The man behind the scenes

Lars Bakken, movie projectionist at the Campus Theatres in the Old Capitol Mall, looks over one of the large rear view mirrors before "I Know What You Did Last Summer" begins Monday afternoon.

The movie is about a small town where a group of friends are invited to spend the night and the next day on an island near the town.

Bakken feels he bears a great resemblance to the character in the movie.

"I'm really disgusted with the state of Hollywood right now," he said. "They're putting out some really bad, truly-true formulas. They're not trying to break new ground.

I've seen so many movies recently that I don't think they're making anything different. It seems like they're just recycling the same formulas again and again.

Bakken said he enjoys the idea of projecting movies because he gets to be part of the movie-making process.

"I really love being part of making the movie," he said. "I get to be involved in the story and the characters. It's a really cool experience."
Surviving Nov. 1

Six years later, the wife of a victim of the Galax shootings is working to prevent future tragedies.

The Daily Iowan

When Jane Nicholas's husband, Dwight, was shot to death by a graduate student Gaing Lu on Nov. 4, 1995, the life Nicholas knew came to an end. Dwight Nicholas was a man of peace, who preferred talking to those who were working against gun violence. He was an expert in legal issues related to gun violence and a member of the panel of victim advocates for the Iowa City Police Department.

But by confronting her pain, she is now working to prevent the violence that has affected so many people.

Nicholas is gearing up for an emotional and daunting task as she prepares to speak about her husband's death and the social implications of gun violence for the first time. She has been receiving phone calls and letters from people who have been affected by gun violence in their lives.

"I've met survivors like myself, as well as persons who are survivors of shootings," she says. "Their grief remains, she said. "They require a voice, a friend, a Band-Aid on the sore.""

Nicholas's voice has been set for a speech on campus for the presentation. She will be speaking about the impact of gun violence on those who have been affected by it, as well as the need for more education about gun violence and its prevention.

"We're not talking about just criminal behavior," she said. "We're also talking about gun violence, gun deaths, and accidents, and we're talking about the impact of gun violence on the survivors.""

Nicholas's work has been recognized by the University of Iowa, as she will be receiving the Iowa City Community Service Award. The award will be presented to her during the presentation, which is scheduled for Nov. 2 at 6:30 p.m.

Nicholas is not only a survivor but also an advocate for gun violence prevention. She has founded the Iowa Gun Violence Prevention Network, which aims to raise awareness about gun violence and its impact on the community.

"Every accommodation is not only welcomed but also necessary," she said. "It is not about understanding every other person, but understanding our own experiences and how they shape us.""
Lawyers protest at pair murder verdict

The defense theory (if it worked, would have been brilliant. It did not work. You cannot come back in and say. The devil made me do it.)

by Richard Leont

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. — With protests and attacks on the jury members for Zina, Louise Woodward's lawyers argued a new trial Sunday out or to reform the English system; first-time jurors are being told to judge on the death of her 18-month-old baby.

David Poole, the Johnson County sheriff, said the jury was reasonable not to go out of the house.

Local students learn about Israeli culture

Fifteen Israeli exchange students are touring the I.A. this week, learning about Iowa and teach- ing others about their homelands.

Survivor testimony looks bad for Nichols

In the second day of Nichols' trial, a bomb survivor candidly describes being buried in rubble.

By Steven K. Paulson

DEREK  ~ One minute before the bomb's first explosion, a cab drove off in the Oklahoma City parking lot.

The result is waking up under a pile of rubble after a bomb exploded in his building.

"I can visualize my left arm and leg. My right arm and leg are all under the building, buried under rubble," said Tigar.

The official death toll is 168.

But Tigar said he could not feel anything when the blast hit him.

Lights, camera, liftoff: Mir on silver screen

Casting couch may be Mir's future as Russian film director Yuri Kara proposes to cast the cosmonauts as the main characters.

By Greg Monroe

MOSCOW - The year is 1992 and the space station Mir is orbiting Earth. In a few weeks, the station will close Tuesday. By the end of the week, the majority of Mir's crew will have returned to Earth for good. But a former member of the Soviet space program is still beaming from orbit and has his eyes on the silver screen.

When the station closed Tuesday, its veteran cosmonaut, Sergei Karazin, was the last member of the Russian space program still in orbit. While many of the flight's members are spending their post-Mir days pursuing careers in politics, Karazin is looking to Hollywood for something new.

Karazin, 47, is one of 20 Russian actors who have been cast in the role of a cosmonaut in a movie, "The Flight of Soyuz-2," which is scheduled to be released in the United States early next year.

"It will find someone a little more real than what we are now," said Karazin, who has been a director of several films. "It will be a real actor, not a real astronaut, but someone who can perform.

"I will try to achieve this with a little more realism," Karazin said. "This is a new role for me, but I think I can do it.

The movie is based on the novel "The Flight of Soyuz-2" by Russian author Alexander Solzhenitsyn.

Soviet rules, Sliva, 47, is the only Russian actor who has been cast in the role of a cosmonaut by Russian space company Salyut.

In addition to the role of a cosmonaut, they would travel to the Moon and back, and then return to space for another mission. But three crew members would stay in space for one person.

The movie is about the final days of the Mir space station, which is ahead of schedule for decommissioning.

When asked what was making the movie so popular, Karazin said that it was all about the "space monk."

Eventually, the movie will be released in the United States and in other countries. It will be released in theaters later this year.

Russian film and theater director Vladimir Stolyarov is directing the Mir movie, and he is planning to cast the cosmonauts as the main characters in the film.

The movie is scheduled to be released in theaters later this year.

WASHINGTON - U.S. obtains a nuclear-capable MiG aircraft from Moldova

WASHINGTON (AP) - The United States has obtained an MIG-25, which is the only nuclear-capable MiG aircraft in the world, from Moldova.

The aircraft, which can carry nuclear weapons, was transferred to the United States in a direct deal, according to a source from the White House.

The MiGs were sold to the United States as part of the arms trade. The deal was announced by President Bush on Friday.

The United States has already bought dozens of MiGs from Russia, according to a source.

The aircraft can carry up to 200 nuclear warheads on a single mission.

"This is a historic day in United States-Moldovan relations," said a source.

The MiGs will be used to bolster the U.S. nuclear arsenal in the event of a conflict.

Court revamps price-fixing law

The Supreme Court has overturned a 25-year-old ruling on price-fixing, paving the way for states to revive the law.

Supporters of the old law, which makes it illegal for companies to fix prices, hailed the court's decision as a victory for consumers.

Opponents of the law, however, said it would discourage legitimate price competition.

The Supreme Court ruled in the case filed in 1989 by a group of states seeking to revive the law.

Pro-business candidates take at-large seats

After a close race, Connie Champion defeated incumbent Larry Baker.

By Christina McNamara

The Daily Iowan

As the sun set over Des Moines on primary election night, incumbent Larry Baker, Mike O’Donnell and Erinne Lehman were elected to at-large seats on the Iowa City Council.

Lehman received 55 percent of the vote, and O’Donnell received 43 percent of the vote. Baker received 38 percent of the vote, and O’Donnell defeated Baker by a more than 20 percent margin. The other candidates, Bona Williams, received 9 percent of the vote.

Lehman said she was very pleased with the outcome of the election. "I’m thrilled," she said. "I think we’ve got a lot of work to do, I think we’ve got a lot of city business to take care of."

Although he had hoped for this outcome, he said it didn’t necessarily mean he would have made it in the last minute before it was announced.

Lehman remembered his first stop, and said it might take awhile for the new council to get used to the council routine. "We have to take one step at a time," he said. "I think we’ve got a good council.".

Lehman commented on his opponent’s avoiding "very respondable." He said he would have had a better response on his opponent’s people issues.

"We had the best committee," he said. "We had the best committee there is, and we made sure that we represented Iowa City."

We have a very sympathetic outlook about all of us," O’Donnell said. "We’re going to work together, respect each other, and I think that the idea of somewhere on many issues is very important."

In deciding his first course of action, O’Donnell wants to look at the student members in the council and the way we work with each other.

"I want to be very active," he said. "I want to be very active and O'Donnell better expressed his disappointment in losing the election.

"I hope," he said. "I hope people can represent Iowa under my management."

Iowa point guard Grant has been playing for a hard core of fans in the stands who have been loyal.

Iowa’s 91-76 win over Michigan State Saturday night kept the Hawkeyes on top of the Big Ten at 4-1.

"We felt good tonight," said Iowa coach, "We felt good tonight, we played well and that was important."
Orchestra to lay it all on "tafel"

Hancher Auditorium will play host to the Tafelmusik Baroque Orchestra, a group that performs music composed for Baroque-era hangovers.

By Don Schuren

When the Tafelmusik Baroque Orchestra performs in Hancher Auditorium Sunday afternoon, audience members will be transported to the time when royal courts and classical music were the rage.

The literal translation of Tafelmusik is "music for the table," which means that the orchestra the group performs for hungovers.

The Tafelmusik Baroque Orchestra, Canada's leading period-instrument ensemble, is scheduled to perform tonight at 8 at Hancher Auditorium. The group's name, in fact, is inspired by the orchestra's tradition of performing music composed for the court's personal pastime.

Tafelmusik has been described as "a Houston Violins from the 17th century and replicas built to the dimensions of the historical instruments." Among the group's main goals is to transport audiences to the 17th century, where music and art were combined to create the perfect setting for the court's hangovers.

Tafelmusik sells tickets for its concerts, and the group is known for its exceptional sound quality and ability to transport audiences back to that period of time.
