Harkin bill takes aim at meth

Two Iowa lawmakers are leading the battle against meth abuse.

A companion bill is expected to be introduced to the House of Representatives today or early next week by Rep. Leonard Boswell, D-Iowa.

Harkin Press Secretary Patrick Denver said the second session was for passage of the bill.

"We need to take a multi-prong approach to it, through tough law enforcement, drug free and penal, with treatment, to get addicts off the street for the best prevention," Denver said.

Eric Wood, Boswell’s press secretary, said the rise of methamphetamine use made the legislation important.

"If we can get it off the street, it will pay for itself in the long run," Wood said.

In 1999, 131 meth labs have already been forced to leave Iowa. In 1998, 81 percent of the drug stores investigated by police departments in Iowa, which prompted the creation of the Iowa High Intensity Drug Trafficing Agency.

The Midwest unit was specifically hired to fight the spread of methamphetamine use and production in the Midwest.

Kerry to highlight ADA

During his time as a government official, Kerry was considered a strong advocate for the rights of people with disabilities.

For him, the mission goes beyond politics — Kerry has been committed to the ADA since his early days as a lawyer.

Most importantly, Veblen believes the government and the ADA have made major breakthroughs in the last eight years, specifically in the areas of education and employment.

"When you’re walking down the streets, you see people who are blind, and when you work with them, you realize that’s how you should be doing things anyway," Veblen said.

Kerry said the ADA is "one of the greatest pieces of legislation of our time," and he emphasized the importance of public education about the ADA and the benefits the program offers.

"This has been a historic day in the fight against disability discrimination," Veblen said.

Clinton OKs relief

Eleven states are eligible for aid, which includes disaster relief for farmers and emergency assistance for low-income families.

By Terence Wintz
Associated Press

Washington — President Clinton rushed disaster relief to Texas farmers Thursday and authorized $100 million to help farmers pay their utility bills, including water and electricity.

"In times of human crisis, we have an obligation to act," Clinton said at the White House. Farmers whose crops have been destroyed by drought, he said, "I wish I could meet each and every one of you."

Clinton released $100 million to help farmers pay their utility bills.

Clinton, who has been criticized for his handling of the drought, said he called a meeting with Republican and Democratic lawmakers to discuss disaster relief for farmers.

Clinton declared all Texas counties eligible for federal aid and said he will combine his efforts with Margaret Thatcher's efforts to save the environment. Clinton said he will combine his efforts with Margaret Thatcher's efforts to save the environment.

WASHINGTON — Iran's test of a medium-range missile will not be a "critical turn," the White House said Thursday, but it added that a continuing series of small advances in Iran's missile program would "derail" the administration's "long indicated" desire to reach a nuclear agreement with the Iranians.

In her speech last month, First Lady Hillary Rodham Clinton said, "We're getting there," with respect to the White House's peace push. But she also said the U.S. must "be prepared to act." On Thursday, she reiterated that preparedness.

"Clearly we're not there yet," Clinton said. "His press secretaries. 'We have a long way to go..."" Clinton said. "But we're definitely on the right track."

The Iranians, however, say it's going to take more than words to get them to talk seriously about reining in their missile program.

Glass to bid farewell to the VI

Glass came to the University of Iowa on July 24, 1980, to direct the opera "The Merry Widow," the first opera in the series. Glass was later named director of the University of Iowa's Opera Program, a position he held until his retirement in 2001.

Glass's impact on the University of Iowa's opera program was significant. He oversaw the production of numerous operas, including "The Merry Widow," "Die Fledermaus," and "Carmen," and he was known for his dedication to the program and his passion for opera. Glass's influence extended beyond his work at the University of Iowa, as he also served as the artistic director of the Arena Stage in Washington, D.C., and as a member of the faculty at the Royal Academy of Music in London.

Glass's contributions to the world of opera were recognized with numerous awards and honors. In 2001, he was awarded the National Medal of Arts by President Bill Clinton, and in 2007, he was inducted into the Opera News Hall of Fame. Glass passed away on September 10, 2016, but his legacy continues to inspire and influence opera lovers around the world.
HIS month’s sign that the apocalypse is upon us, is surely President Clinton’s expressed concern about the Y2K problem. His little July 14 conference held for the media, that we have a problem here (because some computers will go loopy when the year goes from 1999 to 2000), is a wonderful example of the political process at work.

The president’s will: to point to a problem that is real but not so real that you can’t take care of the problem apart from fixed during the numerous program-fixing sessions that have happened since the Y2K is that those fixes needed for the future are not yet. As the drawed date approaches, some of them may get much worse or much as does the branch. Badly 1% of the programs.

The problem that the president is talking about is a real one, and there are a number of serious issues that need to be addressed. However, the fact that the president is talking about it does not mean that we need to panic. The problem is not as severe as some have suggested, and there are solutions that can be implemented to address it.

The president is right to be concerned about the Y2K problem, but he is also right to be cautious about how we respond to it. JAPAN'S OLD GUARD LEADS RACE

With the economy reeling and the yen rising, the front-runner for prime minister is a loyal party man.

By Joepj Cumen
Associated Press

Tokyo — Political old guard Koizumi Hashimoto belittled his rival in the race for prime minister, brushing aside an injured eye at the close of a debate.

"There is no need to comment on what my rival said," a weary looking Hashimoto told a news conference following the first televised debate.

Hashimoto, 61, is considered the only candidate who will succeed Prime Minister Junichiro Koizumi, who is stepping down at the end of the month.

The three candidates outlined their visions for the future of Japan in the debate, with their issues ranging from nationalisation to radiation therapy.

"It is a matter of life and death," said Mr. Hashimoto, a former Finance Minister.

"We have to focus on the economy, not only on the future," he added.

Mr. Hashimoto has been a loyal supporter of Koizumi, and has been thought to be the front-runner for the top job.

He said he was surprised by the low turnout for the debate, which took place in front of a studio audience.

"I was hoping for a larger turnout," he said.

The debate was broadcast on national television, but only a small number of people tuned in.

Mr. Hashimoto said he was not surprised by the lack of interest.

"It is difficult to attract the public," he said.

He said he would concentrate on improving the economy and making Japan more competitive.

Mr. Hashimoto has been a vocal critic of Koizumi's policies, and has been accused of being too soft on the economy.

He said he would take a more aggressive approach, and would introduce a range of measures to stimulate growth.

Mr. Hashimoto said he would also focus on improving the kidders, and would offer a range of welfare reforms to help the elderly.

He said he would also introduce measures to help the disabled, and would focus on improving the health care system.

LAKE FOREST, Ill. (AP) — Strada is one Hawkeye vying for a spot on U.S. team

Former wrestler fighting his way to success

ALGER

Like Alger's last two appearances, in the 1988 World Cup and 1969 U.S. Open, the 1976 Olympic Games are again. Unlike Alger's previous appearances, this time he's one of five boys in my family for injury," Galbees said. "That's one of the cornerstones that the athletes can do to injure someone here.

While the sport itself has become less controversial, the issue of safety remains a concern.

THE BEGINNING

The story of Alger's rise from wrestling to no-holds-barred fighting is one that is well known. Alger began his career as a wrestler for the University of Illinois, where he compiled a 141-13-3 record from 1964 to 1968.

A three-time Big Ten Champion and an NCAA champion at 187 and 197 pounds, he pushed his way into the Olympic trials during the 1970s with a string of impressive performances.

The road to Alger's success was not an easy one, however. As he worked towards the maturing of his body, he faced several obstacles, including several injuries to his fingers, hand, and back.

Alger's first taste of the Octagon came on a large stage, the pro-grappling special Ultimate Fighting Championship (UFC) event against his American opponent, Robbi Wiedenmayer.

Alger dominated from the start, just like his days as a Hawkeye. But suddenly, the tide turned.

"Before you have to win the fight and think 'this is me,'" Alger said. "I'm not just a hard worker and my moral outlook and hard-working environment have never been affected by anything."

The onus explanation left Alger with a partially dislocated elbow and a swollen arm.

The victory proved that Alger is not done with the wrestling. He continues to train and continue the tradition of the sport that he competed in during his career.

"I have a lot of respect for wrestling and for the men who have been in the business," Alger said. "The more I can give back to wrestling, the better I can help others.

At the conclusion of Alger's career, he had won numerous titles and set records in the sport. Alger's legacy is one that will live on for years to come, and his dedication to the sport will be remembered for generations to come.

Pittsburgh's Jose Guillen homered back to second sports, as Florida shortstop Ichiro Suzuki is poised to aid the Big One in about ten after dropping the groundball hit by Pinero Arguelles Barcay in the ninth inning in Pittsburgh Thursday.

Clark stays hot, Cub win

CHICAGO (AP) — Mark Clark and Scott Servais are doing everything they can to forget the first half of the season.

Clark hit .459 combined as a six-thirteenth Thunder and the Chicago Cubs won their 20th straight game, 4-3 over the National Phillies.

Clark hit .459 allowed four hits in all nine games and scored a run to spark the Cub's offense.

Clark and Servais have been a key part of the Cubs' success this season. Clark has 10 home runs and 36 RBIs in 131 games this season.

World Series

The 1992 World Series was a classic between the Chicago Cubs and the Atlanta Braves. The series went seven games, with the Braves winning the title. It was a memorable series for many reasons. The game was played at Wrigley Field, which is considered one of the most beautiful stadiums in America. The series was filled with exciting moments, including a dramatic ninth-inning home run by Atlanta's Tom Glavine to win Game 7.

The series was also marked by a tense atmosphere, with fans on both sides cheering and jeering throughout the games. The Cubs and Braves had a storied rivalry that spanned decades, and the World Series was a chance for the two teams to settle the score.

Japanese players join Packers, Chiefs

Four Japanese players are practicing with the Green Bay Packers and Kansas City Chiefs in preparation for an exhibition game in Tokyo.

"The idea is to get the four players to compete against each other," said a team official. "This is our way of fostering competition in the NFL.

The four players, all of whom are international players, are: Tomoya Nakamura, Tadashi Nakamura, Kojiro Saito, and Atsushi Saito.

The exhibition game is scheduled for September 28th, with the winner advancing to the regular season.

Lawsuits dismissed against former Husker players

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) - A court has granted a motion to dismiss lawsuits filed by former Nebraska football players against the school over their long-term disability insurance.

Former Nebraska players, including quarterback Matt Davison, offensive lineman Tony Hills, and wide receiver Richaud Lyles, filed the lawsuits in 2019, alleging that the university had failed to provide adequate coverage for their injuries.

The university argued that the lawsuits were time-barred and that the players had failed to exhaust their administrative remedies.

The court agreed, dismissing the lawsuits in a ruling last week.

Former world champion boxer convicted of reckless driving

VIRGINIA BEACH, Va. (AP) - Former world champion boxer Don King has been found guilty of reckless driving and has been sentenced to 12 months in jail.

Don King was arrested last year after police say he was driving his Rolls Royce at a high speed in a residential neighborhood.

The judge sentenced King to two years probation and ordered him to serve 12 months in jail, with credit for time served.

King, who won the World Boxing Association Super Middleweight title in 1983, is known for his flamboyant style and his signature gold medallion.

Stories from TV alienation

By Tyler Doward

Let's start with the obvious: Television shapes us. It occupies the outer-recesses of our heads, our minds, our bodies, ourselves, with others. Sixty-five million people—270 million if you consider those watching the TV shows that are not currently on the air—know exactly where they are supposed to be at any given time, with whom they are supposed to be there, and what they are supposed to be doing. What they are supposed to be doing is watching television, not engaging in any other activities.

In the past, the only way to engage in television was to watch it. If you wanted to watch a show, you had to be in front of the TV. Now, with the advent of streaming services, we can watch TV shows at any time, on any device, from anywhere in the world. The only requirement is that we have an internet connection.

Three of his last four films in the war, Spielberg continues his...
