The beat will not go on for the 620

■ Iowa City's only traditionally gay bar is expected to close its doors soon.

By Kelly Wilson
The Daily Iowan
The 620 Club is expected to close its doors in the near future, and speculation is the building it's housed in will soon become part of the UI.
Current 620 bartender Jason Welch confirmed employees have been informed of the bar's closure.
"620 Club is a little island among a sea of university property," Duane Rohovit said. "It would make sense that they would buy it too."
Rohovit was the original legal counsel for the 620, 620 S. Madison St., and is a friend of current manager and partial owner Daryl "Woody" Woodson, who also owns the Sanctuary Restaurant & Pub, 405 S. Gilbert St. Woodson could not be reached for comment.

The UI has targeted the area the building is located in for future development, said Richard Gibson, associate vice president and director of the Facilities Services Group. Currently, the UI leases roughly two-thirds of the space in the building.

"We are looking to purchase on that block," Gibson said. "We own everything else."
The UI is looking to build a new building to house the Human Resources and offices of the Facilities Services Group and is expected to discuss a proposal to hire an architect for the project at this week's regents meeting in Ames, Gibson said.
However, Gibson said he does not expect the new building to be located on the current site of the 620.
"It might be possible, but I cannot confirm that."
Although Tom Alberhasky, the owner of the building that the 620 leases, was unavailable for comment, his secretary Carolyn Amelon said the UI has purchased the building but did not want to discuss details surrounding the sale.
Regardless of the building's potential sale, the 620 is still expected to close, and patrons say its departure furthers the lack of gay-oriented night clubs in town.

"I think it is a shame that the 620 is closing," said Joe Wilson, an Iowa City resident and patron of the bar. "It has such a long history."
UI student Dantia MacDonald said she is saddened by the closing of the club because it was one of the only good places to go dancing, and the predominantly gay crowd was very accepting of straight patrons.
"I know 620 was considered a gay

UI to ask for public health master's

■ The new program is likely to double the faculty in the Department of Preventive Medicine, one professor says.

By Eric Petersen
The Daily Iowan
Students interested in earning a master's degree in public health may soon be able to stay in the state rather than go elsewhere.
The UI plans to ask the Iowa state Board of Regents this week to approve a Public Health Initiative for the establishment of a School of Public Health to better train physicians, nurses and health administrators. Eventually, the UI will also ask the regents for permission to offer a master's degree in public health.
"We see this as a pretty logical step," said Ann Rhodes, vice president for University Relations. "It will build on areas (in the Department of Preventive Medicine and Environmental Health) we have a lot of strength in."
Currently, those wanting to earn master's degrees in public health must go to the universities of Wisconsin, Minnesota or Illinois at Chicago. James Merchant, professor and head of the of preventive medicine department, said the degree would be welcomed by many at the UI.
"There's tremendous interest across the campus in the MPH (master of public health) degree," said Merchant, who is expected to become head of the School of Public Health. "We think this will help meet a lot of the state's needs."
Dr. Robert Kelch, dean of the College of Medicine, will make the presentation to the regents Wednesday in Ames.
The regents will be also asked to approve a special-purpose appropriation of $1.85 million for the fiscal year 2000, beginning July 1, 1999, for the Public Health Initiative. The money will be used to recruit faculty and develop curricula for the new program, which would be introduced in fall 1999.
Plans for the creation of the new school have been in the works for more than a year, said Richard Nelson, the executive associate dean of the college, who is hoping the regents will approve the project.
"This is the first go at this, and hopefully, they will respond positive-

Carmen Cabassa takes a nap in the arms of her mother, Rita Cabassa, while Rita and her husband, Roberto Cabassa, anxiously watch the end of the first half of the World Cup final Sunday. The Cabassas and about 60 other Brazil fans at the Vine in Coralville watched their team fall to France, 3-0.

Professional wrestling gets better grip than soccer

Several hours after the "beautiful game" concluded its final match in Paris, many Iowa City residents sat down in an area bar to watch grown men catch each other in headlocks.
These fans were tuning into "Bash at the Beach," a pro wrestling tournament featuring as its marquee match Dennis Rodman and Hulk Hogan versus Karl Malone and Diamond Dallas Page.
While the "Bash at the Beach" pay-per-view telecast surely did not match world-wide viewership of the World Cup final, for fans pro wrestling took clear precedence over soccer Sunday night.

Results of "Bash at the Beach," Page 10
"Wrestling is where it's at," said Shelby Humbles, a local pro wrestling fan who also watched most of the World Cup on television.
"Soccer's OK. To me, they're rough, they play hard ... (but I think most people don't like soccer) because you run 110 yards and do nothing."
Cary Justmann, a Washington, Iowa, resident, agreed that pro wrestling is the superior sport.
"You have to be a better athlete to do that every week" Justman said. "I didn't watch the World Cup. I would have if Goldberg (a pro wrestler on the "Bash at the Beach" bill) was in it."

While neither Justmann nor Humbles watched the World Cup final, both had plenty to say about the outcome of Sunday's other sporting event.
"I think Rodman's going down," Justmann said. "It'll be a good clean fight, but Rodman's going to lose."
Humbles strongly disagreed.
"Rodzilla's going to win," he said.
In the end, the Rodman-Hogan duo won with the help of an outside force — Rodman's bodyguard.

The thrill of victoire And the agony of derrota

■ Local bars were filled with emotional fans Sunday as France and Brazil battled it out in the World Cup final.

By Erik Runge
The Daily Iowan
Quietly relishing France's first championship, Mary Schumacher slowly began to smile as she watched the last few seconds of Sunday's World Cup final.
"This is the only game I watched," said Schumacher, a French major who viewed the game at Vito's, 118 E. College St.
In contrast to Schumacher's low-key glee, other soccer fans such as Brazilians Mauro Heck and Carlos Schaves brought air horns, soccer jerseys and flags to the Vine Restaurant, 39 Second St., Coralville, to cheer on their team.
"No matter where we are, we Brazilians get together," Heck said.
Although Heck and Schaves had expected 20-25 people at their private World Cup party upstairs at the Vine, when the Brazil national anthem started to play, approximately 64 men, women and children of all ages stood up and loudly sang with pride.
Heck said the games are usually very emotional for Brazilian fans.

Penn State students riot as bars close; 14 police officers injured in the clash

■ The crowds set fires and smashed windows during the rampage; 24 were arrested.

STATE COLLEGE, Pa. (AP) — Penn State University students and other young people hitting the streets as bars closed early Sunday erupted into a riotous frenzy, clashing with police, setting bonfires, vandalizing cars and smashing storefront windows with street-light poles torn down by the mob.
Fourteen police officers were hurt in the 2½ hours of rioting by about 1,500 people, authorities said, and more than 20 people were arrested. Three storefronts and 33 street lights were damaged. No looting was reported.

crowd grew to about 1,500 after a trash can was thrown into the street and set afire.
As police tried to control the mayhem, the drunken crowds rampaged through the streets, starting more fires and vandalizing cars, parking meters and street signs.
Rioters tore down street lights and used the poles to smash storefront windows and vehicle windshields. Injuries to officers ranged from burns and broken bones to less serious injuries suffered from thrown objects.
"It was very ugly in terms of the crowd's behavior toward police," said Tom Harmon, director of Penn State police services. "The officers, early on, when we were just lined up across the road and before we moved on the crowd, took a lot of flying objects."

University police held 24 people Sunday, including at least 11 Penn State students, on charges including resisting arrest and disorderly conduct.
Rioters finally dispersed about 4 a.m., after state police and several area police and fire companies joined local and university officers in crowd-control efforts.

FOOD PRANKS

• Convince the victim he or she has eaten a piece of food soiled by some bodily function. Have fake evidence (or real evidence, if you really are cruel), such as pictures, to support your claim.

• Give your name as Pupupu to a maitre-d'. When he calls you to your table you will hear, "Pupupu party of four..."

• Freeze glasses to trays in the cafeteria. This can be accomplished by smearing the bottom of the glasses with honey, sticking them firmly to the trays, and filling them with ice, water and salt to lower their temperature. After a few minutes, the honey should be frozen to both the tray and the glasses.

• Glue glasses to the bottom of a cafeteria table.

• Dribble glass — need we say more?

• Drop pure crystallized caffeine into a coffee pot. This will make espresso seem as potent as milk.

• Get a few of the tracer pills that turn urine blue (or some other interesting color). These pills are only dye and are completely harmless. Crush the pills and slip them into a victim's food, and he or she will be peeing blue for two-three days afterwards.

O.J.'s lawyers say he should have a third trial

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Could there be a third O.J. Simpson trial? His lawyers suggest just that in their voluminous appeal of his $33.5 million civil trial verdict.

The appeal, filed on June 30 and reviewed by The Associated Press on July 10, claims the civil trial was "fundamentally tainted" by erroneous rulings of Superior Court Judge Hiroshi Fujisaki.

The arguments presented by defense attorneys in the 96-page appeal are not new. But Daniel Petrocelli, a lawyer who represented Fred Goldman and his family in their civil suit, said they will have a new audience in a panel of appellate judges.

Petrocelli said he's confident the verdict and award to the families of Nicole Brown Simpson and Ronald Goldman will stand.

"It's really just a rehash of the arguments ... during the course of the trial," he said.

The former football star's attorneys, Dan Leonard and Robert Baker, contended in their appeal that the awards are "excessive."

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Jay Leno's on-screen crack about overweight Harley-Davidson riders in Milwaukee earned him some hate mail from beefy bikers who didn't think it was funny.

"I didn't mean anything by it," the "Tonight" show host and motorcycle buff told the Milwaukee Journal Sentinel. "It was a joke."

On his June 15 show, after appearing at Harley-Davidson's 95th anniversary reunion and leading a parade of 50,000 bikers, Leno said he feels fat in Los Angeles but in Milwaukee with all those bikers, he felt thin.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Will Smith and Jada Pinkett Smith announced their latest roles: They're the parents of a new baby boy. The Hollywood couple announced the birth of their first child on July 10, two days after Jaden Christopher Syre Smith was born in Los Angeles, publicist Lisa Reeder said.

Ted Turner apologizes for CNN report

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — CNN founder Ted Turner issued a fervent apology to U.S. veterans for the cable news channel's retracted report about U.S. troops using deadly nerve gas in a 1970 Vietnam raid.

"If committing mass suicide would help, I've even given that some consideration. Nothing has upset me more probably in my whole life," Turner told a Television Critics Association news conference on July 10.

"I'll take my shirt off and beat myself bloody on the back" with a whip if it would do any good, he said, adding: "I couldn't hurt any more if I was bleeding."

He offered his personal apology to veterans and anyone who was hurt or offended by the "NewsStand: CNN & Time" story aired on June 7 that claimed U.S. troops used nerve gas against Vietnam War deserters in Laos.

CNN retracted the story on July 2, apologizing to viewers and veterans for "serious faults" in its reporting. Time magazine, which printed a version of the story, also formally apologized.

Help me, Harlan

Dear Harlan,

Although, I don't feel like a freak of nature, I know I am one. I'm a 31-year-old virgin. I'm not ugly. I'm actually an OK-looking college graduate with a nice job. What am I doing wrong? And do you think most people (mostly men) will laugh at me when I tell them I'm still a virgin?

Confused and scared in the city

Dear Confused,

Unless your job is working as a stand-up comedian whose funniest material focuses on life as a 31-year-old virgin, no one will be laughing. You're not a freak, just a virgin. Really, if you decide to share such intimate details with a partner it will most likely be with someone who cares so deeply for you it won't even matter.

There's no reason to be embarrassed; only a little concerned. If your virginity is a result of not allowing yourself to get intimate and take that next step, that's a problem. In that case, you need to get to the source and talk with a professional.

On the other hand, if your reasons are based on religion, personal values or health risks, your virginity is a choice. In that case, your biggest problem may be finding a good man with whom you can be close and comfortable.

The only thing you're doing wrong is thinking you're a freak. Really, with all the risks that go along with sex, being a virgin is far from unattractive. Just make sure it's a choice and not a problem.

Here, lizard

■ A lizard who chewed his way to freedom on the Fourth of July is now safely in his cage.

By Jamie Merchant
The Daily Iowan

For a few days last week, Hall Mall resembled Jurassic Park as many local businesses searched for an AWOL reptile, and rumors of a giant man-eating lizard spread. Zon, a Savannah Monitor lizard, broke out of his cage in the Serpentine Motion store in the Hall Mall, 114 E. College St., on July 4, sending his owner and several other local business owners on a search to recover the reptile.

"We had him in a 40-foot breack tank, and he was able to stand his hind legs and chew through top of it," said Michael Ryan, owner of Serpentine Motion, a store that sells exotic pets. Ryan discovered Zon was missing on July 5 when he returned to the store.

"I freaked out," Ryan said. "He's one of my favorite pets."

Ryan wasn't the only one concerned, however. According to a cook at Vito's, 118 E. College, he heard of the lizard's escape and spread a rumor to other Vito's employees about a 6-foot-long man-eating lizard roaming around the area.

"All the guys in the kitchen were laughing, making jokes," Ryan said. "A buddy of mine was gagging down there (at Vito's) that there was a 6-foot man-killer loose."

Dawit Kidane, general manager of Vito's, confirmed there were rumors.

Here, lizard, lizard

■ A lizard who chewed his way to freedom on the Fourth of July is now safely in his cage.

By Jamie Merchant
The Daily Iowan

For a few days last week, the Hall Mall resembled Jurassic Park as many local businesses searched for an AWOL reptile, and rumors of a giant man-eating lizard spread.

Zon, a Savannah Monitor lizard, broke out of his cage in the Serpentine Motion store in the Hall Mall, 114½ E. College St., on July 4, sending his owner and several other local business owners on a search to recover the reptile.

"We had him in a 40-foot breeder tank, and he was able to stand on his hind legs and chew through the top of it," said Michael Ryan, owner of Serpentine Motion, a store that sells exotic pets. Ryan discovered Zon was missing on July 5 when he returned to the store.

"I freaked out," Ryan said. "He's one of my favorite pets."

Ryan wasn't the only one concerned, however. According to him, a cook at Vito's, 118 E. College St., heard of the lizard's escape and spread a rumor to other Vito's employees about a 6-foot-long, man-eating lizard roaming around the area.

"All the guys in the kitchen were laughing, making jokes," Ryan said. "A buddy of mine was gagging girls down there (at Vito's) that there was a 6-foot man-killer loose."

Dawit Kidane, general manager at Vito's, confirmed there were rumors.

"People were concerned because they heard it was 6 feet long," Kidane said. "I've seen it — it's not that big. The way they talked, it was a crocodile. They said it would come through the wall."

In actuality, Zon is 3 feet long and, Ryan said, quite harmless to humans.

"He never bites," Ryan said. "He's so mellow, he's not a threat to others. We were more worried about others being a threat to him."

He was concerned Zon had got caught in the piece of mesh he bit through to escape or that a surprised human might overreact to the reptile's presence.

"A Monitor lizard dropping through the ceiling in Vito's is not something most people would expect," Ryan said.

While many in Vito's were afraid of encountering Zon, Ryan said some businesses in the Hall Mall rallied around to help find the reptile.

"Everyone in the Hall Mall tore apart shops to help find him," he said. "The Electric Head went crazy, Fat Tulip went crazy. We thought he might be in the Hemp Cat, because when we take him on walks, he always makes a bee-line there."

Eventually, Zon was found by someone in the Electric Head Tattoo.

"The guy was making needles, and he said the only thing he heard was his heart beat and the sizzle of the solder until he heard Zon," Ryan said. "The best thing to do when you have one of these loose is to just listen. They're smart, and when they hear something, they stop moving."

Justin Turner/The Daily Iowan

Michael Ryan, owner of Serpentine Motion, lovingly displays Zon, a Savannah Monitor lizard who had been missing since July 4.

Skott Cautman, the Electric Head Tattoo employee who found Zon, saw the lizard's head pop out from under a shelf and immediately yelled for Ryan.

Zon's discovery occurred on July 8, four days after his escape. However, the adventure did not leave the reptile unscathed. Ryan said Zon suffered either a broken or sprained leg from the break-out, but added that none of his injuries is permanent.

"I felt so bad," Ryan said. "I felt like it was all my fault, and it was my fault for not moving him to a bigger cage."

Zon has moved out of his previous cage, and will soon be moved into a new, escape-proof cage in front of the store's counter.

CORRECTION

The Daily Iowan incorrectly spelled the names of two people in a story on July 10 entitled "Renovations irk residents of Summit Street area." The names appeared as Iowa City City Attorney Eleanor Dilts and Historic Preservation Commission member Doris Malkmys. The correct spellings are Eleanor Dilkes and Doris Malkmyn.

Eerie replay in dad's slaying-suicide

■ July 11 killings in Bay-area suburb follow an identical incident five years ago and a half-mile away.

By William Schiffmann
Associated Press

ANTIOCH, Calif. — A distraught father holding his two young children hostage shot and killed himself and the children, five years to the day after another distraught father did exactly the same thing in this fast-growing suburban town of San Francisco area commuters.

Saturday night's killings came just a half-mile away from the 1993 killings, the latest on a tree-lined street two doors away from the mayor's home.

"It is too eerie," Joe Appel, a lawyer who represented the wife of the first killer, told the Contra Costa Times. "July 11. Antioch. I looked at that today and I said, 'Deja vu all over again.'"

Carlos Joseph Ramirez, 22, who was already wanted for murder, forced his way into the home of ex-girlfriend Cami Viramontes on July 10. Viramontes, the mother of Ramirez's two daughters, ages 1 and 3, was forced out of the home along with her parents after Ramirez shot and wounded her father.

He held the children hostage for about 41 hours while police negotiating by telephone tried to keep him calm, tried to persuade him to surrender. Friends outside held a banner that read: "Carlos, we love you." Then suddenly, negotiations went sour.

Police said Ramirez cried out: "What is wrong with me?" Then, "Oh, my God, I love you," followed by the countdown, "5, 4, 3, 2 ..."

"Mr. Ramirez became despondent and ... shortly thereafter it appeared that the sound of one gunshot was heard by the negotiators," police Lt. Rich Marchoke said Sunday.

When police couldn't re-establish contact, "it was decided that entry into the residence had to be made," Marchoke said.

In a bedroom of the house in a pleasant, older neighborhood of well-kept single family homes shaded by trees, they found Ramirez and his younger daughter already dead. His older daughter, still showing some signs of life, died en route to the hospital.

Police had cordoned off an eight-block area and evacuated more than 66 homes, including that of Mayor Mary Rocha, who lives two doors down. Almost 100 officers, many in black SWAT gear with sniper rifles, surrounded Ramirez and his two little captives and appeared ready to wait him out.

It was a different approach than that taken five years earlier, when Joel Souza, 35, upset at the breakup of his marriage, barricaded himself and his two children inside their house just a half-mile from the Viramontes home.

Authorities cut off Souza's electricity and water. After a nine-hour standoff on a scorching summer day, they gave Souza 10 minutes to give up. Nine minutes later, he killed his 8-year-old son, his 5-year-old daughter and himself.

The aggressive approach cost the city $175,000 in a settlement with Souza's widow. Police Chief Dave Lewis said officers didn't know why the waiting game failed with Ramirez, who had been wanted on three separate warrants, including a 1995 gang-related killing.

"To my knowledge, there were no specific problems that were occurring in the negotiations just prior to the incident," Lewis said. "Suddenly, he changed his demeanor, and we have no idea why."

The deaths shook the residents of Antioch, a fast-growing community of some 75,000 about 50 miles east of San Francisco, home to armies of workers who head daily for the San Francisco Bay area or Silicon Valley to the south.

Meg Gibson, who just moved into the neighborhood over the Fourth of July weekend, was attaching a wooden yellow ribbon to her garage door.

The canine conundrum

DON'T think I'm not aware of how somber and melancholy my columns have been these last few weeks. I know. But between the agonies of love gone awry and weather gone mad, it's been a little hard to get a hold of my usual comic muse — know what I'm sayin'? But I'm past all that now and, yee-haw, I'm gonna be perky. But first, I've got to tell you about something.

I had only just returned from vacation in the Northern Wilds when one of my people told me about these two little kids in Des Moines who got mauled by rottweilers on the Fourth of July. My head was filled with images of huge, slavering brutes running down toddlers on Big-Wheels and dragging them off to devour at leisure. I pressed my informant for details. I guess the parents of these kids were visiting friends and had gone outside to drink beer or something. Thinking the friends' dogs were safely kennelled, they left their 1-year-old twins lying on a couch inside the house. Well, evidently the dogs were not locked up, and they came into the living room, found the kids, and proceeded to chew them like brand-new cross-trainers. The kids survived, but they're all perforated with bite marks and will no doubt have some very interesting complexes as they grow older.

Heere, Cujo ... What the hell?! Would someone please tell me why people feel the need to surround themselves with large, fearsome, barely controllable animals? Yeah, I know some folks live in crummy neighborhoods and feel safer if they know that anyone who even pauses for breath on the perimeter of their property will be torn to ribbons by Slayer the Doberman, but I don't care.

Hey, terrific — your pink flamingos and nasty lawn jockeys are safe from harm. That's just wonderful. And don't you sleep better knowing that what grass there may be on your front yard is slowly but surely being packed down into dirt-squish by the taloned feet of a toothy menace pacing round and round on its choke-chain, just waiting and hoping some living thing is foolish enough to set foot in its domain? I'm sure.

It's not that I dislike dogs. I'm very fond of dogs, actually, and the bigger the better. My philosophy is that any dog small enough to sit comfortably on your lap is not a dog at all but is in fact a large, drooly rat. Little poodles? Euech. Shih-tzus? Bleah! Give me the noble Irish wolfhound any day.

A dog should be big enough to haul you out of a frozen river by your shirt collar or pull your sled across the frozen tundra for many miles. A dog should not be funny, unless it's a golden retriever or something. They're a little goofy by nature. But a Pomeranian? A Papillon? Please. These animals look like aliens. They probably are aliens, sent here to Earth to captivate and befuddle humankind in preparation for the Coming Invasion. At any rate, small dogs are yappy and cannot be trusted.

And by the same token, big dogs should not be bred and purchased strictly for their potential meanness. Remember all the hoo-hah back in the late '80s about pit bull terriers? Spuds McKenzie aside, crazed pit bulls tore up and traumatized dozens of little kids before the vogue for them wore off. For the dogs, that is. But that was ridiculous, too; I mean, what the hell are you asking for when you buy an animal with a name like "pit bull"? Fox hunting? Cozy evenings by the fire? Whatever. Here's a helpful hint: Pit bulls were not given their name because they're born in deep holes and resemble cattle.

And yet, folks just went gaga over the ugly little bastards back in the day, and it took a bunch of chewed-up little kids to cool the enthusiasm. What happened in Des Moines two weekends ago is sure to become as commonplace as droves of people go out and buy more dog than they can handle, do a half-assed job of training it and then leave a small child at the mercy of an instinct-driven beast.

If the people buying rottweilers and such raised their puppies in a stern yet affectionate manner instead of yelling at them and starving them of attention, I suspect such animals would inspire more respect than fear — and isn't that better anyway? A well-trained, properly brought-up guard dog is just as effective as a dumb, slobbering mongrel snapping at every passer-by, if not more so. Stark fear isn't a totally useless tool, but you can inspire that with a 12-gauge and skip the paper-training.

So I reckon the overall point here is that people will always insist on keeping big dogs around and making them mean and snarly to protect their property, but I hope eventually they'll realize that a loyal, devoted companion is far more useful in the long run than a trained killer on a short leash.

Council chose wisely in tabling vote

Last week, the City Council wisely delayed its vote on the proposed party ordinance.

Councillors Connie Champion and Karen Kubby deserve credit for making the council wait until later in the year — when more UI students are in town — to decide the fate of the party law.

Students are the ones who would be most affected by the law, and as Champion and Kubby correctly recognized, students should be given a chance to comment on the proposal before the council votes on it.

The proposed ordinance has noble intentions: to minimize illegal underage drinking, to stem the negative impact of out-of-control parties and to act in the best interest of Iowa City residents and students. But it will not be enough to deter those under 21 from drinking.

Students are often associated with the problems of underage drinking, and they should have a say in any plan to combat them.

According to the proposal, a police officer witnessing illegal conduct at a party would have the power to order it to "cease and disperse immediately." By giving police officers the ability to decide whether a party is out of control, the new law would replace the current method of controlling parties: waiting for a neighbor's complaint.

In addition to giving the police expanded powers, the ordinance would also hold the party's host responsible for controlling the gathering and preventing such illegal activity as urinating outdoors, giving alcohol to a minor, possession of controlled substances and/or unauthorized parking.

This proposal puts a lot of responsibility on party-throwers everywhere in Iowa City. For instance, if someone underage is found drinking at a house party, not only could that person be charged, the host could be, too.

While it is important for people to be held accountable for their actions, the council would be naive to believe this ordinance would stop underage drinking.

The fact is, young people are going to drink. It doesn't matter whether they get it at a party, at a bar or from a liquor cabinet at home. Ask any college student and he or she will probably support that statement with either personal experience or knowledge of another's experience.

College seems to be a time to experiment, sometimes with illegal activity or substances. This is not necessarily right, but it is true. When a party gets out of hand, however, it is also true that the police have the right and responsibility to step in and hold those individuals responsible.

Although the proposed party ordinance won't pose a serious threat to underage drinkers, it will decrease the number of out-of-control parties in Iowa City. That will be a good thing for Iowa City residents.

The council's decision to delay the vote is a good thing for UI students.

Hands off my Beanie, baby

LET'S talk about how you can get rich investing in Beanie Babies. For the benefit of those of you who live in primitive rain forest tribes, I should explain that Beanie Babies are little beanbag critters with cute names such as (these are real names) Smoochy the Frog, Spunky the Cocker Spaniel, Claude the Crab, Weenie the Dachshund, Floppity the Bunny, Tank the Armadillo and Chops the Lamb.

Beanie Babies are manufactured in China the Brutal Dictatorship for a U.S. company called Ty Inc., which is named after the owner, Ty the Extremely Rich Person.

DAVE

Beanie Babies were originally intended as fun playthings for children, but as the old saying goes, "Whenever you have something intended as innocent fun for children, you can count on adults to turn it into an obsessive, grotesquely over-commercialized 'hobby' with the same whimsy content as the Bataan Death March." So now Beanie Babies are big business, with grown men and women fighting over them and paying thousands of dollars for certain rare models, such as Peanut the Royal Blue Elephant (not to be confused with Peanut the Light Blue Elephant, which only a total loser would pay thousands of dollars for).

Unfortunately, the Beanie Baby craze has attracted some "bad apples." I have here an Associated Press story stating that in Andover, Mass., police caught somebody trying to sell a stolen Happy the Hippo for $900. The story also states that a couple in Nashua, N.H., allegedly bought Beanie Babies with forged checks, then sold them and used the proceeds to buy heroin.

Fortunately, not all of the people involved in this craze are criminal heroin addicts. Many of them are merely insane. If you don't believe me, you should read their discussions on the Internet. As I write these words, Ty Inc. is about to release a new batch of Beanie Babies and, in the various Beanie Baby Internet chat rooms, the serious collectors are speculating feverishly about what type of animals they will be. One person will post a message saying something like, "I heard the new group will be Wart the Toad, Hefty the Cow, Siphon the Tick, Stench the Dung Beetle and Mucous the Oyster."

And another person will respond: "I question the accuracy of your list, because a VERY highly placed source has informed me the new group will be Suction the Remora, Chuckles the Scorpion, Yap Yap the Neighbor Dog That Makes You Want To Buy An Uzi, Segment the Tapeworm and George Will the Wasp." And on the debate rages, far into the night.

Recently, at a business function, I met a high-ranking corporate officer whose wife, a grown woman, collects Beanie Babies. The man told me on a recent business trip that he bought her a Beanie Baby — I believe it was Strut the Rooster. He knew it was one she didn't have, and he thought she'd be thrilled. But when he gave it to her, she scoffed at him, because she specializes in jungle-dwelling Beanie Babies — such as Freckles the Leopard and Ziggy the Zebra — and whoever heard of a rooster in the jungle, for God's sake? You can imagine how he felt.

Anyway, my point is Beanie Babies are viewed by many collectors as a serious financial investment (Ross Perot currently has 83 percent of his money invested in Beanie Babies, with $276 million in Bongo the Monkey alone). This is not just some "passing fad" like the Cabbage Patch Kids craze of some years back, wherein people spent hundreds of dollars for a bunch of hideously ugly dolls, only to discover, after the frenzy died down, that they had purchased a bunch of hideously ugly dolls. This will not happen with Beanie Babies! Beanie Babies are different!

Why do I say this? Because I purchased one. I was at a McDonald's, getting a cup of coffee. It had a promotion for Beanie Babies, and I decided to invest $1.89 in Inch the Inchworm. I'm sure it will be worth a lot of money, although it did suffer one setback when Daisy got hold of it. Daisy is a beagle we've been dog-sitting for, and one day, while looking around for food, which is pretty much all Daisy ever does, she came across Inch the Inchworm.

Apparently at some point, perhaps millions of years ago, there was a bitter dispute between dogs and inchworms, and Daisy has not forgotten. I heard this "whap-whap-whap" noise from the living room, and I found Daisy shaking Inch violently by the neck so as to kill him in preparation for eating him. (And if you think a dog can't eat a beanbag, you know nothing about dogs.)

But I'm not concerned. I'm confident Inch the Beagle-Spit-Drenched Inchworm will only appreciate in value, and soon I'll be able to retire as a millionaire. Why do I say this? Because I'm going to pour this hot McDonald's coffee on my thighs.

■ The prime minister resigned as the voters showed their ire over economic woes.

By Yuri Kageyama

TOKYO — Prime Minister Ryutaro Hashimoto resigned Monday in reaction to his ruling Liberal Democratic Party's stunning defeat in elections dominated by voters angry over his failure to pull Japan out of its worst recession in decades.

Hashimoto grimly conceded defeat and said he would step down to take responsibility for the party's winning just 44 seats out of 126 contested — half of Parliament's upper house — in Sunday's elections.

"The defeat was my fault," said after a meeting of party leaders approved his decision to resign. The Liberal Democratic Party won just 44 seats out of the 126 contested — half of Parliament's upper house — in Sunday's elections, according to national broadcaster NHK television.

Congress to act on Secret Service dilemma

WASHINGTON (AP) — The chairman of the Senate Judiciary Committee promised Sunday to introduce legislation to determine how much Secret Service agents protecting the president must reveal of what they see and hear.

The question already is in the courts, with the Justice Department debating whether to contest an appeals-court ruling that presidential bodyguards must testify in the Monica Lewinsky case.

Sen. Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, the Judiciary Committee chairman, said the panel will hold hearings and "see what can be done next year, and we will see where we split the baby and really what should be done in this particular area."

A Washington appeals court ruled last week that Independent Counsel Kenneth Starr can question Secret Service personnel before the grand jury looking into allegations that President Clinton had a sexual relationship with former White House intern Lewinsky, then lied about it and asked her to lie.

Justice Department lawyers argued unsuccessfully that forcing an agent to reveal the actions and words of the president could undermine trust between the president and his bodyguards and increase the chances of an assassination.

"There is no such thing as a protective-function privilege," Hatch said on NBC's "Meet the Press," adding it would be wrong "for the courts to create it out of thin air."

bar, but I don't think you had to be gay to go there," said MacDonald, who is straight. "The vibe I get there is that I was never intruding."

The closing of the 620 is surprising considering the large percentage of homosexual and bisexual residents.

"It is bad that in a city with such a large queer population, it couldn't support a gay ... bar," Wilson said.

Iowa City is widely known for its large homosexual and bisexual populations, especially in terms of its per capita numbers, said Jean

Love, co-chair of the Rainbow Project Task Force, a UI committee which examines issues concerning members of the lesbian, gay, bisexual and transgendered communities.

This high percentage can be attributed to the liberal way of thinking of many Iowa City residents which in turn attracts alternative lifestyles, said Mickey Eliason, incoming director of the UI Sexuality Studies program.

"Iowa City has been known as a mecca for liberal thinking," Eliason said. "Poet Allen Ginsberg said that Iowa City is the only place to stop between New York and San Francisco."

Rohovit said the bar had a good run, and he expects the void to be filled in the near future.

"It is interesting that it has lasted this long. Dance clubs have short life spans," Rohovit said. "They will have a hell of a party and bid that era good-bye."

Wilson said he and some of his friends would open up an openly gay bar if he had the money.

Although she was unsure of any final deal, Ann Rhodes, vice president for University Relations, said the UI has the authority to purchase the land in accordance to a plan approved by the Board of Regents years ago.

"The UI is designated to purchase property at the right price," Gibson said.

The plan allows the UI to purchase land within a certain boundary of the area surrounding it, as soon as it becomes available, Rhodes said. This would allow the UI to have flexibility to expand in future years.

"I know the university has had plans for some time to utilize space south of Burlington Street to centralize functions that are spread out. We do have the authority to purchase property adjacent or close to university property," Rhodes said.

Boys' deaths mark 'turning point' in Northern Ireland dispute

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) — Three young brothers who had been asleep in their beds burned to death early Sunday in a sectarian attack marking what shaken Northern Ireland leaders termed a "turning point" in a violent stalemate over a blocked Protestant march.

A neighbor reported hearing 10-year-old Richard, 9-year-old Mark and 7-year-old Jason Quinn screaming while fire gutted their home in Ballymoney, about 40 miles northwest of Belfast.

Their Catholic mother escaped with her Protestant boyfriend, who was beaten back by flames when he returned to try to rescue the brothers, police said. There were reports the boys were being raised as Protestants.

A photograph released by the family showed three impish little boys in sweatshirts, Richard's grin revealing a wide gap in the middle of his teeth.

Police said they broke up a demonstration outside the boys' home shortly before the attack and issued an urgent appeal to anyone who might be able to identify individual protesters.

Businessman Ken Bates, chairman of a major London soccer club, offered a $164,000 reward to find those responsible.

"What price your principles now?" asked Seamus Mallon, the Catholic deputy first minister of the new Belfast Assembly. "Does it take one child, two children, three children?"

Eyeing elections, Clinton and GOP brace for veto fights

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Clinton and Republicans are hurtling toward a flurry of veto fights over abortion, schools and other issues that both hope will help them win November's battle for congressional control.

The House returns this week from its July 4 recess to join the Senate, which came back a week ago. With perhaps 40 voting days left this year, Clinton administration veto threats have been made or are expected against about 40 bills.

Many are aimed at minor legislation, and few vetoes will actually occur. Most of the bills will be modified or won't be sent to the president. But with each party looking to rouse its base voters, neither will flinch from a few high-profile veto battles.

"He plays to his constituencies, and we play to ours," said Rep. Bob Livingston, R-La., chairman of the House Appropriations Committee.

Senate Minority Leader Tom Daschle, D-S.D., called veto fights "a win for Democrats" and said: "By and large, the president is in a much stronger position to frame the issues than Republicans are. He has the bigger soapbox."

The dueling begins Wednesday, when the House plans a vote on whether to override Clinton's June 23 veto of legislation imposing mandatory sanctions on countries or companies selling missile technology to Iran. The president said the measure would hinder his efforts to improve relations with Iran.

Just get me to the Slurpee on time

PORT HURON, Mich. (AP) — A burrito's throw from a Slurpee machine, Cassandra Kaczor took a Big Gulp and a big step on July 11, marrying her sweetheart outside the 7-Eleven store she helps manage.

It is the second marriage for both the Elvis-loving bride and hunting-enthusiast Kerry Setter. Both of those weddings were traditional — nothing quite like Saturday.

A Saturday in the seventh month, its 11th day.

Carrying a bouquet in a Super Big Gulp cup, Kaczor wore a full-length white gown in tying the knot with Setter, clad in a donated tuxedo. Their four children from previous marriages — ages 7 to 11 — made up the wedding party.

To the bride, it was the stuff of dreams — literally.

"A couple of months ago, I had a dream that we got married at 7-Eleven," said Kaczor, an assistant manager at the convenience store. "I thought the dream was odd."

"People think of a convenience store as a terrible job, but it's not. I love my job, and I love my customers."

Although French fans were certainly present, they were not nearly as boisterous as their Brazilian counterparts.

"Brazilians are louder and cheering more," bartender and UI senior Brian Flynn said.

The Column had been set up so fans of France could occupy one side and Brazilian fans the other, but Brazil seemed to take over the bar.

French fan Patrick Bourgeacq said he didn't mind Brazil fans being on the "French side."

"It makes for a good atmosphere," said Bourgeacq, who was watching the game with his father, UI French Professor Jacques Bourgeacq.

Jeremy Pradier, a 15-year-old French native, said he likes soccer and plays at his school but is too afraid to play with the national team.

"I have been a World Cup fan since I was a little baby," said Pradier, who spoke through an interpreter.

Amid the French cheers and a 2-0 deficit, Brazil fans continued to be optimistic, including three Brazilian sisters sporting face paint and outfits for the game. One of the sisters, Vivian Souza, even donned a Brazilian flag cut into a halter top.

"We are going to score," Souza said. "We love Brazil; even if we lose we still love Brazil."

UI graduate student and French native Anne Besco said she would not go to the extremes of some fans, adding she was glad she was not in France, because it would be "too crazy."

"I am not a big fan," Besco said. "I only watched the last two games."

Another French native, Josiane

Peltier, said she likes the game because it brings cultures together.

"Diversity in the game makes the quality of the game," she said. Peltier said she doesn't believe soccer should be a stage to show off nationalism or patriotism.

Similar to the Column and the Vine, Vito's was a sea of Brazilian yellow during the game. However, as the clock ran down and Brazil's defeat came nearer to reality, they sat and stared blankly at the television screens.

After shouting at the television when Brazil almost got its first goal, Vito's general manager Dawit Kidane explained the ensuing silence.

"It's quiet in here because they are all Brazilian fans," he said.

Japanese prime minister resigns

The prime minister resigned as the voters showed their ire over economic woes.

By Yuri Kageyama

TOKYO — Prime Minister Ryutaro Hashimoto resigned Monday in reaction to his ruling Liberal Democratic Party's stunning defeat in elections dominated by voter anger over his failure to pull Japan out of its worst recession in decades.

Hashimoto grimly conceded defeat and said he would step down to take responsibility for the party's winning just 44 seats out of the 126 contested — half of Parliament's upper house — in Sunday's elections.

"The defeat was my fault," he said after a meeting of party leaders approved his decision to resign.

The Liberal Democratic Party won just 44 seats out of the 126 contested — half of Parliament's upper house — in Sunday's elections, according to national broadcaster NHK television.

The number is far short of the 69 seats his party needed to regain a majority in the chamber, which it lost in 1989, and fell far short of matching its current strength of 61. Party leaders have indicated that if they failed to match their current strength, they would seek Hashimoto's resignation.

Party leaders had already begun discussing who would replace Hashimoto, according to NHK. Foreign Minister Keizo Obuchi and former Chief Cabinet Secretary Seiroku Kajiyama were seen as the most likely successors.

Despite the election results, the conservative, pro-business Liberal Democrats will continue to govern because they have firm control over the more powerful lower house, which can pass the national budget and choose the prime minister without the approval of the upper house. Hashimoto's replacement could be another Liberal Democratic legislator.

But without control of the upper house, his party would need the cooperation of other parties to pass key legislation.

"The results are entirely my responsibility," he said. "Everyone has handed down their judgment, and we must accept that with sincerity."

Hashimoto's resignation would likely confuse Japan's efforts to pull itself out of its recession, and concerns over a leadership change sent markets plunging.

In early trading, the Nikkei Stock Average fell 1.35 percent, while the U.S. dollar soared to 144.06 yen, up 2.73 yen.

"We must fix the economy as soon as possible," said Takashi Imai, head of the powerful Japan Federation of Economic Organizations. "We cannot afford to have a political vacuum."

With Japan struggling economically, many voters clearly were fed up. Unemployment is at a record high, consumer spending is plummeting, Japan's financial system is on the verge of a meltdown and major banks are overwhelmed with bad loans.

The LDP's embarrassing performance has led emboldened opposition parties to begin calling for the dissolution of the lower house and for general elections to be held soon.

With politics in turmoil in the short term, efforts to implement economic reforms may stall and send an already skeptical market falling further.

But John Neuffer, a senior research fellow who follows Japanese politics at Mitsui Marine Research Institute, a Tokyo think tank, said the opposition was too fragmented to pose a real threat to the Liberal Democrats.

"The LDP remains the only show in town when it comes to running the government," he said.

The electoral humiliation may prompt the LDP and the government to work harder to get the economy back on track, Neuffer said.

Toward the end of the campaign, the LDP flip-flopped on cutting income taxes. Many voters, as well as the United States, considered tax cuts a key factor for economic recovery.

The Democrats — a liberal, relatively new party that recently emerged as the main opposition threat to the LDP — promised such a tax cut early in the campaign.

The Democrats won 27 seats, a gain of nine, and now hold 47 in the entire upper house.

The Beasties are back, saying, Hello, Nasty

■ One of summer's most anticipated albums, Hello, Nasty from the Beastie Boys, is scheduled to go on sale tonight.

By Deanna Thomann
The Daily Iowan

After a span of four years, the hip-hop/punk pioneers, the Beastie Boys, are back and stronger than ever, according to employees of local music stores.

The group's fifth full-length album — titled Hello, Nasty — is scheduled to be released today at midnight.

Many are predicting Hello, Nasty to be one of the most popular albums of the year, giving Before These Crowded Streets, the latest Dave Matthews Band album, a run for its money.

"This album will definitely hold its own. I expect it to do tremendously well."

— Chad Dreier,
employee of Discount Records

Chad Dreier, an employee of Discount Records, 21 S. Dubuque St. — which will be hosting a midnight sale of Hello, Nasty — expects the album to live up to its pre-release hype.

"This album will definitely hold its own," Dreier said. "I expect it to do tremendously well."

With the domination of hip-hop in today's music scene, the three-some's latest material is sure to be welcomed by many, said Adam Penly of BJ's Compact Discs, 615 S. Dubuque St.

"The Beastie Boys are one of the best groups to define the punk and hip-hop style," he said.

Not only has the band created a unique musical style, but it is also known for influencing many cultural trends, including clothing styles and helping push extreme sports into the mainstream. Dreier doesn't expect this album to have the same cultural following as the band's previous works.

"They've matured somewhat," Dreier said. "They probably will create a following, but I'm not sure of what it will be."

There's no denying the band members have matured. Now in their 30s, the Boys' sound is likely to change somewhat.

"The Beastie Boys' sound is more intellectual and not as angry," Penly said. "This album is also influenced more by electronics."

'Lethal Weapon 4' blasts into top box-office spot

LOS ANGELES (AP) — "Lethal Weapon 4" blasted its way into the No. 1 spot in the North American box office with about $34.4 million in ticket sales, according to preliminary industry estimates released Sunday.

"Armageddon," with $23.1 million in weekend ticket sales, is expected to top the $100 million mark today, analysts said.

The original "Lethal Weapon" grossed $6.8 million in its opening weekend. The second version took in $20.3 million and No. 3 sold $33.2 million in tickets when it opened, said Paul Dergarabedian, vice president of Exhibitor Relations.

"If the estimates hold, it will top them all," he said. "The public was looking for a real action picture, something they had seen before and liked. By using the same cast and infusing (comedian) Chris Rock, the audience responded to it."

Here are estimated grosses for the top movies for July 10 through Sunday as compiled by Exhibitor Relations. Final figures are expected today.

1. "Lethal Weapon 4," $34.4 million.
2. "Armageddon," $23.1 million.
3. "Small Soldiers," $14.5 million.
4. "Dr. Dolittle," $12.8 million.
5. "Mulan," $7 million.
6. "Madeline," $6.6 million.
7. "The Truman Show," $3.73 million.
8. "The X-Files," $3.7 million.
9. "Out of Sight," $3.7 million.

Porn: A family business

■ New York City's mayor's move to get rid of sex shops has upset one owner.

By Ted Anthony
Associated Press

NEW YORK — For his grandfather, it was Vargas girls and naughty Bettie Page pinups that drew the customers in the 1950s. His father held out through the hard-core revolution of the 1970s that turned New York's Times Square into a chaotic swirl of prurience and purple neon.

Lou Lipkin is long dead. George Lipkin has retired to Long Island. So it falls to a third generation of Lipkins to keep the family business prospering — a business as synonymous with Times Square as the word "theater" is with Broadway.

Now, at a time when the most vocal sentiment from Mayor Rudolph W. Giuliani on down paints him as an agent of filth, Scott Lipkin wants people to know he's a law-abiding merchant trying, like his father and grandfather, to make a living selling sexual imagery in the place some call "the world's crossroad."

It has never been easy. It is less so today.

"I love New York," said Lipkin, 29, a compact man with a stoical face and a black ponytail that reaches down his back. "I just don't love what they're doing to us. We've paid taxes for three generations."

Wait — hold that value judgment. Whether you support his right to purvey porn or believe he is an agent of Satan, Lipkin's story is, if nothing else, interesting.

He respects his opponents' right to dislike what he does and despises hypocrites who condemn his products but shop at his store. He has watched Disney buy up Times Square property, watched the Olive Gardens and Sbarros pop up, and now sees Giuliani promoting a law to drive sex shops out of residential areas.

He tells of guys who come in and ask to rent videos under assumed names. "I'm politically involved," they tell him. He knows about the businessmen in the Italian-cut suits whose eyes dart furtively about before they scurry into his store.

He also knows there is one constant: Sex sells, and it has put food on the table for three generations of Lipkins.

"We're all here because of sex," Lipkin said. "We're interested in it. It's a beautiful thing. We should have places where people can come to understand sexuality. It's a lot more dangerous when you hide it

Scott Lipkin poses in his adult video store off New York's Times Square on July 1. Lipkin's father and grandfather ran the store before him, although in his grandfather's day it was Bettie Page pinups and Vargas girls that brought the customers in.

— when you say, 'Oh — that's disgusting.'"

In Times Square, sex has hardly been subtle; the district is known across the world as the place where the gargoyles shine in voluptuous neon, where names such as "Peep World" and "Playpen" protrude among newsstands, bodegas and electronics shops.

But as Giuliani pushes his effort to revitalize New York, Times Square's very visibility has made it a centerpiece of reform. High rents are driving out small businesses.

"This town's all about big business right now," Lipkin said. "The small stores are getting nailed — the delis, the little clothes shops get run over for a Home Depot or a Blockbuster. I see these things being torn down, and it's generations of my history."

His grandfather, Lou Lipkin, fled Nazi Germany in the 1930s and opened a bookstore just off Times Square. He soon discovered sex sells; the back room where he kept the pinups and nude magazines proved a big attraction, though it represented only 5 percent of his business.

Before he died at age 61, he had built something unusual in an industry that thrives on anonymity — customer loyalty.

"I have people who have been coming to my business for three generations. They'll say, 'I remember your grandfather,'" Lipkin said Sunday.

His father and uncle took over from his grandfather. They opened other stores, five at their peak.

His uncle, bruised by opposition and police, moved to Canada. Some stores closed; their leases ran out. The flagship store burned down — the only time, Lipkin said, that he saw his father cry. George Lipkin grew ill and retired in 1991.

"I look at my father as a hero in some senses," Lipkin said.

Lipkin had a "normal, typical" childhood, growing up on Long Island, never entering his father's stores until he was 20. Today, where the flagship store once stood, a big fence says "42nd Street Development."

Five years ago, Lipkin bought the store he owns today. It was called the Pleasure Palace. He changed it to The Palace to sound less provocative. It is also a nod to a similarly named vaudeville house that once stood nearby.

Today, the porn consumer profile has changed, primarily with the rise of video. Women and couples have joined the regulars. Lipkin said he now ships videos to women with whom he went to college. Even police officers patronize his stores, he said, including one who used to arrest his father in the 1970s.

Lipkin said he and his employees monitor the peep-show booths and eject anyone who misbehaves. But he said the city law that bars sex shops — whether strip joints or video stores — from many areas of the city is just too much.

"My family's always abided by the law," he said. "But it makes me sick. Look at HBO. Look at the Internet. There's a lot of people who are accepting of this. They just don't want to say it."

from Atlanta, handing Tom Glavine his first road loss.

The Marlins had already defeated Denny Neagle and Greg Maddux before beating Glavine (12-4).

Rookie Mike Redmond had three hits and drove in two runs for Florida, which has won 18 of 30 and trails fourth place Montreal by just 1 1/2 games.

Blue Jays 7, Tigers 2

DETROIT — Roger Clemens struck out 10 in the first five innings for his fifth straight win and Ed Sprague homered twice Sunday, leading Toronto to a 7-2 win over Detroit.

Jose Canseco hit a tie-breaking two-run double in the eighth inning, and Shannon Stewart and Shawn Green added homers for the Blue Jays.

Twins 11, Indians 6

CLEVELAND — Rookie Eric Milton took a perfect game into the sixth inning and David Ortiz drove in a career-high four runs for Minnesota.

Milton (5-7) didn't allow a hit or baserunner until David Bell hit his seventh homer with two outs in the sixth.

By then, the Twins had built a 10-0 lead on 13 hits off Charles Nagy (7-6) and Jose Mesa.

Royals 4, White Sox 3

CHICAGO — Jeff Conine blooped an RBI single for his fourth hit of the game as Kansas City scored twice in the ninth inning.

Yankees 9, Devil Rays 2

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. — The Yankees won their 10th straight game for their longest winning streak in four years after scoring seven ninth-inning runs.

The Yankees' 14th victory in 15 games enabled them to keep pace with the 1902 Pittsburgh Pirates for baseball's best start this century at 65-20.

Derek Jeter followed with a two-run single and Tino Martinez doubled off Scott Aldred to drive in three more runs and break the game open.

Orioles 11, Red Sox 7

BALTIMORE — Eric Davis hit his 10th career grand slam and

SPORTS BRIEF

CYCLING: Belgian wins first stage of Tour de France

DUBLIN, Ireland (AP) — Belgium's Tom Steels, disqualified from last year's race for throwing a water bottle at a racer, overcame stiff winds and a crash involving a half-dozen riders Sunday to win the first stage of the Tour de France.

Steels survived the concluding circuit of Dublin's vast Phoenix Park to win the 112-mile course in 4 hours, 29 minutes, 58 seconds.

"I'm always relieved to win the first stage," he said. "I did what I had to do."

Germany's Erik Zabel took second place. Australia's Robbie McEwen, Italy's Gian Matteo Fagnini and Nicola Minali, and France's Frederic Moncassin and Philippe Gaumont took the third through seventh spots, respectively — all in the same time as Steels.

Chris Boardman, the time-trial specialist from Britain who won Saturday's opening prologue through downtown Dublin, retained the leader's yellow jersey for a second day, finishing 39th.

SPORTS BRIEFS

BASKETBALL: Acie Earl cut from U.S. world team

CHICAGO (AP) — Former Iowa standout Acie Earl failed to make Saturday's cut for the U.S. world championship team.

Earl, Iowa's career leader in blocked shots, has been playing with the CBA's La Crosse Bobcats. He was the Boston Celtics' No. 1 draft choice in 1993, went to Toronto in the expansion draft and was traded to Milwaukee in February of 1997. Milwaukee released him last October.

With his roster whittled to 16 finalists Saturday, Rudy Tomjanovich's next task is figuring out how to meld his ragtag group of college and CBA players into a team that can compete for a medal.

Duke standout Trajan Langdon and Big Ten player of the year Mateen Cleaves are the biggest names on the list of 16 finalists. Earl Boykins, who, at 5-foot-5 is known as much for his diminutive stature as he is for his ball-handling skills, also made the cut. So did Jimmy King, who was part of Michigan's famed Fab Five and now plays in the CBA.

The other finalists are: Brad Miller; Kwane Garris; Michael Hawkins; Jimmy Oliver; Wendell Alexis; Tim Breaux; Bill Edwards; Jason Sasser; David Wood; Ashraf Amaya; Warren Kidd; and Gerard King.

Tomjanovich is expected to make one more cut before training camp ends Tuesday, and announce his official 12-man roster after the team's camp in Monte Carlo. The 1998 FIBA World Championships begin July 29 in Athens, Greece.

LOCAL: Iowa-Iowa State football game sold out

The Iowa State at Iowa football game Sept. 12 at Kinnick Stadium was announced as a sellout by the UI Friday.

Single-game tickets remain for Iowa's five other home games. Student season tickets are still on sale.

The Hawkeyes' other five home games are against Central Michigan Sept. 5 (Letterman's Day), Michigan Oct. 3, Northwestern Oct. 10 (Homecoming), Wisconsin Oct. 24 (Parent's Weekend) and Ohio State Nov. 14.

WORLD CUP FINAL FRANCE 3, BRAZIL 0

The host with the most

(Above) French teammates on touchline react as the referee whistles the end of the final of the soccer World Cup 98 between Brazil and France at the Stade de France in Saint Denis, north of Paris, Sunday.

France defeats Brazil to win its first World Cup

By Barry Wilner

Associated Press

SAINT DENIS, France — There was flair to their soccer and passion to their approach. So typically French.

Yet it took them nearly 70 years to get it right. When they did on Sunday, it was so perfect that it set off the wildest celebrations France has seen since World War II.

Vive la France, champions of soccer for the first time after a stunning 3-0 rout of mighty Brazil. The entire nation, caught up in soccer fever like never before, might not stop partying until, well, the next World Cup.

"We won the final because we wanted it the most," coach Aime Jacquet said. "It was the result of hard work. We really worked as a team. There was good will and friendship between all of us."

The fans in the flying-saucer-shaped Stade de France felt it, singing and cheering and worshipping the first host nation to win the World Cup since Argentina in 1978. Fans from the Mediterranean to the beaches of Normandy shared their joy, and carried it into the streets, partying long into the night.

Unfortunately, things got a little carried away in Paris when a drunk driver zigzagged down the Champs Elysees, where a million people gathered to party. The female driver plowed into a group of fans, injuring about 60 seriously, according to rescue officials.

Never has France had a team like this. Never has it had a playmaker like Zinedine Zidane, the magician of Marseille who turned goal-scorer Sunday with two in the first half. Never has it had anything like Fabien Barthez, the fierce-looking, bald-headed goalkeeper who allowed just two goals in the tournament — and none to four-time champion Brazil.

"It's all that we expected. It's incredible. There are no words," Zidane said. "All that I know is that the Cup will stay in France for the next four years."

France has never been a power in Hollywood Hulk Hogan puts a choke hold on the neck of Utah Jazz basketball star Karl Malone at a pay-per-view wrestling match Sunday in San Diego.

SAN DIEGO (AP) — While everyone was watching the NBA players in the wrestling match Sunday, a bodyguard snuck in and decided things.

Dennis "Rodzilla" Rodman and Karl "The Mailman" Malone were the main attractions in the tag-team match that was decided by a last-minute, dirty entrance from a bodyguard.

When it was over, it was the quiet, workmanlike Malone who acted like the wild, authority-defying Rodman usually does.

Rodman, a member of the NBA champion Chicago Bulls, and "Hollywood" Hulk Hogan beat Malone, a member of the NBA Finals runner-up Utah Jazz, and "Diamond" Dallas Page before a sellout crowd of 12,000 and a pay-per-view television audience.

After Malone delivered a series of head butts to Rodman and Hogan, the crowd began screaming at Hogan and that's when the team's beefy bodyguard entered the ring.

After Page entered the ring for Malone, the unidentified bodyguard quickly slammed Page to the canvas. Hogan pounded Page with finishing blows to a referee's count.

But a defiant Malone disagreed with the result. He grabbed the referee around the neck and slammed him into the canvas. He then spit at a crowd that had gathered around Hogan and Rodman and he left the ring at San Diego State's Cox Arena while flashing Page's trademark diamond symbol with his hands.

MAJOR LEAGUE BASEBALL ROUNDUP

38, 39, 40 ...

McGwire gets back in the swing of things

ST. LOUIS (AP) — After a long pause for him, Mark McGwire is right back on track.

The St. Louis slugger, who ended a 21 at-bat homerless slump with a game-winning shot on Saturday, hit his major league-leading 39th and 40th homers in Sunday's 6-4 victory over the Houston Astros.

In the first inning, McGwire hit the first pitch he saw from Sean Bergman (8-5) off the wall beyond the visitor's bullpen in left field. He struck out in the third and drew his major league-leading 19th intentional walk in the fourth before hitting No. 40 on a 2-1 pitch from Scott Elarton to lead off the seventh, a 415-foot drive.

McGwire broke his own record for reaching 40 homers the fastest, getting there in 281 at-bats. He did it in 294 at-bats in 1996, when he finished with 52 homers.

McGwire has 427 career homers, passing Billy Williams for 23rd on the list. He's only three away from the team homer record of 43 set by Johnny Mize in 1939.

Cubs 3, Brewers 0
MILWAUKEE — Mark Clark pitched a three-hitter for his first shutout in more than four years and Scott Servais drove in all three Chicago runs.

Clark (5-8) retired 16 of the last 18, walked two and struck out five in the third three-hitter and shutout of his career. The right-hander's last shutout came against Detroit on May 13, 1994.

A crowd of 50,735 pushed the weekend attendance to 184,432, making it the second largest four-game set in Brewers history.

Cubs outfielder Sammy Sosa went 0-for-3 with a walk.

Brad Woodall (4-4) allowed six hits in seven innings.

Mets 5, Expos 2
NEW YORK — Brian McRae hit a two-run homer in the sixth inning and reliever Jeff Tam got his first major league win.

Butch Huskey, benched on Saturday for Todd Hundley's return, started in right field and went 4-for-4. Hundley started in left for the second straight game and was 0-for-2 with a walk before leaving for a pinch-hitter in the seventh.

Phillies 10, Pirates 4
PITTSBURGH — Mark Lewis, Doug Glatville and Gregg Jefferies hit two-run homers and Philadelphia finished off its second consecutive three-game sweep of Pittsburgh.

Carlton Loewer (4-1) withstood Desi Relaford's three-base throwing error in a two-run Pirates' first inning to allow three runs — only one earned — and five hits over six innings.

Marlins 5, Braves 3

MIAMI — Florida took three of four games in a weekend series

■ Hashimoto's resignation adds to Japan's economic troubles, thus adding to the Asian crisis.

By Jared Smith
The Daily Iowan

The resignation of Japanese Minister Ryutaro Hashimoto has created political uncertainty in a country already facing a severe economic crisis, and many are closely watching what happens next.

"In the short-term, it will have a negative effect on their economy," said UI political science Professor Chong Lim Kim, who specializes in politics of the Far East. "Uncertainty always causes a negative impact on a nation's economy."

Hashimoto stepped down in response to the failure of his Democratic Party to win the needed to maintain control of the upper house of Japan's Parliament. Chong Lim Kim and others have taken notice of Japan's political situation.

Central S will work

■ As competitors or comrades, the Coral Ridge 10 and the Theatre will provide a wide range of artistic films.

By Robynn K. Sturm
The Daily Iowan

The Bijou Theatre will no longer be the exclusive venue for small independent films when Central State after Corporation expands its operations and its outlook with the Coral Ridge 10.

The corporation, which owns the theatres, the Englert Theatre, Cinemas I & II and Coral Ridge 10, will have six additional theatres to run six additional movies in the Iowa City area.

With six more choices, general manager Arthur Stein Jr. said the States Theater Corporation plans to show more independent and foreign films.

However, plans to include obscure films may cause the Coral Ridge 10 to lose some of its audience.

Bad air bags prompt GM to recall 1 million cars

WASHINGTON — General Motors is recalling nearly 1 million cars after people were injured by air bags bursting open without any crash. And the government is investigating reports of air problems in other makers' cars.

The GM move came after it got a handful of complaints about the air bags inflating inadvertently in late model Chevrolet Cavaliers, Pontiac Sunfire and Cadillacs. The National Highway Traffic Safety Administration is investigating other reports.
