UI BRIEF UI researcher works to unlock the mysteries of deafness

A mutated gene responsible for as many as seven in 100 cases of deafness was discovered by an international research team that includes UI geneticist Val Sheffield.

As a result of the discovery scientists may be able to diagnose and develop tests for people who are at risk for the syndrome

Sheffield, who is an associate professor of pediatrics in the UI College of Medicine and a Howard Hughes Medical Institute pator, said the discovery could help some 140,000 Americans who have the disease even though it doesn't give scientists an immediate treatment or cure.

This is the first important step toward a better understanding of the basic mechanisms by which people hear and why people with this syndrome are deaf," Sheffield said.

The finding was reported by the National Human Genome Research Institute at the Vational Institutes of Health on Monday The three-way collaboration was led by Eric Green of the institute and also included njamin Glaser of Hadassah University

The gene, which is located on Chromosome 7, produces pendrin, a protein involved in the development of the inner ear. If there is a mutation of the gene, the pendrin produced is defective and causes the inner ear to develop improperty.

This usually occurs shortly after birth and causes permanent deafness in the individual with the disease

He says he has enjoyed his time at the UI but admits the job has its drawbacks, with huge fund-raising responsibilities and constant changes in UI administration.

"The most troublesome part is fund raising and minute bureaucratic budgets," he said. "While I have been here, there have been three University presidents, three deans of art and two provosts. I have to continue to redefine the program for people who don't know about it, and I have to reinvent the program about every two years."

However. Blaise said he sees the program as an extremely resilient one that brings in many writers, a broad base of monetary support and a greater integration of international students to the UI.

Reno won't call independent counsel

■ Janet Reno has rejected independent counsels for Clinton, Gore and O'Leary.

WASHINGTON - Attorney General Janet Reno declined Tuesday seek an independent counsel investigation of telephone fund raising by President Clinton and Vice President Al Gore, saying their actions were outside the scope of federal election law.

Under strong pressures for months from all sides, Reno said, "The decision was mine and it was based on the facts and the law,

She also rejected a special prosecutor to investigate former Energy Secretary Hazel O'Leary, concluding that O'Leary was unaware that a contribution to one of her favorite charities may have been solicited in return for her meeting Chinese business people.

In her explanation, Reno said Clinton's fund-raising calls in October 1994 were made from the White House private quarters, not the president's offices. "This places the calls outside the scope ... of (federal election law) which applies only to solicitations for hard-money contributions hen Bill Maxwell was 10 years old he got his first home gym set with plastic weights. Now, he's 29 and weights are still what his life is about.

Maxwell is the UI head strength coach at Carver-Hawkeye Arena, responsible for weight programs for 20 different athletic teams from basketball to swimming.

"I always enjoyed lifting weights," said Maxwell, thinking back to his student days at University of East Carolina, when he played college football and pushed his six-footthree body through countless strength conditioning programs.

Now, his workouts are part of his job, Maxwell said.

"It's kind of an experiment. Before I can introduce new exercises to the teams I have to try them myself," he said.

However, there's not too much time left in Maxwell's daily schedule to work with the shiny bars in front of the mirrors in Carver's basement himself.

Usually, he gets up at 6 a.m. to be on time for the first team women's basketball - scheduled for 7 a.m..

If a team is in season, they will practice less than an hour, but if they are not in season, the work- your shoulders.

outs run much longer. But no matter what kind of program is scheduled, no one gets around warming up with the medicine ball.

Giant loops, wood chopper, passes to a partner - these are only few exercises out of an entire program to break a first sweat.

Then the athletes replace the medicine balls with bars, and that's what Maxwell's strength program is all about.

"My philosophy is to use free weights to train multiple movements and coordination the different sports require," he explained. When he arrived at Carver-Hawkeye Arena this July to start his first year on the job, his first action was to remodel the whole weight room, Maxwell recalled. replacing weight machines with eight sets of bars and weight discs. "All these weight machines they had before were each focused on one specific movement," he criticized. "With bars and weights, however, you have much more options

(for different exercises)." So all teams - from golf to gymnastics to field hockey and rowing usually start with Maxwell's favorite exercise: It's the squat, a deep knee-bend with weights on

"It develops leg strength, your hamstrings, the quadriceps and the gluteus maximus along with the strengthening the lower back and abdominal region," he said, "and this is what a lot of sports is about." In his fittest days, Maxwell said he carried 700 pounds on his shoulders to do this exercise. Asked about his current shape, he just started to laugh, regardless of his muscular legs and broad shoulders.

"I don't know." However, Maxwell knows better ways to motivate his athletes than telling them about his achievements.

"What I teach can easily be seen helping with the athletic performance," he said. "And the athletes motivate themselves when they see progress in exercise they weren't able to do at all three weeks prior."

So, Maxwell doesn't count every single repetition his athletes are asked to do before he closes the weight room between five and six in the evening, but relies on the athletes' and their coaches' sense of responsibility.

"The teams I like best are those with a supportive coach," he said. "One who demands that athletes participate in a program even if it's uncomfortable and helps them to LINCOLN, Neb. - Strapped in the electric chair, Robert E. Williams sought forgiveness Tuesday from the band of one of the three women he killed in a three-day, three-state rampage. A few minutes later, he denched his fists as the first of four deadly jolts struck.

'I'm sorry Mr. Rowe. I love you, brother," a calm and composed Williams said to Wayne Rowe, a 75year-old retired farmer who discovered his wife's bloody body at the couple's Iowa home in 1977.

Rowe, who was one of 10 official execution witnesses, waved back to Williams and later said he accepted the apology

"I felt relaxed. The book is closed. This chapter is finally ended," Rowe said. "Now we can go on with our lives.'

Williams, 61, was pronounced dead at 10:23 a.m., six minutes after the first jolt of electricity was delivered.

It was the first daytime execution and the first execution to be witnessed by a victim's relative since Nebraska resumed carrying out the death penalty in 1994.

Williams, who grew up in Indiana, was sentenced to death for murdering Catherine Brooks and would end.

Students to address dean

■ Ten UI students will bring student concerns to the College of Liberal Arts Dean Linda Maxson.

By Kelley Chorley The Daily Iowan

For the first time on the UI campus, 10 UI students will discuss concerns and potential improvements for the College of Liberal Arts tonight.

The College of Liberal Arts (CLA) Dean Linda Maxson chose 10 out of the 19 applicants to participate in the Student's Deans Advisory Committee, which will give students a chance to voice the problems concerning the CLA.

"There is no other student group serving this college," she said. "We need to discuss what issues are present and those concerns."

The first meeting will bring discussion about the college's support of student activities, honors notations being permanent fixtures on student's records and the availability of computers. The first meeting won't bring any immediate changes but will start working towards a specific agenda.

"I would like to see the availability and access to computers improve," said UI junior Annie Chiang. "I joined because I thought it would be interesting to voice my opinion and see what students want to get done."

In hopes of making improvements in the college, Maxson said this committee will implement the changes they discuss, not produce more written reports.

"It is not my intention to make reports," she said. "If the concern is shared by both the students and faculty, change will be implemented."

Maxson started a similar advisory committee at the University of Tennessee before she came to. the UI. The committee limited: the amount of student fee's through their student advisory committee.

The members range from sophomores to graduate students and traditional to non-traditional students. Maxson said she hopes more students will participate in the committee as they make their mark on campus.

Freshman seminars offer discussions, not tests

■ Ul freshmen can enroll in classes to discuss anything from dinosaurs to the ethics of friendship, starting in January.

> By Cori Zarek The Daily Iowan

Next semester, UI students will have the opportunity to learn about the science of "Jurassic Park" or about physician -assisted suicide without taking any tests and quizzes, and they'll get credit for it. What's the catch? The seminars are only offered to freshmen.

Fifteen new courses will be offered spring semester for UI freshmen. Each course will be limited to 15 students and taught by a tenured or tenure-track professor, said UI Economics Professor John Solow, chair of the first-year seminar program committee.

"The seminars will be taught on academic topics," he said. "It's a chance to explore an interesting topic with no tests and no quizzes." The seminars, worth either one of topics, such as the science of sports and moral order and improving society. Students are required to obtain a registration code in order to sign up for the classes.

"Some (topics) are pretty neat," Solow said. "We have some of the faculty saying, 'Boy I wish I could take that.

To UI freshman Tracy Ziemann, the seminars sound like an easy way to get credit.

"It's just discussion," she said. "You don't have to worry about tests or studying. It's less stressful."

First-year seminars are common at colleges and universities around the country, Solow said. The UI's program was modeled after programs from other major universities, such as the program at the University of South Carolina-Columbia, he said.

There are different versions out. The majority are 'College 101' courses," he said. "The model we picked is the 'Harvard model.' They sort of invented it.'

The courses are not intended to

"It's all participation with some projects and maybe some short papers," he said. "It's a chance for students to read and learn and talk to a professor in a small group."

With the absence of formal exams, course work will consist of discussion with some courses involving activities outside of class such as reading, visiting labs and museums or watching films, Solow said.

"There are some big-name people from the faculty," he said. "For a freshman to take a course with Professor Kurtz in law is a treat."

The seminars are a great idea, according to UI Professor of Law Sheldon Kurtz, who will be teaching a seminar titled "Physician Assisted Suicide. "I wanted to offer a seminar on a topic of current national interest," he said. "This will give freshmen the opportunity to think on one of the views of the day."

infections in Iowa is somewhere in the neighborhood of three times the number of diagnosed AIDS cases - around 4,000.

Infection rates are highest among people who are 15 to 24, Yanney said, and the majority of college students test confidentially.

"That makes perfect sense because that's when people are most sexually active and have a higher number of partners and contacts," Yanney said.

When young people find out they are HIV positive, there is more to deal with than just the realization of the disease.

Counselors encourage HIV patients to tell previous partners and find a support system which many times means telling family members things they may not want to hear.

"It's not just telling your family that you're infected with HIV, but it may also be telling them that you're gay as well, so it's a double hit," Yanney said. "For women and some heterosexual men to some extent too, it might be admitting to behaviors that you'd rather they didn't know. For young people, it they find out."

Although 587 Iowans have died from AIDS since 1984, counselors make it a point to tell patients that having HIV is not an immediate death sentence, said Joanna Shade, a case manager for the Iowa Center for AIDS Resources and Education (ICARE).

"My background isn't medical, so I can't give a lot of medical advice," she said. "But I try and tell them that a lot of people experience change, but they still participate in many of the activities that they did before. We mostly just let people talk and that's what I'm here for. Just sometimes normalizing whatever they're feeling."

Davis, an HIV advanced practice nurse at the UI Hospitals and Clinics said there is no one formula she uses to help people with

"It's very individualized," Davis said. "Some call in often, some are on automatic pilot. People go through periods with the disease, especially at the beginning, which is the crisis time. Their whole social situation may change when

Watching the currents of society's change

t is difficult to separate ourselves from the influence of contemporary opinion. Events come and go, usually without commentary or even thought. These events, together with the voices of radio and television coalesce to form a perceptual stasis known as "the way things are."

Occasionally, people will take note of the fact that the way things are now is different from the way they used to be. For example, when I came to the UI in 1994, e-mail accounts were not widespread among students. Since that year, the server capacity at Weeg has been expanded many times, and professors routinely invite students to e-mail them with questions. The change has been rapid, but not so fast as would provoke the DI to headline the change in the number of e-mail accounts. Thus the transition occurs, and years later one hardly remembers what it was like without e-mail.

Technological change is relatively quantifiable, and therefore it can be noticed and agreed upon. Ideological change, by contrast, is slow and difficult to measure, such that majority opinion is like an ice-scarcely swayed by the currents of unrest and opposition.

It takes a long historical view to chart the course of an iceberg, but if one looks back far enough, it can be reasonably attempted. Brian Sutherland another example, slavery

and indentured servitude were once held to be natural components of a just society, and now quite the opposite is true.

The ancient Greeks may have had a democracy, but is was only a democracy for land-owning males. Over time, and in many nations, religious, financial, gen- prised respiratory systems. der, and racial barriers were gradually discarded in favor of a more inclusive regime. It would seem, then, that a pattern of extending rights and privileges to all

In predicting the future, shall we extend the pattern? Today's "oppressed" group is homosexuals. Homosexual unions are condemned by the Church, and unrecognized by the State. Given the apparent tendency to gravitate towards equal rights, I would be willing to bet that the future holds greater acceptance for these people.

On other fronts, the path is not so clear. It would be presumptuous to argue that rights have been extended to everyone equally, and now it is only left for persons to make the most of their opportunities. And yet we have come to the point where equality among groups, however they may be defined, is acknowledged. Nowadays, political correctness is reduced to the art of dealing with individual differences.

Shall it be argued that individuals with many skills should earn the same amount of money as the individual with no practical skills? If you answer yes, you are a communist. If you answer no, then you concede that some people are better at some things than others. Of course, these statements must be accompanied by the disclaimer that financial success is not a perfect indicator of ability. To say that it is would be to assume that, one, the only thing people care about is money; two, the capitalist system is perfectly efficient, and, three, everyone begins with the same opportunities.

It spite of these troublesome details, it is obvious that differences exist which can only be attributed to individual competence, or lack thereof. And so, what does equality mean in our post-modern age?

Well, I say that it remains to be seen. It is a question for which any answer will be speculative, since post-modernism doesn't have much of track record. But it is still interesting to weigh some of the answers which emerge from academia and elsewhere.

The authors of "The Bell Curve," Richard Hernstein and Charles Murray, sounded off on the topic of intelligence three years ago. Among their provocative claims was the statement that some people just don't have the genetic ability to conquer difficult problems. Murray quoted Isaac Asimov when he said, "You know you've hit a wall when you hear yourself saying to the professor, 'I think I understand."

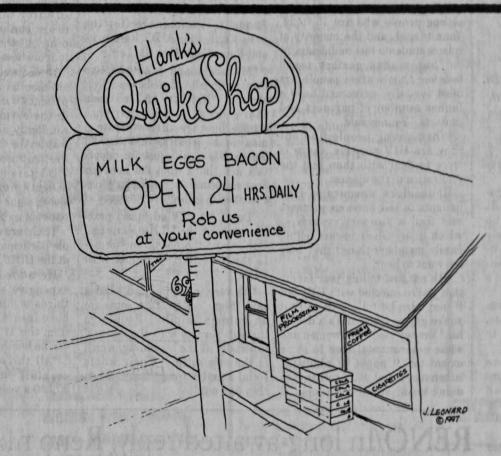

Have these gentlemen revolutionized contemporary notions of equality? It is doubtful. They are but one voice. Only if others embrace what they have to say will they have a significant impact. Presently, enough people question "The Bell Curve," so that currents that would move the iceberg come from both directions, and cancel each other out. This issue, like so many others, will be a long time in debate, and it may will perpetuate the ideological rift, rather than close it.

Defining the role of public health

Ling, Iowa City remains at the core of an infectious Hot Zone.

A whooping cough epidemic has swept through our fair city, leaving 90 residents of all ages, vocations, and social strata ill. Symptoms include vomiting, severe fatigue, and, of course, the whoop-like cough as lungs try to rid themselves of their clear, sticky mucus. Pertussis (whooping cough's official name) is highly contagious through the air for five weeks from the onset of infection and two weeks before the coughing even begins. Adults have no immunity as the pertussis vaccine is effective only for children, and death is possible for infants and those with com-pitalized with it, and investigators from the national Center for Disbeen in town at the request of concerned state officials.

For example, if there's a report of a serious outbreak of infectious disease, it's the government's job to surveil it. If records of childhood immunizations need to be kept, it the government's job to keep them.

However, if someone who can't afford health insurance or hospital bills needs care, the government keeps away in most cases. I entered the Greek system myself that winter, a system that part of me is still afraid of. I went to the fraternity parties, I saw people getting sick and passing out. It seemed like one death wouldn't change a thing. I was afraid, as my next boyfriend pledged at Purdue, images of Matt haunting me as he told me of fraternity life.

So, here I am, a junior deeply involved in my own Greek system, and deeply dedicated to what I think it should be. It hurts me to know that, for the most part, what people say about it is true... it is what the system has become. People have a tendency to focus on the negative, and in situations such as this, rightly so. No one, especially someone who loves their house as much as I do, should have a fear, however small, of what may happen.

At Northwestern, we have strived in the past few months to go back to our roots as fraternities — why we were founded. Unfortunately, every few days it seems that we hear of another death or injury due to alcohol on campus, most involving Greek without moving with the times. You have my support and great thanks, however small, but more importantly, I am sure that you have support all over the country. We all may go to different schools, but events can affect us all. Matt's death and your subsequent move to make things right affect systems and individuals all over. For those of you at lowa who are not a part of the system, I urge your support for this deci sion. It takes a lot of guts to go against the status quo. My Northwestern pride may not want me to say this- but I really want to thank lowa and its Greek system for making such an outstanding move. Thanks.

In response to the editorial, "UI won't have Greeks to kick around," (DI, Nov. 3) how could the UI ever think of holding the Greek system responsible for its actions? (That's sarcasm. For frat. boys, that means I'm joking.)

Please show me when and where you have been wrongfully blamed for the entire campus' drinking dilemma. As I see it, justice has been served with the UI's decision. Greeks are not the scapegoat for all drinking problems on campus, nor is the UI community saying they are sorry for Matthew Garofalo's death. The Greeks are being held accountable for their inability to manage the use of alcohol amongst themcekes. The reason the finger is being pointed at Greeks is because the Zeeks are at fault.

Beardsley uses faulty logic with Ped Mall tree

Thank goodness that Kriston Beardsey ("Treegate' Strikes the Pedestrian Mall,* Nov. 20), is railing against those the "bring scorn and ridicule to our bircity" by questioning the wisdom of fan Mall. (Oops, I mean a "holiday tree.") By simply replacing the word 'Christmas' with "holiday," Beardsley has shown us how easy it is to disasso-gion it generally represents. That's an amazing feat of logic, and I'd like to nominate Beardsley, here and now, for a spot on the City Council.

He'd be in good company with Dean Thornberry, who rationalizes his support for the tree by stating that "we should be encouraging things that promote family values, not stopping them" (quoted from "To Tree or Not to Tree, DI, Nov. 19). Well I'd never thought of it that way before - yes, of course we need a "holiday tree" on the Pedestrian Mall, for the sake of our

And although I at first missed the exact connection between families and a decorative tree, Beardsley thankfully set me straight. The tree's purpose, he writes, is "to boost the spirit of the holidays (and possibly sales) by beautifying the area." Only here's where I get just the slightest bit confused: which 'holidays" is he talking about? Which "holidays" are so intertwined with sales that they require us to spruce up the downtown area for six weeks out of the year? Which "holidays" are connected with the "family values" of spending that I'm supposed to promote by oohing and aahing over an evergreen strung with lights?

But I don't want to think too hard about all this, because that might earn me the scorn that Beardsley heaps upon the "politically correct." Better just to accept the generic adjective "holiday" and pretend that there is no difference at all between Christmas and Hanukkah, no reason to do anything more than shop and spend and rally behind the Pedestrian Mall tree. Thank goodness for Kriston Beardsley; without his intelligent column, I might still be satisfied with the beautifully decorated trees that actually grow on the Pedestrian Mall.

Seeing the current Holocausts

To the Editor:

In Bosnia, "ethnic cleansing" has become the euphemism for rapes committed by the military, mass graves, and concentration camps. The United Nations has identified at least 16 rape camps in Bosnia, where an estimated 60,000 Bosnian and Croatian women and children have been raped by Serbian forces. Recently, 87 bodies were recovered in a mass grave near Bihac, consisting of Muslim civilians trapped and murdered by Serbians as they tried to flee. According to The Washington Post, school children in the Muslim- and Croat-controlled half of Bosnia are now segregated by ethnic group, proving that even public institutions are enforcing ethnic separatism. Lastly, according to the Serb Civic Council, more than 30,000 Bosnian Serb refugees say their only wish is to return to their sure Mrs. McCollister agrees that today's generation needs to learn from the past. We now know of the ovens and gas chambers in Germany during WWII. Today, we have the opportunity to know of similar atrocities in Bosnia as they happen. There is no excuse for apathy.

History is the tool by which we can look back on failure and try to avoid the same path in the future. Someday, if history teaches us well, we can live in a world without such unconscionable "ethnic cleansing" and unite under the motto, "Never Again."

Readers Prop. 209 statements misleading To the Editor:

This is a response to a letter by John Carver regarding California's Proposition 209 (DI, Nov. 17). In his letter, Mr. Carver makes some statements that from my perspective are misleading if not downright inaccurate. As a former Californian, and as a person who taught remedial math classes at California State University at Chico for three years I do believe I have relevant experience in addressing Mr. Carver's statements. Mr. Carver said that the primary reason that minority students do so poorly in entering the university system is that they come from single family homes and therefore lack the discipline to do well in school. One of the questions I asked all of my remedial students, of which only a half were minority, was why they thought they had trouble in school. The overwhelming answer was not their parent, or in many cases parents, but the educators they experienced from kindergarten through high school.

Each student could recall one or more teachers that turned them off to education because the teacher felt the student was not capable either because of the color of their skin (racism in liberal California? You bet!) or because of choices the students made (one girl decided to become a cheerleader because her advisor was

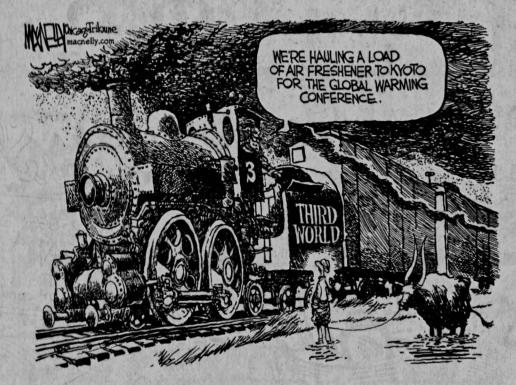

Minority students were told they didn't need to take the more challenging classes because they were just going to have lots of babies and why would they need a college degree for that? Imagine, educators denying opportunities, or refusing to write letters of recommendation for college because they felt the student inferior.

The other side of this issue is the inequities in funding between neighborhood schools. I do not think you will find the same quality of materials at a Los Angeles Westside school that you would at a public school in Beverly Hills. I know these inequities exist in California because I know enough teachers who have told me of their first hand experience in dealing with these inequalities

With this in mind it becomes amazingly easy to discern that, yes, people with their "father's old ideas" that the ability of people of color are somehow less capable can have a very profound affect on the ability of peoples to rise above their situations and excel.

Californians passed Proposition 209 because of real concerns they had with the running of their state. Was it the right thing to do? Only time will tell. My hope is that before the other time to first see if the lemmings already in the water sink or swim.

IOWA 90 DRAKE 60

The Hawkeyes are ranked No. 10 in the nation. They average more than 100 points a game. And their freshmen are playing like veterans.

But coach Tom Davis already is playing the pessimist.

"We're not that good. I tell my players, Take my word for it. I've been doing this a long time," Davis said. "Our ranking is ased on how well we were playing last year. And they won't drop us down until we lose." Losses won't come soon - not with lowa's softy preseason schedule - and they might not come too often during the Big Ten season, either.

But the coach is right. The Hawkeyes have some work to do. Iowa's biggest need this season will be a consistent team effort, something it hasn't gotten from its startng five so far.

A big boost to that team effort should come from senior Darryl Moore. On a night when he lost his starting position to freshman Ricky Davis, Moore kind of missed out on the spotlight. But he made some things happen.

In the first half, Moore scored eight points and grabbed two steals. He dove for loose balls and twisted under the basket for a couple of tough layups. He also ended the half with a last-second layup from a Kent McCausland alley oop pass.

Mike

Moore didn't turn the tide of the game like fellow three-man Davis, but he was more effective than Guy Rucker, who scored four points during the Hawkeye rout.

"I kind of like the pushing and the banging," Moore said. "I kind of like doing the dirty work." The emergence of Davis must have an effect on Moore. Imagine being pushed in practice by Davis — a guy who talked about a jump straight from high school to the NBA.

"I just try to come in and be a spark for this team," Moore said. "And I'll also try and teach Ricky some of the things I've learned." See TRIPLETT Page 3B

By Becky Gruhn The Daily Iowan

Before freshman Ricky Davis made his first appearance in the Hawkeye starting lineup Tuesday night, senior Ryan Bowen pulled him aside.

"He told me to play hard, keep my focus and don't get too nervous," Davis said.

If the freshman forward had any nerves at all, they disappeared after he drilled his first basket of a game-high 26 points to lead Iowa to a 90-60 victory over

Davis scored nine of Iowa's first 11 points and tallied 18 overall in just 11 minutes of play in the first half.

"He came out like a gangbuster," junior Kent McCausland said. "He wasn't nervous at all and just let the game come to Davis was flawless from the floor in the half and ended the hight with a 10-for-11 shooting performance. The small forward also pulled down five rebounds and dished out three assists. All of those stats were compiled in just 20 minutes of total playing time.

"The shots were falling, I was seeing the ball real well and the night just went my way," Davis said.

But it wasn't Davis' scoring explosion that pleased Iowa coach Tom Davis the most. Instead it was the freshman's final play before he exited the game.

With 8:13 remaining on the clock, Davis bypassed an open three-point attempt and sent a pass to walk-on freshman Kyle Galloway who tossed in an easy

"He knew he was coming out and that it could have been his last chance to score," the 12-year veteran coach said. "Rather than take the open shot, he gave it up to Kyle. That typified how he's trying to fit into this team.'

Banks left out of Doak Walker mix

■ Tavian Banks' name was nowhere to be found on the list of Doak Walker finalists announced Tuesday.

By Andy Hamilton The Daily Iowan

For much of the season, Tavian Banks was the nation's leading rusher. But when it came down to naming three finalists for the Doak Walker award, Banks was passed over.

Ricky Williams of Texas, Ahman Green of Nebraska and Curtis Enis of Penn State have been named as finalists for the award, given to the nation's top running back.

Each had an exceptional season and contributed from the running back position to the success of his team," said Bill Lively, executive director of the GTE-SMU Athletic Forum, which oversees the award.

The winner will be announced Dec. 11 during a show on ESPN. The trophy will be presented on Jan. 20 in Dallas.

"I don't know who votes on that," Banks said. "But they missed out on a pretty good back. "It's not any big surprise because it probably reflects on our record. Seven and four is just not going to hold like a Nebraska (11-0) record or a Penn State (9-2) record or what Ricky West Virginia's Amos Zereoue Banks was the national leader until the mid-way through the Big Ten season when he suffered a sprained ankle against Indiana that hampered him for the rest of the season. He said he the injury would be fully healed in time for a bowl game if the Hawkeyes are fortunate enough to be selected for one.

Ricky Davis drives to the basket Tuesday night for two of his 26 points.

Williams rushed for 1893 yards and led the nation with 25 touchdowns. Green ran for 1698 yards and led the nation with a 7.0 average per carry.

Although Williams and Green have better statistics than Banks, the Iowa senior's numbers were far superior to those of Enis. Banks rushed for more yards (1639-1363) and a better average per carry (6.7-6.0) than Enis, but the Penn State running back scored 20 touchdowns to Banks' 19.

"I think he should have been there," Banks said of Enis. "He's one of the best backs in the nation."

Both Banks and Enis were selected to the all-Big Ten first teams by the media and the coaches. The coaches selected Enis as the conference's offensive player of the year, while the media tabbed Banks for the honor.

"I think that's a pretty good accom-plishment," Banks said. "The Big Ten is one of the best conferences, so I think that's a great accomplishment that people voted me for that.'

COLLEGE BASKETBALL ROUNDUP

No. 2 Kansas 90, No. 4 Arizona 87

CHICAGO (AP) — Raef LaFrentz scored a career-high 32 points, including six in the final two minutes, and No. 2 Kansas held off a furious second-half comeback Tuesday night to beat fourth-ranked Arizona 90-87 in the Great Eight.

The victory was revenge of sorts for the Jayhawks, who lost to eventual national champion Wildcats in the Southeast Regional semifinals last March when Kansas was top-ranked and had 34 victories:

LaFrentz hit two free throws with 27 seconds left to give Kansas (7-0) an 88-84 lead. But Jason Terry, who helped lead Arizona's comeback from a 20-point second-half deficit, hit a 3-pointer with 14 seconds left to make it 88-87. After the Javhawks got the ball in bounds and down court, Kansas freshman Kenny Gregory rebounded his own miss with five seconds left for a three-point lead. Arizona rushed the ball up court and Mike way through the second half but returned to the game, scored 17 points for Kansas.

Bibby had 22 points, Michael Dickerson 17 and A.J. Bramlett 15 for Arizona (4-2). Late in the game, Arizona showed the defense that produced a national championship last season, going on an 18-3 run. The Wildcats cut a 79-62 deficit to two with two minutes to go when Bibby hit a 3-pointer. The Jayhawks then broke the Arizona press and LaFrentz drove for a lay-in to Pierce came up with a steal and LaFrentz scored again for a six-point lead before Bramlett's shot rolled in for the Wildcats, making it 86-82 with 46 seconds left.

He said Utah (6-0) is still learning how to play without All-America Keith Van Horn. But Mottola said the team doesn't miss Van Horn as much as some might think. "We lost an unbelievable college player but we have 10, 11 guys who are going to play a lot of minutes," the 6-foot-10 sophomore from Finland said. "I don't feel any more pressure now that Keith is gone." Mottola went 7-for-12 from the field and under realignment plan PALM BEACH, Fla. (AP) — The Toronto Maple Leafs will join traditional rivals Montreal and Boston in the NHL's Northeast Division beginning next season.

The league's Board of Governors approved Toronto's move from the Central Division on Tuesday. Under the new plan, Jackets will join the Central Division instead of the Northeast when they enter the league in 2000. Expansion Nashville, which begins play next year, was

earlier assigned to the Central. The Maple Leafs will join the Canadiens, Bruins, Buffalo Sabres and Ottawa Senators in the Northeast. The board also approved minor changes in scheduling.

For the 1998-1999 and 1999-2000 seasons, each team in the Eastern Conference will play the other teams in its division a total of five times; Western Conference teams will play each divisional opponent six times.

Each team will play the teams in the other divisions in its conference a total of four times. Each team will play either one or two games against all teams outside its confer-

For the 2000-2001, 2001-2002, and 2002-2003 seasons, each team in both conferences will play the other teams in its division five times.

Williams played for Grambling from 1974-76, then spent nine years in the NFL. He was the MVP of the 1988 Super Bowl, leading the Washington Redskins to victory over the Denver Broncos.

PRO FOOTBALL Cast-off Phillips signed by Dolphins

DAVIE, Fla. (AP) — Lawrence Phillips will have two assignments as the Miami Dolphins' new running back: Get into the end zone and stay out of trouble It's hard to say which challenge will be greater for the unpredictable, underachieving Jimmy Johnson and the Dolphins gave Phillips a second chance Tuesday when they signed him through 1998 following two days of negotiations. Financial terms weren't disclosed, but Phillips' agent, Steve Feldman, earlier said he wouldn't object to a minimum salary of $162,000 with large incentives.

Phillips, 22, was leading the St. Louis Rams in rushing when they released him Nov. 20 for disciplinary reasons. He was the No. 6 pick in the 1996 draft but was plagued by legal problems while with St. Louis. "I believe that Lawrence can help make us a better football team in the long run," Johnson said in a statement. "He understands exactly what is being asked of him, and he knows we have a disciplined program that provides very little margin of error for any player on our team. Under those conditions. I'm hopeful that he can fulfill his potential and become a productive player for

Johnson doesn't expect Phillips to contribute immediately. In the hopes of keeping fan and media expectations modest, the coach declined to talk to reporters about the signing, and he didn't make Phillips available

"Jimmy's feeling is that when you sign the 52nd or 53rd guy on your roster, it's not a big deal," team spokesman Harvey Greene said. "He doesn't want to make a big deal about it."

Switzer pleads guilty to gun charge FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) - Dallas Cow-

Switzer was fined $3,500 and was given deferred adjudication, meaning if he com-pletes probation successfully the charge will be erased from his record.

He also agreed in a plea agreement to serve 80 hours of public service as a condition of his probation. Carrying a handgun without a permit is a McCausland thinks the final scores make the games look easier than they actually have been for the Hawkeyes.

"I think we're being tested in every game," the junior said. "Drake came out a little more physical than other teams, and they still exposed some things that we don't do so well. We're still learning."

The two areas Davis was most concerned about entering the Drake match up was turnovers and free throw shooting. Iowa continued having troubles controlling the ball, turning it over 23 times against the Bulldogs. But the Hawkeyes improved free throw shooting dramatically, connecting on 16-of-19 for the game.

The only other worry Davis had following Tuesday night's contest wasn't about any categories his team did poorly in, but rather what affect his freshmen's performance would have on fans.

"I'm concerned fans will have too high of expectations," Davis said. "They have to understand that Ricky and Dean are still freshmen, they're working real hard but there are still things to improve upon.

NBA ROUNDUP

Iowa senior forward Darryl Moore slams the ball home as Drake's Justin Ohl hangs on the rim behind Moore Tuesday.

Triplett

Expect a lot of sparks from Moore. He's exactly what a top-10 team. should have coming off the bench. But what about that starting line-up?

No offense to Ryan Bowen — he's the Hawkeyes' best player and his 20 points and 19 rebounds last Saturday spoke for themselves — but he had only two points at the half Tuesday. That probably will happen only once this year. But it just goes to show the lack of consistency in the starting line-up. Davis won't score 26 every night. Dean Oliver has been ineffective at times. And then there's Rucker.

After a sensational performance at the NCAA tournament last season, Rucker has looked like one of the NBA players from "Space Jam" - you know, when Charles Barkley and Patrick Ewing were walking around the court confused after the aliens stole their skills from them.

Coach Davis said Rucker showed last year that he is a slow starter. This year, he is carrying more weight, which gives him troubles with the smaller, quicker teams.

"He'll come around," Davis said. As will the rest of the Hawkeyes. The season is early and Iowa is reveling in its fourth blowout win of the year.

It's just nice to point out where the problems might lie. You know, keep the players on their toes.

"I understand it and my players hopefully understand it, because I'll keep telling them until they do," Davis said. "We're not that change of scenery, the presence of President Clinton or the noise created by the sellout crowd at the new MCI Center. Whatever the reason, the Washington Wizards finally won a home game Tuesday night, opening their new $200 million arena with a 95-78 victory that snapped the Seattle Super-Sonics' seven-game winning streak. Juwan Howard and reserve Tracy Murray had 18 points apiece for Washington, which lost all five of its games at the US Airways Arena this season. Things were decidedly different in the Wizards' new home, however, as they took the lead in the first quarter and never lost it.

The game itself was almost secondary to the long-awaited opening of the MCI Center, which is the product of a longtime quest by Wizards and Washington Capitals owner Abe Pollin to house his pro teams in downtown Washington.

Hornets 121, Kings 102 CHARLOTTE, N.C. — Glen Rice scored 14 of his 30 points in the third quarter and the Charlotte Hornets had a franchise-record 41 assists in a 121-102 victory over the Sacramento Kings on Tuesday night. Dell Curry 18 added for the Hornets, who outscored Sacramento 36-18 in the third quarter and broke a two-game slide in which they had averaged less than 90 points.

Charlotte's recent troubles had prompted complaints from several players about poor ball movement, but there were no such problems Tuesday night. Point guard David Wesley led the way with nine assists and Bobby Phills and B.J. Armstrong had six apiece.

Where: Hancher Hancher Auditorium. Conducting the performance will be William Hatcher, the director of choral activities at the UI School of Music.

"Messiah" tells the story of the Christian idea of redemption as it unfolded in Jesus' life, which is told through narration derived from biblical passages, most of which is sung by the chorus.

"It is the most popular and most well-known choral piece in history, and has been sung and performed by more people than any other major choral/orchestral work in history," Hatcher said. "This is not just a piece to be heard in a church setting, but it's important in any college setting."

The chorus will be comprised of members of four choral ensembles from the School of Music: Kantorei, which Hatcher directs; Camerata Singers, directed by faculty member Richard Bloesch; the University Women's Chorale, directed by graduate assistant Kelly Bjugan; and the University Choir, directed by graduate assistant Melanie will be a wonderful experience, and Jacobson. Aside from its religious aspects, "Messiah" is "a cornerstone of the choral repertoire," said Peter Alexander of Arts Center Relations, which is in charge of public relations for "Messiah.

In addition to serving as the director of choral activities, Hatcher directs the graduate choral conducting program, conducts choral ensembles in the School of Music and frequently appears as music director of productions by the UI Opera Theater.

Hasta la vista for Latino-aimed films?

■ The production of Latinotargeted films has grown stagnant, and many analysts point to marketing and quality as causes.

By Cynthia Webb Associated Press

LOS ANGELES - Just five years after the art-house hit "Like Water for Chocolate," the flow of Spanish-language films has slowed to a trickle. Similarly, the Englishlanguage movies about the Latino experience ("La Bamba," "Selena") are still infrequent, consistently failing to attract studios and the national moviegoing audience.

"It's practically impossible to get distribution," Jorge Sanchez, a Mexico City-based producer and distributor for Latin American films, said in Spanish. "In a good year, I don't think you will find more than three movies spoken in Spanish for distribution in the United States."

Latinos make up 10 percent of the U.S. population but account for a far smaller fraction of acting jobs. Andy Garcia, Antonio Banderas, Jimmy Smits, Jennifer Lopez and Salma Hayek are among the handful of Latino actors who get leading "Latinos in Hollywood have been here forever, but have never really been able to cross into making American films of Latin themes marketable or profitable," said actor Edward James Olmos.

Most Spanish-language films don't have the backing of major independent distributors. For every minor art-house hit such as 1992's "Belle Epoque" from Spain, there are a multitude of films relegated to small theatres and even smaller marketing efforts.

English-language films dealing with Latino issues have not tran-

Those films that do well with the Hispanic audience have a difficult time bridging over to a larger audience. "Selena," the 1997 story of the slain Tejano singer, grossed $35.2 million, but almost all of the ticket buyers - 95 percent by some counts - were Latino.

At the same time, Latino audiences do not consistently turn out for movies specifically marketed for them. "If Latinos were to turn out in a big way ... it's going to open the Green Bay running back Dorsey Levens gets by Minnesota's John Randle and Jerry Ball in the third quarter Monday, Dec. 1.

Momentum reversed in NFC race

■ The Packers and 49er's seem to be heading in opposite directions from two weeks ago.

> By Dave Goldberg Associated Press

Two weeks ago, the Green Bay Packers surrendered 467 yards and 41 points as the Indianapolis Colts got their only win this season. San Francisco, meanwhile, was rolling to its 10th straight win.

Two weeks later, the momentum has reversed itself.

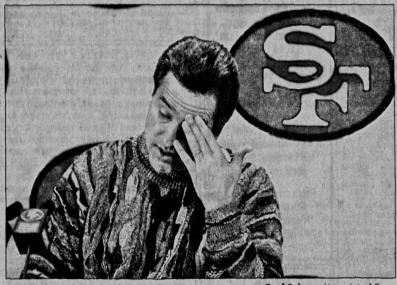

The Packers, having broken losing streaks to the Cowboys and at Minnesota, look like Super Bowl winners again. The Niners are reeling from a 44-9 drubbing by Kansas City.

Moreover, the 49ers know that all 11 wins are against teams that currently have losing records and that they've lost to the only winners they've faced - the Bucs on opening day and the Chiefs.

We've got to beat a winning team," coach Steve Mariucci says.

They get their chance Sunday at home against the Vikings, then the Broncos come to San Francisco. But even a win over Minnesota might ot be convincing, because the Vikings (8-5) have lost three straight, including Monday night at home to Green Bay.

That's the other side of the coin. The Green Bay defense not only disaster in Indianapolis, they've throttled the Vikings, holding them beaten Dallas for the first time in eight games under Mike Holmgren to 144 yards in three quarters and 253 for the game, but the Packers got and won in Minnesota, where Holmgren was 0-5. The combined the the breaks. The biggest was Corey Fuller's dropped interception score: 72-28 The win over the Vikings ensured one play before Brett Favre threw an them a wild card. If they win in 18-yard TD pass to Robert Brooks that put the Packers ahead to stay. Tampa Sunday - no easy matter

"Some times you guess right and you make a play," said Favre. "I didn't that time. I didn't see Corey Fuller and he should have picked it off.

They're also right on San Fran-

Francisco, it might not be a big deal. Playing there, perhaps in mud, is not the challenge to Green Bay that playing in Wisconsin would be to the 49ers.

Two years ago, the Packers upset the Niners 27-17 in 3Com Park to advance to the NFC title game. Last season, they beat San Francisco 35-14 at Lambeau Field in the first playoff game of their Super Bowl march.

Are this year's Packers as good as last year's? Take it from the man who built them.

"I think we're better in some spots and not as good in others," general manager Ron Wolf said after Monday night's game. "But overall, it's a wash. I think if we're not, we're getting there.

Wolf is now concentrating on picking up extra parts for the playoffs. Last week he signed Mark Collins, the defensive back who played 11 years for the Giants and Chiefs. Collins, who won two Super Bowl rings with New York, adds experience to a secondary that lost starting cornerback Craig Newsome for the season with a knee injury in the opener. Tyrone Williams has replaced Newsome and rookie Darren Sharper is currently playing MARSEILLE, France - Steve Sampson learned Tuesday he will teach the United States through bund group that might include Germany, England and Colombia.

Or the Americans could get lucky and draw Romania, Scotland and South Korea.

In seeding the teams for Thursday's World Cup draw, the FIFA World Cup organizing committee determined the United States won't have an African opponent in the first round. That means the United states could be in a very strong group or a very weak one.
