Prosecutors meet Monica

The House managers say Lewinsky's testimony would help senators find the "truth"; her lawyer disagrees.

By Larry Margasak
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — At a critical juncture in President Clinton's impeachment trial, House prosecutors interviewed Monica Lewinsky for almost two hours Sunday and asserted that her testimony would help the Senate "determine the truth."

After a session that triggered partisan convulsions even before it was held, Lewinsky's lawyer, Plato Cacheris, said she "added nothing to the record that is already sitting before the Senate right now."

Yet all three House managers who participated in the interview called the session productive.

"I believe she would be a witness that would help them determine the truth, and that's what we are all endeavoring to do during this process," said Rep. Asa Hutchinson, R-Ark. Rep. Bill McCollum, R-Fla., said Lewinsky "might be a very helpful witness to the Senate if called." Rep. Ed Bryant, R-Tenn., called the former White House intern "an impressive person."

Cacheris said his client "was candid, forthright and extremely truthful," but he insisted that anything she told the Senate would cover familiar ground. He urged the managers to tell their colleagues that it is unnecessary to call Lewinsky as a witness, so that her "long nightmare" could come to an end.

The House prosecutors were set to meet today, the deadline for submitting a witness list to the Senate. The senators will then debate whether to call witnesses before taking two votes: the first on a motion to dismiss the case and then on the decision to take depositions of witnesses.

Earlier Sunday, three Republican senators said they wanted a swift end to the case, and two of them expressed hope for a conclusion this week.

Republican Sens. Olympia Snowe of Maine, Slade Gorton of Washington and Richard Shelby of Alabama sought a fast conclusion to the trial. Snowe even predicted, "I

Beer bust redux: Police nab 64

In the first large operation of 1999, police and Public Safety officers hit 39 bars, looking for underage imbibers.

By Zack Kucharski
The Daily Iowan

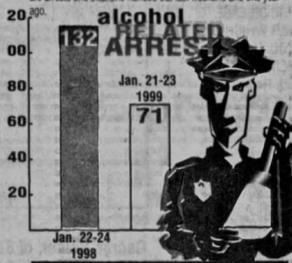

Iowa City police and UI Public Safety officers once again targeted underage drinkers in a crackdown on Jan. 21.

Officers from the departments worked together to check 39 area bars and issue 64 alcohol-related charges to minors. Additional officers were assigned to perform bar checks between 11 p.m. and 2 a.m.

The majority of the citations were issued at Bo James, 118 E. Washington St., and the Sports Column, 12 S. Dubuque St. Bo James had eight citations, and the Sports Column had four. No citations were issued at two locations often targeted by the police — the Union Bar, 121 E. College St., and the Fieldhouse Restaurant & Bar, 111 E. College St. UI freshman Mike Wiczorek, who

Deer kill may go private

An animal-rights group fights to stop the killing, to the dismay of city officials.

By Steven Cook
The Daily Iowan

Iowa City officials hope to hear today whether sharpshooters can resume the state's first-of-its-kind deer killing.

If the U.S. Department of Agriculture, whose sharpshooters had been contracted to carry out the killing in Iowa City, pulls out of the project, some Iowa City city councilors say they are committed to salvage as much as they can of the plan before the Feb. 28 deadline — even using private contractors to kill the animals.

"We've spent two years working through this," said Councilor Dee Vanderhoef. "The deer committee didn't make its decisions lightly. I think we've realized we have to have sharpshooting first, before we can get the herd to a spot for other deer management opportunities to succeed."

A local group, the UI Animal Rights Coalition, successfully halted the killing on Jan. 22 after writing to the USDA and pointing out alleged procedural violations.

The coalition is made up of about 17 UI and non-UI students. It is backed by three other animal-rights organizations, including the Humane Society of the United States, the Animal Protection Institute and the Fund for Animals.

Five downtown stores close; two more to hit the bricks

Some business owners blame Coral Ridge and corporate downsizing for the recent closings.

By Crissy McMartin
The Daily Iowan

For many downtown businesses, it took six months to measure the impact of the Coral Ridge Mall. For some, the worst-case scenario has become a reality.

Competition from the mall and corporate-chain downsizing are being blamed for the recent closing of several downtown stores, including Moda Americana, Eby's Sporting Goods Co., CC Dithers and Wild Things within the last 30 days alone.

Two other stores are also in the process of holding going-out-of-business sales. The Seiferts chain is closing its doors nationwide next week, a move that will include the store in the Old Capitol Mall. And the catalogue-based Land's End outlet, 10 S. Clinton St., will depart on March 31 as a result of increased Internet orders.

"Our closing has nothing to do with the new mall," said Stacy Otto, the Land's End manager. "Land's End, as a whole, had too much retail space. We've seen no effects in business since the mall opened."

Some downtown businesses, however, attribute most of the closings to a lack of foot traffic in the past six months and an overall decrease in sales.

"We're still keeping our heads above water," said Susan Hoffman, manager

Of jocks, Greeks & myths

A UI professor's study debunks some stereotypes about college students but supports others.

By Jerry Abejo
The Daily Iowan

Perhaps college stereotypes are left unspoken, but one can't deny that they exist: Community college students are inferior. Sorority women are ditzy. Jocks are, well ... jocks.

A study done by a UI professor shows that some of these stereotypes are simply false. Other stereotypes, however, may not necessarily be totally unfounded.

Dispelling the notion that attending a community college entails receiving a second-rate education, the federally funded study shows that those who choose to spend less money for college aren't necessarily sacrificing their education.

Research done by Ernest Pascarella, UI Peterson professor of higher education, reports that students who saved thousands of dollars by first attending a community college performed just as well on cognitive tests — similar to the ACT — as their four-year counterparts did.

"They're thought of as second-class institutions, and maybe that isn't true," Pascarella said. "Given the sort of bad press two-year colleges receive — which people actually believe — they do about as well as students in four-year schools."

The study shows that the quality of an institution played less of a role in student learning than what students did with the resources available to them.

For example, students in predominantly black universities — which, Pascarella said, have much fewer resources to put into education than predominantly white universities — performed just as well on cognitive tests as students in largely white universities.

The study also looked at women who believed they were being discriminated against in the classroom because of their gender. Women who

Pope urges crowd to confront evangelism

MEXICO CITY — A million of the faithful packed a dusty Mexico City racetrack Sunday to hear a call to arms from Pope John Paul II — a summons to take to the streets and confront the challenge of Protestant evangelism.

The papal Mass was a powerful display of the aging pontiff's spell over this predominantly Roman Catholic nation. "Mexico, always faithful!" chanted the crowd, intent on showing the pope that their affection hasn't diminished since his first trip here in 1979. PAGE 5A

Glenn touches down in Japan for tour

TOKYO (AP) — John Glenn arrived in Japan Sunday with four other crew members from the space shuttle Discovery on a trip to promote international links for the U.S. space program.

■ BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (AP) — Former "Baywatch" babe Pamela Anderson cut short a tour of Uruguay and Argentina after being harassed on a beach by scores of excited teen-age boys and pestered with questions about her famed sex videotape.

"Pamela is frightened, and though we offered to suspend her open-air presentations she just wants to go home," tour manager Diego Cassagne said.

After a news conference on Jan. 22 at the Atlantic resort of Punta del Este, Uruguay, scores of teen-agers surrounded Anderson on the beach, shouted vulgar remarks and tried to fondle her.

The current star of the syndicated TV show "V.I.P." immediately canceled the filming of a suntan lotion commercial in Uruguay and an appearance on a TV show in Argentina.

Help Me, Harlan

Dear Harlan,

After 15 years of dating, I've come to the realization that I not only don't trust men, but I'm bordering on hatred of them.

Since I'm not a lesbian, this is a huge problem. Most of the time, I am fine being alone, but other times, it's very hard.

How do I deal with loneliness?

— Dealing

Dear Dealing,

Since, I'm not a lesbian either, I can completely relate to this one.

You're so bitter you make lemons seem sweet. You've been more soured than a pint of milk five months past its expiration date. You've been burned more times than an albino model working as a part-time fire-eater and hot-coal walker on the weekends.

I hate to see you so disillusioned. I could side with you and say all men are dogs, but I'm a man and I'm no dog. Sure, most men have a collar, leash and dog costume hanging in the closet, but a good number of these men are nothing more than harmless pups just begging for a little bit of loving.

The problem isn't the loneliness as much as it is the lack of intimacy. Friends, families and all the people you're soon to meet will keep you company. It's just as a single adult, not having the intimacy you long to embrace can be very painful. Unfortunately, this is one void you have to temporarily fill.

An English teacher once told me, "Only boring people get bored." I'm not calling you boring, but perhaps you can use your alone time to become a more complete and dynamic person. If anything you can try to break the pattern that has you so down and disillusioned.

Now is the time to be aggressive and take part in all the activities that will ultimately help you become a happier person. You must force yourself to get involved. In time, not only will you find new friends, you'll also find that you're a much more dynamic and attractive person.

Just never lose your faith. You too will find your lucky dog some day.

New bionic-bus era starts

■ Cambus has added two new bionic buses to its admittedly aging fleet; one hits the streets today.

By Erika Slife
The Daily Iowan

Regular riders of the Cambus bionic bus should notice a marked improvement in the service today. In a move to upgrade the system's aging fleet of bionic buses, Cambus has purchased two new buses, one of which will be used today for the first time on the regular route. Cambus uses the bionic buses to serve UI students, faculty and staff who have special needs — for instance, disabled people or others who have difficulty climbing onto the larger buses, said Cambus dispatcher Bill Stineman. One of the notable improvements in the new buses, which are called Orion 2, is a system that enables the driver to lower the whole bus and fold out the wheelchair ramp by flipping a switch in the front, said Liz Howell, director of the bionic buses. In the old bionic buses, the vehicle would not lower itself; the driver needed to get out and operate the wheelchair ramp from the rear of the bus. "The bus is closer to the ground, and there is no overhang," said Cambus driver Kate Shirk. "The front end can go over the curb, and you have more control." "The new buses will make it easier for everyone," said UI engineering Professor Karl Lonngren, a bionic-bus passenger. "The lifts won't break, and it will be better with a switch." Because two of the five original bionic buses were getting old, the new vehicles were purchased in mid-December for roughly $200,000 each, Howell said. For now, the older buses will still be in service, she said, but the newer ones will eventually replace them. The new bionic buses may run on other routes, such as Oakdale, East Campus Shuttle and the night

Pentacrest. "They're smaller buses, and these routes have a lower number of riders," Howell said. The bionic route runs 7 a.m. to midnight from Monday through Friday and noon to midnight on the weekends. The route accommodates people based on demand, Stineman said, adding that "the bionic buses are comparable to someone calling a cab." Bionic bus passengers can call the Cambus office at the beginning of the semester for permanent rides; they can also call during the semester for additional rides on a first-come, first-served basis. There are 40 people currently signed up on the permanent list, but the list changes frequently, Stineman said. "There are people who are on crutches, and they may ride for a few weeks. Then there are some people on faculty who have been riding for years." For more information, the Cambus telephone number is 335-8633. Bill to help shrinking districts planned

■ The measure will let the school districts across Iowa receive state money based on the number of students.

By P. Solomon Banda
Associated Press

DES MOINES — Most legislative work is on hold while Republican leaders wait for Gov. Tom Vilsack to unveil his state budget Thursday, but at least one bill is expected to make it out of the Senate this week. The measure, which could go to a vote by Wednesday, would allow districts that are losing students to spend the same amount from year to year. The law already allows districts to do that. "It expires this year, and there are some districts out there that are now in negotiations with teachers and they don't know what their funds available are," said Senate President Mary Kramer, R-West Des Moines. The measure would help about 245 shrinking districts across the state and has support from both Republicans and Democrats. It is expected to pass with little debate, said Senate Minority Leader Michael Gronstal, D-

Council Bluffs. Some districts have not seen their budgets grow after being hit by declining enrollment year after year, Gronstal said. "I'm pretty sure someone will offer an amendment to raise it," by 1 percent, Gronstal said. Under the measure, districts will receive state money based on the number of students, with a shortfall made up by districts raising taxes locally. Declining enrollment has forced some districts to close, the latest being the Burt Community School District which in November voted to shut its doors. The Fort Dodge school district lost the most students last year, declining by about 240. Meanwhile, both Senate Majority Leader Steward Iverson, R-Dows, and House Majority Leader Brent Siegrist, R-Council Bluffs, said work will begin in earnest once Vilsack presents his budget. On the House side, Republican leaders say they will be spending this week working in committees on some of the 126 bills introduced in the House last week. Siegrist said two major issues pending before the House — constitutional spending limits and life sentences for methamphetamine dealers — are on hold. Constitutional spending limits, passed by the Senate last week, is not expected to be debated on the floor this week. "It's going to take some time to debate," Siegrist said. "It will probably take the better part of a day. So we want to make sure we kick some bills out of committee first." House Democrats, like in the Senate, oppose the measure on the grounds it would force local governments to raise property taxes, and are upset over the June 29 special election. "I think that's a transparent political ploy to allow special interests to have an unfair say," said House Minority Leader David Schrader, D-Monroe. Republicans point to 13 states that have similar measures where property taxes have not gone up. Siegrist said the debate will probably go to the floor next week. Siegrist said the House was expected to debate and pass a measure calling for life sentences for methamphetamine dealers this week, but that issue is on hold. Siegrist said Vilsack said life sentences would apply to those who manufacture and deal, not just to those who deal. That, Siegrist said, is a change from earlier proposals.

After-hours party ends in hospital visit

A party at 220 N. Dubuque St. ended when an unnamed male was sent to the UI Hospitals and Clinics after being assaulted early Sunday morning, police reports said. At approximately 2 a.m., the victim came onto the porch of the duplex and was assaulted shortly thereafter, said Brent Raby, a UI junior and resident of the house. The victim was not on the scene when police arrived; he returned approximately 15 minutes later, according to police reports. The victim was transported to the UIHC, where he was given stitches and treated for other minor injuries. Matt Mescher, a UI senior and a resident of the other side of the duplex, said there was a large group of people who "basically jumped (the victim) and started kicking him." Though the assault "sounded personal," there was no proof that the victim knew his assailants, said Iowa City police Lt. Matt Johnson. The victim would not cooperate in identifying his attackers, which forces police to close the case, Johnson said. No arrests were made. Few seats remain for Elton John concert

The line for the tickets for "An Evening with Elton John — Solo" began to form about 10 hours before the tickets went on sale Saturday at 10 a.m. By the time the University Box Office opened, more than 230 people were waiting in line. "The line went around the corner, down the hallway and past the bookstore," said UI junior Sara Lore, who arrived at the scene around 5:30 a.m. To bide time, Lore said many people were sleeping. "I did homework," she said. By Sunday, the concert, which will be held at the Carver-Hawkeye Arena on March 6 at 8 p.m., was virtually sold out. The remaining tickets are limited single-seating ones in the upper level of the arena, the University Box Office reported. Ryan Barker, director of SCOPE, the student-run organization that booked the concert, said he was impressed with the way the sales went, but not surprised. "Elton John's" tour was the top-grossing tour last year," Barker said. "It doesn't get any bigger than Elton John." Barker said he expects a sellout sometime this week. Despite past criticisms, Barker said he hopes the show will restore concertgoers' faith in SCOPE, which is responsible for booking music acts at the UI. "We're still going to go for the big names," he said. Tickets for the concert can be bought at the University Box Office and all Ticket Master locations for $47.50 or $37.50, depending on the seat. — by Anita Chipala

Iowa given federal money to fight war on meth

DES MOINES (AP) — Iowa and five other Midwestern states will split $2.4 million in federal money allocated to fight methamphetamine. The money is part of a $20.5 million national plan to crack down on drug trafficking. The funding will be used to buy equipment and hire drug agents, and other staff, said aides to Barry McCaffrey, director of the White House Office of National Drug Control Policy. Iowa is part of the Midwest High Intensity Drug Trafficking area, where local, state and federal officials are focusing their efforts on the ongoing meth problem.

Council ponders Benton St. project

■ Benton Street residents are expected to tell the council what they want done with the heavily trafficked street.

By Steven Cook
The Daily Iowan

Whether a one-mile stretch of Benton Street should be widened to three or four lanes or left at two lanes will come under the scrutiny of the Iowa City City Council tonight. Several Benton Street residents are expected at the council's work session to discuss the project with councilors. In its Capital Improvement Plan, the city has scheduled the reconstruction of a section of Benton Street, from just west of Riverside Drive to Sunset Street for the summer of 2000. In order to give city engineers enough time to design the reconstruction, councilors must decide soon whether they want to leave the street at two lanes, add a turn lane or expand it to four lanes.

The council can also delay the project for another year. Because the reconstruction will pass Roosevelt Elementary School, Benton Street residents have expressed some concern over widening the street, fearing that it could endanger children walking to school. Mark Madden, 1204 W. Benton St., said he's against widening the street to four lanes but could be persuaded to support three lanes depending on how it would affect properties along the street. "As any homeowner, I don't want to have to listen to more cars go by," he said. "More cars mean more speed." Benton Street carries 8,400 to 14,000 cars per day, causing congestion during peak traffic periods, especially when cars attempt left turns, city traffic officials have said. Speeding is also a problem in the area, they said. Methods of controlling traffic other than widening Benton Street need to be considered, said Ruth Baker, a Miller-Orchard Neighborhood representative. The Miller-Orchard Neighborhood includes Benton Street. More police patrols to catch speeders is one thing that could be done to help the current traffic situation, Baker said. According to a city study, traffic regularly exceeds 30 mph in the school zone's 20-mph-speed limit. "We think the city needs to look at the whole picture; that has not been done," Baker said. Councilors said Sunday they wanted to listen to what neighborhood members had to say before making their decision. Councilor Dee Norton said he would probably be against widening Benton Street to four lanes. "I want to preserve the neighborhood, not just accommodate the through traffic," he said. 'Saving Private Ryan' wins best picture

In the Golden Globes competition, Spielberg also snags best director.

By Michael Fleeman
Associated Press

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. — "Saving Private Ryan" won best dramatic film and Steven Spielberg was honored for directing the brutally realistic World War II combat story, while "Shakespeare in Love," "The Truman Show" and "Elizabeth" won major awards at Sunday's 56th Golden Globes.

Spielberg, whose film is a major contender for an Oscar, extended his thanks to "all the veterans that are out there that saved Western Civilization and stopped the Holocaust in 1945."

"Shakespeare in Love" won best comedy or musical film and picked up awards for star Gwyneth Paltrow — best actress in a comedy — and for screenplay.

Jim Carrey won best dramatic actor for "The Truman Show," in which he played a man who realizes his whole life has been a TV show. His co-star, Ed Harris, was named best film supporting actor. "Truman" also won for best score.

Carrey, referring to the kind of comedy for which he is better known than dramatic acting, said: "It's going to be so hard to talk out of my ass after this, but I'll manage."

Cate Blanchette of "Elizabeth" won best dramatic actress for her role as the title character.

Michael Caine of "Little Voice" was best actor in a musical or comedy motion picture, and Lynn Redgrave of "Gods and Monsters" won the movie supporting actress trophy.

The Hollywood Foreign Press Association voted ABC's "The Practice" as best television drama series, and Fox's "Ally McBeal" won as best television comedy series.

"Spin City" star Michael J. Fox, who has been diagnosed with Parkinson's disease, was a funny but poignant winner for TV comedy actor. He thanked his doctors, including one he said had opened up his brain. "We're so lucky to do what we do ... and just take every day and enjoy it," Fox said.

Tom Hanks and his production team hold the award for Best Mini-Series or Motion Picture made for Television for their film "From the Earth to the Moon" in Beverly Hills, Calif., Sunday. From left, Tony To, Brian Grazer, Hanks, John Melfi and Michael Bostick.

Paltrow played the upper-crust lady who becomes the lover and muse of William Shakespeare in "Shakespeare in Love." In "Little Voice," Caine played a sleazy agent who tries to turn a meek woman with a powerful musical gift for show tunes into a star.

"Oh, what a shock," Caine said. "My career must be slipping. This is the first time I've been available to pick up an award."

Brazil's "Central Station" captured the foreign language film award.

"Shakespeare in Love" and "The Truman Show" were the leading movie nominees, with six apiece. "Saving Private Ryan" followed with five. "Bulworth," "Elizabeth," "Gods and Monsters" and "Little Voice" had three nominations apiece.

The awards, broadcast from a hotel ballroom by NBC, were plagued by problems, with sound cutting out and the picture freezing momentarily.

Harris set the tone for the notoriously freeheeling awards show by coming on stage with a toothpick in his mouth, saying, "Oh man, I just got through eating dinner."

Backstage he noted that "The Truman Show" came out in the summer, long before studios traditionally roll out their award-worthy product. "I'm glad that people didn't forget about it," he said.

Redgrave, who played the crusty-but-loving maid to an aging horror director in "Gods and Monsters," said, "It's been 32 years since I stood one of these on a mantelpiece and it's been crying out for a friend ever since."

In the television categories, Dylan McDermott of "The Practice" and Keri Russell of "Felicity" were named best actor and actress in television dramatic series.

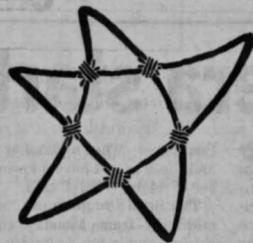

Jenna Elfman won best actress in a TV musical or comedy series for "Dharma and Greg."

Tom Hanks, nominated for best actor in "Saving Private Ryan," picked up an early honor for his "From the Earth to the Moon," which won best miniseries or movie made for TV.

The Golden Globes are awarded for film and television in what can be a more colorful affair than the stuffy Academy Awards.

The Golden Globes traditionally serve as predictors for the Academy Awards in March. In the last 16 years, 12 films that won best motion picture honors at the Golden Globes went on to take the same prize at the Oscars.

One award was announced before the ceremony: Jack Nicholson was honored with the Cecil B. DeMille Award for his "outstanding contribution to the entertainment field."

Olympic 'gold' may result in 6 expulsions

■ In the wake of the Salt Lake scandal, IOC leaders recommend that six members get the ax.

By Stephen Wilson
Associated Press

LAUSANNE, Switzerland — Olympic leaders recommended the expulsions of six IOC members Sunday in an unprecedented response linked to the biggest corruption scandal in the history of the games.

The embattled president of the International Olympic Committee, Juan Antonio Samaranch, said the action was aimed at ending "the ugliest chapter in the history" of the world's biggest sports event, which in the last two decades has become a billion-dollar business.

As a third member resigned in the scandal, Samaranch said three other members remained under investigation, while a fourth was warned about his actions by the ruling executive board.

"The members violated their Olympic oath and betrayed the confidence put in them by the Olympic family," he said.

A six-person IOC investigative panel concluded its report Sunday morning into the cash payments, scholarships and other favors tied to Salt Lake's winning bid for the 2002 Winter Games.

The members were cited for accepting inducements — reportedly totaling close to $800,000 in cash and benefits — from Salt Lake boosters.

There also were reports of lavish gifts, free medical care and other improper exchanges between the members and the Salt Lake bidders.

One member, Jean-Claude Gangas of the Republic of Congo, received $226,000 from Salt Lake in cash, medical and travel expenses, gifts

"I express my deepest apology to the athletes, the people of Salt Lake City and Utah, the global Olympic family and the millions of citizens worldwide who love and respect the games."

— Juan Antonio Samaranch, president of the International Olympic Committee and entertainment, according to the IOC report.

Samaranch said the vote on the sanctions was unanimous and that all six had been asked to resign because they had done "great harm to the Olympic movement."

"I express my deepest apology to the athletes, the people of Salt Lake City and Utah, the global Olympic family and the millions of citizens worldwide who love and respect the games," he said.

David Sibandze of Swaziland was the latest member to quit in the scandal, handing his resignation to Samaranch just before the report was released. Two other IOC members resigned last week.

Confront evangelism, pope urges

■ John Paul demonstrates again his powerful charisma in Roman Catholic Mexico.

By Victor L. Simpson
Associated Press

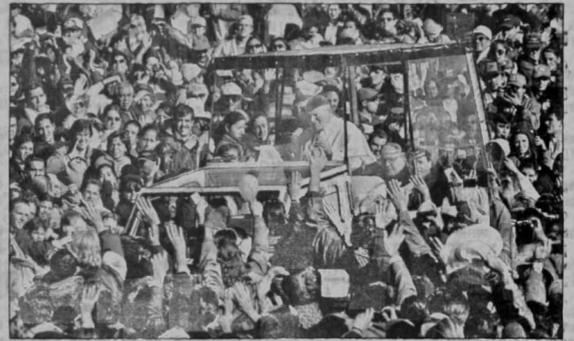

MEXICO CITY — A million of the faithful packed a dusty Mexico City racetrack Sunday to hear a call to arms from Pope John Paul II — a summons to take to the streets and confront the challenge of Protestant evangelism.

The papal Mass was a powerful display of the aging pontiff's spell over this predominantly Roman Catholic nation. "Mexico, always faithful!" chanted the crowd, intent on showing the pope that their affection hasn't diminished since his first trip here in 1979.

Organizers estimated the crowd at 1 million; thousands more listened from outside the packed racetrack grounds. Parishioners perched on sagging tree branches, stood on friends' shoulders or clambered onto loudspeaker stands to view the spectacle.

Thousands of makeshift cardboard periscopes poked above the crowd so that those toward the back of the track, nearly a mile from the altar, could catch a glimpse of the pope.

John Paul urged his audience to ignore the seductions of what he called "fallacious and novel ideologies" and to spread the word of the Welfare rolls fallen to lowest in 30 years

WASHINGTON (AP) — The number of people on welfare has fallen to its lowest level in 30 years, President Clinton announced today. But the new figures also show the dramatic declines of recent years are beginning to slow in certain states.

The president will also offer a package of programs aimed at helping more people get to jobs and encouraging businesses to continue hiring them.

Nationally, just under 8 million people remained on welfare at the end of September, down 44 percent from 14.3 million in 1994. But state officials and academics alike have long cautioned that, at some point, nearly all the people who can move off welfare with relative ease will have left. That will leave those with deeper problems such as substance abuse, domestic violence and very little education.

"With welfare reform, the more you succeed, the harder the job becomes," said Don Winstead, who heads Florida's welfare-reform program.

Clinton hopes to make that job easier. Administration officials said he will announce proposals included in the budget he will submit to Congress next month, including:

- $1 billion to help 200,000 long-term welfare recipients in high-poverty areas move to work. It's the continuation of a two-year-old program with a new requirement that 20 percent be used for low-income fathers.
- $430 million to give 75,000 housing vouchers that help people on welfare move closer to a new job.
- $150 million in transportation money to help people get to jobs, often in suburbs not served by public transportation.
- $530 million to extend the tax credit for businesses that hire people off welfare.

First Amendment case over cursing

STANDISH, Mich. (AP) — Timothy Boomer made a bigger splash than he bargained for after a tumble from a canoe landed him in a fight over whether foul language is legally protected free speech.

A sheriff's deputy says he heard Boomer explode in a three-minute barrage of profanity after the mishap on the Rifle River last summer, loud enough to be heard a quarter-mile away. What's more, he says, a woman and her two young children were nearby.

So the officer ticketed Boomer under an 1897 Michigan law that prohibits cursing in front of women and children. Boomer, 24, insists his words have been exaggerated. But defense attorney William Street, who took the case on behalf of the American Civil Liberties Union, says that even if Boomer was boorish, he was within his First Amendment rights.

Boomer's trial is scheduled for Thursday, but Street will ask a judge today to throw out the charge and declare the law unconstitutional.

"There is an understandable desire for more civility in our society. But do we want to give police the power to enforce it?" Street asked. "Heaven forbid, we have sex police. Are we now going to have language police?"

Critical of U.S. life, John Paul heads for St. Louis

■ The U.S. government resorts to bombs too often, the pope believes, and Americans are too frivolous.

By George Gedda
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Pope John Paul II arrives on American soil this week with a skeptical view of American policies and the way Americans live.

He believes the U.S. government is too cavalier about dropping bombs on adversaries and resorts too often to economic embargoes. Americans in general, the pontiff thinks, spend their money too frivolously and are too indifferent about the plight of the world's poor. None of this is expected to dampen the enthusiasm that will greet John Paul when he arrives in St. Louis from Mexico for a 30-hour visit Tuesday, which starts with a 45-minute meeting with President Clinton in a hangar at the airport. No one knows whether the president's affair with Monica Lewinsky will be a topic.

A White House official, speaking privately, said Clinton is expected to defend his policies towards Cuba, Iraq, the Middle East peace process and Africa.

According to estimates, upwards of 600,000 may turn out, weather permitting. It will be the sixth time John Paul will have set foot on American territory in two decades as pope.

Last month, John Paul assailed U.S.-British air strikes against Iraq as "aggression." And in his annual speech to diplomats on Jan. 11, the pope said the bombing campaign showed "once more that war does not solve problems."

"It complicates them and leaves the civilian population to bear the tragic consequences," the pope said.

Tad Szulc, who has written a biography of John Paul, said, "He gets upset every time we bomb somebody."

And Drew Christiansen, a senior fellow at the Woodstock Theological Center in Washington, said: "The holy father has been very clear in his condemnation of use of force and in his conviction that issues must be resolved diplomatically."

The pope believes that military forces should be limited to rescue operations 99.9 per cent of the time, Christiansen said. One occasion when the Vatican appeared to acquiesce in the use of force was in Bosnia in 1995, when Bosnian Serb positions were the target of U.S.-led air strikes.

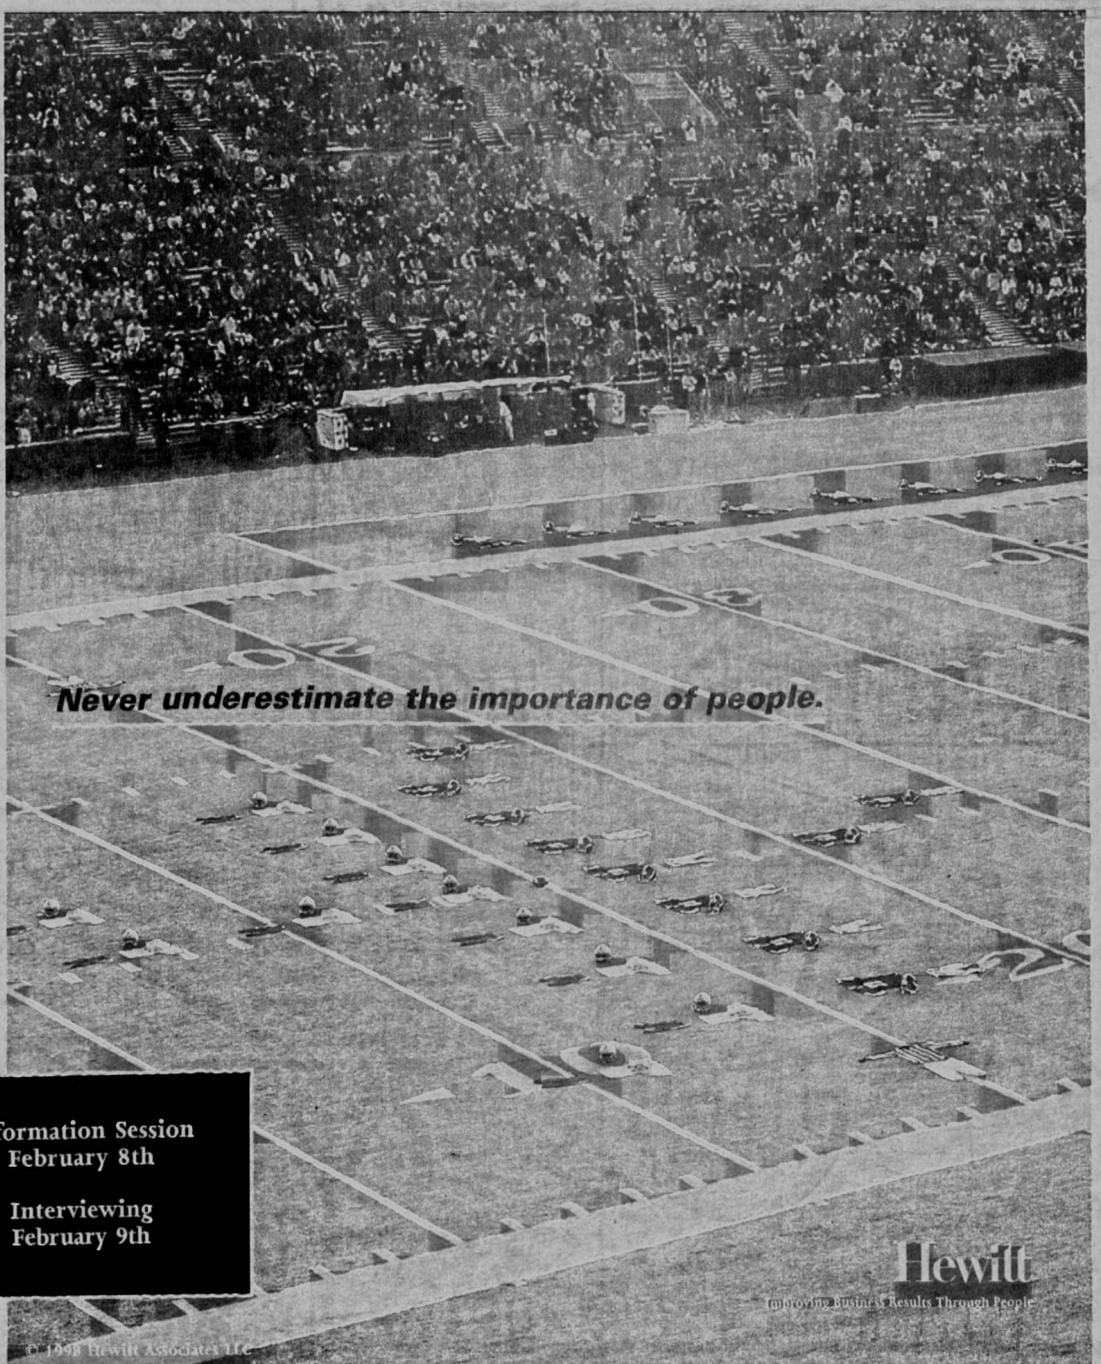

In every field of competition, the outcome is determined by the players.

U.S. planes attack Iraqi sites

American aircraft return safely to the air base in Turkey after the attacks.

By Eun-Kyung Kim
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — American warplanes, threatened by Iraqi artillery systems while patrolling the "no-fly" zone in northern Iraq, attacked two surface-to-air missile sites in separate incidents Sunday. It was the second day in a row that U.S. jets enforcing the flight-interdiction zone met resistance and fired back. A U.S. F-15E Eagle fired a precision-guided missile and "suppressed" an Iraqi SA-3 surface-to-air missile site that threatened forces in the area, the military said. The missile scored a direct hit, Operation Northern Watch said in a statement. Northern Watch operates out of the NATO base in Incirlik, Turkey, to enforce the truce that ended the 1991 Persian Gulf War and to ban Iraqi aircraft from the northern sector of the country. The American aircraft in the area reported they were illuminated by the Iraqi surface-to-air missile system, said Air Force Lt. Col. Dennis Linn, a spokesman at European Command headquarters in Germany.

A pilot whose plane is illuminated, or locked on by radar, assumes he is about to be fired upon. Less than an hour after the first attack, a U.S. Marine EA-6B Prowler and two U.S. Air Force F-16 Fighting Falcons fired high speed anti-radiation missiles after their aircraft were illuminated by Iraqi systems. The damage to Iraqi forces in the second incident was being assessed. All of the American aircraft returned safely to Incirlik. On Jan. 23, American warplanes were threatened by Iraqi MiG and anti-aircraft ground fire and responded with laser-guided bombs on two surface-to-air missile sites in southern Iraq. Planes from the Navy aircraft carrier USS Carl Vinson, on station in the Persian Gulf, are patrolling that zone south of Baghdad. Iraq has demanded that the United States and Britain end what Iraqi President Saddam Hussein calls their "illegal" patrols in the restricted zones set up over northern and southern Iraq to protect Iraqi Kurds and Shiite Muslims. President Clinton has said the bans will be fully enforced because they are central to the U.S. strategy for containing Iraq's military.

Freed Kosovo rebels ready for vengeance

After a month in a Serbian prison, a group of ethnic Albanians seeks to take up arms.

By Melissa Eddy
Associated Press

LIKOVAC, Yugoslavia — The day after she was freed from a month in a Yugoslav military prison, 16-year-old Merita Ramadani said Sunday she wants to take up a rifle and avenge the deaths of her ethnic Albanian comrades killed by the Serbs. "Today, I'm with my family," she told the Associated Press, as she sat among her three sisters and youngest brother. "Tomorrow, I'm going to put on an army uniform and take a gun and go to the front line." Ramadani was among nine rebels freed on Jan. 23 under a secret deal negotiated by U.S. and European diplomats to secure the release two weeks ago of eight Yugoslav soldiers. The Yugoslav government, which denied that there was any such deal, has not acknowledged the release. The Organization for Security and Cooperation in Europe hailed the latest release as "an act of good will" that could help "create an atmosphere conducive" to a peaceful settlement of the conflict in Kosovo, a southern province of Yugoslavia's main republic, Serbia. About 90 percent of Kosovo's 2 million people are ethnic Albanians; the vast majority of them want independence. Peace with the Serbs was not on the minds of Ramadani and two other newly released prisoners Sunday, a day after they were brought to a regional headquarters of the Kosovo Liberation Army in Likovac, 25 miles west of Pristina. Last month, Ramadani, a nursing assistant for the KLA, had just crossed back into Kosovo from neighboring Albania, where she had accompanied a group of wounded KLA fighters for medical treatment in the Albanian capital, Tirana. They and another group of rebels were ambushed on Dec. 14

Ex-minister vows to oust Netanyahu

Yitzhak Mordechai, calling the Israeli Cabinet "haters of peace," joins opponents for the upcoming elections.

By Dafna Linzer
Associated Press

TEL AVIV, Israel — A day after being fired as defense minister, Yitzhak Mordechai said Sunday that he would join old friends and former generals in a new party trying to oust Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu. Mordechai described his experience in Netanyahu's hard-line government as a time among "haters of peace"; on Sunday, he made the traditional rounds of a candidate for prime minister. Netanyahu fired Mordechai, who had opposed the prime minister's freezing of the U.S.-brokered Wye peace deal with the Palestinians, on Jan. 23 and gave him 48 hours to clear out his desk. Mordechai received his dismissal letter moments before Netanyahu read a copy of it on national television and accused Mordechai of making overtures to his election rivals. Mordechai appeared before supporters Sunday and announced his allegiance to a centrist party while denouncing Netanyahu. "I'm embarking, just at the right time, on a new path with wonderful people," he said, calling the leaders of the as-yet unnamed centrist party "the perfect bunch of people to bring change to Israel." He has yet to declare his candidacy for the May 17 elections, but the nascent party's leaders — former Army Chief of Staff Amnon Lipkin-Shahak, former Tel Aviv Mayor Roni Milo and former Finance Minister Dan Meridor — have all but handed the mantle to him. The four men met Sunday to discuss strategy and were expected to announce their party platform today.

Earlier Sunday, Mordechai left his last Cabinet meeting and went to Jerusalem's Western Wall, Judaism's holiest site and a traditional first stop for candidates. After prayers, Mordechai quoted Psalm 120 as a final, barbed statement to his former colleagues in the Cabinet. "Deliver me, O Lord, from lying lips, from a deceitful tongue," he read from the psalm. "... Too long have I had my dwelling among those who hate peace; I am for peace, but when I speak, they are for war." Mordechai long has been seen as a moderate in a Cabinet dominated by hard-liners in the peace process and supporters of aggressive expansion of Jewish settlements in Palestinian territories. His latest dispute came over the Wye accords, which Netanyahu froze in December, accusing the Palestinians of noncompliance.

Iowa City's culling fields

The Iowa City City Council has come under fire for its efforts to thin the area's burgeoning deer population.

But instead, it's the deer that should be under fire. Gun fire, that is. For months, animal-rights activists have complained that the city should not shoot some of the deer that populate our little hamlet.

It wasn't until last week, though, that anyone seemed to be listening. With a deer herd that now tops about 800 animals, Iowa City and its leaders understand that killing about 240 animals is in the best interest of the city and the herd itself. Such a large animal population — in such a small area — can lead to nothing but trouble, both for deer and humans.

That already has been realized, as deer are a common nuisance in residential neighborhoods just blocks from downtown and are a common cause of local automobile accidents. And a deer herd that is allowed to continue growing, unchecked, could become a breeding ground for parasites or subject to starvation.

So the city's plan to hire sharpshooters from the U.S. Department of Agriculture to cull the herd seemed like a wise and reasonable thing to do.

But maybe only to wise and reasonable people.

The environmental groups, led by the UI Animal Rights Coalition, last week renewed their objections to the deer shoot, which began Jan. 20.

They said that the U.S.D.A. had broken the law by not properly studying the area's deer population and beginning the kill too soon.

They, in fact, argued that Iowa City doesn't have a problem with deer overpopulation.

They suggested that, unless the U.S.D.A. stop the killing, they would sue.

So two days after they began the controlled kill and with a lawsuit hanging over their heads, the U.S.D.A. sharpshooters walked off the job. And now it appears that city officials, too, may be thinking that the sharpshooting plan is more trouble than it's worth.

The U.S.D.A. won't resume the kill until more environmental analysis and public comment can take place. And the state won't allow any shooting to happen after Feb. 28. So it looks like, unless the city can find a private contractor in the next few weeks who is willing to resume the killing, Bambi will get a stay of execution.

That's too bad.

The city should be reminded that the reasons it sought to cull the deer herd in the first place are still valid.

The environmental groups should be reminded that simply saying there is no overpopulation problem does not make it so.

Denying that a problem exists will only make the problem worse.

The day when a startled deer runs through the window of a downtown business or causes a fatal automobile accident may not be that far off if the city fails to stick to its guns on this issue.

Those were the good old days ...

Tell us about the old days, Auntie Hannah!
"Oh, not now kiddos. Wouldn't you rather plot the downfall of the Western Hemisphere or go fry bugs with Auntie's magnifying glass?"

"No! We wanna hear about what Iowa City was like when you were young! C'mon, c'mon! Tell us a good story!"

"You mean about how Iowa City was once a bustling little city, full of silly pedestrians and pissed-off motorists? With fresh-faced college kids everywhere and professors all dressed in tweed with elbow patches? My, those were good days ..."

"Go on, Auntie Hannah."

"Yessiree, Iowa City was a golden metropolis of wisdom and learning — right out in the middle of the biggest cornfield you ever saw! It was funky, too. All sorts of neat little shops run by kindly merchants who knew lots of people by name. Imagine that! We all lived together in the shadow of the Old Capitol, working, studying, sipping overpriced, yet tasty, coffee drinks. Oh, it was lovely. Even in the winter, when everything was gray and slushy, downtown Iowa City was lit up with thousands of little tiny sparkly lights that big men in coveralls hung from the trees on the Pedestrian Mall."

"What's a Pedestrian Mall, Auntie Hannah?"

"Well, it was a kind of a cross between a park and a town square. Oh, but you kids have never seen a town square, have you?"

"Huh-uh."

"Well, the Pedestrian Mall was a nice, shady place people could go to meet with friends and talk ... and play hacky-sack, if they had the right kind of sandals on. I used to pass through the Ped Mall almost every day to get to work and class. But that was all a long, long time ago, before The Ridge came and took Auntie's college job."

"What's 'The Ridge,' Auntie? Why did it take your job?"

"The Ridge was a huge, sprawling, ugly fortress built in a nearby village by an evil development company. One day, a bunch of loud, dirty machines appeared in this pretty meadow, and the next thing you knew, the meadow had turned into a big concrete shed full of chain stores and fast-food counters. It was horrid! All those cars and shopping carts; I'd never seen the like. And then, all the people who had gone to the little downtown shops started going out to 'The Ridge' to spend their money."

"But why'd they do that if The Ridge was evil? Didn't they know?"

"Sure they knew. They just didn't care. The Ridge was big and new — and flashy — so all the good people of Iowa City thought it must be better. They didn't care about the merchants they left behind downtown. They all wanted The Gap and Abercrombie & Fitch."

HANNAH FONS

"Those are silly names!"
"Maybe so, kid, but those silly names put lots and lots of the kindly downtown business people right out of work. They didn't make any money, so they couldn't pay anyone to work for them, and nobody wanted to shop in stores with no workers, so it got quieter and quieter downtown until there was nobody left. Within six months, Iowa City lost Eby's Sporting Goods, Moda Americana, C.C. Dithers, JCPenney, Seiferts, Wild Things, Brauns and a camera shop. People placed bets on who would fold next."

"Wow. That's really sad, Auntie Hannah. Whatever became of downtown Iowa City? Did The Ridge ever go away?"

"Oh, it got destroyed in the big meteor shower of 2000. A great big asteroid landed right on it. Turned the whole thing into a pile of smoking rubble, Gap and all. All us downtown folks laughed like hyenas, let me tell you! But you know, the damage was already done. If everyone had just realized what a cool place downtown was and stuck with it instead of swarming out to The Ridge like a bunch of horny gnats on a kumquat, maybe everything would have turned out OK and all those businesses might have survived."

"I guess it's just the high price of capitalist excess, huh, Auntie Hannah?"
"That's right, kiddo. You just keep listening to your old Auntie and you'll be OK. Now go get the magnifying glass."

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

Clinton undeserving of impeachment

To the Editor:
I lived through the Watergate hearings. Along with my fellow citizens, I was gripped by the high drama of a daily disclosure of the misuse of government agencies to cover the crimes of Nixon.

Gradually, the partisan support for Nixon collapsed in the judiciary committee, as the evidence became irrefutable of criminal misuse of the office. These were indeed high crimes and misdemeanors.

This criteria, high crimes and misdemeanors, treason or bribery was designed by the founding fathers to avoid the vindictive removal of a president by a majority party.

How different are the hearings of today, when a party line vote in the judiciary committee, with not one concurring Democrat, confirms this to be a vindictive action by the majority party.

While the furtive fumbling in the Oval Office and the embarrassed denial of such activity by the president is shabby indeed, it does not approach the benchmark level of high crimes and misdemeanors of the Nixon indictment.

This is not an offense justifying impeachment.

Rock, Paper, Senators: It's recreation time at the trial

IN case you've been too busy to follow the Trial Of The Century in the U.S. Senate, here's the complete official transcript so far:

SERGEANT AT ARMS: Hear ye! Hear ye! Hear ye! All persons shut up and pay attention for the trial of the impeachment of the president of the United States, William Jefferson Clinton, on charges of messing around! No chewing of gum!

SEN. LOTT: At this time, in accordance with the U.S. Senate Big Book O' Rules, Sen. Thurmond shall swear in the chief justice of the United States.

SEN. THURMOND: Raise your right hand.

(The chief justice raises his hand.)

SEN. THURMOND (whispering to Sen. Lott): Why is he raising his hand?

SEN. LOTT: You told him to.

SEN. THURMOND: I told WHO to?

SEN. LOTT: The chief justice.

SEN. THURMOND: Well, that's different. (To the chief justice:) Do you solemnly swear to tell the whole truth and nothing but the truth, until death do you part?

THE CHIEF JUSTICE: I do.

SEN. THURMOND: You do WHAT?

SEN. LOTT: At this time, the chief justice shall administer the Oath Of Solemn Swearing to all senators hereintofore present.

THE CHIEF JUSTICE: Do you solemnly swear that in all things appertaining to and in pursuance of the trial of the impeachment of William James Madison Clinton, cross your heart and hope to die, including engine and transmission for three years or 30,000 miles, whichever comes first?

SENATORS: I do.

THE CHIEF JUSTICE: At this time, the chairman of the House Judiciary Committee shall present the Articles of Impeachment of President Abraham Lincoln Clinton.

REP. HYDE (presenting the articles): Check out these babies.

SENATORS: Whoa.

SEN. KENNEDY: Does anybody want that cigar?

THE CHIEF JUSTICE: The articles of impeachment of President William

Woodrow Wilson having been presented, the majority leader and the minority leader shall now proceed with the Choosing Of Who Goes First.

SEN. LOTT and SEN. DASCHLE: Once, twice, three ... shoot!

THE CHIEF JUSTICE: The chair observes that the minority leader made a rock and the majority leader made paper.

The chair rules that paper beats rock.

SEN. DASCHLE: I didn't make a rock! I made a crab!

SEN. LOTT: Objection! This is Rock, Paper, Scissors! You can't make a crab!

SEN. DASCHLE: Yes I can! Look! He's waving his claws!

CHIEF JUSTICE: The chair rules that paper beats crab. The prosecution shall proceed.

REP. HYDE: For its first witness, the prosecution calls to the stand White House aide Sidney Blumenthal. Mr. Blumenthal, please state your name.

MR. BLUMENTHAL: I don't recall.

SEN. THURMOND: Me either.

REP. HYDE: Mr. Blumenthal, would it be fair to state that you remind a lot of people of some kind of burrowing carnivore?

PERRY MASON: Objection, your honor!

He's badgering the witness!

REP. HYDE: I'll withdraw the question. The prosecution calls as its next witness Monica S. Lewinsky. Miss Lewinsky, on the evening of Nov. 15, 1995, did you go to the White House wearing "thong" style underwear?

LEWINSKY: Yes.

REP. HYDE: And are these the underwear in question?

PERRY MASON: Objection! He's wearing them backward!

THE CHIEF JUSTICE: The chair will allow it.

REP. HYDE: And while you were thus bethogged, Miss Lewinsky, did the president, William Baines Johnson, to your knowledge, commit a high crime or misdemeanor or take some form of gander?

SEN. THURMOND: Are we voting on Barbecue Safety Awareness Week?

REP. HYDE: Not right now.

SEN. THURMOND: Good, because I'm against it.

LEWINSKY: Yes.

DAVE BARRY

REP. HYDE: Yes WHAT? LEWINSKY: I don't recall.

SEN. THURMOND: Or maybe I'm for it.

THE CHIEF JUSTICE: You know, the chair has been thinking, and the chair is starting to wonder if maybe crab beats paper, after all. Because the crab could EAT the paper, right? Is the chair right?

SEN. LOTT: How come you always refer to yourself as "the chair?"

THE CHIEF JUSTICE: The chair doesn't know; the chair just always has. Even as a child, the chair would tell its mother, "Wah! The chair wants a bottle!" Speaking of which, the chair could eat a horse. All in favor of lunch say "Aye."

SENATORS: Aye!

SEN. THURMOND: You may now kiss the bride.

SEN. KENNEDY: This thing tastes TERRIBLE.

UI study of college students reveals surprises reported discrimination performed poorly on cognitive tests throughout college, according to the study. Among various student groups included in the study, some findings make it even harder to shake off stereotypes.

- Fraternities and sororities: Most students who are members of Greek organizations tended to learn less than students who are not involved in Greek life, according to Pascarella's research.
- White fraternity members scored lower in math, critical thinking and reading comprehension, while sorority members scored lower in reading comprehension and in overall learning growth, the study reports.

“In high school I had a job, and I did better than when I wasn't working. I think it makes you more responsible; it maybe makes you more of an adult. It makes you get more organized.”

— Jennifer Frey, UI Sophomore

This trend reversed for black males who join black fraternities, however. Black male fraternity members scored higher on these tests than non-Greek black male students, according to the study. UI freshman Brice Colby, who is not in the Greek system, said the Greek social life may account for the lower scores.

“There are some really smart kids in there,” he said. “I think they just mold into the frat-guy persona — the drinking and partying type.” Greek representatives reached would not comment on the report.

- Athletes: Male, freshmen football and basketball players scored lower in math and reading comprehension than non-athletes, the study shows. Scores tend to worsen when the student athlete becomes an upperclassman, according to the study.
- Working students: Despite their jobs' eating up their free time, students who work at part-time jobs get more out of school than those who don't work.

“I think it's probably true. In high school I had a job, and I did better than when I wasn't working,” UI sophomore Jennifer Frey said. “I think it makes you more responsible; it maybe makes you more of an adult. It makes you get more organized.”

However, students who work more than 20 hours a week scored lower on the cognitive tests, the study shows.

The three-year study examined cognitive development among university students, measuring the degree to which students learned and retained knowledge after beginning college.

Pascarella presented his findings to ACT on Jan. 21 after taking the cognitive-test results and self-reported data he had compiled from students in 23 two-year and four-year colleges nationwide.

Rash of closings hits downtown businesses of Vibes Music, 119 E. Washington St. “But I have seen, since the new mall opened, a decline in business and people downtown in general.”

Derek Perez, co-owner of the Peaceful Fool, 110 E. College St., said Coral Ridge's effect on downtown businesses was undeniable.

“There was so much competition when the mall came,” he said. “We were not immensely affected, but five other stores went out of business in the past month.”

At one time, Perez said the Peaceful Fool even considered closing down its women's clothing department, the portion of the store's business hit hardest by the mall.

Instead, the owners took the opposite approach and now have a oral agreement to move into the property to be vacated by Land's End, he said.

“We considered locations like this in Des Moines and Cedar Rapids, but this is the best place,” Perez said. “Iowa City has a good customer base.”

Like many other downtown merchants, Hoffman said Iowa City customers allow her to remain optimistic regarding the future of the downtown business scene. She said she expects business to pick up when the novelty of Coral Ridge wears off.

“People will get sick of the mall, and eventually linger back downtown,” Hoffman said.

Animal-rights activists put kibosh on city's deer kill stopped the shooting, member Clay Foley said. The members hope to have it halted for the rest of the year.

“I still don't think they take us seriously — we're not just a bunch of kids,” said Foley, who has been one of the most outspoken against the killing. “We really believe in the cause.”

The coalition argued that the USDA did not follow its own regulations by not preparing an environmental assessment or making a determination over whether an environmental-impact statement must be prepared.

The coalition's letter called for a halt to the killing by Jan. 22; legal means would be taken, otherwise, it said.

A total of 240 deer were targeted to be killed between Jan. 1 and Feb. 28. USDA sharpshooters were skeptical about their ability to kill that many by the deadline even before the shooting was stopped.

A recent count found more than 800 deer in the Iowa City/Coralville city limits, an increase of almost 60 percent from two years ago.

If the USDA pulls out this week, the city has the option to hire a private contractor to carry out the shooting. But City Manager Steve Atkins conceded that would take at least two weeks, pushing the plan even closer to the deadline.

“Depending on the duration of the delay to resolve this, it's very likely we could be set back a year, and we'll have to deal with more deer the next time we do it,” said Iowa City/Coralville Deer Management Committee member Doug Jones.

The city chose the USDA sharpshooters because they had experience in similar projects. Jones said they will “really want to look hard at references” of private contractors.

“It seems like we're backed into a corner where the only option open is to do nothing but watch the deer population rise, watch the traffic accidents rise and watch the deer starve on their own,” Jones said. “That's not the humane thing to do at all.”

The number of car-deer accidents in the city in 1997 was 28, and it rose to 50 in 1998 — almost double the number — causing almost $60,000 in damage in 1998.

“I think it's just a matter of time before a herd of deer stampedes across the interstate, causing a big pile-up, before we understand there are just too many deer,” Councilor Mike O'Donnell said.

think we will reach a conclusion by the end of this week,” with a “chance to vote up or down on the articles of impeachment.”

Gorton also said he hoped a solution could be found this week and that both parties should agree on a final vote and “get to it ... promptly.” Added Shelby: “Let's close this thing out. Let's vote on it up or down.”

The prosecutors also indicated they wanted to talk to presidential friend Vernon Jordan, who helped Lewinsky in her job search. Hutchinson said he met with Jordan's lawyer “laying the groundwork ... in the eventuality that he is called as witness. And hopefully, I'll be able to talk to Mr. Jordan.”

Separately, former Clinton political adviser Dick Morris was interviewed by House impeachment investigators. He said he was asked about his conversations with Clinton as the Lewinsky scandal was breaking a year ago. House managers, in presenting their case to the Senate, said Clinton's state of mind was important when he asked Morris for a poll on Americans' opinion of his conduct with Lewinsky.

Senate Majority Leader Trent Lott, meanwhile, said he would go ahead with a plan to submit written questions to Clinton, even though White House lawyers — who first suggested the questions — now say the attorneys would respond rather than the president.

“We will continue to prepare a letter in hopes that the president will respond to the senators' interrogatories,” Lott said in a statement. A response by Clinton attorneys “is not a substitute for the president answering the questions,” he said.

I.C. police crack down on underage drinking in weekend bar bust told me that they usually go into the bars in the first weekend of the semester.”

The point of the crackdown is to cover a large number of bars; it does not focus on one bar, police say.

“There is nothing that says officers will only check the bar once,” said police Lt. Matt Johnson. “If officers have a large number of citations, they may come back and check again later.”

Though it was the busiest single night in the police department — in terms of citing underage drinkers — since Dec. 18, 1998, the crackdown was not the largest targeting underage drinkers.

An operation that took place on Jan. 22, 1998, netted 89 arrests but drew harsh criticism from bar owners because of the alleged behavior of police officers during the surprise operation.

As a result of that criticism, bar owners are now notified in advance when underage crackdowns will take place.

The operations against underage drinkers are paid for by a $13,000 grant from the Governor's Traffic Safety Bureau.

The citations issued to bar owners for each underage drinker are misdemeanors carrying a fine of up to $100 per count.

A similar crackdown took place in Des Moines on Jan. 22, in which 30 people under the legal drinking age were issued tickets after officers found them in bars near Drake University.

Woody Allen's 'Celebrity' is a shy 15 minutes

FILM
"Celebrity"
When: 1:10, 3:45, 7:10 and 9:40 p.m.
Where: Campus Theatres ★ ★ ★ ★ out of ★ ★ ★ ★

FILM REVIEW By Gene Stupnitsky

"Celebrity" sounds like something Woody Allen knows a thing or two about. But does he think that all celebrities are shallow people whose No. 1 priority is to make themselves happy? And do they all have entourages that cater to their every whim? Maybe.

Allen elected to stay behind the camera for this outing, but his presence is palpable because Kenneth Branagh decided to mimic everyone's favorite horny, intellectual, Jewish Manhattanite. Allen structures this episodic film around the misadventures of a pair of unsympathetic neurotics (Kenneth Branagh and Judy Davis) who are married at first but split up almost at once. Lee Simon is a journalist (think "La Dolce Vita"), blocked novelist and would-be screenwriter who is trying to sell a script that he describes as "an armored car robbery with a strong personal crisis." Lee is soon covering the "celebrity beat." Robin Simon is an ex-teacher who makes the transition to local TV celebrity reporter.

The film follows these two in their sexual escapades. In the opening scene, Lee interviews a movie starlet (Melanie Griffith), and soon after she proclaims, "My body belongs to my husband, but from the neck up I'm free," as she gets on her knees. Ahh, I thought, I see where this movie is going, though it would have been funnier to see the Woodman himself receiving fellatio from Melanie Griffith. But I digress.

Robin, meanwhile, recovers from the depression that stems from her divorce from Lee and meets a successful television producer (Joe Mantegna) who is doing a segment on a plastic surgeon with whom she is getting a consultation. In covering the "celebrity beat," Lee has to write about the jet set, one of whom is a supermodel (Charlize Theron) capable of receiving sexual pleasure from every part of her body, including her kneecaps. But soon Lee takes up with a statuesque book editor (Famke Janssen) who is smart, beautiful and can get his book published.

"Celebrity" is a series of vignettes, the best of which involves "Leo" as a megalomaniacal, coke-snorting movie star. We first see him yelling at his girlfriend (Gretchen Mol): "Don't you know I love you, you bitch! You fucking bitch," as he throws her on the bed and proceeds to destroy his hotel room. After the police are persuaded not to arrest him, they ask for his autograph. He signs without a second thought.

The characters are not only poorly developed, but they fail to capture the viewer's sympathy or arouse any real interest. "Celebrity" offers laughs, but the humor is inconsistent. For every segment that works, there are at least two that don't. It doesn't help matters that Lee is a thoroughly despicable person, a callow phony who is whiny and mean-spirited. His mimicry of Woody Allen is uncanny, but it still annoyed the hell out of me. It is the equivalent of Leonardo DiCaprio mimicking Christopher Walken ... for two hours. But that wasn't the biggest problem: The screenplay is what sinks the picture — every character is either two-dimensional or repugnant. That means that the really shitty people are the most believable.

Deep down, this movie wants to say something about the way America views its celebrities. In a country without royalty, we elevate movie stars and models to fill the vacuum.

"Celebrity" is by turns funny, boring and pretentious. But even at its best, it is never brilliant or compelling. Even the best filmmakers (and Allen falls into this category) will have disappointments, and for Woody, "Celebrity" is a disappointment. The last image on the screen is the word "Help" spelled out by a skywriter. It's what this film desperately needs.

BOX OFFICE

'Varsity Blues' holds on to No. 1 slot

LOS ANGELES (AP) — "Varsity Blues," the high school tale of football, sex and beer in a Texas town, continued to draw young moviegoers to retain the No. 1 spot at the weekend box office, estimates showed Sunday.

The film, starring James Van Der Beek of TV's "Dawson's Creek," grossed an estimated $10.6 million over the weekend. That far outpaced the $2.1 million in ticket sales for "Gloria" — the only new film in wide release.

Here are estimated grosses at North American theaters for Jan. 22 through Sunday:

1. "Varsity Blues," $10.6 million.
2. "Patch Adams," $8.1 million.
3. "A Civil Action," $7.6 million.
4. "The Thin Red Line," $5.8 million.
5. "StepMom," $5.2 million.
6. "At First Sight," $4.9 million.
7. "You've Got Mail," $4.2 million.
8. "The Prince of Egypt," $3.6 million.
9. "Shakespeare in Love," $3.6 million.
10. "A Simple Plan," $3.4 million.

Reality sets in for Hawkeyes

'Awfully good' Okey not enough to defeat Badgers

By Megan Manfull
 The Daily Iowan

When Sam Okey hit the court Saturday night, it was exactly what Iowa wanted and everything Wisconsin feared.

Seconds after entering the game at the 12:03 mark of the first half, Okey's first touch of the ball turned into a dunk over his former teammates. He pumped his fist at center court as the Iowa fans roared their approval.

On the next play, Okey gathered a defensive rebound and an "Okey, Okey" chant rang through Carver-Hawkeye Arena.

It was then that Wisconsin saw a glimpse of what it had lost by Okey's transfer.

"Sam looked awfully good down inside," said Wisconsin coach Dick Bennett, whose team won, 72-52. "He made a great play early and got the dunk. I remember thinking, 'Uh, oh.'"

But Okey wasn't looking for attention and chants. He just wanted to win the best way he knew how — by establishing himself as a threatening presence inside.

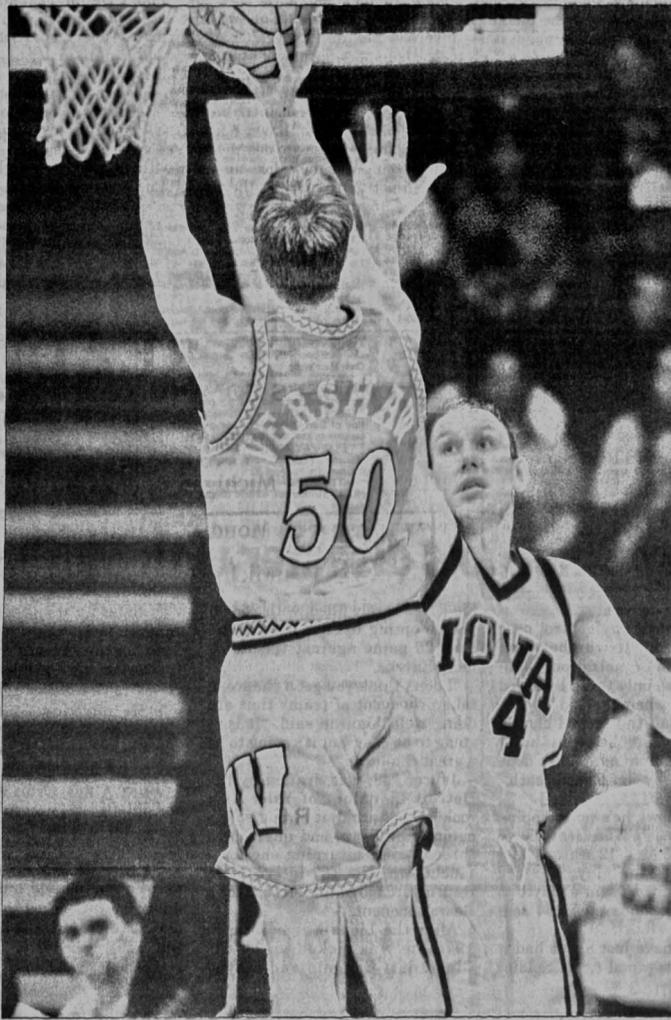

However, the fist-pumping slowed as the game continued and Iowa found itself fighting just to stay close. In his second game as a Hawkeye, Okey played 19 minutes, scored eight points and gathered two rebounds.

After the game, Okey didn't want to talk about the highlights.

"We lost the game, so who cares about the jam?" Okey said. "We really missed Joey Range and Kent (McCauley) being hurt. But I'm not going to take anything away from Wisconsin. They beat us in

Iowa's holes exposed in third straight Big Ten loss

By James Kramer
 The Daily Iowan

Dick Bennett couldn't have envisioned it being so easy. Tom Davis couldn't have imagined it being so brutal.

Bennett saw his Wisconsin basketball team systematically expose every weakness on Davis' Iowa team Saturday night at Carver-Hawkeye Arena. The No. 15 Badgers controlled nearly every aspect of the Big Ten contest and rolled to a 72-52 victory.

No. 14 Iowa dropped its third straight game and fell to 13-4 and 4-3 in the Big Ten.

Wisconsin's guards played almost flawlessly and the team found open shots all night. The most telling statistic, however, was turnovers: The Hawkeyes gave up 15, the Badgers committed only eight.

"Our game plan revolved around handling (Iowa's) press," said Bennett, whose team improved to 18-3 and 6-2. "Our tempo control was one of the keys."

The menacing pressure defense that helped Iowa race to a 4-0 start in conference play posed no problems for Wisconsin. Bennett's team was able to slow the pace of the game and run its offense to perfection.

Jon Bryant was the main beneficiary of Wisconsin's polished attack. The junior guard used his teammates' screens to find about a dozen wide-open looks at the basket. In the process, he made 6 of 11 3-point-

"Anytime you lose even one game, you worry about the team's confidence. When you come home, you hope to play a little better. So this is a hard one to take."

Aztecs' Aiken latest to join Ferentz's new staff

Ron Aiken, who worked with Iowa defensive coordinator Norm Parker at Vanderbilt, will work with the Hawkeyes' defensive line in 1999.

By Mike Kelly
 The Daily Iowan

San Diego State linebackers coach Ron Aiken will become the new defensive line coach for the Iowa football team, The Daily Iowan learned Sunday.

Several Iowa players confirmed Aiken's hiring Sunday night.

The 42-year-old Aiken was the defensive line coach at Vanderbilt under new Iowa defensive coordinator Norm Parker during the 1995 and 1996 seasons.

"I don't know too much about him," senior-to-be defensive tackle Ed Saidat said. "We were told about him on Friday, and we should meet him during the next couple of weeks. The entire new coaching staff should be in here finishing up with recruiting and we should meet with him then."

Aiken helped the Aztecs earn a Las Vegas Bowl bid last season. San Diego State finished 35th in Division I in total defense and fifth in the Western Athletic Conference.

Before going to San Diego State, Aiken was an assistant at Texas under former coach John Mackovic. He

Lee 'puzzled' by Iowa's struggles

Iowa women's basketball coach Angie Lee is disappointed with her team's level of effort during its four-game losing streak.

By Eric Petersen
 The Daily Iowan

Let's start with the bad news first, shall we? The Iowa women's basketball team lost its fourth straight conference game Friday night to Michigan, dropping to 8-10 overall and 3-5 in the Big Ten, falling to eighth place.

The good news? Following the 86-67 loss, Iowa has a week to regroup before its next contest. The team hosts Michigan State this Friday at Carver-Hawkeye Arena.

For the reeling Hawkeyes, the timing couldn't be more perfect.

After starting the conference season winning three of their first four, the Hawkeyes are mired in their worst slump of the season. The struggles have coach Angie Lee wondering if her young team is losing its confidence.

"They don't know where it's at right now," Lee said. "We came out flat, just no emotion. I am a little bit puzzled by the whole thing. "We should have put ourselves on the camp ticket list and come in and watched, because we were spectators."

Guard Cara Consuegra agreed with her coach, admitting that the team may have lost some confidence.

"I think we have a little bit," Consuegra said. "Going into the game I'm not sure our confidence was that down, but after this performance, I think it is. We have to work to get it back. We're a better team than this."

Iowa was competitive during the first 20 minutes and went into halftime with a 34-33 lead. The first half saw the lead change hands nine times.

After the break, the Hawkeyes hit a dry spell and Michigan couldn't miss.

The Wolverines, led by Anne Thorius and freshman Ruth Kipping, went on an 18-6 run in the first 5:57 of the second half. Kipping scored 11 of those points and scored a career-high 19 for the game. Thorius also had 19 for Michigan (11-6, 2-4).

Center Amy Herrig scored a game-high 20 points and was one rebound shy of recording

Bears PR nightmare ends with Jauron as new coach

Two days after blowing the hiring of Dave McGinnis, the Chicago Bears named Dick Jauron their 12th head coach Sunday.

LAKE FOREST, Ill. — It took one of the NFL's oldest franchises two tries, a public relations disaster and a really red face to figure out the right way to hire a new coach.

Announcing Dave McGinnis' hiring before offering him the job? Wrong way. Getting second-choice Dick Jauron? Right way.

The Chicago Bears introduced Jauron as their new coach Sunday, one day after McGinnis withdrew his name and flew back to Phoenix, still upset the Bears had announced his hiring before he'd been offered the job.

"I can't tell you how good it feels to stand here in front of you," said Jauron, defensive coordinator at Jacksonville the past four seasons. "To stand here as the head coach of the Chicago Bears gives me a great feeling inside."

Team president Michael McCaskey was feeling equally warm and fuzzy about putting the last two days behind him. Talks with McGinnis, a former Chicago assistant, broke down over the Bears' overeagerness to name him coach.

Despite McCaskey's attempts to smooth things over Friday and Saturday morning, McGinnis decided he was better off keeping his job as Arizona Cardinals defensive coordinator.

So McCaskey got back on the telephone. He called Jauron's former bosses — Jacksonville coach Tom Coughlin and Seattle coach Mike Holmgren — and both said Jauron was ready.

San Francisco coach Steve Mariucci, who worked with Jauron when they were assistants under Holmgren in Green Bay, even called from Mexico to put in a good word.

Dick Jauron talks to reporters after being named the new coach of the Chicago Bears Sunday in Lake Forest, Ill. Jauron was the defensive coordinator of the Jacksonville Jaguars.

"I didn't have any control over that situation. It was between Dave and the organization. The only thing I wanted to know was where it stood."

— Newly hired Chicago Bears coach Dick Jauron on being the Bears' second choice for coach after the organization fumbled the hiring of Dave McGinnis Friday.

"When I spoke to them about Dick's credentials and readiness to be a head coach, they couldn't have been more enthusiastic," said McCaskey, who looked visibly relieved. "It's the right time and he's the right guy."

The Bears didn't disclose terms of Jauron's contract, other than to say it

Rucker needs degree to play
(AP) — Iowa center Guy Rucker must earn his undergraduate degree by the end of this summer to be eligible to play for the Hawkeyes next season, a newspaper reported Sunday.
The Gazette of Cedar Rapids, which cited unnamed sources, said Rucker did not meet NCAA academic requirements to play for Iowa as a freshman in 1995-96 and was forced to take a redshirt year. Rucker was a partial qualifier, which means he did not meet all of the NCAA's initial academic standards.
Under NCAA rules, partial qualifiers are guaranteed three years of eligibility after sitting out their first year. Partial qualifiers can earn an additional year of eligibility by getting their degrees within four years of enrolling.
Rucker, a junior from Inkster, Mich., can play as a fifth-year senior if he gets his degree before the start of the 1999-2000 school year. If he doesn't, his Iowa career will end after this season.
Rucker has declined comment, saying he doesn't want to distract the team in the middle of the Big Ten season.
According to the report, Rucker apparently has a chance to get his degree in time.
He has met all of his eligibility requirements the past three years, including advancement toward a degree. The team media guide says Rucker is majoring in African American world studies.
Rucker has started 12 of 17 games this season and is averaging eight points and a team-high five rebounds.

Jauron not jolted by Chicago's disaster with McGinnis Field was rarely filled, with 26,000 people opting to sit home for the Dec. 20 game against the Baltimore Ravens.
"I don't think you get a chance to take over a lot of teams that are doing well," Jauron said. "It isn't going to be easy, but it's going to be a great challenge."
Jauron, 48, was drafted by the Detroit Lions out of Yale. As a rookie, he started at strong safety against the Bears and intercepted three passes, returning one for a touchdown. His 167 interception return yards are still a record for a Bears opponent.
After the Lions waived him in 1978, he was picked up by the Cincinnati Bengals and stayed with them until suffering a knee injury in 1980.
He began his coaching career in 1985 with the Buffalo Bills, and moved to Green Bay the next season. He stayed in Green Bay for nine years until Coughlin made him the expansion Jaguars' defensive coordinator.
"He certainly seems well-spoken and intelligent, and he's got good ideas about where we're going," said defensive tackle Jim Flanagan. "(McGinnis' hiring) was definitely a weird situation and unfortunately, the organization had to go through that. I think in the long run, this will probably be better for us.
"Let's move on."

ANALYSIS/BY CHRIS SHERIDAN OF THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The NBA's winners and losers

■ The AP's pro basketball writer breaks down the free-agent moves and what teams improved themselves most.

After four days of the NBA being open for business and a bevy of signings and trades, the early returns are in.

The winners look to be the New York Knicks, Houston Rockets, Detroit Pistons, Denver Nuggets, Sacramento Kings and New Jersey Nets. The losers are the Chicago Bulls, Charlotte Hornets, Miami Heat, Golden State Warriors and Los Angeles Clippers.

The balance of power has shifted in the East with the breakup of the Bulls and the many changes to Chicago's former pursuers. In the West, Houston could replace the Los Angeles Lakers as the most likely team to unseat Utah atop the pecking order.

A look at who made out, who didn't and why:

Winners

New York Knicks: The brain-trust of Dave Checketts and Ernie Grunfeld came to the realization that a player of Latrell Sprewell's caliber very rarely comes onto the trade market. They took a public relations hit for bringing aboard a questionable character after saying they wouldn't, but now they arguably have the best two-guard tandem in the Eastern Conference. Other offseason moves brought in Marcus Camby, Dennis Scott and Kurt Thomas, and suddenly the Knicks no longer are the same old group of graybeards that went out in the second round of the playoffs for four straight seasons.

Houston Rockets: The Rockets nearly knocked the Jazz out of the playoffs a year ago when Clyde Drexler was playing his final season. If they had Scottie Pippen instead, the result might have been different. They will remain old, vulnerable to injury and not very deep, but the front-line nucleus of Pippen, Charles Barkley and Hakeem Olajuwon will be formidable come playoff time. If they can sign free agent Kevin Johnson, they would be the favorites in the West.

Detroit Pistons: They didn't come out of the free agent frenzy with a point guard, a center or a dead-eye shooter, but still improved measurably by signing Clippers power forward Loy Vaught and trading for Atlanta free agent forward Christian Laettner. If Laettner is healthy in time for the playoff push, Grant Hill will have two scorers to dish off to when he's double-teamed driving to the basket. The new guys also will open things up for Jerry Stackhouse, who re-signed with Detroit.

Denver Nuggets: Won the battle for the hearts and minds of all those people surrounding Antonio McDyess, thereby getting him to leave Phoenix and return to the team he spent his first two seasons with. McDyess joins rookie Raef LaFrentz and Eric Williams on the front line, with newly acquired Nick Van Exel and Bryant Stith in the backcourt. Even with the shortened season, the Nuggets are a cinch to surpass last season's victory total of 11.

Sacramento Kings: Went from being Mitch Richmond and four nobodies to being Chris Webber, Vlade Divac and three nobodies — at least for now. Corliss Williamson elected to stay for only $500,000,

Frank Polich/Associated Press
ABOVE: Reggie Miller (right) and the Indiana Pacers will try to capture the Eastern Conference title now that the Bulls have been dismantled.

RIGHT: The Phoenix Suns signed former Minnesota player Tom Gugliotta over the weekend.

and rookies Jason Williams and Predrag Stojakovic won't be unknowns for long. If Webber stays aboard and this team starts clicking in April, nobody will want them as a first-round opponent.

New Jersey Nets: Showed Jayson Williams their appreciation by rewarding him with a $100 million contract, and solved their biggest defensive problem from last year — the lack of a shot-blocker — by acquiring Jim McIlvaine from Seattle. Should be able to lock up Keith Van Horn and Kerry Kittles with long-term extensions, and will be perhaps the deepest team in the East.

Losers
Chicago Bulls: Have decided to blow off this season and rebuild next summer with loads of salary cap room and draft picks, which in the long run could work out well. But did it have to come to this? So many years of bad blood between the front office and the team ultimately led to the demise of the decade's greatest dynasty, the retirement of arguably the greatest player ever and the disillusionment of one of the greatest coaching minds ever. Other teams, after withstanding years of arrogance from this franchise, will want to exact some revenge this season and beat the Bulls badly — even if Toni Kukoc, Randy Brown, Ron Harper and Bill Wennington are the only familiar faces.

Charlotte Hornets: Last season, they couldn't decide whether they wanted to keep Vlade Divac or Matt Geiger. They ended up losing both, and now they're stuck with one of the game's great malcontents, Derrick Coleman, in the pivot. Also will be without Glen Rice for the first two months of the season, which should ensure that the Hornets miss the playoffs for the first time since 1996. Rice's wrist injury begs the questions: Why did he wait until now for surgery? Wouldn't it have been better to take care of it during the lockout?

Miami Heat: Failed to acquire the one player they most wanted and needed, Latrell Sprewell, lost their other shooting guard, Voshon Lenard, for 10 weeks, then failed to work out a sign-and-trade deal for Brent Barry, who cost them the services of Isaac Austin last season. Added Clarence Weatherspoon, but failed to add any other significant help to a front line that can't measure up to Indiana's. Size is such a problem that Pat Riley is considering signing Dennis Rodman, setting up an epic clash of personalities.

Golden State Warriors: Got back three decent players for Sprewell, but all three are reserves. That's not much for a player who was first team All-NBA a couple years before his attack on P.J. Carlesimo.

Los Angeles Clippers: Nobody wants their free agent money, and they lost the chance to put the No. 1 overall pick, Michael Olowokandi, through his first NBA training camp.

Committee expels six members

■ The International Olympic Committee tried to act quickly in order to placate worldwide corporate sponsors.

By Stephen Wilson
 Associated Press

LAUSANNE, Switzerland — Acting swiftly and forcefully to try to save its credibility, the IOC ousted six members Sunday in an unprecedented housecleaning stemming from the biggest corruption scandal in Olympic history.

Embattled IOC president Juan Antonio Samaranch apologized for the Salt Lake City scandal but vowed to stay in office and restore the prestige of the Olympics. He and other Olympic leaders took pains to reassure corporate sponsors that the games would regain their luster.

"This is the beginning, not the end of our work," Samaranch said. "I am certain that the Olympic movement will emerge from the crisis stronger than ever."

As a third member resigned in the scandal, IOC president Juan

Antonio Samaranch said three other members remained under investigation, while a fourth was warned about his actions by the ruling executive board.

"The members violated their Olympic oath and betrayed the confidence put in them by the Olympic family," Samaranch said.

Samaranch said he had "temporarily excluded" the six members, with a final vote due in March. The head of the investigation, IOC vice president Dick Pound, said the six were essentially expelled and could only ask to be reinstated by the remaining 106 IOC members.

A special inquiry found eight IOC members had pocketed more than $440,000 in cash and excessive gifts and services. One, Jean-Claude Ganga of the Republic of Congo, received more than $216,000, the report said.

The action came at the end of two-day emergency meeting to deal with a spiraling crisis that started with allegations of vote-buying in Salt Lake's winning bid for the 2002 Winter Olympics.

While the scandal broke little over a month ago, the IOC acted quickly, in part to placate international corporations that pay millions of dollars in Olympic sponsorships.

In Salt Lake, Olympic organizers said they were pleased by the "speed and efficiency" of the IOC's investigation but also conceded they made some mistakes.

"We are deeply saddened. Some of these actions should not have taken place," Robert Garff, chairman of the Salt Lake Organizing Committee, said. "Some of those actions were below the standards expected by this community."

U.S. Olympic Committee president Bill Hybl said his panel should have kept a closer watch on Salt Lake organizers.

"We look back and ask, 'Should we have been better detectives?'" Hybl said. "The answer is yes, you can always do a better job."

Duval fires round of 59 to tie PGA record

By Ken Peters
 Associated Press

LA QUINTA, Calif. — David Duval hit golf's magic number Sunday — a round of 59 that matched the best score in PGA history.

Duval, golf's hottest player, was uncannily accurate in every phase of the game, surging from seven strokes off the pace to capture the Bob Hope Chrysler Classic.

The only other PGA players to reach 59 were Al Geiberger at the Memphis Classic in 1977 and Chip Beck at the 1991 Las Vegas Invitational. Two Nike Tour players — Doug Dunaway and Notah Begay III — shot 59s in 1998. Duval's 13-under par 59 — the best closing round in PGA history — allowed him to win the five-round tournament at 26-under 334. He had rounds of 70, 71, 64 and 70 before making his charge.

After making 11 birdies, Duval capped his day by ramming an 8-foot eagle putt into the center of the cup on No. 18.

Duval, who rarely shows emotion when things are going well or poorly, pumped his arm as the ball went into the cup on the final hole. He then pumped it a couple more times and raised both arms and smiled.

Then it was back to reality for a while. Despite his astonishing round, he had to wait as Steve Pate, playing in the day's final group, finished.

Pate went to 25-under with a birdie on No. 16, but parred the final two holes to come up one stroke short of Duval.

Hand key for No. 3 Hawkeyes

The Iowa wrestlers dominated Ohio State and No. 11 Penn State with key performances by Wes Hand and Jamie Heidt.

By Tony Wirt
The Daily Iowan

After a disappointing third-place finish at last weekend's National Duals, the Iowa wrestling team opened up its Big Ten season in style with two dominant wins over Ohio State and No. 11 Penn State.

The Hawkeyes opened up their weekend road trip Friday in Columbus, where they took out the Buckeyes, 32-6. Iowa continued its success in College Station, Pa., defeating the Nittany Lions, 30-9, on Sunday.

"We showed a lot of intensity this weekend," coach Jim Zalesky said.

"If I would have seen any signs of letdown with the guys, I would have been worried. But I didn't see any at all. We just went out there to dominate."

One wrestler who made a strong turnaround from last weekend was third-ranked heavyweight Wes Hand.

After a tough defeat at the hands of Minnesota's Brock Lesnar in the Duals semifinals, Hand came back and turned in two explosive performances. The Tama, Iowa, native scored a 21-8 major decision against Ohio State's Eric Wood before pinning Penn State's Rick Bolinsky in the first period of Sunday's match.

"Hand looked really good this weekend," Zalesky said. "It looks like he's shaken off last week's loss and is looking forward to the rematch (against Minnesota next Saturday)."

Zalesky thinks Hand's match with Bolinsky was a good springboard into this weekend's rematch with Lesnar. Bolinsky gave Hand a workout against an opponent who outweighed him by about 40 pounds, just as the 270-pound Lesnar will this weekend.

Senior Jamie Heidt also impressed Zalesky this weekend, winning a 13-5 major decision against the Buckeyes' Ryan Roskovich, then taking third-ranked Clint Musser to the limit before dropping a 9-7 overtime decision.

"Not everybody knows about him yet, but we think a lot of Heidt," Zalesky said. "He's right there with anyone. He's just got to stay in the right frame of mind when he's behind."

The Hawkeyes will host a pair of Big Ten teams next weekend when Minnesota and Indiana come to town.

The Hawkeyes face the No. 2 Golden Gophers Friday night at 7:30, followed by a matchup with the Hoosiers Sunday at 1 p.m.

WOMEN'S TRACK AND FIELD

Injured Hawks finish third

With 12 teammates nursing injuries, Iowa finished third in the Redbird Invitational triangular meet in Normal, Ill.

By Todd Heffernan
The Daily Iowan

A depleted Iowa women's track team finished third at the Redbird Invitational last weekend with 61 points.

Indiana State won the triangular, held in Normal, Ill., with seven wins and 115.5 points, edging the host Illinois State Redbirds, who finished with 99.5 points.

Of the 28 members on Iowa's team, only 16 competed at the invitational due to a variety of injuries. Among the sidelined were junior Colleen Prendergast and freshman Kristi Schmidt, two integral parts of the sprint and distance lineups.

Senior thrower Kerri Blackstone was also pulled out of competition. "Numbers were definitely a big factor," senior Mandy Vitense said. "We had several injuries before we left, and we had several injuries when we got there."

Coach Jim Grant said the majority of the injuries were not serious, and that some of the runners might be able to compete as early as next week, when the Hawkeyes travel to Cedar Falls for the Northern Iowa Invitational.

Iowa was led by Paula Ruen and freshman Anna Shearer. Ruen continued to rule the 60-meter high hurdles, winning her second straight title of the spring. The senior from Dyersville, Iowa, won the high hurdles in 8.83 seconds, and Shearer won the 800-meter run in 2:18.46.

Ruen and Shearer were among a herd of Hawkeyes that bettered their season-best times at the Redbird Invitational. Freshman Amy Murphy and Vitense shaved several seconds off their times in the 3,000-meter run. Murphy finished sixth, while Vitense finished second.

"Last weekend, I really wasn't feeling too well, and I wasn't where I wanted to be, so it was good to get out and compete again," Vitense said. "I felt really good when I was running."

The Hawkeyes next compete on Jan. 29 at the Northern Iowa Invitational.

MEN'S TRACK AND FIELD

Young team establishes dominance

The Facts: The men's track and field team defeated Minnesota and last year's Big Ten champion, 78-68.

The Impact: Iowa is looking to prove itself as a contender for the conference title after finishing fifth in the 1998 Big Ten indoor meet.

By Matt Bowen
The Daily Iowan

The Iowa men's track and field team may have sent a message to the rest of the Big Ten by defeating defending conference champion Minnesota on Saturday.

The Hawkeyes defeated the Gophers, 78-68.

Iowa won nine of the 15 events, with Bashir Yamini and Tony Branch leading the way. Branch broke the Minnesota Field House record in the 60-meter hurdles with a time of 8.28.

Branch

Yamini took first in the 200-meter dash with a time of 21.67. Kurt Felix and Branch shared the top spot in the 60-meter dash with the same time of 6.85.

"I couldn't be happier with the team right now," coach Larry Wiczorek said.

Perhaps the most surprising result came from Arno van der Westhuizen. The freshman won the shot put with a throw of 58-10". Van der Westhuizen beat out teammate Jeremy Allen, who finished second with a throw of 58-2".

"That was terrific," Wiczorek said of van der Westhuizen's throw.

Sophomore Tim Dodge won the 400-meter dash with a time of 49.91. Jim Donovan won the 600-meter dash with a time of 1:20.95 and Chris Cassata won the weight throw with a distance of 52-4.

Iowa will compete in the Big Four Invitational in Cedar Falls on Friday against Iowa State, Drake and UNI.

WOMEN'S GYMNASTICS

Burke finishes third in all-around for women's gymnastics team

The Facts: Last year's Big Ten Freshman of the Year, Giselle Boniforti, is on the injured list. The Impact: In her absence, the Hawkeyes finished third in a four-team meet.

By Robert Yarborough
The Daily Iowan

The women's gymnastics team experienced "Life without Giselle" for the first time last weekend when it traveled to Champaign, Ill.

Competing without the help of top gymnast Giselle Boniforti, Iowa finished third in the four-team meet at Illinois Saturday night. No. 11 Illinois-Chicago won the meet with 192.65 points, followed by Illinois (190.675).

Iowa (2-5) posted a season-high 189.675 points, which was remarkable considering the fact that five Hawkeye gymnasts were forced to compete in all four events.

"Realizing that we don't have much as far as depth this season has changed my mindset quite a bit from last year," junior Courtney Burke said. "I want to be able to contend with the best all-arounders in the Big Ten, and we have a few people on this team that have the potential to do that."

Burke posted a career-high 9.825 on the uneven bars on her way to a third-place finish in the all-around with a total of 38.225. Burke sees the unexpected injuries as an opening for some other girls to enter the spotlight.

"Everyone's had to step up to compensate for the holes that were left from people either leaving or getting injured," Burke said. "We are focusing on our performances rather than the outcomes of our meets this year."

Junior Julie Matolo tied for third on the vault (9.65) for the Hawkeyes, while freshman Corynne Cooper posted season-bests on the floor (9.825) and in the all-around (38.225).

Iowa returns to action Saturday when they host Western Michigan at 7 p.m. in the UI Fieldhouse.

WOMEN'S SWIMMING

Gophers snap Iowa's five-meet winning streak

The Hawkeyes were defeated by No. 9 Minnesota, 169.5-130.5, on the road.

By Mike Kelly
The Daily Iowan

Ninth-ranked Minnesota snapped Iowa's five-meet winning streak with a victory over the Hawkeyes, Saturday in Minneapolis.

The Gophers, who came into the match leading the Big Ten, defeated Iowa 169.5-130.5.

"We swam an excellent meet," Iowa coach Mary Bolich said. "We came out and swam well against one of the best programs in the nation. We showed we are not intimidated by them."

Wertz kept the Hawkeyes close by dominating all four freestyle events. For the second meet in a row, Wertz collected victories in the 50 and 100 freestyle and Loehndorf won the 500 and 1000 freestyle.

"Melissa did a great job for us," Bolich said. "Not only did she win two freestyle events for us, but she had a lifetime best in the 400 IM."

"We came out and swam well against one of the best programs in the nation."

- Iowa coach Mary Bolich

before the Big Ten Championships on Feb. 18, Bolich is confident about her team's chances to place well when the races matter most.

Bolich cited lifetime best times by Loehndorf and freshman Allison Lyle as signs that the team is meeting her expectations.

"To have our swimmers achieving lifetime best times when we are in a tough part of our training schedule is impressive," Bolich said. "It is just an indicator of some of the great performances to come in the future."

Next weekend, Iowa travels to Bloomington Ind., to face Indiana and Michigan St. on Jan. 30.

Atlanta running back Jamal Anderson, right, and cornerback Ray Buchanan wave as they look out the sunroof of a limo following the Falcons' buses through a crowd of some 10,000 people in Centennial Olympic Park in downtown Atlanta on Sunday.

Super Bowl expected to be superlative

Storylines and subplots are plentiful for this year's championship game.

By Dave Goldberg
Associated Press

MIAMI — No, it's not the Stupor Bowl anymore. The game finally has come of age.

For the last decade, there have been as many exciting Super Bowls as clunkers, a departure from the first 20-plus games, when only three or four were worth watching.

And Sunday's game between the Atlanta Falcons and Denver Broncos figures to be competitive again.

Denver, the defending champion, is favored by only a touchdown, largely because the Falcons were 14-2 during the regular season and proved themselves by winning at Minnesota last week.

But Atlanta also has another incentive, one that was rekindled last week, with Falcons coach Dan Reeves on one side and Broncos coach Mike Shanahan and quarterback John Elway on the other.

Reeves, who coached Denver for 12 seasons, believes Shanahan and Elway got him fired by the Broncos after the 1992 season. "It would probably mean more to him getting the Super Bowl trophy against us because he was here and the way he was dismissed and all the things that have circulated about his career here," Denver tight end Shannon Sharpe says of Reeves. "It would give him more ammunition if he could get it against us."

Then there's history. Elway, win or lose, is almost sure to retire after 16 glorious NFL seasons. The Broncos, naturally, will use the "win one for John" angle to get him a second consecutive ring. Elway will be starting his fifth Super Bowl, the most by any quarterback.

But history says it will also be a good, competitive game, as it has been in the last three Super Bowls. Last year's 31-24 victory by Denver over Green Bay broke a 13-game losing streak for the AFC.

Three of those losses were by Denver, coached by Reeves, which lost by an average of 32 points in 1987, 1988 and 1990. The game in between in 1989 broke the trend of Super Borens instead of Super Bowls — a 20-16 victory by San Francisco over Cincinnati 10 years ago at Pro Player Stadium, then known as Joe Robbie Stadium.

That was the game in which Joe Montana drove the 49ers 92 yards in the final 3 minutes, 20 seconds, capping the comeback with a 10-yard TD pass to John Taylor with 34 seconds left. Two years later, in Tampa, Fla., came the closest and most exciting Super Bowl, a 20-19 win by the New York Giants over Buffalo. Scott Norwood of the Bills missed a 47-yard field-goal attempt in the final seconds.

Buffalo went on to three more Super Bowls in a row, losing all comfortably to Washington and Dallas twice, although the Bills led 13-10 at halftime against the Cowboys in the 1994 game in Atlanta.

HULA BOWL

Williams, Bishop carry South to victory

The top two Heisman Trophy vote-getters put on a show for the people in Hawaii.

By Ben DiPietro
Associated Press

WAILUKU, Hawaii — In a game between the big names and the no names, the big names won.

Led by Heisman Trophy winner Ricky Williams of Texas and runner-up Michael Bishop of Kansas State, the South rolled to a 34-14 victory over the North on Sunday in the Hula Bowl.

Former Iowa coach Hayden Fry was an assistant coach for the North.

Williams rushed for 114 yards and two touchdowns and was named most valuable player for the South.

Despite the advice of his agent, who wanted him to skip the game to avoid the risk of injury, Williams said it was his dream to play in an all-star game.

"It's a great way to cap off a great college career," said Williams, who carried the ball 22 times.

His 11-yard TD run early in the fourth quarter gave the South the lead for good, then Bishop took over and led the South to two more scores to seal the win.

"I got the opportunity to put the ball in the air and made some good plays," said Bishop, who finished 10-for-17 for 197 yards and two TD passes.

"When you play with the best, it makes you play your best. I had a great game," he said.

The North took a 14-13 lead when quarterback Kevin Daft of Division II California-Davis hit Kent State receiver Eugene Baker with an 8-yard touchdown pass with 39 seconds left in the third quarter. Baker also caught a 28-yard pass on the drive.

From then on, it was all South. Bishop marched his team down the field on a nine-play, 74-yard drive capped by Williams' second TD run, a dash off left tackle that ended when he stretched the ball over the goal line with 11:05 left.

Bishop and East Carolina's Troy Smith put the game away for the South, hooking up on two pass plays for 74 yards.

Gretzky leads North Americans to All-Star win

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — Once again, it was Gretzky and goals in the NHL All-Star game.

Led by Wayne Gretzky, the greatest All-Star of them all, the goals came fast and easy as the North America team beat the World team 8-6 Sunday in another typical '90s shootout.

"I was lucky, I got to play with two very unselfish players," Gretzky said of linemates Theo Fleury and Mark Recchi. "I'd like both for the (New York) Rangers."

As usual, the NHL All-Star game was no checking, no hitting and no goaltending in the wide-open mid-season game that has become a nightmare for netminders.

All-Star games in the previous nine games of the decade have averaged 16.5 goals — a direct contrast to the regular season that has produced a steady decline through the decade.

At midseason, the average of 5.3 goals per game matched last season's production, the lowest in more than 40 years. The NHL was so concerned about the declining goal production that it instituted new rules this season in hopes of sparking more scoring.

The neutral zone was shortened, the offensive zone was lengthened, and there was more space behind the goal line to allow skill players to operate with more freedom. Because of an emphasis on defense and some of the best goaltending in the history of the league, the new rules didn't have much of an effect.

STUDENT ORGANIZATION FISCAL YEAR FUNDING MEETING

Wednesday, January 27, 1999 • 7:00 p.m.

& Thursday, January 28, 1999 • 7:00 p.m.

The meeting location for both dates will be MacBride Auditorium in MacBride Hall on the Pentacrest.

Student Organizations planning to apply for University of Iowa Student Government (UISG) fiscal year funding MUST send a representative to one of the above meetings. The meeting will last approximately two hours. At the meeting, the UISG Financial Officer and the Student Assembly Budgeting and Auditing Committee (SABAC) Chair will discuss funding procedures and rules and will distribute funding packets. A representative of your group must be in attendance to receive a funding packet.

Fiscal year funding represents the primary source of UISG funding and the primary source of total funding for student organizations. The meeting is required so that all student groups will understand how best to utilize this funding opportunity, how to request funding, how to access funds appropriated for their group and how to avoid improper and non-judicious uses of funds.

If you have any questions concerning this meeting, please do not hesitate to contact the UISG Offices.
