LOCAL BRIEF

Bomb scare evacuates Iowa State Bank

An unusual suitcase sitting next to an elevator at the Iowa State Bank and Trust sparked the alarm of both bank employees and the Iowa City Police Department Monday afternoon.

At around 3:20 p.m. bank security found a locked case with a combination lock that had been sitting next to the main elevator since Monday morning, Dick Summerwill, bank president said.

When none of the bank employees claimed the case, bank security decided to evacuate the building and call the police. The police and the bomb squad arrived minutes later and examined the case.

As the police and the bomb squad were about to open the case, a US Cellular employee came in and asked if anyone had seen his tool case, Summerwill said.

After the man opened the case and presented it to the police, the bomb scare ended and bank employees returned to work.

Summerwill said he was obviously glad it wasn't a real bomb, and he was pleased to see that the disaster-recovery network worked like a charm.

"If it had been a bomb, nobody would have been hurt," he said.

Plus, employees received a half-hour break from work.

Candidates, opponents and proponents will be closely monitoring today's polls to see the fate of the First Avenue extension.

By Laura Heinauer
 The Daily Iowan

The debate over the extension of First Avenue will be resolved today when voters choose whether or not to delay the planned construction.

Following the signatures of more than 3,000 Iowa City residents, the fate of the First Avenue extension was placed on the ballot for today's Iowa City City Council election.

The measure will read: "Shall the following public measure be adopted: Summary: Public Measure to delay the First Avenue Extension. Vote yes to delay. Vote no to no delay."

People from both sides of the controversial issue will be closely watching to see whether the citizen initiative passes. The First Avenue extension was added to Iowa City's comprehensive plan this year at a March council meeting. It was re-introduced by the council from a postponement that would have put the project off until after 2001.

The plans call for an extension of First Avenue north past Hickory Hill Park, then west to connect to Highway 1 via an east-west arterial. This proposal differs from past proposals that would begin far-East Side development with an extension of Scott Boulevard and expand later to First Avenue.

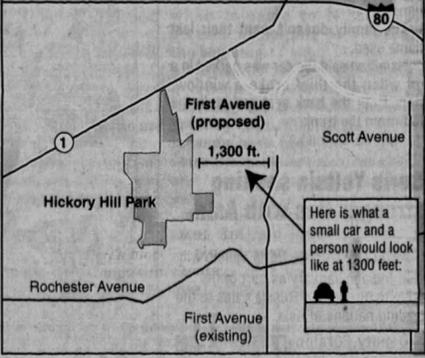

The rationale behind the decision to move up the construction date was initiated because councilors thought it would be more cost-effective to construct the road while the land grades were being set for the water lines in the area.

Instead of setting the grade on the same land twice, the council concluded that constructing the road at the same time would be the most effective way to launch the project.

It's not unusual for the council to reprioritize its plans in these situa-

Two years ago, when UI sophomore Nick Roy dialed onto the Internet using a UI modem, he got a call from UI Public Safety.

Since the modem didn't have an official password, what Roy was doing was against the law, but Roy said he didn't know that until he got the phone

Intrusions in the UI computer systems — whether major or minor — have caused an increase in computer security to prevent hacking incidents, such as the most recent case involving former UI student Rajib Mitra.

Mitra allegedly hacked into the UI system in August from his Brookfield,

Supreme Court lets prop 209 stand

Affirmative action foes win Supreme Court victory on Californian proposition.

By Richard Carelli
 Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Supreme Court Monday let stand California's groundbreaking Proposition 209, a ban on race and gender preference in hiring and school admissions, and affirmative action foes predicted other states now will follow California's lead.

Acting without comment, the nation's highest court rejected a challenge to the California measure by a coalition of civil rights groups.

The measure, an amendment to the state constitution, says the state and local governments cannot "discriminate against or grant preferential treatment to any individual or group on the basis of race, sex, color, ethnicity or national origin."

Lower courts had said the anti-affirmative action measure violated no one's constitutional rights and was a neutral way to promote equality. But its opponents contended the measure relegated racial minorities and women to the status of second-class citizens in California.

The Supreme Court's action was not a decision and set no national precedent. It merely left in place the lower court rulings. But the action could encourage voters in other states to adopt similar measures.

"I hope and believe other states will follow suit," said Clint Bolick of the Institute for Justice. "The court's (action) is a further repudiation of the arguments made by the Clinton administration and its allies."

He said an anti-affirmative action drive is under way in Washington state. In Houston, a ballot initiative to be voted on today would do away with affirmative action in the awarding of city contracts.

Another affirmative action foe,

Metallica settles crowd surfing trial out of court

The civil trial involving three defendants — including Metallica — settled to undisclosed terms Monday morning in Johnson County Court.

By Steven Cook
 The Daily Iowan

Before a jury panel was selected, litigants reached a settlement Monday in the civil trial involving the heavy metal band Metallica.

After less than two hours of jury selection, District Court Judge Patrick Grady announced the settlement shortly after 11 a.m. at the Johnson County Courthouse.

The terms of the settlement were not disclosed, but included Todd Miller's dismissal of his negligence claim against Metallica, Jam Productions Ltd. and the State of Iowa.

"I'm satisfied," plaintiff Miller said about the agreement. "It took a long time to file and a long time to get to court — it's been four-and-a-half years."

No indication was given of the impending settlement shortly before the mid-morning recess. Stephen Greenleaf, one of Miller's attorneys, said the jury selection had been "on schedule." The recess lasted 15 minutes longer than VANCOUVER, British Columbia (AP)—Video of a 16-year-old cancer victim's meeting with David Duchovny on the set of the "X-Files" was stolen from the family's car.

The footage, along with photographs of the meeting, were taken Saturday night during the family's weeklong visit to the set. The visit was arranged by the Make-A-Wish Foundation of British Columbia.

"The record of this young girl's visit is gone, lost through a robbery," said foundation director April Hamilton. "We want to challenge the street people and dumpster divers to try to find this film."

The family doesn't want their last name used.

Hamilton said the car was parked in a lot when the thief broke a window, ripped out the back seat and stole the film from the trunk.

Bobbitt, 30, moved last month from Las Vegas to this small northern Nevada farm town where four of his five brothers live. He said he just wants to find a job and go fishing and camping.

"I want people to get to know me for who I am and not what the media makes me out to be," he said.

"I want to let the past be gone and move on," he said in Friday's Lahontan Valley News and Fallon Eagle Standard. "I did a couple of adult movies but do not want to make a career out of it because my parents didn't want me to."

Bobbitt said he is writing a book about his life. His ex-wife, Lorena, cut off his penis with a knife, accusing him of sexual assault. The penis was reattached and Ms. Bobbitt was found innocent by reason of insanity.

30 witnesses prepare to take the stand

■ Trial for the teens accused in cat slaughter to begin this week.

By Greg Smith
Associated Press

BLOOMFIELD, Iowa — For David Sykes, testifying at the trial of two young men accused of slaughtering 16 cats at his Fairfield animal shelter nearly eight months ago will be like having a wound ripped open.

"I think it will be a challenge for me. It's going to be a lot for me," Sykes said Monday. "This is going to open a lot of old feelings."

Sykes, owner of Noah's Ark, is one of about 30 witnesses prepared to take the stand against Chad Lamansky, 18, of Brighton, and Daniel Myers, also 18, of Fairfield.

Lamansky and Myers are accused of breaking into the animal sanctuary late in the evening of March 7 or the early morning hours of March 8 and swinging baseball bats to kill the cats while injuring scores more.

Their trial, scheduled to begin today with jury selection, is expected to take the rest of the week at the Davis County Courthouse in Bloomfield. District Court Judge Daniel P. Wilson moved the trial out of Fairfield in Jefferson County because of pre-trial publicity.

Lamansky and Myers are each charged with third-degree burglary as well as felony and aggravated offenses related to the break-in and attack. They each face more than 10 years in prison and fines of $15,000 if convicted.

Along with Sykes, another key witness for Jefferson County Atty. John Morrissey will be Justin Toben, 18, of Fairfield.

Toben has agreed to testify against Lamansky and Myers in exchange for the dismissal of felony and misdemeanor charges.

Toben has been sentenced to three years' probation and ordered to complete 200 hours of community service as well as paying restitution.

Attorney Steven Gardner, who represents Myers, and Kirk Daily, who represents Lamansky, have refused to comment about the trial or their strategies.

Last month, Wilson ruled that a photograph of a bumper sticker that had been affixed to Lamansky's truck will not be allowed as evidence. The bumper sticker read: "Missing your cat? Look under my tires."

Although the photograph of the bumper sticker won't be allowed, Wilson said he would allow evidence the men allegedly killed a cat belonging to Lamansky's mother, skinned it and then showed the remains to friends sometime prior to the attack at Noah's Ark.

The judge, however, said he was excluding testimony involving prior acts by Lamansky "indicating some problems with animals."

Nichols bomb trial begins

■ The Nichols jury has been seated and readied for the attorneys' first salvos.

By Steven K. Paulson
Associated Press

DENVER — Terry Nichols was "at a very safe distance" when a bomb exploded at the Oklahoma City federal building, but he is just as guilty as Timothy McVeigh, a prosecutor said in opening statements at Nichols' trial Monday.

"This is a case about two men who conspired to murder innocent people," prosecutor Larry Mackey said. "Their plan succeeded. The bomb went off and people died."

Nichols and McVeigh planned the deadliest act of terrorism on U.S. soil, a bombing that killed 168 men, women and children, because of their shared hatred of the government, Mackey said.

On April 19, 1995, Nichols was at his Kansas home, "at a very safe distance from a truck bomb that exploded in downtown Oklahoma City in front of the federal building," Mackey said. "And Terry Nichols had planned it just that way."

There were no long lines outside the federal courthouse today as there were for the trial that got McVeigh the death penalty. About three dozen bombing survivors and victims' relatives showed up, and they were quickly allowed inside because of temperatures in the low 30s.

There also was a smaller crowd at the site of the closed-circuit courtroom telecast in Oklahoma City, with about 50 survivors and relatives on hand awaiting opening statements Monday morning.

During jury selection, scores of potential jurors said they were familiar with images of the bombing, from smoking wreckage to wailing children, and with McVeigh, 29, convicted five months ago and sentenced to die.

But they seemed less informed when it came to Nichols, 42, accused of helping McVeigh plot the bombing.

Nichols is accused of robbing a gun dealer to raise money for the bombing, helping McVeigh stow a getaway car in Oklahoma City and helping assemble the bomb. He faces the same murder, conspiracy and weapons charges for which a jury convicted McVeigh.

Attorneys were expected to paint much different pictures of Nichols — from a brooding former soldier unhappy with the federal government to an independent adventurer and devoted family man.

"I'm satisfied. It took a long time to file and a long time to get to court — it's been four-and-a-half years."

Todd Miller, plaintiff in a trial against Metallica. The trial was settled Monday.

Is there a 12-step program for bank cards?

My name is Byron, and I have a problem with an addiction.

The street name of my habit — not choice — is called the ATM. I know that the first step toward my recovery is to admit that I have a problem, and I do. But I just can't help myself. I love the ease and convenience of ATMs.

Even when I try to quit, I can't. I love the feeling of empowerment that comes from carrying that little plastic card in my wallet, of being the only one to know my secret PIN, by being able to access my money from anywhere in the world. (Well, almost anywhere.)

Only a crazy person, a person who has never experienced the joy of having crisp twenties pop out of an ATM, has fond memories of the not-so-good old days of passbook savings accounts. The big drawback to the passbook era was that you basically could go only to your bank or one of its branches to get some cash from your account.

Byron R. Brown

But with ATMs, you can travel to any of a dozen street corners to get your cash fix. And some of the more enterprising dealers have installed ATMs in the drive-up lanes. Even the Sports Column bar downtown has an ATM inside its doorway. Part of the reason that there are so many ATMs — about 140,000 nationwide last year and possibly as many as 220,000 by 2000 — is because the people who own the places where they're located get as much as 50 percent of the transaction fee charged to use the ATM.

Not that I'm complaining. I don't begrudge someone the chance to make a buck off me. And when I'm strapped for cash, I'm not going to let a little old fee stand in the way of me reaching ATM bliss. I sometimes feel like I have no choice but to use ATMs, that's how bad I am. I try to pay cash for things as much as possible. I hate balancing my check book, so I don't. And I know how easy it is to get in trouble with credit cards, so I use mine sparingly. ATMs are a godsend. I always know how much money I have in my account, and it's never more than a few button pushes away. I use ATMs so often that I could get money out of my checking account while blindfolded. I am not proud of that, though.

I received my first ATM card when I was a college freshman in Colorado. It was for my account there and not in New Hampshire, my home state, so every time I ran out of money, I would wire some more from my account in New Hampshire to the one in Colorado. Why I didn't just get an ATM card for my New Hampshire account and save all the hassle of having to wire money, I have no idea. My only excuse is that I was naive in the ways and power of ATM card use.

Those days are long gone. Or so I thought. Instead of loading up on traveler's checks when I studied and trekked through Europe last summer, I would use my ATM card when I needed money. Traveling without a lot of money would be safer, I thought, and I would not have to wait in lines to get my checks cashed and changed to the local currency. But I had a bad ATM trip during a foray to Portugal, and I almost swore off ATMs.

With only $10 worth of Spanish currency in my pocket, I took an overnight train from northern Spain to Lisbon thinking that I would get money from a Portuguese ATM in the morning. Although my card worked fine in Spain and everywhere else, it refused to cooperate in Lisbon. It was a Friday, the weekend was approaching and I needed some Portuguese money fast.

After unsuccessful trips to a dozen or so bank ATMs in Lisbon and tired from hauling my backpack and from fending off hash dealers for most of the day, I gave up on trying to stay in Lisbon, and resolved to head back to Spain. (I now believe that my card didn't work because Portuguese ATMs require a six-digit PIN, and mine is only four.) But I didn't have any local money to pay for a train reservation, let alone buy some water or a snack. After hours of frustration and anxiety, I finally convinced the person taking reservations to let me pay for a seat with what little Spanish money I had.

I spent the rest of the trip hoarding cash when I found an ATM that worked and purchasing traveler's checks at American Express offices. The usual feeling of joy and wonder from a stop at the ATM had been replaced by dread and paranoia.

Now that I've been back in Iowa City for several months, I find that old habits are hard to break. I still pay with cash instead of with checks or credit. I know I should be better at managing my money and not rely so much on ATMs. But before I know what I've done, I've punched in my PIN and withdrawn another $25.

I know I need help, and I am trying to take it one day at a time. The problem is, I seem to need to go to the bank every day, too.

Keeping affirmative action alive

On Nov. 3, the Supreme Court ruled to uphold California's Proposition 209. The ballot initiative that annulled race and gender as factors in hiring and school admissions has been winding its way through the courts since its inception two years ago. The legislation effectively reversed all of the progress realized under affirmative action.

Affirmative action has not been perfect, nor has it been a trainwreck. In this country being white and male is undeniably advantageous. Access to opportunity gives young white men a leg up on every other person, even today. The fact that white males are more likely to finish high school and enroll in college than their minority counterparts is symptomatic of the problem that affirmative action was supposed to address.

The question begs: Would Bill Gates have achieved what he has if he were a woman and a member of a minority? Probably not. It is not because minorities are incapable; it is due to the odds often being stacked against them from the beginning.

The purpose of affirmative action is to even the playing field. It does not set standards for minorities in the workplace or school, it merely allows for them to be on the field. Once they have made it there, it is their responsibility to either fail or flourish.

One of the most troubling myths about affirmative action is that it is intended to counteract the discrimination of the past, not the present; it thus requires today's white men to pay for discrimination which they did not cause and from which they did not benefit. White males groan as they believe they are being punished for things that happened more than 150 years ago in South Carolina and Georgia (sadly some people have as little historical knowledge as they do awareness of the present).

The effects of Proposition 209 are already being felt in California. Boalt Hall, the University of California at Berkeley's Law School, accepted 792 students this year. Of those accepted applicants only 14 were black. UCLA's law school has seen its number of accepted black students drop 80 percent from 104 to 21 this year.

In a national study of law schools, University of North Carolina professor Linda Wightman determined that of the 3,435 black applicants accepted to at least one law school in 1990-1991, only 20 percent would have been admitted had grade-point averages and LSAT scores been the sole criteria. Now, for the rest of the story: Black students showed no significant differences from other students in graduating from law school or passing the bar. Obviously those admitted were able to handle the tremendous workload that is a modern legal education. As stated above, it is the opportunity that counts.

It does not take a keen eye to see the discrimination evident every day in our country and even in our fair city. The University of Iowa does much to promote diversity and so does the City Council; the fault does not lie with them. The fault lies with the unenlightened who prefer the days of their fathers when gender and race were naturally assumed to be a liability.

If more states and municipalities jump on the anti-affirmative action bandwagon, as Houston, Texas is considering doing, our state may be next. Proposition 209 is a colossal mistake and we had better hope that Iowans are more sensible than California's Governor Wilson and the California Board of Regents.

Was the crash a good thing?

Ever heard the saying that there is a silver lining to every gray cloud? Federal Reserve Chair Allen Greenspan must have. Last week, he assured everyone that the sudden drop in the stock market will actually be good for the future economic state of the country. Isn't it a bit too early to start making conclusions like this?

On Oct. 27, the stock market took a sudden downturn — to phrase it mildly. The Dow Jones Industrial Average plunged 554 points, the largest point drop in history. This drop even surpassed the infamous Black Monday crash of 1987. The drop was then followed by a 337 point increase on Tuesday, or as some are now calling it "Turbo Tuesday." This was the greatest rebound in history, eclipsing the recovery from the Great Crash of 1929.

The market was shut down twice on the 27th, once when the average dropped 350 points, and then again when the total loss for the day had reached 550 points. This was the first shutdown of the market since the attempt on Ronald Reagan's life in 1981. The totals from Monday's loss may be deceiving. A comparison of percentages shows that the drop was actually a fraction of the Black Monday crash. The stock market is still up 19 percent from the beginning of the year and this crash only ranked 12th in percentage of losses for all time.

Even with Greenspan's belief that this will be good for the economic state of the country, one must be wary of being overly optimistic. The market is still rather unstable and continues to fluctuate.

While most investors have remained calm, they must remain prudent in their decisions in the coming months. They need to take in the market with a wary eye rather than smiling gleefully and dumbly following the leaders of our country.

So while we all hope that Greenspan is right, watch out: That silver lining could just be covering up a full-blown storm front. For a little while at least, take your umbrella with you when you go out into the wild world of investments.

It is a necessity to take a conservative attitude while dealing with the market for a while. Not that Greenspan doesn't know what he is talking about, but he is still a politician and politicians are known for making overly optimistic predictions. He is simply attempting to keep the public calm, in order to ensure that there is not a sudden pull-out of investors.

While most investors have remained calm, they must remain prudent in their decisions in the coming months. They need to take in the market with a wary eye rather than smiling gleefully and dumbly following the leaders of our country.

So while we all hope that Greenspan is right, watch out: That silver lining could just be covering up a full-blown storm front. For a little while at least, take your umbrella with you when you go out into the wild world of investments.

My galaxy could beat up your galaxy

Imagine this: you are driving in your car, making a left turn at the signal. Then some jerk comes shoots through the red light and rams into you. For the fun of it, let's assume he was driving a car and not just running on foot into the intersection.

Okay, now imagine that those cars are going 12 billion miles per hour and are 150 trillion miles long. Now before you go asking me where to buy one, just let me say that I'm pretty sure they aren't in production yet. Ford came close in the late seventies, the Ford Glutton, I believe, but the fuel crisis made sure that model never hit the assembly line.

Sane people would have to agree that being hit by another car traveling near the speed of light would be a pretty scary accident. Impossible, sure, but scary nonetheless. And what's worse, that accident doesn't even begin to approach the magnitude of what happened last week.

No, I'm not referring to Audra "Mrs. Roper" Lindley's death, or even Marv Albert's proposed NBC sitcom. I'm speaking of those two galaxies that smacked into each other right in front of the Hubble Telescope. 63 million light years (or, in layperson terms, "really damned far away") from Earth, these two Antennae Galaxies — named after Ralph Antennae, pioneer of alien costuming in early '50s science fiction movies — collided with each other and didn't even exchange insurance information.

Well, if you want to get technical, it didn't happen last week, per se. We only got to see it then. See, light takes time to pass through space. This is why deer freeze up in your headlights. The light hasn't reached them yet and they are just standing there, thinking random deer thoughts like "I wonder if I should have grass for dinner again," oblivious to your car. They finally see the light — which actually came from your headlights a minute ago — far too late, and you're left wiping deer guts off of your bumper.

So you can imagine how much longer it takes light to reach scientists here on Earth. (Scientists spend a lot of time staring at light and lights, which, strangely enough, is precisely what your mother was always telling you not to do. This is probably why so many of them — scientists, that is, not mothers — wear glasses.) By the time these events have reached Earth, the galaxies have already woken up, seen the other galaxy lying next to it and realized what they had done last millennium. As a matter of fact, by now, the one galaxy has probably put on its clothes and snuck out the door while the other galaxy pretended to sleep.

And don't even think that this can't happen to us. Scientists estimate that a full third of all galaxies are currently colliding with other galaxies, like blindfolded penguins on a Slip-N-Slide. Don't go thinking that our own wholesome Milky Way is above this adolescent tomfoolery, either. Even right now, as we speak, the Milky Way is performing the galaxial equivalent of a hostile merger on the Sagittarius dwarf galaxy. Yes, our galaxy is picking on dwarves.

Or so scientists tell us. And who are we to refute them? After all, they go to school for years longer than the rest of us, spending their nights in libraries instead of at bars or parties talking to non-scientists of the opposite sex, like the rest of us. So maybe they're all bitter, and this crap they pass off on us ("Um... light is a wave. No... a particle. Yeah... And it moves at... 186,000 miles per second. Yeah, that's it. That's the ticket!") as some sort of elaborate revenge for years of social isolation.

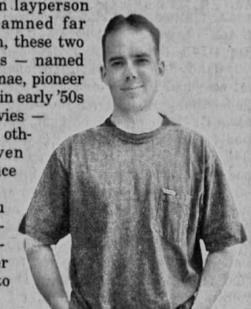

It's especially hard to trust these scientists when all the evidence they point to looks like someone sneezed on a slide, an out-of-focus sneeze at that. One fact that has confused me for ages is that "the universe is infinite" thing. Okay, I can accept that, but then they foist that "the universe is expanding, too" thing on us as well.

Okay... Infinite. And expanding. Expanding into what? Go ahead, ask a scientist about this sometime. Chances are, they will start sweating and murmur something about relativity, another one of those things that makes no sense, and is presumably another big scientific practical joke that they laugh about at scientist parties.

So what does this bad galaxial dance mean to you and I? Essentially this: WE ARE ALL GOING TO DIE. If galaxies are allowed to wantonly go around and smack into each other like this, it could mean certain death for us all. And we, out on the outer edge of the spiral arms of the Milky Way are especially in danger. Congress needs to pass a law, or at least appoint a special prosecutor to the matter. Now isn't the death of billions of stars more important than some stupid land deal?

Until they do, though, please drive safely, and watch for passing galaxies.

Patrick Keller's column appears Tuesdays on the Viewpoints Pages.

Defending Kramer's right to criticize

Iowa is quite a state. It's like no other. We have miles of majestic corn stretching to the horizon (and hog farms smelling to said horizon). We've got the famous State Fair and the Field of Dreams. Of course, we're too damn small to attract professional sports teams, but we make up for that shortcoming with something better.

I speak, of course, of Hawkeye football. If you're reading this, chances are you're a die-hard Hawk fan. Most of our readers have been Hawks since birth, and I'm no exception. When I think of Hawkeye football, I can't help but think, "Is this heaven?"

But lately, my dealings with Hawkeye football have been pretty hellish. If you just tuned in, there has been much controversy surrounding Daily Iowan sports writer James Kramer and Hawkeye quarterback Matt Sherman. Following the Iowa-Michigan game, Kramer wrote a column on Sherman's lackluster performance.

The response to this article has been amazing. If the public responded to "hard" news events the way it has to this sports event, I wouldn't get any sleep. Don't get the wrong idea, not everybody thinks Kramer is wrong. What Kramer wrote was an analysis and opinion of Sherman's abilities, and a fair amount of the response to his column agreed with his statements (and his right to make them).

But the response from the much-heralded Hawkeye football team and Coach Hayden Fry has been unilaterally against Kramer. The first outcry was from team icon Tim Dwight. Dwight came into the DI newsroom and requested the chance to write a response to Kramer's, which he did. Later, in a press conference, Fry and Sherman made their first public remarks regarding Kramer's column. All of this sparked a lot of press, including columns and stories in papers all over Iowa (the DI included).

I applaud these responses for their support of Hawkeye football. I regret their susceptibility to public criticism. In his response, Dwight said, "Matt is one person who deserves credit, not criticism. No one deserves what was said about him."

Fry had similar comments, saying the criticism was "ruining a kid's whole life — his personality and everything else." Finally, Sherman himself said, "It questioned my integrity and what I believed in. No one has that right."

Right? Wrong.

First off, let me say that I support James Kramer 100 percent, just as Hayden Fry would support one of his players. In fact, I agree with a great deal of what his column said. But I also support Kramer not because I am his editor, but because he has a constitutional right to express his opinions. Even if I didn't agree with him, Kramer has the right to observe and report, and, what's more, he has the right to say what he thinks about Sherman's game. That is the foundation upon which newspapers and the press are built.

Dwight and Fry's comments allude to the huge negative impact the press has on Sherman, and they've indicated that we journalist types should refrain from something that might "contaminate a hell of a lot of people."

I'd like to point out that Sherman is a well-known public figure (as are Dwight and Fry), and the public and press will scrutinize their every action. Sherman and his teammates and coaches should understand this, and develop some pretty thick skins as a result. Sherman placed himself into this position — if he wishes to lead the Iowa Hawkeyes at Kinnick and elsewhere, he should expect to receive some criticism.

I have a very difficult time finding any semblance of an attack on Sherman's character in Kramer's column. Additionally, much has been said to the effect that Sherman is a wonderful person, but this is irrelevant to his performance in the Michigan game. I'm sure Sherman is a great guy, but being a wonderful person does not a Big 10 quarterback make.

So to all those on the Hawkeye football team, please understand that criticism is at the core of journalism — and athletics for that matter. Criticism is part of what makes us all better at what we do. Kramer continues to write great articles, and I hear he's a hell of a Hawk fan, as crazy as that may sound right now.

Go Hawks.

Maurer fair on economics

To the Editor:

As a worker in our community, I have studied with special care the City Council candidates' positions on economic development and the sales tax issue and especially on how they feel about listening to people like me when decisions are made. I have concluded that there is only one candidate who represents the interests of those whose income is derived from wages: Derek Maurer.

As a member of the city's economic development task force, he understands that development interests require a careful balancing of all community needs — not just those of business, and he would actually give workers a voice in shaping the future of our city's growth. Derek also clearly recognizes that any tax on what we buy, as opposed to what we earn, hurts wage earners, especially those in lower income brackets. In the last year, City Council's performance has sacrificed the respect of me and many folks like me. I'm convinced that Derek's prescriptions for a cure is correct: broad citizen participation and a City Council that listens.

Maurer is not your usual candidate

To the Editor:

Over the last few years, a series of events have led me inescapably to the idea that we can no longer afford "business as usual" carried out by a preponderance of business owners on our City Council. Oddly, our council, dominated by small downtown business interests, has not been able to come up with any creative ideas to preserve and develop the vital center of our community. While small cities around the country are coming up with interesting planning ideas, our city center stagnates. We need new voices willing to grapple with the whole idea of development — whether it is inevitable and how to manage it so as to protect the unique character of the city we love. Particularly, I believe, we need someone willing to exert more control over the city staff. Of the challengers in this election, Derek Maurer stands out as the candidate with new ideas combined with experience in development issues. Derek is thoughtful, willing to immerse himself in the issues and to bring new ideas to the debate on our future.

How to save Hickory Hill Park

To the Editor:

The Iowa City City Council is planning to extend First Avenue north along the boundary of Hickory Hill Park, causing problems for Iowa City's best natural area while subsidizing profits for a local developer. If you're a registered voter, you can vote to delay this extension and allow the community to give input about the future of the area. Vote "Yes" in the upcoming election to save Hickory Hill Park.

The First Avenue Extension will have many negative effects on the park. It will increase traffic along the border of the park, leading to increased noise, air pollution and polluted runoff into the park's ravine. The City Council used to talk about extending Hickory Hill onto the adjacent farmland, part of the park's ecosystem, which will become a housing development if the road is extended, thus preventing any future expansion of the park. In essence, we would be paying for an unnecessary road that invades the park's ecosystem, creates traffic congestion, noise problems, and prevents expansion of the park. There are other more cost-efficient options that reduce traffic problems and do not effect the park that must be considered, but we need more time.

Derek Maurer is a strong advocate of Hickory Hill Park and opposes the First Avenue Extension. If you vote "Yes" and vote for Derek, you'll help in slowing this sudden change in Iowa City's plans, so that the community can have time to give its input.

If you don't know your polling place, you can call the County Auditor at 356-6004 to find out.

Hickory Hill Park is Iowa City's only truly wild area. We must protect and expand it, not isolate it and surround it with the developments we see everywhere else in the city. We need to take a long look at where we're going before we decide the fate of our best natural area. Vote "Yes" and vote for Derek Maurer and help protect Hickory Hill Park for the future citizens of Iowa City.

Information on IATL was inaccurate

To the Editor:

The report on the current uses of the Iowa Advanced Technologies Laboratories building contains a number of inaccuracies. I am quoted, incorrectly, as saying, "the copper dome of the building is empty and houses the crew team's boats." In fact the major portion of the copper dome wing of the IATL building is finished and houses laboratory facilities for the development of novel optoelectronic materials.

Since the DI reporter apparently visited the IATL, it is curious he did not realize this. This error is especially remarkable since the issue of how space in the IATL is used is not a minor detail, but was purportedly the whole point of the article.

Library hours could stand expansion

To the Editor:

What's to be said about a university when its restaurants and bars are open much later than its libraries? For many University of Iowa students, closing the main library at midnight is just one more way in which university administrators proceed to kick students in the teeth.

Most UI students would probably agree that searching for a quiet place to study on a campus of 30,000 is much like searching for a needle in a haystack. It's damn near impossible. Quiet dorm rooms and apartments are nice, but do they really exist in the college world?

For some, the library may just be a quiet place to break into the books, but for others, it's the only place to get the grade. The problem is that most students find it close to impossible to get there before the lights go out and students file one by one to the exits.

It's easy for UI administrators to shrug their shoulders and say, "well, the library's open all day, you'll just have to make time." The truth is that most of us are working part-time jobs, attending class and partaking in extra-curricular activities. Our days are laced with coming and going and the last thing a student needs is to be worrying about getting to the library before it closes its doors.

Another way officials will try to evade the question of insufficient library hours is by pointing to the Union and its extended studying hours. But for some students the Union simply will not do.

If you're going to study at the Union you might as well venture your way up the hill to a bar in the Pedestrian Mall, pull up a basket of stale popcorn and break out your books, throw down a couple beers and go to town. Studying at the Union with fluorescent lights buzzing, students chatting about how badly they just bombed their last exam, elevator music lingering in the air and the crunching and munching of late night snackers is nearly impossible.

It only makes sense to have 24-hour libraries or at least library hours that cater to the needs of students. Schools like Harvard, Yale and Northwestern take pride in the brilliant students they produce come graduation day. Do these schools have libraries that close at midnight? The answer to this question is a given. These schools understand the needs of their students and won't think twice about rising to the occasion. So why won't the University of Iowa officials do the same?

Day in and day out students, university officials and alumni wonder why they can't compete with these prestigious institutions. Maybe the answer to this question is not as one may think. Maybe the answer lies at the northwest corner of Burlington and Madison.

Yes, the answer is quite simple. You've built it, they've come and now it's time to keep the doors open for the sake of the students. Let us study, let us compete and let us partake in the educational experience we've come to Iowa in search of. Let us stay past midnight.

HIV headline spreads misinformation

To the Editor:

After three years of reading The Daily Iowan on a regular basis, I have become accustomed to typographical errors, missing paragraphs, misleading figures and a variety of questionable editorial errors.

However, a headline in today's edition goes beyond being a mistake; it is simply irresponsible and totally incorrect.

Did the person who wrote the headline "Man responsible for 98 new cases of HIV" actually read the article first? The facts of the case, as stated in the article itself, are that the man in question is known to have exposed at least 28 young people to HIV through sexual contact. In addition to that, 53 secondary contacts are known to have occurred and 17 cases are being studied. Therefore, the number of "people possibly linked to the man" is 98. Only 10 have tested positive thus far and, according to other news sources, 18 have tested negative. There are not 98 new cases of HIV.

While your headline may attract attention and result in more people reading the article, it is both inaccurate and misleading. I hope that those who read the headline also read the article to find the real story.

Fight for abortion rights

To the Editor:

Abortion rights are under attack in Iowa City. For the past several months anti-abortionists have been demonstrating in front of Planned Parenthood, one of the few women's health clinics in Iowa. No matter what these protesters say about love and God, their real aim to intimidate and harass women. Women have a legal right to use the clinic without fear of being harassed. Anti-abortionists don't care if women lose the essential right to control their bodies and destinies. They don't care if women have to resort to "back-alley" abortions that seriously injure or kill women.

The attack on abortion rights is nationwide. Even though Clinton vetoed the ban on Intact Dilation and Extraction, misnamed "partial birth" abortions, he is by no means a pro-choice supporter. His compromise to this bill was more restrictive than the original ban.

Thousands of people between the years 1968-1972 demonstrated across the country and forced a Richard Nixon-packed Supreme Court to grant the right to abortion to all women. Iowa City has a strong pro-choice history; in 1991, nearly 200 demonstrators drove out Operation rescue. We must learn these lessons and confront anti-abortionists where ever they show up. Let it be known that the pro-choice majority will not remain silent.

Arms crisis simmers as Iraq allows U.N. visit

■ Saddam OKs U.N. team in an attempt to defuse the latest dispute.

By Robert H. Reid
Associated Press

UNITED NATIONS — Seeking to wrest concessions from the United Nations, Saddam Hussein agreed Monday to let a three-member U.N. mission visit Iraq to try to defuse the crisis over his plans to expel American arms inspectors.

But the atmosphere of conciliation dissipated over an alleged Iraqi threat to fire on U.S. surveillance planes that patrol Iraq in support of U.N. weapons monitoring.

U.S. Ambassador Bill Richardson condemned the threat as an "irresponsible escalation" of the crisis between Iraq and the United Nations.

Further clouding the mission, the two sides offered differing interpretations of its purpose. Secretary-General Kofi Annan said the three emissaries — from Algeria, Sweden and Argentina — would "discuss with the Iraqis a firm implementation of the U.N. resolution" allowing the inspectors unrestricted access to suspected weapons sites.

But Iraq's ambassador, Nizar Hamdoon, said the mission would open a "dialogue" on Iraqi accusations that the Americans are dragging their feet on lifting of U.N. sanctions by refusing to certify that Iraq has destroyed all its banned weapons.

The crippling economic sanctions were imposed in 1990 after Iraq invaded neighboring Kuwait, triggering a clash that led to the 1991 Gulf War.

The decision to accept the mission was announced after Iraqi authorities refused to admit an American inspector to a suspected weapons site.

Chief inspector Richard Butler of Australia said the team leader chose to abort the planned inspection and advised two other teams to do so as well. Butler called Iraq's action "illegal."

"It's a challenge to the authority of the Security Council, which is very, very serious," Butler told the Associated Press. "It just slows down what we have to do — which is get rid of all this stuff (banned weapons) and get the Iraqi people back to a normal life."

Iraq's information minister, Humam Abdul Khalig, told the Iraqi News Agency that the U.N. teams were welcome to resume their monitoring "and that only the Americans ... are barred."

Asked whether he would order the seven American inspectors to comply with the Iraqi order to leave the country by 5 p.m. EST Wednesday, Butler replied, "I'm not giving instructions for the Americans to leave."

It was the first time the U.N. weapons team had attempted an inspection since Iraq announced that American arms monitors had a week to vacate the country. Baghdad has not announced its plans if the Americans fail to adhere to the deadline.

The inspectors are trying to determine if Iraq has complied with orders issued at the end of the 1991 Persian Gulf War to destroy weapons of mass destruction.

The United States contends that Iraq has consistently tried to hide banned weapons, including chemical weapons and nerve agents capable of killing hundreds of thousands of people.

U.S. congressional leaders have demanded that Saddam be punished — by military means if necessary — for his latest defiance of Security Council resolutions. But there is little support on the council for military action at this time.

In Washington, State Department spokesperson James Rubin said if the U.N. mission fails to persuade Saddam to back down, "our view is the Security Council should be prepared to take firm action to bring about Iraqi compliance."

Council members from France, Russia, China and Egypt, however, have urged giving diplomacy a chance.

The United States had resisted proposals last week to send a U.N. mission to Baghdad but dropped its opposition after assurances from Annan that it would not negotiate what Washington considers a non-negotiable demand.

Studies link sun exposure to protection against breast cancer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Basking briefly in the sun every day may be an important way to prevent breast cancer, researchers said Monday. But they also warned, "Don't overdo it."

New studies indicate that vitamin D, a nutrient made by the skin during exposure to sunlight, can lower the risk of breast cancer by 30 percent to 40 percent and perhaps even more.

"We know now that a little bit of sun is beneficial, but it is not good to stay out there four or five hours," said epidemiologist Esther John of the North California Cancer Center. "We don't want to recommend that people go out and bake in the sun."

She said it is well-known that excessive exposure to sunlight can cause skin cancer and premature aging of the skin.

John, in a study presented Monday at scientific meeting of breast cancer experts, said that a study comparing the health habits of 133 breast cancer patients with women who did not have the disease found that exposure to sunlight significantly reduced the risk of breast cancer.

Sunlight lowers the risk, said John, because the skin uses ultraviolet rays from the sun to make vitamin D. This nutrient has been closely linked to protection against breast cancer in other studies, she said.

The study was part of a national research project that has been following the health of about 8,000 women since 1970. The research monitors the development of cancer and other health events, and compares the effects of such things as diet and exercise of women who get the disease and those who don't.

Dow up sharply, following Asian market rise

NEW YORK (AP) — Apparently putting last week's wild and scary ride behind it, the Dow Jones industrial average soared Monday to its third-biggest point gain ever, reflecting a recovery in Asian markets and optimism about the U.S. economy.

The Dow jumped 232.31 points to finish at 7,674.39, according to preliminary numbers. The rebound came just a week after the Dow plummeted a record 554 points because of a panicky sell-off in Hong Kong and elsewhere in Asia, Europe and Latin America.

Nearly 450 million shares had changed hands by late Monday afternoon on the New York Stock Exchange — a more typical level after the frantic 1.2 billion shares of Oct. 28.

Helping ease fears was a sharp 6 percent gain Monday on the key Hong Kong stock market and recoveries in other Asian and European markets as well. Asian markets were bolstered by a $33 billion rescue package hurriedly put together late last week for Indonesia; it was the second-largest ever fashioned by the International Monetary Fund. The biggest, $50 billion, went to Mexico in 1995.

After its 554-point plunge Oct. 27, the market clawed its way back through the week to regain half that loss. Despite the losses, the Dow is still up nearly 19 percent this year.

A recently discovered piece of pottery recording a donation to the "House of Yahweh" may contain the oldest mention outside the Bible of King Solomon's Temple. It is unclear where the artifact, nearly 3,000 years old, was discovered and how it made its way into the antiquities market and later to a London collector. But extensive testing has convinced several scholars of its authenticity.

Biblical fund raising

■ A three-shekel receipt provides evidence of King Solomon's Temple.

By David Briggs
Associated Press

NEW YORK — Talk about holding on to a receipt.

A recently discovered piece of pottery recording a donation to the "House of Yahweh" may contain the oldest mention outside the Bible of King Solomon's Temple. The 3 1/2-by-4-inch artifact is nearly 3,000 years old, dating to a time when kings sent messages inscribed on pottery.

It is unclear where it was discovered and how it made its way into the antiquities market, and later to London collector Shlomo Moussaieff, but extensive testing has convinced several scholars of its authenticity.

"This doesn't prove the Bible, but it does vividly provide a context and a reality to the world of the Bible," said Hershel Shanks, editor of the Biblical Archaeology Review, which reported on the find in its November-December issue. "It just provides a reality that is somewhat stunning in its way."

Solomon's Temple was generally believed to have been built sometime in the 10th century B.C. It lasted for some four centuries until it was destroyed by Babylonian soldiers.

The new find is "very important because it is early. It is very important because of the content," said Frank Moore Cross of Harvard, a leading American archaeologist.

The inscription indicates a Judean king sent it to dun a temple contributor. It says "Ashyahu the king" commanded a donation for "the House of Yahweh" of three shekels of silver. The amount was apparently written in to serve as a receipt.

A shekel is a measure of weight. Three shekels would have been a little more than an ounce of silver. Actual coins had not yet been introduced.

There is no specific reference to Solomon's Temple, but scholars say that is the reasonable inference.

"That's the only temple in town at that time," said Dennis Pardee, professor of Northwest Semitic philology at the Oriental Institute of the University of Chicago.

What has been harder for scholars to agree on is the name of the king who commanded the temple donations.

In an article in the French journal Paradee, Pierre Bordreuil of the National Center of Scientific Research in Paris and Felice Israel of the University of Genoa date the handwriting on the pottery to the latter part of the seventh century B.C.

One possibility would be King Josiah, who reigned over Judah from about 640 to 609 B.C. and whose name in Hebrew is similar to the name on the inscription. But Cross and others have dated the inscription nearly a century earlier. Two earlier kings with similar names were Yoash or Jehoash.

Clinton stumps for Dems in off-year elections

■ In last-minute stumping, Clinton campaigns for the Democrats.

By Ron Fournier
Associated Press

ALEXANDRIA, Va. — Stumping for a Democratic underdog, President Clinton Monday urged Virginia voters to "do the right thing" and reject the tempting tax cuts promised by the GOP front-runner for governor.

Addressing a crowd of about 500 on the town square, the president said Democrat Don Beyer is the sensible choice for governor; polls show he is trailing the better-financed Republican Jim Gilmore, who has promised to cut the state's personal property tax.

Clinton argued that Gilmore's proposal would take dollars away from public education. He said voters who select Gilmore in today's election would come away with the same empty feeling they would get after any act of instant gratification.

"How could you knowingly damage the education of our children and the future of your state for something that would be immensely satisfying for 30 seconds ... and then you'd be paying for it for the next four years?" Clinton asked.

"This is really a race where you have to choose the moment over the lifetime," he said. "This is about how the state's going to feel the next day. Do the right thing."

Monday's appearance was Clinton's latest on behalf of Democratic candidates in off-year elections. He spent Sunday campaigning in New York and New Jersey and the previous two days hobnobbing in Florida with rich Democratic donors to collect $3 million for the party.

One reason for Clinton's hard stumping is that the Democratic National Committee, burdened by a $15 million debt, did not spend large sums of money to support its candidates as the GOP did.

Gilmore has a $2 million fundraising edge — all of it from the national Republican Party.

The DNC's money troubles were even joked about during a campaign rally for New York City mayoral candidate Ruth Messinger.

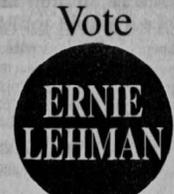

"Sometimes I give speeches to business groups who actually pay me," said comedian Al Franken, who introduced the president to a crowd of 500 at a Manhattan hotel. "I speak to Democrats for free and everybody's happy."

Clinton attended a pre-rally fundraiser for Messinger that took in $175,000.

But at this late stage, the underdog Democrats were counting on presidential star power, vilification of the Republicans and voter turnout to carry them to victory.

Coroner will ask permission to remove corneas from bodies

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The county coroner's office, under scrutiny for removing corneas from bodies without consent from relatives and selling them to an eye bank, said Monday it would now seek permission.

The decision followed a Los Angeles Times report revealing the sale of the corneas to a renowned eye bank for between $215 and $335 a pair. The eye bank then resells the corneas to transplant institutions for up to $3,400.

Although the lucrative practice is legal, current and former employees at the coroner's office and Doehny Eye & Tissue Transplant Bank described the process in the Times report as immoral and repugnant.

The state's so-called Coroners Law allows coroner's officials to legally remove the cornea in cases scheduled for autopsy if no objections are raised by family.

Anthony T. Hernandez, the coroner's top administrator, said the office would try harder to seek permission. The corneas would still be removed and sold if the families cannot be found within a window of opportunity for transplant, he added.

"What we're doing now is we're changing it, we're changing it so that we do aggressively pursue families and do inform them," Hernandez said.

"If the community feels that it's in their best interest to have informed consent, I think that one of the things that we'd like to do is to be able to follow what the community's demands are and what their concerns are," he said.

FIRST AVENUE/Election day issues abound

tions, said Karin Franklin, city planning director. She said the plan was based on the view that the extension was in the best interest of the community as a whole and that it was consistent with the city's comprehensive plan to provide a means of north-south traffic circulation in Iowa City in an economically efficient way.

"I support the staff's decision to go ahead with the project," Franklin said. "It's been part of our plans for years, and it's time to make it happen."

The council voted 5-2 in favor of the extension in early June, with Councilors Karen Kubby and Larry Baker dissenting.

Ernie Lehman, an incumbent candidate for the council, said he favors the extension because it would aid in development and save the taxpayers money.

"This has been on the books for a long time," he said. "We owe it to those that relied on our word."

Opponents of the extension say that it would disrupt the environment of Hickory Hill Park.

Candida Maurer, a member of I.C. Environmental Advocates who helped circulate petitions to delay the construction, said the extension plans were done with little public input.

"It was the council who reversed their plan," she said. "It is steep and winding with a lot of driveways that back on to it, and there are schools nearby. It was never meant to be an arterial street."

Baker, who is the incumbent candidate for the District B seat in today's election, favors the proposal, saying he wants to avoid an increase in traffic and escape the threat of impact on Hickory Hill Park.

Derek Maurer, a challenger for an at-large seat on the council, agreed with Baker.

"The advantages of delaying this for two years is that we give the public a voice and have the opportunity to look at the big picture," he said.

Ross Wilburn, a candidate for the at-large seat, and Connie Champion, a candidate for the District B seat, said they would like to see Scott Boulevard extended first so that the road could account for the growth of the East Side.

Champion said she would eventually like to follow up with the First Avenue extension as Iowa City grows but says she wants to ensure that safety concerns are addressed.

Ultimately, the decision will be left up to the voters, and that is how at-large candidate Mike O'Donnell says it should be.

"I want to listen to what the voters have to say," he said.

HACKERS/How and why Weeg works to stymie hackers

Wis., home after being convicted for the same sort of activity at the University of Wisconsin-Milwaukee in 1996, according to UWM Det. Art Koch.

Mitra is awaiting charges to be filed at this point, Brookfield Police Lt. Tom Hudock said.

One measure Weeg hopes to step-up is password regulation, said Rex Pruess, ITS systems support manager.

"It's good if a password has non-alphabetic characters, such as numbers or punctuation," he said. "Dictionary passwords are too easy to access. People can't change their passwords to (a dictionary word)."

Passwords should also be changed periodically, about two to three times per year, Pruess said. Also, mandatory password changes may be implemented in the future.

Changing her password is something UI President Mary Sue Coleman has gotten used to doing. In 1996, former UI student Joseph Hentzel broke into Coleman's account.

"I make sure to be careful with my password," Coleman said. "I change it frequently. I never put anything confidential in e-mail."

Coleman said tests are conducted to determine the safety of passwords.

"When they ran the tests, they found they couldn't crack my password," she said. "It's always a risk, though."

Programs containing dictionaries with words and encrypted forms of words are used to obtain passwords and are easy to find, Roy said.

There are different types of hackers, such as "crackers" — those who try to gain access to other computer systems, Roy said.

"There are probably 15 to 30 kids doing that sort of thing," he said. "It happened to my roommate, and all his application programs were deleted. We've been more careful since then."

Reasons for hacking vary from person to person, Roy said.

"Ninety percent probably use it as a learning experience to teach them how to do different things," he said. "Some just want to see how far they can go."

Although security tries to prevent it, eavesdroppers can be found everywhere, Pruess said, including on the Internet.

"I think they're more (like) curiosity seekers," he said. "They probably just want to see if they can get away with it."

Another measure Weeg hopes to implement is an encrypted mail system, which allows e-mail to be read only by the sender and receiver, Pruess said.

"Encrypted mail is currently built into Netscape, and over the next two to three years it will become more common in other programs," he said.

Snooping around in others' accounts is not an issue for UI junior Sara Koschmeder.

"I wouldn't really be mad if someone read my mail as long as they didn't do anything else," she said. "I don't really write anything interesting."

Security measures for the systems are being increased continually, Pruess said, which can sometimes be the reason for shutdowns in the system.

"When vendors provide security patches, we put them on right away," he said. "Sometimes if they find a security flaw, we have to take the cluster out for an hour or a day to fix it."

However, Pruess said, by the time Weeg learns there's a hole in the system, others have probably found it, too.

"The bad guys usually already know about it and have gotten in," he said.

PROP 209/High Court keeps California law

Michele Justin of the Pacific Legal Foundation, added: "This ushers in a new era in civil rights. This ... affirms that equal means equal and that discrimination will prevail no longer."

But an angry Mark Rosenbaum of the American Civil Liberties Union of Southern California denounced the court's action.

"For the first time in our nation's history, state and local governments have been stripped of their authority to remedy race and gender discrimination," he said. Enforcement of Proposition 209 leaves California "for the time being, at least, as the only state unwilling to stand up and take strong measures against gender and race discrimination within its borders," Rosenbaum said.

Martha Davis of the NOW Legal Defense and Educational Fund predicted future litigation if other states adopt similar rollbacks of affirmative action. "The last thing we want is to hold up California as a model. I think it would be disastrous if Proposition 209 were exported to other states," she said.

Davis also said the possibility exists that the California measure will be challenged again as individual programs are dismantled.

The 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals upheld the measure, adopted by a public initiative in 1996, last April.

Civil rights advocates then sought the highest court's help, contending that Proposition 209 would block even those government efforts to enforce racial or gender preferences that are "permitted or required" by the federal Constitution.

How much flexibility state and local governments have in such matters, their appeal said, "is one of fundamental and nationwide social and political significance."

"Proposition 209 leaves public universities free to grant admissions preferences" to "children of alumni, donors or friends of university officials," the appeal said. "Municipalities are free to grant hiring preferences to veterans or those with close political ties to local officials."

Only preferences based on race and sex will be banned, the appeal said.

Lawyers for California and several local governments in the state urged the justices to reject the challenge.

"The fact that in some hypothetical case involving a particular set of circumstances the application of Proposition 209 may raise issues of ... constitutionality does not support (high court review)," state Attorney General Dan Lungren told the court.

In other action, the justices: — Refused to shield committees formed by the prestigious National Academy of Sciences from a federal law allowing public scrutiny of governmental advisory groups. — Rejected an appeal aimed at removing the feeding tube of an elderly Wisconsin woman who suffers from advanced Alzheimer's disease. In fact, the tube was removed last week — well after the appeal was filed in the case — when doctors determined that Edna M. Folz, 73, was in a persistent vegetative state.

— Said the Clinton administration may participate in a Jan. 14 argument session over a key affirmative-action dispute in which a white New Jersey school teacher was laid-off rather than an equally senior black teacher.

METALLICA/Sans Court TV Metallica settles

planned.

Edward Blando, attorney for Metallica and the two other defendants, did not say whether his clients were pleased with the terms of the settlement.

"If the plaintiffs said they're satisfied, then we're satisfied," Blando said.

In agreeing to the settlement, the three defendants accepted no responsibility for Miller's injuries, Blando said. He wouldn't comment on what precipitated the agreement.

The trial, which was scheduled to last through Friday, involved a January 1993 Carver-Hawkeye Arena concert in which Miller, a 1994 graduate of the UI, alleged he sustained severe injuries. He claimed he was unwillingly picked up and passed above a crowd until he was dropped six feet over a metal railing in front of the stage.

He alleged that the fall caused a large laceration on the back of his head that required nine staples; he also alleged the fall caused the permanent loss of his sense of smell.

Metallica should have known that a large crowd could cause injuries such as his, Miller claimed.

Greenleaf spent the two hours questioning 15 potential jurors while approximately 35 other potential jurors waited. The questions ranged from their knowledge of potential witnesses to any opinion they may have held on Metallica.

One of the last questions asked by Greenleaf before the recess was the prospective jurors' knowledge of the phenomenon of body surfing, central to Miller's case.

When questioned by Greenleaf prior to the recess, several prospective jurors said they'd seen body surfing at either concerts they had attended or at UI football games.

Greenleaf also asked the jurors about their concert-going habits. A few jurors expressed past interest in Metallica; one had even attended a Metallica concert.

Court TV had originally expressed interest in televising the trial but backed out because of prior commitments. In applying to cover the case a year ago, Court TV was interested in the case because it addressed the safety issue of body surfing.

After hearing about the settlement, Lauren Sklar, Court TV media relations manager, said she was relieved that the cable channel had decided not to cover the trial.

"We're dealing with three live trials, and we didn't have the logistics to do this one as well," she said. "I guess it was a good call."

In the cases that Court TV covers, Sklar said, litigants usually don't settle during the trial, but it does happen.

In its six-year history, Court TV has only shown five trials from Iowa; none since 1993.

see the protests and the freedom of the people to protest."

In Washington, State Department spokesperson James P. Rubin said he did not see evidence of a "major rethinking" by China on human rights, despite news accounts suggesting that Jiang's remarks constituted a shift.

Jiang addressed the issue during an appearance at Harvard University on Saturday in response to a question on why the Chinese government has refused to open a dialogue with its people and why it crushed the pro-democracy Tiananmen Square uprising in 1989.

"In China, there are various channels for us to learn about people's views," he said. "I am in frequent contact with people's deputies ... China is a large country with different levels of development in different parts of the country."

He didn't directly answer the reference to Tiananmen Square, but conceded: "We have shortcomings and mistakes in our work."

The comment was interpreted by some as a departure from the normal policy of support without reservations by Chinese officials for the crackdown.

Rubin said he concluded no change was intended by Jiang after reading accounts of the speech and clarifying comments by Chinese officials.

Jiang began his visit in Hawaii before traveling to the East Coast. He met with President Clinton and members of Congress, many of whom were critical about repression in Tibet and other issues. Clinton said Beijing's human rights policies are on "the wrong side of history."

UI teaching assistant Da Huang said he didn't expect a lot of change to come from Zemin's meeting with Clinton.

"Both presidents tried to improve the relationship between their countries. And they know they need to dialogue about different issues," he said. "But you can't change everything overnight, not in a country like China with its big population."

Many UI Chinese students refused to comment on Zemin's visit. Huang said he understands this cautiousness.

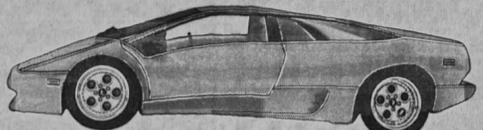

"People know that Americans might have a different opinion about China, so they don't want to talk about something that sensitive."

Jiang repeatedly defended his communist nation of 1.2 billion and vowed to open it still wider to outsiders. His was the first state visit by a Chinese leader since President Li Xiannian visited 12 years ago during the Reagan administration.

Clinton lands in I.C.

George Clinton, the founder of funk music, is scheduled to bring his 30-member P-Funk All-Stars to the Union Main Lounge tonight.

By Mose Hayward.
The Daily Iowan

While it may not feature an actual UFO, the Mothership will land on stage bearing occupants and funk that seem from another planet.

George Clinton and his 30-member P-Funk All-Stars will once again bring the funk to the Union Main Lounge tonight. The concert, sponsored by SCOPE Productions, is scheduled to be performed tonight at 8.

"These people and their show are living legends. They set the trend," said Bill Paterson, director and talent-buyer for SCOPE. "Funk exists because people like George Clinton do what they do."

George Clinton is recognized as the founder of funk music, working with the groups Parliament and Funkadelic as early as 1966.

Clinton was the main creative force behind both groups. Parliament, originally The Parliaments, was a five-man doo-wop group that also included Ray Davis, Fuzzy Haskins, Grady Thomas and Calvin Simon. Funkadelic, a combination of "funk" and "psychedelic," was more centered on instrumentals, guitar solos, and experimentation with the sound effects. Funkadelic also backed up The Parliaments' shows.

In 1967, the nation began to pick up his unique groove with the hit, "(I Wanna) Testify." By the late 1970s, George Clinton's bands had four hit singles between them and funk had become a nationally recognized genre of music. The band earned its fame through its live shows, which featured extended jams, lavish sets, stunts and a lot of humor.

"George Clinton is notorious for a three- to four-hour performance," said Stacie Kutzbach, public relations director for SCOPE. "The performance feels like a huge party that's non-stop fun."

However, the party came to halt in the early '80s, when Clinton's bands broke up and he fell into financial debt. But the '90s has marked the second coming of the Mothership with many of the old Parliament/Funkadelic albums having been re-released and Clinton's P-Funk All Stars (originally formed in 1983) beginning to tour nationally. Last summer Clinton released a new full-length album, The Awesome Power of a Fully-Operational Mothership.

Tickets for the show are still available for $20, plus Ticketmaster fees, and are available at the UI Box Office and all Ticketmaster locations. UI students, faculty and staff may charge up to six tickets on their UI IDs.

Monty Brinton/Associated Press

The CBS comedy series "Meego" is among shows taking "vacations" during November, one of television's "sweeps" months when local ratings are evaluated to set advertising rates.

Sagging shows put on 'vacation' by TV networks

Many new shows will be shelved for the month of November, when advertising rates are set through audience ratings.

By David Bauder
Associated Press

NEW YORK — Take a break, Meego. Hang the "gone fishing" sign on the front door at 413 Hope St. And don't look for Michael Hayes and Dellaventura to be working overtime.

November is nigh, the time of year when weak television shows slip away for "vacations" that may presage permanent exits from the screen.

It's another one of television's "sweeps" months, when local ratings are evaluated to set advertising rates, and as good a time as any to make snap judgments about how the fall season is doing.

Why not? The networks are already doing it. If you're disappointed you haven't had the time to sample "Built to Last" or "Timecop" yet, don't worry about it. They're already gone.

Programs that take vacations are generally replaced on network schedules by specials or miniseries, the type of programming TV people call "stunts" designed to cover up black holes in the ratings.

Bronson Pinchot's sad-sack kid's show, "Meego," is gone for the entire month of November. CBS is trying to establish Friday night as a beachhead for younger viewers, and "Meego" will be replaced by light specials like "Candid Camera" and "Kids Say the Darndest Things."

Fox is yanking "413 Hope Street" for the entire month. The network is having trouble attracting viewers on Thursday night — just like any network not named NBC — and hopes "reality" shows of cop chases and deadly animal swarms will do the trick.

Its two Thursday night comedies, "Living Single" and "Between Brothers," are also gone for two of the four weeks in November.

Rubouts don't appear imminent for David Caruso and Danny Aiello's law-and-order vehicles, "Michael Hayes" and "Dellaventura." Still, CBS is taking them off the November schedule twice to make room for miniseries.

CBS News star Bryant Gumbel's newsmagazine, "Public Eye," will be replaced for one week by a Scott Hamilton ice-skating special.

ABC has steadfastly stood behind its "Nothing Sacred" drama despite abysmally poor ratings and criticism from some Catholics about its depiction of a conflicted priest. But Father Ray will take a break once next month.

The number of vacationing shows actually seems down a little this November from past sweeps months, said Steven Sternberg, a television analyst for the firm, Bozell, Inc.

"I think the networks have started giving lower-rated shows more time, partly because they own a lot more of them now," Sternberg said.

Arts BRIEFS

Television
"ER" may cost $10 million per episode

Warner Brothers, the studio which produces "ER," is preparing to demand $10 million per episode when its contract with NBC is renegotiated in February, The New York Times reported.

The show currently commands $1 million to $2 million from NBC. While NBC will have numerous chances to meet the offer, the show could be shopped around to other networks if the demands are not met.

Connie Chung to join ABC News

NEW YORK (AP) — Two years after being dumped by CBS following her ill-fated anchor pairing with Dan Rather, Connie Chung will return to the air on ABC.

The network scheduled a news conference Monday to announce the hiring of Chung, who will report on news magazines like "PrimeTime Live" and also be available as a substitute news anchor.

Jordan, Bulls need double overtime to defeat San Antonio

Bulls 87, Spurs 83, 2OT

CHICAGO (AP) — Michael Jordan rescued the Chicago Bulls again Monday night.

He hit a 3-pointer to force overtime, made a tying jumper in the first overtime and scored three of Chicago's final four points in the second extra period as the Bulls outlasted the San Antonio Spurs 87-83.

Jordan, who shot just 12-of-39, finished with 29 points and 13 rebounds. Dennis Rodman had 22 rebounds for the Bulls.

San Antonio's David Robinson scored 21 points with 12 rebounds and rookie Tim Duncan added 19 points and matched Rodman with 22 rebounds.

Jordan's jumper with 31 seconds left in the second extra period gave the Bulls an 85-82 lead and his free throw with 11.5 seconds left made it a four-point game. San Antonio's Jaren

Jackson and Chicago's Joe Kleine traded free throws in the closing seconds.

Chicago led by four in the second overtime but Robinson dunked, and Rodman drew a technical foul for lowering his shoulder into his former teammate on the play. Jackson's free throw cut the lead to one with 2:14 remaining.

The Spurs had a chance for the lead but Jordan made a steal and Rodman and Ron Harper grabbed offensive rebounds as the Bulls kept the ball before Jordan scored again for an 85-82 lead.

In the first overtime, Jordan hit a high-arching 16-footer that made it 79-79 with 21.8 seconds left and San Antonio's Avery Johnson missed a runner with less than a second to go.

In regulation, Johnson's two free throws with 16.8 seconds left gave the Spurs a 73-70 lead.

Moore/Iowa senior takes long way to the top

ship to a forward with a 6-foot-2 inch frame.

Moore had all but given up hope of playing college basketball when he chose to attend Iowa. He had no plans of walking-on and no idea who to talk to even if he wanted to. But luckily for Moore, he happened to be in the right place at the right time.

On a daily basis during his freshman year, Moore and his friends from Chicago went to the Field House to play pick-up games and on one occasion they were matched up against a team including former Hawkeye Jim Bartels.

Former Iowa assistant coach Rick Moss happened to be watching and later approached Moore about walking-on to the team.

He redshirted as a freshman and practiced with the gray team, while just waiting to get a little playing time at the end of the game.

"I've watched some old game tape from my freshman year and you see Darryl at the end of the bench and he's just sittin' there and you think there's no chance," Jess Settles said. "But what a great guy and what a great story. That's what college basketball's all about. I can't say enough good things about him, he's an unbelievable person."

Moore admitted there were frustrating times during the his three years on the gray team, but he still called it a fun experience. And despite the long hours spent in practice and only seeing limited action, giving up was never an option.

"It was just always in my mind that I could make it," Moore said. "Once I start something, I don't like to give it up and it was always in the back of my mind that I would get my opportunity."

Moore's opportunity finally came about at the Maui Invitational last season when Bowen and Kent McCausland had the flu and Settles was sidelined with a hip injury. Iowa coach Tom Davis had no alternative, but to give Moore his chance in a meaningful game.

Moore responded with 13 points and seven rebounds in his first start against Louisiana State. It seemed as if he had been in the line-up throughout his entire career, but Settles had a simple gave a simple reason why he wasn't.

"It wasn't like he was outplaying anybody in practice a couple years ago," Jess Settles said. "But he was just waiting in the wings and took advantage of the opportunity. Talk about patience, I would've been long gone if I hadn't got to play. But he stuck it out and now he's a local and state hero."

Now Moore enters his senior season knowing that his coaches, teammates and fans have expectations of him. He is listed as a starter going into Iowa's exhibition games after Black and Gold Blowout. It marked the first time Moore spent the entire game wearing gold uniform instead of wearing black with the gray team.

Moore said he still feels like he is on the gray team, despite the fact that he has a scholarship. But now he is recognized around town, which is something former Hawkeye Alvin Robinson indicated would happen before the Hawkeyes came back from Hawaii.

"I was like yeah, right," Moore said. "I didn't believe him. But as the year went on, last year and this year, a lot of people notice me. People come up to me and say, 'Hi Darryl.' I don't even know their names and I've never seen them before. It's kinda cool."

Not bad for the guy on the end of the bench.

mate Thompson's earlier commitment.

"I think Joey picked Iowa for his own reasons," Miller said. "The fact that he'll know people there already probably helped his comfort level."

Davis said the fact that none of the recruits thus far will bring in MacDonald's all-American credentials is not necessarily a reflection that they won't add considerable talent to the team.

Range is considered by some prospects as the best player in Illinois. He's been ranked as the 53rd best prospect in the nation by Hoop Scoop and No. 33 by Recruiters Handbook.

With Range's commitment, the Iowa coach has just one scholarship remaining to offer. Davis said former Hawkeye Jeff Walker could be the recipient of it, but said he was also entertaining other options.

"What we will do is continue to evaluate the possibilities of Walker's return," Davis said. "Within our own team we'll continue to evaluate the development of our current players. We've also been focusing real hard on underclassmen recruiting. We had several in Saturday for the game."

"What direction we go from here we'll just have to wait and see."

Kramer/Hawks' Davis and Oliver the real thing

pleaded guilty to the misdemeanor Monday in California, which entitles him to a stay in a luxurious drug rehabilitation program.

Funny thing is, when the Angles tried to suspend Phillips in August, he would have nothing of it. Neither would Major League Baseball, which overturned the penalty. So Phillips played out the rest of the season, then suddenly remembered he did break the law. Simple mistake.

And all the while, Pete Rose is kept out of the Hall of Fame for betting on a few games.

Wishful thinking ... Ricky Davis and Dean Oliver are for real. There, I said it.

The two Hawkeye freshmen are going to be prime-time performers for the good doctor, Tom Davis. Maybe not right away, but soon.

And Guy Rucker is almost ready to dominate games underneath. He and Ryan Bowen are a solid tandem.

Now, if only Iowa had Raef LaFrentz (Monona, Iowa/Kansas), Sam Okey (Cassville, Wis./Wisconsin) and Justin Wessel (Cedar Rapids/Arizona). Then again, if the Bears had ... Oh, never mind, they'd still be losing.

Court is in session ... It's good to see the NBA is back. I was really starting to miss Dennis Rodman's altar-boy attitude, Shaquille O'Neal's smooth free-throw technique and Charles Barkley's dignified ballroom behavior.

Speaking of O'Neal, how strong is this guy? When was the last time a meager "open-hand slap" sent a grown man to the floor? Of course, the term "grown man" should be used sparingly when describing Greg Ostertag.

BASEBALL

Angels' Phillips pleads guilty to drug charge
FULLERTON, Calif. (AP) — Former Anaheim Angels outfielder Tony Phillips pleaded guilty to misdemeanor cocaine possession Monday and was ordered into a drug diversion program that could clear his record.

Phillips, 38, entered the plea before Municipal Court Judge Michael Hayes. He must return at a later date to show proof of his enrollment in a drug program.

Phillips would have a year to successfully complete the program, after which the conviction would be expunged.

The Angels announced last week that Phillips, who was paid $1.8 million this year, will not be back next season.

Phillips was arrested Aug. 10 at an Anaheim motel.

BASKETBALL

Rider no show at practice

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — Isalah Rider followed a two-game suspension by missing the Portland Trail Blazers' practice Monday, the latest transgression for one of the NBA's bad boys.

Team officials didn't know why Rider didn't show up, but he has made a habit of being tardy for workouts and missing flights.

Coach Mike Dunleavy told Portland radio station KXL he was disappointed and said Rider probably would be fined $2,000. But he won't be suspended and could be back in uniform for Tuesday night's home game against the Minnesota Timberwolves, Dunleavy said.

The NBA suspended Rider for the first two games of the season for off-court problems, including convictions for marijuana possession and carrying illegal cellular phones.

In April, Rider avoided criminal charges by settling with a charter flight company whose workers had accused the player of becoming abusive after missing a team flight.

GOLF

Montgomery to play more tours in U.S.

VIRGINIA WATER, England (AP) — Wanting to spend more time with his family and unwilling to abandon his golf roots, Colin Montgomerie will remain on the United States tour but play more often in the United States.

For months, the 34-year-old Scot had considered joining the U.S. PGA Tour full time to improve his chances of winning that elusive first major. On Monday, he said he will split next season between the two tours.

After finishing first on the European money list for a record fifth consecutive time Sunday, Montgomerie said the European tour will be his "home tour" despite a "considerably reduced schedule" in Europe.

"I have always said that I do not believe that it is possible from a personal and professional standpoint to take European and U.S. playing rights at the same time," he said in a statement released by the PGA European Tour. "And for that reason I have decided not to take up my U.S. tour card for 1998."

BOXING

Tyson expects to be banned

NEW YORK (AP) — Mike Tyson believes he will not regain his boxing license, suspended by the Nevada Athletic Commission because he bit Evander Holyfield twice during their heavyweight championship fight.

In an interview Monday night on ABC television, Tyson was asked by Alex Wallau whether he thought the commission would reinstate him next year.

"Truly, I think I'll be banned for the rest of my life," Tyson said.

Wallau asked the ex-champion why he believed that.

"I truly think everyone hates me," he said. "I truly believe that."

Green's future muddies Vikes season

■ The Minnesota Vikings look to be a decent shot to make the Super Bowl, but questions surround coach Dennis Green's future.

By Dave Goldberg
Associated Press

The way the Minnesota Vikings are going, there's a decent possibility that for a second straight Super Bowl a coach could spend the week ducking questions about his future.

Yes, Dennis Green wants out of Minnesota. And yes, the Vikings have a pretty decent shot at representing the NFC in San Diego on Jan. 25.

First things first — the team. Although the 23-18 score didn't indicate it, the Vikings manhandled New England on Sunday.

John Randle, probably the NFL's dominant defensive player, had Drew Bledsoe throwing off his back foot most of the game. Brad Johnson is demonstrating he's not a mirage at quarterback and he has Cris Carter and Jake Reed, the game's best wide receiver tandem, as targets.

"It took us a long time before we got anything shaking at all," acknowledged Patriots coach Pete Carroll.

Carroll got his job because Bill Parcells left New England after losing to Green Bay in last year's Super Bowl. That came after a Super Bowl week in which Parcells' future was the No. 1 item of discus-

Andy Kuno/Associated Press

Dallas cornerback Deion Sanders watches the clock tick down in the fourth quarter of the Cowboys 17-10 loss to the 49ers Sunday.

Now Green's future is a conversation piece. He insists his book, "No Room for Crybabies," is just an autobiography that's mainly about football.

But the newsy chapters are the ones in which he goes after the consortium of owners, talks about his desire to buy the team and if not, perhaps sue it.

STILL ALIVE: Yes, Dallas is 4-5 and under .500 for the first time this late in the year since 1990. And yes, Emmitt Smith has a groin pull, Darryl Johnston is gone for the season, Barry Switzer looks befud-

The biggest obstacle is their division record of 1-4. So if they tie with the Giants or Redskins in the NFC East, they'll probably lose a tiebreaker. But the NFC is such a jumble in the middle echelon that 9-7 probably makes the playoffs, and the Dallas defense is good enough to carry the team that far — particularly if Leon Lett is back from suspension for the final three games.

A key game is Carolina at home on Monday night, Dec. 8.

WHAT'S UP AL?: The Raiders have allowed 256 points in nine games. Last season, they allowed 293 in 16.

They're giving up 410 yards a game. Last year, their average was 294. So it's no surprise that they're 3-6.

And they can do it both ways.

A week ago, Warren Moon threw for 409 yards and five touchdowns in Seattle. This week, Carolina ran for 218 yards and five touchdowns, including what was in effect a 6-yard quarterback sneak by Collins, who was untouched.

This despite a defensive line that features four first-round picks in Anthony Smith, Chester McGlockton, Russell Maryland and Darrell Russell, and supposedly first-rate linebackers like Rob Fredrickson and Greg Biekert.

What's wrong? Try this: Just before the 1996 season began, John Fox quit as defensive coordinator because of interference from the front office (Al Davis)

Parcells plays coy on QB situation

By Barry Wilner
Associated Press

HEMPSTEAD, N.Y. — Bill Parcells likes the way his ace relief pitcher, Glenn Foley, is closing out games. Because Parcells is a football coach and not a baseball manager, however, he has to consider making Foley a starter.

That move could come this week, when the Jets play Miami. Parcells wasn't ready to make any decisions Monday, nor was he dropping any hints on who would open at quarterback against the Dolphins.

But after lifting Neil O'Donnell the past two games and seeing Foley lead the Jets to victories and sole possession of first place in the AFC East, can Parcells go with O'Donnell again?

"I haven't had a chance to talk to the players or coaches about anything, so I don't want to do anything right now," Parcells said a day after Foley guided the Jets to John Hall's winning field goal in overtime against Baltimore. "I try not to be impulsive. There is a lot to consider."

"I understand Neil is under a lot of pressure and I understand it more than anyone, and I understand Glenn has done a good job in providing a spark. Both have played good football this year. I just want to make sure I consider everything. I'm not trying to create a suspenseful situation."

But he has, keeping both quarterbacks hanging for at least 24 more hours. Each of them seemed to take the delay in stride.

The Jets are winning with a two-quarterback system, and few teams ever have prospered that way.

"It hasn't been a problem to this point," said Foley, who began impressing Parcells in training camp and hasn't stopped doing so.

O'Neal suspended for Oste tag altercation

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Shaquille O'Neal was suspended for one game and also fined $10,000 by the NBA on Monday for slapping Utah center Greg Ostertag before their teams' season opener last week.

The total tab for the slap will be steep, costing O'Neal the fine plus one game's pay — $156,794 — he won't receive because of the suspension.

O'Neal apologized to Ostertag earlier in the day, admitting he had failed to set a good example for young people.

"I hope he accepts my apology and that he and I can put behind us any bad feelings," he said in a statement.

"I made a mistake. Instead of focusing upon what is best for the team, I got caught up in the drama of the season's first game and reacted emotionally instead of logically," said O'Neal, who was to miss Tuesday night's game at Sacramento.

Ostertag, in Salt Lake City for Utah's game Monday night against Washington, refused comment despite repeated questions from reporters prior to the game.

The 7-foot-1 O'Neal slapped Ostertag near the court at the Forum in Inglewood on Friday, knocking him to the floor. The Jazz were leaving the court after a pregame shoot-around and the Lakers were preparing to take the court.

The 7-2 Ostertag was not hurt and went on to play, scoring two points in the Jazz's 104-87 loss to the Lakers. O'Neal was recuperating from an abdominal muscle injury and didn't play.

Modan earns player of the week honors

NEW YORK (AP) — Center Mike Modano, who had 19 points during October in leading the Dallas Stars to a 9-4-1 record, was picked Monday as the NHL's player of the month.

Modano's output included 9 goals and 10 assists, with three goals in a 7-0 victory over Chicago Oct. 10.

Others considered were Philadelphia center Eric Lindros and goaltenders Grant Fuhr of St. Louis and Chris Osgood of Detroit.

Coredero pleads guilty to assault charges

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP) — Former Boston Red Sox outfielder Wilfredo Coredero pleaded guilty Monday to charges of beating his wife and received a 90-day sentence, suspended for two years, from Judge Roanne Sragow.

Coredero will not serve any jail time, but he has been ordered to attend counseling for batterers, said Anne Edwards, the lead prosecutor in the case.

"We're very pleased with the outcome," Edwards said. "We had recommended this. It's a nice surprise." Edwards said Coredero will attend about 40 weeks of group therapy.

The judge also suggested — but did not require — that Coredero consider performing community service.

Coredero's change of plea came one day before jury selection was to begin in Cambridge District Court.

The 25-year-old player pleaded guilty to charges of assault and battery, assault and battery with a dangerous weapon, making a threat and violating an emergency restraining order. He could have been sentenced to a maximum of eight years in prison.

Tom Davis
Iowa basketball coach on the nation's top college basketball teams this year

Davis lands one of nation's top recruits

Joey Range, who many believe is the top player in the state of Illinois, orally committed to Iowa Sunday night.

By Becky Gruhn
The Daily Iowan

Iowa coach Tom Davis is unsure of how good his team is right now, but the 12-year Hawkeye veteran is very certain of how good his team could be in the future.

Davis announced Monday at a press conference that he has received a fifth verbal commitment to play basketball for the Hawkeyes. The latest commitment, 6-foot-6 forward Joey Range from Galesburg, Ill., joins Jake Crane, Duez Henderson, Antonio Ramos and Rod Thompson who have all made early decision to play under Davis.

"I'm very surprised to get five commitments this early," Davis said. "Especially the caliber of the commitment. These kids all have the potential of being pretty highly ranked."

Range currently teams up with Thompson at Galesburg High School. Last season Range led the Western Big Six conference in scoring and has been a three year all conference selection. He is expected to play the two-guard at Iowa. Earlier this fall Range had narrowed his field of schools to Iowa, Kentucky and Illinois State. Galesburg basketball coach Mike Miller said Range felt Iowa offered him a better package than the perennial powerhouse Wildcats.

"I think it was the closeness to home and the fact that he'd be playing in the Big Ten that meant a lot to him," Miller said. "He's followed Iowa for a long time. There's definitely a strong Iowa contingent in Galesburg. I think all that helped."

Miller said Range's decision to attend Iowa had nothing to do with his Galesburg team-

From Gray to Gold

Senior Darryl Moore has gone from virtual anonymity to stardom in the Iowa basketball program

By Andy Hamilton
The Daily Iowan

Ryan Bowen always knew Darryl Moore would be much more to Iowa fans than just a face on the end of the Hawkeye bench.

He knew Moore had the talent to play Big Ten basketball. He saw Moore's thundering dunks and tenacious defense and he just knew.

"I remember the first time we played a pick-up game," Bowen said. "He was hitting threes and dunkin' and I was wondering who in the world this guy was. They told me he was a gray teamer and a walk-on and I was thinking he was better than I will ever be."

During the following two seasons, Moore continued to showcase his ability in the open-court style Field House pick-up games. But his play never impressed the Iowa coaches enough to warrant a promotion from the gray team.

As a junior though, Moore finally began to show the skills his teammates and coaches anticipated of him at a higher level. After playing in the end of eight blowouts during his freshman and sophomore seasons, Moore started 14 of Iowa's 32 games his junior season, averaging 5.2 points and 4.6 rebounds per game.

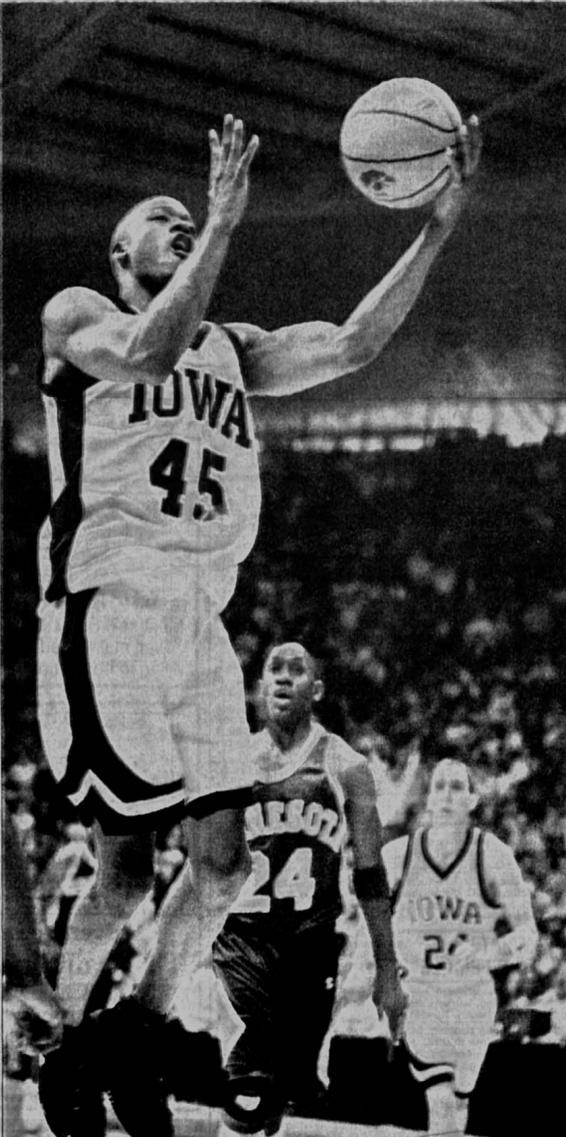

Saturday, Moore led all scorers with 23 points in the Black and Gold Blowout. It was his first competition since being named Prime Time League Most Valuable Player during the summer.

But even he doesn't know what keyed his recent success.

"I don't have the slightest idea," Moore said. "I guess I just happened to be in the right place at the right time."

That has been the theme of Moore's career at Iowa. He averaged 17.2 points per game as a senior at DuSable High School in Chicago, but college coaches were apprehensive about offering a scholar-

Boston's Garciaparra nabs American League rookie honors

By Ronald Blum
Associated Press

NEW YORK — Nothing was surprising about Nomar Garciaparra being the AL Rookie of the Year — not even the unanimous vote, nor his humility in accepting the award.

In fact, the only surprises came during the season when the Red Sox shortstop rewrote the Boston record books and some major league marks as well.

The 24-year-old Garciaparra hit .306 with 30 homers, 98 RBIs, 122 runs and 22 steals. He set major league records for most RBIs by a leadoff hitter and most homers by a rookie shortstop.

Garciaparra

Garciaparra was the sixth unanimous winner of the AL Rookie award, receiving all 28 first-place votes and 140 points in balloting by the Baseball Writers' Association of America. Other unanimous winners were Carlton Fisk (1972), Mark McGwire (1987), Sandy Alomar Jr. (1990) and Tim Lincecum (1993).

"People ask me about heroes. I never really had a hero. My hero was the game itself," Garciaparra said by conference call from a family vacation in Florida. "I love playing. Nothing gives me greater joy than being on the field and playing in the major leagues, among the best."

Jose Cruz Jr., an outfielder traded from Seattle to Toronto, was second with 61 points, followed by Anaheim pitcher Jason Dickson (27), Detroit shortstop Deivi Cruz (12), Cleveland pitcher Jaret Wright (7) and White Sox outfielder Mike Cameron (5).

Ballots were cast before the postseason, in which Wright went 3-0.

K.C. holds off Steelers

By Dave Goldberg
Associated Press

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Marcus Allen's legs have carried him throughout a 16-year career. His arm carried the Kansas City Chiefs to a 13-10 victory Monday night over the Pittsburgh Steelers.

Allen threw a 14-yard second-quarter touchdown pass to Danan Hughes, and the defense made it stand up, shutting down Kordell Stewart in a scoreless second half.

The Chiefs (7-2) could have and should have won by more as they remained a game behind Denver in the AFC West. But they'll take it.

After Pittsburgh took a 10-0 first quarter lead, Kansas City scored 13 in the second quarter — Allen's TD pass and field goals of 35 and 44 yards by Pete Stoyanovich.

Then the Chiefs spent the second half moving up and down the field but making critical mistakes.

Allen fumbled backward after appearing to make a first down on a fourth down at the Pittsburgh 4 early in the fourth quarter, and Kimble Anders fumbled away the ball as the Chiefs were driving later in the period.

But each time a defense led by Derrick Thomas, Anthony Davis and Jerome Woods shut down the Steelers. Stewart, who has had explosive second halves, was contained. Jerome Bettis, who finished 17 for 103 and went over 1,000 yards for the season, had only 35 on seven carries after gaining 68 in the first quarter

Kramer takes on the world of sports

Rumor has it this piece will become the second-most perused column in the history of this publication. So now that everybody's paying attention, let's talk about some things most of us can agree upon:

Heads up! ... What's going on with these nationally known sportscasters? They're getting worse than the athletes they interview. ESPN's Gary Miller takes the cake by urinating out of a nightclub window onto some police officers, but don't worry, there's more.

God only knows what NBC's Marv Albert has done in his spare time. Larry Flynt would be proud of that guy's bedroom experiences. Volumes have been written about Jimmie the Greek's racist comments, and if memory serves, I think O.J. Simpson used to do NFL games for NBC.

So if you see some familiar-looking talking head sprawled out on the Pentacrest some night, he's probably just new to the campus and got lost.

So sad ... At noon today, there will be a national moment of silence for the Florida football team, which dropped its second game of the year Saturday against Georgia. No national (or even SEC) championship this year.

The minute-long stillness will consist of confetti-throwing, champagne-drinking and a lamb sacrifice.

Share the wealth ... Since Iowa State lost games with Troy Davis, and is now continuing the tradition with his brother, Darren, maybe the Cyclowns should reconsider their options.

How about trading the younger Davis to Iowa for a few downtown drinking establishments? Ames could use a few more places to hang out, and Davis would go well with Tavian Banks in the Hawkeyes' backfield.

We'll even throw in a few fraternities, since Iowa State students are actually fond of them.

Oh, now I remember ... How convenient. Former California Angel Tony Phillips apparently forgot about that cocaine he had in his possession in August until just recently. Phillips
