delivers baby

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) - Lisa Nottingham was about four months pregnant when she suffered a brain hemorrhage and was declared brain dead.

That was in August. On Nov. 14, her baby girl was delivered by Caesarean section, premature and needing a ventilator to help her breathe, but otherwise healthy

"It is such a wonderful baby," said JoAnn Nottingham, the infant's grandmother. "She looks just like her mother did when she was born.

Shortly after the delivery of the 3pound, 3-ounce baby, doctors removed 20-year-old Nottingham from the machines that had kept her alive for 14 weeks. Twenty minutes later, she was dead.

The 15 1/2-inch baby was placed on a ventilator because of her immature lungs, doctors said.

After Nottingham suffered the cerebral hemorrhage in early August, 16 weeks into her pregnancy, doctors placed her on a ventilator to keep her body alive for the baby's sake.

Doctors decided the delivery had to be Nov. 14 because Nottingham's condition had become unstable and she was developing infections.

Doctors expect the baby to remain hospitalized for at least four to six weeks. There are a few neurological concerns, but nothing unusual for a premature baby born at her stage of development, said Dr. Robert Swantz, associate director of newborn intensive care services at the hospital.

Poll: Black teen-agers find racism has little impact on their lives

NEW YORK (AP) - Nearly 9 out of 10 black teen-agers said racism has little impact on their day-to-day lives, according to a Time-CNN poll released Sunday. But the survey also found more than half of all teen-agers - 62 percent of blacks and 58 whites - believe racism is "a big problem."

Specifically asked about racism in their own lives, 89 percent of black teenagers said racism was "a small problem" or "not a problem at all."

When asked about discrimination, 23 percent of black teen-agers, compared with 16 percent of whites, said they had been victimized because of their race. More than half of black adults - 53 percent — and 20 percent of white adults said they had been victims of discrimination

The poll is part of a story called "Kids and Race" in the Nov. 24 issue of Time, which will be on newsstands today. It was conducted between Sept. 23 and Oct. 2 by Yankelovich Partners, which surveyed 816 white adults, 374 black adults, 301 white teen-agers and 300 black teen-agers. The margin of error ranged from 3.4 percent to 5.6 percent. More than half of all teen-agers - 55

Jury recommends death for Pakistani in shooting at CIA

FAIRFAX, Va. (AP) - Nearly five years after she crouched beside her dying husband outside the CIA, Judy Becker Darling swallowed hard and wiped away a tear when a jury recommended a Pakistani terrorist die for the killing

The jurors, deliberating under heavy security Nov. 14, said Mir Aimal Kasi should get the death penalty for gunning down two CIA employees outside the spy agency's gates.

The jury had the choice of death by injection or life in prison. Its decision is only a recommendation, but Virginia judges generally abide by a jury's decision to impose the death penalty. Sentencing was set for Jan. 23.

According to testimony, Kasi repeatedly has confessed to the Jan. 25, 1993, shootings since FBI agents captured him in June after a 4 1/2-year manhunt, calling the attack vengeance for American interference in Muslim countries

Kasi, 33, did not testify during his murder trial.

He showed no emotion as the decision was read. One of his lawyers leaned over and rubbed Kasi's back.

Prosecutor Robert F. Horan said Kasi never showed any remorse for killing Frank Darling, 28, and Lansing Bennett, 66. Three other men were wounded when Kasi walked between cars waiting at a stop light, firing an AK-47 assault rifle

No money and low morale pit road to NATO for Czechs and Hungarians.

By George Jahn Associated Press

CHRUDIM, Czech Republic - At West Point, they taught him to be all he could be. Back home with his country preparing for NATO, the young officer found that in today's Czech army, that's precious little.

After four years at America's famous military academy, Lt. Petr Vohralik reported home for duty in July, wanting to make a difference. NATO was about to make history by issuing invitations to former Soviet bloc enemies Poland, Hungary and the Czech Republic.

Now, the 25-year-old scorns the Czech NATO aspirations he once espoused. The cash-starved and illmotivated army is not ready to join the high-tech NATO club, he says. He has filed to resign his commission.

But weapons and communications systems are outmoded and funds for new ones short. Worse still is the legacy of Soviet doctrine and training.

Vohralik has West Point degrees in computer sciences and electrical engineering as well as U.S. Army leadership training, but that never prepared him for the money and morale problems of the Chrudim base, 60 miles east of Prague.

How to find the cash to replace the broken barracks window panes before winter without - once again dipping into his own pocket? How to motivate men preparing for their first parachute jump, when he can't jump himself because each body means extra airplane fuel?

"Esprit de corps? We don't have any," Vohralik says, echoing the complaints of other Czech soldiers interviewed. "Nobody is really happy here."

Current NATO members have complaints, too. Czechs in September for maintaining Soviet-era structures - too many colonels and not enough junior

That doesn't help, when the Clifton administration faces a hard sell in the U.S. Senate, which must ratify the expansion plan along with the legislatures of other NATO members.

Many senators say the Pentagon's estimate that the U.S. share of expansion costs will run $150 million to $200 million over 13 years is too low.

Various polls say more than 50 percent of Czechs support NATO membership, but only half of those consider it a priority.

In Poland, polls have found the support for membership in NATO significantly stronger. And Hungarians overwhelmingly accepted NATO's invitation in Sunday's binding referendum. With nearly 90 percent of the votes counted, election officials said 85 percent of voters supported membership.

One major, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said he quit a part-time job as a waiter after some of his men showed up and ordered beer. "How am I supposed to keep discipline after that?" he said.

Some soldiers went without hot showers or heat last winter, because inflation ate up money for fuel. Lt. Col. Mihaly Volonter, a spokesperson for Hungary's military union, said the government finally met those costs by the using unpaid wages of soldiers who quit for a better life as civilians.

About 4,000 officers and enlisted soldiers quit last year. "They saw no future," Volonter said. He said the Hungarian army is short about 1,000 officers and 2,000 noncommissioned officers.

am living in the world of cell phones and beep-ers, chain smokers dressed in black driving expensive cars. But this world is populated only by a minority of Mexicans. The other world, where running water is a relatively new arrival and even the low cost of a few tortillas has to be budgeted, has been a hard one for me to access. I know it is more Mexico's reality than the life I am living, and from the beginning I wanted to understand it as well as my experiences in "high society." This other world is populated by an army of service workers garbage collectors, paper deliverers, street sweepers and food vendors - whom I pass on the street but never really get to know.

But then I met Miguel Angel. In the midst of the chaos of a weekend at the Cervantino Festival in Guanajuato, my Miguel Angel, a proud resident of nearby León, was at the festival with friends from school. His trendy clothes and haircut made him blend in with the crowd, but after only a few minutes of conversation he spilled out a past that I would never have been able to guess. Miguel Angel grew up as a street kid, only a narrow step above the kids that beg for pesos here. Those are the same kids who make me nervous when they approach me, the same kids who my Mexico City friends refuse to give money to because they are con-vinced supposed alcoholic tyrant parents will take it away.

Miguel Angel started working at the age of 10, selling popsicles on the street. From that first job on, he Comewhere, somehow, the Louise Woodward murder trial got out of hand.

Was it when England accused the Massachusetts jury of having prejudice against a foreigner? Or did it start after Woodward's defense argued that she would have never been convicted of second-degree murder? Or was it the media hoopla surrounding this cel-ebrated trial that blew everything out of proportion?

The trial had started out as a 19year-old nanny, accused of murdering the 8-month-old child in her care, pleading innocent against a second-degree murder charge. Now it is the United States' judicial system pleading innocence, reducing a murder conviction to manslaughter in order to appear more compassionate in the public eye.

Defenders of Negative experience with affirmative act

To the Editor,

As a member of the working ulation of the United States and too long ago having to endure ordeal of applying to colleges a universities across the United States, I have had to deal with mative action

Through my experiences, I h come to believe that affirmative action does not work. It was a noble idea that just didn't make cut on effectiveness.

In his editorial on affirmative action, Kriston Beardsley wrote the purpose of affirmative action to level the playing field.

Affirmative action has not les any playing fields: what it has d is make reparations for actions en against minorities and worn the past, effectively alienating t whom Beardsley purports to ha such huge advantages; white m was basically an adult, the product of parents who were "not very supportive." In his search for a better life, he graduated to a job as a mechanic and - the most amazing of all - he stayed in school. Classes all morning, studying all afternoon, working all evening, fueled only by the calories of a small package of Mexico's version of Ho-Ho's. Looking back, Miguel Angel himself seemed amazed that he had lived through his formative years in that routine, even though he couldn't be sure his hard work would pay off.

But it did pay off, at least in his eyes. He has a "good job" in the office of a bus company, and he continues going to school. His eyes lit up at the possibility of joining his brother in the United States to work in a meat-packing plant. But in the midst of his pride in his own successes, Miguel Angel remains proud of the place he came from. He thinks his rough childhood is an advantage because he understands the greater part of his own society, something that can't be said about the students at my private Mexican university. He offered to escort my friend and me on a shopping trip to León.

nd although he has made a new class of companions, the people who are Miguel Angel's closest friends are still the people he grew up with, sellers of newspapers and flowers. He said the only thing that separates his life from theirs is luck and a good measure of hope. He has not forgotten their language, a complex system of whistles that means nothing to upper-class passersby. Two high tones followed by a low one mean "Where are you going?" and the syllables of each child's name are assigned a different sound. So it's not a song but a sentence I hear issuing from the clown-painted lips of the young street performers, and it's a sound that for me will never be the same after my conversation with the only former street kid I ever sat down to talk with.

Miguel Angel may never be a member of the cellphone-and-beeper crowd, but I sense he will continue to work his hardest until he reaches the economic level that makes him happy and comfortable. That might mean the back-breaking work available to him in the United States or years of sacrifice here in Mexico to save the small amount of money he can earn. But no matter what, he will remember the language he grew up with and continue recognizing the music of his own name.

House provides valuable service To the Editor:

Reading the article entitled, "The House that Pop Tabs Built" by Jutta Schausten (DI, Oct. 30) enlightened my day tremendously.

Coming from a family whose entire income comes from agriculture that lives near a small rural community and in which I had 130 students in my graduating class, I was not prepared for my freshman year at school in the impersonal setting of the city.

And, being a homesick farmgirl in the middle of an unfamiliar city, I naturally dwell on the negative aspects of the news and my surroundings that I encounter every day.

When reading this article I realized that the collection of the pop tabs to help fund the upkeep of the Ronald McDonald House sounded like something that the neighbors would do to help a fellow small town family that was in financial trouble, as are the families who utilize the Ronald McDonald House while paying hospital bills for their loved one.

enable them to be near their loved one in the hospital and shouldn't be expected to be away from that loved one just because they can't afford a place to lay their head at night. In my family, when someone is in need of medical care, health comes first, with finances secondary, but when the money is gone, it's gone, whether the care was complete or not. This can leave families with huge amounts of debt as many have experienced. I think it is wonderful, in a world of increasing selfishness, that people understand what the hospitalized are facing and do what they can to help these people get the care they need. Every little bit helps! Now, if only more people had this attitude of understanding and helping, society would be much better off.

But it is wrong to try and do that by using those same types of sexist and racist practices against those whom might have once upon a time benefited from them. Two wrongs do not make a right. Instead of trying to give previously discriminated peoples special advantages, why don't we do away with having applications that ask for person's race of even sex. Snyder's column puts issue in perspective

To the Editor:

Viewpoints

Over the last couple of weeks, I have been following the controversy surrounding The Daily Iowan's sports writer James Kramer and Hawkeye guarterback Matt Sherman. And I have been waiting for someone to stand up for Kramer as Tim Dwight and Hayden Fry did for Sherman.

So, I would like to congratulate the editor of the DI, Matt Snyder, for backing Kramer's opinions by writing "Defending Kramer's right to criticize." (DI, Nov. 4)

Snyder's insight to this situation makes it clear that Kramer is doing something that he loves to do, which, in the long run, will make him a better journalist as well as a better person, just as Matt Sherman's unfortunate game and current situation will make him a better quarterback and individual.

Snyder's article puts this episode in a perspective that both parties should be able to appreciate and agree upon. So hats of to you, Mr. Snyder, for backing up your criticizing journalist. Better a little late than never.

Don't give Kramer any more attention

To the Editor:

Recently, I read James Kramer's column ("Kramer takes on the world of sports," DI, Nov. 4). Ever since writing the about Matt Sherman, Kramer has gotten way too much attention

I think all the attention has gone to his head.

Sure, I agree with everything that he said about Sherman, but it did not have to be written in the newspaper. He should have kept his opinion to himself. The last thing that the Hawkeyes and all their fans need to hear was a journalist cutting down a member of their team.

In the opening of this article, Kramer writes that, "this piece will become the second-most perused column in the history of this publication."

That makes me feel like Kramer only writes what he writes to cause an uproar in the ever-growing world of sports fans.

A journalist's job is not to make everyone hate them. rather it is to inform the community about events in an unbiased manner.

Throughout the first three paragraphs Kramer constantly cuts down famous sports personalities like Gary Miller and O.J. Simpson.

I became very agitated with Kramer, and it didn't help when I came across his thoughts on Marv Albert. Kramer wrote,"God only knows what NBC's Marv Albert has done in his spare time. Larry Flynt would be proud of that guy's bedroom experiences."

Marv Albert may have made a mistake, but this sentence never should have been allowed in a sports column. The sentence was very demeaning and it had nothing to do with what is wrong with the sports world. What right does Kramer have to insult Marv Albert? No one has the right, including Kramer, to judge a person's sportscasting ability based on his personal life.

Kramer, you are supposed to write an article to inform those who have no idea on the subject, not to cut down someone or something just because you don't like it. You are given an opportunity to show how things ought to be, not how bad they are.

Before you start writing your next article that rips on someone or something else, give yourself a nice Gatorade shower to cool down.

Doctors to study whooping cough outbreak

Two doctors from the Center for Disease Control in Atlanta came to Johnson County Nov. 14 to study the recent whooping cough outbreak.

The CDC will be here throughout the week looking at the transmission of the bacteria, said Kot Flora, Johnson County disease prevention manager.

Eighty cases of whooping cough have been reported in Johnson County since August. During 1996 there were only two cases reported, and in 1995 there were no cases reported.

The doctors were invited here by the State Health Department on a request from Flora. They will interview people with whooping cough and study transmission settings, at schools and day care centers, she said.

The economics of the epidemic in Johnson County will also be examined.

"(They are going to be studying) the cost of lost time from missing work or school," Flora said. "There are also health costs, like seeing a physician or getting prescriptions for antibiotics."

It is a routine procedure for the CDC to investigate outbreaks around the country. The whooping cough epidemic has stirred concern in Johnson County and the inspectors were called in, Flora said, "We haven't had an outbreak that has lasted this long," she said. The reported cases have occurred in school and day care settings, at the UI, and throughout the community. - By Erin Jordan Nation

Abortion wedge splits foreign policy bill support

The abortion issue aided the demise of a trade measure and foreign policy bills.

By David Espo Associated Press

WASHINGTON - Never far from the surface, the perennial struggle over abortion figured in the demise of a major trade measure sought by President Clinton in the waning days of Congress' session and blocked passage of a string of foreign policy bills.

"Abortion, it goes to very core values on both sides," Rep. David Obey, D-Wis., said at one point as the White House and lawmakers grappled with a series of abortion-linked disputes.

Nor was the struggle merely a straightforward issue of Republicans against Democrats, or supporters of abortion rights against abortion foes. Internal political concerns appeared to be at work in both parties.

Several Republicans, speaking on condition of anonymity, said House Speaker Newt Gingrich, R-Ga., hoped to drive a political wedge between Clinton and Democratic lawmakers who support abortion rights.

Human rights experts want world court

At the same time, Democrats seconded by some Republicans said Gingrich was emphasizing abortion politics in a bid to reassure conservatives within his own ranks that he was firmly on their side.

At issue were GOP-proposed restrictions on international family planning groups that receive federal funds and perform abortions overseas or lobby foreign governments to liberalize their own policies. The issue has been controversial since 1995, when Republicans began using foreign aid legislation as leverage to gain restrictions on overseas abortions.

Fearful that Clinton would yield too much ground to anti-abortion Republicans in a drive for passage of the trade measure, several Democratic women members of the House warned him against it. "We wanted to make this issue too hot to handle for him," said Rep. Nancy Pelosi, D-Calif.

Equally unrelenting were conservative foes of abortion - an estimated two dozen according to New Jersey Republican Chris Smith who withheld commitments to support the trade bill they might otherwise have given.

FIRST QUARTER What Happenen: The Hawkeyes came out in the first quarter and established the running attack with 14 consecutive rushing plays totaling 130 yards.

On their first possession of the game, the ground pame led the Hawkeyes into the end zone, with Tavian anks (above) breaking open a 46 yard run to give lowa a 7-0 lead. Banks rushed the ball five times for 55 yards on the drve.

Banks rushed for 74 yards on eight carries in the quarter. The Hawkeyes had 130 yards rushing in the first period.

Iowa City native Chris Hamdorf, who started the game at quarterback for Northwestern, was 3-for-4 for 18 yards before suffering a leg injury midway through the guarter. It was the final game of his college career.

Key Star: lowa attempted only one pass in the first

N'WISSINGS

Pete Thompson/The Daily Iowan

SECOND QUARTER WHAT HAPPENED: The second period opened with lowa's Chad Johnson missing a 50-yard field goal wide right. Northwestern responded with a 8 play, 67 yard drive, that culminated in a 32-yard touchdown pass from Tim Hughes to Brian Musso.

On the previous play, Brian Musso caught a nine-yard pass from guarterback Tim Hughes and fumbled the football (above). Raj Clark recovered the loose ball, but the referee ruled it was not a fumble. The replay showed otherwise.

On Iowa's following possession, a 27-yard Tavian Banks run gave the senior the Hawkeyes all-time single season rushing record.

Later, Iowa guarterback Randy Reiners connected with Tony Collins on a 42-yard reception that set up a 1-yard touchdown run by Banks to put Iowa up 14-0.

Key Stat: Banks broke Sedrick Shaw's lowa single season rushing record in 107 fewer carries than Shaw.

THIRD QUARTER

WHAT HAPPENED: On Iowa's first punt of the second half, long snapper Ryan McCormick tossed the ball over Jason Baker's head (above), resulting in a safety. to make the score 14-9.

After Northwestern received the ensuing free kick. they used pin-point passing and a key third down conversions to spark a seven play, 67-yard scoring drive. Tim Hughes hit Musso (above) on a 40-yard reception that resulted in the score.

Wildcat coach Gary Barnett elected to go for the two-point conversion following the score, but Northwestern failed, setting the score at 15-14.

When Iowa got the ball back, Zach Bromert missed his second field goal of the day, a 33-yard kick. The quarter ended with the Wildcats up 15-14.

KEY STAT: Tim Dwight caught his only two passes of the game in the third guarter.

Pete Thompson/The Daily Iowan

FOURTH QUARTER WHAT HAPPENED: Iowa guarterback Randy Reiners started the final period by under throwing a wide-open Damon Gibson. The play resulted in a Northwestern interception by cornerback Fred Wilkerson.

lowa had three other drives in the quarter that would end in Northwestern territory.

With 3:48 to play, freshman place kicker Chad Johnson (above) missed a 47-yard field goal attempt that would have given lowa a 17-15 advantage. It was the fourth field goal the Hawkeyes missed on the afternoon.

On the previous drive, Iowa went for it on fourthand-three, but Randy Reiners was stuffed for a one-yard gain on a naked bootleg

Following Johnson's missed field goal, Northwestern ran out the clock.

Key stat: lowa failed to win a Big Ten road game for the first time under coach Hayden Fry.

The Hawkeyes missed all four of their field goal attempts, three of which came with the hefty winds at their back.

History maker: Iowa running back Tavian Banks continued to etch his name into the Iowa record books Saturday, with 30 carries for 169 yards and two touchdowns.

His effort earned him the Hawkeyes single-season rushing record with 1,565 yards. The mark was previously held by former teammate Sedrick Shaw, who rushed for 1,477 yards in 1995.

"When I look back on the rushing record, it will mean a lot," Banks said. "I went in to the season wanting to get the rushing record."

Punt return race: The battle for Big Ten supremacy between punt returners Brian Musso and Tim Dwight was not much of a spectacle Saturday. The two return specialists rank first and third, respectively, in Big Ten career punt return yards, but neither added much to his total.

Musso ended his career with two returns for 23 yards, upping his career mark to 1,071 yards - the best ever in the Big Ten. Dwight, who has one game remaining, returned one punt for 13 yards and a career total of 1,038 yards.

Dwight is four yards shy of the previous Big Ten record, set by Indiana's Bill Hildebrand in the 1940s

Here's how wacky next weekend can be: No. 1 Michigan and No. 11 Washington State can both lose and still meet in the Rose Bowl

With some of college football's biggest rivalries set for Saturday, including No. 4 Ohio State at No. 1 Michigan and No. 11 Washington State vs. No. 17 Washington, it's tough to figure who'll end up where in the postseason. Here's a rundown of how the top conference races shape up:

Big Ten With a win over Ohio State next wee, the Wolverines (10-0, 7-0) would complete their first perfect regular-season ton State goes to its first Rose Bowl since 1971 and go to Pasadena. For how the Top 25 fared, See Page 2B

If the Buckeyes (10-1, 6-1) win, and Penn State (8-1, 5-1) wins out to create a three-way tie for the league title, Michigan gets the Rose Bowl bid unless Ohio State is ranked No. 1 or No. 2. In that case, Ohio State goes. Pac-10

There's a three-team scramble among No. 7 UCLA (8-2, 6-1), No. 11 Washington State (9-1, 6-1) and No. 12 Arizona State (8-2, 6-1).

Stacey Harrison MOVIE REVIEW ...................... "The Jackal":  $\star \star 1/2$  out of  $\star \star \star \star$ Now playing: Coral IV, Coralville Starring: Bruce Willis, Richard Gere, Sidney Poitier, Diane Venora Showtimes: nightly Screen Story and Screenplay by: Chuck Pfarrer at 6:45 and 9:45 Directed by: Michael Caton-Jones Silly mistakes hunt down 'Jackal'

If you want to see how a typical '90s movie differs from one of the '70s, it can be illustrated by a single aspect of "The Jackal." In 1973's "The Day of the Jackal," which the new film uses as its source material, Edward Fox plays the Jackal, and his weapon of choice is a stickly, pieced-together rifle that looks more like a pea shooter than the precise, state-ofthe-art killing machine it is. Bruce Willis, in his turn as the title character, enlists the aid of a gargantuan hoisted, swiveling monstrosity of a gun that would look more at home on an aircraft carrier than in the hands of an assassin.

In essence, overkill is the theme in "The Jackal," which, at times, is fresh and daring, but is equally standard and lacking in the courage of its convictions. In other words, for a film about brave people, "The Jackal" is pretty gutless.

All aspects of the film are pushed to the extreme, and that is not necessarily a detriment as far as action and atmosphere are concerned. "The Jackal" has a distinct New World Order flavor, established during its opening credit sequence, which features a montage of the rise and fall of the Soviet Union set against a techno-laden soundtrack, and the action scenes are cleverly crafted in a John Woo sort of way. Where the film goes wrong is in its insistence on being a crowd-pleaser. "The Jackal" boasts several sequences that start out dramatically sound, but end up inserting some clichéd spiel that is meant to extract "Rah-rahs" and "Yee-haws" from the crowd.

It's a shame, because such errors may overshadow some surprising performances by Willis and Richard Gere. Willis' effective turn as a villain isn't so shocking, he's proved his range before (i.e. "In Country," "Mortal Thoughts"). But Gere, who usually plays soulless urbanites, finds humanity as, of all ist who always keeps his word.

Gere's Declan Mulqueen is sought out by the FBI as knowing the whereabouts of someone who has actually seen the Jackal, an assassin believed to have been con-FBI. But, conveniently, Gere conthe Jackal's progress.

Jackal" is sure enough watchable, belongs to Willis (who, in his blond guise, resembles Tim Dwight). His but it's two hours that take a little things, an imprisoned Irish terror- preparations for the kill involve an more than they give.

HBO won 27 CableACE Awards, including four for the Christopher Reevedirected special "In the Gloaming."

LOS ANGELES, Calif. (AP) -"In The Gloaming," Christopher Reeve's directorial debut about an AIDS victim who goes home to die, took top honors at this weekend's 19th Annual CableACE Awards.

The movie helped HBO lead the pack of 27 cable networks, earning 32 of 84 awards. Turner Network Television followed with eight and Showtime had five.

"In The Gloaming" won four awards, winning an acting trophy for Glenn Close and best dramatic or theatrical special, best original score and best writing in a dramatic special or series.

The awards show was televised live Saturday on TNT during a black-tie event at the Wiltern Theatre with hosts David Hyde Pierce and Sela Ward. Additional awards were announced Friday in a nontelevised ceremony and last month.

Other shows each winning three awards were Bette Midler's "Diva Las Vegas," the prison drama, "Oz," and "The Larry Sanders Show," all on HBO, and TNT's miniseries "George Wallace."

The CableACE, presented by the National Academy of Cable Programming, is the industry's highest programming honor.

In addition to the 84 awards, three special awards were also presented as part of the gala.

'The Jackal' scampers to No. 1 with weekend moviegoers

LOS ANGELES (AP) - Bruce Willis' portrayal of an assassin with Sidney Poitier and Richard Gere as the men who track him down put "The Jackal" on top of the box office charts this weekend, according to preliminary figures released Sunday.

"The Jackal," whose lead character is a master of disguise, made its debut at No. 1 with an estimated $15.6 million, according to Exhibitor Relations Co. Inc.

"Starship Troopers" dropped to No. 2 in its second week with an estimated $10.2 million, falling a precipitous 54 percent. The sci-fi thriller tied with Disney's

Quentin Tarantino — who brought screen violence to new levels with "Pulp Fiction" and "Reservoir Dogs" - slammed him against a wall and punched him in the face and head

Don Murphy, associate producer of "Natural Born Killers," has sued Tarantino for $5 million. In the lawsuit filed Friday, Murphy claims he has been unable to work since Tarantino punched him last month at a West Hollywood restaurant

"Natural Born Killers," the Oliver Stone-directed movie of a couple on a wandering killing spree, drew protests about its violence.

The fight was sparked by comments Murphy made about Tarantino in the book "Killer Instinct," written by "Natural Born Killers" co-producer Jane Hampshire, the lawsuit claimed.
