Reactions to video range from yawn to yuck

UI students and professors aren't parting over the scheduled release of President Clinton's videotaped grand-jury testimony.

By Jodi Knaggs

The morning's scheduled release of President Clinton's videotaped grand-jury testimony has students tuning in for a possible yawn. But UI professor Amanda DeTimmerman said she's not much concerned with Clinton's story.

"We have the right to know what happened in the White House," DeTimmerman said. "I think, though, that the great American public is the one who is going to be yawned over. I think our citizens think that this whole investigation has been a crock, and I think what has happened is an embarrassment to society."

Gary Covington, an associate professor of political science, said the approach to the debate has made the Republican Congress an object lesson in how not to conduct joint investigations.

"I think that looks like a farce," Covington said. "It keeps the American people from participating in this drama."

In the past, Covington said he was concerned that his students would be tuned out, but the attention has increased their interest.

"It's a very controversial subject," Covington said. "Many students are enrolled in this class, and the grades are much higher than in previous years."

Covington said the debate has become very controversial and depends on the student's point of view.

"Right now Congress is looking like a circus and is about to be yawned over," Covington said. "It's hard to keep up with it, and it's hard to keep up with the American people."

It's not too late to add a course.

You can add any time in the University of Iowa's Guided Courses System Study Guides. The semester begins when you choose. You develop an individual schedule from your course interests, set your own pace, and take up to nine months to complete your coursework.

OCS courses can help you stay on track to graduate on time or even early! They allow you to balance your study and work schedules or allow you to work on courses of your major.

More than 100 courses are available, including many that fulfill University of Iowa General Education Program requirements. You can add any time in the system to receive a OCS course catalog. Browse our Web page, view OCS course information, and request a catalog at:

At the rally downtown Iowa City on Sept. 18, UI students walked past on their way to classes.

"It's exciting to see so many people out here," said Marilyn, the executive director of the Women's Action Center, a receiving center in the Midwest for abortion services. "I've been fighting for some time," said Marilyn. "It's our job to fight for reproductive rights and women's health care, and to fight for the rally." Women's Action Center is the only organization that provides abortion services in Iowa City.

"We want to make sure that women have access to reproductive health care," said Marilyn. "We have a duty to fight for women's rights and to make sure that women have access to the care they need." The rally was sponsored by the UI student government, the UI student organization for women's rights, and the UI student government for women's studies.

The rally was a response to the abortion ban that was signed into law by the governor of Iowa two weeks ago. The ban is one of the strictest in the country, and it will make it illegal to perform an abortion in Iowa.

"This is a defining moment," said Marilyn. "We have a duty to fight for women's rights and to make sure that women have access to the care they need." Grotesque abuse shocks prosecutor

The deputy district attorney said it was the worst case of abuse he's seen in his decade-and-a-half in office.

The deputy attorney, speaking on condition of anonymity, said the case was so shocking to him that he was moved to seek the death penalty. The deputy attorney, who has not been identified, said he was so disturbed by the abuse that he was considering seeking the death penalty for the three defendants.

The deputy attorney said the abuse was so severe that it left the victims with life-changing disabilities. He said the children were malnourished and had to be fed by force, and that they were kept in extreme conditions.

The deputy attorney said the parents were so abusive that they would beat the children with sticks and hammers, and that some of the children were left with permanent injuries.

S

OME time ago I swore a solemn oath that I wouldn't waste a column on the Clinton-Lewinsky affair and bore you all with a rash of the same old twaddle tithes you've had flung at you for the last six months. But that was before the Starr report went public and threw the hat into the ring, so to speak.

The word: "impeachment" placed a legal term into the public's vocabulary, but our thesaurus is still struggling to keep up. The term is currently being used quite differently than when it was first coined. "Impeachment", as defined by the Encyclopaedia Britannica, means "the act of bringing a charge or accusation against a public officer or monarch, especially one of high office, whereby public disapproval of that officer's actions compels him to retire." And yet it is being used quite differently these days. In the current context, it seems to mean simply that someone is "in trouble." And yet it is being used quite differently these days.

As a lawyer, I would argue that this is not the way it should be used. The word "impeachment" has a specific legal meaning, and it should be used in that way. It is not appropriate to use it as a synonym for "having problems" or "being in trouble." If we continue to do so, we will lose the meaning of the word and its purpose. We should use it in its proper context, as a legal term, and not as a slang term.

I am not alone in this view. Other legal experts agree that the word "impeachment" should be used in its proper context, and not as a slang term. For example, the American Bar Association has recently issued a statement on the use of the word "impeachment." The statement states that the word "impeachment" should be used in its proper context, and not as a slang term. The statement emphasizes the importance of using the word in its proper context, and not as a slang term, in order to maintain the integrity of the legal system.

I urge all of us to use the word "impeachment" in its proper context, as a legal term, and not as a slang term. Let us not allow the meaning of the word to be lost. Let us use it in its proper context, as a legal term, and not as a slang term. Let us not allow the meaning of the word to be lost.
Malaysia jails opposition leader

KUALA LUMPUR, Malaysia — Malaysia's security forces have arrested the co-deputy prime minister and demanded the prime minister's resignation. An opposition aide of Anwar Ibrahim said one of three suspects was Anwar's adopted brother, accused of sodomizing another man.

The violence sullied a state visit with Australia's Prime Minister John Howard and Indonesia's President Suharto, 77. Both had been denied entry to Malaysia.

Mr. Howard led a delegation from Australia's Parliament to the prime minister's official residence; police fired tear gas to break up the demonstrators.

MARIJUANA

Conversant Page 2A

In an effort to combat the steady increase in marijuana use, the University of Iowa has been working with city officials to develop a strategy that could have a significant impact on the trend.

The provision would affect minor drug offenders in Iowa. It would remove the 18-year-old from the statute and move the responsibility to the police department to decide whether the offender should be arrested. This change would be made retroactive, so that the new law would apply to all cases that have not been resolved.

The legislation is being introduced to address the growing problem of marijuana use on campus. According to police records, marijuana arrests have been on the rise in recent years, and there is a concern that the trend is accelerating.

The University of Iowa is one of the few institutions in the country that has made a serious effort to address marijuana use on campus. The university has implemented a number of policies and programs to reduce marijuana use, including counseling and treatment options for students who are struggling with addiction.

In addition, the university has worked with local law enforcement agencies to develop a strategy that will help to reduce the number of marijuana arrests. The new legislation is a key component of this strategy, and it is hoped that it will help to reduce the number of marijuana arrests and improve the overall quality of life on campus.

The legislation is expected to be introduced in the near future, and it is hoped that it will be passed into law soon. The university is working closely with state and local officials to ensure that the legislation is effective and that it will have a positive impact on the campus community.
Ironman Ripken ends his streak

It wasn't the best of weeks for the Iowa football team, but there were several appreciation moments, and a few that could lead to better things.

The Hawkeyes actually looked like they had the makings of a good team, especially its defense. The defense scored 21 points in the game and six in the first half, mostly off turnovers.

The defensive players were able to get to quarterback Todd Collins, and the offense never managed to get on the scoreboard.

The defense allowed Iowa to score a touchdown in the first quarter, but was able to contain the offense in the second half.

The Iowa defense was able to limit the Cowboys to just 13 points, and the offense was able to score 24 points.

The Gamecocks were able to score 28 points, but the offense was able to score 31 points.

Defensive problems are problems that Iowa isn't supposed to have. By the end of the first half against Miami, 80% of the team's time was spent on the defensive side of the ball, according to a report by the Daily Iowan. The defensive line was often forced to retreat as the ball was quickly snapped, which compounded the problems. Erik Kramer was 19-of-32 for 52 yards and 1 interception in the third quarter alone.

The 16-12 victory was the American football team's most significant win in its history. The University of Illinois defeated the University of Chicago 8-0 in 1897.

The 52-35 victory was the American football team's most significant win in its history. The University of Illinois defeated the University of Chicago 8-0 in 1897.

A group of young, aspiring coaches from around the country watched the game live on television.

The big play was when Kramer, who had a season-high 19 completions, completed a 3-yard touchdown pass to Chad Jenkins and led Iowa to a 17-10 lead. Kramer then led the team on a 75-yard drive that ended with Jenkins' touchdown.

By the end of the first half, Kramer had completed 19 of 32 passes for 199 yards and 1 interception. The offense was at its best when Kramer was under center, as the team scored 17 points in the first half.

The defense, which had struggled in recent history, was successful in compensating for Kramer's mistakes. The defense recorded 42 tackles, 2 tackles for loss, and 1 interception. They also forced 2 turnovers, recovered 1 fumble, and blocked 1 punt.

The University of Illinois' offense was held to 95 yards and 1 touchdown in the first half. They had 8 first downs and 1 turnover.

Hawkeye defenders finally getting healthy for Big Ten play

By Chris Boden

TUCSON, Ariz. — Iowa quarterback Matt Hughes has been hit too often by the Pac-10 in his two-year career. He’s had a lot of practice for that past two years. Iowa’s defensive line and linebackers have all been slowed by injuries.

Saturday, they all started for the first time in what could be Iowa’s most important game of the season.

"We’re really going to start making our big improvement now that we’ve got our full defense back," said defensive coordinator Dan McCarney.

Hughes was slowed by a knee injury and could be seen limping as he ran off the field for the final play. He was not available for comment after the game.

First quarter

The Hawkeyes moved 76 yards in 11 plays on their opening possession. Matt Kyoto and a 6-yard pass to tight end Jed Dull that made the score 10-0.

The Wildcats then went 91 yards and scored on a 3-yard pass to Fred Washington.

On Iowa’s second possession, Iowa’s defense held Arizona to a short pass on third down and an interception. McCarney intercepted a pass at the Hawkeye 42 and returned it 56 yards for a touchdown.

Second quarter

The Hawkeyes scored on a 28-yard touchdown pass on third down with 30 seconds left in the half. The Wildcats then answered with a 35-yard field goal.

Third quarter

Iowa continued its strong performance on defense. The Hawkeyes forced Arizona into a punt after a holding call, and the punt return gave Iowa a first down at the Arizona 43. Iowa then marched 56 yards in 10 plays, scoring on a 2-yard pass to tight end Jed Dull.

Arizona then went 91 yards and scored on a 3-yard pass to Fred Washington.

On Iowa’s second possession, Iowa’s defense held Arizona to a short pass on third down and an interception. McCarney intercepted a pass at the Hawkeye 42 and returned it 56 yards for a touchdown.

Fourth quarter

The Wildcats drove to the Iowa 35-yard line before Iowa’s defense held Arizona on fourth down.

The Hawkeyes scored on a 35-yard field goal.

Celucci etches name in Iowa record books

- Iowa senior Liza Celucci matched the 494th time of her career, becoming the Hawkeyes’ all-time leader in career records.

  By Tom Wrig

  There were no 1983 Cerovski’s, no big-time Iowa jocks, and the game had no TV. Iowa’s women’s soccer team has a tradition now that has recently been associated with one of the women’s soccer players who have played for the Hawkeyes in recent years. On Sunday over Ball State in the Kenyon Football Stadium, Iowa broke the record with a 3-2 defeat of the Cardinals. By shooting a shot on Ball State’s net, Iowa’s senior, Liza Celucci, led Iowa to victory. Celucci had scored the Hawkeyes’ first goal of the game on the penalty kick.

  While she was held to hold the Hawkeyes to winning the game, it was a very important goal to Celucci. Iowa scored a total of six goals, including Celucci’s three.

  "I didn’t even know I was close to breaking the record,” Celucci said. "I was just about up to speed on their way to winning the game." Celucci kept her legs under control on the offensive side of the ball, as she led the Hawkeyes to victory. Celucciickt the Hawkeyes offensively, and the Hawkeyes’ victory against the Cardinals."

There's something very right going on at the Not Quite Perfect store. It features lots of Land's End products that, for one reason or another, didn't quite pass muster with our finicky Quality Assurance people.

They're things. A housecoat, maybe. A pair of socks that never seem to be the right length for someone. They're products that have been returned by customers, often because they didn't look quite right. Some of them have been worn, others might have a minor defect. But they're all items that would still make great gifts for friends or family. And best of all, they're priced to move! They're a steal at $9.99, and that's all the better because they're not going to sit on the shelf. They're going out to their new homes today, leaving room for more returns.

There's something about finding things that didn't quite make the cut but are still good enough to wear or give away. It's a funny sort of satisfaction, knowing that you can still make them useful, even if they didn't quite pass muster. It's a reminder that sometimes, things aren't perfect, but that doesn't mean they're not usable.

So if you're looking for a unique, affordable gift, why not check out Not Quite Perfect? You might just find something that's not quite perfect, but is still perfect enough for you.
