President Clinton "became learning and consisted of the special prosecutor's office.

By Carol J. Tedrow

WASHINGTON - No wonder many Iowa political observers won't say the word. In the same breath that the special prosecutor spoke to a weekly radio show, the man considered the most likely to be called has chosen the word "testimony" when asked if he would need more time to interview his aides

before testifying in the White House Monica Lewinsky scandal.

"I would like to offer testimony. I would like to offer my testimony"

said Independent Counsel Kenneth

Starr. "I would like to offer

testimony on whatever the House Judiciary Committee

wants to ask me." Levin: "It's a decision that he made.

It's not a decision that the American people made".

The special prosecutor also announced that he would be submitting a bill to Congress requesting a special session to grant Lewinsky immunity.

"I am concerned because it will be very hard for me to testify without the

Lewinsky immunity," Starr

said.

"I am concerned because the American people will not be able to understand the testimony of an individual who is forced to testify against the president."

A new die is cast in the West Bank

- A $65 million Palestinian casino casino begins operating, with a few gamblers worrying about terrorist attacks.

THERE'S a feeling of excitement and promise among the owners of the newly opened Oase Casino in the West Bank town of Dheisheh.

A few of the hoped-for grand opening festivities were held Friday, but the casino opened quietly over the weekend. The owners had to delay the opening because of terrorist attacks.

The opening ceremony was attended by a few Palestinian and Israeli officials, but the majority of the guests were Palestinian.
The wonders of objectifying

A review of “All in the Family,” a new memoir by Joyce Maynard about her relationship with former author J.D. Salinger. By Tyler Stewart

The J.D. Salinger of this book is an eccentric misanthrope, pretending to be anything more than a writer of nearly everyone who is not J.D. Salinger.

As a sculptor to compare, discuss and ogle, Maynard reserves her best criticism of nearly everyone. She objectifies in similar fashion. She never says she is not drinking - and to their mother and offering up scathing criticism of nearly everyone who is not J.D. Salinger.

Objectification - ways of looking that aren’t subject matter. Take the pictures of the work: subject, she who objectifies and she who is objectified. Perception is central to objectify, to dislocate, to become.

New TV shows lack originality in every way

I have to admit that I was a little surprised when I heard that NBC was naming one of its new Thursday night sitcoms after me. "Fraiser" is a rare experience, but to see "Jesse" listed in between "Friends" and "Fraiser" made me feel that I was finally getting my due. That was, at least, until I saw previews for the show.

It isn't that I have nothing to do with the show. In fact, I have the most interesting role in the series. It's just that the character I play is a fish. As you can imagine, this is not the type of role that gets me noticed. I mean, I'm sure the producers of the show must be thinking, "Who the hell is this fish?" and I'm sure the writers must be thinking, "What does this fish have to do with our story?"

But I think it's important to note that I am not the only fish in the show. There is also a shark, a clownfish, and a goldfish. So it's not like I'm the only fish. I'm just the one with the most interesting name.

As for the show itself, I have to admit that I am intrigued. I mean, I've always been fascinated by television shows. It's like a whole new world for me. I've never been on TV before, so I'm excited to see what it's like.

I'm also interested in the fact that the show is called "Jesse." I've always been fascinated by the name "Jesse," and I think it's a great choice for a fish. It's a strong name, and it has a lot of potential for storytelling.

I'm looking forward to seeing how the show evolves. I'm sure it will be a journey of discovery for all of us involved. I'm excited to see what kind of adventures the fish will have, and I'm looking forward to the chance to bring a new perspective to the screen.

In the meantime, I'll be swimming around, trying to catch the attention of my viewers. I might even try to swim into a few commercials. It's not every day that a fish gets to be in a commercial.

So, if you're watching the show, keep an eye out for me. I might be the smallest fish in the pond, but I'm definitely the most interesting one.

MEN'S TENNIS SEASON PREVIEW

- In the fifth year career, quailed isn't exactly the point of achieving excellence. By Mason Kowal, The Daily Iowan

After two years finished his first two seasons for the Hawkeyes, Martin started the second year on the 16th, 2006 season was solidly paved the way for the Hawkeyes. In 2007, he had led against the Iowa in 15 matches and was victorious in 11 of them. On this level, he has posted a 18-0 record in singles matches and an 11-3 record in doubles matches. He is currently ranked No. 32 in singles and No. 11 in doubles by the Intercollegiate Tennis Association. Martin is a graduate of West High School, where he was a three-year starter and was the team's Most Valuable Player as a senior. He has competed in the Hawkeye Fall Classic and is a two-time All-Big Ten winner. Martin has been named to the Big Ten All-Academic Team for both of his seasons. He has been a member of the Big Ten Academic Team and a Big Ten Honor Roll member. He has also been named to the Academic Honor Roll.
Talent prompts Ramsay to return for senior season

By Todd Ruhmann

The Daily Iowan

After the Illini's first-rate run to the Big Ten Tournament and 10-11 record last year, Steve Ramsay was ready to call it quits as a Hawkeye tennis player.

He had already graduated from the U of I with a concentration in philosophy, but realized that he had the experience and was ready for the next step in his career. Ramsay ultimately decided to return for his senior season for several reasons:

"There's no way I was going to make two years worth of money and the only way to do that is to play professionally," said Ramsay. "I don't have a lot of options, so staying for my senior year is the best option for me."

Ramsay said he has been working with his coach, Steve Houghton, to make the most of his senior season. He added that he is looking forward to the challenges that come with playing against the top teams in the Big Ten.

Steve Houghton, head coach of Hawkeye tennis, also expressed his excitement about Ramsay's return.

"I'm excited about having him back," said Houghton. "He's a great player and will definitely improve our team this season."

Last year, Ramsay played in 19 matches and compiled a 11-7 record. He was also named to the ITA All-Academic team.

"I think I can improve on my consistency and focusing on my shots," said Ramsay. "I want to play my best and help the team win."
Iowa Sammy pitched seven shutout innings but the Cubs have struggled offensively. Sammy, who improved to 3-0 in seven starts this season, struck out seven and finished 1-0.

The Cubs' struggling offense continued as they went 3-for-18, all singles, since St. Louis Cardinals' 8-6 loss to New York on June 23. The Cubs lead the NL Central title by beating the Brewers, and have a two-game lead in the NL wild-card race.

Barry Larkin was 4-for-5 for the Reds in the 12th. Morten Anderson kicked off another Crosstown showdown for the first time since June 17.

Randle El making quick impact for Hoosiers

BLOOMINGTON, Ind. — The Hoosiers couldn’t have been more impressed with Jerran Randle El during his first two games.

"He is a physical specimen," said Indiana linebacker Delone Carter. "He gives you everything you want from a wide receiver."

Randle El, a 6-foot-2, 220-pound freshman, made his debut Saturday against Arkansas, the first of only two schools that offered a scholarship to the true freshman.

"He’s an exciting player," said quarterback Dan Whitaker. "He’s very fast, he’s got great hands. He’s got a very strong arm, a quick release. He’s going to be a real challenge to try and contain him," Whitaker said. "He’s a guy that we need to get the ball out of his hands. They like to roll out and spread out plays. But he’s got a really good arm when he does a release, a quick release."

Randle El caught seven passes for 112 yards and a Kentucky-record three touchdowns in the Hoosiers’ 28-7 victory over Western Kentucky.

"That’s part of what we expected," said Whitaker. "That’s the type of game he had last year."

Randle El has been surprising some of his fellow wide receivers as well.

"He’s so much faster than we ever thought he would be," said wide receiver Tim Hart. "He’s a weapon."

After sitting out a year, Randle El was expected to give the Hoosiers another scoring threat.

"We knew we had a guy who could catch the ball," said Carter. "We just didn’t know he could do it for us this year."

Randle El was the leading receiver for the Gophers last season, finishing with 59 receptions for 930 yards and 12 touchdowns.

Fan expects big bucks for McGwire's 63rd

The fact is, the fan who caught Mark McGwire's 63rd home run intends to keep the ball until McGwire's 63rd home run is looking to cash in.

"I was sitting in the eighth row when I made the catch," said Grasso. "I saw him hit the ball. I caught it on the fly, and I started jumping. I was just excited and wanted him to go crazy. I told him, 'Hey, man, do me a favor and sign it for me.'"

"I know he's got a lot of money, but I'm not looking for anything. I just want to make sure I get the ball." Grasso said.

College of Liberal Arts officials say there is need for a permanent increase in funding.

The Illinois-based Baxter Healthcare Corp., which was to develop the artificial blood substitute HemAssist, announced Wednesday it will cease the testing and creation of the UI medical product that would save millions for the UI. By the mid-1980s and early 1990s, HemAssist was a top priority for Baxter. It was developed to replace the UI creation that could be sold only to hospitals for $80 a bag.

"It's like reading a lottery ticket for the first time and then realizing you've won $80 million," said Bruce York, director of Research Administration at the UI. "This is a difficult decision that is necessary because it is clear that the potential opportunity for HemAssist weighs the necessary investment against profits."

Former UI vice president for research Joseph Walder said HemAssist was a top priority for Baxter, which is expected to take a net hit against profits.

"This is a difficult decision that is necessary because it is clear that the potential opportunity for HemAssist weighs the necessary investment against profits," said York.
