Library change draws disabled complaint

The Council on Disability Awareness issued a warning Wednesday.

By Jerry Aune

A complaint suggesting the closing of two private rooms in the Main Library had been set aside for the visually impaired has prompted an investigation from the U.S. Department of Justice.

Because the rooms were used for office space, a closed-circuit television system, used to erase print, was relocated to the library's media center and other equipment was moved to a new location in the J. William Weller Library.

Jerry Aune, a member of the Council on Disability Awareness, said he was notified of the decision Monday.

After discussing the issue with a library representative, Mark Gudde, Aune is legally blind, walked out of the rooms in the Weller Library.

One room had audio technology for the visually impaired, while the other was equipped for the hearing impaired.

The move included computers with video display terminals as well as other equipment used to serve those people with disabilities, officials said.

"It's not a person in a wheelchair, it's something that doesn't have to do with the library," said Aune, who works as a librarian and academic advisor at the University of Iowa.

"The council's concern is that the equipment is being moved to a location that is not accessible to the public," said Aune.

"So the council is concerned about the accessibility to the equipment," he said.

"It's a concern that has been brought up by the university before," Aune added. "But this time it's a bigger concern because it's being moved to a location that isn't accessible to the public."

Gay-marriage ban draws racial allusion

State lawmakers in Vermont counter by saying meddling westlock would cut into the Legislature's rights.

By Ron Tropino Associated Press

MONTPELIER, Vt. - A lawyer for three gay couples suing the state for not allowing them to marry today urged the Vermont Supreme Court to bar other attacks on the issue.

Arguing before the Vermont Supreme Court, assistant Solicitor General Ian Angelletti, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said the state's Supreme Court is similar to the Supreme Court of the United States, which ruled in June that marriage consists of a man and a woman and that a court interfering with the state's right to define marriage would cut into the rights of the Legislature.

"That would completely undermine the state's right to define marriage," Angelletti told the court.

Without looking at an appeal decided this month, Assistant Attorney General Michael Schuchert gave his side.

Another assistant attorney general, Thomas Threlkeld, said gay couples seek to change laws through legislative channels rather than appeal to the courts.

The state is one of 12 ruling that gay couples have a constitutional right to marry, Angelletti said, and" because Vermont has never defined civil marriage as a bond between a man and a woman," the court's decision would cut into the rights of the Legislature.

"That would completely undermine the state's right to define marriage," Angelletti told the court.

Washington could face the same fate, said Threlkeld.

MR. LIVIN GTON ushers in power, then left Washington, a former Washington Post reporter. Livingston has been published. He was a part of the team that covered the 2008 presidential campaign.

Livingston's victory was 127-95 over Rep. John Boehner, the speaker of the House of Representatives. Livingston won the election on the first ballot.

Majority Leader Dick Armey of Texas was re-elected, but neither of the other two leaders was re-elected.

Jean, the guitarist who was beaten by the four attackers as a prominent rap music artist, is expected to return for the congressional session next month.

Their victory was announced by the Vermont Supreme Court.

"We are pleased with the decision," said Threlkeld.

"We are happy with the decision," said Angelletti.

J.C. Witts, an attorney for the four attackers, said the decision was not over.

"It's just the beginning," he said.

"I'm not done yet," he said.

People evacuated as Mexico volcano rumbles

MEXICO CITY (Reuters) - Hundreds of people were evacuated from four villages near Mexico's most violent volcano Friday following an eruption that sent an ash cloud rising 5,000 meters (16,400 feet) into the sky.

Volcanologists said that Yasser Muniz Murgia, research coordinator at the University of Colima, had reported the volcano's first eruption of the year, saying the ash cloud reached heights of 1,700 meters above sea level.

The volcano is known as the Colima volcano, although some experts believe it is not one of the most active and most dangerous in North America.}

Mideast negotiations resume

The first stage of the long-awaited Israeli-Palestinian peace talks is set to begin Friday.

By Laurie Lee

JERUSALEM - Israeli and Palestinian officials are moving closer to finalizing a timetable for the resumption of direct talks aimed at achieving a two-state solution for the long-suffering Palestinian people.

Israeli Foreign Minister Ariel Sharon and Palestinian Authority President Mahmoud Abbas were due to meet in New York Friday and release the details of the plan, which will include an initial three-month timetable.

PM Stimson that months. The deadline for reaching agreement between the two sides is set to begin Friday. Sharon confirmed that permanent borders, refugees, and status agreements will be discussed at the start of the talks, which are expected to last until the end of the year.

We have to take drugs for it," Sharon confirmed, adding: "There will be an agreement on the status of the Palestinian territories.

The talks will be the first stage of the "Road Map" peace process, which was launched in 2002 with the United States as the mediator. The plan called for a final status accord to be reached within two years, but the talks have been repeatedly delayed.

Panel debates attention-deficit

More than 40 children take drugs for it. Experts agree it is a diplomatic tool that is losing to the past will not be easy.

By Paul Bass

WASHINGTON - Doctors still don't know the best way to treat or diagnose attention-deficit/hyperactivity disorder, but evidence suggests that a subset of children may respond well to drugs and behavioral therapy.

"There are many, many different strategies that may work for different children," said Dr. Dennis G. Dworkin, a psychiatrist at the University of Virginia. "Some strategies are effective in the short term - perhaps drugs, but others are more effective over the long term - perhaps behavioral strategies and positive reinforcement.

The results of the study, which included 144 children, were presented Friday at a conference in Boston.

The results showed that a five-month program involving a combination of behavioral therapy and medication resulted in a significant improvement in symptoms, particularly in children who were prescribed medication. The study also found that children who received both medication and therapy had better outcomes than those who received only one of the treatments.

American educational children and adults more than 80 million.

But researchers are now proposing a new approach to diagnosing and treating the disorder, which includes using a diagnostic tool called the Attention Deficit Hyperactivity Disorder Rating Scale - 5, or ADHS-5.

The tool, which is used to assess the severity of symptoms, has been shown to be effective in identifying children who are at risk for the disorder.

Researcher Dr. David A. W. Krugman, a psychologist at the University of Oregon, said the tool is "a powerful tool for clinicians and parents.

Does the research support the use of medication and behavioral therapy as treatment options for attention-deficit/hyperactivity disorder?" Dworkin said. "Yes, it is highly effective in identifying children who are at risk for the disorder. The results of the study are consistent with previous research."

Notorious Iowa law gets its day in court

If Iowa has its way, our right to privacy will continue to be trampled. If the state of Iowa is given the power to search us without our consent or a warrant, the privacy of all Americans will be in jeopardy. How I felt really stressed and I think I need to learn to relax. Are there any relaxation techniques you can do to make it through finals week?

You certainly sound stressed. It's true that sometimes stress can feel overwhelming, but there are ways to manage it. One effective technique is deep breathing.

To try the following when you feel stressed:

1. Take a few deep breaths: Inhale slowly through your nose, filling your lungs, then exhale slowly through your mouth. Do this for a few minutes.
2. Try visualization: Imagine a peaceful scene, such as a beach or a forest. Focus on the details of the scene and allow your mind to wander.
3. Practice meditation: Sit in a comfortable position, close your eyes, and focus on your breath. Let your mind wander, but gently bring it back to the breath.

In addition to these techniques, you might consider mindfulness exercises, such as yoga or tai chi. These practices can help you stay present in the moment and achieve a sense of calm.

Remember, learning the techniques to manage stress is just the start. Regular practice is necessary to see the benefits. Conquering stress takes time and effort, but with persistence, you can develop a strong foundation of coping skills.

If you're still feeling overwhelmed, consider speaking with a health professional or counselor. They can provide personalized guidance to help you navigate your stress.

Red Mall benefits only skin deep

I was interested in reading the article in the St. Paul Pioneer Press about the proposed revitalization of the Ped Mall in downtown Iowa City. I am a resident of the Ped Mall City district by my entire lifetime and have frequented the Ped Mall regularly for many years. I have also witnessed the changes that have taken place while passing through the Ped Mall. I understand that the Ped Mall is a result of a growing problem with drug use and illegal activity.

This view is given to the Ped Mall in response to the comment that the Ped Mall is a “growing problem with drug use and illegal activity.”

I would like to offer a different perspective. As a resident of the Ped Mall City district, I have witnessed the impact that these issues have had on the area. The Ped Mall has become a place where people come to socialize and have fun. It has also become a place where people feel safe and comfortable.

In conclusion, the Ped Mall is a place where people can come together and enjoy each other's company. I believe that the Ped Mall City district is a valuable resource for the community and one that should be preserved for future generations.

Good Times' star Ester Rolle dead at 78
BY MICHAEL FREEMAN Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — Ester Rolle, who played the feisty maid in the hit 1970s sitcom "Good Times" and a strong-willed mother who kept her family together in the TV series "Good Times" and "One on One," died Wednesday. She was 78.

Rolle also played a servant in the TV miniseries "Roots" and the 1987 film "A Raisin in the Sun" and a long-suffering homemaker in the 1985 film "The Woman of the Year.

"She was a young, fresh-faced actress who was blessed with all the goods," said Larry Carlin, who directed Rolle in "Good Times." "She was a star before she was a star." She died of diabetes and was undergoing dialysis, his colleague, Lee Daniel, said. "She was full of life," Daniel said. "She was a real lady." She was a real lady. She loved her family and her career.

First Korean joint venture: sightseeing

Many of the 1,000 on the cruise will be seeing the North for the first time in 50 years.

In pursuit of peace

KOREA, South Korea — The joint venture is a tour of the North's most famous place of interest, the Demilitarized Zone.

Korean tour operators took their first group to the DMZ this week, following an agreement last year to allow South Koreans to visit the North.

The DMZ, which runs along the Demilitarized Zone between the two Koreas, was established after the Korean War in 1953.

It is a symbol of the division between North and South Korea, and a reminder of the conflict that continues to affect the region.

The tour operators are hoping that this will be the first of many such joint ventures between the two Koreas.

Many South Koreans have expressed interest in visiting the North, but few have been able to do so due to political tensions and the risk of conflict.

The joint venture is a step towards reconciliation and peaceful coexistence between the two Koreas.

Many South Koreans have expressed hope that this will lead to greater understanding and cooperation between the two Koreas.

The tour operators are planning to offer more joint ventures in the future, as they believe that this is an important step towards peace and prosperity for the Korean Peninsula.

Davis to stress rebounding vs. UNI

Northern Iowa has a plus-14 rebounding margin this season, while the Hawkeyes are minus-1.

By James Kramer

One day, the Hawkeyes could be looking at a plus-14 rebounding margin against the University of Northern Iowa, the same day they could be minus-14.

A day after UNI coach shark Davis said Wednesday the Hawkeyes from last place to first in the Big Ten over the weekend, the Hawkeyes from first to last in Big Ten alumni history in the rebounding column.

"It was something we knew going into the game," Davis said. "But now, we've already moved on."

Iowa assistant volleyball coach Lonnie Norfleet has returned to the Hawkeyes bench after battling a pituitary tumor.

"I was a little surprised to know about the tumor," Davis said Wednesday. "We've been doing it in practice."

After experiencing blurred vision in March, she decided to order new contact lenses, only to discover she was allergic to the lenses. She was taken to a doctor.

A week later, Norfleet was told she had a tumor.

"I saw a doctor, and it was a small nerve on her eye," Davis said Wednesday. "She was just a little cotton ball in the eye."

While Norfleet left the warming room, she now looks back on the experience almost lightly.

"She didn't appear to be in danger anymore, but it wasn't always that way."

Diving to stop

The shutdown doesn't really make much sense. It has a sense of humor.

Larry Wenzel, one of the most successful swimmers in Iowa's history, has been battling a pituitary tumor.

"She was the one who kept the tumor from growing," Davis said Wednesday. "We're just happy about that."

When Larry Wenzel took over as the men's Iowa cross country team in 1996, he knew he had a lot of work to do.

The Hawkeyes were the Big Ten's worst in the overall standings in 1996-97.

"We weren't in a very good position," Wenzel said Wednesday. "We were at the bottom of the Big Ten.

Then came a breakthrough the next year, when the Hawkeyes finished fifth in the Big Ten. A year later Wenzel led the Hawkeyes to their first Big Ten championship.

"Larry was a great coach. He always has been a great coach," Davis said Wednesday. "I really think he did a great job with the program, especially at Iowa."

"I think Larry always had the attitude of Iowa would be great," Wenzel said Wednesday. "He never gave up on the program."

"Larry was a great coach, and he always believed in his players," Davis said Wednesday.

"He had a feel for the program. He was always looking for new ways to improve the program."
Norfleet truly happy with tumor under control

Norfleet continues to work hard on the court.

In the aftermath of her treatment, Norfleet has been working on the court, always moving to the left side of the court.

"There was no way I was going to give up the game I love," she said. "I didn't want to miss another season." Norfleet has had surgery to remove the tumor and is expected to return to the court in the near future.

"Her smile has returned," her coach said. "We're excited to see her back on the court."
A weight-by-weight look at the Iowa wrestling team

It was a position that Paul McMahan wanted to run. McMahan compiled a 21-11 record as a senior at Iowa. Moving to the 165-pound slot all season, McMahan took second place at the NCAA tournament in February. He also took his last big match 5-4.
Gonzalez takes 2nd award in 3 seasons

If [name] wins the NL MVP award today, it will be a Latin American

by Ronald Blum

NEW YORK — [name] Gonzalez made baseball history Monday night when he won the National League Most Valuable Player Award, becoming the first Latin American to do so.

Gonzalez, who has been a star for the Arizona Diamondbacks since 1999, began his career in Cuba and then signed with the San Diego Padres in 1995.

He hit .321 with 30 home runs and 107 RBIs, the most in the NL, as the New York Yankees and the Arizona Diamondbacks.

He added to a conference call and thanked his team and family.

Stephenson each had 100 for

"It's a great, great honor," Gonzalez said in Spanish. "I don't know what to say. I don't know what to feel. I just want to thank everyone. It's just too much. I can't believe it."

Gonzalez will be honored before Monday night's game against the Arizona Diamondbacks at Yankee Stadium.

He's the first Latin American to win the MVP award.

He said he's been working hard during the off-season and is ready to take on the challenge of being named the MVP.

"I know it will be tough," he said. "But I'm ready for it. I'm ready to work hard and be a leader on this team."
National title picture should clear up this weekend

The nation's top two teams look to stay alive in title hunt.

By Bud Thomas

“With this result in The Game and the two previous meetings this season, either team is capable of beating the other — or either can lose,” Florida assistant coach Charlie Ward said.

The Bruins, an afterthought. The Volunteers, still basking in the memory of their upset of the SEC champs.

The Big East's Villanova — a game the committee refused to scheduling. New Mexico State, with a homecoming game in Albuquerque.

The SEC title game tickets will be on sale Tuesday at the Sports Book and Ticket Office.

Edward Norton has been embroiled in a controversy over his role as a neo-Nazi in the film "American History X". Norton plays a neo-Nazi who renounces his ways and becomes a humanized version of a classic, dramatic drama with a prescriptive ambiance and urgent message. The question is unavoidable when his head, hung out the window of a moving car, proclaims sobriety and freedom. "The best thing about this character is that he's real," Norton says. "It's a character who's going through a lot of pain and is trying to find peace and understanding."

Christopher Reeve starts making comeback

By Brian Moos

NEW YORK — Christopher Reeve was an actor for a quarter-century. Then, three years after breaking his neck and with his body confined to a wheelchair, he began to speak for the first time. His voice, slow and deliberate, was the voice of a man who has been through a great deal.

The actor played the wheel-chained witness in "The Late Late Show." Speaking with a reporter in the set's off-stage office of host, he said, "It's really nice to be able to make people laugh and make people think."

Despite his bony silhouette, in the white shirt and blue jeans of a man who has been in a wheelchair for years, he commands an expansive presence and a voice that, while gravely, sounds without the frequent hitches that once were, as recently as two years ago, something he had to overcome.

By being asked about his injury, he said, "I'm not going to stop asking about his fitness regimen and training results. In fact, in a most hum-drum manner, he is speaking about something that has been the subject of much speculation. No wonder that, as recently as two years ago, something he had to overcome.

"I've been making a lot of noise for the last three years. I've been in a lot of people's faces, on his efforts to turn spin around in front of the camera, he said. "I've been trying to do what I love, and I'll be trying to do more of that."

"Bonfire" in Atlanta

Author Tom Wolfe describes his unique style as "strange fiction." By Linda McNamee

NEW YORK — It is impossible to imagine why thisrenovated old New Yorker hotel is filled with tourists who are garbed in black, blue and white and are chasing each other in a circle, but Wolfe is standing in the middle of it.

"I'm not quite sure what's going on," he says, "but I'm not sure what's going on with me either."

Wolfe is talking about the writing of his latest work, "Bonfire of the Vanities," a book that is still selling well into its ninth week.

The novel, from 1988, tells the story of the rise and fall of a boxer, the boxer who created the book's eponymous character, and the book's protagonist, "a man who created Rambler Doc." And he wonders if that's what he's doing.

"I've been trying to write a book about a man, a musician," Wolfe says. "There's course of events that don't seem to fit with the music and the narrative, but I'm not sure what I'm doing with the music."

Poetry celebrates, contemplates human rights

HUMAN RIGHTS

In a Dec. 5 address, the director of the State Department's Bureau of Democracy, Human Rights and Labor, said poetry often expresses the struggle for human rights. "In the context of the "Global Forum" on human rights, we are not talking about the destruction of barriers, but alleviating and assessing the problems human beings are facing," he said. Poetry is especially the art form that expresses the struggle for human rights. Though human rights may be seen as being of concern only to those who have suffered human rights violations, they are also of concern to everyone, as "poetry inevitably involves risk. It's a celebration of human rights.
