U.S. feels Iraq has ability to strike

Heavy losses are not expected, but no mission is risk-free, a U.S. commander said.

By Ammar Marco

Associated Press

ABROAD THE USH GEORGE WASHINGTON — The U.S. has sent the largest U.S. aircraft carrier, the USS George Washington, back against an American-style strike, the commander of this U.S. aircraft carrier said Tuesday.

"We believe that they are capable of defending their country," Capt. Lin Del. Rutherd told The Associated Press. "We are not going to make a decision to use force to defend something that isn't there, obviously, flown missions to give pilots a good training for strikes, our forces to prepare to carry out training strikes and patrol the no-fly zone.

The U.S. is looking to attack the site after Iraq's defeat in the 1990 Persian Gulf War. The country is believed to have lost 44 of the 129 Corby leaders arrested in the conflict, but that figure includes planes that crashed because of mechanical failure.

The Washington is one of two U.S. aircraft carriers in the Persian Gulf on Tuesday, said to launch sorties in coordination with Washington. The next day, a U.S. warplane went to the no-fly zone after Iraq's defeat in the 1990 Persian Gulf War. The country is believed to have lost 44 of the 129 Corby leaders arrested in the conflict, but that figure includes planes that crashed because of mechanical failure.

The Washington is the heart of the U.S. aircraft carrier group. The commander of this aircraft carrier is responsible for the safety of the aircraft and the crew.

I'm already implementing the principles in my department, and I'm not going to make a decision to use force to defend something that isn't there, obviously, flown missions to give pilots a good training for strikes, our forces to prepare to carry out training strikes and patrol the no-fly zone.

Border shootings concern Germans

Four customs agents killed in shootings on Swiss border

By Jan M. Lohmann
FRANKFURT — Four customs agents were killed Wednesday in shootings in a border crossing that has become a focus of the European Union's efforts to block illegal immigrants and drug traffickers from entering from southern and eastern Europe.

The killings of four customs agents in simultaneous attacks on the Swiss border were part of a wave of violence that has found a macabre echo in the wake of the September 11 terrorist attacks.

"It's an unprecedented attack on the borders of Europe," said the president of the Interpol network in Switzerland, a private sector that includes police forces from 136 countries.

The deaths of the agents, who were killed at a crossing in the southern German town of Freilassing, came a day after four agents were killed in a shootout in the southern French town of Perpignan.

The attack on the Swiss border, which is shared with Austria and Liechtenstein, comes as European Union leaders meet in Brussels to discuss the region's growing problems with drug trafficking and terrorism.

"This is a moment of maximum concern," said one official who asked not to be identified. "We're facing a new threat."

In Altena, near Frankfurt, an agent was killed on the Swiss border. The agent was shot to death by a man who appeared to be a fanatic from the African country of Niger, who has been on the run for the past two weeks.

The agent had been working on Operation Merit, a four-week mission to stop drug trafficking in the region.

The operation was the first of its kind for the Swiss Federal Police, which has been working to combat drug trafficking for the past year.

The agent was shot in the head by a man who appeared to be a fanatic from Niger, who is suspected of being involved in the operation.

"This is a very sad day for the Swiss Federal Police," said one official. "We're doing everything we can to prevent such incidents in the future."

In addition to Operation Merit, the Swiss Federal Police has been working on Operation Protect, a mission to stop illegal immigration into Switzerland.

The operation was launched last month to prevent illegal immigrants from entering the country, where they would then be sent to the United States or Canada.

"We're doing everything we can to prevent such incidents in the future," said one official. "We're doing everything we can to prevent such incidents in the future."

Lewinsky’s mother summoned

Lewinsky “will not go to jail,” her attorney says.

By Pete Yost

WASHINGTON — Monica Lewinsky’s mother was summoned before a grand jury Tuesday for questioning about a sexual relationship her daughter had with President Clinton, an official said.

The Lewinsky family lawyer, William Ginsburg, confirmed the summons to The Associated Press. He said he was not immediately available for comment.

The grand jury is being convened by federal prosecutor Perle F. Mesta, who has been investigating the possible crimes committed by Lewinsky and those around her.

Lewinsky has been under investigation for perjury charges stemming from her testimony before Clinton that she had an affair with him.

The Lewinsky case has sparked controversy and has been followed closely by the press and the public.

Ginsburg said that the Lewinsky family was not commenting further on the matter.

Lewinsky’s mother, Marcia Lewinsky, arrived at the office of the presiding judge, Judge Paul L. F. Brown, in downtown Washington early Tuesday morning.

Lewinsky’s attorney, William Ginsburg, said he was not immediately available for comment.

In the months leading up to this year's inauguration, Stycher visited the Capital Region "to get a feel for what the state needs" in the way of health services, according to one state official.

In light of this investment,土豪 state of Iowa, with its population of 3.2 million, is not only the home of major health care providers but also a hub for training and research. In addition to the University of Iowa Hospitals and Clinics, which is the state's largest employer,还有 several other institutions that contribute to the state's health care landscape. For instance, the Iowa Health and Wellness Department, which is responsible for the administration of the state's Medicaid program, has a significant presence in the state. Furthermore, the Iowa Department of Human Services, which oversees the state's mental health care system, has a substantial influence on the health care sector.

The case, which was brought by a civil rights group, alleged that the city of Iowa City had violated the rights of a group of individuals by denying them access to city services. The city had argued that it had the right to deny services to anyone it deemed to be a threat to public safety. The Supreme Court had already ruled in favor of the city, but the civil rights group had appealed the decision, arguing that the city's actions violated the civil rights of the individuals.

The quest for perfection

Iowa junior Lori Whitwer prepares for her jump on the vault earlier this year. Whitwer has tallied a perfect score in the event, but hasn't.

Iowa and current Iowa men’s gymnastics roster has scored a perfect 10, but coach Diane Defrates thinks it will change.

By Tony Wet

The only score of 10

Two years ago, when Lori Whitwer was just a freshman, she stood at the end of the runway at Carver Hawkeye Arena, preparing to perform her vault — head-spinning from a height of five feet. She began her run toward the mat, building up as much speed as possible. Whitwer exploded off the springboard, got a great push off the board, twisted and flipped in mid-air, and stuck the landing like a knife thrown in the ground. It was if the judges agreed.

Perfect routine can make legends out of athletes. Mary Lou Retton became America’s gymnastics sweetheart after her perfect vault in the 1984 Olympics in Los Angeles, and is still known for the 10. She also was a star gymnast at Oklahoma State College. In 1984, Whitwer exploded off the springboard, got a great push off the board, twisted and flipped in mid-air, and stuck the landing like a knife thrown in the ground. It was if the judges agreed.

As the old adage goes, records were made to be broken and the Academy Awards, despite a history of often predictable outcomes, are celebrating a year that has broken the record for nominations. There were 786 nominations for 92 categories. The Academy, the Motion Picture Academy, is the governing body and is the one that decides the nominations. The Academy has been in existence since 1927 and has been responsible for the selection of films and filmmakers who have contributed to the art of film. The Academy Awards are given in recognition of excellence achieved in a particular film. The Academy is a nonprofit organization that is comprised of thousands of people who are involved in the film industry.
