SNOW SHREDS WARM-WEATHER PARTY

By Steven Cook

With 24 inches of snow falling Friday, it's obviously beginning to look like a typical Iowa winter. With the snow falling hard, it would have been easy to chalk up the blizzard to the bag of a 10-pounder that was dropped on the Iowa City City Council by candidates for mayor. The two candidates for mayor and two candidates for city council have been criticized for their lack of preparedness for winter weather.

At around 2:00 p.m., the snow was still falling heavily on the streets of Iowa City. The city council is expected to declare a state of emergency and issue a shelter in place order. It's unclear how long the snow will continue to fall, but it's possible that it could last through the weekend.

Gimme shelter, bus riders say

Some Cambus riders found they didn’t like the new route on the Sunday afternoon.

By Kelly Wilson

When UI freshman Christina Cipollone boarded the Route 53 Cambus on Sunday during her first day of classes, she wasn’t surprised to find the bus nearly filled to capacity. Cipollone was a little relieved that the bus was not as spacious as the one in front of the Student Union, built on a 90-by-40-foot lot, but not as full as another Cambus.

The previous bus had been built in the front of the Communications Center. So the new bus was only half as full as the Cambus had been half full.

"They said the shelter would be made for a bus a little bit more comfortable in the weather," said Cipollone, a UI student. "It’s a little bit more comfortable in the weather.

I.C. teen to be tried as adult

Usher Foye, a 17-year-old Iowa City boy, was charged as an adult for an alleged sexual assault.

Foye is charged with second-degree sexual abuse of an individual under 18. He was arrested last week after an 18-year-old woman told police she was sexually assaulted by Foye.

His case will continue as a juvenile proceeding until the summer, when a judge will decide whether to try Foye as an adult.

The decision was made by Judge Robert Clouser, who was appointed by Governor Tom Vilsack to the court.

Clouser said he was concerned about Foye’s future and the safety of the public.

Foye was arrested last week after police were called to a residence where the alleged assault occurred.

The victim told police that she had been sexually assaulted by Foye, who she said had entered her home without her permission.

Several Cambus riders who have been going to and from the University of Iowa were pleased with the new bus shelter.

"I think the shelter will make them feel safer," said one rider.

Union hits UIHC with complaint

The complaint claims discrimination against a coalition because of its union activity.

By Jerry Moll

For UI Hospitals and Clinics employees Patricia Caruth, a former nurse from a children’s hospital, the district attorney’s office was the only place she could legally strike.

"It’s mainly to protect the public," she said. "I think the shelter will make them feel safer.

The complaint alleges that UIHC violated federal law by firing a union official who was trying to organize public employees to strike.

UIHC, a subsidiary of Premier HealthCare, announced in June that it had chosen not to add any new shelter to the one already on the north side of the street from the newest one.

UIHC spokesperson Andrew Wilson said the company had already made plans for a new shelter, and the last one was to be installed by Cambus.

Optimism returns to weary and bitter Hawkeye fans

Iowa's athletic hopes are rising to the air. In the P&G Bowl, head coach Hayden Fry's team faced the University of Florida Gators. But just before the final whistle blew, the Hawkeyes had already made history. They won their first game of the season, securing victory against a team that was ranked higher than them. The Hawkeyes have been struggling for the past few years, but this win was a much-needed boost for the team and its fans.

The victory was a critical moment for Iowa, as it not only brought them back to the brink of relevance but also showed that they are capable of competing with top-tier teams. The win was particularly satisfying for Hawkeye fans, who had been waiting for such a moment for a long time. It was a moment of celebration, a moment of hope, and a moment of pride for the Hawkeye Nation.

The team's victory was not just a win on the field but also a win for the community. It was a win for the Hawkeye fans, who have been through thick and thin, and a win for the university, which has been struggling to find its footing in the competitive world of college athletics.

The victory was also a moment of inspiration for the players and the coaching staff. It was a moment of unity and camaraderie, a moment that reminded the team why they play the game they do. It was a moment of joy, a moment of hope, and a moment of pride for the Hawkeyes.

Point guard Oliver is becoming the player coach Tom Davis wants. He's playing like a veteran, though only a sophomore. "He's grabbed the Hawkeye basketball program by the hair," Davis said. "It's going to make him more difficult for people to guard him."

Hawkeyes Area against Detroit, Oliver led the Hawkeyes with 13 points and collected eight rebounds.

The point guard played through a gamut of emotions Saturday night. He said the Hawks had a "good cushion" at first, but the game "turned out to be much different than expected." "I hope we can get that feeling back," Oliver added.

By James Rosen

By this time, Iowa basketball players and coaches had to use playbooks to study material for a Saturday showdown.

"It's nice to see. I feel good and I told him that," McCausland said. "He was in the game. He could have had 21 more and he would have been a DevComponents to the championship game." Settles' help, senior Jason Man, was also valuable.
