Locals relish in Fat Tuesday at the big, easy Deadwood

I About 150 people feasted on King Cake, drank and Hurricane drinks at the Deadwood bar's Mardi Gras celebration.

By Laura Heinzler

The Daily Iowan

Over 900 people swept down the Bourbon Street of Bourbon Street in New Orleans Friday night to enjoy the annual Mardi Gras celebration known as Fat Tuesday. The festivities went on throughout the evening.

"I wanted to come out and get away from it all," said Bill Redding, 33, who was scheduled to play at the event. The music and atmosphere added to the New Orleans atmosphere.

He was one of 150 people that brought the kind of costumed, outlandish students and locals to the Deadwood, 6 E. Main St., and gave participants a taste of the Big Easy. The students were trying to make up for the loss of the annual Mardi Gras celebration this year.

"We were able to keep our plans for the weekend," said Redding, who made it a point to keep his plans for the weekend intact.

"We'll definitely show them," he added. "We're going to show them our Mardi Gras atmosphere.

Mardi Gras also signify a bit of individual exposure at last year's Deadwood celebration. However, it's a way to have students and locals to the event. ' was there a lot of individual exposure, but we can't be too happy because we didn't have anything to give,' he said.

In Deadwood, students and locals were able to enjoy the beads and Hurricane drinks at the bar's macabre atmosphere. It's more than just a party, said Scott Houschildt, who attended the event.

"It was going to be a lot of bartering for groups of bodies last year," he said. "But I don't feel anything this year, but I'm just out of it.

We miss the Deadwood atmosphere. It's more than just a party, he said. "We were able to keep our plans for the weekend, and we were able to keep some of our plans for the weekend intact.

"It was a bit much," he added. "We're disappointed in not being able to get a better indication of where we're going to be in the top half of the Big Ten.

White House lawyer to testify

Premature stroke strike back at White House: Monica's ex-thesis assistant slain.

By Park Yee

WASHINGTON — In a legal victory for the news media, a federal judge on Thursday refused to suppress the names of two former top White House lawyers who have been subpoenaed to testify in the Paula Jones sexual harassment lawsuit.

The ruling by U.S. District Judge Dan T.李 (who has since resigned) is a significant blow to the administration's efforts to limit the public's access to information about the Whitewater scandal.

The judge ruled that the White House lawyers, who were employed by the White House during the Clinton administration, must testify as part of the civil trial.

The White House had argued that the lawyers should not be forced to testify because the information they would provide could be privileged and protected by executive privilege.

The judge disagreed, saying that the public has a right to know about the actions of government officials.

The case involves a lawsuit filed by Paula Jones, a former White House intern, who accused President Bill Clinton of sexually harassing her.

The case has been a major source of controversy in recent years, with both sides arguing that it is in the public interest to keep the details of the case secret.

The judge's ruling is expected to be appealed, but it could have significant implications for the ongoing Whitewater investigation.

Puerto Rico to become the 51st state?

House schedules action on Puerto Rican statehood bill, says John Conyers.

By John Conyers

WASHINGTON — The House of Representatives is scheduled to vote on a bill today that would make Puerto Rico the 51st state of the United States.

If passed, the measure would give Puerto Ricans the right to vote for president and to elect their own governor.

The bill has been the subject of much debate in recent years, with some arguing that it is in the best interest of Puerto Ricans to become a state and others arguing that it would be a financial burden for the federal government.

The vote is expected to take place in the afternoon, and the White House has indicated that it will not attempt to block the legislation.

First National Bank closed its inside offices early — at 3 p.m. — rather than the regular closing time of 5 p.m. Concerned customers were directed to make their demands and withdrawals at the drive-through.

Rhonda Donze, Iowa City, recalled, was one of the last allowed in the bank for meeting with a loan officer at 3:30 p.m., a half-hour after the robbery. She said that during her interview the teller was covered with blood when she noticed the robber.

Donze said her loan officer had told her she should not worry and didn’t notice the robber at all.

"The loan officer told me it was just a question of waiting for something to happen and they would come back and talk to me," she said. "It was an extremely bad time for me."

Portnov said the investigation is still pending under the auspices of both the FBI and the PPD.

A traditional ribaldry and political incorrectness dominate on Fat Tuesday.

By Mary Foster

NEW ORLEANS — Despite dozens of police crowds, Rowdy revelers and barrel houses, and barely there costumes dispersed Tuesday in the French Quarter in New Orleans to celebrate Fat Tuesday.

All dressed up and no war to go to ever wished this was last week, which is a good place to emphasize that we're not going to be equipped with the moral—situational wisdom to understand the world as it is. It's a shame that the Bush administration has chosen to ignore the wisdom of the window, as we have to tend to the issues of the moment.

I don't think a comment is what I thought of the opening boardroom, because the politicians were too busy discussing how to combat terrorism. But basic questions are basic questions. This is a war whose purpose is not immediately clear. What are we fighting for? Who is our enemy? Why is this war being fought?

I'm not in favor of bombing pretty for people who continually make it seem, as if you're not lucky enough to stuff if you're not lucky enough.

Goals stay the same for new-look Hawkeyes

Despite the loss of five seniors from last year’s 32-9 squad, the Iowa softball team is still gunning for a trip to the College World Series.

By Becky Dulan
for The Daily Iowan

For three years they've been members of the Iowa softball team, and now they're off. The five seniors only played in 2014 were more than half of the Big Ten and 3.0+ program and only freshman who have contributed to Iowa's success in three seasons, making up 75 games of the total.

Now, in their final season as Hawkeyes, the co-captains are not. The Hawkeyes are coming off a season that saw their highest winning percentage (.837) and an appearance in the Big Ten tournament.

The large number of freshmen in the Hawkeyes' lineup has convinced Coach Gary Crow about the team's future.

"I've seen a lot of room for improvement in the past few weeks," Crow said. "The freshmen are showing a lot of promise and I think we'll be a long way from our final lineup by the end of the year."

The Hawkeyes, who are currently 7-2, are looking to improve their record and get back into the conference title race.

Softball/Hawkeyes want to return to World Series

Despite losing to the University of Missouri last weekend, the Hawkeyes are still optimistic about their chances of making it to the World Series.

"I think we have a good chance of making it to the World Series," said Coach Crow. "But we're going to have to play some good softball in the next couple of weeks."

The Hawkeyes have had a few close losses recently, including a 4-3 loss to the University of Illinois. But they are determined to bounce back and make a run for the championship.

Boston — The producer for a minority hiring lag in college sports, and the reasons why:

A new study released Tuesday by the National Center for Education Statistics found that while the record for hiring minority coaches in college basketball and football is poor, its opposite is the minority level.

The "Racial Report Card" covering the 1996-97 academic year showed that college sports have the worst record for hiring minority coaches, and that while the record for hiring minority coaches as minority hiring lag in college sports and poor, and that minority access to coaching positions for minorities does not exist.

"There has been very little progress in the pattern of hiring minorities as head coaches and minority sports coaches," said Richard Schaefer, director of the report and the study's principal investigator.

The center conducts a news study at the end of each year on the hiring of minority coaches in college and pro sports, but that minority access to coaching positions for minorities does not exist.

"The center found that in 1996, No. 14 percent of the NAIA's top 100 coaches were women, and 10 percent were black. No. 1 percent were Latinas. No. 1 percent of the NCAA's top 100 coaches were women, and 10 percent were black. No. 1 percent were Latinas.

In the NCAA, 19 of 50 of the NCAA's top 100 coaches were women, and 10 percent were black. No. 1 percent were Latinas.

The Colour and the Shape of '98 Grammys

By Nathan S. Grosser

To call last year a disastrous one would hardly be an understatement. It was the year the critics were called to task for the Academy Awards ceremony. It was the year "L.A. Confidential" was the year's most creative film, yet barely budged at the box office, and the year "Shiri" was nominated for a Grammy - for best comedy album. It was the year the music industry was shown to be anything but glamorous.

But it was also the year that ruled the Grammys, the year that brought a sense of drama to the annual awards show. It was the year that brought the world's best musicians together to celebrate their achievements.

The Colour and the Shape of '98 Grammys was a night of triumphs and triumphs. It was the year that brought the world's best musicians together to celebrate their achievements. It was the year that brought the world's best musicians together to celebrate their achievements.
