Local panel focuses on the fight to end homophobia

One member suggests the term ‘home-hated’ is more accurate than homophobia.

By Ana Cristina

More than 60 people gathered at the Iowa Memorial Union on Wednesday to hear a panel of experts discuss the fight to end homophobia.

Participants shared their stories about coming out and overcoming homophobia.

One of the speakers was John Dugard, a former South African justice minister who is visiting the United States to speak about human rights.

Dugard was a student activist and later became a lawyer and human rights advocate. He has been active in the fight against homophobia in South Africa and has written extensively on the issue.

In 2006, Dugard served as a plenary speaker at the United Nations World Conference Against Racism, Racial Discrimination, Xenophobia and Related Intolerance.

The event was organized by the Iowa LGBT Resource Center and the University of Iowa's Department of Gender and Women's Studies.

The panelists included experts from various fields, including law, political science, and social work, and they discussed the latest developments in the fight against homophobia.

One of the panelists was Matthew Mosier, who spoke about his experience as a gay man in Iowa and the importance of education and awareness.

“Education is key,” Mosier said. “We need to educate ourselves and others about the experiences of gay people and how we can support them.”

Another panelist was John Dugard, who shared his experiences as a gay man in South Africa and the importance of leadership in the fight against homophobia.

Dugard emphasized the need for continued efforts to end homophobia and promote equality.

“Homophobia is a global issue that affects everyone,” Dugard said. “We need to work together to end it.”

The event was well-attended, with a diverse audience of students, faculty, and community members.

The panelists were also available for questions and discussions after the event.

Local organizations, such as Lambda Legal and the Iowa LGBT Resource Center, are continuing the fight against homophobia and promoting equality for all.

Scholar to speak on South-African experience

John Dugard will discuss whether his country's reconciliation process could be used as a model.

By Debra Kulas

As a part of the UI Global Focus Series, human rights scholar John Dugard will present a lecture titled “Dealing with the Past: The South African Experience” on Tuesday, October 24th at 7:00 PM in the Boyd Law Building.

Dugard is a former South African justice minister and human rights activist. He has been a vocal advocate for human rights and has been a central figure in the fight against homophobia in South Africa.

In his lecture, Dugard will discuss his experiences as a gay man in South Africa and the importance of leadership in the fight against homophobia.

Dugard has written extensively on the issue and has been a leading voice in the fight against homophobia in South Africa.

“Human rights are universal,” Dugard said. “We need to work together to promote them.”

The event is free and open to the public.

Council cuts $7 million from budget

Iowa City Councilors cut more than $7 million from the fiscal 2002 budget to fund a new Children's Improvement Project at the Boys & Girls Club, putting off such projects as Artwalk from the boys' commercial park.

Atkins told the city councilors.

“With budgets like this, we have to be very careful with our priorities," Atkins said.

There were no planned surprises for the city councilors.

Doug Anderson, lead budget analyst, said the budget was a matter of putting the pieces together.

A number of the group's members have already expressed concern that the review process is too long and cumbersome. The group is currently considering a proposal to shorten the process and make it more efficient.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

I was delighted to hear that several writers addressed the question of so-called "medical marijuana" and its use (April 12). Those of us who have been advocating for its legalization for years are encouraged to hear that it is gaining more and more support. I am glad to see that the majority of states are recognizing the potential benefits of marijuana for medical use. However, I believe that more research is needed to fully understand its effects on the body.

Vilasack's meth propoal not all it's cracked up to be Vilasack's meth proposal may not be as effective as it seems. While the idea of using a hormone to reduce the desire for meth is intriguing, there are several concerns that need to be addressed. First, the hormone may not be effective for everyone, and some individuals may still choose to use meth despite the treatment. Second, the hormone may have side effects that are not fully understood. Finally, the cost of the treatment may be prohibitive for many people. Overall, while the proposal is worth considering, more research is needed to fully evaluate its potential benefits.

Falwell's fables are not guilty

Falwell's fables are a popular way of sharing strategies and advice, but it's important to carefully evaluate their credibility. Some of the advice offered in these fables may be based on anecdotal evidence and personal opinions, rather than scientific research. It's crucial to approach these fables with a critical mindset and to seek out additional sources of information before acting on their advice.

How interested have you been in the Senate impeachment proceedings?

SAY

I have been following the Senate impeachment proceedings closely. As someone who has researched the history of the Senate and the Constitution, I find these proceedings fascinating. The question of whether President Trump should be removed from office is a critical one, and I believe that the Senate has an important role to play in this process.

SAY

I have not paid much attention to the impeachment proceedings. I think it's important to have a clear understanding of the facts before making any decisions, and I feel that the media has provided enough coverage already.

SAY

I have been waiting to see what happens. I think the Senate will ultimately make the right decision.

SAY

I have been following the proceedings out of personal interest, but I don't think the Senate is likely to remove Trump.

Forget the game — only 3 days till the Super Bowl commercials

A nation grids itself for the long-awaited Super Bowl ads, which will include NFL, winterers and lingerie.

NEW YORK — Apple Computer Inc. returns after 14 years. The World Wrestling Federation will make its much-hyped return to TV, as the nation will have something to watch in any off-season following the latest Super Bowl.

There are some of the electrifying commercials at this year's Super Bowl, the biggest advertising event of the year. And the nation can expect to see a $5.1 million price tag for each of the 30 half-minute commercials.

Apple, the maker of the Macintosh computer, has hired AA&E, a marketing company, for its Super Bowl ad, which will be a 30-second spot. The ad will feature a computer character, known as HAL, from the film 2001: A Space Odyssey. It will be the company's 11th appearance since 1984.

The World Wrestling Federation (WWF) will return to TV after a 14-year absence. The WWF, which was once a prominent force in the wrestling industry, has been struggling to stay relevant.

The WWF plans to feature a new character, called M.K., in its Super Bowl ad. The character will be introduced during a special segment, which will air during the game.

A nation of low-tech treatment for heart attack patients

Low-tech treatment — aspirin and beta blockers — has been shown to be effective in treating heart attacks.

The research, first presented at the American Heart Association's annual scientific session, has been confirmed by several other studies.

Researchers say that the use of aspirin and beta blockers can save thousands of lives each year.

The study, which was conducted at 60 hospitals, found that patients who received aspirin and beta blockers had a 23% lower risk of death compared to those who did not.

Hussein suffers relapse, rushes to U.S.

By Jocelyn HOOK

JORDAN, Jan. 20 (AP) - Jordan's Crown Prince Abdullah, who recently announced that he will share power with his father, King Hussein, has suddenly slipped into a relapse of Hodgkin's disease, a cancer of the lymph nodes, and has been flown to the United States for medical treatment.

Prince Abdullah, who has been at his father's side throughout the crisis in the Middle East, announced in December that he would share power with King Hussein to avoid any possible relapse of King Hussein's cancer.

The announcement was made in response to a petition from Jordanian officials and business leaders, who had urged the king to retire and take steps to ensure the country's stability.

The king's decision was seen as a major development in the ongoing conflict in the Middle East, where Jordan has been a key player in efforts to broker a peace deal between Israel and the Palestinians.

The king's illness has raised concerns about the future of the country and its role in the region.

The announcement also comes as Jordan faces economic difficulties, including high unemployment and rising inflation.

It is not clear how long the king will remain in the United States for treatment, but it is expected that he will stay for at least six months.

The king's illness is a blow to the country's stability, as it comes at a time when the country is already facing a number of challenges.

The king's illness is also a reminder of the importance of stable leadership in the region, as it is seen as a key factor in the stability of the country.

Despite losing their opener in overtime, 38-30, for the season, Iowa women’s basketball coach Lisa Bluder said Wednesday, she still has hopes of making the NCAA Tournament.

The Hawkeyes are 8-10 and 2-7 in the Big Ten. They haven’t been invited to The Big Dance. She believes the women’s basketball committee selectors are making their own decisions. They’re even keeping a light-hearted, tongue-in-cheek attitude toward their own status.

“I want to set our sights high and not give up on the NCIs until every body’s not invited,” Lee said. “You never know. I’ve seen it happen before. Maybe we’ll have a shot in the last game of the year. I’m realistic because I know if that’s a probability.”

In the Hawkeyes’ 74-1 win over Penn State Sunday night, it wasn’t hard to see that Iowa was a team loaded with new faces in the starting lineup.

Guard Nicole Korn, McCauley and senior center Sarah Reigle were all playing on two or three minutes rest, and McCauley has been turned to a starting role as she recovers from the thyroid surgery she had in the past.

The rest of the team has been geared up for most of the Big Ten season. It’s good to have Kent McCausland, Ryan Luehrsmann and Joey Ramelle alone in the starting lineup,

The Hawkeyes have been on an offensive roll for the past week, averaging 82.3 points per game. Iowa is 4th in the nation in scoring and leads the conference in total points scored.

Cunningham nabs NFL honor

Randall Cunningham was named NFL Player of the Year on Wednesday, by the closest margin in the award’s history. Here received 37 percent more than Denver running back Terrell Davis. Earlier this month, Cunningham also was named NFL player of the year by The Associated Press. Other honors for the NFL award were Indianapolis Colts defensive back Marshall Faulk, and former Oakland Raiders running back Marcus Allen.

Cunningham, present ions were accused of being involved in drug-related activities. In the week of last week, he was suspended by the NFL for the upcoming season. The Vikings finished the season in 13-2 and Cunningham was named NFL player of the year by the Associated Press.

Cunningham resigned his position as president of the Minnesota Vikings on Wednesday, three days after he was named NFL player of the year. He spent 11 seasons in Minnesota and was the league’s most valuable player in 1990. He was a three-time Pro Bowl selection and a two-time All-Pro.

Fourth IOC member resigns

Charles Mukora, IOC member from Kenya, resigned on Wednesday, as a result of the international olympic committee’s investigation of corruption within the organization. Mukora had been a member of the IOC since 1990 and had been implicated in a number of ethical breaches.

The 13-member panel of the IOC, which includes elected members from each of the world’s regional confederations, met in Washington, D.C., on Wednesday to discuss the matter. The panel concluded that Mukora had committed serious ethical breaches and voted to remove him from the body.

Mukora, 55, was named to the IOC in 1990 and served as its president from 1994 to 2000. He had been a member of the IOCs Executive Board since 1996.

Investigation

“The IOC has been tarnished by a series of ethical misconducts over the years, and it is becoming increasingly difﬁcult to maintain the integrity of our organization if we continue to allow such behavior to occur within its ranks,” President IOC Thomas Bach said.

Florida's Bure lifts Panthers in home debut

SUNRISE, Fla. (AP) - Pavel Bure scored three goals and added an assist in the Panthers' 3-0 victory over the Montreal Canadiens on Wednesday, his first game since the Florida Panthers were victorious in their season opener. Bure, who has 48 goals and 12 assists in four games against the Canadiens, scored a goal in each of the last three periods, helping the Panthers win their fourth straight game.

With the game tied at 1, Bure lifted the Panthers to a 2-0 lead in the first period. He added an assist in the second period, despite his team being outshot by the Canadiens. The Panthers won 5-2 on Bure's third goal of the game, which came with 6:25 left in regulation.

The Panthers, who are now 1-0 in the Southeast Division, returned to action after a four-game road trip. They will next play the New York Islanders at home on Friday night.

The Panthers, who were 3-2-0 in their last five games, improved their record to 4-0-1 in their last five games. They are now 3-1-0 in division games.

The Panthers' three-game winning streak against the Canadiens dates back to the 2000-2001 season, when they went on to win six straight games against the Canadiens. The Panthers have scored six goals in their last five games against the Canadiens.

In the past two games, Bure has scored two goals and added an assist, giving him four goals and four assists in his last five games. He has scored three goals and added two assists in his last five games against the Canadiens.

Nicklaus' hip replacement successful

Jack Nicklaus underwent a successful hip replacement operation on Wednesday. Nicklaus, 60, had hip replacement surgery on his right hip and will be on crutches for the next six weeks. The surgery was performed by Dr. Tom Bierbaum, head of orthopedics at the University of Iowa Hospital and Clinics.

Nicklaus was resting Wednesday afternoon and was expected to be able to continue his normal activities. Nicklaus, who had a partial hip replacement in 1998, is expected to be back to competition in late March or early April.

The surgery was performed by Bierbaum and involved the use of a minimally invasive technique that left only a small incision. Nicklaus is expected to be able to return to competition within two months.

Local children help a classic fairy tale come to life on stage

By Deanna J. Anderson
The Daily Iowan

Local children helped a classic fairy tale come to life on stage Saturday and Sunday at Hancher Auditorium. The production was BalletMet's "Beauty and the Beast," which was based on the traditional French story of "La Belle et la Bête." The full-length ballet will take place at Hancher Auditorium this weekend.

"Beauty and the Beast" is a classic fairy tale about a beautiful woman who falls in love with a Beast. The tale is about the element of beauty and how it can change a person's life. The story is about the Beast and his journey towards becoming a human again.

The production will be set to music, with a symphony orchestra playing the score. The production will take place at Hancher Auditorium on Saturday and Sunday at 3 p.m. and 7 p.m., respectively. The production is available at $22 per ticket, with a family discount of $60 for four tickets.

The ballet features a cast of about 50, with a mix of professional dancers and local children. The production is directed by Michael Kohli of Dance of Iowa, and the music is composed by Samuel Barber.

"Beauty and the Beast" is a wonderful story that has been told many times. It's about the importance of beauty, and how it can change a person's life. The production is a wonderful way to introduce children to the world of ballet and to appreciate the beauty of dance.

The production is sponsored by the Iowa City Community Foundation, and the production is a part of BalletMet's commitment to performance and education in the community. BalletMet is a non-profit organization that is dedicated to promoting the art of dance in the community.

The production is a wonderful way to bring the beauty of ballet to the community, and it's a wonderful way to introduce children to the world of dance. The production is a wonderful way to appreciate the beauty of dance, and to see how it can change a person's life.

Sundance makes changes

The mega-deal that wasn't shows that Sundance may have sobered up.

By Michael Friedman

PARK CITY, Utah — The Sundance Film Festival, a crucible of hope for rising filmmakers, is a hotbed of artistic dreams and a laboratory for creative risk. For the festival, the thrill of expectation and the promise of discovery are the fuel that drives its mission.

But this year, Sundance faced a challenge that threatened to upend its mission: How to adapt to a world in which the traditional model of independent filmmaking is under siege from all sides.

The solution? A pivot towards the festival's roots, with a focus on stories that tell real-life experiences, embracing the power of non-fiction films to connect with audiences in new ways.

The festival announced on Thursday that it will allow filmmakers to enter their films in the documentary, short film, and animation categories, even if they have not been in the festival before.

The move is a significant departure from Sundance's traditional model, which requires filmmakers to have screened their films at other festivals before they can submit to Sundance.

"This is a new era, and we need to be innovative," said Sundance's executive director, Keri Putnam. "We want to make sure that the stories we tell are accessible to as many people as possible."

The change comes as Sundance faces increased competition from streaming platforms, which are able to distribute films on a global scale, and as traditional film distribution models continue to erode.

"We're excited to see what filmmakers can do with these new opportunities," Putnam said. "This is a time of great transformation in the industry, and Sundance is committed to being a leader in it."

The move was met with mixed reactions from filmmakers.

"I think it's a great step," said one filmmaker. "It's about time that Sundance began to embrace the realities of the modern film industry."

"I'm not sure it's the right move," said another. "Sundance has always been about showcasing the best independent films, and this decision could undermine that."

But Putnam is confident that the change will ultimately benefit the festival and its filmmakers.

"We have a responsibility to our filmmakers to find new ways to tell their stories," she said. "This is just the beginning of our efforts to adapt to the changing landscape of film distribution."

The move comes as Sundance prepares to announce its official selections for the 2023 festival, which will be held in January.

"We're looking forward to seeing what filmmakers can do with these new opportunities," Putnam said. "We're excited to see what stories they will tell, and how they will engage with audiences around the world."

The festival will also announce its new partnership with Netflix, which will serve as the official documentary film partner for the 2023 festival. The partnership will allow Netflix to stream Sundance films on its platform in the months following the festival.

"This is a significant moment for Sundance," Putnam said. "It's a testament to our commitment to supporting independent filmmakers, and to our belief in the power of film to connect with audiences around the world."

Iowa teen finds niche as a star

Ben Foster has been stealing the show since the second grade.

By Allen O. Reed

Associated Press

BALTIMORE - Ben Foster loves being a star. Foster, who now stars in the Disney Channel series "Flash Forward," has been a star since he was a kid. He's had his own TV show, been in commercials, and has even been on the cover of People magazine.

"I always knew I wanted to be a star," Foster said.

Foster's early career began when he was just six years old. He was cast in a TV commercial for a cereal, which led to a role in a TV show.

"I was only six when I started acting," Foster said.

Foster's early work was noticed by his grandmother, who encouraged him to pursue a career in acting.

"My grandmother was always pushing me to pursue acting," Foster said.

Foster's career took off when he was cast in a role on "Happy Days," a classic sitcom. His performance led to roles in films such as "The Breakfast Club" and "The Outsiders."

"I was only 12 when I did "The Breakfast Club," Foster said.

Foster's success continued when he was cast in "The Outsiders," a film about a group of troubled teens.

"I was only 14 when I did "The Outsiders," Foster said.

Foster's career has taken him all over the world. He's been to Japan, India, and even on the set of "The Hunger Games."

"It's been a wild ride," Foster said.

Foster is now 23 and still pursuing his dream of becoming an actor. He's currently filming a new movie and is excited to see what the future holds.

"I can't wait to see what comes next," Foster said.

Foster is grateful for his success and is always looking for new opportunities to grow as an actor.

"I want to keep growing as an actor," Foster said.

Foster's success has inspired many young actors to pursue a career in acting. He's a role model for many kids who dream of becoming a star.

"I hope my success inspires other kids," Foster said.

Foster is always working on new projects and is excited to see what the future holds.

"I'm excited to see what comes next," Foster said.

Iowa City's ballet, BalletMet, is more accessible to contemporary audiences, he said.

"An aspect of Frick style significant is "Anarchist." Frick's style is much more accessible to contemporary audiences," he said.

Randal Boyd, UI sculpture instructor and installation specialist, describes some of the actions.

The ballet interacts with audiences of all ages
