NEWS BRIEF

KRNA van stolen from Saturday tailgate

The KRNA remote broadcast van was stolen and later recovered during Saturday's Homecoming festivities.

The minivan was parked beside a house at 817 Melrose Ave., the site of the Magic Bus Tailgate Party.

KRNA disc jockey Tommy Lang was doing a live-remote broadcast from the party and left the van running while he loaded equipment into it around 6:30 p.m. He returned to find the vehicle missing.

Lang said he called the van's cellular phone twice upon discovering the vehicle was missing.

"Somebody answered sounding really drunk," he said. "I couldn't understand a word they were saying. Sometimes people steal banners or T-shirts from a remote. These people decided to steal a van."

The station made announcements about the theft every half-hour Saturday night, urging listeners to call the police if they spotted the van.

The van was filled with equipment used to conduct live-remote broadcasts. None of it was missing, and the van was unharmed when it was found unattended at the 600 block of S. Van Buren Street at around 2:30 a.m. Sunday.

Iowa City Police Officer Mike Delaney, who was at the scene, said there are no known suspects in the case.

KRNA uses the van to broadcast live from the Magic Bus during every home football game. Lang plans to broadcast from the site for this Saturday's game.

"This time, the van will be locked," he said. —By Stephanie Dell

Storm surprises I.C.

■ A Sunday snowstorm caught UI students and Iowa City residents off-guard.

By John Russell
The Daily Iowan

Iowa City and much of the Midwest received a rude preamble to winter over the weekend.

A brisk winter-like storm Sunday delivered up to a foot of snow in spots, leaving about 2,000 Iowa City residents without power, said Jeff Ashcraft, a representative for Mid-American Energy.

"It was as big of a surprise for us as for anyone," he said.

Omaha and Des Moines received up to 12 inches of snow from the same storm, which brought 20 to 30 inches of white powder to the Denver area. Eastern Iowa received four to eight inches.

It was one of the earliest such storms in recent years, said Chuck Myers, National Weather Service meteorologist.

"Last time we had a system like this at a time like this was in 1980," he said.

At times, snow fell at a rate of about an inch an hour, and with temperatures at or near freezing, the snow was sticky. As it gathered on tree branches, many crashed to the ground, cracking like rifle shots and taking power lines with them.

"If it had been a few weeks later, it wouldn't be such a problem, because trees wouldn't have so many leaves that cause heavy snow accumulation," Myers said.

The storm halted operations at the Cedar Rapids Airport Sunday afternoon. The power was out from 12:30-5 p.m., and no planes could land or take off, according to airport safety officials.

The airport closing caused problems for UI senior Mardy Hartstack, who was heading to Minneapolis to interview with an accounting firm that he hopes to get a job with after graduation.

"When we got up there, the airport was completely dark, and we went up to the northeast gate, and they told us that our flight was canceled," he said. "We were kind of upset, because it was basically a waste of a day."

Iowa City residents said they

Alumni remember the good ol' UI days

■ While watching floats pass by in the cold, wet weather, alumni provided advice and memories of their UI experiences.

By Kelli Otting
The Daily Iowan

UI alumnus Hal Harris said the key to college happiness lies in finding that sometimes-elusive balance between partying and studying.

"I was at the UI at the time of the Vietnam-War demonstrations, so there seemed to be more important things happening in the world besides studying," said Harris, who graduated in 1969. "I learned that you can always mix up partying and studying and still remember to get a good education."

This year's Homecoming parade brought cold weather, wind and showers of advice and memories from Harris and other UI graduates.

UI alumnus Dale Jedlicka, who received his master's from the UI, said students need to find a passion.

"Talk with your adviser as much as you can, and make sure you are doing everything right," he said. "Nobody wants to be stuck in their last year without enough credits to graduate."

Jared and Kent Hills, brothers and UI alumni, said playing trumpet and tuba in the UI marching band is the best memory they have from the UI.

Brian Ray/The Daily Iowan

"Jared went to the 1959 Rose Bowl, and I went in 1961," Kent said. "The memories we made at those games will last us a lifetime."

UI alumna Michele Welter, who graduated in 1981, said students have to be careful about partying too much.

"I had always maintained a good balance of studying and partying when I was in college, but not everyone else

The rite of clock confusion

■ Turning the hands on the clock back an hour, ending daylight-saving time, sometimes throws off UI students and Iowa City residents.

By Jeff Clayton
The Daily Iowan

Two years ago, Iowa City resident Joe Medina forgot about daylight-saving time and neglected to change his clock ahead an hour in April, leaving his girlfriend stranded at the airport.

"She didn't talk to me for two weeks," he said. "She didn't believe that I had forgot to change the clock and thought I was just hung-over."

Every year, Medina and most Americans continue the ritual of springing forward and falling back. However, occasionally the time change wreaks havoc in some people's lives.

UI senior Christie Corkery and her friends decided to wreak some havoc of their own during freshman year.

Corkery and her fellow conspirators played a trick on their friend Emily by moving her clock ahead an hour, Corkery said.

"She was still off an hour," Corkery

"The cows don't know that the time changed."

UI sophomore Alison Haugo on why her dairy-farming relatives don't follow daylight-saving time said. "It was like she had never changed time. It was our best practical joke."

Luckily for Corkery, Emily wasn't late for her classes.

"She took it pretty well," Corkery said.

Under legislation enacted in 1986, daylight-saving time begins at 2 a.m. on the first Sunday of April and ends at 2 a.m. on the last Sunday of October.

Although most of the country follows the tradition of daylight-saving time, some refuse to cave in to peer pressure. "My great-uncle and great-uncle don't believe in it," said UI sophomore Alison Haugo. "Their time is different than everybody else."

Haugo said they resist the time change because of life on their dairy farm.

"The cows don't know that the time changed," Haugo said. However, her great-uncle and uncle realize most Americans are following a different time schedule, she said.

The change in time seems to be an

WASHINGTON — Chinese President Jiang Zemin will get a full picture of how Americans feel about China's human rights record, both from protest demonstrations outside and tough talk inside the White House, Madeleine Albright said Sunday.

The secretary of state also made it clear that while human rights are just one aspect of increasingly important U.S.-China ties, "We will never have a completely normal relationship with them until they have a better human rights policy."

Jiang, who arrived Sunday in Honolulu to begin the first U.S. visit by a Chinese leader in a dozen years, is expected to face protest rallies at each of his stops in Williamsburg, Washington, Philadelphia, New York, Boston and Los Angeles.

Christian groups were to kick off the demonstrations Sunday with a prayer vigil across from the White House to protest religious persecution in China and that country's abortion policies.

Speaking of the historic locales Jiang is visiting in the United States, Albright said on NBC's "Meet the Press" that he "will not have a totally fuzzy time at these places. I think that it is important for him, actually, to see where our liberty came from."

"Everywhere he goes in the United States, President Jiang Zemin is going to meet with protesters. He's going to see and hear American voices on this. I can't think of anything better than that," Sen. John Kerry, D-Mass., said on CNN's "Late Edition."

Cassini clears first hurdle

■ The Cassini probe's UI-designed instrument was successfully activated Friday, 2.2 million miles away from Earth.

By Steven Cook
The Daily Iowan

UI physicist Donald Gurnett's instrument on the Cassini space probe jumped another hurdle Friday when it was turned on and its antennae were extended.

"Everything is in perfect shape," Gurnett said. "We proceeded with the planned deployment."

Gurnett and three other UI participants, Bill Kurth, Don Kirchner and Bob Johnson, headed to NASA's Jet Propulsion Laboratory in Pasadena, Calif., Friday for the 7 p.m. deployment of the instrument's three radio antennae.

After the group turned on the UI instrument, the Radio and Plasma Wave Science (RPWS), the trio made a quick check to make sure nothing was damaged by the launch, Gurnett said.

They were even able to collect radio data from Earth for about a day, Gurnett said, but they'll have to wait longer to begin collecting more information.

"NASA's very conservative," he said.

Scary thrills take over the box office

NEW YORK (AP) — Mira Sorvino isn't bothered by scary stuff. She thinks it's a scream.

"When a horror movie is done really well it becomes an instant classic," said Sorvino, the Academy Award winner in "Mighty Aphrodite" who was the top box office chaser in this year's cockroach flick "Mimic."

"There's something psychologically powerful about these movies that when they're done with great artfulness you never forget them," she said in the Oct. 31 Entertainment Weekly.

Movie audiences have been scared straight to horror flicks this fall, with Halloween next week.

Among the top-grossing movies recently are the teen slasher "I Know What You Did Last Summer," which opened at No. 1 with $15.8 million; the creepy thriller "The Devil's Advocate"; and the serial-killer chiller "Kiss the Girls," which was No. 1 for two weeks.

Alyssa Milano will work again

NEW YORK (AP) — Not so long ago, Alyssa Milano doubted she'd work again.

Now she loves her job — appearing on "Melrose Place" as Jennifer Mancini, the scheming younger sister of Michael, played by Thomas Calabro.

"It's the most emotionally stable job I've ever had in my life," the 24-year-old actress says in November's InStyle magazine. "I love it."

Not that it wasn't daunting to be the new kid on a popular series.

"Even though I never went to one, it felt like the first day of high school," said Milano, who grew up on a TV sound stage during the eight years she played Samantha on "Who's the Boss?"

"I didn't know who to sit with at lunch, so I just went into my trailer. But they were great."

Milano, who got her start at age 7 in a touring production of "Annie," wondered if she was washed up as an actress after her sitcom ended in 1992.

"I wasn't really sure I would work again," she said. "I was on TV when it wasn't cool to be on TV."

Kirstie Alley knows how to get it done

NEW YORK (AP) — Kirstie Alley has a secret for getting things done.

It's the pace. She will rack up more credits this year than some actors do in a decade — five feature films, three TV specials and her new NBC sitcom, "Veronica's Closet."

In the show — which she also produces — Alley stars as a model-turned-owner of a lingerie empire, who's wrestling with the midlife crises of aging looks and a philandering husband.

"It's been a busy year, but I don't do well with leisure time. It doesn't become me," Alley says in the November issue of InStyle magazine. "Cooking for 20 people is my idea of leisure time."

Her new movie, "For Richer or Poorer" with Tim Allen, is due out in December.

Football 101 gives students pigskin pointers

Kelly Etzel/The Daily Iowan

UI freshman Tim Selz shows IEP student Ha Yoon-Shik how to throw a football during "Football 101" in the International Center on Friday.

International students got the gridiron 411 Friday from the Kappa Sigma fraternity and the UI International Programs.

By Kelli Otting
The Daily Iowan

UI senior Xiaomin Fu learned Friday to distinguish a field goal from a fumble. "Football 101," a one-hour session sponsored by the UI International Programs and Kappa Sigma fraternity, gave international students the chance to ask questions about the game of football. The session was facilitated by Mike Dibelbiss, community services chairperson of Kappa Sigma fraternity, and fellow fraternity members Tim Selz and Ryan Roberts.

This program is really helpful to international students who have no idea what the game is about, Fu said.

"I've been to a few games this season, but never really knew what the rules were," he said. "Now that I know the rules, it will be more exciting to watch."

The free session offered information about plays, formations and such basics as uniforms and safety gear.

Kappa Sigma has offered this program for the past four years during Homecoming week, Dibelbiss said.

"The turnout was not exactly what we wanted, but the students had some extremely good questions about the game," he said. "We are here to give them the chance to participate in a sport that is so important here at the UI."

Some of the questions the international students asked were: What is meant by a fumble? and, What are some of the rulings concerning tackles? Dibelbiss said.

"A lot of foreign students attend the UI and are just expected to know everything there is to know about college life," Dibelbiss said. "If I were to attend college in a different country, I would want something like this offered."

The fraternity also explained the tradition of Homecoming and the Iowa Fight Song and demonstrated different football techniques.

The fraternity members did more than just explain the game.

The participants were also given the chance to sing the fight song with the rest of the fraternity members, Fu said.

"They gave us a lot of visual things, like the movie of the Michigan game and when the fraternity members demonstrate the offensive and defensive lines," he said. "We also were able to throw the football around at the end."

Selz, who gave the "Football 101" presentation last year, said nobody has really ever taught these students U.S. sports and the rules that go along with them.

"I think the students went away from this session with a better knowledge of the sport of football," he said. "It gives us the satisfaction of knowing that we helped our fellow UI students in understanding the game."

Businesses, youth groups band together in teen-haven project

■ A new Iowa City program will help youths deal with a myriad of problems — all they have to do is follow the star.

By Jennifer Goodman
The Daily Iowan

United Action for Youth (UAY) and Youth Homes are helping Iowa City businesses provide safe havens for teens who need assistance. Businesses participating in Project Safeplace are denoted by a gold star affixed to a window, giving a signal to teens that it's a place they can go when encountering problems at home or school. The project is currently in use in more than 100 cities across the United States.

The program has started at the Iowa City Quik Trips; other businesses currently receiving training include First National Bank, McDonald's, the Iowa City Fire Department, Wal-Mart and John's Grocery.

The program is similar to the Block-Parent program but uses local businesses instead of private homes, said Ross Wilburn, a member of the project's advisory committee. The Louisville, Ky., YMCA began the project in 1983 as an outreach program.

Trish Smith, a member of the Current Iowa City Safeplace program sites:

- Quik Trip
- First National Bank
- McDonald's
- Iowa City Fire Dept.
- Wal-Mart
- John's Grocery

Safeplace Advisory Committee, said she was able to get the ball rolling earlier this year and bring Project Safeplace to Iowa City.

"It's more easily accessible to kids," she said. "We're hoping every neighborhood will have a Safeplace business in it."

If teens still do not want to go home after talking to the UAY counselor, temporary housing can be arranged with Youth Homes. If a teen does talk to his or her parents and still doesn't want to go home, UAY can arrange a 48-hour hold on the teen, said Holly Stutsman, a member of the Dating Cellos, a UAY drama group. In that case, she said, even if the parents want the child home, the teen can have some time to think.

Smith said she heard about Project Safeplace several years ago, but it was not until early this year that she got the go-ahead to begin training for the project.

It's a testament to the cooperation in the community that it got the program up and running this fast, she said.

"We told (the people in Louisville) that we planned to have the project off the ground by (this fall)," Smith said. "They all laughed, but we did it."

Keri Neblitt said she felt it was important that the project have advice from teenagers.

"It's vital to have input from the kids," she said. "Kids can tell what they need better than any adult."

The project is a worthwhile effort, said Alyssa Bowman, chairperson of the advisory committee and one of the teens involved.

"It's pretty cool," she said. "I had an experience last year where I could have used this sort of thing."

Railroad traffic jam could harm harvest

■ A Midwest rail-car shortage is jeopardizing U.S. grain exports.

By Barry Bedlan
Associated Press

OMAHA, Neb. — Record grain harvests aren't unusual. Neither are periodic shortages of rail cars to ship the grain.

But this year, particularly bountiful corn, wheat and soybean crops are piling up on the ground because a sort of railroad traffic jam between the nation's fields and key grain ports on the Gulf of Mexico has spread along the rails of the newly enlarged Union Pacific.

Farmers, grain elevator managers and politicians blame the rail tie-ups on Union Pacific's purchase of Southern Pacific Railroad, which created the nation's largest railroad. They think the railroad is overwhelmed.

Union Pacific said the congestion would be worse if it had not purchased the Southern Pacific and its key lines, but agrees there are problems.

Farm experts fear the backlog will ruin the nation's international markets and could sink grain prices.

"It is a terrible mess, the worst we've ever seen," said Bill Sebree of NIK Marketing, which coordinates grain shipments for 112 elevators in Nebraska, Iowa and Kansas.

"We are running better than 30 days behind schedule for guaranteed grain trains to arrive, and we have loaded trains sitting still for up to two weeks," he said. "Elevators are losing up to $30,000 on each train that's late."

The problem is already affecting or expected to affect most of the nation's grain-producing states, and the grain piles are a visible sign of shipping problems that federal regulators will discuss at a hearing today in Washington.

"It's so political, and I don't want to upset the railroads by saying anything," said Rick Sorenson, manager of the Continental Grain Co. Outside his elevator in Shelton, about 150 miles west of Omaha, 700,000 bushels of grain stood in a pile nearly three stories high on a lot half the size of a city block.

Sales of soybeans for export have reached only about half the amount sold by this time last year, said Bill Biedermann, a commodity analyst with Allendale Inc. in Crystal Lake, Ill. And only about 20 percent of what's been sold overseas has actually been shipped so far.

"The demand for U.S. grain is good, but the guys on the dock are not delivering," Biedermann said.

"Our foreign customers will be forced to go to other countries for their imported grain if they have to wait much longer," Biedermann said. "This is a huge problem for U.S. agriculture."

Union Pacific cites problems affecting its merger partner.

Railroad spokesperson John Bromley said floods and derailments in Texas happened at the same time shipping business increased and that all combined to overwhelm the Southern Pacific.

Union Pacific sent some of its people, locomotives and equipment to help, but that diversion meant the traffic jams spread.

Now, loaded grain cars wait in rail yards for locomotives, which may be busy elsewhere. Heavy traffic along the routes to the Gulf ports mean it takes longer for the grain trains that are moving to make the trip, which delays the return of locomotives and empty cars.

The timing couldn't be worse for farmers who are reaping an expected record soybean crop, the third-largest corn crop and above-average milo and wheat crops.

"Rail-car shortages are not new. What makes this year so odd is the amount of grain coming in," said Don Roose at U.S. Commodities Inc. of West Des Moines, Iowa. "It's a strange phenomenon."

He estimates farmers are losing about 10 cents per bushel of grain because of rail delays.

"People are worried they will have to sit on their grain for a while, especially if prices are affected," said Howard Lefler, a corn farmer near Fairmont.

Grain elevators want more covered hopper cars to hold the grain, and Union Pacific said elevators are partly to blame for holding grain from last season's crop in hope of receiving better prices this year.

Happy 50th to Hillary

■ First lady spends a quiet birthday after a surprise party.

By Sonya Ross
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Hillary Rodham Clinton spent a quiet 50th birthday Sunday, ensonced at home with her husband and daughter after a surprise party that had her dancing until the wee hours.

The weather in Washington was in the low 50s and damp, which kept the first family firmly indoors. Not a peep came from the White House residence all day; the Clintons didn't emerge for church or even an impromptu birthday brunch.

In true Washington fashion, Rodham Clinton's special day was fodder for the Sunday talk shows. ABC-TV's "This Week" offered a video birthday card in which average Americans politely swore that Rodham Clinton looked much too young to be 50.

Susan Walsh/Associated Press

Hillary Clinton is surprised with a birthday cake presented to her by hotel banquet manager George Pulles on Saturday.

"Oh, to be 50 again! Just a kid!" said host Sam Donaldson, 63, as he wished Rodham Clinton a happy birthday with a quote from Robert Browning: The best is yet to be, the last of life for which the first was made.

Sunday's low-key activity was in stark contrast to what's in store for Rodham Clinton beginning today: a public, two-day celebration in her hometown of Chicago that includes a speech, a chat with a historian, a birthday bash at the Chicago Cultural Center and a TV appearance with talk-show maven Oprah Winfrey.

But a relaxed birthday seemed in order because Rodham Clinton began celebrating in the minutes after midnight by taking a few spins around the dance floor during a surprise party at a posh hotel here.

Wearing a red satin evening gown, the first lady got a hint that something was up Saturday night when she and President Clinton left the annual black-tie gala of the National Italian-American Foundation and their limousine suddenly detoured from the White House toward the Sheraton Luxury Collection Hotel on embassy-lined Massachusetts Avenue.

Bomb kills Protestants in first political slaying since July

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) — A small bomb exploded behind the driver's seat of a car near Belfast on Saturday, killing the Protestant driver and engulfing the vehicle in flames.

The bomb went off as Glen 28, drove away from his home in Bangor, 15 miles east of Belfast, making him the first political killing in Northern Ireland in three months.

Greer, who crawled from the wreckage but died later in a hospital, may have been targeted in a plot involving one or more of Northern Ireland's four pro-British Protestant paramilitary groups.

Two of the groups are represented at multi-party negotiations on Northern Ireland's future, which resumed last month. No group has claimed responsibility for the bomb.

On Thursday, the umbrella organization coordinating policy at three of those paramilitary groups which together have been observed in an October 1994 cease-fire, collapsed. And Bangor is a feuding ground where one paramilitary commander was gunned down by disgruntled comrades in September 1995.

Gulf still holds key global economy

The talk these prosperous days from Wall Street to Wuhan, boundless economic horizons just over the horizon lies a fat patch of troubled waters, a blue whirlpool called the Persian Gulf.

As the global economy speeds in 1997, navigating through dips and Asian currency scares, analysts began speculating about "repeal" of the laws of boom and bust. But they'd better repeal laws of internal combustion first.

A check of America's gas tank tells you why: The United States imports more than half the oil it burns. And Persian Gulf petroleum even more important elsewhere in the world economy, especially parts of Asia where the oil already is tempered by crises and stock market slumps.

The new heavy dependence on foreign oil troubles some in Washington. Hazel O'Leary, the former energy secretary, said earlier this year "we need a wake-up call" that new oil price shock might provoke. Oil traders, of course, don't mind. When the U.S. aircraft carrier Nimitz rushed to the Persian Gulf this month, amid heightening tensions, crude oil prices jumped $2 a barrel, to more than $23.

A worn-out Congress wants to head home

In the home stretch, a gridlocked Congress is delaying many items.

By Tom Raum
Associated Press

WASHINGTON (AP) — Republican congressional leaders can recite a litany of remaining "must do" items, from fast-track trade authority to a huge transportation bill. In the face of the usual developing gridlock, House Republican Whip Tom Delay of Texas is adamant: "The Senate wants to go home. We want to fight."

But as a Nov. 7 adjournment target approaches, more and more lawmakers are reflecting the sentiments of Democratic Rep. David Obey of Wisconsin: "There is absolutely no reason for this Congress to continue to be in session."

People are getting anxious to quit for the year — even if that means postponing action on politically appealing items until 1998.

Already deferred are an overhaul bill for the Internal Revenue Service, a challenge to President Clinton's veto of a ban on certain late-term abortions and a bill to implement the tobacco-litigation settlement.

Fast-track legislation, which would give President Clinton renewed authority to negotiate trade deals with a minimum of congressional involvement, is hanging by a thread. The same is true of a Democrat-supported bill for campaign-finance overhaul that faces formidable opposition from GOP leaders in both the House and Senate.

And both houses are bogged down in partisan wrangling.

In the Senate, a $145.7 billion, six-year bill to fund highway projects with wide bipartisan support has been held up for days in a Democratic filibuster over campaign-finance reform. Senate Majority Leader Trent Lott, R-Miss., failed in three separate votes last week to win the 60 votes required to break the filibuster. He tries again Tuesday.

The dispute threatens to put off the transportation bill to next year. The campaign-finance bill also looks dead for the year. Lott so far has refused to allow the Senate to vote on it.

In the House, GOP leaders also refuse to bring it up. Supporters are circulating a so-called "discharge petition" to force a vote but so far haven't gotten the necessary 218 votes.

Largest American Indian tribe debates casino gambling — again

WINDOW ROCK (AP) — To some, the vote on whether to bring casinos to America's largest Indian reservation is a referendum on whether The Gambler will return.

In Navajo legend, The Gambler was the son of the sun's spirit who learned gambling from his father and went on to win — and then lose — everything. He is ni'hwil bihi — "the one that wins the people."

The Gambler wins; The Gambler loses. And so, the Navajos are ambivalent about joining the surge of Indian casinos prompted by a 1987 U.S. Supreme Court ruling upholding tribes' rights to offer gambling.

In 1994, the Navajos rejected casinos by a wide margin; they will vote again Nov. 4, and the debate within the tribe is intense.

Tribal President Albert Hale is among those urging that the Navajo take no chances.

He notes the tribe's struggles with alcoholism. "Much of the money we spend is to help people who fail to act in moderation... Gaming will simply lure people into excesses they cannot afford," Hale wrote in the Navajo Times.

Glenn would agree to written fund-raising questions of Clinton

WASHINGTON (AP) — The ranking Democrat on a Senate committee investigating campaign fund raising said Sunday he won't object if his colleagues ask President Clinton to respond to written questions, since the president has turned down the committee's invitation to testify.

Questioned on NBC's "Meet the Press," Sen. John Glenn said: "I don't have any quarrel with sending written questions or submitting whatever kind of testimony they want over there at the White House. That's up to the president."

Hundreds of thousands of black women stood shoulder to shoulder at the march, showing their solidarity and drawing attention to issues they believe mainstream groups ignore. Organizers estimated 2.1 million people filled the route from City Hall to the Museum of Art in the early afternoon, when rain gave way to a chilly, gray day.

Less than charitable thoughts on giving

Speaking of junk mail, as we were last week, and especially how it proliferates in the months before Christmas, what about the endless solicitations from do-gooders? They, too, multiply this season, which is rotten psychology. The idea is that Christmas makes you feel like giving, which it does, but it's also when the biggest bills of the year loom. Is it smart to hit people for money just when they're more likely to have a deficit than a surplus?

As someone who's always been a sucker for noble-sounding causes, I've given more than I could afford to a good many: conservation, abused animals, abortion rights, disadvantaged fellow citizens, political candidates, etc. ad nauseam. Was the money wisely spent? Probably not. I finally figured out that you have to (a) draw the line somewhere, and (b) make a reasoned decision about where to draw it. When you stop to think about it, it becomes obvious that many of these organizations, are cost-heavy, inefficient, poorly managed by incompetent idiots and generally meretricious, as much so as their mercantile counterparts.

How do they gooo? One: Their executive directors take in about a quarter of a million dollars' pay plus liberal expense allowances. The odious William Aramony is a cautionary example. He was alleged to have looted United Way of massive sums of money and got away with it because his staff members were asleep at the switch and didn't care.

Two: They sell names, which is stupid, counterproductive and pointless. As one victim, Alan Bisbort, complained a few years back when he gave modestly to Zero Population Growth and The Nature Conservancy, he was immediately bombarded by 69 mailings from more or less related groups.

Three: They offer gifts at or below cost to attract new members but don't ask themselves if these costly come-ons are useful. Return address labels with the wrong address simply have to be thrown out, as a dozen or so were in this household. When labels with the right address finally began arriving, they had "Mrs. Edwin McCollister" on them. Where have they been since Betty Friedan raised our consciousness? With all due respect and gratitude to my husband, I am a human entity in my own right, not a negligible appendage. You might expect some alert staff member to notice that lapse, but evidently alertness is not considered desirable. That would explain, too, why nobody notices or cares that mailings are sent out in duplicate or triplicate, like the three calendars from the International Fund for Animal Welfare. How could such inefficient people spend money wisely?

Four: They do not answer their mail, which is as inexcusable as it is dumb. Any dope could figure out that responding to donors or potential donors is vital public relations.

Five: They issue glossy, full-cover publications with mostly boring puff pieces, which is wasteful both financially and environmentally.

There are admirable exceptions. When I wrote Environmental Defense Fund with a question, somebody answered it promptly — handwritten, at that. And Alzheimer's Association operates on a sounder psychological basis. Their appeals begin at $10 and climb to $25. Plus they send you attractive stationery, which is yours to keep whether or not you donate. I donate $15 every time and feel good about it.

Furthermore, dozens of organizations right here in Johnson County welcome small donations: Project Green, Johnson County Heritage Society, the chamber orchestra and the animal shelter, just for openers. They are staffed mostly by volunteers who spend money carefully, creatively and productively to enhance the quality of life right here where we live.

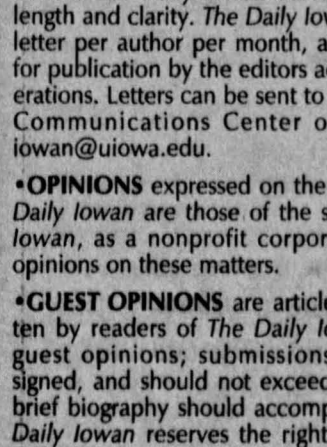

Ask a few simple questions before you donate. Does the association answer mail? Does it sell names? Does it waste money on gimmicks? Does it mail the same stuff two or three times? Does it have a high overhead? If the answer to any of these questions is yes, don't donate. Like direct-mail marketers, good-cause solicitors could do things right if they thought and if they tried, as a few do. As for the others, why throw money away on those who don't?

WHAT MODERN SCIENCE CAN TELL US ABOUT EL NIÑO'S EXACT CAUSES AND EFFECTS?

Hoping discovery goes the distance

Some among us might recall a time when car companies entertained us with the notion that a wonderful new technology called solar power would revolutionize the auto industry and clean up the atmosphere. There aren't too many solar-powered cars on the roads these days, so all solar power did was add itself to the list of good ideas that fail in practice.

Now, once again, a new technology has been developed that might change the way cars are made. Arthur D. Little Co., a Boston-based energy consulting firm, has developed a "fuel cell" that produces energy by combining hydrogen and oxygen from gasoline, reducing pollutants. The environment could use less pollution, so it is important that this technology does not fall by the wayside.

Here is how the proposed system works: Each fuel cell is made up of two plates with channels separated by thin membranes. Hydrogen circulates through one membrane and air through the other, combining to create a reaction that produces electricity, with water as a byproduct.

The hydrogen can come from an onboard tank or a hydrocarbon fuel such as gasoline, natural gas, ethanol or methanol. There is no pollution when using pure hydrogen, but when extracted from a hydrocarbon, carbon dioxide is created as a pollutant.

The environment could use less pollution, so it is important that this technology does not fall by the wayside.

It is estimated that this technology will be in commercial use by the latter half of the next decade. A lot can happen in that time; on one hand, the technology could fade into near obscurity, but on the other hand, researchers could continue working with it until it becomes cheaper and easier to produce.

The former is what happened to solar-powered cars. At one time they were touted as the next great stage in automobile technology. Now, they are merely the subjects of nostalgic jokes about the '80s.

There has been a recent surge of technological advances aimed at building cleaner, more efficient car engines, and this new fuel cell comes as the latest "breakthrough." It is not the only one of its kind, however. Other companies have similar technologies in the works.

The Big Three auto makers, Chrysler, Ford and General Motors, each have fuel-cell research programs underway. Toyota recently announced that it will soon sell a hybrid electric car that uses a small gasoline engine to recharge the battery, doubling gas mileage. Honda also said that it has a gasoline engine that can compete with the electric ones and cut pollution to almost zero by using additional, newly designed catalytic converters.

These technologies bode well for the automobile industry. Currently, they are somewhat impractical, but it is important that they continue to be researched lest they become lost to history. They hinge on investors bringing them to the auto market. It is entirely possible that the fuel-cell systems will remain in the laboratories where they have existed for the past few years, never reaching their potential.

Getting 80 miles to the gallon while cutting air pollution by 95 percent may seem like a pipe dream, but the environment can't stand the increasing pollution much longer. With state pollution-reduction standards, wise investors and continued research, cars in 10 to 15 years should be leaps and bounds ahead of today's cars. Let's hope they don't go the way of solar-powered automobiles.

Letters to the Editor

Column about Bible was misguided

To the Editor:
In her column, Brooke Barnett (DI, Oct. 17) objected to the use of the Bible to make moral decisions, particularly in legislation passed by Congress. To support her contention, she states that the Bible is "inherently contradictory" and adds that, "there is no definitive interpretation of the book in the first place." Rather, the Constitution should be our guide, she says. She fails to mention that there is no definitive interpretation of the Constitution, either. That's why Constitutional lawyers, the Supreme Court and others debate these issues. If Barnett applied the same standard to the Constitution that she applies to the Bible, she would find that she has no standard by which to judge anything. Thus, it is not the Bible that is "inherently contradictory," but Barnett's own argument.

Furthermore, she fails to take into account the fact that people quote the Bible, and other sources, because the Constitution is not in and of itself sufficient to decide these issues. It does not, for instance, tell us if abortion is right or wrong. The Bible does, notwithstanding the foolish people she cites who pretend that the Bible does not treat unborn children as children. How does Barnett determine if something is right or wrong? If it "feels right" to her? By renouncing divine revelation, she leaves herself with no objective basis for moral decisions. She even renounces the opinion of the majority. How does that work? No divine authority, no authority based on human consensus, what's left? She can say, "I think abortion is right," but what happens when someone else says, "No, it isn't." How do you legislate that?

Finally, the Bible is not simply a book of morality; it is God's revelation of Himself to humankind. I urge all those who seek to know the Creator God, whose existence is clearly shown by His creation, to seek Him there.

Philips should keep sexuality to herself

To the Editor:
Kati Philips' Oct. 14 column ("The Stigma of Bisexuality") seems to be little more than affirmations of personal views regarding her own sexuality. It is sad that she feels the need to be categorized in order for her voice to be heard and her identity to be accepted. It is equally as sad that anyone should feel the need to acknowledge his or her sexuality in the name of "openness."

In the future, I suggest she leave her sexual realizations out of the paper — and certainly forget attempts at teaching lessons by them. Why doesn't she try looking within instead of seeking out new categories to cling to while burdening readers with the banal details of her sexual exploits?

Timeless message that's given a bit early

A few days ago, I celebrated Thanksgiving a little early. During my usual jog to Hancher Auditorium from my apartment, which is next to Mayflower Hall, I stopped for a few thoughtful minutes.

It wasn't something I usually do, with my exhausting schedule, but for some reason I climbed up on one of the humongous stones over by the Iowa River, and sat up to consider my blessings.

It was a late sunny Saturday afternoon, with a brisk wind and a masterpiece of clouds in the sky. I lay back, put my feet up and began to daydream in a way I hadn't in a long time.

This time, I wasn't in French class, or walking down the street trying to figure out which way to move to avoid the oncomers who were also on their way somewhere. I was in a somewhat open field, alone with the world, thinking about the gifts that I had inherited, beginning with the breathing souls around me.

I considered my parents and how lucky I was to have them both alive, although at opposite ends of the country and their marriage, but nonetheless alive. Some are not so lucky. I considered how my mother can always somehow twitch my self-esteem, and make me feel like I truly was the best son in the world, or the most competitive tennis player or the most perseverant person she'd ever known.

Then I considered my father, how he could always find time to see my older brother, Keith, and me, because not all fathers are like that. Sure, he makes us crazy with his impatience and his temper, but at least I know him well enough to know about those characteristics.

I then reminisced about my friend Joe, whom I used to call "Marine Boy" because he had the look of a Marine but was so funny that I couldn't ever see him with a rifle and a salute. I always pictured him laughing at a drill sergeant as he used to laugh at me. Now I ask God to get him another beer and a cigarette every time I see a gray jeep drive by.

Thinking of Joe made me think about Keith again. My brother doesn't understand that lives aren't forever, and he thinks that his family will always be here for him to stand up to, lie to and ignore.

If, God forbid, one or both of my parents, or even I, would somehow perish, I think that Keith would appreciate the rest of his loved ones a little more. I think that he would see his parents whenever he could and not treat them like they're doing him a favor by asking how many times he's yelled "Serenity now!"

It infuriates me that it would take a tragic death to teach him a lesson that he should already know and to appreciate his surroundings as I do. Every time I see Keith I want to tell him about Jimmy Valvano, the late North Carolina State University basketball coach who said that you should laugh, cry and think every day, and that the only way you can hear him now as I did then, is to hear him on tape.

My schedule is packed to say the least, for now that the semester is in full swing I am spending days waking up at 6 a.m. and going to bed at 1 a.m. I devote most of my thought power to helping my legs get me to class, food and my other human and social responsibilities, as well as to get me to the same bed that I woke up in.

I now have three jobs, working at the DI, and at the UI Hospitals and Clinics in two places, as well as a splurge of extracurricular activities, including representing 20,000-some people on the Recreational Facilities Committee. Throw in the meetings, keeping my apartment clean, eating and figuring out my alarm clock, as well as the social things that I am required to do in order to be sane, and you have the makings of me, the running Smurf.

Being pushed for time and deadlines gives me the ability to put my emotions aside in favor of my putting one foot in front of the other. I don't have to think about being stood up, in love, depressed or how I'm going to raise $250 for my U-Bill because the Office of Financial Aid screwed up.

That day over by Hancher Auditorium allowed me the time to consider those things, sort them out and deal with them as best I could, but I chose to consider my thanksgivings instead.

We should take the time to consider our surroundings and appreciate our situations. We all have friends who make us smile even after we fail a quiz, or buy us beers after we've had a bad day. They might not be there tomorrow.

Take some quiet minutes to feel as carefree as I did and consider how unbelievably well off the world would be if it chose to count its blessings. Even though Thanksgiving is in about a month, choose to celebrate early.

Sherman teammate criticizes DI columnist to the Editor:

I am writing this letter in response to the article that you wrote about my teammate, Matt Sherman, on the football team when I say that I believe in the team. What gives you the right to write about my football team in negative ways? You played a down of college football in high school? You guys are supposed to be adults, not belittle people and write articles. That article you wrote was as well as the whole football team. Matt Sherman is a great player, his record is well known, you have no idea what kind of player he is. The Big Ten is the toughest conference and not every player will have a down week. To put the Michigan State on Sherman's shoulders is the dumbest thing I've heard of, and I believe you are quitting your job if you can't write an article.

The article that you wrote about me is disrespectful that I had for you, and they let you print this type of article. Furthermore, you stated that you were going to a big win, rechecked the stats and Penn State: 20. Or was that not your intention?

Proud of Sherman's contribution to UI

To the Editor:

After reading James Kramer's article about the big games don't mix, Oct. 20, I started to think about the big game. I wholeheartedly agree with you. Actually, I still do, and I am proud of the game.

The loss has taken the Hawkeyes' momentum, and everyone is disappointed. I am more so than Matt Sherman. I can't imagine what it must be like to attend classes on Monday and see the campus reading that article. I shouldn't have written the article, but I am proud of my job and publicly voicing my opinion. I am discussing around the coffee table and I am supposed to do so.

I'm just saying, but you aren't the most skilled quarterback in the Big Ten. Most days he is more than adequate. Every game, but maybe he gets the "big games." That's why he's called "Big Game" every single one of us. I know he has pressure that has precluded him from being the best we know we could have at our position.

Sure, the Sherman-led Hawkeyes have won in big games with the exception of the Tim Dwight aided Penn State game. This was the first year we were in a field with those teams.

It certainly didn't help that the Michigan games were on the radio and that 100,000 fans rooting against us.

Sherman teammate criticizes DI column

To the Editor:
I am writing this letter in reference to your tasteless article that you wrote about my close friend and teammate, Matt Sherman. I speak for the entire football team when I say that I believe you are just about as lousy of a writer as I have ever seen.

What gives you the right to talk about players on our football team in negative ways? Have you ever played a down of college football, or even high school? You guys are supposed to write news in your articles, not belittle people and say how bad people are. That article you wrote made me absolutely sick, as well as the whole football team.

Matt Sherman is a great person, and an unbelievable football player; his record shows this. Obviously you have no idea what kind of a league we play in. The Big Ten is the toughest conference in the nation, and not every player will have the game of his life every week. To put the Michigan loss solely on Matt Sherman's shoulders is the dumbest thing I have ever heard of, and I believe you need to maybe consider quitting your job if you can't write anything but garbage.

The article that you wrote caused me to lose all respect that I had for you, and the newspaper, since they let you print this type of trash.

Furthermore, you stated Matt Sherman has never led us to a big win, recheck your records — Iowa: 21 Penn State: 20. Or was that not big enough?

Proud of Sherman's contribution to UI

To the Editor:
After reading James Kramer's article ("Sherman and big games don't mix," Oct. 20) for the second time I started to think about the big picture. Upon first glance, I wholeheartedly agreed with what Kramer had to say. Actually, I still do; Matt Sherman played an awful game.

The loss has taken the Hawks out of the Rose Bowl running, and everyone is disappointed, probably no one more so than Matt Sherman.

I can't imagine what it must be like to have to attend classes on Monday and have everybody on campus reading that article. I'm not saying Kramer shouldn't have written the article, he was just doing his job and publicly voicing what many people were discussing around the coffee table, which is what a columnist is supposed to do.

I'm just saying, put yourself in this kid's shoes. He isn't the most skilled quarterback in the world, but on most days he is more than adequate. He tries his best every game, but maybe he gets a case of nerves in the "big games." That's why they're called "big games." Every single one of us has felt some sort of pressure that has precluded us from doing as well as we know we could have at one time or another.

Sure, the Sherman-led Hawks haven't responded well in big games with the exception of last year's Tim Dwight aided Penn State victory, but I truly feel this was the first year we were on an even playing field with those teams.

It certainly didn't help that both the Ohio State and Michigan games were on the road. I would imagine that 100,000 fans rooting against you would only add to the pressure. Of course, that is pure speculation because I, and most of Sherman's critics, have never played in a stadium that had more than 100,000 fans rooting against us.

I'm not trying to make excuses for Matt Sherman, I honestly don't think he needs any. He is a senior at the UI who happens to be the quarterback of a very good football team. The criticism of Sherman to the extent it has reached is what is wrong with today's college athletics. It is easy to lose sight of that. Rose Bowl or nothing was the attitude that many of my friends and I had at the end of the non-conference schedule. We must remember that the players are our fellow students first and foremost. They should go to class, practice hard and try the best on Saturday afternoons.

That is what college athletics is supposed to be about.

Matt Sherman may be the epitome of the student-athlete. He is living every Iowa boy's dream by playing for the Hawks, and the great fans of Iowa are turning it into a nightmare for him. Matt Sherman isn't going to the NFL, but I'm sure most of us will be proud with the way he will represent the UI in whatever his future endeavors may be. Keep your head up Matt. I think if that interception is the biggest mistake you make in your life, you've got a great life to look forward to.

UI athlete explains importance of fans

To the Editor:

For four years now, I have been proud to call myself a Hawkeye. Coming from Lawrence, Kan., (University of Kansas) I have lived as a Jayhawk fan for my entire life. I was well aware of school pride and the commitment people made towards college athletics. Yet, when I came to the UI on my recruiting trip (volleyball), I witnessed an entirely different kind of school pride and commitment. I was astonished by the amount of love and support the fans showed to their athletes, both men and women, and that support influenced me to attend the UI and play for fans that would respect and appreciate my efforts. Yet, on Monday, all my beliefs were shattered by James Kramer and his tasteless article about Matt Sherman.

I thought Kramer's article was degrading, disrespectful and tasteless. Matt Sherman is an excellent student athlete, out there every day giving 110 percent, just as the rest of his teammates, and to blame the Michigan loss, or any other loss, solely on him, is true evidence of the lack of knowledge James Kramer has on football or any other sport in general, or what being an athlete is all about. I only wonder if Mr. Kramer has seen a jock strap in his lifetime, or if he has ever felt the pressure or stepped foot in from of 100,000-plus screaming fans? I also wonder if Mr. Kramer knows how it feels to give all his time and energy for a common goal, only to be told that he is no good by an arrogant, uneducated writer?

Matt felt bad enough about the loss on Saturday without Kramer's humiliating article, and I am sad to know that the editor of The Daily Iowan would allow such a degrading, anti-Hawkeye article in his paper. I hope that in the future, articles will be chosen more carefully, or better yet, their writers will be chosen more carefully.

Salary story does not tell complete story

To the Editor:

The recent article and associated editorial regarding gender differences in UI faculty salaries presented interesting facts on the matter.

However, very important information was left out, resulting in what might be a misleading presentation of the truth.

We were told that male faculty members earn quite a bit more than do female faculty members.

We were not told, however, whether the data compared faculty members having the same qualifications. Is it possible that the male faculty members have simply worked at the university longer, or had more experience prior to coming to Iowa?

Certainly it is possible, but we were not given the necessary information to say one way or the other.

If this was in fact the case, the larger pay raise awarded to female faculty, supposedly to help balance salaries, would instead be an injustice to the male faculty, since male faculty with the same qualifications as female faculty would receive less pay.

Clearly, there is no way to answer the question accurately without considering additional information such as years of experience.

Thus, we would need to compare faculty at similar levels, not just faculty as a whole.

The information in the article did not allow such comparison.

Therefore, we cannot say whether there is a real salary discrepancy, and in fact we may be treating the male faculty unfairly.

You could say we have compared apples to oranges, and I would hope that educated people would realize the need to compare apples to apples.

The conclusion of the article may turn out to be correct, but this cannot be confirmed without a closer look at data which the article neglected to present.

Ped Mall is eyesore, not playground

To the Editor:

This letter is in response to Lynnette Mozena's article "Give the kids a place to go" (DI, Oct. 22) concerning the Pedestrian Mall in downtown Iowa City. My first concern is that these teenagers should be in school during the day and possibly be doing their homework in the evenings!

I can't ever recall "hanging out" every night of the week when I was in high school.

The dropout rate in Iowa City is rising at an alarming rate. Where do you think these dropouts are hanging out? Does Mozena realize that it is illegal for teenagers to be smoking? I have seen more than one person run over by these teenagers exercising their freedom on their skateboards.

I agree that teenagers need a place to hang out, but I think that the temptation with all of the bars and the college-age students hanging around is just too much.

As for the shop owners complaining about them being bad for business, that is their prerogative. After all they are the ones paying for their store fronts. I agree that they shouldn't have to "babysit" the teenagers in the Ped Mall.

Have you actually walked through there and seen all the garbage, cigarette butts, cans, spit and other unmentionables all over the place?

I find it very intimidating to go through the Ped Mall after dusk with the gangs of teens down there. The answer is to teach teenagers to be respectful of others and their property, and maybe the Pedestrian Mall can survive.

I personally am for having the city removing it; I think it is an eyesore!

Record blizzard creates chaos over weekend

Troops rescue snow-bound motorists, while thousands are still without power.

By Martha Bellisle
Associated Press

DENVER — Rescuers used helicopters, snowmobiles and military vehicles Sunday to pick up snow-bound travelers and residents left without heat by a record blizzard that piled snowdrifts up to 15 feet high. About eight people were unaccounted for Sunday in southeastern Colorado.

"We're making Herculean efforts to get into some of these areas," said Steve Denney, a regional planner with the Colorado Office of Emergency Management.

At least one death was blamed on the storm. An unattended candle supplying light in a house without power started a fire that killed one woman in Omaha, Neb.; it took firefighters about half an hour to reach the house because of the weather.

The blizzard that blew through the Rockies and onto the Plains on Saturday left as much as 50 inches of snow in the Colorado Rockies, 22 inches in parts of Denver and 35 inches in the city's suburbs.

The storm had moved eastward Sunday, and snow fell from eastern Kansas through Missouri and Iowa into Wisconsin and eastern Michigan. Heavy snow had fallen in Utah on Friday, and flakes fell as far south as the Texas Panhandle on Saturday.

Thousands of customers were without electricity for light and heat Sunday in Nebraska and Iowa. Hundreds of miles of highways remained closed Sunday, including one 185-mile stretch of Interstate 80 across eastern Nebraska, and some travelers in Kansas were stymied by 4-foot drifts.

The Nebraska State Patrol estimated 200 vehicles involving 500 people were stranded on the Interstate and highways Sunday.

There were no immediate reports of injuries to those stranded on the road. The patrol worked to free the stranded motorists all day and expected many of them to get out on their own.

At least 1,000 vehicles abandoned in the snow made it difficult for Colorado crews to plow out a 160-mile stretch of Interstate 25 that was closed from south of Denver to near the New Mexico state line.

STORM/Heavy snow leaves many students shocked were caught off-guard by the storm and the thought of an Arctic blast in October.

UI freshman Linsey Blau said snow was the last thing on her mind Saturday night.

"Last night, I went out and it was raining, but I didn't think it was going to snow," she said. "I like snow, but not in October."

UI junior Heather Persky seemed upset that winter was actually here.

"It was kind of a shock when I looked out the window," she said. "It's too early for snow. I'm not ready for winter yet — I'm never ready for winter."

But not all UI students were caught entirely off-guard by the premature weather change. UI sophomore Beth Kessler predicted in the Oct. 16 "Readers Say" section of the DI that snow would first fall Oct. 24, her birthday. She said she was blamed by house mates for the bad weather.

"Everyone at my house was pretty mad at me because of the snow," Kessler said.

Kessler said her sorority house, Delta Gamma, was without power for about an hour Sunday, forcing the residents to study by candlelight. A tree was also down in the Delta Gamma parking lot.

Gov. Terry Branstad declared Mills County in far southwest Iowa a disaster area, and Iowa National Guard vehicles were dispatched. Branstad spokesperson Eric Woolson said he assumed the vehicles would be used to help stranded motorists.

Some people greeted the snow as something inevitable.

"It's winter; it snows in winter time," UI senior Marty Kalina said. "It isn't that big of a thing. It's not that bad out today."

UI sophomore Tom Zelski said he took the inclement weather in stride.

"It shouldn't be here yet, but you have to deal with the situation," The Associated Press contributed to this story.

nese Communist Party hierarchy in the wake of the 1989 Tiananmen crackdown, meets Clinton Wednesday for talks expected to cover trade, weapons proliferation, Taiwan, drug trafficking and the environment, as well as human rights.

"The important part here for us is to engage with China but not endorse everything that they're doing," Albright said.

She said "substantial progress" has been made toward an agreement where China would pledge not to give nuclear assistance to Iran, Pakistan and other countries.

An agreement would include the lifting by the Clinton administration of restrictions on the sale to China of U.S. nuclear reactors.

The secretary said some good news also has come on human rights — the recent release from custody of a Roman Catholic Chinese bishop imprisoned for preaching outside the government-sanctioned church.

Sen. Orrin Hatch, a conservative Republican from Utah who recently visited China, praised the administration's position on human rights, pronouncing it "the best way to work with China."

He predicted on "Fox News Sunday" that while China, not wanting to appear to surrender to pressure, will avoid making human rights concessions at the summit, "I do believe that shortly after that, you'll see some changes in human rights."

Other lawmakers with grievances against China continued to demand that Clinton be as blunt as possible with Jiang.

Sen. Arlen Specter, R-Pa., sponsor of legislation that would sanction nations that punish people for religious beliefs, asked Clinton to hand Jiang a letter seeking the Chinese leader's approval to visit China and Tibet to examine religious persecution.

Sen. Dirk Kempthorne, R-Idaho, also sent Clinton a letter asking him to press Jiang to remove a Chinese ban on wheat and barley from the U.S. Northwest.

One of Capitol Hill's most outspoken China critics, Rep. Nancy Pelosi, D-Calif., said on CNN that the Beijing government scored "a great victory in getting a state visit," she said.

"Why should we be rolling out the red carpet for the leader of a regime that crushes dissent in its own country? Why should we give a 21-gun salute to the leader of the People's Liberation Army, which proliferates weapons of mass destruction in rogue nations?"

did," she said. "As a parent now, I would definitely warn more students about alcohol and how, if used incorrectly, [it] may ruin your life."

There is more to college than going out to party and getting drunk, said Jared Hills.

"Get involved with extracurricular activities, and meet new people," he said. "Then you will have the chance to come back 35 years later to see the friends you made while you were at the UI."

UI alumna Peg Raab, who graduated in 1975, said very few of her friends were involved in the party scene, and that helped her in the long run.

"I was a pretty serious student, but I had clean fun as well," she said. "Take this time very seriously, because it can result in either the success or failure of your future."

No matter if you party a lot or study religiously, have fun in your years at the UI, Raab said.

"Cherish the friendships you make while at the UI," she said. "These are the memories that will last a lifetime."

UI alumna Marcie Jedlicka, who graduated in 1997, said non-traditional students should become more involved with campus life.

"I was a non-traditional student here at the UI, so I didn't experience much of the campus life," she said. "My advice to students, traditional or non-traditional, is stick with it, and the system will eventually work out for you in the end."

TIME/Iowa City adjusts to fall-back schedule once again attempt to extend the working hours, said Mark Dyken, associate professor of neurology at the UI and the director of the Department of Neurology's Sleep Disorder Clinic.

Dyken said that, on the average, humans need between seven and nine hours of sleep. The extra hour adds little benefit to someone on a routine sleeping schedule.

"If you were on a routine sleeping schedule, you wouldn't (sleep later)," Dyken said. "You got what your body needs."

However, that extra hour puts humans closer to their natural cycle of sleep patterns.

Experiments in which humans have been put in time capsules — such as caves — and allowed to live on a "free-running schedule" have adopted an approximate 25-hour day, Dyken said.

Regardless of the change in her sleeping schedule, senior nursing student Sandy Peters said she hasn't forgotten about the switch in 10 years but did go to church once to find it completely empty.

"I was robbed of an hour of sleep," Peters said.

This year, UI graduate student Sean Coleman's wife forgot about the change and got up early but soon realized her mistake.

"She said, 'Well, I don't have to get up yet,' and went back to bed," he said.

CASSINI/Probe passes muster during initiation sequence

"They say we won't receive any data until two years prior to the Saturn fly-by."

But, he said, NASA is still deciding whether to collect data during the Venus fly-by in April 1998.

Cassini is currently about 2.2 million miles away from Earth, Gurnett said. In contrast, the distance between the Earth and the Sun is about 94 million miles. The craft has now reached a speed of 9,170 mph.

The 82-pound RPWS will study radio waves emanating from Saturn. It will also be able to detect lightning on the planet and its moon, Titan, which scientists say has characteristics of an early Earth.

The European Space Agency's Huygens probe, attached to Cassini, passed a hurdle of its own on Thursday; the probe was all right in its first examination.

Several other Cassini instruments also checked out OK last week, a NASA status report said.

Cassini's first destination is Venus in April 1998. The probe will pass by the planet twice before passing by Earth and Jupiter and finally arriving at Saturn. Another systems check for Cassini is scheduled to begin in December 1998 and will last about a month.

The craft is scheduled to arrive at Saturn in 2004 and study, among other things, the planet's moons, rings and lightning storms.

Barkley arrested after bar brawl

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — Charles Barkley was arrested Sunday for hurling a beer through a plate-glass window after the glass of ice at him.

Police said the Houston star told the lay bleeding on the ground: "You deserve. You don't respect me. I hope you die."

The 20-year-old patron, Jorge Lugo, was taken to a hospital for a minor laceration to his right arm.

Barkley was with aggravation and resisting arrest. He was jailed for hours before released on $100,000 bail.

Barkley said he never met Lugo. Lugo threw ice at him.

"I'm going myself ... at all times. I've made that years in the NBA," Barkley said Sunday. "If you bother me, I'm going to whip you."

The fight at Phineas Phogg's bar at Station, a popular entertainment district in Orlando, began as the bar was closing. Barkley told police that Lugo threw at him and three women who were sitting at the bar.

Barkley chased Lugo to the front where an off-duty officer tried to intervene. Barkley picked up Lugo and threw him through a window, according to a police report.

"He lifted that kid up and flung him and threw him into the window. He broke the window," said Jerry Colon, a witness.

Barkley, however, said it was more Lugo fell back into the window.

According to the police report, an scene separated Barkley from Lugo. Lugo went back and said, "For all I care, you there and die."

Barkley arrested after bar brawl

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — Charles Barkley was arrested early Sunday for hurling a bar patron through a plate-glass window after the man tossed a glass of ice at him.

Police said the Houston star told the victim as he lay bleeding on the ground: "You got what you deserve. You don't respect me. I hope you're hurt."

The 20-year-old patron, Jorge Lugo, was treated at a hospital for a minor laceration to his upper right arm.

Barkley was charged with aggravated battery and resisting arrest without violence, police said. He was jailed for five hours before being released on $6,000 bond.

Barkley said he had never met Lugo and that Lugo threw the glass of ice at him unprovoked.

"I'm going to defend myself ... at all times. I've made that clear in my years in the NBA," Barkley said Sunday afternoon. "If you bother me, I'm going to whup you."

The fight at Phineas Phogg's bar at Church Street Station, a popular entertainment district in downtown Orlando, began as the bar was clearing out.

Barkley told police that Lugo threw a glass of ice at him and three women who were sitting at his table. Barkley chased Lugo to the front of the bar, where an off-duty officer tried to intervene. But Barkley picked up Lugo and threw him through the window, according to a police report.

"He lifted that kid up and flung him like he was a toy and threw him into the window. He broke the whole glass," said Jerry Colon, a witness.

Barkley, however, said it was more like a push and Lugo fell back into the window.

According to the police report, an officer on the scene separated Barkley from Lugo but Barkley went back and said, "For all I care, you can lay here and die."

Marlins win a thriller

By Ben Walker
 Associated Press

MIAMI — Edgar Renteria ended one of the most thrilling Game 7s ever, singling home the winning run with two outs in the bottom of the 11th inning to give the Florida Marlins their first World Series championship with a 3-2 win over the Cleveland Indians on Sunday night.

The 5-year-old Marlins became the youngest expansion team to win a championship, while adding more heartbreak to the nearly half-century of disappointment for the Indians.

The Marlins, masters of the late-inning comeback, tied it at 2-2 in the ninth on Craig Counsell's sacrifice fly and then took advantage of second baseman Tony Fernandez's error to score the winning run. This marked just the third time in history that a Game 7 had gone to extra innings.

A see-saw Series finished with the teams alternating wins for all seven games. Devoid of drama for the first six games, Game 7 packed an entire season's worth of thrills into one night that kept getting better as the clock passed midnight.

Jay Powell pitched one inning for the victory. Charles Nagy, passed over in favor of rookie Jaret Wright for the Game 7 start, lost in relief.

Florida pitcher Livan Hernandez became just the second rookie to win the Series MVP award, joining Larry Sherry of Los Angeles in 1959. The trophy was even more special for the 22-year-old Hernandez, who Games 1 and 5, because his mother was allowed by Cuban officials to visit the United States for the final game.

Hawks roll to Big Ten rout
 Dwight dazzles during an otherwise ugly blowout

By Mike Triplett
 The Daily Iowan

Saturday's 62-0 victory over Indiana was the biggest Hoosier clubbing in Iowa history, but a less-than-perfect offensive outing still left a bad taste in the Hawkeyes' mouths.

On a day when Randy Reiners had the best runs, Tim Dwight the best pass and Matt Bowen the biggest reception, nothing in Iowa's blowout win was too exceptional.

Except, of course, for Dwight's outing. But with him, the exceptional has become the norm.

Dwight, the living, breathing definition of the term all-purpose, had 238 all-purpose yards and a wide assortment of touchdowns.

He threw for one, caught one and returned a punt for a score. He was a rushing TD shy of hitting for the cycle.

"He's got what I call an extra heart-beat," Iowa coach Hayden Fry said. "He's the greatest competitor I've had in 46 years of coaching."

He's also got a knack for returning punts. For the second straight week, Iowa's play of the game was Dwight finding daylight.

Saturday's return was a 92-yarder — his personal best and the third longest in school history.

"The way they kicked it, I knew I was going left no matter who was there," Dwight said. "And the (first defender) was kind of straight at me, so I knew I could get him around the corner."

It's beginning to look like Dwight always knows he has his man beat. Against Michigan, Dwight made a series of cuts on a punt return touchdown with no time left on the clock before halftime.

Against Indiana, he eluded two defenders before his blockers cleared the rest of the path.

"It's a combination of great vision plus great acceleration," Fry said of Dwight's abilities. "And then once he

Reiners brings new style to the backfield

For 68 years Iowa coach Hayden Fry has aged gracefully. That process has officially kick-started into high gear.

Iowa quarterback Randy Reiners made his starting debut Saturday. Reiners replaced injured quarterback Matt Sherman and brought along a whole new element to the Iowa quarterback position.

The sophomore excited the Kinnick Stadium fans with his elusive scrambling ability and linebacker-like mentality. He also drove his coach nuts.

"You can just see his mind working on, 'What kind of a trick can I put on this other guy?'" Fry said.

But what No. 13 brought was a carefree and relaxed attitude to a position on the Hawkeyes that fans and media members have been criticizing of late. And though he only graded his performance as average, the fun and excitement Reiners brought to the game definitely was worthy of an A.

Two plays perfectly summed up the flair Reiners brought to the field Saturday. One was his seven-yard touchdown run, the other a recovery of a Tavian Banks fumble.

On the fumble, Reiners fearlessly dove head-first into an Indiana defender who was falling on the ground trying to pick up the loose ball. They collided helmet-to-helmet, with Reiners soon emerging out of the pile with the football.

"My adrenaline was pumping,"

BIG TEN BASKETBALL
Purdue is the team to catch

Conference favorite Purdue and the new postseason tourney were topics of interest at Big Ten media day.

By Becky Gruhn
 The Daily Iowan

ROSEMONT, Ill. — For three of the last four years, Purdue coach Gene Keady has found ways to prove "expert" predictions wrong by bringing home Big Ten conference crowns.

This year, however, Keady can't use preseason snubbings as a source of motivation — his team is picked to win.

With 98 percent of their scoring and 96 percent of their rebounding returning from last year's squad, Keady's Boilermakers have been chosen by Big Ten media as the frontrunners for their fourth crown in five years.

Keady, who returns all five starters from a team that finished in a second-place conference tie with Iowa last season, told media representatives Sunday at the Big Ten Basketball media day that one of the keys to his recent success is his ability to deal with today's Generation X.

"My coaching demeanor is a lot less intense than it used to be," Keady said. "But my coaching philosophy has changed over the past several years. I'm not really a coach anymore, I'm more like a dad."

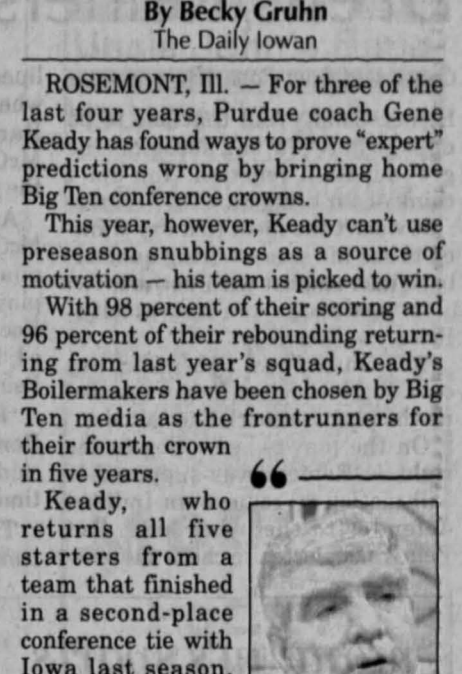

The Purdue boss credited Iowa coach Tom Davis and Wisconsin's Dick Bennett as the voices that persuaded him and the rest of the league to finally approve a postseason Big Ten basketball tournament.

The inaugural tournament will be held March 5-8 at the United Center in Chicago with the winner receiving an automatic bid to the NCAA tournament.

"The last few years I just tried being an intelligent advocate rather than a passionate advocate," Davis said. "Dick Bennett and Lon Kruger added voices when they joined the conference and then everyone else was willing to listen."

All coaches seemed sold on the idea Sunday as they talked about increased media exposure and the benefit of an added preparation for March Madness. Minnesota coach Clem Haskins, who led his Golden Gophers all the way to the Final Four last year, said he had a lot of resistance to the tour-watching the wild-card Marlins win after spending nearly $100 million during the winter to bolster a team that had never had a winning record.

Marlins/ Florida ices World Series crown

"I guess every little boy imagines this might happen at one time. It's a total fantasy for me," Leyland said. "I was a little concerned. We haven't given up all year — tonight wasn't the time to give up. When we walked into the clubhouse tonight, we knew we were going to be world champions."

Indians manager Mike Hargrove found no joy on his 48th birthday. Born a year after the Indians' last title in 1948, his club added another heartbreak to a city that has only known losing for too long. It was their second World Series loss in three years.

"I don't really know what to tell the team, other than they played hard all year long," Hargrove said. "We overcame long odds to get where we're at. We played hard, we didn't give the game away, it could've gone either way. It just happened to go the Marlins' way."

Cleveland relief ace Jose Mesa was just a double play grounder away from clinching the championship in the ninth, but Counsell tied it with a deep fly to right.

out later, Counsell hit a grounder to the right side and Bonilla may have screened Fernandez, racing to third when the ball rolled past the second baseman's glove.

Visions of Bill Buckner's misplay in the 1986 Series stirred as the Indians intentionally walked Jim Eisenreich to load the bases. Devon White grounded into a force play at the plate before Renteria lined an 0-1 pitch past Nagy for the victory.

The Marlins raced on to the field in triumph while Indians first baseman Jim Thome crouched alone in front of the mound.

Fernandez's error beats the Tribe

■ A routine play turned foul on Tony Fernandez in the tenth inning and cost the Indians the World Series.

By Hal Bock
Associated Press

MIAMI — It was the kind of play Tony Fernandez has made a million times. This time he didn't make it and it cost Cleveland the World Series.

Fernandez booted an easy ground ball in the 11th inning Sunday night, what seemed like an inning-ending double play. And when the inning ended, the Florida Marlins had won the Series.

With the score tied 2-2, Bobby Bonilla opened the 11th with a single. Geoff Zahn failed to bunt the runner along and it looked like a terrible mistake when Craig Counsell, whose sacrifice fly had tied the game in the ninth, bounced a ball to Fernandez' left.

The play would be easy. Fernandez would grab the grounder relay to second for the force on the limping Bonilla and then Omar Vizquel would throw to first for the double play.

It never happened. The ball got past Fernandez for an error. Bonilla, running like a desperate man, made it to third with a headfirst slide. Now the Indians were in deep trouble with the winning run on third. They walked Jim Eisenreich intentionally to load the bases.

That brought up Devon White who bounced to Fernandez. This time the 35-year-old infielder made the play, throwing to catcher Sandy Alomar for the force play at the plate. Now Cleveland was one out away from escaping.

But the Indians never got that out, as Edgar Renteria followed with a single up the middle to win the game and the Series.

A steady defensive player throughout his career, Fernandez was playing second base because Bip Roberts had flu and cold-like

Indians' pitching move was the Wright one

By Tom Withers
Associated Press

MIAMI — For six marvelous innings, Jaret Wright defied the odds and gave this World Series its best pitching performance. Then, with one pitch in the seventh to Bobby Bonilla, everything changed for the rookie and the Cleveland Indians.

Wright put Cleveland in position to win the Series, leaving with a 2-1 lead in the seventh inning. But the Marlins rallied to tie the game in the ninth inning and win it 3-2 in the 11th.

Wright, only the seventh rookie pitcher to start a Game 7, dominated the Marlins for the first six innings with his 95 mph fastball and a wicked slider that locked up several Florida hitters.

Entering the seventh, the 21-year-old had a 2-0 lead and was in line to become the first rookie to win a Game 7 since Babe Adams in 1909. But the Indians' babe grooved his first pitch to Bonilla, who ripped it over the wall in right, renewing the Marlins' hopes and recharging their fans.

After striking out Charles Johnson, Wright issued his fifth walk, this one to Craig Counsell, and Cleveland manager Mike Hargrove made the slow walk to the mound to replace his young star who received a hero's welcome in the Indians' dugout.

Before the game, Hargrove had restated his reason for starting Wright on three days' rest over scheduled starter Charles Nagy.

"Bottom line," Hargrove said. "I felt that Jaret Wright on the 26th of October, 1997, gave us a better chance to win than Charlie Nagy did, bottom line."

Coincidentally, October 26, 1997, just happens to be Hargrove's 48th birthday, and he had no hesitation in putting his team's World Series destiny in the hands of a 21-year-old.

As it turned out, Hargrove was right as Nagy would get the loss when Edgar Renteria lined an RBI single through the middle in the bottom of the 11th inning to give the Marlins the stunning win.

Until that first pitch in the seventh, Wright made his manager's move look magical. With his father, Clyde, a former major league pitcher among the 67,000 in Pro Player Stadium, Wright mowed down the Marlins' lineup almost effortlessly.

In the second inning, he froze Johnson for a called third strike, and after walking Florida starter Al Leiter with one out in the third, he blew a fastball past Devon White for the second out.

He turned Moises Alou into a statue with a two-strike slider and got Bonilla swinging for the final out of the fourth inning. He would record two more strikeouts before making that fateful pitch to Bonilla.

WOMEN'S SWIMMING

Iowa freshman Loredana Zisu sets the record in the 200-yard butterfly at the Fieldhouse Pool Friday night. Iowa lost to Minnesota 196-106.

Freshman swimmer sets record in Iowa loss

Iowa freshman Loredana Zisu set the school record in the 200-yard butterfly as Iowa lost to Minnesota 196-106 Friday.

By Tony Wirt
The Daily Iowan

The Iowa women's swimming team jumped in to the Big Ten Conference with both feet against tough Big Ten foe Minnesota. Despite getting beat by a team score of 196-106, head coach Mary Bolich was pleased with the improvement she saw in her team. "We had some great performances," Bolich said. "We want to focus on getting stronger and better from week to week, and I saw some great progress from last weekend. I think every member of the team can walk away and feel good about their individual swims."

The highlight of the meet for the Hawkeyes was freshman Loredana Zisu, who broke her own school record in the 200-yard butterfly.

"I was very tired this week and thought that I had mono, but I had a good race."

Loredana Zisu
Iowa freshman swimmer

Zisu, a native of Galati, Romania, swam the event in 2:02.89, breaking the record she set last weekend by 1.24 seconds. "I didn't think that I'd be able to break the school record again," Zisu said. "I was very tired this week and thought that I had mono, but I had a good race."

Zisu was the only double-winner for the Hawkeyes, as she also won the 100-yard butterfly with a time of 56.34 seconds.

Iowa's other winner Friday night was freshman Stacey Wertz, who took the top spot in the 100-yard freestyle with a time of 52.34.

Although the final score was a blowout, coach Bolich likes the fact that her team started off against such a tough opposition.

"It's really good to swim against great opponents," Bolich said. "It gives us a chance to swim up to their level. Anytime you swim such a talented competition, we have nothing to do but gain from it."

The Hawkeyes will be at home once again this weekend, when they will host Big Ten rivals Indiana and Illinois. The meet starts at 3:30 Friday afternoon.

Volleyball team splits weekend matches

By Andy Hamilton
The Daily Iowan

Jen Bell isn't afraid to say how special Iowa's victory over Illinois Saturday night was to her personally.

The Hawkeye senior is a native of Orland Park, Ill., and the Fighting Illini recruited her out of high school.

But Iowa's 15-6, 15-13, 15-3, win over Illinois meant much more to Bell than just getting over being swept by No. 8, Wisconsin on Friday.

"Illinois is one of my least favorite teams in the Big Ten," Bell said. "Their fans are always really rude when we play there. I never really wanted to go there. I never showed interest in the school and I didn't really like the campus."

Bell said the key to the win for the Hawkeyes was getting off to a good start. That was something Iowa didn't do against the Badgers. Iowa lost in three games, 15-4, 15-7, 15-12. "Everybody came out really aggressive and was ready to play from the beginning," Bell said. "Sometimes we aren't ready to play until the second or third game and by then it's too late. (Against Illinois) we were ready to play right away."

Four Hawkeyes finished in double figures in kills as Iowa improved its record to 9-12 overall, and 2-7 in Big Ten play with the win over Illinois. Bell and Katie Panhorst led the Hawkeyes with 13.

Against the much taller Badgers, Bell was the only Hawkeye to reach double figures with 11 kills. Despite knowing the talent of the Badgers, the Hawkeyes set their sights on an upset.

"We were pretty let down," sophomore Julie Williams said. "We worked pretty hard in practice all week. We went in thinking we had a good shot and then to lose in three straight wasn't good." Co-coach Linda Schoenstedt looked at the win over Illinois as the turning point the Hawkeyes need. "Our whole team played well and with a lot of heart," co-coach Linda Schoenstedt said. "This is the breakthrough win we've been looking for."

The Hawkeyes have some time to avenge a previous loss to Ohio State when Iowa travels to Columbus on Friday. "It would have been harder for everybody to come in and continue to be positive week after week after losing," Bell said.

Field Hockey squad loses fourth conference game

By Tony Wirt
The Daily Iowan

Unable to pull themselves out of the slump that has plagued them, Iowa's field hockey team dropped their fourth Big Ten Conference game Sunday at the hands of the Northwestern Wildcats, 3-1.

The Hawkeyes looked lackluster throughout the game against the Wildcats, who consistently beat the Hawkeyes to the ball and denied them of quality scoring chances.

"I don't think that we showed up today," Coach Beth Beglin said.

Northwestern wasted no time in establishing the fact that they were ready to play. The Wildcats moved the ball down on their first possession and used good ball movement to set up Jodie Condie for the score.

Controversy surrounded the next goal, which Wildcat sophomore Tess Burigatto scored on a penalty stroke. The stroke was given when the referee called Hawkeye goalkeeper Lisa Cellucci for trapping the ball, though it was clear that it was out in front of her.

The game was back-and-forth through halftime and for the first 20 minutes of the second half, with neither team getting any solid scoring chances.

Senior Milisa Miller turned things around with a few steals and led the Hawkeye attack for the next five minutes, but Iowa came up empty.

Northwestern put the game away with a goal on a penalty corner with 7:53 left.

The Hawkeyes did add a goal when Sonia Steffler put one on in a penalty corner, but that was all they could get.

Coach Beglin saw her teams performance during the game far below what she saw in practice this week.

"I don't feel that we put together anything that we practiced on this week," Beglin said. "We had three intense, competitive, good practices this week, and we did not put anything that we had three into practices into the game this week. We didn't follow our game plan at all."

"If we don't start seeing what we do in practice, we're not going to play well in the tournament, because we're not playing well now."

The Wildcats, 3-5 in the Big Ten, did well in their role as a spoiler.

"We had a situation where we had three games left to play, and if we were successful in those games we are at least co-champions of the Big Ten," Beglin said. "Northwestern is out of it, they can no longer win the Big Ten. The only thing they can do is improve and be ready for the tournament."

Illinois senior forward Ashley Berggren splits a pair of Iowa defenders in last seasons Big Ten Tournament final.

Pollyanna Johns.

"Berggren is a true competitor," Wisconsin head coach Jane Albright-Dieterle said. "She's developed a lot over the years. And I'd do exactly what she'd tell me if I was on her team."

The possibility of a national title was also brought up for the Illini.

"When we were freshmen we used to dream in our dreams about being Big Ten champions," Berggren said. "It's hard to believe we are now contending for a national championship." Naming their third coach in four years, Purdue will be contending for one of the top spots in the conference also.

"Everyone has experienced players this season," new Boilermaker coach Carolyn Peck said.

"All in all, the conference is going to be tougher than last season."

Coaches and players agreed the Big Ten conference will soon be one of the premier conferences in the nation. Still bitter about how few bids Big Ten teams received last season for the NCAA tournament, teams are on a mission not to be overlooked again.

While Illinoi players are carrying the motto "The sky is the limit," other teams are following suit.

"I think we respect every team in the Big Ten," White said. "It is so well-balanced. We always say, 'We respect everyone and fear no one.'"

HAWKEYE SPORTS ROUNDUP

Soccer

The Iowa soccer team headed to Lawrence, Kansas, Sunday with the intention of winning the second game of what it hoped would turn out to be four victories in a row.

Instead, the Hawkeyes played their first-ever overtime match and came up on the short end of a 3-2 loss.

Iowa dropped its record to 6-11 overall, while Kansas improved to 6-11.

Kansas' game-winning goal resulted from the generosity of the Hawkeyes as an Iowa defender, attempting to clear a pass, inadvertently headed the ball into the Hawkeye goal.

For the match, Kansas out-shot Iowa 18-16, drawing five corner kicks compared to the Hawkeyes' four. Iowa goalkeeper Gabe Mauren recorded seven saves while her Kansas counterpart Jen Fecke had eight stops.

Kansas charged the Iowa defense early, scoring its first goal just 1:05 into the match. The Jayhawks added their second goal 27 minutes later.

Iowa was able to settle down after the early scores and put a point on the board before halftime when Beth Oldenburg scored on a breakaway at the 31:25 mark.

Oldenburg tied the contest when she scored her second goal on a penalty corner eight minutes into the second half.

The Hawkeyes conclude their season this weekend in Louisiana. Iowa will travel to New Orleans Friday to face Tulane before meeting Southeastern Louisiana Sunday for the season finale.

The Head of Iowa fall regatta was canceled Sunday due to poor weather conditions. The Iowa women's sports information department said the event will not be rescheduled.

The Head of Iowa has been held on the Iowa River for six straight years. The event is hosted by the Hawkeyes, and it would have been their final regatta of the fall season.

Women's Tennis

Iowa fought off rain last weekend and put together a solid performance at the Yellow Jacket/Holiday Inn Midtown North Invitational in Atlanta.

At the completion of the second day of competition Saturday, Iowa had placed two singles players in the semifinals and a doubles team in the tournament finals. Matches were suspended Saturday, and no results had been found at press time Sunday.

Iowa senior Carolina Delgado and sophomore Shera Wiegler defeated players from North Carolina State and Tulane Saturday to advance to the semifinals. Freshman Jessica Landes defeated Georgia Tech's Danielle Ross and freshman Erica Johnson won her flight D match against North Carolina State.

Iowa's doubles team of Delgado and freshman Megan Kearney won their match against a team from Georgia Tech to advance to the flight C finals as well. Johnson and Landes also won two matches Saturday.

Hawkeyes in center of Big Ten talk

Even though Illinois was the preseason pick to win the conference, Big Ten teams are worried about Iowa as well.

By Megan Manfull
The Daily Iowan

ROSEMONT, ILL. - Even though they weren't in attendance, the Iowa women's basketball team was still the talk of Big Ten Media Day Sunday.

Media representatives voted the Hawkeyes to finish second in the conference race, following Illinois, the defending conference champions. After winning the Big Ten tournament last season, Iowa stands to be a threat, as they return all starters.

While Illinois head coach Theresa Grentz remembers her team's loss to Iowa last season in the final round of the Big Ten tournament, revenge is not her focus this season.

"Revenge is the most stupidest thing," Grentz said. "Iowa was a great team during that game. They were the better team, and we have to accept that. Revenge won't get us anywhere."

Like Iowa, Grentz returns all five starters, led by senior guard and the media's 1997 Big Ten Player of the Year Ashley Berggren. For the past two seasons she has led the Illini in scoring and assists and finished second in rebounding.

While Berggren's focus is on the upcoming season, swarms of accolades surrounded her in Chicago. She was voted pre-season player of the year, leading a team that includes Iowa's Tangelia Smith and Angela Hamblin, Purdue's Stephanie White, and Michigan's

After giving up a game-winning touchdown late against Michigan last week, the Iowa defense took out its frustration on Indiana.

By Wayne Drehs and Mike Triplett The Daily Iowan

The Iowa defense was on a mission Saturday against Indiana, and it had little trouble accomplishing its goal.

The Hoosiers were held without a single point, and only managed 173 total yards of offense against the stingy Iowa defense.

The performance was exactly what the Hawkeye defense was looking for following last weekend's 28-24 loss to Michigan in which the Wolverines scored the go-ahead touchdown late in the fourth quarter.

"I wanted to tell him, 'Hey, I'm here for you,'" Dwight said. "And the game would be going the same way if you were in. He just told me, 'Thanks a lot,' and that he appreciated it."

Sherman watched the game in street clothes from the sidelines, forced to miss the action due to a hand injury. The senior separated a joint between his wrist and thumb in Iowa's 28-24 loss to Michigan, a game in which his poor performance was highly criticized.

With Sherman down, Dwight would get the call after Reiners, Scott Mullen and Kory Hauser.

"I'd love to play quarterback. If everybody got hurt, I'm the fourth string quarterback right now. I know the offense almost as well as Matt (Sherman), and I know a little bit more than Randy (Reiners)."

Iowa senior Tim Dwight

Iowa's 1997 LEADERS

Rushing
Tavian Banks: 1,125 yards and 14 TDs on 154 carries Passing
Matt Sherman: completed 74 of 136 passes for 1,079 yards, 11 TDs and six interceptions Receiving
Tim Dwight: 27 receptions for 501 yards and six TDs
Punt Returns
Tim Dwight: 12 returns for 259 yards
Defense
Matt Hughes: 66 tackles
Jared DeVries: six sacks and 12 tackles for loss

"He's just as important as anybody else on this team," Dwight said. "And he's taken a lot of heat on some things, and it's tough for him. He can't redeem himself, he can only sit there and take it."

TIMMY QUARTERBACK?: Dwight likes to joke about playing quarterback, but he was serious when he said he's the Hawkeyes' fourth-string signal caller.

Dwight has thrown two TD passes in his career - one to Sherman as a freshman, and the second Saturday to Damon Gibson.

Saturday's pass traveled about 40 yards in the air, but Dwight says he can push 70 yards with a running start in practice.

Still, if Dwight got his wish and became Iowa's QB, his arm wouldn't be his biggest strength.

GET WELL SOON: Following Randy Reiners' seven-yard touchdown run in the third quarter, Tim Dwight ran over to the sidelines, where he hugged injured quarterback Matt Sherman.

Iowa's Ryan Loftin brings down Indiana fullback Chris Gall after Gall caught a pass Saturday. Loftin sacked Indiana quarterback Jay Rodgers on the next play.

"I'm telling Coach to get me some snaps underneath, so when we get close to the goal line, I can be running the option," Dwight said.

DWIGHT DOESN'T HATE MEDIA: That's what the outspoken team captain said, anyway, after Iowa's win.

Dwight wrote a letter to the editor in Thursday's Daily Iowan and spouted off on the media during the week, saying he was "pissed off" at things he's read and used the term "piss-ant articles" to describe some of the media's work.

But he was friendly with reporters Saturday.

"I don't hate you guys. I just wanted to say something," Dwight said.

He also said he and his teammates didn't use the letter as a motivation in their victory, though he did want to back up what he wrote and keep people from asking, "Who the hell does Dwight think he is?"

"The biggest motivation is that we haven't won," Dwight said. "But what I said in the paper, I wanted to back it up. I'm the type of player where if I speak something, I'm sure as hell gonna perform."

TOUGH TEST AWAITS: Don't look now, but Purdue is fast becoming one of Iowa's toughest challenges of the season.

Purdue has won only one game in its last 12 meetings with Iowa, but this year, the Boilermakers are coming into their own. They boast a 6-1 record, they've beaten Notre Dame and they disposed of Illinois, 48-3 Saturday.

"They're not just Purdue anymore. They're a good football team," Iowa's Tim Dwight said. "They do so many things on offense, you've gotta be worried about what they're gonna do."

"We gotta look at them as a Big Ten contender."

Purdue actually leads the Big Ten with a 4-0 record, and even if the Boilermakers don't win the conference, they can challenge Iowa in the standings and a berth in a New Year's Day bowl game.

"I don't want to think about bowl games right now. I just want to win ball games," Dwight said.

FIRSTS FOR BOWEN: Sophomore defensive back Matt Bowen had a pair of firsts against the Hoosiers Sunday, returning his first interception as a Hawkeye 70 yards for his first touchdown.

"I was watching the quarterbacks eyes and he threw it right to me," Bowen said. "I couldn't believe it."

Bowen was recruited out of Glen Ellyn, Ill. as a quarterback, but made the switch to defensive back toward the end of his freshman year. Since the switch, Bowen has leaped into the two-deep, where he backs up free safety Eric Thigpen. The Hawkeyes were in the nickel package Saturday when Bowen got the interception.

"The switch has worked out pretty much the way I thought it would work out, Bowen said. "Today it worked out real well. I felt like a quarterback again getting in the end zone."

FIRST QUARTER

WHAT HAPPENED: It was the Iowa defense that set the tone early Saturday, with Jared DeVries (above) intercepting an attempted shovel pass by Indiana quarterback Jay Rodgers on the Hoosiers' first possession.

DeVries returned the pick to the Indiana 13-yard line. Three plays later, Iowa quarterback Randy Reiners threw his first touchdown as a starter, hitting tailback Tavian Banks for a 19-yard touchdown reception.

On the Hoosiers' following possession, punter Alan Sutkowski fumbled the snap, but did manage to get the kick off, for a punt of 27 yards.

Iowa took over on the Indiana 27-yard line, but after an illegal procedure penalty, the Hawkeyes failed to capitalize, as Zach Bromert missed a 47-yard field goal attempt.

KEY STAT: The two teams combined for 56-yards of total offense in the first quarter.

SECOND QUARTER

WHAT HAPPENED: The second quarter belonged to wide receiver Tim Dwight and the Iowa defense.

Dwight scored on a 29-yard strike (above) from Reiners, cutting back against the grain after making the reception, and diving into the end zone to complete the score.

Then on Iowa's next possession, he took a reverse hand-off from Tavian Banks and threw a 64-yard touchdown pass to wideout Damon Gibson.

The defense again shut down the Hoosiers in the second period, holding them to just three yards rushing and two first downs. A 47-yard field goal attempt by Indiana's Andy Payne missed, as Iowa kept the Hoosiers scoreless.

As the half expired, a fake field goal attempt by Iowa resulted in an incomplete pass. Zach Bromert then attempted a 37-yard field goal and missed.

KEY STAT: Tim Dwight had two touchdowns and 108 yards of total offense in the quarter.

THIRD QUARTER

WHAT HAPPENED: Iowa broke the game open in the third period, erupting for 21 quarter points.

The scoring was kicked off by defensive back Matt Bowen's 70-yard interception return (above) on the Hoosiers' first possession of the half. That play took the air out of the Hoosiers and put Iowa up 28-0.

On Indiana's next possession, the Hoosiers were forced to a three and out. When they punted the ball to Tim Dwight, the senior electrified the crowd with a 92-yard touchdown punt return to put Iowa up 35-0.

After Indiana was again forced to punt, Iowa got the ball back and marched down the field with Randy Reiners taking the scoring honors on a 7-yard run into the end zone.

The half concluded with Iowa up 42-0.

KEY STAT: Dwight's punt return was his fourth career punt touchdown return, tying him for a Big Ten record.

FOURTH QUARTER

WHAT HAPPENED: Tavian Banks got his final carries of the game early in the quarter, one of which culminated in a one-yard touchdown run on Iowa's first possession of the quarter.

After an Iowa fumble, Indiana had great field position and an ideal chance to end their scoring drought, but the Hawkeyes' Joe Slattery intercepted a Hoosier pass on the goal line.

On Indiana's next possession, J.P. Lange would do the interception honors, returning it 60-yards for another Iowa touchdown to put the Hawkeyes up 56-0.

With 1:39 to go, it appeared the misery was over for the Hoosiers, but a fumble on the following kickoff allowed Rob Thein to get a rushing touchdown of his own, a 30-yard run with :07 to go.

KEY STAT: Iowa racked up seven first downs and 180 yards of total offense in the fourth quarter, with mostly reserves playing.

DWIGHT/Iowa senior had huge day

Banks, the nation's leading rusher had just 25 rushing yards at halftime against an unheralded Indiana defense. He finished with 116 yards on 21 carries.

"I'd probably give the offense a C today," Banks said. "We didn't really do anything on offense today until the end of the game, when Indiana was already worn out."

Fry was disappointed in his offense, but he said Indiana took advantage of Reiners' inexperience and concentrated on stopping Banks.

"I don't mind winning 62 to zip if people are gonna load up on Tavian," Fry said.

But you can't win 62 to zip without a stellar defensive effort, which Iowa got Saturday, holding the Hoosiers to 173 total yards.

The defensive highlight was Bowen's 70-yard interception return for a touchdown, one of five Hawkeye takeaways.

Said Dwight, "A lot of guys were making plays that don't usually make plays."

Not to mention the one guy who always make plays.

NFC ROUNDUP

Vikings hold off Bucs, take first place

Bill Sikes/Associated Press

A swarm of Denver defenders nail Buffalo Bills tight end Jay Riemersma, center, after a catch in the second quarter Sunday.

Broncos deal with snow, beat Bills

ORCHARD PARK, N.Y. — The Denver Broncos can thank the people who rescued Jason Elam from the weekend blizzard in Denver for their victory over the Buffalo Bills on Sunday.

Elam, stranded along the side of the road for more than five hours Saturday in the snowstorm that hit Denver, kicked a 33-yard field goal with 1:56 left in overtime to lift the Broncos to a 23-20 win over the Bills.

"It was a fun closure to a crazy weekend," Elam said. "It's definitely something I won't forget for a very long time."

Terrell Davis rushed for 207 yards on 42 carries and scored one touchdown, and Elam added field goals of 23 and 22 yards for the Broncos (7-1), who bounced back from a 28-25 loss to the Oakland Raiders last week.

Steve Christie kicked a 55-yard field goal with two seconds remaining to tie the game for the Bills, who came back after backup quarterback Alex Van Pelt replaced Todd Collins in the third quarter.

"There was a lot of time left," Van Pelt said. "I was in there to try and spark the team. It was nice to come back, but it would have been nicer to win."

The Broncos drew within field-goal distance after quarterback John Elway hit Ed McCaffrey with a 17-yard pass on third-and-10 and Rod Smith on a 14-yard completion on the next play. Five plays later, Elam nailed the game winner.

"I was just happy to win the game," Elam said. "I think we were destined to win that game after everything we went through to get here."

The Broncos' flight to Buffalo was delayed 8 1/2 hours on Saturday because of the bad weather in Denver.

The snow was so bad that cornerback Tim McKyer abandoned his car and carried his luggage a quarter mile to the team's practice facility, where the team began a 2 1/2-hour bus ride to the airport.

Oakland 14, Bills 13

Blades had his seventh 400-yard passing game in his 14th NFL season, tying Joe Montana for second place behind Dan Marino's 34.

The Minnesota Vikings beat the Tampa Bay Buccaneers 10-6 Sunday to move into first place in the NFC Central.

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — Dennis Green's off-the-field problems didn't stop the Minnesota Vikings from taking over first place in the NFC Central.

Charles Evans scored on a 1-yard run and Eddie Murray kicked a 28-yard field goal Sunday as the Vikings pulled ahead of Green Bay and Tampa Bay in the division with a 10-6 victory over the reeling Buccaneers.

The victory was the fourth in five games for the Vikings (6-2), who showed no signs of being distracted by the release Thursday of Green's autobiography "No Room For Crybabies."

In the book, the Vikings coach outlines a plan to take over controlling interest in the team and threatens to sue the team's owners if they don't sell to him.

Murray's field goal snapped a scoreless tie with just over four minutes left in the third quarter, and David Palmer returned a punt 57 yards to the Tampa Bay 8 to set up Evans' TD in the final minute of the period.

The loss was the third straight for the Bucs (5-3), who opened the season with five successive victories and owned at least a share of the division lead since the first week of the season.

The Vikings pulled a half-game ahead of the Packers (5-2), who play at New England on Monday night.

Steelers 23, Jaguars 17

Jerome Bettis took Kordell Stewart's shovel pass to score a 17-yard touchdown at 9:13 of overtime as Pittsburgh (6-2) won its fifth consecutive game.

Jacksonville (5-3) took to the field on Mark Brunell's 3-yard TD pass to Pete Mitchell after Bettis fumbled at the Steelers 16. But Pittsburgh's Norm Johnson sent the game into overtime with a 19-yard field goal with 2:21 remaining.

Stewart, who went 25-of-42 for 317 yards and two touchdowns, had 11 completions for 196 yards to Yancey Thigpen, and led the Steelers' 77 yards following the overtime kickoff.

Chiefs sneak by Rams

ST. LOUIS (AP) — The Kansas City Chiefs established home-field advantage on the other side of the state.

Bolstered by busloads of red-clad, noisy fans and four field goals from Pete Stoyanovich, the Chiefs beat error-prone St. Louis 28-20 Sunday in the first regular-season meeting between the teams since the Rams moved from Anaheim, Calif., in 1995.

Elvis Grbac improved to 3-0 as a starter against the Rams (2-6) with a turnover-free game, and the Chiefs (6-2) converted three lost fumbles and an interception into 14 points.

Chargers 35, Colts 19

Greg Brown rushed for 169 yards and one touchdown as host San Diego kept Indianapolis inside the eight-yard line.

Greg Davis kicked five field goals for the Chargers (4-4), but had a sixth attempt blocked by Ellis Johnson and returned for a touchdown by Ray McElroy to cut the lead to 29-10 with 17:10 to play.

The Colts tried an onside kick, only to see the ball go straight to Rodney Harrison, who ran between two Colts for a 40-yard TD.

Giants 29, Bengals 27

Tyrone Wheatley and Charles Wynn each scored twice and Jason Sehorn intercepted a 2-point conversion pass with 1:30 to play as the Giants (8-0) won their fifth straight game.

The bottom line is we are finding ways to win this year instead of ways to lose," Sehorn said.

The Bengals (1-7) lost their seventh consecutive game despite opening a 21-10 halftime lead on a team-record 102-yard kickoff return by Eric Blerney and a 39-yard touchdown pass from Jeff Blake to David Dunn with six seconds left in the second quarter.

Eagles 13, Cowboys 12

Rodney Peete's 8-yard touchdown pass to Chad Lewis with 45 seconds left gave Philadelphia the win at home.

Lewis' touchdown ended a 10-play, 74-yard drive sustained by a 27-yard pass to Kevin Turner and an 11-yard completion to Irving Fryar on fourth-and-11 at the Dallas 43.

The Eagles (like the Cowboys 4-4) knocked out Troy Aikman (mild concussion, strained neck) early in the first quarter and Dallas' red zone offense, next-to-worst in the NFL, mustered only Richie Cunningham's four field goals.

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Tanmarquis Bakabubuka had the best game of his brief career. Tony Gonzalez had one to forget.

Making his first start since undergoing major knee surgery 13 months ago, Bakabubuka rushed for 104 yards and he touchdowns to lead Carolina to a 21-12 victory over the Atlanta Falcons on Sunday night.

Bakabubuka's yardage total and his 23 rushes both were his highest outputs since the Panthers made him the No. 8 overall selection in the 1996 NFL draft.

Top teams have no trouble

With Nebraska, Florida State and Michigan dominating, Washington State and Missouri pulled out the most exciting wins.

By Richard Rosenblatt
Associated Press

On a day of shootouts and shutouts, the Rose Bowl managed to stay in the running for a national title game. But just barely.

Tenth-ranked Washington State remained the Pac-10's lone unbeaten team Saturday with a 35-34 victory over Arizona when the Wildcats failed on a 2-point conversion in overtime.

The Rose Bowl, which matches the Pac-10 and Big Ten champs, doesn't join the bowl alliance until next season. However, there's a chance it can upstage the Orange Bowl — the alliance's top game — especially if it can present a battle of unbeaten.

Fourth-ranked Michigan, with a 23-7 win over No. 21 Michigan State, remained one of two perfect Big Ten teams, along with No. 2 Penn State, which did not play.

In the Pac-10, the Cougars (7-0, 4-0) could be headed for an Apple Cup showdown against No. 7 Washington (6-1, 4-0) to decide who plays in Pasadena. The Huskies beat Oregon State 45-17. In the Big Ten, the Lions (6-0, 3-0) and Wolverines (7-0, 4-0) play on Nov. 8 at State College, Pa.

For now, No. 1 Nebraska remains on the Orange Bowl express after a 35-0 rout of Kansas at Lawrence, Kan. The Huskers (7-0, 4-0 Big 12) have posted two consecutive shutouts.

Washington State wasn't the only team involved in a shootout.

At Stillwater, Okla., Missouri, which blew a 23-point lead, handed No. 19 Oklahoma State (6-1, 3-1 Big 12) its first loss of the season, 51-50 in double overtime, while Pittsburgh topped winless Rutgers 55-48 in two OTs.

No. 1 Nebraska 35, Kansas 0

At Lawrence, Kan., Scott Frost rushed for 121 yards and two TDs as the Huskers overcame a brief power failure and a cold, driving rain to beat the Jayhawks (4-4) for the 29th straight year.

No. 3 Florida State 47, Virginia 21

At Charlottesville, Va., the Seminoles (7-0, 5-0 ACC) scored TDs on

No. 7 Washington 45, Oregon State 17

At Corvallis, Ore., Rashaan Shehee rushed for 169 yards and two TDs as the Huskies (6-1, 4-0 Pac-10) scored 35 unanswered points in the second half.

No. 10 Washington State 35, Arizona 34, OT

At Pullman, Wash., Ryan Leaf, who threw for a career-best 384 yards and three TDs, scored on a 1-yard run in OT to lift the Cougars.

Missouri 51, No. 19 Oklahoma State 50, 2OTs

The Cowboys rallied for a 37-30 lead, but the Tigers (5-3) forced OT on Corby Jones' 38-yard TD pass with 18 seconds left.

Iowa State 24, Baylor 17

At Ames, Iowa, Darren Davis rushed for a career-high 247 yards and scored two TDs as Iowa State ended a 13-game losing streak.

Notre Dame 52, Boston College 20

At South Bend, Ind., Ron Powles heard some cheers as he threw for 267 yards and two TDs in Notre Dame's rout of Boston College.

BIG TEN ROUNDUP

Michigan gains no ground

A victory over Michigan State moved Michigan up in the polls, but Purdue and Penn State remained undefeated as well.

Associated Press

Michigan won its big intrastate showdown to remain undefeated. But Purdue and Penn State still stand in the way of the Big Ten title.

No. 4 Michigan beat 21st-ranked Michigan State 23-7 Saturday. Elsewhere around the league, No. 18 Purdue hammered Illinois 48-3. No. 9 Ohio State walloped Northwestern 49-6, Wisconsin edged Minnesota 22-21 and No. 15 Iowa crushed Indiana 62-0. No. 2 Penn State was idle.

This Saturday's games include a clash of Big Ten doormats — winless Illinois at Indiana. The Hoosiers have no points in their last 10 quarters and are without a TD in the last 18, dating back to last month.

In East Lansing, Mich., Wolverine cornerback Charles Woodson came up with two acrobatic interceptions in the second half.

"The greatest players have the biggest games in the most important games and that's true of Charles Woodson," Michigan coach Lloyd Carr said. "I also know he had a bad game up here two years ago, and he hasn't forgotten that."

The Wolverines (7-0, 4-0 Big Ten) haven't allowed a point in the fourth quarter all season and have permitted just three field goals in the second half.

The Wolverines took a big step toward a Nov. 8 showdown against No. 2 Penn State, while the Spartans (5-2, 2-2) dropped their second straight game and fell out of contention in the conference race.

Late in the first half at Columbus, Ohio, it appeared the Buckeyes were in for a struggle against Northwestern.

Then Ohio State got the ball on the Northwestern 43 with 41 seconds left in the second quarter and was in the end zone two plays later on a 27-yard pass from Joe Germaine to Dee Miller. That made it 14-6, and the ninth-ranked Buckeyes cruised to a 49-6 victory.

Tim Pidgeon/Associated Press

Michigan running back Chris Howard goes over the top of Michigan State's defensive line during the fourth quarter for a touchdown.

"When they scored right before the half, it took the wind out of us," Northwestern coach Gary Barnett said.

The victory kept Ohio State (7-1, 3-1 Big Ten) in the running for the conference title and Rose Bowl bid. The defeat eliminated Northwestern (3-6, 1-4) from postseason contention after two straight years in bowls.

His offense gained 501 yards and scored five touchdowns, but Purdue coach Joe Tiller was more impressed with his team's defense.

"Wow. What a job on turnovers," Tiller said. "I think the defense just did a very good job. They were heads up and were very opportunistic."

Illinois (0-7, 0-3) has lost 13 in a row, the second-longest streak in school history.

Ron Dayne's 1-yard touchdown with 7:40 remaining at Minnesota (2-6, 0-4) accounted for the winning points two plays after a questionable 28-yard catch by Donald Hayes.

Marijuana use high in NBA

NEW YORK (AP) — Marijuana smoking and heavy drinking are rampant in the NBA, involving 60 percent to 70 percent of the players, The New York Times reported Sunday.

The estimate is based on statements made to the newspaper by players, former players, agents and basketball executives in more than two dozen interviews. One agent said the figure may actually be higher.

"No one can really know, but it wouldn't surprise me if it's 70 percent," Dallas guard Robert Pack said.

Marijuana is not covered by the league's substance abuse policy, which has been in effect without major modifications since 1984.

Commissioner David Stern has said recently he would like to have a drug policy that includes marijuana.

"That substance can impair people and cause them to be guilty of criminal conduct. We don't want that," Stern said in a recent interview. "I think it's incumbent upon us to make a statement about it."

The players' union has resisted a marijuana policy, saying all its members shouldn't come under increased scrutiny because of the transgressions of a few players.

Allen Iverson, Isaiah Rider and Marcus Camby were involved in marijuana-related cases over the summer. Mookie Blaylock, was arrested in Canada last season.

"Marijuana is not tested for, and yet that is the big thing guys are getting in trouble with in the league. It's terrible," Utah Jazz star Karl Malone told the Times.

Kincaid returns to UI to read from memoir

■ Now officially a "serious draw," Caribbean author Jamaica Kincaid is scheduled to read once again at the UI.

By Ben Schnoor
The Daily Iowan

Jamaica Kincaid was born in St. John's, Antigua, in the West Indies, but people will have to brave through the cold to hear the internationally acclaimed writer read from her work tonight.

"It's sort of ironic to be going through the snow to see a Caribbean writer," said Paul Ingram, buyer for Prairie Lights Books, 15 S. Dubuque St. "It will be interesting to see if people want to come out in the snow to see her, but I think they will."

Kincaid is scheduled to read from her most recent book, "My Brother," tonight at 8 in Buchanan Auditorium of Pappajohn Business Administration Building. The reading, sponsored by Prairie Lights, will be free and open to the public. For those who don't want to face the weather, there will also be a live radio broadcast of the reading on WSUI, AM 910.

Kincaid read on the UI campus last year, and Ingram said the success of the reading led to her return this year.

"We had her here last year for 'The Autobiography of My Mother' and she read at Shambaugh Auditorium," Ingram said. "The reason we're having it at an even larger auditorium now is we were overflowing at Shambaugh. She's a serious draw."

Kincaid has earned a place as one of America's leading literary voices through her highly poetic and powerful writing style, which permeates her novels, short stories and non-fiction work.

"She writes a very strong prose style," Ingram said. "She's very connected to her writing and she's very interested in her West Indian past. There aren't that many strong West Indian writers known in this country, and she's broken that open. Lately she's been doing more and more non-fiction and writing about her family."

"My Brother" is a non-fiction memoir about her brother, a Rastafarian who died after a battle with AIDS.

"She gave a very moving reading (from 'The Autobiography of My Mother') before, and I think this is even a better book," Ingram said.

Jamaica Kincaid's newest book is "My Brother."

Greg Kirschling MOVIE REVIEW

"A Life Less Ordinary": ★★ out of ★★

Starring: Ewan McGregor, Cameron Diaz, Holly Hunter, Delroy Lindo and Ian Holm

Written by: John Hodge
Directed by: Danny Boyle

Now playing: Coral IV Theatres, Coralville
Showtimes: nightly at 7 and 9:40

Hip stars, style ensure 'Life' isn't ordinary

Charming as it sometimes is, "A Life Less Ordinary" proves conclusively that its makers never went to middle school.

The guys behind the camera here are the same guys who made "Trainspotting" and "Shallow Grave" — cool stuff, even though the movie misdirections are a little flabby. Director Danny Boyle and screenwriter John Hodge build their ugliest beergut this time, all in their efforts to try and make screwball comedy more delectable to the Gen X trainspotters out there.

The story gets off to a visually distinctive start, which is no surprise, considering that the most visually distinctive movie sequence last year was the toilet bowl dive in "Trainspotting." But, once the story kicks in, the stylish bang turns to a mid-movie whimper.

As the story crawls to its halfway mark, a rich heiress named Celine (Cameron Diaz, "My Best Friend's Wedding") has already aided and abetted her own kidnapping. A lowly janitor and fledgling pulp novelist named Robert (Ewan McGregor, a future "Star Wars" star) is disgruntled when his janitorial duties are taken over by a robot, so he almost unwittingly snatches Celine, the boss' daughter, and heads for the hills.

In true screwball style, she's really the one in charge, and watching the gender reversals provides for some laughs. In the most successful example, she chops wood outside their abandoned cabin hideout while timid, mop-topped Robert reads a drippy romance novel called "Perfect Love."

Things, however, are confused considerably by the presence of two heaven-sent angels, O'Reilly and Jackson (a bizarre Holly Hunter and a placid Delroy Lindo), whose mission it is to "unite man and woman, blah blah blah." As the angels try to bring them together through "jeopardy," a lot of the movie is "blah."

Mainly what's missing in the middle is cohesion; scenes don't always connect, so the story feels spotty, disjointed and messy. This must be the only romantic comedy with a glib, throwaway close-up of a spurting leg wound.

Still, "Life" passes muster, although it's never as vital as Boyle's previous efforts. Even when they don't make much sense, some of the big set pieces are successful as wacky black comedy. It's almost worth it alone to see Holly Hunter go flying off a cliff clinging to the hood of a car.

The stars are hip, too. McGregor's a fine comedian, blessed with the funniest foreigner brogue since Monty Python. Diaz pumps considerable spit and shine into Celine, who's sort of seen as a feminist Eve, one who literally blows up apples instead of eating them.

Put together, their chemistry isn't consistent, but they share one smashing out-of-nowhere barroom song and dance, set to Bobby Darin's "Beyond the Sea." Undoubtedly, their hoofing lends the movie a Tarantino/Brady Bunch feel it doesn't need, but it does work. Together, McGregor and Diaz move with a synergy and a synchronicity not seen since old movie musicals. It's welcome, and if only for one sequence, "Ordinary" approaches the extraordinary.
