prepared to walk away," Braun said. "You can't go into any negotiation without knowing when you're going to walk away."

Michner ends life-sustaining treatment

Author James Michner has decided to end his life-support on kidney dialysis.

By Juan Elizondo
Associated Press

AUSTIN, Texas — Ninety-year-old James A. Michner has taken himself off life-sustaining kidney dialysis.

Linda Milanesi, spokesperson for the James A. Michner Art Museum in Doylestown, Pa., said the renowned and prolific author opted to stop the medical treatment last week.

His condition has not changed since his decision.

"Basically, he's stable and resting at home," she said Sunday, referring questions to long-time Michner friend and associate John Kings.

"Mr. Michner is undergoing evaluations. He is perfectly well and comfortable," Kings said in a brief statement.

"He has spent his life respecting the press and what it has to do," Kings added. "He asks now that the press respect his privacy."

Kings would not take any questions.

An unnamed source told the (New York) Daily News: "He's decided he doesn't want to go on living like this."

The writer has more than 40 titles to his name. He released his latest book, "A Century of Sonnets," earlier this year.

Michner's literary success began with "Tales of the South Pacific." The book won the 1948 Pulitzer Prize and was the basis for "South Pacific," a long-running Broadway musical and later a motion picture.

- ### Michner books
- 1948 — "Tales of the South Pacific"
 - 1978 — "Chesapeake"
 - 1982 — "Space"
 - 1985 — "Texas"
 - 1992 — "Mexico"
 - 1997 — "A Century of Sonnets"

For decades, Michner, a former teacher, wandered the globe from Japan and Korea to Hungary, Hawaii, Afghanistan, Spain, South Africa, Colorado, Israel, Chesapeake Bay, Poland, Texas, Alaska and the Caribbean.

He lived in every part of the world he wrote about.

He has made his main home in Austin since working on his 1985 novel, "Texas," his longest book (1,096 pages) and a one million-copy seller.

Janet Jackson's Velvet Rope. The singer's newest album was banned in Singapore last week because of three songs about battery and abuse, homosexuality and sexuality, The Straits Times reported.

The album was to have been released last Monday in Singapore but was banned by the Controller of Undesirable Publications, the newspaper said.

The paper said that the record label, EMI, was considering releasing a different version of the album in Singapore without the three banned songs. The report did not name the songs.

NEWS BRIEF

Union set to reopen

The Union Bar, 121 E. College, reopens its doors today after being closed the last two weeks due to a liquor revocation.

The Iowa Department of Commercial Beverages Division in Ankeny handed the Union a $2,000 fine and suspension.

The August ruling was in response to an after-hours party held March 16 at the establishment between 2 a.m. and 6 a.m. state law prohibits the sale or distribution of alcohol between those hours.

The ICPD discovered the employees a.m. after receiving a complaint of loitering and found various bottles of beer, plastic cups, vodka and empty wine bottles.

During the Union's closing, there were home Hawkeye football games. The marked the second time the Union's liquor license was revoked. The bar was in November 1993 when the bar was closed for a seven-day suspension.

Judy Seib, chief of licensing regulation, said the Union was eager to negotiate a settlement with the Iowa State Department of Public Safety.

"The Union had some say in why liquor license was going to be revoked," she said. "They had some say-so, absolute say-so."

Union bar management refused comment on the matter Monday.

However, Mark Danielson, the defense attorney, said he negotiated the liquor license with the Iowa State Department of Public Safety.

"We discussed a bunch of times what was the result," he said.
