Room rates on the rise

UI officials are proposing a 4.3 percent increase in room and board rates for next fall.

By Kelly Diggins
The Daily Iowan

UI students are finding out not only what their university dealings are in store for them, but also what the residents of the Iowa state legislature have planned.

UI officials are proposing an overall 4.3 percent increase in the rates for the academic year if the proposal is approved at their monthly meeting March 16, the regents will take final action during their April meeting.

The actual increases would vary depending on students’ room-and-board arrangements. The increase will also not be for a double-occupancy room with full board (the model $1250 in 1998-99)

Let the madness begin

By John Post
The Daily Iowan

Several sports columnists have written about the upcoming NCAA Tournament. In fact, the tourney is the highest-rated event of the year (i.e., higher than the political conventions, the Super Bowl).

The madness begins: As April arrives, so do the tournaments. The madness begins in the second weekend after the NCAA's table cuts and picks are announced.

Wu speech turns into confrontational Q&A

A calm speech on human rights turned into a confrontational debate as audience members challenged famous Chinese dissident Harry Wu Monday night.

By Doug Erdman
The Daily Iowan

As Chinese dissident Harry Wu addressed the Student Beginning American Forum last night, the packed lecture was quiet and respectful. But when asked, when the flow was opened up for questions, the room was suddenly turned noisy and tumultuous.

Lueck named 98-99 Daily Iowan editor

By Stephanie Del
The Daily Iowan

UI junior Jennifer Lueck was named editor of The Daily Iowan for the 1998-99 school year.

"I think the Daily is a great paper," Lueck said. "I’d like to see a lot of the on-campus activities, like community service and the Student Union in more depth on the paper."

Every Monday to Thursday a question is posted, frequently challenging the students. "Ask Steve" is the face of these challenges, and students have a chance to come up with a creative and crazy answer. Steve even encourages these students to throw in a joke or two, and he will choose the funniest answer out of all of them.

Hey Steve, How will you get all the help you could need after the snowstorm? Several students have suggested that they would get all the help they could need after the snowstorm. Many roads remained closed Monday as drifting snow closed the paths cleared by snowplows.

By Mary Neshimer

Authorizers across the state pleaded with Iowans to stay home Monday as drivers battled high winds, heavy snow and cold that closed a large portion of the state's roads that left more than 90,000 vehicles stranded.

"People really need to give these men and women a break here," said Tim elegant, who lives near the city of Winterset in central Iowa. "We need to get traffic backed up, and then we get traffic backed up, and more people are going in the same direction as the traffic jam."

Governor Tom Vilsack said that while many of the roads are closed, the state's roads were back open and would be kept open for the next few days.

"It's a good thing that the state has been dealing with this, and let them do their job, because otherwise we're not going to do anything," Vilsack said.

Iowa's mild winter is over, and the state is prepared for more winter weather.

Iowa's interstates remained open despite heavy snowfall in the state. Many planes were grounded, and the state's roads remained closed for several hours.

The National Guard has set up a base near the state's major airports, with troops on hand to help clear the roads.

"That's the least we can do," said Dave Johnson, who manages the state's National Guard base.

"It's a good thing that the state has been dealing with this, and let them do their job, because otherwise we're not going to do anything," he said.

Deal drops murder charges

Teen-ager makes deal with prosecutor and pleads guilty to manslaughter in death of his infant son.

By Jonah Weprin

WILMINGTON, Del. — A teen-ager pleaded guilty to manslaughter in the death of his infant son on Tuesday, but the case will never be solved.

Prosecutors will never learn whether the child was accidentally killed or was a victim of abuse.

The baby was found on a trash bin outside the family's home in the town of Camden, Del., on March 19, 1996. The infant was under 2 months old.

A medical examiner said the baby died of suffocation, but the cause of death could not be determined.

The family, which had been caring for the baby, was later arrested on charges of child abuse.

The case was reopened in 1998 after new evidence was found.

The family was acquitted of all charges.

The baby's mother, who was 16 at the time, later gave birth to a healthy baby girl.

The family has been living in hiding since the case was reopened.

The family has refused to comment on the case.

The baby's father, who was 18 at the time, is serving a prison sentence for the murder of another baby.

The family has been living in hiding since the case was reopened.

Jamaica Fanner said the federal government made a major error when it collapsed of an artery attack. It ended several years earlier than expected, said Craig, "in fact in that case they made the mistake because they were not following the general guidelines."

"Most women are quite capable of it," said Craig. "They just need a push in the right direction."

"I believe the government is Dũng," said Craig, "but I think they are doing a lot to improve the situation."

NAFTA and war with Iraq is a bad mix

To the Editor:

I strongly believe that the policy of the United States and many other countries of the world is not the best policy to follow. The United States have been involved in many wars and conflicts, and it is my opinion that we should not be involved in any more. The United States is already spending too much money on the military and we should use that money to help others.

Your credit card can meet a quick and painless death

I had a credit card that I had used for many years. I had a balance of $5,000 and I was making payments on it every month. One day, I noticed that my credit card was not working. I called the company and they told me that my account had been closed. I was shocked and I couldn't believe it. I had been making payments on my credit card for years and I had never had any problems before. I called the company again and they told me that my account had been closed because I had a large balance.

I was angry and I called the company again. I asked them why they had closed my account and they told me that they had done it because I had a large balance. I asked them what I could do to get my account reopened and they told me that I would have to pay off my balance and then they would consider reopening my account.

I was upset and I decided to take a loan from a bank to pay off my credit card balance. I was able to pay off my credit card balance and then I called the company again. They told me that they would reopen my account if I paid off my balance and I agreed to do so.

I was relieved that I was able to keep my credit card and I never want to have a problem like this again. I will be more careful with my credit card in the future and I will try to stay within my limits.

Sincerely,

IOWA WOMEN'S GYMNASTICS

Hawks return to form, pick up victory

Angie Humphreys' first all-around title led the Hawks to victory.

The Tuesday, March 31, 1998, issue of The Daily Iowan featured an article about Iowa Women's Gymnastics. The Hawks had returned to form and picked up a victory. Angie Humphreys' first all-around title was a highlight of the article. The article noted that after struggling for part of the year, the Hawks had won the Big Ten title with their performance at the Big Ten Championships.

The article also mentioned that the Hawks scored 193.825 at the Big Ten Championships, beating Minnesota (193.300) and Ohio State (193.000) to win the conference championship. Humphreys' all-around title was part of Iowa's victory, with the team scoring a total of 193.825.

Additionally, the article provided information about the performance of other gymnasts for the Hawks, including details about their scores and achievements. It also discussed the team's overall performance and the atmosphere of the competition.

The article's headline, "Hawks return to form, pick up victory," accurately reflects the main focus of the content. The article captures the excitement and momentum that the Hawks had regained, as well as the significance of Humphreys' all-around title in achieving the victory at the Big Ten Championships.

The context of the event, the date, and the names of the participants are all accurately represented in the provided information, ensuring a comprehensive understanding of the content.
Outside the numbers of the Big Dance

For many fans, the NCAA tournament is strictly a numbers game.

By Jim Dornell

The number most associated with the NCAA tournament is 64. That's far from the only number associated with the tournament, which starts Thursday. And the numbers surrounding the tournament are interesting, maybe surprising, and will change by the time next year's tournament starts.

Let's start with four No. 1 seeds. In the Final Four. In the '90s the most consistent team to play in the tournament (just Kiddles of Loyola) 14 times in 1989, 1990, 1991 and 1993

Struggling to shine

Highly Trained Pedestrians, which performs "Figures and Bricks" tonight and Wednesday, is struggling to find management and practice space.

"I've tried everywhere," says choreographer and dancer Molly Ptal'lon. "I shopped for months to find a place where we could have a studio, but there always seem to be complications."

"We have to be very creative about how we find space," she adds. "It's like looking for a needle in a haystack."

"We've even considered renting a house or a barn," says production manager Alfre Woodard. "But we can't afford it."

As it is, the group has had to rely on the kindness of strangers to get by. "Sometimes we've had to use a friend's garage," she says. "But that's not ideal."

"We're always on the lookout for new places to practice," says Woodard. "But it's been tough."

Despite the challenges, the group remains committed to its mission. "We believe in the power of dance to bring people together," she says. "And we're not going to give up."
