Brave new college: men no more?

An Iowa researcher claims that, given the trends, men could soon disappear from the nation's colleges.

Dr. Ann Marie Mortenson, a researcher at the University of Nebraska, says that the proportion of bachelor's degrees awarded to women has increased dramatically over the last half-century, and more men are dropping out of college. She says the overall decline in the population of the country over the last 50 years has been increasing for the past seven decades. If the trend continues, the whole population will drop by one-third by the year 2020, she predicts.

"When does it become a public policy problem?" asked Mortenson, a higher-education policy analyst from Iowa City and a visiting scholar at the Center for Education Policy Opportunity in Education Policy.

In her report, titled "Men and the Gap," Mortenson points that the average college drops its male student body by about 40 percent between 1960 and 1995, much faster than the proportion of male graduates in the female population. Mortenson also showed that men have gone from dominating higher education to numbers that are roughly equal with their proportion of the population.

"Men, who make up about 51 percent of the U.S. population, received 51 percent of the bachelor's degrees in 1960. Women have begun to have more degrees, and that is important," said Mortenson.

"But for men to totally disappear in, um, way, entirely, isn't clear," she said.

In his report, Mortenson said the "inconsistent" effort that has diverted society's attention from the problem raised by the decline in young men's interest in college work, to prepare for the labor market.

According to the Associated Press, "Attitudes toward college have changed in recent years, and the proportion of bachelor's degrees awarded to women in the United States increased 41 percent, from 303,450 to 428,470, in the same period, degrees awarded to men remained at 162,625, from 1961 to 1995."

"The study shows that men who go from dominating higher education to numbers that are roughly equal with their proportion of the population, really does not mean that men are disappearing," said Mortenson.

"We may also ask with some uncomfortable questions, that being the proportion made by women has literally gone up at the expense of men," she said.

Problems looming for GOP after election wash-out

WASHINGTON, D.C. (AP) - There are serious problems looming for Republican presidential candidate George W. Bush before he begins his campaign in Iowa for the 1996 election. Bush is a candidate to be a "dark horse" at the Iowa caucuses, staff phone banks and precinct caucuses, and the proportion of school-age children who have their homework done or a struggle.

"People are feeling that the education system is a likely cause in the demise of the Republican party," said Bush's opponent, Jim Ross Lightfoot.

"The answer to the problem is a series of complicated decisions, but a series of complicated decisions that have to be made in the next few years."

Fellowships Director John Johnson, of Howe University, said the "party is already committed by the right."

As Republican look to select a new party chairman, there's little action to be taken. The message is that of the lowly esteem.

O.K. There's three and a half weeks before Christmas, and I haven't even begun shop­ping for my people yet. This is partly because I'm poor, but mostly because I'm lazy and don't feel like braving the cheerless crowds of holiday shoppers to dig through racks and tables of mer­chandise, looking for just the right thing for some aunt I haven't seen in years but who will be miffed if I don't send something.

Actually, I don't. I don't have any relatives, quite as festive. I have kin who have to be told that there'll be a Christmas dinner and that I'll be bringing a bottle of Chablis and a small case of Sauternes to ring in the season. They're the ones who will be gracious, my people that will be happy, which is kind of way. It's that kind of Christmas. And I've been going to this Big Day for years, I'm going to be serving them my happy, cheerful Christmas dinner and buy­ing some gifts to send to distant friends in films and television. I don't have any relatives, quite as festive. NATION & WORLD

Some Republicans want the House to capitulate, others say the GOP must move on.

by Joe Yonan

WASHINGTON — Before the House convened for its opening session last week, some Republicans gathered in the House rest room area to consider any alternative to impeachment as a way to maintain a posture of unity. They discussed the issue of punishing President Clinton, their leader. It was another in a seemingly endless series of meetings, but it was noteworthy because there was no sign of the usual acrimony: The Republicans were in agreement.

One Republican who has come to the same conclusion is Representative Peter King of New York. A member of the Homeland Security Committee, Mr. King said he would vote to censure the president. "It just makes better sense for the House, if we want to make a contribution, to get on with our job and really try to bring the country together," he said.

But the move to censure was met with concern among some Republicans. A spokesman for Speaker Newt Gingrich of Georgia said the House Leadership Committee, which has the final say on the question of whether to impeach, would "not act on the question at this point."

Clinton's critics note that after Senator Bob Dole of Kansas debated the issue of whether to impeach on the floor of the Senate, the Republicans were unable to maintain their discipline. But the speaker's aides said that with the House, the situation was different. The speaker, they said, was "not going to have a situation where we have a Republican and a Democrat who have a different opinion on the方式 to handle a situation like this."

Clinton's supporters say that the impeachment process is necessary to ensure that the House acts as a brake on the president. They argue that the president's actions are too dangerous to ignore. But the speaker's aides said that the process would be "very collegial and constructive."

WASHINGTON — Before the House convened for its opening session last week, some Republicans gathered in the House rest room area to consider any alternative to impeachment as a way to maintain a posture of unity. They discussed the issue of punishing President Clinton, their leader. It was another in a seemingly endless series of meetings, but it was noteworthy because there was no sign of the usual acrimony: The Republicans were in agreement.

One Republican who has come to the same conclusion is Representative Peter King of New York. A member of the Homeland Security Committee, Mr. King said he would vote to censure the president. "It just makes better sense for the House, if we want to make a contribution, to get on with our job and really try to bring the country together," he said.

But the move to censure was met with concern among some Republicans. A spokesman for Speaker Newt Gingrich of Georgia said the House Leadership Committee, which has the final say on the question of whether to impeach, would "not act on the question at this point."

Clinton's critics note that after Senator Bob Dole of Kansas debated the issue of whether to impeach on the floor of the Senate, the Republicans were unable to maintain their discipline. But the speaker's aides said that with the House, the situation was different. The speaker, they said, was "not going to have a situation where we have a Republican and a Democrat who have a different opinion on the方式 to handle a situation like this."

Clinton's supporters say that the impeachment process is necessary to ensure that the House acts as a brake on the president. They argue that the president's actions are too dangerous to ignore. But the speaker's aides said that the process would be "very collegial and constructive."

Lorrie Moore shares her humor from the dark side of life

The acclaimed short story writer will read in Brecht/BA"Austi"tun at 8 p.m.

BRECHT/BA Exclusive Press

MADISON, Wis. — The world is a funny place — and Lorrie Moore is not afraid to say so. She talks about God, and she talks about love, and she talks about life and death and all the various problems in between. But she doesn't talk about love and death and problems in a way that is expected. Moore is a writer who knows how to make people laugh. Her humor is not always easy to find, but it is there, waiting to be discovered.

MOORE ON LOVE AND DEATH

Moore is a true believer in the power of love. She writes about it in her stories, and she talks about it in her interviews. Love is a central theme in her work, and she doesn't shy away from discussing it. She talks about the pain of love and the joy of love, and she talks about the unexpected ways in which love can manifest itself. She talks about the humor in love, and the way it can make people laugh.

LOVE AND PROBLEMS

Moore also writes about problems in her stories, and she talks about them in her interviews. She talks about the ways in which problems can affect people, and she talks about the ways in which problems can be overcome. She talks about the humor in problems, and the way they can lead to unexpected outcomes. She talks about the way problems can be turned into something positive.

FUTURE PLANS

Moore has a number of projects in the works, and she is excited about them. She is currently working on a new novel, and she is Working on a new collection of short stories. She is also working on a new essay collection, and she is planning to release a new book of poems. She is looking forward to sharing these works with her readers, and she is excited to see how they will be received.

JOIN THE FUN

Moore's readings are always a hit, and they are always filled with surprises. If you are interested in hearing Moore speak, or if you simply want to enjoy a good laugh, then you should definitely make plans to attend one of her events. You won't be disappointed. Moore is a true original, and her humor is always on point.

Defensive Freshman of the Year. I just wanted us to be good enough to play smart, play hard and play together," Keedy said after the thigh-itching 77-73 win over Loyola, which pushed Purdue to a season-high 24-3 record. "We're still not where we want to be, but we're getting there."

As for his recruitment, Keedy said he had a pool of 12 to 15 candidates and "list's going to get filtered down. I hope he'll be a hard-knocks kid, a great basketball player and someone who's going to contribute to recruiting purposes." Keedy added that coach Gene Keady cares about his players' mental development, "If I didn't continue with my size, I'd be a good basketball player."

In regard to Iowa State, a first glance at the Hawkeyes' expertise on the court was a) they are not a rebuilding job and b) it's not a rebuilding job, even though they are a new team. The Hawkeyes are still rebuilding, but they have a solid core of experienced players returning. Their most important player is senior center Chuck Long, who led the team in scoring and rebounding last season. He is expected to return for the Hawkeyes this year.

COACH SEARCH

As of Sunday, the only two known interviewees for the job were Iowa head coach Fran McCaffery and an assistant coach at the University of Connecticut, N.J. coach Gene Keady. McCaffery has been an assistant coach at Purdue for the past three seasons. Keady, who has been head coach at the University of Connecticut for the past 20 years, has been the subject of much speculation but has not been confirmed as a candidate.

Computer may have final say in '98

Top teams remain undeterred going into the final weekend of the season, meaning one could get left out of the national championship race.

By Richard Propst, The Associated Press

This could be done. College football is set for a overtime. Top teams who play in the Peach Bowl and the Sugar Bowl can clinch at least one of the top three teams for the national title.

The defending champion Florida State will play against No. 15 Michigan in the Peach Bowl. The Seminoles will also have the opportunity to win the ACC title, which would give them the No. 1 ranking in the Bowl Championship Series.

Other possible matchups could be No. 21 Nebraska against No. 19 Miami in the Orange Bowl, or No. 1 Penn State against No. 19 Ohio State in the Sugar Bowl.

One of the most interesting matchups could be No. 15 Arkansas versus No. 11 Utah in the Cotton Bowl. The two teams are ranked in the top five in the BCS standings.

Other teams playing in the Peach Bowl include No. 2 Bama, No. 3 Georgia and No. 4 Tennessee.

The Cotton Bowl also features No. 14 Florida State against No. 11 Oklahoma State.

Other teams playing in the Sugar Bowl include No. 13 Michigan State against No. 18 Alabama, No. 14 Georgia against No. 17 South Carolina, and No. 16 Arkansas against No. 18 Florida.

The Orange Bowl will feature No. 2 Florida against No. 11 Nebraska, No. 3 Ohio State against No. 4 Tennessee, and No. 14 Georgia against No. 17 South Carolina.

The Rose Bowl will feature No. 1 Ohio State against No. 2 Oregon State, No. 3 Penn State against No. 4 Michigan State, and No. 14 Georgia against No. 17 South Carolina.

The Fiesta Bowl will feature No. 1 Miami against No. 2 Oklahoma, No. 3 Georgia against No. 4 Miami, and No. 14 Georgia against No. 17 South Carolina.

The Sugar Bowl will feature No. 13 Michigan State against No. 18 Alabama, No. 14 Georgia against No. 17 South Carolina, and No. 16 Arkansas against No. 18 Florida.
