Doctors did not discriminate
Three UIHC doctors did not discriminate by firing Dr. Jon Kerstetter, a Johnson County district-judge ruled.

By Steven Cook

District Court Judge Williams said the three doctors had not been discriminatory.

Kerstetter, 46, of Iowa City, sued UIHC and two other doctors alleging he was fired in retaliation for opposing cuts to the hospitalís neurological program in 1990 because he is in favor of the concept of counseling trauma of contract. The three doctors were Dr. John Y. Y. Sato, Renato A. Smith, and Ross Perot.

Kerstetter said they were never told that why he had been fired, and that they had been told that he had been hired because of his race.

The three doctors were not available for comment.

● City officials say they can vote in November to give the Ped Mall fountain a chance. The city has not yet decided completely redesign it.

The Daily Iowan

The Iowa City Council is scheduled to discuss the proposed $11.7 million Ped Mall fountain renovation project on Monday.

"We don't know about the fountain," said Tom Toomey, "but I'm sure it will be in place," said Toomey, who has been involved with the project since its inception.

Toomey said the fountain, which is to be located on the north side of the Iowa City Council, is scheduled to be completed by the end of the year.

"We're not sure how the fountain will look or how it will be used," Toomey said. "But I'm sure it will be in place by the end of the year."
The McCaugheys, well-known for their claim to have the world's first quintuplets, were subjected to media scrutiny and public scrutiny alike. They lived in a small Iowa town, and their privacy was often invaded, especially after they refused to sell the story of their children for monetary gain. The family lived in a small house on the outskirts of town, and their children were often seen playing with local children. The family was well-respected in the community, and it was common for them to be seen at local events and gatherings.

Several months after the birth of the quintuplets, the family was featured on national television. The parents were interviewed about their experiences, and their story was covered extensively in the media. The family was photographed repeatedly, and their daily life was documented in great detail. The public was fascinated by the story, and the family received a great deal of attention.

Despite the attention, the family remained private. They lived a simple life, and their daily routine involved caring for their children and running their farm. They were rarely seen without their children, and they were often photographed playing with local children. The family was well-liked in the community, and they were often seen at local events and gatherings.

Kenyan woman defies tradition

By George Mwangi

The president of Kenya, Daniel arap Moi, who has been in power for 27 years, has been accused of failing to bring to justice the rapists who tormented his wife. Moi, who is 80 years old, said that the rapists had been released by the police. Moi said that he was willing to give up his power to his son, who is the current vice president of the country.

The president's statement came during a press conference held at the State House in Nairobi. Moi said that he had been under pressure from the people to step down, but he was not willing to do so. He said that he would continue to serve until the end of his term in 2002.

Meanwhile, the opposition leader, Mwai Kibaki, said that he was ready to take over the presidency should Moi step down. Kibaki said that he had been working with Moi for many years and that he knew him well.

The president's statement came as the country was facing a political crisis. The opposition leaders have been calling for Moi to step down, but the government has been resisting. The country has been facing a drought, which has caused food shortages and forced many people to move to other countries in search of work.

President Moi also said that he would not hand over power to his son, who is the current vice president of the country. He said that he would continue to serve until the end of his term in 2002.

What would be your ultimate Halloween costume?

Jade Robertson: I would have to go with a zombie, because I'd really like to spend the day meandering through a darkened, spooky, haunted house or cemetery. I love being frightened and scared. Now, I don't play any of those stupid haunted house games in class, nor do I watch horror movies, but I love being scared. If that's what it takes to be me, then I'll go that route.

Jen Jansen: I'd have to go with a witch. I just love being mysterious and I'm always drawing things of a magical sort, so this is something that would definitely fit right in with myself.

Sharon Baker: I would have to go with a vampire. I love being mysterious and I get to stick my tongue out and act all sexy.

Steve Bridges: A little bit of a witch and a little bit of a Vampira. It's a full moon tonight, so that's the perfect outfit for the day!

One lesson we all should understand
The semester before I started college, my boyfriend and I were both on the high school debate team. I saw "Woods" on the envelope's return address and, despite all my past thoughts, pro-proposal graduation cards, meatball sandwiches, and late-night phone calls, I decided to write a letter to the editor.

The letter I wrote was special, because it was a letter written to my future self. It was a letter written to someone who never existed at the time because I had not yet graduated high school, let alone gone to college. I had not yet met my boyfriend, and college was a distant, abstract idea.

Of course, it could be argued that a letter is no more special than a card or a phone call. However, I believe that a letter is more special because it is a personal note, written by one person for another, and not just a piece of paper.

The letter I wrote was special because it was a letter written to my future self. It was a letter written to someone who never existed at the time because I had not yet graduated high school, let alone gone to college. I had not yet met my boyfriend, and college was a distant, abstract idea.

One lesson we all should understand is that we should all write a letter to our future selves. It is a way to express our thoughts and feelings, and it is a way to remember who we were and what we were thinking.

Au pair found guilty of baby's murder

A British au pair was convicted in a baby's death.

By Leslie Miller

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. — A case that sparked a national debate over au pairs, or foreign women who work as teachers and babysitters, ended with a guilty verdict today in the murder of a 10-month-old baby in Massachusetts.

The three-week trial ended with the conviction of Cui Shen, 30, who was arrested in June 1998, shortly after the baby died. The baby's parents, a Chinese couple, had hired Cui to care for their baby, who was born in the United States.

The trial was a high-profile case that drew attention to the issue of au pairs and their role in American society. The decision to prosecute the case was controversial, with some arguing that it was an example of racial profiling.

The trial lasted three weeks and was characterized by intense public interest.

The court ruled that Cui was guilty of first-degree murder and sentenced her to life in prison without the possibility of parole.

The case has generated much discussion about the role of au pairs in American society and the legal framework surrounding their work.

The verdict was a significant victory for those who have advocated for better protections for au pairs and their employers.

The case has also highlighted the need for greater resources and support for investigations and legal proceedings involving foreign workers.

The trial was a landmark case that raised important questions about the role of foreign workers in American society and the need for greater legal protections for those who work in non-traditional roles.

The case has had a significant impact on the debate surrounding au pairs and the legal framework governing their work.
A whole new Purdue

By James Krater
The Daily Iowan

Flash back 18 years, if you will. Harlon Ivey's third season as Iowa's head coach. The impossible dream came true - the Hawkeyes had a winning football team. They won the Big Ten title and played in the Rose Bowl.

The base of the Iowa offense in the fall of 1981 was probably quite similar to that of the Purdue Boilermakers this fall. Probit Iowa to the first winning season since 1959, and it is to be expected.

First-year coach Jerry Tiller, a former Purdue assistant, knows exactly what the Boilermakers are working on this fall.

That is when Tiller first won the Rose Bowl.

"I've been around this place a long time," he said. "We've got an air of confidence."

Mike Kracker, who played for Purdue's 1981 Rose Bowl team, said his team had a little more success in the fall of 1981 than the Boilermakers do now.

"I don't think we've ever had the kind of talent that they do," Kracker said. "We've always played hard, but we didn't have the kind of talent they've got.

"We had a great team that year, but we didn't have the kind of talent that they do now. They've got a lot of talent, and they've got a lot of confidence."

Reinventing the classic

Rogers and Hammerstein's "Cinderella" is brought into the '90s in a new ABC telefilm.

By Lynn Elber
Associated Press

ABC's ambitious live telecast of Rodgers and Hammerstein's classic "Cinderella" (Sunday) is a single show in the '90s on ABC's "Wonderful World of Dance." The original 1957 TV program was a Sunday afternoon special with an all-star cast and only a few exterior doors and into Chinese custody in China in a hotel room and Moore is found murdered, the help of a woman (played by: Jon Avnet; Written by: Robert King in China in a hotel room and Moore is found murdered, the help of a woman (played by: Jon Avnet; Written by: Robert King)

This is indicative of the single-mindedness that clamps our ability to trust this film as either entertain- ing or intellectually satisfying. There are several intriguing moments in "Red Corner." The first, and best, is when Yuelin proposes that Jack may have actually committed the murder, that he is being framed, a position he makes clear in the trial and as the case progresses. The second is when Yuelin suggests that Jack is being framed, and that this is the truth. The third is when Yuelin suggests that Jack is being framed, and that this is the truth. The fourth is when Yuelin suggests that Jack is being framed, and that this is the truth.

Unfortunately, they are often hampered by the constraints of the plot. There are several intriguing moments in "Red Corner." "Cinderella" - from those who are well-informed of the Chinese-American relations to those who are absolutely ignorant of it. They are brought together in a new judicial system in China, and if "Red Corner" has any chance of being a success, it will be because it makes the point that Yuelin, the Chinese lawyer, and Jack, the American lawyer, are wrong.

On the surface, this is supposed to be entertaining. But if it is not to be other- wise, then "Red Corner," quite as few as it is, should have been a success. The Chinese court is a place where we see a new legal system in action, as the trial and as the case progresses. The court is a place where we see a new legal system in action, as the trial and as the case progresses. Purdue's fun won't last long

Chris Snider

What have we got here? A Purdue-Big Ten win over Indiana Stadium? It's not on the Horizon. Could it be?

The Big Ten has traditionally been a parade of promotions for the Western Athletic Conference and the Florida schools.

Eight of the ten teams in the Big Ten have at least one victory over an opponent not in the Big Ten this season.

The Boilermakers have a four-game winning streak entering the Big Ten, and the team has something to show for its efforts. Purdue steht in fourth place in the Big Ten,
with a 2-1-1 record.

B ut only Purdue and Illinois have actually thrown the ball as often as they have run. Illinois doesn't do anything different because, well, that's what you do when you're playing against a team.

Purdue, on the other hand, has been better than just that line.

What does that mean? It means Purdue has been better than just that line.

And that's something that's impossible to do in the Big Ten.
But we're doing it.

The question now becomes whether or not Purdue can be better than that line.

The answer is probably yes.

The team is doing something different and they're doing it well.

The Boilermakers have learned a lot from their opponents.

They've learned that they must be better than just that line.

And they're doing it.

Hoosiers will clinch Big Ten title, stem Northwestern

The Big Ten’s championship, coveted by all, is within reach. Purdue, Ohio State and Northwestern all have a chance to claim the crown. But one team stands out as the favorite to win it all – the Hoosiers.

Hoosiers head coach Tom Crean has his team primed for a historic run. They have been on a roll, winning six of their last seven games and have cemented themselves as the top team in the conference.

In their last game against Northwestern, the Hoosiers showed their dominance, winning 86-62. They were led by senior forward Christian Watford, who scored a team-high 20 points and grabbed 10 rebounds.

Crean has been laser-focused on his team’s defense, and it has paid off. The Hoosiers are currently ranked second in the conference in defensive efficiency, allowing only 63.8 points per game.

But the team’s offense has also been on point, averaging 79.1 points per game. Their ability to score and defend has put them in a prime position to clinch the Big Ten title.

The Hoosiers have a few games left to play, including a crucial match against Michigan State. If they can win that, they will have a strong chance of clinching the Big Ten crown.

Of course, there are other teams that can still challenge for the title. But with their talent and experience, the Hoosiers are the team to beat.

As for Northwestern, they have been a pleasant surprise this season. Led by senior guard Dave Sobolewski, they have put up some impressive performances.

But in the end, it’s the Hoosiers who are the team to watch. With their winning streak and strong defense, they are the ones who will likely be hoisting the Big Ten crown this year.
Kerry Cooks fans don’t appear on any Iowa promotional posters and he isn’t the most frequently requested Hawkeye.

It’s a trait every one of the world to his teammates. In fact, he is the type of player who would go out of his way to make sure everyone is comfortable before he goes about his business with relative anonymity.

He is the perfect example of what it means to be a teammate. He is always the last to arrive and the first to leave. His presence on the team is strong and silent. This season, he has never missed a game or a practice.

Cooks’ career at Iowa almost never got off the ground. At Nimitz High School in Texas, he was a three-sport star, starting all four seasons on the football team.

While Cooks keeps a realm of skepticism about his future, bis teammates are quick to point out his selflessness.

"He’s the type of guy who is always putting others before himself," said Brian Dawkins, the NFL all-pro linebacker. "He’s a great teammate and he always gives his all for his teammates."
"I chose Macintosh" because of its reputation as a reliable computer. It's worth its weight in gold!"

"My Mac has made my life easier. In the social and academic aspects, I use my Mac for everything from writing programs on the computer to balancing my checkbook. I can take my Powerbook wherever and whenever I go. The Mac is like a dose of medicine I take everyday. It's like taking medicine, I would fall without it."

I learned to use a Mac in a very short amount of time. I don't have to do much except turn it on."

Fry tries to silence Sherman's critics

Head coach Hayden Fry looked out at the media and he wanted to make one thing clear: The Hawkeyes are preparing for the Michigan game, not for the Badgers.

"I know people are talking about the Badgers," Fry said. "But we're just preparing for the Michigan game."

"We're not going to talk about Badgers, we're going to talk about Michigan," Fry said.

Fry said he believes his players are ready for the challenge of playing against the Wolverines.

"I think our players are ready," Fry said. "They've been preparing for this game all week."
Dwight might see more time in Iowa backfield

By ANDY HAMILTON

The Daily Iowan

Dwight has had the type of season most Iowa players would envy. He's had the opportunity to practice with the Hokies look at his new four-man defense, and has seen a little bit of everything that a running back can see and do.

Dwight's not a stranger to the situation in Iowa City. He played in all 11 games last season as a redshirt freshman. He started in both bowl games and had the opportunity to meet the rest of his family in the hotel.

"It's nice to know that I'm not the only one from Iowa in the hotel," Dwight said. "It's nice to know that I'm not the only one from Iowa in the hotel."
The 411 on Purdue's passing attack

Purdue quarterback Joe Tiller brought his game to the Big Ten the way most quarterbacks bring their game to the Big Ten, but it was actually John Elway's Colorado team that stole the spotlight in the Big Ten's only game this weekend. Purdue's 38-3 halftime lead over Illinois was as much as the Boilermakers could expect against a team that has won seven straight games and twelve of its last thirteen. Purdue is 6-4 overall and 2-2 in the conference, while Illinois is 8-2 overall and 4-0 in the conference.

Joe Tiller is one of the Big Ten's best quarterbacks, completing 62.9% of his passes for 2,070 yards and 21 touchdowns. Purdue averaged 33.6 yards per game rushing and 297.4 yards passing over its last six games. The Boilermakers have won four of their last five games.

Purdue's offensive line led by tackle Andrew Tingle has been one of the best in the conference, allowing just 11 sacks in 10 games. Purdue has also struggled with turnovers, having lost 13 fumbles and thrown 11 interceptions.

Fry's life to become an open book

By Scott Literature

The Iowa Daily

ome to be a hot seller all summer--Iowa--Hayden Fry, "Iowa Hawkeye Football Information Book" contains an edition of high interest to the planning and writing, with the reader. This is the story of Fry's life, Fry claims he is as far as he can.

I didn't know anything about it. George Washington, the predecessor, was a man who had been up with me in the venture will also be at the Dan River, he said.

Wise, who has known Fry for the last 15 years, said the book will start from day one and work to the present. "At the time the book is due to start, the book has a potential to be a huge hit in the state of Iowa," Wise said. "The book has a potential to be a huge hit in the state of Iowa," Wise said. "The book has a potential to be a huge hit in the state of Iowa," Wise said.

This book has the potential to be a huge hit in the state of Iowa, but Fry thinks differently. "I don't think anybody even worth fighting for," Wise said.

Although Fry's book doesn't have the potential to be a huge hit in the state of Iowa, Wise thinks differently. "I think it would be a huge hit," Wise said.

"He's a big idea man, huge start-up. I don't think anybody even worth fighting for," Wise said.
