Mall finalizes tenants

■ The Coral Ridge Mall announced a nearly completed lineup of stores.

By Christina McNamara The Daily Iowan

The list of stores for the new Coral Ridge Mall is almost finished, but many UI students would like to see a few more added to it before construction is completed.

"I would say Foot Locker, but they already have sports stores. I'd also like to see a Gap," said UI junior Jana Rustvold.

"We need an Abercrombie. I'd like to see one there," said UI junior Ed Foley. Ninety-eight percent of the mall space has been committed for merchants who have already signed leases, and new merchants will be announced as leases are signed, said Cyndy Reid, communications manager of General Growth Properties, Inc. of Chicago, the mall's owner.

The Coral Ridge Mall, currently being built at the intersection of Interstate 80 and Iowa Highway 965 and U.S. 6, is expected to be completed in July 1998.

The mall will be anchored by Dillard's, JCPenney, Younkers, Sears and Target. Among the new stores added are:

• Clothing - Skeffington's men's formal wear, and Gadzooks, geared towards teenagers.

• Children - Children's Place for children's clothing; Mind Matters for · Shoes - Tradehome Shoes and

Studying the short term memory and the lack of it

There are very few people who know about the ketchup bottle mistake in "Pulp Fiction." John Travolta and Uma Thurman are talking in the 1950s diner Jack Rabbit Slims. She sips her five-dollar shake, he lights a cigarette, and they chit-chat about nothing in particular.

But if you look closely, the ketchup bottle sitting on the table in front of Thurman mysteriously changes positions and vanishes from shot to shot, a continuity mistake that occurred when the scene was shot and re-shot over a long period of time.

Now Steven Luck, a UI assistant professor of psychology, has discovered why nobody would notice the flaw.

GARRISON, Iowa (AP) - For the past seven months, Michael and Marlene Grimm have grown used to the antics of their turkey flock. By Thanksgiving Day, and to the relief of the Grimms, most of those birds will be on Iowans' dinner tables.

It's no wonder. The turkeys that the Grimms have been raising have been a challenge, roaming just about everywhere — on the couple's cars and even to the neighbor's property a mile and a half away. When that happens, Michael Grimm hitches up a trailer and rounds them up. "They get after grasshoppers in the ditch and keep going," he said. "Last year, it got to the point every day (where) I was going to get them."

From May, when the young birds are big enough to roam outside the warm brooder house, until late November, turkeys rule the Grimms' barnyard.

One group of turkeys learned to flip a switch and dumped a load of feed three times before the Grimms saw them do it. Until then, the couple thought children were the culprits.

The Grimms have raised turkeys for 10 years. The first bunch was five turkey poults delivered free with chicks for a Future

In Mexico, the turkey was a sacrificial bird.

The first feast was celebrated in 1621. In 1863, Sarah Josepha Hale encouraged Abraham Lincoln to set aside the last Thursday in November "as a day for national thanksgiving, praise and prayer."

In the last 20 years, Americans' love of turkey has soared, with per capita consumption up from 8.3 pounds in 1975 to 18.5 pounds in 1995.

In 1994, 2.74 billion pounds of turkeys were processed in the United States.

When your mortality calls very time I am in the shower the phone never fails to ring. Usually I jump out all soapy and dripping to find a wrong number, but one recent shower prompted a salesman to interrupt my scrubbing, to pitch a promotion for cancer-fighting dietary aids.

He read in my last column that I have been diagnosed with dysplasia, or an abnormal cell growth on my cervix and wanted to meet with me to run through information on his product.

I thanked him for his concern but told him he was talking to the wrong person.

"I don't have cancer, yet," I said, trying to keep my hair from soaking the scattered I-Notes on my floor.

He continued citing recovery cases so I gave him my address to send me his schpiel via post. My hot water was running out, as was my patience. I assured him if I didn't get cancer I would pass the information on to someone who did. I was sure someone wouldn't be hard to find: there are about 15,700 new cases of cervical cancer diagnosed annually in the United States - 6 percent of all cancers and 5,000 die of cervical cancer each

> What the salesman did not glean from my article was the cells I have only develop into cervical cancer if left untreated. It is vomen who do not get regular Pap smears who are in the highest risk groups older women, the uninsured, ethnic minorities, and the poor, particularly in rural areas. Rather, he was reacting to the panic I expressed upon finding I could be so close to cancer. I felt like he was ready to jump in and monopolize on the betrayal I felt for my body turning on me, like he called just to remind me of my mortality.

Kati Phillips

But it is comforting to know some women understood what I was saying two weeks ago. My column was taped to a refrigerator with a note that read "Everybody remember to make gynecological appointments!" at one home.

Those women realized the phone calls I received from my nurse and that modern-day medicine man could have interrupted any number of showering women, and have. Dysplasia is not an uncommon condition. However, it is typically misunderstood (if recognized at all).

Take one of my friends as an example. She misconstrued that abnormal cell growth is caused by sleeping around, a rather ridiculous and uniformed conclusion to make, but one that expresses a common victim-blaming sentiment nonetheless.

Unsatisfied with using hearsay for my health education, I went out and bought my first women's health book: The New Our Bodies Ourselves. I figured, I am 21 years old, I have been calling myself a woman for a few years now, it is about time I learn how my body actually works and pass that information on.

I found out that the factors which increase the risk of cervical cancer and the pre-cancer stages are quite broad. Smoking, using birth-control pills, and not always using condoms during sex increases vulnerability. And as for the sleeping-around bit, if a woman starts having sex at an early age - which is defined as before 20 and has multiple partners - more than one - she is more likely to have an abnormality. The more people her lovers have slept with, the higher her risk as well.

This information may not be entirely conclusive, however, because dysplasia has also been diagnosed in nonsmokers and women who have only slept with one person. And none of these circumstances cause abnormalities, they just cause changes which make women more vulnerable to tumors.

HPV or human papilloma virus, the virus that causes warts, has also been linked to cervical cancer. On college campuses HPV is more common than all other STDs combined. Surveys show that at most, 50 percent of students nationwide are infected with one of the 60 strains of the virus, only two of which produce warts, according to Stratis-KPR research. There is no test for this virus and those showing no symptoms can transmit the virus through unprotected sex.

I admit, some of this information is new to me. I was the first to put off medical care until part of me hurt. Until recently I turned my body over to health authorities, just like I turn my car over to mechanics. I believed that doctors (usually male) know more about women's bodies than we can or do - that we don't need to know how to take care of ourselves because we have them to do it for us.

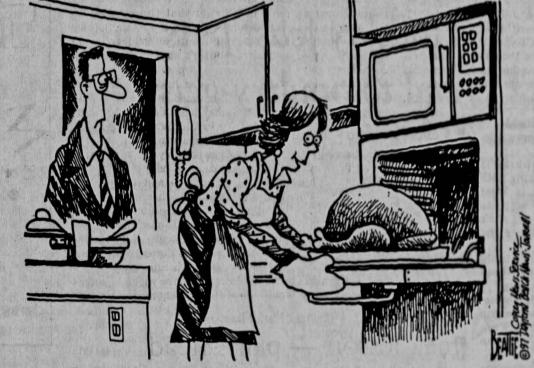

That was a naïve way to think and a careless way to live. There are too many life threatening reasons not to be educated about my own body and to share and learn from other women's experience. I don't want to rely on misconceptions that hold less truth than old wives' tales. Next time the phone rings, I don't want to have to

Letters to the Editor

Reader to Hogberg: Keep your taboo To the Editor:

This letter is in response to David Hogberg's Oct. 16 column, "Re-establishing a taboo society could use." I feel that Mr. Hogberg couldn't be more wrong in his assertion that the best way to reduce the "social malaise" of illegitimacy is to bring back the taboo against it.

First, I believe there still is a taboo against single parents in our society. Look at the buzz a few years ago when 'Murphy Brown" became a single mother. This wasn't just accepted by the public. Even the vice president became involved in reprimanding the television show for its lack of family values. When I hear people talk about the fact a single woman is pregnant, I hear almost disgust in their voices. Talk to most single mothers or fathers and I'm sure they'll be able to provide many examples of discrimination or ill-treatment because of their lack of a spouse.

Second, I believe that Mr. Hogberg needed to explore the reasons for illegitimacy. Nowadays sex is everywhere premarital sex than in the past. The difference is that now instead of having an abortion or giving the child up women are opting to raise the child alone because the man involved will not live up to his responsibility and help out. Either that, or the father becomes a single parent because the mother doesn't want the responsibility. think that raising a child is much better than taking its life just because it is a bastard. Third, I think that Mr. Hogberg should explore what good illegitimate children have done. Instead of trying to relate these children to crime, see how these children have benefited society. Also, the statistics given were not for illegitimate children, but for children coming from single parent households. Even Princes William and Harry can now be included in that category

I think that Mr. Hogberg needs to take a look at his arguments and actually talk to a single mother or father. He may not know it, but somebody he looks up to or one of his friends may be the illegitimate child he wants to regulate or taboo out of existence.

Anxious for Fry's retirement

To the Editor:

readers

There is a hidden culprit to the Tim Dwight rebuttal of the DI writer's criticism of Iowa quarterback Matt Sherman. And that person, sunglasses and all, is Coach Hayden Fry.

Bob Panther

Iowa City resident

For years, I have been watching Fry manipulate the sports media with his

"psychological" b.s. He has long loved the Iowa sports media who kiss his butt (i.e. Jim Zabel), and lashed out at any members who ever dare criticize the all-powerful Fry. That in itself is bad enough, but now Fry is teaching his players that it's okay to lash back and intimidate the sports media (verbally and with an undertone of physical threat). Fry provides the role modeling saying things like: "Now what else you got, before I reach out and grab ahold of somebody?" I would like to remind Fry of the First Amendment and Freedom of Speech, and also of the fact my 12-year-old niece could kick his ass

I have a suggestion for Fry. Stop picking on and intimidating young sports journalists of a college newspaper and take on the national publication, The Sporting News. This weekly publication has been berating Fry for the past couple years for his cupcake football schedule, and his "hokeypokey" nonsense. The Oct. 20 issue before the Michigan game stated: "Hmmm ... two legitimate foes, two

In its "Caught on the Fly" column, The Sporting News has lambasted Fry more than once for continually being thrashed in big games, and that a real national-champion caliber coach in Bobby Stoops (Florida's brilliant defensive coordinator) is waiting in the wings to take command at lowa. I, for one, look forward to that day.

End muzak now To the Editor:

Hear, hear for Betty McCollister's notes on the pernicious effects of muzak on the cultural environment. I take exception, however, to McCollister's indiscriminate lumping of all musical forms not classical with the soul-deadening effects of these canned, bland elevator tunes.

The measure of any good music is its staying power: Will you be able to listen to that music, unembarrassed, twenty years from now? Or will your embarrassment be mitigated by the haze of nostalgia, your once vital sounds now denominated "golden oldies" for your pre-geriatric sensibilities? Or - worse yet - will that music come back to haunt you as the undead, achieving a dubious immortality via the shopping mall sound system? By contrast, much jazz, some rock and most classical forms are immune from muzakial depredations, since they require longer attention spans, and cannot be effectively reduced to 90-second snippets.

Muzak is unique among musical "forms" in that it is essentially formless, and totally void of all original content. Instead muzak merely vampirizes other forms, sucking their lifeblood and homogenizing them into mindless pap, where there is no distinction to be made between "Eleanor Rigby" and the Bach St. Matthew Passion. Stepford music. Positively Transylvanian. May a stake be driven through its unbeating heart.

The world needs more cornea donations

To the Editor:

After reading the article, "Coroner will ask permission to remove corneas from bodies," I felt as though the people who are doing this are not immoral, but are rather giving to a good cause. It may seem like a terrible thing to do - to remove corneas without permission, but many people are benefiting from this

How many families are not going to give their permission to donate the corneas? Very few. Those who do not are selfish and think that others should not have the chance to see. What are they going to do with the corneas oth-

If someone removed the corneas from one of my relatives who recently passed away without permission, I would not be upset. This would make me appreciate the fact that I helped someone in need. I would not see this person as "repugnant" but rather as a hero. It's not like they are selling them on the black market in order to make a

Stand up for Kramer

To the Editor:

Over the last couple of weeks, I have been following the controversy surrounding The Daily Iowan's sports writer James Kramer and Hawkeye quarterback Matt Sherman. And I have been waiting for someone to stand up for Kramer as Tim Dwight and Hayden Fry did for Sherman.

So, I would like to congratulate the editor of DI, Matt Snyder, for backing Kramer's opinions by writing "Defending Kramer's right to criticize." (DI, Nov. 4)

Snyder's insight to this situation makes it clear that Kramer is doing something that he loves to do, which, in the long run will make him a better journalist as well as a better person, just as Matt Sherman's unfortunate game and current situation will make him a better quarterback and individual.

Snyder's article puts this episode in a perspective that both parties should be able to appreciate and agree upon. So hats of to you, Mr. Snyder, for backing up your criticizing journalist. Better a little late than never.

Kaczynski juror questions civic duty

■ A prospective juror confronted the suspected Unabomber: 'Did you do

> By Linda Deutsch Associated Press

SACRAMENTO, Calif. - A prospective juror who claimed to nothing about the Unabomber case sat with her mouth agape Monday as she heard the charges against Theodore Kaczynski, then stared at him and gasped, "Did you do that?"

Kaczynski sat still, staring at the woman but showing no reaction.

The woman had just been asked by Kaczynski's lawyer, Judy Clarke, how she would feel about imposing the death penalty on a person who mailed bombs with the intent of killing the recipients.

The woman then turned to

The unusually combative jury candidate repeatedly asked the lawyers for explanations, rather than giving answers. She was allowed to remain on the tentative jury panel despite her declaration that "I don't want to be on this case."

"I don't know anything about it. I don't want to know anything about it," she said.

The woman said she purposely

Kaczynski was identified as the most likely suspect by his brother, David, who has since come into conflict with the government over Attorney General Janet Reno's decision to seek the death penalty if Kaczynski is convicted.

David Kaczynski has said he was assured that his brother would be treated as a mentally ill person and was dismayed to learn that prosecutors were trying to prove him sane and wanted to execute him.

David Kaczynski's lawyer said Monday his client has left his home to Sacramento.

"He's on his way, driving 3,000 miles cross-country to save his brother," said Washington, D.C., attorney Anthony Bisceglie.

Defense attorney Quin Denvir said outside court Monday that his client had not yet been approached on the in upstate New York and is driving subject. He said they would seek an answer after prosecutors specify the tests they want to administer.

The warrant was sealed for 60 days by court order Sept. 23. Sealing a warrant is not something that happens often, said Linda Paulson, assistant Johnson County attorney. The state sealed the warrant in this case because investigators felt its release would impair the investigation.

Luck's research has shown what movie editors have known for years that a person's working memory has a surprisingly small capacity.

Working memory is the memory used over a period of about a few seconds to do a specific task. Luck's findings show that people can only hold an average of four objects in their visual working-memory.

"There's no way we can store everything we see," he said. The results of Luck's year-long study were published in the Nov. 20 issue of the journal Nature, in a paper he wrote with Edward K. Vogel, a UI graduate student in Luck's study is the first of its kind on visual working-memory.

When I first started getting interested in it, I just wanted to know one simple thing: What is the capacity of visual working-memoty? How many objects can you hold in it at one time?" Luck said.

Luck presented his subjects an array of colored objects, took it away for 0.9 of a second, and then showed it to them again. The sec-ond array was either identical, or one object had changed.

Luck said when there were only two or three objects, people general-ly were able to identify the changes, but the more objects in the array, the more difficult it was for his subjects to figure out what had changed.

research purposes but could be used for practical applications 20 to 50 years down the road. "The sort of situations where this could be relevant is things like the design of road systems," he said. We have very serious limitations

Luck said his study is for about what we can hold in our mind, so we could design road sys-tems that don't overload our work-ing memory. We could apply this to the information on the dashboard of a car or the cockpit of a jet." Many UI students said their own short-term memory could use some

"If it involves remembering num-bers, then I suck," said UI junior Janna Tibben. "I think my short-term memory has decreased since I came to college."

"I do well on tests, but I don't remember anything after that," said UI junior Carrie Tews.

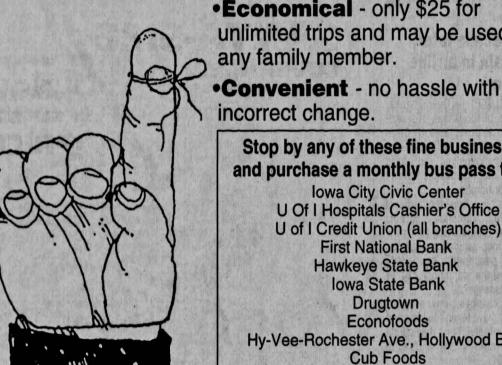

"I have a crappy memory," he said. But Luck also said that while there are inexorable limitations in how many objects can be stored in working memory, what counts as an object can change with practice.

"A good example is if I showed you a chessboard, took the pieces away, and asked you where the pieces were. You would have no idea. But a grand-master chess player would have no problem," he said. "And it's not that they have a greater memory capacity, but that they see the organization. They don't see each individual piece, but groups of pieces in recognizable formations."

Luck's next step is to study the process of getting the information into working memory, something relatively slow by brain standards.

"It takes you one-fifth of a second to see a complicated picture and figure out what it is. And then once you figure it out, it could take just as long or longer to retain that information," he said. "But you would think it would be the other way around, that figuring it out would take longer than placing it in working memory."

"We've got to play two games before we can even talk about that," Osborne said Mon-

"Michigan's already in the clubhouse as they say in the pro-golf tour."

The Cornhuskers are preparing for a road game against Colorado this Saturday and then a shot at their first Big 12 title in the conference championship game against Texas A&M the week after Il Nebraska wins both games, it likely will face No. 3 Tennessee in the Orange Bowl. Under the Bowl Alliance, the two highest ranked teams in the nation will face off in Miami except the Big 10 champion (Michigan) and the Pac 10 champion (Washington State). Those two teams are excluded because of conference contracts with the Rose Bowl that require them to play each other on New Year's Day.

That means, if Michigan wins the Rose Bowl. the Wolverines will almost certainly to be crowned the national champion - even if Nebraska ends the season unbeaten. Never before has a No. 1 team won a bowl game and then been demoted in the year's final

If it comes to that, Osborne said Monday he would like the dispute to be settled on the field with a Nebraska-Michigan game. If that is not possible?

"Why don't we flip a coin," Osborne sug-

Ditka takes back his demands of retirement NEW ORLEANS (AP) - Not so fast. One day after suggesting he might be through with coaching, Mike Ditka says he intends to stay with the New Orleans Saints "until they run me out of this town.

Ditka, 12 games and eight losses into his first season with the Saints, said his threat to quit after the season — uttered after a 20-3 loss Sunday to the Atlanta Falcons — was borne by frustration with losing and with an offense is ranked dead last in the NFL.

"I signed a three-year contract in February, and I plan to fulfill that contract and, the good Lord willing, beyond that contract," Ditka said Monday afternoon. "There's nowhere else I want to be or anything else I want to do than be here and try to make a change, try to help, try to make this get to where we think it

Ditka called his comments following the loss in Atlanta stupid, admitting he reached a new level of frustration with his team. He regretted his comments later, however, and vowed he'd stick it out.

BASEBALL Blue Jays choose 'other Johnson' as manager

TORONTO (AP) — The Toronto Blue Jays hired the other Johnson as their manager. Tim Johnson, a minor league manager and former Toronto shortstop, was given a two-year contract Monday to succeed Cito

Gaston as manager of the Blue Jays. "The key here is that he's going to connect and communicate with his players," said Toronto Gord Ash, who also had former Orioles manager Davey Johnson, broadcaster

Buck Martinez and former Padres manager

Larry Bowa among his finalists. "I think a lot of the problems that can develop in the clubhouse and on the team are the result of the lack of communication," Ash

Davey Johnson interviewed with Ash after resigning as manager of the Orioles on Nov.

"Davey has an excellent track record," Ash said. "But we wanted our manager to be here for a while. I didn't get that feeling with Dav-

Broncos pummel AFC West rival

Denver avenges an early-season defeat with a 31-3 win over the Oakland Raiders.

DENVER (AP) - It was payback time, big-time, for the Denver Broncos.

With John Elway, Shannon were on Denver's side. Sharpe and Terrell Davis doing the damage, the Broncos avenged an early-season defeat by routing the Oakland Raiders 31-3 Monday night.

Elway completed 21 of 32 passes for 280 yards and a touchdown. Sharpe had 10 receptions for 142 yards, and Davis ran for 69 yards and three scores Denver (10-2) maintained its on its first three possessions of one-game lead over Kansas City in the AFC West, while rout. the Raiders (4-8) appeared headed for their fourth straight non-playoff season. The Broncos lost in Oakland inside their 20-yard line.

HEADLINER Olajuwon will miss eight-to-10 weeks

spokesman Tim Frank. Team doctors Bruce Moseley and Walter Lowe performed the 30-minute procedure to remove some tissue in the knee joint. Olajuwon spent the night at the hospital, but was expected to be discharged Tuesday morning, then to begin rehabilitation. "We'll be happy if he's back by the All-Star

Olajuwon

The All-Star break is Feb. 5-8. If Olajuwon were to not return then, he would have missed 35 games.

The 34-year-old center has been off his game all season, averaging only 14.8 points on 48-percent shooting — well below his career numbers of 24 points and 52 percent.

He complained about pain in his left knee following Saturday's 90-84 victory over Golden State, during which he went 4-for-14 from the field and scored just 9 points.

rehabilitation for the injury caused by wear and tear. They decided to operate after Olajuwon underwent an MRI examination Sunday, "It's definitely time to get this thing fixed," Lowe said.

Olajuwon said Saturday soreness in his knees normally subsides after the exhibition season, but

Hawks, Irish may pull a switch

■ lowa, which appears to be headed back to the Sun Bowl, may opt out of the game if Notre Dame decides to fill in.

By Mike Triplett The Daily Iowan

The Iowa Hawkeyes have expressed some disinterest in a return trip to a Texas bowl game, and they might get their wish. Sun Bowl representative John Folmer made it clear - several times - that his bowl game would love to pit Iowa against No. 21 Washington. But he said if Iowa wants out, Notre Dame could fill in to soften the blow.

because Iowa has indicated they wanted to go elsewhere," Folmer said. "I think that out. If Iowa wants to go somewhere else, everybody's trying to help them."

The Sun Bowl, which will be - which will be all but guaranheld Dec. 31, in El Paso, Texas, teed if Penn State defeats has an agreement with the Big Ten Conference that could be broken if the bowl agrees, the eligible Big Ten teams agree and the Big Ten office agrees.

Iowa Athletics Director Bob Bowlsby said it is fair to say the Sun Bowl is Notre Dame's first choice. But Bowlsby hesitated to say an agreement is a strong possibility.

"I don't know that I would "The only reason we have any characterize it as likely," Bowlsby interest in Notre Dame is said. "It has some potential, but we will pursue the opportunities as they present themselves." Iowa, which will finish sixth

But Iowa played in El Paso in 1995, then played in San Antonio, Texas, in 1996. And Bowlsby earlier said it would likely be in everyone's best interest if Iowa avoided a third straight trip to Texas.

If Iowa does not return to the Sun Bowl, it will become a free agent of sorts. Bowls that have expressed interest include the Insight.com Bowl, Dec. 27 in Tuscon, Ariz., and the Independence Bowl, Dec. 28 in Shreveport, La.

lowa senior and former national champion Jeff McGinness returns to the mat and hopes to return to glory following a redshirt year.

> By James Kramer The Daily Iowan

Jeff McGinness confidently enters the Iowa wrestling room these days. He can go to practice, push himself hard and finish as strong as he started.

No longer is staying under 126 pounds the only thing that matters. McGinness, now at 142 pounds, has enough stamina to work on technique and improve.

"Two years ago, I don't think he ever finished a practice," Iowa coach Jim Zalesky said. "This year, he's finished every practice. You can just tell he's determined." The McGinness of 1997-98 looks like a giant compared to his 1995-96 self. The Iowa City City High graduate is two weight classes above his former division. National champion Mark Ironside is Iowa's 134-pound wrestler.

"Day by day, I've been able to concentrate and get the most out of practice," McGinness said. "In previous years, had to concentrate more on making 126 and not as much on wrestling."

It's been well over a year since McGinness suffered his humiliating setback at the 1996 NCAA Championships. One year after winning an NCAA title, McGinness failed to place even in the top eight as a junior. His energy-deprived body had outgrown the 126-pound division.

McGinness redshirted last season, partly to help the team this season but mostly to regroup. Iowa struggled but eventually ness will try to make a little history of his own. No Hawkeye wrestler has won an NCAA title in one weight class, then moved up two classes and won again.

McGinness watched in street clothes as his teammates made histo-

If ever a wrestler was in a position to set such a precedent, it is McGinness. First of all, only two All-Americans return at 142 - top-ranked Jason Davids of Minnesota (third last at times without him in the lineup, year) and No. 2 Steven Schmidt of Oklahoma State

MEN'S BASKETBALL LIU's Parker deserved a second chance

In a college basketball game, then is no in between. You either win o you lose, Period.

But when you look beyond the gam and into the eyes of the players, that distinction becomes blurred.

Richie Take Parker for example. Parker will walk onto the court of Carver-Hawkeve Arena Saturday evening wearing his blue and white jersey for Long Island University and carrying a 26 point scoring average. Last season, in his first year at Long Island, he averaged 16.1 points per game for season - and is expected to build upon this season - seems to be the textbook definition of a winner. But there's more to that meaning

No. 20 Iowa returns to the site of its 1997 season-ending loss when it plays at No. 3 Connecticut tonight. By Wayne Drehs The Daily Iowan

The long walk out of the dressing room onto the floor at Gampel Pavilion will have a much different feel for the Iowa women's basketball team today than it did last May.

It was that stadium's home team, Connecticut, and more than 8,000 boisterous fans that sent ended the Hawkeyes' season last year with a 72-53 defeat in the NCAA Tournament.

to the Elite Eight, where they were eliminated by eventual champ Tennesse

While some of the names and faces have changed since the nationally televised game last year, one thing is certain: these teams are building quite a rivalry. The Hawkeyes beat Connecticut in 1995, a loss Huskie coach Gene Auriemma said helped catapult his team to its first national title. And after last year's UConn win, it's clear anything can and probably will happen in the rubber match of the series.

"When you are on top, the thing is everybody wants to bring you down," Iowa coach Angie Lee said. "And we want to do that to them.'
