Clinton attorney apologizes to Monica

No bomb threats occurred in Levitsky's deposition with the House prosecutor, sources say.

By Larry Margiotta

WASHINGTON - In their first face-to-face meeting, White House lawyers advised Monica Lewinsky on an "alert level" for his deposition that the impeachment investigation had raised.

Lewinsky had been advised to the meeting that other sources had said Lewinsky had no reaction. But sources say he was still receiving news from Linda Triandopoulos, who had been his former lawyer. Triandopoulos, who suggested she could file an affidavit and testify elsewhere, says she had been excluded from these discussions.

AIDS software reaches Nintendo kids

A software package designed by a US researcher will be featured on PBS's "Science Now."

By Mike Sandefur

What happens when you can video-phon e with AIDS educators? Here's what.

Ultime rate: Earn $15 for a 10-minute call with a researcher.

We're all used to dealing with telephone companies, but what about AIDS educators? That's where the AIDS software comes in. These researchers use videoconferencing to teach children about AIDS.

"We have to do something with our young kids," said Dr. Peter S. Piot, director of the UNAIDS program, "so that they can learn about AIDS prevention and what to do if they have a symptom." The software package is designed to teach children about the disease and how to stay healthy.

The software is being tested in schools in the US and other countries, and it is expected to be available to the public next year.

Have your Coke and read it too

By Mike Reiss
Associated Press New York

NEW YORK — In an era of computer bangs and bang-marketing, Diet Coke drinks on the television screen appear in black and white, offered like a stone in a jaw box. Each will contain excerpts from a new work by a popular writer, ranging from "Island," by Taylor Brandford and Lisa Manzione, to "Reckoning," a brush with packages planned, that mean an enormous charitable readership.

"I think this is terrific," a very onerous man, said Michael Field, publisher of HarperCollins. "It's an opportunity to have that much more money.

"I think all of us around New York City publishing brightened up when we heard about this," said David Levine, editor and publisher of HarperCollins. "It is almost like having a virtual headquarters."

Diet Coke drinkers also will have the chance to get a free print book, or two, or three, or four, an "Island," by Taylor Brandford, a brush with packages planned, that mean an enormous charitable readership.

"I think this is terrific," a very onerous man, said Michael Field, publisher of HarperCollins. "It's an opportunity to have that much more money.

At least once a month, the company will announce its plan for a vast promotion, which will be a bit of the century, 24-page packages of the most readable stories and underdog stories.

But the company has said that it will be a bit of the century, 24-page packages of the most readable stories and underdog stories. They also included a gift for people who read the poems that appear in the Diet Coke campaign.

"The Dancing Bear," a virtual celebration of the world of advertisements. A major reason was to make a place for publishing ads.

For Diet Coke campaign is an especially bright presentation of the painted bend as consumers, and not all publishing houses think that's a good idea.

"I love this," said one editor. "I love the fact that we're giving away books to kids."

No one of the writers involved with the Diet Coke campaign is being paid — although Field said she will do more promotion. And, unlike Irving, two new books have been tailored for the Diet Coke campaign.

"Full Monty" to free speech

Who would have thought that Iowa State University’s hundreds of women students would be angry at the Main Lounge bar for free movie marathon on a calendar feature..."

The full Monty is a raunchy, campy, comedy that revolves around a group of unemployed British steel workers who decide to open a dance troupe. The film was controversial when it was released in the UK, as it featured explicit depictions of sexual activity. The Iowa State University students were upset that the film was screened at the Main Lounge, a student union building on campus.

Students should seek job opportunities that align with their interests and strengths. Here's how they can:

1. Understand your strengths and weaknesses. Identify what you're good at and what you need to improve.

2. Network. Reach out to alumni, mentors, and colleagues. Attend industry events and job fairs.

3. Tailor your resume and cover letter to specific job postings.

4. Practice your interview skills. Prepare questions to ask and anticipate common interview questions.

5. Stay informed about industry trends and job market conditions.

Market your strengths

In developing resumes and conducting interviews, students should highlight their strong suits and not just their degrees and accomplishments, according to John Hurst, director of UI's Student Placement Office.

Crucial week may make or break season

By Jason Kramer

The Daily Iowan

It wasn't long ago that the Iowa Hawkeyes were perceived as the best team in the Big Ten Conference. When they started the season 13-1, many assumed the Hawkeyes were a national title contender. No one would have predicted that would be the team's biggest obstacle.

In the first game of the year, Iowa was outplayed by the North Carolina State Wolfpack. The next three games were losses, and the Hawkeyes could not get any momentum back. The second conference game of the season, against Northwestern, was a win, but it was another step back for the team.

With the loss to Northwestern, the Hawkeyes dropped to 6-5 overall and 1-2 in Big Ten play. The Hawkeyes are now in a position where they need to win every game to have a chance at making the NCAA Tournament.

The Hawkeyes have a tough schedule upcoming, with games against Minnesota, Ohio State, and Wisconsin. If the Hawkeyes are going to make the tournament, they need to win those games.

There are a few things the Hawkeyes need to do to make a run: improved defense, more consistency from the bench, and a strong inside presence. The Hawkeyes need to improve their defense, as they have been giving up too many points this season. They need to have more consistent bench production, as they have been relying too heavily on a few key players.

The Hawkeyes also need a stronger inside presence, as they have been struggling to score in the paint. This is especially important when facing teams like Minnesota and Ohio State, who have strong inside games.

The Hawkeyes have had a tough start to the season, but they still have a chance to make a run. They need to improve their defense, get more consistent bench production, and get a stronger inside presence. With those improvements, the Hawkeyes could make a run in the Big Ten and have a chance at making the NCAA Tournament.
Robinson's charges may be dropped

San Diego (AP) — Eugene Robinson may have the opportunity to go through Ohio State's fishing program to get charges of solicitation dropped.

In the wake of his arrest in May for bringing an undercover officer to his car and having sex with him, Robinson said Tuesday he and his lawyer were meeting with the university president about his future at Ohio State.

"I am hopeful that we will work things out," Robinson said at the Peninsula High School in Osoyoos, British Columbia, 100 miles north of the U.S. border.

Ohio State has won four national championships since Robinson arrived on the football team as a walk-on in 1990. He became a regular starter in 1991, and won All-America honors in 1992.

He was also a key member of the basketball team, winning several All-American honors. He was a top NBA draft choice, but opted to remain at Ohio State for his senior year.

Robinson was arrested on Aug. 26 in Oregon for soliciting an undercover officer. He later told police he was driving alone and didn't realize he was being followed. He said police had driven up next to his car and that he had done things "like they said they would do." He also said he had done things "like they said they would do." He also said he had done things "like they said they would do.

Bennett: Badgers good economics students

After last week's home victory against Minnesota, Wisconsin moved up to No. 11 in the AP poll.

LAUSANNE, Switzerland — The IOC, scrambling to keep its headquarters during the doping summit, controversy abounds.

The difference emerged over whether the agency should oversee the World Anti-Doping Agency.

"That may be the single most important reason that we have differences," Bennett said. "These are the issues that are the most important in terms of day-to-day operations, and we haven't played the Hoosiers since 1941."

The 11th-ranked Badgers have ridden a seven-game conference winning streak, their longest such streak since 1996. They haven't played the Hoosiers since 1941. Last week, Wisconsin moved up to No. 11 in the Associated Press' college poll.

Bennett, who will lead the Badgers into Wednesday's game against Indiana at Assembly Hall, pointed to the team's success as a reason they have been chemistry. Among other things, the Big Ten Conference fields just one team that has won a national title since 1941, when the team was 20-1 to win the national title.

The IOC, which has been under fire for its handling of the recent doping scandal involving the Russian team, is meeting with officials from parts of the world.

While the agency has been under scrutiny, the IOC has been criticized for its handling of the doping scandal involving the Russian team, which was revealed during the Sochi Olympics.

The IOC has been criticized for its handling of the doping scandal involving the Russian team, which was revealed during the Sochi Olympics.

The IOC's handling of the scandal, which led to the suspension of the Russian team from the Winter Olympics, has also been questioned.

Many observers have expressed concerns about the agency's independence and its ability to enforce anti-doping rules.

The meeting was described as "a watershed meeting in the war against performance-enhancing drugs," according to the Associated Press.

The 11th-ranked Badgers have ridden a seven-game conference winning streak, their longest such streak since 1996. They haven't played the Hoosiers since 1941. Last week, Wisconsin moved up to No. 11 in the Associated Press' college poll.

Bennett, who will lead the Badgers into Wednesday's game against Indiana at Assembly Hall, pointed to the team's success as a reason they have been chemistry. Among other things, the Big Ten Conference fields just one team that has won a national title since 1941, when the team was 20-1 to win the national title.

Hornets cut Master P

Charlotte, N.C. — The Hornets are still searching for a guard to replace Master P, who has been dealing with a nagging ankle injury.

The Hornets sent P to the New Orleans Hornets with a six-month contract.

P is expected to return to the lineup soon, but the Hornets need to find a replacement for him now.

This is the third time this season P has been ruled out due to injury.

P has missed the last two games with a groin strain and is now dealing with a foot injury.

The Hornets have relied on P in the past, but they need to find a solution to his absence.

New Orleans Hornets coach Keith Smart said he will look to the bench for help in the absence of P.

The Hornets will face the Portland Trail Blazers on Friday night with P out of the lineup.

Smart said he will likely use point guard Eric Bodiwala in P's place.

Bodiwala has played well in his limited minutes this season.

The Hornets are currently 12-15 on the season and are just 1 game out of the fourth spot in the Western Conference.

They need to find a way to overcome P's absence and continue their push for a playoff spot.

Smart said he will look to the team's depth to fill in for P's absence.

He said he is confident in his young talent and believes they can overcome the loss of P.

P's injury is a setback for the team, but Smart said they will continue to work hard and grind out wins.

The Hornets have a tough schedule ahead, with games against the San Antonio Spurs and the Golden State Warriors this week.

Nicklaus focuses on recovery

The legendary golfer, winner of a record 18 major tournaments, has set a goal of dancing at his son's wedding.

Dr. Steven Bierbaum, who is directing Nicklaus' hip surgery, said the legendary golfer is "in good shape and spiritual", and that rehabilitation will be a major part of his recovery because the hip problem is part of a study he is doing with the University of Michigan.

"If I don't have any illusions, at the end of the year he will be able to play competitively again," Nicklaus said.

"But he was hobbling so badly in the British Open last April when he thrilled the world, Nicklaus in just plain showed," he said.

Despite the hip problems, Nicklaus became the oldest player to finish in the top 10 in the Masters last April when he finished 48th to tie for 11th. But was hobbling so badly in the British Open, ending his streak of 14 straight years and possibly the Masters.

Nicklaus said, "This is just the beginning rehabilitation. It wears bone and soft tissue can heal. After six or more weeks, Dr. Bierbaum will check the Tiger and let us know if Nicklaus is just plain show or smoothly."
