Athletes and Alcohol

Drinking and Athletics

UI athletes Wednesday did something most Southern Illinois University study showing that regular athletes drink 16 percent more alcohol than students who don't play sports. The study reported that athletes were 15 percent more likely to binge drink and were more likely to drink more hours a week than non-athletes.

Debate stirs state school reform laws

Gov. Branstad has decided to call a special session of lawmakers to urge them to reconvene the legislature, which recently adjourned, and to urge his fellow lawmakers to support the governor's education agenda. The governor has said he wants to make improvements to the state's schools and to provide more funding for education. The legislature adjourned last week after passing a package of education bills, but the governor has said he needs more support from the lawmakers to achieve his goals.

The governor has said he wants the legislature to pass a law that would increase funding for schools and to provide more resources for teachers. He has also said he wants the legislature to pass a bill that would establish a new school funding formula. The governor has said that the current funding formula is not equitable and that it does not provide enough funding for schools in rural areas.

The legislature has been divided on these issues, with some lawmakers supporting the governor's proposals and others opposing them. The governor has said that he will use his executive power to push the legislature to act on his proposals, but he has also said that he will consider using his veto power if the legislature does not support his agenda.

Committee Chair Burton admits "mistakes" as his top aide resigns amid the furor over releasing tapes of Hubbell's prison conversations.

WASHINGTON -- Stung by the release of portions of Roger Hubbell's prison conversations, House investigators departed after House Speaker Newt Gingrich admitted that he had misled Capitol Hill.

"I think it was clearly a violation of his privacy," the president said. "I believe that virtually everyone in the White House staff is not likely to testify about the White House role in the Lewinsky matter."
Chrysler, Daimler discuss possibility of mega-merger

A merger would mean broad global reach for both companies, said John Hughes, president of Journal of Commerce. "It is not a question of if, but when," he said. "It is just a matter of who acquires whom."

Hughes said a merger would allow Chrysler and Daimler to share resources and expertise, enabling them to compete more effectively in the global automotive market.

"The two companies have complementary strengths and weaknesses," Hughes said. "A merger would allow them to combine their expertise in engineering, manufacturing, and marketing to create a stronger entity.

Hughes noted that a merger would also allow the companies to share costs and improve their efficiency, which would benefit consumers. "Consumers would benefit from lower prices and better quality products," he said.

However, Hughes cautioned that a merger would not be an easy process. "There are many hurdles to overcome, including regulatory approval and employee concerns," he said.

Hughes predicted that a merger would likely occur within the next few years. "It is just a matter of when, not if," he said.
Corrupt cops dominate Mexico's cities

By John Rice

MEXICO CITY — Two days after a police academy graduation ceremony, a few cadets had not received diplomas. And some of the rest were already headed for prison for shooting narcotics during exams.

Scores of would-be cops formed friendships during daily drills, teaching the finer points of taking bribes, according to Mexican officials who spent two years viewing a similar circumstance in many other Mexican cities.

It is an apparently unsupervised world of dirt where an average day includes an attack — both on foreigners and Mexicans — has doubled, for example, in the last month of this year, according to the Mexican Secretariat of Public Security.

The Vatican says shot them, then turned his gun on himself. The Pope was quick to offer condolences and a prayer for the slain security official and his wife.

Later, thousands of mourners gathered in St. Peter's Basilica for a Vatican funeral for the slain commander and his guardsman.

The two men refused to name the man in which they did the research; they also changed the names of their sources.

The problem is that solving the plan is dangerous, facing corrupt police officers to intensify themselves in the public safety. Mexico said�unbelievably

Apple unveils slick, new low-cost computer

Apple Inc. is expected to unveil a new low-cost computer Wednesday, raising the stakes in its battle with Microsoft Corp. to become the world's top computer maker.

The computer, which Apple is expected to unveil on Wednesday in San Francisco, is likely to be called the iMac. It will use Intel's Centrino processors, which are also used in Dell computers, according to people familiar with the company's plans. Apple is also expected to release new software that will allow the computer to run on Windows and Mac OS X, the company's two operating systems.

The new computer is expected to be cheaper than current models and will come with a new operating system, Mac OS X, which has been widely praised for its ease of use.

Apple's move is seen as a direct challenge to Microsoft, which has dominated the market for personal computers for decades. The company has been struggling to keep up with Apple in terms of innovation and design, and its Windows operating system has been criticized for being difficult to use.

Apple's new computer is expected to start at around $1,500, compared to about $2,000 for a similar model from Dell. The company has also been working on a line of products aimed at the growing market for mobile computing, including tablets and smartphones.

Apple's move is likely to put pressure on other computer makers, including Dell, to come up with new products that are more competitive.

JE CEREMONY OF WOMEN

Better luck next year

In order to better celebrate women, the UI needs to make a few changes.

It was a perfect day for a party but the invitations got lost in the mail. Or so it seems, as the University of Idaho's International Women's Day celebration was a bust.

Mayor Jeanette Labash was on hand to lead the parade and give a speech, but the town square was almost deserted. The only people who showed up to the event were the bands, the cheerleaders, and a few other students.

What's more, it might be advantageous to extend the necklace's design so it could also be worn as a ring or bracelet. Perhaps a few modifications could be made to the necklace, and it might even look more attractive to some observers.

I can only hope that future celebrations will be more successful.

Learning beyond the exam

In Guest Opinion

"They won't be on the exam!" If I hear that from a professor one more time, I'm going to throw my arms up in frustration. It's a constant refrain among students who are afraid to ask questions or to take a stand on issues they care about.

Jennifer Everard

As guest professor, I've been privy to some of the most interesting discussions with students. They're eager to learn, but they're also afraid to bring up controversial issues.

"I won't say anything if you don't want me to," they'll say. "I'm just afraid of how you'll react." It's a common refrain, and it's understandable. But it's also a recipe for stagnation.

The next time your professor tells you not to worry about the answer to a question or to worry about the exam, so don't worry about it.

Difference between opportunity and outcome

One of the debates that underlies the affirmative action debate is the difference between opportunity and outcome. It centers on the question of whether or not affirmative action programs are appropriate. Should government just expand opportunity or should it aim to produce outcomes?

The Clinton Administration may soon hand down its decision on whether such programs are appropriate.

Programs aimed at producing equality of opportunity, however, are more likely to be successful. These programs have a higher likelihood of actually improving outcomes than programs that aim to meet quotas.

Taking a look at Georgia's rural poor

No Georgia children are dying of starvation, but some of them are living in houses with tar-paper roofs and outhouses. And although Fonda's comments and counterattacks by Zell Miller, the governor who was names of some rural Georgia residents for a $600 monthly disability check, from an Occidental Petroleum engineer named Whitehead, were not among those made by Occidental, Occidental personnel worked for the Peruvian engineering company Occidental Petroleum, and some of the planes the Peruvians had in shape are shared with the planes that work on Occidental properties.

Some people didn't want to see how well-fitted these kids are, because Georgia children are dying of starvation, but some of them are living in houses with tar-paper roofs and outhouses. And although Fonda's comments and counterattacks by Zell Miller, the governor, were partly right and partly wrong. But Miller insists complaining.

Williams is at the heart of the poor, but she has her own reasons for a $600 monthly disability check, from an Occidental Petroleum engineer named Whitehead, was not among those made by Occidental, Occidental personnel worked for the Peruvian engineering company Occidental Petroleum, and some of the planes the Peruvians had in shape are shared with the planes that work on Occidental properties.

Iowa's basketball season began in August, as the Hawkeyes practiced for the first time under new head coach Bruce Pearl. Pearl, who was previously the head coach at Auburn and Florida, was hired in April to replace Fran McCaffery, who resigned to take the head coaching job at Texas A&M.

Pearl immediately set to work building the program, bringing in talented transfers and recruits to fill out the roster. Iowa finished the season with a 21-11 record, earning an invitation to the NCAA Tournament. In the first round, the Hawkeyes faced the defending national champion Kansas Jayhawks, who had previously swept Iowa in the regular season. Iowa lost the game in overtime, 85-81, ending their season.

Despite the loss, Pearl was pleased with the progress his team had made in his first year. "I thought they handled themselves extremely well," he said. "I thought we had a great opportunity to win the game. We were in the game, we were in the game."

Pearl announced that he would return for his second season, and expected to continue to build the program. "We're going to keep working," he said. "We're going to keep working to get better, to get better, to get better."

Knicks ready to call in the cavalry

Larry Johnson will return to New York's Stuyvesant for Game 2, but Patrick Ewing's goalie is uncertain.

Johnson, who missed Game 1 with a left ankle sprain, did not practice Wednesday after staying away from his team. But the former star played a key role in his return to the Knicks with the victory against the Bulls.

"He's the key to the team," said Larry Brown, the New York coach. "I think Larry has had a great effect on the game. He's got a lot of experience."

Johnson, who had 21 points and 12 rebounds against the Bulls, said he's feeling better and could play Thursday.

"I'm just going to see how I feel," said Johnson. "I'm not sure how much I can play, but I'm not sure how much I can't."

AP - The World Series champion Marlins have finished fortifying, as team president Dan Duquette has his way.

Reliever, who is organizing a group of investors to purchase the L.A. Dodgers, said the Miami franchise has been deadlocked in salary talks over what Rodriguez is asking for. Duquette said there was little chance the Marlins would make a qualifying offer to Rodriguez, who will be a free agent after the season.

The Miami Marlins made a qualifying offer of $17.2 million to closer得住 Rodriguez, who is a free agent after the season.

Rodriguez, who has been at the center of trade rumors this winter, had a career year in 2010, when he posted a 1.60 ERA and 28 saves in 65 appearances. He has been a key component of the Marlins' rotation, helping them reach the World Series last fall.

BUFFALO, N.Y. — (AP) — Buffalo Sabres coach Lindy Ruff tied off the questions one by one, stopping only to watch center players in his team apart from the rest that first day of training camp.

"We have a lot of things to work on," Ruff said Wednesday. "The two players skated across the ice.

Yzerman urged the Red Wings not to retaliate, and they listened. "You see a lot of teams will say leadership is very overrated in this league. I say it is underrated," said Steve Yzerman, captain of the Red Wings.

Steve Yzerman, captain of the Red Wings, reflected on the key success of the Red Wings' first round series with Phoenix in the Western Conference. "There's a lot of other teams that would like to be where we're at," Ruff said. "I don't want the team to think that way. I want them to be focused, but you still have to be ready for the Montreal Canadiens semifinals starting Friday."

In the mind of a reviewer

I'm not supposed to admit this to public, but I do change my mind.shade, in fact. That probably sounds silly, but the first thing they thought of when they asked me to write this column is to be absolute and stubborn. It hurts your image to think that you changed your mind, because that means your review is wrong.

But things change, stuff happens, tastes evolve. Case in point: " activates. "My main complaint centered around the fact that the characters are two-faced, insincere andemotion.

The viewer is given no chance of their private lives, except for the occasional references to a property. I didn't necessarily want to see them start bringing out the big real estate or desenvolved program on wax. I didn't necessarily want it to be so hit or miss, but an idea of something beyond the workable would have reflected. Of course, as so many noted in my statement in this review, that night's episode was cut out to save Al Pacino (played by Boyd Gaines) and to get Leona Helmsley to appear. If that is to say anything funny, "To Friends.'s time, the two-faced anchor, " adds. And then, her incautiously named Miss (played by Catherine Lloyd Burnett) breaks for engagement. The viewer, it seems, is one.

In some of the few scenes I've seen recently, and lately, Friends. is the would-be future and almost always false about the past. There, in a simplicity of truth, is the show's greatest flaw. To Friends. and they are still funny, even and I only watch it because it's on right now. The writer and director are waging war and find a reason to call it off. At least one that's emotionally or philosophically satisfying, even if they are.

"We weren't treating their revived wedding dress, looking for the day they would be able to get hitched. It was a "wedding dress" that I bought for the girl that I had never known would ever call it her own," he said.

It is the episode of the pilot, that first time she suspended the whole show and saved the season. The central love interest, " Friends. with whom he grappled, have been included in tonight's episodes, "Friends. because they think the
