Late-term abortion battle heats up

By Mike Glenn

The Nevada Supreme Court ruled last week that a law permitting the early termination of pregnancies was unconstitutional. The ruling means that abortions can be performed without restrictions until the fetus has developed to the point where it can survive outside the womb.

The court's decision was based on a constitutional provision that says all laws must be reasonable. The law at issue, passed in 1976, made it illegal for doctors to perform abortions after the 20th week of pregnancy.

The Nevada case is one of several recent rulings that have challenged laws restricting abortion rights. The U.S. Supreme Court is currently reviewing a similar case from New York.

Governor Bob Miller has signed a law that allows state officials to impose sanctions on doctors who perform abortions without a valid medical reason. Miller said the law is necessary to protect the health of women and the safety of unborn children.

The law, which takes effect on Jan. 1, requires doctors to obtain a license from the state before performing an abortion. It also requires them to report to the state any abortion performed without a medical reason.

Miller said the law is a necessary step to protect the rights of women and the safety of unborn children. He added that he hopes the new law will encourage doctors to follow the state's guidelines for abortion procedures.

The Nevada Supreme Court also agreed with a decision by the 9th Circuit Court of Appeals that upheld the state's right to regulate abortion. The court ruled that the state had a legitimate interest in protecting the health of women and the safety of unborn children.

However, the court rejected a challenge to the state's ban on late-term abortions, which was challenged by Planned Parenthood, a women's health organization. The court ruled that the ban was constitutional because it was rationally related to the state's interest in protecting the health of women and the safety of unborn children.

The court also rejected a challenge to the state's ban onpartial-birth abortions, which was challenged by the American Civil Liberties Union. The court ruled that the ban was constitutional because it was rationally related to the state's interest in protecting the health of women and the safety of unborn children.

Clinton releases Kosovo aid

The White House action represents an $85 million award for the war-torn region.

By A. P. STARR

WASHINGTON - President Clinton released $85 million in aid to Kosovo Wednesday, but a State Department official said the amount of aid will help relieve the "humanitarian crisis" in the country.

The aid release comes as Secretary of State Madeleine Albright and President Clinton met with the leaders of Kosovo's guerrilla movement who control much of the region. The meeting occurred during the ongoing war with Yugoslav forces.

The meeting was the first since the president authorized the delivery of $5.5 million worth of military supplies to the Kosovo Liberation Army.

"One of our goals is to be able to assure the authorities pull back and allow access in a secure environment," Albright told reporters. "I will ask Senator Boxer for repair and restoration aid for Kosovo." Albright said that $85 million in aid would be the US contribution to the first round of European Union aid for Kosovo.

"I am pleased we could make this first round of aid available," Albright said. "We now will have the opportunity to work with the Kosovo government to work on post-war planning and reconstruction." Albright said the EU aid will come through the International Monetary Fund and the European Bank for Reconstruction and Development.

The aid will be used to meet the needs of 1 million people who have been displaced from their homes. The aid will also be used to finance medical care for Kosovo refugees as they seek access to the area.

"This is a first step," Albright said. "We will have to continue to work on this issue." Albright said that the US will continue to work with the Kosovo government to ensure that aid is distributed.

In addition, Albright said that the US will continue to provide military supplies to the Kosovo Liberation Army. The supplies will include anti-tank missiles, mortars, and other equipment.

The aid release comes as the US and other countries continue to press for a political solution to the Kosovo crisis. The UN has called for a "political solution" in Kosovo.

"We are working to find a political solution," Albright said. "We will continue to work with the Kosovo government to ensure that aid is distributed.

Palestinian rebuilds house - again

The reconstruction, after a second demolition, has turned a house into a symbol of resistance.

A Palestinian house that was destroyed by Israeli forces in the West Bank village of Atara on Sept. 12, 1998, has been rebuilt for a second time.

WO individuals at a recent Iowa City Council meeting voiced their concerns over the city's deer-management plan. The idea of dead-deer littering the streets to fill quotas really doesn't bother me much, but the conviction of these vocal activists was impressive.

“While better late than never” is a great slogan to apply to the council’s decision to address deer problems, it still doesn’t make up for the big delay for speaking out. Even if one of them had come forward six months earlier, he or she could have been part of the discussion. What they said was interesting but started inside City Hall.”

The Iowa City Community School District was in the news again recently when it announced meetings are even available to the public. However, the meetings are still only available to those who know how to find them. The Iowa City Community School District has a reputation for being secretive, but the meetings are open to all. The meetings are held on the third Thursday of each month at 7 p.m. in the City Hall Auditorium.

Privatizing of Social Security questioned

Market turbulence gives rise to mixed reactions on investing Social Security dollars.

By Alice Ann Lane

WASHINGTON — Wall Street's wild ride risks causing even more confusion over the idea of putting Social Security dollars into the market.

Supporters say they still think the system's environment would not survive in the case of even a moderate investment. Meanwhile, opponents who are privatizing their Social Security dollars say that the benefits they receive will be better in return.

"This event of a single SEC should not matter, one way or the other," says Ron Gowing, chairman of the Independent Union, which represents Social Security beneficiaries. "If you get to make the cow we should have the same cow, because then, we'll start asking people," he said.

"The idea of Social Security privatization, and Social Security privatization proposals, have been so overworked over the years that there's no way of knowing what the reaction will be," says Jack Eger, a professor at the University of Iowa Business School.

"We can't predict the future, but we can predict the past," he adds.

The day after the SEC announced its plan to allow Social Security dollars to be invested in the market, the Dow Jones industrial average ended the day down 134 points.

The broader S&P 500 index declined 12 points, and the Nasdaq composite index fell 37 points.

"It's a real mixed "reaction," says Robert McEwen, analyst at McEwen Capital Management in Chicago.

"It's a great day for Wall Street, but it's a bad day for Social Security beneficiaries," he adds.

Still, there are those who believe that Social Security dollars will be better off in the market.

"I think it's great for Wall Street, and I think it's better for Social Security dollars," says David Gold, a professor at the University of Miami School of Business.

"It's a great day for Wall Street, but it's a bad day for Social Security beneficiaries," he adds.

Gold says that Social Security dollars will be better off in the market.

Women’s coach looks to freshmen for added depth

Second-year coach Sara Swails has four freshmen who can all start in lineups for Iowa this year.

By Eric Peterson

Iowa’s women’s basketball team is in a place that few others can be — no three starters returning from last season’s team.

With a season of collegiate experience under her belt and a stable of solid freshmen returners, women’s basketball has high expectations.

The Hawkeyes have high hopes for the upcoming season and are looking to a new era of greatness.

Iowa is in a new position with the departure of senior stars like Megan Meyer and Ashley Deary. The team will look to freshmen like Giuliana Mendiola and Gabbie Marshall to step up and contribute.

The return of former players like Giuliana Mendiola will be crucial for the team’s success.

The team’s depth, a mix of returning players and freshmen, will be key for the team’s success.

Iowa is in a great position for the upcoming season, with high expectations and a strong foundation.

ENGLISH LEAD

Engel, talented rookies lead Iowa into fall season

Iowa's new head volleyball coach, Chris Engel, is expected to be the top player for the Hawkeyes this season. Engel has been a key member of the Hawkeye women's volleyball team since her freshman year.

For her first year of coaching, Engel has been able to build a strong team with the help of her assistants. She has been working hard to develop new players who can help her achieve her goals for the team.

Engel has been able to attract talented players to Iowa, including some of the best in the country. Her coaching style is based on hard work and dedication, which she believes is essential for success in volleyball.

Engel's approach to coaching is to focus on the players' individual strengths and weaknesses to help them improve. She believes that by working with each player individually, she can help them achieve their best performance on the court.

Engel's coaching philosophy is based on the idea that every player has the potential to be successful if they are given the right tools and support. She believes that by creating a supportive environment, she can help her players achieve their goals.

Engel's goal is to lead Iowa to a successful season, and she is confident that with the talent on her team, they can achieve great things. She is excited to get started and to work with her players to help them reach their full potential.

Iowa is in good shape for the upcoming season, and Engel is optimistic about the team's prospects. She is looking forward to working with her players and helping them achieve their goals.

Big Bad Voodoo Daddy and Everclear are scheduled to headline the HawkEye Music Festival at the Johnson County Fairgrounds Sunday.

By Stacy Alisicke
The Daily Iowan

The first summer season has barely started to roll, but the HawkEye Music Festival in Iowa City is already shaping up to be one of the country's hottest music events.

Tickets are selling fast, and the bands performing are the hottest acts of the year.

Sunday at noon, eight bands have been scheduled to perform throughout the day at the Johnson County Fairgrounds, according to First Friday Productions, the festival's sponsor.

The festival at noon, with Confessing Sila from Lawrence, Kan, following it at 1:30 p.m. Local sensation The Yoda and Rambos are third fourth in the main (non-dance) stage. Confessing Sila (1998, 7:30 p.m. and 9 p.m. downtown), and Confessing Sila (1997, 6:30 p.m. downtown), and the Yoda and Rambos (6:30 p.m. downtown), and Confessing Sila (1996, 8:30 p.m. downtown).

Many of these up-and-coming artists have been seeing the festival for the past two nights. The bands have been performing.

It ain't heavy, it's my memory

By Jimmy Mack

It's been a long time since we last heard from the Grateful Dead. Now, with their latest album, "Godzillia," they're back on the scene preaching recreation.

The two Grateful Dead guys have been out of the public eye for a while, but they're not quite ready to retire. "We were so determined today that this was our day, our schedule, where we couldn't be stopped, and we didn't want to stop," said Jerry Garcia co-writer. "I think we really could do it again."

For anyone paying even the slightest attention to the music world, "Godzillia" has been a major event. The album was released on video and is being played in theaters around the country.

The "Godzillia" album has been a huge success, with sales exceeding all expectations. The band's comeback has been eagerly awaited by fans and critics alike.

The album features a mix of old favorites and new material, with a strong emphasis on the band's signature sound. The music is a perfect blend of rock and roll, blues, and folk, with an emphasis on the band's love of the outdoors.

The album has received critical acclaim, with many reviewers praising the band's ability to bring their unique sound to a new generation. The album has been a huge success, with sales exceeding all expectations. The band's comeback has been eagerly awaited by fans and critics alike.

Although the band has been off the road for some time, they have been hard at work in the studio, recording new material for their upcoming album. The band has also been involved in various charity events, with a strong focus on environmental causes.

The band's next album is scheduled to be released in the fall, and fans are eagerly awaiting the new material. The band has also announced that they will be touring the country, bringing their unique sound to fans across the nation.

The band's comeback has been eagerly awaited by fans and critics alike, and they are sure to continue to be a force in the music world for many years to come. For the benefit of the beneficiaries from Iowa Cares, Inc., the state’s youth mental health agency, the Iowa City Parks and Recreation Department is sponsoring a youth basketball league.

The league will be divided into two age groups: 7 to 10 years old and 11 to 14 years old. Every Tuesday night from 6 to 8 p.m., the league will be held at the Iowa City Parks and Recreation Department’s gymnasium.

Enrollment in the league will begin on Monday, September 17, and continue through September 21. The cost for each participant will be $10, which includes a basketball, a t-shirt, and a participation award.

Participants must register at the Iowa City Parks and Recreation Department’s office, located at 1000 Cordova Street, Iowa City. Participants must be registered by September 21.

For more information, contact the Iowa City Parks and Recreation Department at 356-2011.
