After an hour of intense debate, the board voted in favor of a tuition increase which applies to the UI, Iowa State University and the University of Northern Iowa for the fall semester of 1999.

Although less than the originally proposed 5.1 percent hike, the approved rate is still more than the level of the higher Education Appropriations Committee increases in inflation.

The vote followed discussions of how the increased tuition would affect students, the state revenue and, most importantly, the overall budget to the university. Regents James Arenson, who had publicly supported the 5.2 percent increase, said during the vote, he initially proposed a rate of 4.9 percent increase, which failed to pass on a 4-6 vote.

"We're not just maintaining quality but raising the bar," Arenson said.

Student Regent Lisa Areson said Arenson's motion in favor of a 4.4 percent increase, but this also failed on a 4-6 vote.

In the final vote, Arenson, Elwyn Gray, Kenneth Smith, Clinevar and Roberts were in favor, while R. K. Robb, snowed, William Lockhart, and Joe Lockhart voted against.

Mercy's wrecking ball claims 2 old houses

Two turn-of-the-century buildings were demolished Wednesday to make room for Mercy Hospital's expansion.

By Avia Chipeta

When two century-old houses were dynamited Wednesday morning, it was Iowa City's way of saying, "No more cramped houses.

The houses, located at 229 N. Gilbert and 120 N. Gilbert were demoed Wednesday to make room for the planned expansion.

"Mercy purchased the houses because of the value of the land and the fact that it afforded the future," said Margaret Morgan, director of community relations.

"Morgan said that a new residence hall was to be built on the same area that was left after the houses were torn down. The parking lot is critically needed for patients and visitors."

"In the future, Mercy will be able to expand," she said.

The other members of the demolition had hoped that another alternative could have been found. They were under the impression that the houses could move to another site, Morgan said.

"Mercy listened politely, and then we said it couldn't be done," said City Councilors Robin Robb, "The whole situation is a mess, but it is a working people's history," it is very difficult for people to accept.

"It is very difficult for people to accept," Morgan added. "It will be hard for people to accept this.

"It has been achieved," said Gilbert Morgan. "We have been doing this for a long time.

Another potential presidential candidate passed through City Weekend last week. New Hampshire Sen. Bob Smith appeared in a discussion with Howard Kell.

"I'll make my final decision to run for president by the end of the year or early next year," Smith said. "But right now I am here to get Mary elected." Smith is a growing list of presidential candidates planning to pass through the area, including former New Jersey Sen. Bill Bradley, New York City Mayor Rudolph Giuliani and former Vice President Dan Quayle.

Smith, an Iowa City resident, is one of those presidential candidates involved in a campaign, and he began to use his campaign's candidate profiles.

"Iowa City residents should be aware of the candidates' positions on many important issues," Smith said. "They should be aware of the candidates' positions on many important issues." Smith said.

The significance of the caucuses seems to be ever-increasing, making Iowa a very important state in the nation's presidential election. They are usually held in the February of the election year and are the first test for the presidential candidates' support among the electorate.

President Clinton signs the budget compromise as Congress

By Ryan Pyle

WASHINGTON — President Clinton signed the budget deal on Friday and said he expects the Senate to confirm the Supreme Court nomination of Justice Anthony Kennedy on Monday.

“Today marks the beginning of a new era for Washington,” Clinton said. “Let’s get on with the business of governing.”

The president signed the $2.2 trillion budget agreement, which raises taxes on high-income Americans and makes large cuts in domestic programs. The bill is now expected to pass the Senate, where Republicans have a two-vote majority.

The budget deal, which was reached after months of negotiations, is designed to reduce the federal deficit to $150 billion by 2000, according to officials.

The president also signed a bill to extend unemployment benefits for the first time since 1983.

Charges grim in Pinochet's arrest

A Spanish judge cites 94 counts of genocide, torture and terrorism.

By Charlie Savage

SANTIAGO, Chile — A Spanish judge today charged a former Chilean military chief with genocide, torture and terrorism in connection with the disappearance or death of at least 94 people during the dictatorship of Gen. Augusto Pinochet.

The judge, Maria Luisa Morales, said Gen. Carlos Prats, who was Pinochet’s chief of staff from 1973 to 1975, ordered that the men be rounded up and interrogated at the Lautaro military base in Santiago in 1973. The judge said that Prats and his aides then ordered that the men be killed or forced to commit suicide.

The judge’s decision is the latest in a string of legal actions against Pinochet, who was deposed as president in 1990 after a military coup and is now living in London.

New warnings required against mixing acetaminophen and pain pills

WASHINGTON — A new government warning system for health care providers urged doctors to avoid mixing acetaminophen and pain pills, which can cause liver damage and death.

The warning, which was released today, is the latest in a series of efforts by the Food and Drug Administration to alert doctors and patients about the risks of using acetaminophen with other drugs.

The warning system, called MedWatch, was developed by the agency in response to concerns that acetaminophen, which is sold under the brand name Tylenol, is being used in combination with other drugs that can cause liver damage.

Peace too precious to lose

The recent acts of violence in the Middle East must not be allowed to derail the much-needed effort to bring peace to the region.

AIDS...still important

AIDS is not a disease that we need to fear. It seems that only a few years ago the AIDS epidemic was considered an insurmountable problem. Parents were worried about their children and wanted them to be educated about the disease. Now, we are in a new era where the focus is on prevention and education through school. The news about the disease is still scary, but we need to stay informed and take the necessary precautions.

Telling the truth not a priority in political advertising

O.K. pop quiz: It's October, and the hunting season is upon us. But which season is it? Pheasant season? Not yet. Deer season? Yeah, but that's not what I'm looking for. How about turkey season? Well, sort of. It's the begun of the annual political advertising cycle. This is the time when those that money to "win" are in full force. The candidates, especially the U.S. Senate candidates, are gearing up for the inevitable general election in November. The stakes are high, and the political races are hot.

Avoiding the cost of health care is not...money

I think that I can safely say that we can avoid the problem of health care. Medicare reform is a hot topic these days, and it's time to take a closer look at it. The cost of health care is not just about money, but also about access and quality. There are many ways to improve the system, and I think that it's time to start thinking about those options.

Avoiding chest pain and eye strain

I get chest pain every now and then. How would I know if there is something serious going on?

A chest pain or pressure, especially when accompanied by shortness of breath or nausea, can be a sign of a medical emergency. It's important to seek medical attention without delay.

You mention that your eyes are sensitive to light, which could indicate other conditions such as glaucoma or photophobia. It's also possible that your eyes are reacting to light as a "pressure" in the chest.

In general, you should seek medical care without delay if your pain is accompanied by shortness of breath or nausea, increases in frequency, or is accompanied by other symptoms such as shortness of breath, sweating, or nausea.

Inattive like bacteria, viruses, allergies or irritation of the lining of the throat, should be examined.

If your pain is accompanied by shortness of breath or nausea, it's important to see your health-care provider as soon as possible to determine which tests might be appropriate.

You can have your photo with your name and weight on the back of your photo ID, which can be a useful way to identify yourself. It's also a good idea to bring a friend or family member with you to the event for safety reasons.

High price for freedom

In writing in response to Beau Bellum's column on the high price of freedom, I want to thank you for printing this article.

UIRG hails tuition hike as a ‘victory’

While UISG says a 4.5 percent tuition increase is positive, at least one administrator calls it a blow.

By Rebecca Sandager

The Iowa City Press-Citizen

"I guess it's better than 3.2. But I couldn't believe the price," said Steve White, UISG president.

The increase was the result of a new UISG contract approved Tuesday by the University of Iowa Board of Regents. White said the regents were looking for a compromise between the 3.2 and 5.2 percent increases requested by UISG and the 4.2 percent increase requested by the Board of Regents.

The increase is expected to bring in an additional $2.5 million in revenue to the university, which will be used to support student services and programs.

"We're happy with the result," said UISG President Steve White. "We think it's a good compromise that will benefit our students."
Germaine slowly moving into Heisman Trophy race

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Ohio State has a young running back named Germaine Lawrence doing much stopping the Heisman Trophy talk for the Buckeyes.

An Ohio State co-ordinator, he missed the team's opening game because of a sprained ankle during last week's win over Coastal Carolina.

"I just felt that talking for my brothers was something that I needed to do," Lawrence said. "So that's what I'm doing.

"I don't think that's just a touch of a thing. It's a little more important than that. I think I'm just talking with the other guys, but I'm not talking with anything else."

Germaine is not the only young star on the Ohio State roster. Wide receiver Michael Thomas is a sophomore as well.

The Buckeyes are 3-0 and hope to stay there as they prepare to face the Minnesota Golden Gophers this weekend.

Waterloo star Smith still unsure about her future

Prep basketball standout Nina Smith has narrowed her choices to Iowa, Wisconsin and Michigan State.

By Eric Peterson

The Daily Iowan

Nina Smith, a 6-foot center from Waterloo, Iowa, is one of the nation's top recruits and will be a key factor in deciding which college she chooses.

"I'm really just trying to decide where I want to go," Smith said.

"I'm not sure if I want to go to Iowa or Wisconsin or Michigan State. I really don't know where I want to go yet."

Smith, who has been in the spotlight since her freshman year, has been rated as one of the top players in the country.

"I'm just trying to figure out which school is the best fit for me," she said.

"I'm really just trying to decide what school is best for me. I really don't know if I want to go to Iowa or Wisconsin or Michigan State. I really don't know where I want to go yet."

Smith has been undecided for some time now, and many scouts believe she will eventually choose Iowa.

"She's a very skilled player, and she's very athletic," said one scout.

"She's got a great shot at becoming a top 10 player in the country."

Thrill of victory lost on Falcons

Atlanta's leading receiver is looking for a new team, or at least a new contract, and his ailing starting quarterback may miss the next game.

By Paul Newberry

WNUR, Ga. - The Atlanta Journal-Constitution writes that Matt East is "on the boil" and "on the boil" again against the New York Giants.

East was named the starter for the Giants on Tuesday, but the move was announced without a contract for the near-firing quarterback. East was named the starter last week and remains the starter for the season.

The Falcons' 30-year-old receiver is in his second season with the Falcons, having been signed from San Diego in the off-season.

"I'm going to celebrate it," East said. "I'm happy. I'm glad. I'm looking forward to being there." East has emerged as a key player for the Falcons, catching 49 passes for 592 yards and a touchdown. East's success has been key to the Falcons' success since he joined the team on a free-agent contract last year. East will face his former team, the San Diego Chargers, on Sunday in a game that will decide the fate of the Falcons' season.

The company that published East's book recently asked to examine it with some changes and updates. Green, who has been involved in the Falcons' legal fees, knows the players, he said, and the team is working to improve the organization.

Lesko, who led the Falcons' legal team in the past three seasons, said that East would be "a great addition to the Falcons' lineup." Lesko, who played with East at Florida State, said that East has been a key player for the team since he joined the Falcons last year.

"There was a feeling in my gut," East said. "I know the guys, and they respect me. I want to stay in the Falcons' lineup." East said that he is "really happy to be back" with the Falcons.

NFL uses assets to borrow $600 million

The money will go into a trust that the teams can borrow from.

By Andrew Feurer

NEW YORK — Professional football club owners may have an idea for how to get an extra $600 million or so to spend on their teams: pool assets in a trust, borrow money against them and then spend that money. If successful, it could provide a windfall of a sort to the league's 32 teams and might offer a welcome infusion of capital to clubs in need of assistance.

The NFL is setting up a trust, essentially a holding company, with a $1 billion reserve fund. The trust will lend money at 5% interest on assets such as teams' revenue sharing payments, salary caps, tickets and advertising revenue. It would also lend money against a team's debt, including debt that arises from stadium construction and renovation.

The league is seeking a stronger return on assets than it has in the past. It might be able to sell more tickets, and it might attract a wider crowd of shareholders, who would share in the league's profits.

The trust would allow the league to fight back at other clubs that might feel they are being squeezed by the league. The league has long been concerned about the financial health of the smaller teams, and it might also be able to help the league's revenue sharing system, which has been under pressure from the NFLPA and other clubs.

The trust would also allow the league to set its own rules for how the money is spent. It could be used to fund stadium projects or to support other league initiatives.

The league is hoping to launch the trust in the next few weeks. The league has been working on the project for several months, and it has already received interest from a number of clubs.

The trust would be managed by the NFL's chief financial officer, who would work closely with the league's other executives. The trust would be set up in a way that would allow it to be transparent, and it would be subject to oversight by the league's board of directors.

The league is hoping to use the trust to support its initiatives in the coming years. The league has been pushing to expand its reach, and it has been working to increase its revenue sharing system. The trust would allow the league to better control the flow of money and to ensure that it is spent on the right initiatives.

The league is also hoping to use the trust to support its other initiatives, such as its youth programs and its community outreach efforts. The trust would allow the league to support these initiatives in a more sustainable way, and it would also allow the league to keep a closer eye on how the money is being spent.

Olympic gymnast Dominique Moceanu hopes to be declared an adult in the United States and split from her parents.

By Terri Langford

HOU STON — For months, Dominique Moceanu has been battling her parents, telling a federal court she wants to be declared an adult so she can split from them and live independently.

"I feel resident training and growing up under the watchful eye of my parents," Moceanu said in a hearing in the Houston Federal Courthouse. "I want to be independent, to have my own life." Moceanu has said she has been kept in her parents' apartment and has been living a kind of sheltered life.

Moceanu said her parents have been controlling her every move and even come into her bedroom while she sleeps. She said she has been kept in a kind of "quarantine" and has been unable to make any major decisions about her life.

"I feel like I'm living in a cage," she said. "I want to be free." Moceanu said she has been held against her will and wants to be declared an adult so she can live her own life.

Moceanu's father, William Moceanu, said he is supporting his daughter's decision to be declared an adult. "I believe she's capable of making her own decisions," he said.

Moceanu's mother, Carol Moceanu, said she is worried about her daughter's safety and wants to continue to be involved in her life.

Moceanu has been training for the Olympic gymnastics team and has won several medals. She is hoping to be declared an adult so she can travel to international competitions.

Moceanu said she has been receiving death threats and has been the subject of a bounty.\n

One band member says

"Archers of Loaf is not influenced by only one type of music."

Some people say the music is too chaotic to characterize, but that's the very thing that makes the Arches of Loaf so unique.

Archers of Loaf Frontman

"I'll say it's not musical, but that's the truth. It's not just any random noise or a video that could be played on any type of music."

As the group's four members scramble to answer questions about the Arches of Loaf's new album, "Miseducation Of Iowa," it's hard to tell which song is actually being talked about. The group's second album, "White Trash Heroes," only came out in June, but the word "archeology" has already become a way of talking about the band's natural habitat.

Cronkite making a comeback

Cronkite and O'Brien write new book

If Glenn’s mission is a landmark, so is Cronkite’s. A generation of Americans followed the adventures of the Mercury, Gemini and Apollo space missions through Cronkite’s narration on CBS. On May 5, 1962, when Glenn became the first American to orbit the Earth, millions of Americans could hear Walter Cronkite.

"We didn't think it was going to work," said "Walter Cronkite, my way," which aired on ESPN last week. "I didn’t even know if it would work. I didn’t know if the audience would care. I didn’t know if the audience would listen. But it did. And it worked."

And maybe he remembered what Cronkite described as the most significant single event of his career. "The day we learned from CBS that Walter Cronkite had been warned to keep his mouth shut," he said. "It was the day we learned that Walter Cronkite, the man who had been our news personality for 30 years, was going to be replaced by a younger, more modern-looking newscaster."

"That’s when I realized that what Walter Cronkite had done was more than just report the news. It was about being a trusted voice in a world that was full of chaos and uncertainty."

The idea for the show came from CBS, which had some documentary projects that they thought would be perfect for Cronkite. "I thought, ‘If I could just find a way to tell the story of our times, the way that Walter Cronkite did, it might be something special.‘"

So Cronkite decided to tell the story of his career through the lens of his own experiences. "It took John Glenn’s return to space to really get me going. "I thought, ‘If Glenn didn’t do it, what’s the point of doing it?‘"

"I decided to tell the story of my career through the eyes of my own children. They’re the ones who inspired me to do this."

"I hope this book will inspire young people to pursue their dreams and never give up. It’s not always easy, but it’s worth it."

"Walter Cronkite was a great newsman, and I’m honored to have had the chance to work with him. He was a true pioneer, and I’m grateful to have been a part of his legacy."
Isn’t there more than ‘Rush Hour’?

It is just as it is: the movie industry mows particularly dead corn in the fall. The latest scare-upone of post-apocalyptic, serial-killing, alien-consumption motif has been sown in the tickle-brains of the American public. There is an impression of the Antiarnation, and that is the all too real fact that is in fact actually getting us up all these people are just as human as you and me — having the same low-tide-motion.

There are also the big options: the film festival, the movie awards, the big market of the major studios. All of these are just as human as you and me — having the same low-tide-motion.

When writing the essays, Meyers had trouble simply getting words onto a page. To overcome that problem, he placed a tradition of the Lakota Indians, coming each spring to the reservation to watch your father hunt.

"There was a cross of flowers, the nose of the dead killed enough, the mood of the elder. - I had like right or 91 of them," he said. "It really served as a focusing device, forced me to look at the cycle of work on the farm."

Meyers said that he discovered his talent for writing short stories through writing essays.

"When I was writing a short story was when I was writing an essay and I wasn't my own voice anymore," he said.

Meyers is the author of ten books and a native
