The party's over, fraternities say

■ As Greek membership tumbles nationwide, UI fraternities are struggling to stay afloat.

By Erika Slife
 The Daily Iowan

Some say it's because of alcohol, others say it's because of bad reputations, still others say it's simply a fading fad. But the numbers are undeniable — fraternity membership at the UI has plummeted over the last decade, mirroring the national trend of less participation in the male Greek system.

Ten years ago, UI fraternity membership totaled a little more than 1,600. Today, it hovers at just above 900.

"I'm not too much for the Greeks," said UI freshman Joel Rickard. "Buying your friends, binge drinking — they just have a bad reputation."

And bucking this reputation has been a challenge for many Greek men. "It's the stereotypes of how fraternities are portrayed," said UI junior Justin Heiden, the Interfraternity Council Recruitment officer. "Every time you see a frat, someone's dying in it. Greeks were founded on academics, service and raising money for a cause."

Universities around the country are experiencing the same decline. According to the national Interfraternity Council, there has been a decrease countrywide in fraternity numbers in five different years since 1990.

"Fraternities have changed since the '80s," said UI sophomore Todd Gengerke, president of Phi Kappa Psi, 363 N. Riverside Drive. "Keg parties aren't accepted in society anymore. Numbers will drop, then go up again."

The move by UI fraternities to ban alcohol at Greek functions is one method to improve a somewhat tarnished image, said UI sophomore Dan Parker, president of Alpha Kappa Lambda, 220 River St.

Rights giant to speak

■ Desmond Tutu currently leads the Truth and Reconciliation Process, which works to bring justice to apartheid victims.

By Quinn O'Keefe
 The Daily Iowan

Some say tonight's lecturer is the most internationally renowned person to come to campus since President Clinton visited in 1996. South African Archbishop Desmond Tutu is expected to attract such a large crowd that the UI is holding his lecture at Carver-Hawkeye Arena.

Recipient of the 1984 Nobel Peace Prize and chairman of the South African Truth and Reconciliation Process, Tutu is scheduled to speak on "Human Rights and the Truth and Reconciliation Process" today at 8 p.m.

Tutu has long been the advocate of non-violence against the social injustices of apartheid in South Africa. His active role as a leader against human-rights violations began when he was appointed in 1978 to the post of general secretary of the South African Council of Churches.

Under Tutu's leadership, the council's priorities became the fight against racial discrimination, reconciliation and assistance of apartheid victims.

"While Nelson Mandela was in jail, you had people such as Desmond Tutu fighting the injustices of apartheid on the forefront," said UI law Professor Adrien Wing, who has studied South African issues for 24 years.

"He has an important role as an international figure who could tell the world the evils of apartheid, something most South Africans could not do. And, because of his open opposition to the government, he was very brave."

Tutu became the archbishop of Capetown in 1984. He was the first South African black person ever to become an archbishop in the Anglican church.

Deborah Lombard, a UI graduate student in African-American World Studies who is from South Africa, said Tutu is revered and loved by most

Two Jordanian women weep outside the King Hussein Medical Center in Amman, Jordan, Sunday following the death of King Hussein of Jordan at the age of 63. King Hussein died of complications related to cancer and will be buried today.

World mourns Hussein

■ At home and abroad, Jordanians grieve for their fallen leader.

By Shirin Sadeghi
 The Daily Iowan

As Jordanians lay to rest their king of 46 years, local residents reflected on the loss of a respected statesman and wondered about the future of the Middle East peace process.

"It's a shock and a great loss, not only for us but for the international community," said UI freshman Samer Arafat, a Jordan native.

After seven months of battling with non-Hodgkins lymphoma, a cancer commonly treatable in younger patients, the 63-year-old King Hussein underwent a bone-marrow transplant last week at the Mayo Clinic in Rochester, Minn.

The procedure failed, and on Feb. 5 it was announced that Hussein was clinically dead. He was transported to Jordan over the weekend and on Sunday morning, after his heart stopped, he was officially pronounced dead.

Jordanians' hopes now lie in Hussein's heir, eldest son Abdullah, to effectively navigate his way through the government his father left behind.

Senators: Perjury in doubt

■ As the long impeachment saga nears end game, more and more senators look to censure to punish the president.

By Larry Margasak
 Associated Press

WASHINGTON — With a perjury charge in deep trouble and acquittal virtually assured, senators Sunday looked beyond President Clinton's impeachment trial to a censure resolution that could unify Republicans and Democrats in a strong condemnation of his conduct. But even censure had opposition.

The entire impeachment drama appears certain to be over by the end of the week.

Several senators said the article alleging grand-jury perjury — one of two impeachment articles approved by the House on Dec. 19 — could fail to muster even a majority, despite the Republicans' 55-45 edge in the Senate.

And almost everyone involved agreed that the remaining article — charging Clinton with obstructing justice — will fall short of the two-thirds majority needed to convict Clinton and eject him from the presidency.

Working with Democrats on the post-trial alternative of censure, Sen. Robert Bennett, R-Utah, said it was still "very much up in the air" whether language will be found to gain the 60 votes that are needed to overcome an expected filibuster.

With videotaped images of Monica Lewinsky fresh in senators' minds, House prosecutors and the Clinton defense team spent the day packaging familiar evidence into closing statements to be delivered today.

Clinton himself will be away when closing arguments start — attending the funeral of Jordan's King Hussein

24 hours, 700 hoofers & one Boss Woman

■ There was a whole lotta dancin' goin' on, as Dance Marathon made $350,000.

By Jill Barnard
 The Daily Iowan

As the evening of Feb. 6 rolled around, UI Dance Marathon participants were greeted with the sight of UI President Mary Sue Coleman, clad from head to toe in black leather, rolling in on a Harley.

After jumping, jiving and jitting for almost 24 hours, some dancers may have thought Coleman, cowhide splendor and all, was a hallucination.

"At that point, we were all getting delirious," said UI sophomore Megan Zalme. "No one thought she would do that."

The 700 dancers — the most in the Dance Marathon's five-year history — raised a record of more than $354,000 for the UI Hospitals and Clinics' pediatric oncology unit. The 30-hour event took place in the Union Main Lounge.

Following her appearance,

Coleman took the stage to deliver a pep talk to the dancers.

This year, each dancer was required to raise $50 more than in past years. Along with the higher number of dancers, surpassing the goal was easy, said Kristin Lee, the business director for the Dance Marathon.

"Our goal for the year was $275,000, and we did more than just surpass our goal," she said. "It was incredible. Many people worked really hard to surpass that goal for this wonderful cause."

Newton-John is a breast cancer survivor who underwent a mastectomy in 1992. She was chosen by 10 local chapters of the American Red Cross.

The Fox TV drama "Party of Five" will receive a Red Cross Spirit Award for story lines covering important health and safety issues, the organization said.

His latest miniseries, "Stephen King's Storm of the Century," airs on ABC this month. Feature films require less self-editing, but King likes TV because it reaches the largest possible audience.

Watching shows by an acting troupe that visited prisons gave him the idea that he could be an actor. He pursued the dream with acting lessons from teacher Michael Gazzo.

Dear Harlan,

I'm 15 and I recently broke up with my 19-year-old boyfriend. From the beginning, the relationship was based on sex (we did it on the first date), but after a couple of months I really got attached to him.

About that time, I found out that he was cheating on me with a couple of other girls, not seeing anyone steadily, but messing around with girls he didn't really know. So I broke up with him.

I still do miss him, and I've been thinking that maybe I should call him up again. My girlfriends say, once a cheater, always a cheater, but I've been thinking about it and I feel like I would be all right with what happened this time around.

They always thought he was a bad influence anyway, so I feel like I need an objective point of view about what to do. Can you offer any advice?

Job market rosy for nursing students

After a two-year employment drought, work prospects have healed themselves.

By Anita Chilpala
The Daily Iowan

With national medical establishments "crying out" for nurses, students in the UI College of Nursing are looking at one of the best job markets for their services in years.

Contrary to the job drought that nursing graduates faced just two years ago, this year's crop can count on a number of openings both at the UI Hospitals and Clinics and hospitals around the country.

"The job market looks promising," said UI nursing student Sheryl Welle. "I think there's always going to be something out there."

The only question: How long will the good fortune last?

"The availability for nurses now is very great," said Patricia Donahue, the College of Nursing's undergraduate programs director. "The shift toward hospitals not having enough nurses started about nine months ago."

And due to a volatile job market in the nursing field, Donahue said students can expect another shortage to occur within the next three to five years.

The field's inconstant nature, coupled with the difficulty of predicting the exact staff numbers needed to care for patients in an upcoming year, can make for an erratic job market, said Linda Everett, director of UIHC nursing.

"Knowing the number of patients requiring our services is next to impossible," she said.

"It does kind of scare me," said

UI nursing student Julie Germain. "After working a year and a half, I might not have a job waiting for me anymore."

But even in this fluctuating field, nurses can count on a number of trends. As health-care technology becomes increasingly specialized and complex, skilled medical professionals are going to be in demand, said UI nursing student Kristin Crain.

Additionally, an aging population means an increased need for nurses for at least another couple of years, said Mary Blegen, associate dean of the nursing school.

"The baby boomers are growing older," she said. "More people are going to need care."

Even though institutions such as the College of Nursing had to cut back on the number of students they accepted two years ago, Blegen said, the nursing school has no plans to expand the program to meet the current need.

Of the 120 students who usually apply to the nursing program every semester, 70 are admitted.

While it is not suffering from a shortage of nurses, Everett said, the UIHC, which currently employs 1,400 registered nurses, is continually looking for more.

"We have a 4 percent vacancy rate," she said. "With a system this size, that's good."

Although the College of Nursing does not use the UIHC's needs in deciding the number of students it admits, the two institutions have a close relationship. The hospital helps to develop and strengthen the school's program so it can recruit from its pool of graduates, Everett said.

Move for deer-kill restraining order planned

Iowa City's deer kill won't begin until at least Feb. 16, the U.S. Department of Agriculture and four animal-rights groups agreed on Feb. 5.

But the plan first must withstand another move by the animal-rights groups, because they could ask a federal judge as early as Wednesday for a temporary restraining order against the shooting, Dena Jones, program director of the California-based Animal Protection Institute, said from her Sacramento office Sunday.

The animal-rights groups say the USDA has not provided enough time to comment on a new environmental assessment of the Iowa City area. The assessment explains the reasons for using USDA sharpshooters to kill the deer.

Jones said there are still several areas in which the assessment is lacking: the way it addresses shooting as a temporary solution, Lyme disease, relocation of deer as an option and traffic-accident information.

"In many ways, I don't think this one is any better than the last one," Jones said. "In some ways, I think it's worse."

The animal-rights groups asked the USDA last week to allow them more time to review the assessment — they asked for three weeks — but were given the weekend only. Jones said she had to work quickly on her comments Sunday afternoon to have them finished by today's noon deadline.

The USDA will review the comments and a final assessment is expected sometime this week.

The animal-rights groups will not file for the temporary restraining order until the USDA releases its assessment, Jones said.

The assessment must be in place before the shooting can resume. Iowa City's current deadline to end the shoot is on Feb. 28, but the Iowa Department of Natural Resources is expected to extend that deadline this week to March 20.

Jogger allegedly assaulted on Center Street

A woman was the victim of an alleged knife-point assault during a weekend jog.

The incident took place in the 300 block of Center Street on Feb. 6 shortly before 5:30 p.m., according to police records.

The suspect allegedly grabbed the victim and exposed himself to her. The suspect then left the area in his vehicle, police records said.

The suspect is described as a white male, probably in his 30s, about 5 feet 11 inches tall. He was wearing a black winter coat and black ski mask over his face at the time of the attack. The suspect's vehicle is described as a large, old light blue pickup with a white top.

Nothing was taken during the incident, said Iowa City police Sgt. Sid Jackson.

There was also no indication that the victim knew her alleged attacker, Jackson said.

The victim received scratches, but they were not related to the knife involved in the alleged assault. Medical treatment was not necessary.

Jackson said he is unaware of reports of similar assaults.

The incident remains under investigation by police. Anyone with information on the alleged assault is asked to contact the Iowa City police at 356-5275.

Some UI students get ready for taxing experience

As April 15 approaches, students have a variety of options when filing their tax returns.

By Crissy McMartin
The Daily Iowan

When UI junior Melyssa Mercer received her W-2 form last week, she did what many UI students do with the mysterious white envelope: She sent it home for her parents to deal with.

"Eventually, I'll take care of it myself," Mercer said. "My parents offer to do it, they have all my records, and it's just easier this way."

Though the April 15 deadline is approaching quickly, not everyone is taking the easy way out. Some UI students, out of necessity or plain ambition, are taking the notoriously complicated task into their own hands and filing their tax returns themselves.

UI senior Jonathan Taiber said filing his tax returns this spring would have been difficult without the skills he has picked up as an accounting major.

"This will be the first year I'll be filing, and I'm doing it myself," Taiber said. "Even after the classes, I think it still might be hard."

Doing one's own taxes may be exceptionally difficult this year with the introduction of several new tax benefits aimed toward college students, said Diana Lewis, district manager at H&R Block, 702 S. Gilbert St.

"It gets more complicated every time there are new forms and new rules," Lewis said.

Though complex, Lewis said many students will be able to take advantage of the new provisions as a result of the Tax Payer Relief Act of 1997.

Students who are currently enrolled at least half-time in their first or second years of college and who have never been convicted of a drug felony may be eligible for the Hope Scholarship Credit, a new category this year. Under this provision, 100 percent of the first $1,000 of tuition costs and 50 percent of the next $1,000 of tuition costs are deductible from one's taxes, up to $1,500.

The Lifetime Learning Credit, also new this year, applies to any college student and is on a tax basis over a broader time frame. Education expenses paid for with scholarships, grants and other gifts are not eligible for either of these tax credits.

Though daunting, the new rules haven't affected a new trend in filing tax returns: A growing number of people are choosing to "e-file." Using software available at the IRS Web site, taxpayers who made $20,000 or less in 1998 can file online at no cost.

Although there are several advantages to filing electronically, including lower costs and faster returns, Lewis said tax returns in any format can be confusing for novices.

"It's a good service if you know the rules, but you don't have a second check to make sure you're on the right track," she said.

Woman says she met vanished son in March '97

■ The Iowan woman's son was 12 when he disappeared in 1982.

Associated Press

WEST DES MOINES — Authorities are skeptical about a West Des Moines woman's statements that she met with her long-missing son two years ago, but they will follow up on her claims.

Noreen Gosch testified on Feb. 5 in federal court in Lincoln, Neb., that her son, Johnny Gosch, visited her in her West Des Moines apartment in March 1997.

It was the first time she has publicly mentioned having such an encounter.

Johnny Gosch was 12 years old when he vanished without a trace on Sept. 5, 1982, in West Des Moines. His wagon was found about two blocks from his home, filled with copies of the Des Moines Sunday Register that he was to deliver.

The report of Noreen Gosch's comments prompted West Des Moines police Capt. Bob Rushing to say that he would have an investigator visit with her today.

“He told me what happened to him. He asked for my help to try to bring this case to a close so that he and many of the kids involved would be free and able to live their lives.”

— Noreen Gosch, mother of Johnny Gosch

“In the past, she told us something similar to this and then chose to recant it,” said Rushing, who has been involved with the investigation since it began. “It sounds to me like we’ll be following up a 2-year-old lead.”

Polk County Attorney John Sarcone said that, if Noreen Gosch stated that she saw her son, he couldn't say anything different.

“I'm not going to doubt her,” Sarcone said. “I don't think that woman would get up and lie before a federal judge ... especially about something this serious that involves her son.”

“It would be a terrible thing to lose a child. I have nothing but sympathy for her in that regard.”

Noreen Gosch said that during the 90-minute meeting in 1997, her son, accompanied by a man whom he refused to identify, provided names and other information concerning a child-sex and pornography ring that abducted him. Noreen Gosch said she has interviewed 35 children who were victims.

“He told me what happened to him,” she said. “He asked for my help to try to bring this case to a close so that he and many of the kids involved would be free and able to live their lives.”

In August 1997, five months after Noreen Gosch claims her son visited, she helped produce a 30-second television spot by the Kansas City, Mo.-based Lost Child Network. In the television spot, she told her son that she knew he was still alive.

Lawrence E. King Jr., the former manager of a failed Omaha, Neb., credit union, King, who is in federal prison, has not responded to a suit filed by Paul Bonacci of Omaha, in which Bonacci claims he was a victim of sexual abuse from King.

U.S. District Judge Warren Urbom has entered a default judgment against King. Urbom must now determine any damages.

Bonacci, who served a prison sentence for sexually abusing two boys, has claimed to have been in the car that was used to abduct Johnny Gosch.

Sarcone said investigators checked out Bonacci's story but concluded it was not credible.

Noreen Gosch said her son, who would now be 29, asked her not to reveal that he had contacted her because it would endanger his safety.

She said if she had not been in court on Feb. 5 and had not been asked under oath if Johnny Gosch had contacted her, she would not have revealed that information.

Sarcone and Rushing said they hope Johnny Gosch would turn to the authorities for help.

“I would think that if the man would come in, he ought to be safer with law enforcement than anyone else,” Rushing said.

“I hope she can persuade him to work with law enforcement to get some things resolved and dealt with,” Sarcone said.

“I know that John Sarcone would urge John to come forward,” Gosch said. “But what they don't understand is that they (Johnny and the other children) have been abused, threatened with guns and told their families would be harmed. They don't trust law enforcement or anybody.”

ISU, Ames papers settle bitter suit

■ After three and a half years, the two newspapers agree that the Iowa State Daily will follow the state's open-meetings and open-records laws.

By Erin Crawford
The Daily Iowan

The Ames Tribune and the Iowa State University student-run newspaper, the Iowa State Daily, settled a three-and-a-half-year court battle on Feb. 5.

The original lawsuit was filed in 1995 by the Tribune, which believed that the Daily's non-profit status and university funding gave it an unfair competitive advantage.

The Tribune also attacked the Daily's refusal to release the salaries of its non-student general managers or disclose some financial information.

“We had two goals in this lawsuit — to get access to basic business records and to determine if the Iowa State Daily is part of the university,” said Gary G. Gerlach, publisher and co-owner of the Tribune.

The Daily agreed to contribute $50,000 to a scholarship established by the Tribune in the name of the late David Belin, an owner of the Tribune. The Daily also will pay approximately $54,000 in legal fees and agreed to abide by the state's open-meetings and open-records laws.

The settlement won't change much in how the Daily operates, said general manager Annette Forbes. “A lot of what we've agreed to are things we're already doing,” she said. “We're simply putting into writing things we've already done voluntarily.”

“We figured it was part of the university and playing this sort of game,” Gerlach said. “(Should the Daily) get tax-free benefits but be independent and not have to act as a government body?”

In 1997, a judge said no, deciding that the campus paper is subject to the state's open-records law because of university funding.

Gerlach said that enforcing the open-records laws won't hurt the

Daily's integrity as a newspaper. “We made very clear that, under open records, we don't want to trample its First Amendment rights, such as sources, budgets or anything a business would want to keep to itself for proprietary reasons.”

Both the Daily's appeal of the judge's ruling and the Tribune's appeal to have the Daily pay its $130,000 legal bill have been dropped in the Feb. 5 settlement. “Overall, it's a good thing,” said

Daily Editor Tara Deering. “Relations between the Daily and the Tribune are substantially better. It's going to make things a lot more comfortable.”

“This has been a long, ugly battle, with many personality and competitive conflicts,” said UI journalism Professor Jeffery Smith. “Everybody should be glad that it's over.”

New world may be coming for Iowa bars

■ An age-checking gadget may reduce underage drinking in bars, a state official says.

Associated Press

DES MOINES — The number of underage drinkers would drop if an electronic device that can read driver's licenses were installed in Iowa's bars, the state's top liquor regulator believes.

Tavern employees can simply swipe an Iowa driver's license through the device, which reads the magnetic strip on the back to determine whether a person is old enough to consume alcohol. The person's age and date of birth are immediately shown on a graphic display.

“This would be quick and convenient for both the customer and the licensee,” said Jack Nystrom,

“This would be quick and convenient for both the customer and the licensee.”

— Jack Nystrom, administrator of the Iowa Alcoholic Beverage Division administrator of the Iowa Alcoholic Beverage Division, which oversees more than 8,000 licensees statewide.

Nystrom recently obtained the age-checking equipment from CardCom Technology of Buena Park, Calif. He said he is so impressed that he may write a letter to every beer, wine and liquor establishment in the state and suggest they consider purchasing such devices.

“The fine for one sale to a minor is $300, which is more than this machine would cost,” he said.

Nystrom said the electronic age verifier would make it much harder for a young person to use a counterfeit driver's license. Among Iowa's neighboring states, the equipment can be used on licenses from Missouri, Minnesota and Wisconsin.

In addition, Illinois is planning to add a magnetic strip to its licenses, leaving only South Dakota and Nebraska with licenses that won't work with the device, he said.

Electronic age-verification machines aren't new, but they have been much more expensive previously — in the $1,500-to-$1,600 range, said CardCom Technology spokesman Dennis Mitcham.

"King Hussein had a strong hold on many economical things and he managed to build Jordan," Arafat said.

Because Abdullah is a novice in the world of politics, Arafat said it may be difficult for him to handle the government at first.

"I think, Abdullah could do a decent job with the country, but it's going to need a lot of hard work from the government," he said.

The Middle East peace process is also seen as losing an important link, Arafat said.

"Hussein was the one who was compromising with both parties," he said, adding that Abdullah should try to continue this facet of his father's legacy.

In his last few months, in a gesture of respect, Hussein interrupted cancer treatments to attend the Wye peace accords in Maryland. He and President Clinton had a close personal, as well as political, relationship.

Hussein's 46 years of leadership carried him through nine U.S. presidents and built him a stable, well-known image in the political world.

trust allowed Hussein to play a role that few leaders in that region have," said Mike McNulty, associate provost and dean for International Programs. "This was an elder statesman with a lot of personal and professional knowledge."

In contrast, King Abdullah, a military veteran, has had no political experience, which may bring change for a peace that has been decades in the making.

UI graduate student and Jordanian native Shadi Gharaibeh said only time will tell what changes Abdullah may bring.

"These questions will be answered within these first two months of King Abdullah's rule," he said.

IMPORTANT DATES IN THE LIFE OF JORDAN'S KING

A man of peace in turbulent times

King Hussein of Jordan, born Nov. 14, 1935, was an integral part of the history of the Middle East for five decades.

July 20, 1951: Witnesses assassination of his grandfather, King Abdullah, by a Palestinian nationalist angered by Jordan's annexation of the West Bank

1956: King Hussein survives coup attempt led by senior army officials loyal to Egyptian Arab nationalists

Aug. 11, 1952: Due to health reasons, King Talal abdicates throne to Prince Hussein who fully ascends to power May 2, 1953

June 5-10, 1967: Hussein's greatest defeat was the loss of the West Bank and east Jerusalem to Israel in the Six Day War

1970 "Black September": Army troops loyal to the king put down a revolt by Palestinian guerrillas, who had become almost a state-within-a-state in Jordan and demanded Hussein's ouster

1974: Arab summit decides Hussein can no longer speak for the Palestinians; names the Palestine Liberation Organization, headed by Yasser Arafat, as the sole, legitimate representative

1988: Soon after the start of the "intifadeh," the Palestinian uprising against Israel, Hussein renounces rights to the West Bank; retains role as guardian of Jerusalem's Muslim holy places

1990-91: Remains neutral in Gulf War because of country's economic ties to its oil-rich neighbor, Iraq; is accused of being pro-Saddam, but he denounces the ruler

1994: Hussein realizes a long-sought goal: Jordan and Israel sign a peace treaty

1998: King has second battle with cancer, first was surgery on cancerous kidney in 1992; in summer of 1998, begins six months of chemotherapy of non-Hodgkin's lymphoma, a cancer of the lymph glands

1999: Hussein changes line of royal succession: He names oldest son, Abdullah (left), 37, as crown prince to replace his brother, Hassan, 51, who held the post for 34 years.

Feb. 7: King Hussein, 63, died Sunday of heart failure after a battle with lymphatic cancer.

As 2000 nears, primary season becoming a moveable feat

■ With one year to go before the next presidential campaign, states scramble to position their elections.

By Holly Ramer
Associated Press

CONCORD, N.H. — It's that time again. Or maybe it isn't.

This month should mark the one-year countdown to the presidential primary, but the date has become a moving target as other states inch — and some cases, leap — closer to New Hampshire's spot in the starting-gate.

This year, more than half the states are considering earlier primaries, with as many as 30 possible by mid-March.

In Michigan, two state senators are trying change their presidential primary from late March to the second Tuesday in February — Feb. 8, 2000.

New Hampshire law requires its primary to be held seven days before any other binding primary. National Democratic Party rules protect New Hampshire's right to hold its primary first; Republican Party rules do not.

The New Hampshire primary has been held on the third Tuesday in February for the last three elections, but whether or not that date — Feb. 15, 2000 — will hold remains to be seen.

"Right now, there are so many states changing their laws to move their primary around, it's really impossible to come up with any odds," said Secretary of State Bill Gardner.

Moving the date offers several interesting possibilities.

How about Valentine's-Primary Day? Show your love for democracy by casting your vote.

Or Ground Hog-Primary Day — candidates who see their shadows are in for six more weeks of campaigning.

If New Hampshire lawmakers decide this year to join the rest of the nation in honoring Martin Luther King Jr. with a permanent holiday, the state could celebrate Martin Luther King Civil Rights Primary Day.

Or, in the most drastic scenario, New Hampshire could ring in the New Year with First Night-First Primary festivities.

Gardner typically sets the primary date in the fall preceding the election. He anticipates making his decision around the same time this year, depending on how other states fare in their attempts to change their dates.

California already has changed its date from June to March 7. New Jersey is among several states seeking to share that date.

Lawmakers in nine western states are deciding whether to hold a regional primary on March 10. A regional task force has approved the plan, but it must pass muster in each state's legislature.

If all the states succeed in their changes, more than three-quarters of the U.S. population could vote in 10 days in March. New Hampshire's leadoff status notwithstanding, such crowding doesn't sit well with Gardner.

"If you have 30 states having primaries within a two- to three-week period, it makes it quite difficult for a candidate to campaign in many of those states," he said. "So fund raising and television advertising become significantly more important."

In November, Gardner and his fellow secretaries of state endorsed the idea of creating a system of rotating regional primaries starting in 2004. Iowa, with the nation's first caucuses, and New Hampshire could lead the way, while other states would be required to schedule primaries according to a national plan.

"If the nomination process was more spread out like it used to be, it would be better than crunched up, compacted like it is now," he said. "That would give the candidates more time to provide the information voters need to make a decision."

UI frats struggling with the numbers game

GREEKS

"We've gone dry," he said. "We're trying to change the whole attitude."

Though the trend seems to be long term, many cite the UI's dry Greek campus as the reason for the drop in fraternity membership.

"The issue of alcohol is huge," said UI sophomore Steve Larson, president of Pi Kappa Alpha, 1032 N. Dubuque St. "Coming out of high school, you're not excited about doing community service — you're looking for parties."

UI sophomore Larry Wajda, president of Phi Kappa Theta, 339 N. Riverside Drive, said rush numbers are low because the chapters can no longer meet potential members during rush week, in which prospective members familiarize themselves with each chapter house.

"We don't have the parties anymore," Wajda said. "The last two years, we would rush through parties and get to know the people. We don't have that motivational function, and it puts everyone in a different atmosphere."

Fraternity rush has indeed changed, said UI sophomore Bill

Newgard, a member of Phi Kappa Psi. "(We're) selling our houses more on grades and what (we) have to offer, instead of the social aspects," he said. "You're going to get a lot more quality men in the system."

The new, formalized rush did not deter UI freshman Adam Spangrud from joining Delta Tau Delta, 322 N. Clinton St. "(The Greek system) is a good opportunity to get involved," he said.

Though a lot of people see going dry as a positive move, it hasn't been seriously considered at many universities. The University of Illinois, Urbana, another school with declining Greek numbers, is not looking at the potential of a dry system, said Jason Abel, University of Illinois fraternity council president.

"We have a very strong alcohol program, with bylaws and guidelines (Greek) socials need to follow," he said.

"(This drop) has affected the Greek system here," said Hagi Badley, fraternity council adviser at Louisiana State University, Baton Rouge, where an underage fraternity member died of alcohol poisoning in August 1997.

"Recently, our numbers have gone up — partly attributed to the larger enrollment." LSU has new recruitment techniques developed to draw young men back into the Greek system, including better public relations, Bradley said.

At the UI, Heiden said, Greeks are trying to do the same thing. "We're the first to go voluntarily dry," he said. "The UI is different, and we want to change."

One possible reason for fraternities' declining numbers is that other student interests have trumped the need to belong to a Greek house.

"I would think to account for the drop of Greeks because of other student groups in campus," Abel said. "There are so many specialized organizations now."

While many presidents of UI fraternities say alcohol at one time had an impact on the Greek system, many also say going dry is a move in a different direction, one that aims to dispel the current Greek stereotype.

"Now that we are dry, we can go back to brotherhood, grades and opportunities," said UI freshman Jason Goslin, president of Sigma Chi, 703 N. Dubuque St.

along with national leaders from around the world.

When the roll is called on acquittal or conviction — likely to happen Thursday or Friday — almost all Democrats are expected, to oppose both impeachment articles. However, Democrat Sen. Robert Byrd of West Virginia, sometimes called the conscience of the Senate, would not rule out voting for conviction.

"The question is, does this rise to the level of high crimes and misdemeanors? I say 'yes,'" said Byrd, who clearly was wrestling with his decision despite his earlier and unsuccessful motion to dismiss the case entirely.

"I have no doubt whether he has given false testimony under oath and whether he has misled the American people and ... there are indications that he did indeed obstruct justice ..." the Senate elder said on ABC's "This Week."

But Byrd also said Clinton has "done a lot of good things," has the support of the public, and "in the interest of our country, I may come to the conclusion that we should not remove him."

While some Democrats predicted that neither the perjury nor the obstruction of justice articles would receive a majority of 51, let alone the 67 votes needed for conviction, the perjury count appeared to be in the most trouble.

Sen. Judd Gregg, R-N.H., said on "Fox News Sunday" that "at least one" of the counts — obstruction — would receive a majority because House managers showed "a clear pattern here that the president was trying to obstruct justice."

Sen. Richard Shelby, R-Ala., said on ABC that "I ... have raised all along some questions of whether or not this case is not porous in nature. Both counts."

Taking "a Sunday guess," Shelby said 10 to 15 Republicans might vote for acquittal on perjury, while obstruction would capture stronger support for conviction.

Rep. Kay Bailey Hutchison, R-Texas, said on Fox the prosecutors did "a very good job" on the obstruction count and predicted, "I do think there will be over 50 votes."

Bennett described his censure language as "a work in progress" and said on CBS's "Face the Nation" that he's unable to predict "with any kind of certainty" that it would receive enough bipartisan backing to pass.

South Africans.

"He is a minister, but he stepped out of the bounds of most ministers to fight apartheid," she said. "He basically became a freedom fighter and is esteemed because he personally practiced what he preached."

Tutu's latest role in South Africa has been chairman of the Truth and Reconciliation Process, a move designed to help with the healing of South Africa's society after apartheid. It is a means for those who committed atrocities during apartheid to confess fully and be pardoned.

"The Truth and Reconciliation Process is very controversial in South Africa — many feel that murderers are getting away with their crimes," Wing said. "Tutu is the only person who had the prominence and the rectitude to pull off such a venture."

Currently, Tutu is a visiting professor at Emory University in Atlanta, Ga. William Hines, dean of the College of Law, said the UI has, for a couple of years, been considering having Tutu speak here.

"He is one of the most important people in this half of the century," Hines said. "If you are sitting here in Iowa, there are not many opportunities to hear someone who has made such an impact around the world."

Tutu's lecture is a part of the UI lecture committee's "Global Focus: Human Rights" series. The lecture is free; the doors will open at 6:30 p.m.

Dancers spend 24 hours doing the right thing

DANCE MARATHON

While many dancers were Dance Marathon veterans, some first-timers, such as UI sophomore Tyson Kuehl, said hoofing it for charity was easier said than done.

"I knew I could do it, but it's harder than I thought it was going to be," he said.

However, when he found himself becoming fatigued, Kuehl said, he caught his second wind as he heard the children's stories.

"That's what makes it worthwhile; then you know why you're doing it," he said. "It's tiring, but it's rewarding."

Because the stories are what Dance Marathon is all about, directors devoted significant time to telling the real-life dramas of the families and children suffering from cancer.

"When the kids come back, it really pumps up the dancers," said UI junior and morale captain Barrio Jordan.

Coleman wasn't the event's only "wonder woman"; Miss Iowa — Lisa Dondlinger, a UI graduate — was also in attendance. Dressed for the occasion in her gown and crown, Dondlinger signed autographs for her little fans.

"I'm a big volunteer advocate," she said. "We have our trials in everyday life. But these kids are going through something amazing, and teaching us all a lot in the process."

In the back balcony, a candle burned in memory of all the children involved in Dance Marathon during the past five years who have since died of cancer.

Shedding light on human rights

What an honor and privilege it is for the UI to host a lecture by Desmond Tutu tonight. Tutu may be the brightest star to speak at the UI in an academic year that already has seen a sparkling constellation of human-rights speakers. But that's not to diminish the luster of other speakers who have made the UI's 50th anniversary celebration of the U.N. Universal Declaration of Human Rights a glowing success.

The UI community has been given rare and comprehensive exposure to some of this century's greatest advocates of peace, love and understanding.

The celebration — the brainchild of UI international law Professor Burns H. Weston — has brought several Nobel laureates and many other noted human-rights advocates to Iowa City.

It was chilling to hear 1986 winner Elie Wiesel recount his memories of the Holocaust.

It was sobering to hear 1992 winner Rigoberta Menchú talk about the exploitation of this continent's indigenous peoples.

It should be interesting to hear 1996 winner José Ramos Horta discuss Indonesian oppression in East Timor on April 8.

It should be inspiring to hear 1998 winner David Hume revisit the peace process in Northern Ireland on April 16.

Tutu won the 1984 Nobel Peace Prize in large part for his articulate and impassioned opposition to South Africa's apartheid regime.

He helped focus the world's attention on the apartheid government's favoritism of whites and brutality toward blacks.

And in the years since apartheid fell and Nelson Mandela became president, Tutu has continued preaching peace to a newly liberated black majority that just as easily could have sought revenge against its former oppressors as it has forgiveness.

Tutu has headed South Africa's Truth and Reconciliation Commission, which grants amnesty to the survivors of apartheid in exchange for testimony about their actions during the regime. That type of unfettered discussion about race relations — with whites talking about their violence toward blacks and blacks speaking about their violence toward whites — will hopefully go a long way toward healing that country's wounds.

It's also the type of discussion about race that this country has for too long been afraid of and unwilling to have.

Our own nation's legacy of racial intolerance is one of the darkest chapters in our history.

Tutu's wisdom can enlighten us.

Politics and porn go hand in *!#@

LIKE a lot of you, I have been following the trial and travails of our president with waning interest.

At first, I was outraged that anybody would take a guy to court over an illicit blow-job, regardless of who the said guy was. I fumed and spat and made some very uncharitable comments about the GOP, the religious right and "all those yahoos in the capitol" in general.

For a while, I was truly afraid that our fine nation might be thrown into revolution and ruin by Bill 'n' Monica's little indiscretion and that I might, at some point, have to lead an army of disgruntled citizens southward into Mexico just to escape it all.

But now, it would seem that the worm has turned. News of the impeachment trial doesn't even make headlines anymore, and Americans are evidently more concerned with whether Calista Flockhart is getting enough to eat than with what happens in Washington.

I must say that I'm pretty much in the same boat. I'll wager my favorite pair of cargo pants that nobody's gonna do squat to the prez — except maybe legislate that all future White House interns be 50-something lesbian deaf-mutes imported from Orthodox Catholic convents in the former Eastern Bloc.

What it's all gonna boil down to is an obscene amount of taxpayers' money having been spent to prove once and for all just how duplicitous and shady politicians are. That, and also how one overzealous, under-endowed independent counsel can capitalize on being the playground tattletale whom nobody likes and still go on to become a household name.

Ick. Anyway, I was just about to swear off any and all coverage of the "Intergate" thing when a very interesting development ... uh ... developed. Larry Flynt, of all people, the founder of Hustler magazine, had stepped to the white courtesy phone and offered a little over a million bucks to anybody who could scrounge up proof of a Republican senator's infidelity, adultery or twisted sexual hijinks. He wanted pictures, tapes, signed affidavits, torn panties — whatever. Just so it was concrete, irrefutable and incriminating as hell.

He said this scheme was an attempt to expose the nauseating hypocrisy that Washington has taken to wallowing in.

Well, you can imagine my glee at reading this. Legions of slimy little paparazzi guys combing the Capitol for a whisper of debauchery, intent on dishing out a little of what the president has had to take for the last year. All for a big, fat check to be signed by a big, fat pornographer! Ha! I love it!

Of course, Larry and the fine fellahs down at Hustler HQ have had to sift through a lot of garbage to get at the shit, you might say. Tons of unsubstantiated claims, lots of gossip, axes aching to be ground ... but to date, enough real, cumulative hysteria has been stirred up among our politicians to make several of them shut up and one fresh-out-of-the-box speaker of the House step down. Who says porn has no redeeming value?

So anyway ... I'm not crazy about Hustler — indeed, some of the most tasteless, misogynist tripe I've ever seen I've seen within its pages — and I would not be first in line to give Flynt a big, sloppy one just for bein' his bad, pornographic self, but I applaud the statement he's been making. He's put his millions where his mouth is and shown us that lately, our elected officials are behaving like self-indulgent smut-peddlers from Tennessee, minus the gold-plated wheelchair and "Fuck This Court" T-shirt.

The veneer of holier-than-thou morality is peeling, and what's underneath looks suspiciously like hypocritical whittling by self-righteous twerps.

The president probably won't ever be called to appear before the Senate Judiciary Committee, but if he does, I recommend he give Larry a call and ask to borrow one of those shirts.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

More research ...

To the Editor:

Lance Hamby is anxious to pronounce feminism dead, but he doesn't seem to have checked her vitals very carefully ("Hypocritical support of Clinton," DI/Feb. 2). He never mentions any organizational policy. He never quotes a feminist, refers to a specific feminist or tells us who fits his definition of "feminist." Yet he assures us that, whoever they are, they're all anti-Christian, anti-family, even anti-heterosexual.

I just want to know, what are the names of these raving dykes? When did they come to power? When did NOW hold its press conference urging women to kill their children and become socialist lesbians?

Hamby quotes no sources, cites no magazines and apparently conducted no interviews. If he'd just done a little online research, he probably would have found proof that certain feminist leaders are hypocrites, and he could have presented a reasonable argument instead of a bunch of inflammatory bullshit. Anti-heterosexual? Does he really believe that? If so, why? Because Pat Robertson told him so?

If Hamby just doesn't like uppity women, gays and non-Christians (and of course I grant that this might not be the case), I wish he'd say so instead of pretending to do reasonable news analysis. I like inflammatory rhetoric at least as much as the next guy, but it has to be intelligible and based on fact.

... less rhetoric

To the Editor:

Just what we need: another young, Republican would-be columnist. In his recent column, Lance Hamby attempts to criticize feminists for their support of President Clinton. ("Hypocritical support of president," DI/Feb. 2)

Hamby, what or who exactly is a "feminist," anyway? You refer to "feminists" or the "feminist movement" at least 25 times as if it were some monolithic movement. You label the "movements" support of Clinton as hypocritical, yet you seem unaware that sexual harassment is but one part of feminist ideology. Equal pay for equal work and family leave are just two additional examples of the feminist ideology. Clinton has fought for both of these.

Even more outrageous is your assertion that feminists are obsessed with an "anti-agenda towards: Christians, heterosexuals, conservatives, marriage and the family." Where do you get this tripe? I suggest you watch less of the Fox News Channel and MSNBC and put a little more thought in your work next time.

Making scents of dogs who fancy watching television

DO dogs understand television? This is a question that has puzzled humanity since the days of the ancient Greeks. It is also the topic of an article sent in by alert reader Gwen Larriega from the February issue of Dog Fancy magazine (suggested motto: "For People Who Take Dogs Way 'Too Seriously").

According to the article, headlined "Can They REALLY Watch TV?," some dog owners claim their dogs watch television, especially when it is showing "other dogs, wolves or horses, large cats, birds and deer," and that often the dogs respond by "running behind the set to see if the animals are there."

This behavior is further proof, as if we needed any, that dogs are in the same intelligence category as saltines. Because of course there are no animals behind the TV set. The animals live INSIDE THE PICTURE TUBE, and you youngsters out there should feed them by pushing cold cuts through the VCR slot.

But the point is that dogs do watch TV, and they are not always impressed. The Dog Fancy article states that some owners "described their dogs as disliking commercials or talk shows, responding to these broadcasts by growling, head-butting or biting the screen."

I can relate to dogs on this issue. I react in a similar manner, especially to the following type of commercial:

"Hi, I'm a trusted celebrity such as Dennis Miller, Michael Jordan or the late Jimmy Stewart. I make millions of dollars, so you can be sure I spend a lot of time analyzing long-distance telephone rates. Did you know that by dialing 10-10-23-349940587054645, you can save as much as 37 percent if you call on Thursday evenings during Lent and are a joint taxpayer filing singly? Well, it's true! At least that's what my script says. I have a staff, so I have not personally dialed a telephone in 12 years.

Remember: To save money, simply dial 10, followed by 10, followed by 23, followed by 349940587054645. Or maybe it's 349940587054646. A humorous remark goes here. Where's my check?"

When I see one of these commercials — which is always followed almost immediately by ANOTHER trusted celebrity pushing ANOTHER long-distance number — I often find myself head-butting the TV screen. As you can imagine, this upsets the wolves.

But getting back to the issue: It seems to me that for dogs to become truly interested in TV, the programming would have to include the element of smell.

Smelling is very big, for dogs. If you and your dog pass a spot on the ground where any other dog, any time in the history of the world, has left a smell, your dog will want to sniff that spot for approximately the rest of its life. You will need an industrial fork-lift to pry your dog off that spot. Why? Because your dog's nose is an amazingly complex organ.

Your dog appears to simply be sniffing the same stupid smell over and over again, but in fact its nose is performing a sophisticated olfactory analysis, then transmitting the data to your dog's brain, thus producing a pattern of neural firings that can be translated, roughly, as: "Hey! A smell!"

Recently I spent a week dog-sitting my in-laws' dog, Daisy, who is a beagle, which means she is, biologically, a nose with feet. She spent the entire week trying to locate a cat that hangs out in our yard. Every time I took her out, she'd race around the yard, nose to the ground, whimpering, detecting cat clues. Meanwhile, the actual cat, in person, would be sitting on a low wall, very cool, watching Daisy.

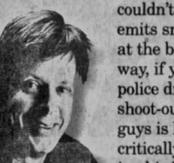

Sometimes Daisy would be within three feet of the cat, wildly excited, sniffing the ground so hard that she was sucking ants into her nostrils. I'd point right at the cat and say, "LOOK, Daisy! There it is! The cat!" But Daisy's attitude was, "I have no time to look at a cat, you idiot! I'm hot on the trail of a cat!" Meanwhile, the cat is shaking its head, thinking, "No wonder they drink out of toilets."

So if television is going to really reach dogs, particularly the beagle demographic, it needs more odors. I don't see why we couldn't develop a TV that emits smells through a hole at the bottom of the set. That way, if you're watching, say, a police drama, and there's a shoot-out, and one of the good guys is lying on the sidewalk, critically wounded, whispering his last, deeply touching words to his partner, your dog could go to the hole and find out how the sidewalk smelled. There could even be dog-oriented commercials, whereby advertisers would reward dog viewers with popular smells if they followed simple commands ("Nose the receiver off the hook! Good boy! Now press 10-10 ...").

In conclusion, I think all dog lovers should write to the TV industry and demand programming with a higher smell content (insert your Jerry Springer joke here). I also want to stress to you young, impressionable readers out there that I was just kidding about putting cold cuts into the VCR. You should use ice cream. Otherwise Bambi will die. Thank you.

Rodham Clinton lauds U.N. population efforts

■ Don't lose heart because financial support is dropping, the first lady says, noting that the world population is nearing 6 billion.

By Anthony Deutsch
Associated Press

THE HAGUE, Netherlands — Volunteer agencies are "the vanguard" of U.N. efforts to slow the world's soaring population, and they must not lose heart in the face of dwindling financial support, Hillary Rodham Clinton said Sunday.

With the world's population expected to hit 6 billion later this year — an increase of 20 percent in just 12 years — 140 non-governmental organizations met in the Netherlands Sunday to assess progress toward slowing population growth since a landmark conference in 1994 in Cairo.

Despite a serious shortfall in funding, both from industrialized donor countries and developing nations, Rodham Clinton called for the groups to keep working.

"The challenge to all of us is to persevere. Don't ever think that the work you do day in and day out is not having an impact on people's lives," she told the meeting ahead of a U.N. forum opening today. "You are the vanguard of Cairo."

A global resolution adopted at the International Conference on Population and Development in Cairo calls for universal access to affordable reproductive health services by 2015, including family planning, sexual-health services and programs for adolescents.

"We have come a long way in the last years. It may not seem fast enough for many of us who are impatient, and I'm sure it seems glacial to young people," she said. "(But) if we continue to make that progress, we will see Cairo's goals enacted."

Although volunteers reported progress in achieving some Cairo targets, they said momentum was being slowed by funding problems. Attiya Inayatullah, the president of International Planned Parenthood, called the forum "a wake-up call to ambivalent and disinterested donor countries."

The United States cut financial support to the U.N. Population Fund last year amid congressional concern that it was promoting abortion, but the country will soon review a proposal by Rep. Carolyn Maloney of New York to reinstate funding.

Serbs, Albanians inch toward Kosovo pact

■ In a secluded French chateau, the two sides in the Balkan conflict agree on 10 principles.

By Jeffrey Ulbrich
Associated Press

RAMBOUILLET, France — Serb officials and Kosovo Albanians agreed on principles that would keep the embattled province inside Yugoslavia for at least three more years, as they met separately Sunday with international mediators at a French chateau.

Getting down to serious work after the Feb. 6 ceremonial opening, international mediators presented the warring factions with a framework agreement worked out by the Contact Group, made up of six outside nations trying to arrange a settlement.

The mediators also presented a set of 10 non-negotiable principles for the talks, including a guarantee of Yugoslavia's territorial integrity.

That means Kosovo's ethnic Albanians have to give up their demand for independence for their province — at least during a three-year interim period. Both a Serb negotiator and a Western mediator said all sides had accepted those principles.

"The atmosphere was constructive, businesslike and serious," said conference spokesman Philip Reeker.

The peace negotiations are being held in seclusion at the 14th-century Chateau de Rambouillet, the official summer home of French presidents; it was not possible to confirm the Albanian acceptance directly.

Hard-line Kosovo Liberation Army guerrillas have previously said they would never accept anything short of independence for Kosovo, a province in Serbia, the main republic in Yugoslavia. The province is 90 percent ethnic Albanian.

The two sides were driven to the negotiating table by the threat of NATO air strikes against Yugoslav President Slobodan Milosevic and tough measures against the KLA to halt its arms supplies and financing. The Contact Group — made up of the United States, Russia, France, Britain, Germany and Italy — devised the framework agreement based on the work of U.S. mediator Christopher Hill.

The negotiating teams were not meeting face-to-face. Instead, international mediators were shuttling between two floors of the magnificent chateau, 30 miles south of Paris.

The two sides were presented with the full text of the Contact Group plan Sunday. Mediators are calling for, among other things, a three-year period of autonomy for Kosovo, the guarantee of current Serb borders, protection of minorities and a police force reflecting the ethnic makeup of the community.

After 24 years, Indonesia set to make sharp break with East Timor

■ The Indonesian foreign minister says if the island doesn't want autonomy, his country would "part ways."

Associated Press

NEW YORK — Indonesia's foreign minister said Sunday that if the people of East Timor want independence, his country would make a sharp break with the annexed territory with almost no transition period.

Foreign Minister Ali Alatas made the comments after a day of U.N.-sponsored talks in New York between Indonesia, which invaded the territory in 1975, and Portugal, East Timor's former colonial ruler.

"We don't insist on having them with us if they don't want to be with us," Alatas said. "Why insist? We are realistic."

Last week, Indonesia offered to consider independence for East Timor if a majority of its people rejected autonomy. However, it has ruled out a referendum, saying that could lead to a civil war.

The Portuguese and U.N. Secretary-General Kofi Annan say any agreement must be approved by the East Timorese people.

Indonesia favors autonomy rather than independence, and Alatas said Sunday that his government would present an autonomy plan by April. He said that if the East Timorese don't want wide-ranging autonomy, Indonesia would "part ways" with the territory and return it to its 1976 status as a nongoverning territory of Portugal.

He again rejected the idea of a referendum and did not make it clear how Indonesia would assess the East Timorese people's views of a plan.

Annan said Sunday that talks between him, Alatas and Portuguese Foreign Minister Jaime Gama, held at Annan's New York residence, had been constructive. He stressed that any solution would have to involve representatives of the East Timorese.

"That has always been part of the plans," Annan said. "Whatever we do, the East Timorese will be very much part of it; nothing will be done without their full participation."

He also said the United Nations would help enforce any peace agreement but insisted it was too early to say whether that would include U.N. troops.

During the talks, Annan said, Indonesian representatives had given assurances that they were not arming factions in East Timor.

A Groovy Kind of Love

FILM REVIEW By Van Griffin

A magic crab, aphrodisiac eclairs and two lovesick restaurateurs make up the recipe for "Simply Irresistible," a quaint love story with a supernatural twist. Sarah Michelle Gellar, a.k.a. Buffy the Vampire Slayer, plays Amanda, the head chef and owner of a small neighborhood restaurant on the brink of closing down. Tom Bartlett, played by Sean Patrick Flanery, is opening a new, hoity-toity restaurant nearby enough to sink Amanda's business.

The problem is simple: Amanda is not a very good cook, therefore no one eats at her restaurant, save for the neighborhood "regulars." The solution is where the movie gets shady: While shopping for ingredients, Amanda stumbles upon a man selling crabs, buys them against her better judgment, encounters Tom via a fleeing crab, and what was thought to be the lunch special turns not only into a recipe for success, but more enticingly a recipe for romance!

Essentially, "Simply Irresistible" is about a simple equation: good food + magic = a groovy kind of love. There is no need to pay attention to the restaurant going under. No need to take notes on the new, four-star restaurant opening soon. Rather, pay attention to the crab who, with a subtle lift of its fake little pincer, casts spells of destined love in the form of a sexy fog and peach cobbler.

Now, don't get me wrong, I think this story is quite ridiculous and, to be less nice, really stupid. Nevertheless, I actually enjoyed watching "Simply Irresistible" ... for a while, anyhow.

Though the basic plot of the movie is easily contrived (it resembles the plot of "You've Got Mail," replacing the bookstores with restaurants — this is not a good thing), but the supernatural twist makes ordinary scenes interesting if not insanely curious.

For instance, the first kiss shared between Amanda and Tom involves massive quantities of the aforementioned stimulating fog, several suggestive close-ups of a vanilla-cream dessert being prepared, a moment of unexpected floating shared between the food-loving restaurateurs, and, of course, the magic crab.

Gellar is easy to fall for in this movie. Her presence smoothes over the moments of overdone regularity common to Hollywood romance films. She is reminiscent of Audrey Hepburn in "Breakfast at Tiffany's," minus the overbearing charm and embittered fragility.

Instead, Amanda is less human and more surreal, which allows her character to thrive in this magical little world where restaurants are the doors to romantic bliss and "dessert is the whole point of the meal."

This metaphorical anecdote is only one of Amanda's little truths that speckle "Simply Irresistible's" dialogue. When Tom freaks out after the two float while kissing, she waxes philosophical, proclaiming "... A man's destiny is his character," which sounds nice but makes little sense, considering the movie's supernaturally restrictive context.

Since "Simply Irresistible" is about fantasy, magic and edible love nuggets — any wisdom is thus negotiated as mere hodgepodge. The entire movie is based on unreality, which really invalidates anything anyone says pertaining to the reality of the human condition. At these declarative moments, when the movie attempts to speak truths, it breaks its own rules and draws attention to its ultimate silliness.

Publicity Photo
 Gellar and Flanery feeling the love as Amanda and Tom in "Simply Irresistible."

It is quite hard to believe in weighty philosophical ideas when the philosopher has just landed after making out on a kitchen ceiling. Thus, when "Simply Irresistible" takes itself too seriously, it becomes less irresistible and more dismissible.

The good stuff in this movie resides in the magic spawned by the conflict between Amanda and Tom. While being drawn to her gentle presence, Tom is frightened by her mysterious powers. Amanda's newfound success is secured by the magic which precedes it, but her love for Tom is deceived by this same magic. Thus, their romance is a confusing concoction that lacks one necessary ingredient: belief.

"Simply Irresistible" is a good little movie. It's at its best when it is aware of its silliness, and at its worst when it is removed from its own fantasy.

Chorus to harmonize with Tutu's visit

Simon Estes' South African Chorus Project will perform at Carver-Hawkeye Arena tonight.

By Deanna Thomann
 The Daily Iowan

"Bringing Hope Through Harmony" — that's the mission statement of Simon Estes' South African Chorus Project, a program involving 47 Cape Town, South Africa, high school students. Estes, born in Iowa and a graduate of the UI, is a world-renowned opera singer and vocal artist.

The group will bring its harmony to the UI tonight in commemoration of Archbishop Desmond Tutu's visit. Estes and his choral group will perform special African pieces in Carver-Hawkeye Arena at 8 p.m., prior to Tutu's lecture. The performance and lecture are free and open to the public.

"It's a real treat to (hear the group) perform. They sing native (African) songs, folk songs, gospel songs ... it's a great mix of music," said Andy Flynn, a member of the choral project committee. "It's very different from what you're used to hearing."

Estes first heard the South African youth choir at its high school, located in a Cape Town suburb. He was greatly impressed with the group's talent and potential but was frustrated with the school, which, he believed, was inadequately staffed. In January 1997, Estes began his own private school for South African students in the Cape Town area.

"(Before Estes' school), the kids were attending a high school with 4,000 students and only 60 teachers," said John Cortesio, chairman of Estes' choral project. "The Simon Estes School has an enrollment of 150 and places great emphasis on singing and performing."

With the financial help of Rotary International District 6000 and other benefactors, Estes selected 47 of the 85 choir members for a 10-month residency in Des Moines. The students, who began their residencies in August, have been staying with host families and attending Des Moines high schools. Under the direction of Nolufefe Mtshabe, the members have been able to perform at numerous venues across the state.

— John Cortesio, chairman of Estes' choral project

"Simon Estes once said this is an embodiment of a dream for these students to come to America and enrich their education," Cortesio said. "Simon wants these students to have the same advantages that he had growing up in Iowa."

Philisa Sibeko, a member of the South African Choral Group, said that being a part of the program "means a lot" and that she enjoys working with Estes.

"(Estes is) good man," she said. "He's sweet and caring and just someone you can talk to ... someone you can really communicate with."

Flynn said the project is a learning experience not only for the students but for Iowans as well.

"These students from South Africa are able to experience Iowa, our people, our education system and perform at the same time — what a cultural experience for everyone!" he said.

Over the past two years, the South African Youth Chorus has won numerous first-place awards in various competitions. It has performed for many dignitaries, including Nelson Mandela and President Clinton.

MICHIGAN STATE 95, IOWA 81

Banged-up Hawks outrun by Spartans

By Megan Manfull
The Daily Iowan

When Jess Settles' knee popped during the second half of the Michigan State game Saturday, fans thought it may be his final appearance. Settles sat on the bench the rest of the game watching his once Big Ten title-hopeful teammates be exposed in all corners of their game. Michigan State (20-4, 9-1 Big Ten) looked at home on Iowa's court as it ran roughshod over the Hawkeyes (15-6, 6-5) en route to a 95-81 victory. Iowa, once in the Spartans' position atop the Big Ten standings, now finds itself reeling after a brutal beating at the hands of No. 8 Michigan State. Junior Jacob Jaacks said it felt like "getting hit by a freight train." At times, it looked that way. Jaacks, Kent McCausland and Settles all left the game early with injuries, and Jason Price returned to the game after receiving a blow to his head from a Michigan State guard. All are expected to practice today. While Iowa struggled, Michigan State was running its offense almost to perfection. The

Spartan sub Peterson steals show from Cleaves

Iowa's Dean Oliver drives to the basket on Michigan State's Mateen Cleaves Saturday.

At the 10:35 mark of the second half Saturday, Michigan State's Morris Peterson leaped toward the basket. At the 10:30 mark — or so it seemed — Peterson landed. While in the air, Peterson caught an alley-oop pass from Mateen Cleaves, soared over Iowa's Guy Rucker and threw down a thunderous slam dunk. It was truly an impressive display of athleticism. It also put a definitive exclamation mark on the Spartans' dominating performance. "That's a lot higher than I can jump," Michigan State coach Tom Izzo said. Peterson continued his mastery against the Hawkeyes in the Spartans' 95-81 victory. He scored 27 points in 28 minutes and made nine of his 12 shots. Against Iowa on Jan. 21, Peterson scored 19 points in 26 points. The junior entered the game averaging 14.4 points per game, which leads the Spartans. All of that from a non-starter. "It's kind of fun coming off the bench," said Peterson, who has a 35-inch vertical leap. "It gives me a chance to see what the other team is doing." Cleaves, a preseason first-team All-American, has received most of the Spartans' media attention. See SPARTANS, Page 2B

Wrestling seniors exit in style

Lee Fullhart, Jamie Heidt and Ben Uker all knew Sunday's dual against Michigan would be their last chance to wrestle in the friendly confines of Carver-Hawkeye Arena. All three left in style and led the Iowa wrestling team to a 29-12 victory. Fullhart scored a fall in 4:22, Heidt pinned his foe in 5:51 and Uker grabbed a 11-10 decision. "I told people coming in that I was going to get the pin in my last meet here," Heidt said. "It's the only way I'd accept going out. Then Fullhart got one, so I knew I had to." The win was Heidt's second of the weekend. The 157-pound senior also had a 21-6 technical fall over P.J. Dowling in Iowa's 29-13 win over Wisconsin Friday. The seniors weren't alone in the spotlight, however, and had to make room for 125-pounder Ben Kritsonis. The junior broke a five-match losing streak with a fall in 4:10 over Chad Viola, who is now 27-5. "That felt a lot better coming off the mat with a win," Kritsonis said. "Hopefully it will get me going and show me what I have to do when I'm out there. I don't have time to waste out there." His teammates could see the differ-

Undefeated Iowa continues to roll, dominates Huskers

Nebraska's Katarina Balan dropped her racket and knelt in frustration; her head rest in her hands. Just one match point away from being dominated by Iowa tennis player Natalya Dawaf, Balan started screaming at herself in a foreign language. The feeling of disappointment was one that was shared by all her Husker teammates, who were man-handled by the Hawkeyes, 9-0. The win Saturday moved Iowa to 3-0 on the season. "Doubles started us strong and built up our confidence for singles. We had a slow start in singles, but we fought through it and came out on top," senior Natalya Dawaf said. The Hawkeyes won all three of their doubles matches, 8-2, 8-2 and 8-4, and therefore only needed two wins in singles to clinch the victory. But the Hawkeyes didn't let up and won all six singles matches, closing out the sweep. No. 1 singles player Toni Neykova, a freshman, beat Sandra Noetzel 6-2, 6-4. No. 2 singles player Dawaf defeated Balan 7-5, 6-0 and No. 3 singles player Shera Wiegler won 6-4, 6-2 over Nebraska's Ndali Ijomah. Senior Emily Bampton, sophomore Erica Johnson and senior Erin Wolverton also came away with singles victories for Iowa. "We were pleased with our play. We went in knowing they would be tough competition and they were," Wiegler said. "We came out and hung with them. Our matches are getting tougher as we go along, but we are on the right track."

Notre Dame rejects offer to join Big Ten

LONDON (AP) — Notre Dame figured it could have lost several million dollars a year by joining the Big Ten. Still, that wasn't the main reason the Irish decided to stay out. The school's trustees turned down the Big Ten Friday for the second time in five years because signing up could have cost them their identity and hurt recruiting. "Our projection indicated a small economic disadvantage of joining, but it was not a material difference when you look at it," athletic director Mike Wadsworth said. He said the difference would have been between $1 million and $4 million in 2007, the first year Notre Dame could have played a full Big Ten schedule. "This amount of difference was inconsequential," he added. Wadsworth termed reports that the shortfall could have been as much as $8.5 million "way out of bounds." "We were concerned about the implications (joining) would have to the independence of our Notre Dame's new academic center. Thirty-nine of the 55 board members traveled to London to vote. Rev. Edward Malloy, the university president, said the decision to say out was based on Notre Dame's independent identity and its national following.

Colorado's Roy records 46th shutout in win

Avalanche 3, Stars 0
DALLAS (AP) — Patrick Roy stopped 27 shots for his 46th career shutout and the Colorado Avalanche extended their franchise-long winning streak to 12 games with a 3-0 victory over the Dallas Stars on Sunday.
 Roy won his 11th consecutive decision and registered his fifth shutout of the season as he blanked the team with the most points in the Western Conference. Claude Lemieux, Chris Drury and Jon Klemm scored for Colorado, which has the NHL's longest winning streak since the Pittsburgh Penguins won a league-record 17 straight in 1993.

Bruins 3, Rangers 2
BOSTON — Joe Thornton scored the game-winner with 3:27 remaining as Boston snapped an eight-game winless streak.
 Thornton's backhander from the right side of the crease beat Rangers goaltender Mike Richter for his 10th goal of the season.
 Adam Graves tied the game at 12:21 of the third period with his team-leading 24th goal of the season. Brian Leetch also scored for the Rangers against Byron Dufoe.
 Sergei Samsonov and Dmitri Khristich added goals for Boston.
Penguins 2, Red Wings 1
PITTSBURGH — Goaltender

Tom Barrasso stopped 35 shots and Pittsburgh won its sixth straight game.
 It was the second consecutive strong start for Barrasso, who returned from a four-game injury absence on Friday to shut out Florida.
 Alexei Kovalev scored in the first and Kip Miller's rebound of a Kevin Hatcher shot was the game-winner for the Penguins at 11:13 of the second period.
 Martin Lapointe scored Detroit's only goal.
Islanders 3, Canucks 3
UNIONDALE, N.Y. — Markus Naslund's power-play goal with 4:18 left in regulation brought the Vancouver Canucks back from a two-goal deficit and allowed them to gain an overtime tie with the New York Islanders on Sunday.

 Penalties to New York defenseman Rich Pilon and Dean Malkoc gave Vancouver a 57-second two-man advantage, and Naslund capitalized when he swept the rebound of his own tip-in try past Islanders goalie Felix Potvin.
 Brad May and Ed Jovanovski also scored for the Canucks, who earned their third point under new head coach Marc Crawford since he took over for Mike Keenan at the All-Star break (1-4-1). Corey Hirsch stopped 29 shots.

Kritsonis, seniors rack up pins, wins for Iowa

WRESTLING

 Kritsonis for the rest of the season.
 While Kritsonis and the seniors were racking up wins, Iowa did suffer a few upsets, with Eric Juergens falling to Joe Warren in overtime and Gabe McMahan dropping his second match of the weekend, 13-9 against Otto Olson. McMahan also lost 11-8 against Kole Clauson Friday.
 (McMahan) is in good shape, but he's not holding up in competition," Iowa coach Jim Zalesky said. "Every time he's gotten beat, that's what has happened. There hasn't been a match where he's held up and gotten beat."

 In the 133-pound bout, Juergens held a 6-4 lead in the closing moments, but Joe Warren managed a reversal with 16 ticks left on the clock to send it to overtime.
 Then the period ended with the score tied and Michigan having 59 seconds of riding time, one short of an extra point.
 In the extra frame, it appeared Juergens had the winning takedown, but the referee called a potentially dangerous hold before the points were scored. Warren then scored the winning points on a takedown with five seconds left.

 "It was a tough, hard fought match, but I don't think Juergens capitalized on his scoring opportunities," Zalesky said. "You can't give up a reversal with 30 seconds left, either. When you make mistakes like that, it will cost you."
 T.J. Williams continued to blow through the competition this weekend, grabbing a 20-8 major decision Friday before getting a 21-6 technical fall on Sunday. The wins brought the sophomore's record to 29-0 and 15-0 in dual meets.

 Lee Weber, an 184-pounder, suffered his first defeat as a heavyweight on Sunday, dropping a 10-3 decision to 250-pound freshman Matt Brink. The junior did get his second win in the highest weight class Friday, a 11-4 decision over Wisconsin's Jason Pernet.
 Weber was filling in for Wes Hand, who was injured last weekend against Minnesota.

Big Ten opens up next for women's tennis team

WOMEN'S TENNIS
 Next weekend the team opens the Big Ten season, when they host Illinois and Northwestern.
 Although the Hawkeyes are pleased with their victory overall and feel that they will be prepared when Big Ten play comes to town next weekend, an area of concern surfaced during the Nebraska match.

 "Our singles started out a little flat. We might not have expected such a tough match," Coach Paul Wardlaw said. "Everyone realizes we are starting Big Ten play next week and that it will bring a different level of intensity.

 "We need to expect it will be difficult. We were surprised it was difficult today and we adjusted, but we need to start off with a different mentality."
 Dawaf voiced similar sentiments.

"This win will make us more confident going into Big Ten play next weekend, but we need to be starting off strong in singles," Dawaf said. "We need to come out showing our opponent we want to dominate."

 Spartans shot 58 percent from the floor.
 As Michigan State built a 31-point lead in the second half, it destroyed Iowa's trademark full court pressure defense.
 "All week long we worked with seven or eight guys pressing us," Michigan State's Charlie Bell said. "We knew we couldn't let it get to us. That really helped us coming into the game tonight and the press was kind of easy for us."
 Michigan State consistently beat Iowa down the court, and Michigan State coach Tom Izzo said it looked like the Hawkeyes were just a step behind. Izzo added that the game could have been the best his team has ever played.

 And Iowa coach Tom Davis couldn't argue.
 "They are deep, quick, and we hoped they might not be able to shoot it as well against us from the outside," Davis said. "It hurt (how they dismantled our press). It hurts anytime a team demonstrates their superiority over you, which in this case they did."
 Iowa was coming off a 90-75 loss at Purdue less than 48 hours earlier, and Michigan State had not played since Tuesday.
 Davis admitted his team needed help rebounding — Iowa gave up 12 offensive boards to the Spartans. He blamed the lack of pressure success on his team's lack of speed. And the veteran coach said his team needs to reevaluate its shot selection.

 The Iowa coach did see bright spots, though. Iowa freshman Joey Range led the Hawkeyes with 16 points, two steals, four rebounds and no turnovers in 23 minutes of play.
 "Joey had a good game," Davis said. "I thought he played real well, maybe the best he's played in some areas."
 Senior Sam Okey was the only other Hawkeye to finish in double figures. He had 10 points and four rebounds in 21 minutes of play.
 Michigan State was led by junior Morris Peterson, who finished with 27 points and five rebounds. All-American Mateen Cleaves finished with 14 points and nine rebounds, and Bel had 16 points.
 "When you have guys like Mateen Cleaves and everybody clicking on the same page, the only thing you can do is hope to contain them," junior Guy Rucker said. "And if not, you have to just keep playing hard."

 The Hawkeyes will look to recuperate from the loss and seek to avenge January's loss at Minnesota on Wednesday. Iowa will face the Golden Gophers in Carver-Hawkeye Arena at 7:05 p.m.
 "Everything's just fine," Jaacks said. "We're sitting just fine. The loss sometimes can help make us reflect. We're a good team right now. We're just going to have to work a lot at practice to try and become a great team."

Jaacks believes Spartans could make NCAA run

SPARTANS
 But Peterson is every bit as talented — maybe even more so.
 "Many people think (Peterson) has the best chance to play the longest at the next level," Iowa coach Tom Davis said.
 Davis, no doubt, is one of those people. Especially after Peterson lit up his team. As impressive as Cleaves was Saturday, Peterson stole the show.

 And the guy can't even crack the starting lineup.
 "He could be starting in front of three of our guys," Izzo said. "He's done a great job of handling it."
 Izzo said Peterson comes off the bench because the team's chemistry benefits from it. With a 20-4 record (9-1 Big Ten), nobody is arguing with the strategy.
 "He is one of the toughest players in the country," Cleaves said. "He's making my job a lot easier right now."

 Peterson is just another example of Michigan State's solid depth. Only one player — Cleaves — played as many as 29 minutes.
 "We have more guys that can do more things with the ball this year," Cleaves said.
 That spells trouble for Big Ten opponents and anybody the Spartans play in the NCAA Tournament. Izzo's team made a statement Saturday against a nationally ranked team, and that statement was heard loud and clear.

 "There's so many teams that are Final Four teams," Iowa's Jacob Jaacks said. "But the way they're playing now, of course they're a Final Four team."

WOMEN'S SWIMMING

Zisu makes history, again

Sophomore Loredana Zisu broke the 200 individual medley school record Saturday.

By Mike Kelly
The Daily Iowan

The Iowa women's swimming and diving team sent its seniors out on a record-breaking note Saturday with a win over Penn St. In the Hawkeyes last home meet of the season, Iowa defeated the Lady Lions for the first time in team history, 113-112. In addition, sophomore Loredana Zisu set the school record in the 200 IM.

"I am pleased with the way we swam today," Iowa coach Mary Bolich said. "One of the things I look for in a successful meet is the way we approach the meet and I think we had a good approach to this one." Zisu, the sophomore who competed for Romania in the 1996 Olympics, added the 200 IM to her long list of Iowa records. Her time of 2:06.05 was .23 seconds better than Shelly Sentyrz's 1992 mark. Zisu already holds school records in the 100 butterfly, 200 butterfly, 200 backstroke and 400 individual medley. She eclipsed Shelly Sentyrz's 1992 record by just .23 seconds. "Loredana did a great job for us today," Bolich said. "Not only did she break the record, she also had a good swim in the 200 backstroke. It is times like those that are good indicators of what we can do in the few weeks to come."

The Hawkeyes started slowly, winning just one of the first three events. They then took control of the meet when sophomore Stacey Wertz won her first of two races on the day. Wertz edged Penn State's Tasha Kukla by .21 seconds in the 50 freestyle and then turned around and won in the 100 freestyle as well.

After Wertz's win in the 50, the Hawkeyes won four straight events. "We slipped a little bit early," Bolich said. "Then we rebounded well in the second half of the meet and had some pretty good times."

Bolich served as an assistant coach at Penn St. from 1989-96 and recruited some of the swimmers Iowa competed against. Despite her history with Penn State, she refused to put extra emphasis on the victory.

"A win is a win," Bolich said with a smile. "I am pleased at the way we got the win, not on who we got it against."

The win closed out Iowa's dual meet season with an 8-4 record overall and a 3-4 record in the Big Ten. After losing their first three dual meets of the season, Iowa rebounded to win eight of their last nine meets.

The Big Ten Championships will be the next challenge the Hawkeyes face. On Feb. 18-20, Iowa travels to Minneapolis to see how they match up against the rest of the Big Ten.

WOMEN'S BASKETBALL

Herrig lifts team to victory

Iowa senior Amy Herrig scored a game-high 26 points, collected 14 rebounds and had five steals during Iowa's win over Indiana.

By Eric Petersen
The Daily Iowan

After losing a heartbreaker to Ohio State Friday night, the Iowa women's basketball team desperately needed a victory Sunday to snap its worst losing skid since the 1982-83 season.

Mercifully, the Hawkeyes got it. The seven-game skid is over.

Lindsey Mederer equaled her 13-point average and Amy Herrig pumped in a game-high 26 points and 14 rebounds in the Hawkeyes' 73-69 win over the Indiana Hoosiers in Bloomington, Ind.

The senior from Dubuque recorded her 13th double-double of the season and moved into fifth place on Iowa's career rebounds list (730), surpassing Sacramento Monarchs player Franthea Price. Herrig also had a career-high five steals after playing in 39 of the game's 40 minutes.

"This was a real team victory for us," Iowa coach Angie Lee said. "Herrig's defense doesn't get enough credit and her positioning is great. We only committed 13 turnovers, which was something we have been working on."

Iowa (9-13, 4-8 Big Ten) scored 14 of the first 19 points of the game, and was a perfect 4 of 4 from 3-point range in the first half.

After being down by as many as 11 points, Indiana (13-14, 2-11) clawed to within six, 36-30, at the break.

The Hoosiers carried that momentum with them after intermission, opening the half on a 14-4 run and taking the lead on a Kay Morgan layup at the 18:20 mark.

The game saw seven lead changes during the final 11 minutes. Forward Randi Peterson hit a jumper with 1:33 left to lift Iowa's advantage to 69-65 and put Indiana away for good.

Iowa hit 17 of 19 free throws for the game and 13 of 14 in the second half.

Indiana was led by Cindy

Kerns, who had 22 points. Dani Thrush added 16 points, 10 rebounds and five assists for the Hoosiers, who have lost their last six games.

The Hawkeyes' defense held freshman Jill Chapman, the Hoosiers second-leading scorer and leading rebounder, to four points and two boards.

The Friday night loss to Ohio State added to the Hawkeyes' season-long string of tough road losses. Iowa has lost six of its road games, five within the conference, by eight points or less.

The loss to the Buckeyes was particularly painful, considering Iowa held an 11-point advantage with less than 14 minutes to play in the second half. But a six-minute, 37-second scoring drought for the Hawkeyes proved to be the difference in the game.

Iowa hosts last-place Minnesota Friday night at Carver-Hawkeye Arena before closing out its home schedule Sunday afternoon against Northwestern.

MEN'S GYMNASTICS

Gymnasts lead Big Ten after another win

The fourth-ranked Hawkeyes remained undefeated after beating No. 7 Illinois.

By Robert Yarborough
The Daily Iowan

In a battle of last year's NCAA championship runners-up, the Iowa men's gymnastics team had its hands full with No. 7 Illinois on Saturday in Champaign, Ill.

Despite the performance of Illinois all-around champion Travis Romagnoli, No. 4 Iowa squeaked out a close 226.85-224.725 victory over the Fighting Illini.

Iowa coach Tom Dunn was expecting a tough dual from the team that finished behind Iowa at last year's NCAA Championships.

"Illinois really stepped up at the end of last season," Dunn said. They have built a very solid program and we have a lot of respect for their team."

The meet provided an opportunity for a head-to-head battle between the top two gymnasts in the nation, Romagnoli and Iowa's Todd Strada. Neither gymnast disappointed the crowd.

WOMEN'S GYMNASTICS

Iowa sweeps triangular meet

Greg Wallace
The Daily Iowan

The Iowa women's gymnastics team continued its recent string of success Sunday at Northern Illinois, sweeping a triangular meet from Wisconsin-Oshkosh and the host Huskies.

With a team score of 190.125, Iowa improved to 5-6 for the season. "We were very focused and aggressive," Iowa coach Diane DeMarco said. "I really feel that everyone on this team was supportive and spirited today. It was a very exciting win."

The Hawkeyes scored season highs on both vault and floor exercise, earning a 48.250 on floor exercise and a 47.975 on the vault.

Courtney Burke led the way for Iowa, winning the team's second straight individual top all-around honor. Burke won the floor exercise, with a season high of 9.825, and placed second on the balance beam. Corynne Cooper won the vault competition with a 9.8, a career high. "Courtney Burke and Shrutika Sulkar were very solid on beam," DeMarco said.

The Hawkeyes were bitten by the injury bug again, but came through relatively unscathed. Robyn Gamble, perhaps the team's best beam competitor, was unable to compete in the event Sunday due to an ankle injury. But Iowa still had two of the top four finishers in Sulkar and Corynne Cooper.

Iowa trailed Northern Illinois after two events, but in an ironic twist from last Saturday's meet, Northern Illinois fell apart on the balance beam.

The Huskies fell five times in six routines, which allowed a strong floor exercise by Iowa to pass Northern Illinois for first place. Last weekend, Western Michigan used an exceptionally strong beam routine to deny Iowa a sweep of its home triangular meet.

Hawkeyes win first dual of season

■ On Senior Day, the men's swimming team recorded its first Big Ten victory with a win over Northwestern.

By Todd Hefferman
The Daily Iowan

The Iowa men's swimming and diving team scored five season-best times in picking up its first Big Ten Conference dual meet win of the season Saturday afternoon.

The Hawkeyes beat the Northwestern Wildcats 141-99 on Senior Day at the UI Fieldhouse to improve to 3-7 overall in dual meets, 1-4 in the Big Ten.

Junior Avi Mednick swam season-best times in the 100-yard and 200-yard breaststroke. Mednick led the entire way in finishing the 100-yard breaststroke in 57.69 seconds, and later won the 200-yard breaststroke in 2:05.77. Junior Bogdan Deac and sophomores Jay Glenn and Marko Milenkovic followed suit.

Deac swam the 200-backstroke in a season-best 1:50.67 seconds, finishing second behind Walters for the second time last Saturday afternoon. Glenn won the 100-yard freestyle in a season-best 45.93 seconds and Milenkovic won the 1,000-yard freestyle in a season-best 9:41.19 seconds.

"We got them up for this, it was a good dual meet, a good win for us, and we're excited for the Big Tens," assistant coach Marc Long said. "This weekend we won the close races, and kind of steam-rolled the rest of the way."

Overall, the Hawkeyes won nine out of the 14 events after watching senior Brian Walters of Northwestern steal the 100-yard backstroke right off the bat.

It was like a tale of two days for the Wildcats, who after swimming six season-best times last Friday night against Northern Illinois, fell behind 46-30 after seven events. The Wildcats lost their 15th straight dual against the Hawkeyes, and their fourth Big Ten dual of this year.

Seniors Dan Abel, Brian Brix and Brad Virkler were honored, along with the senior members of the women's swimming and diving team, at a pre-meet ceremony. Abel finished third in the 500-yard freestyle, while Virkler finished third in the one-meter diving.

"I don't think any senior wants to end their career at home with a loss," Mednick said, "so it felt good to send them off with a really good win against Northwestern."

In probably his last race, Brix won a 200-yard individual medley exhibition, building a big lead after the second turn and cruising to the victory.

"It was kind of a bittersweet moment," Brix said. "It's a big meet, but it's also kind of sad because it's my last meet."

Sophomore Simon Chrisander won the one-meter diving title with 308.30 points, and later won the three-meter diving crown with 327.35.

MEN'S TENNIS

Iowa records disappointing loss

■ Western Michigan defeated the Hawkeye men's tennis team, 4-3, on Sunday.

By Lisa Colonna
The Daily Iowan

Iowa men's tennis coach Steve Houghton walked away from the Hawkeyes' loss to Western Michigan Saturday looking like a prophet.

He knew when the season started the importance of winning the doubles point, and when his team didn't do so against the Broncos, he knew what to expect — a loss.

He was right, as Western Michigan edged Iowa 4-3 at the UI Recreation Building.

"We lost two doubles matches and lost both of those in tie-breakers. That was the deciding factor," Iowa coach Steve Houghton said. "It is tough to win four of six singles matches, so the doubles point is crucial."

Iowa came close, splitting the six singles matches with the Broncos, but it wasn't enough to overcome the lead WMU picked up early.

Houghton said that this season's doubles play has improved greatly since last year, but he felt that the players were not as aggressive at the end of their matches as they needed to be on Sunday.

Iowa lost at both No. 1 and No. 2 doubles in 9-8 tie-breakers. The No. 3 doubles team of junior J.R. Chidley and fifth-year senior Ben Bamsey won 8-5, making their 3-0 on the season.

No. 1 singles player Tyler Cleveland, a sophomore, extended his individual record to 3-0 by beating Mohamed Dakki 7-6, 6-3. No. 3 singles player Chidley also extended his individual record to 3-0 winning by 6-3, 6-3 over Steve Pillon.

No. 6 singles player Jason Dunn, also a sophomore, holds a 2-0 record after defeating WMU's Jeff Brink 6-1, 7-5.

"We knew they would be good competition," Dunn said. "We had our chances in doubles, but had some bad luck. We played well and we were right there. We didn't have a long way to go to beat them."

No. 2 singles player Tom

Buetikofer, a freshman, lost 6-3, 7-5 to Ryan Tomlinson. Freshman Petar Mandic, Iowa's No. 4 singles player lost to Fernando Garcia 7-6, 6-4 and No. 5 player Ulf Jentler, a senior, lost 7-6, 6-2 to Kyle Gernhofer.

"My singles match was up and down. I lost my focus a couple of times," Mandic said. "Garcia played well. Today they were the better team and they won."

Other than losing the doubles point, Houghton noted that Iowa lost four of five tie-breaking points in singles and doubles matches throughout the day.

"This is a match we should have won. We did not convert a lot of key points," Houghton said. "We let a couple of matches get away which shouldn't have happened."

Iowa, which is now 2-1 on the season, will host Miami (Ohio) next Saturday at 2:30 p.m.

"We need to focus for next week and have a good attitude. If we work hard, the results will come," Mandic said.

UI TRACK AND FIELD ROUNDUP

Men's track and field

A season-best time for Bashir Yamini in the 200-meter dash highlighted Iowa's individual performances at the Cyclone Classic in Ames last weekend.

The meet, which didn't have team scoring, featured athletes from numerous college and club teams across the country.

All-American Yamini, who qualified for the NCAA Championships in the long jump last week, finished third in the 200-meter dash with a time of 21.35. Fellow Hawkeye Tony Branch finished tenth in the same race at 21:57. Branch also turned in a top-ten finish in the 60-meter dash, finishing seventh at 6.85.

Iowa's 4x400 relay team of Yamini, Branch, Tim Dodge and Kurt Felix finished second behind Arizona State with a time of 3:09.37 to provisionally qualify for the NCAA Championships.

Iowa's distance medley relay team of Michael Layne, Jim Donovan, Paul Sarris and Dodge took fifth with a time of 9:46.83, setting a new school record.

Other Hawkeyes who finished well included Stetson Steele and Chad Scwitters in the 5,000-meter run. Steele's time of 14:24.50 was good for eleventh place and Scwitters' time of 14:36.43 netted him a seventeenth place finish. Jeremy Allen and Arno van der Westhuizen finished seventh and ninth respectively in the weight throw with distances of 59-9½ and 58-1. Van der Westhuizen placed ninth in the shot put as well at 58-1.

The Hawkeyes travel to Champaign, Ill., Feb. 13 for the Illinois Invitational.

Women's track and field

The Iowa women's track team had 10 top-20 finishes, four of those in the top 10, at the Iowa State Classic last weekend in Ames.

Sophomore Cari Hoeman, senior Rebecca Kaza, and senior Paula Ruen all scored top-10 finishes at one of the toughest meets of the season. Team scores were not scored, but the meet featured some of the nation's strongest track and field squads, such as Arkansas, Stanford, and UCLA. More than 30 different teams competed in the two-day invitational.

Hoeman ran a season-best time of 1:29.92 seconds in finishing fourth in the 600-meter dash. "There were two girls in front of me that I think I should have beaten, I just didn't have enough at the end," Hoeman said.

Kaza finished ninth in the high jump, clearing 5'05.00 feet, while Ruen finished third in the 60-meter high hurdles. It was a rare finish for Ruen, who was used to winning that event, winning the 60-meter high hurdles at the Iowa Open and the Redbird Invitational earlier this spring.

Sophomore Gina Shannon finished 15th in the pole vault, and was one of only a few field event competitors. Senior Keri Blackstone threw a season-best 48'05.50 feet in the weight throw, but finished 13th.

"Overall our team did really well. We didn't have a lot of field events, but everyone is getting healthier, hopefully we'll all be back for the Big Tens," Hoeman said.

The Hawkeyes' injury woes seem to be improving just in time for the stretch run of the indoor season. Last weekend's fourth-place finish at the Big Four was quite different than the results the Hawkeyes put up at the Iowa State Classic. "Last weekend was horrible for us, so anything would have been better than last weekend," Hoeman said. "Personally, I'd been sick, and I don't think I went into the meet with a positive outlook. This weekend I went in wanting to do a little better."

The only meet between Iowa and the Big Ten Championships is a road meet at Champaign, Ill. "We had a lot more people competing, and our performances were a lot better than at UNI," Shannon said. "We did well enough to give ourselves a confidence boost for the next couple weeks. We have Illinois and the Big Tens still to go, and we needed something to build our confidence."

-Todd Hefferman

Rain wreaked havoc on Stewart's old clambal third time in four years was declared the winner stroke over Frank Braxton when the final round ended because of standing on the course and no better weather.

"I had a feeling it was good to be leading holes," said Stewart, aged that with a 5-iron for birdie on the 18th hole at 10-under 208, seen what's happened.

Rain gives Stewart victory

Payne Stewart won the rain-shortened Pebble Beach National Pro-Am.

By Doug Ferguson
Associated Press

Eric Risberg/Associated Press

PEBBLE BEACH, Calif. — Golf shoes still on, rain pants over his knickers, Payne Stewart remained ready to prove that another 18 holes would not stop him from winning for the first time in four years.

He should have listened to David Duval, who knew the final round of the AT&T Pebble Beach National Pro-Am would be rained out shortly after he made eagle from 142 yards out on the first hole.

He could have taken a cue from former Eagles drummer Glenn Frey, who was asked whether he was going to play Sunday.

"Cards?" Frey responded. "After all, this is Pebble Beach. Or is that Puddle Beach?"

Rain wreaked havoc on Bing Crosby's old clambake for the third time in four years. Stewart was declared the winner by one stroke over Frank Lickliter when the final round was canceled because of standing water on the course and no hope for better weather.

"I had a feeling it would be good to be leading after 54 holes," said Stewart, who managed that with a 5-iron into a foot for birdie on the 18th hole at Spyglass Hill on Saturday to put him at 10-under 206. "I have seen what's happened here before, and I guess I was right. I did want the opportunity to prove I could win in 72 holes, but I'm going to take this and run.

"I was low after 54 holes, and that was good enough this week." It usually is at Pebble.

In 1996, only 36 holes were completed by Sunday and the tournament was canceled, the first time that had happened on tour since 1949. Last year when only 36 holes were in after four days, the tour asked players to return in August to play the final and third round. Prize money can only be awarded if 54 holes have been played.

Stewart earned $540,000 for his 10th career victory, but only his second since winning the 1991 U.S. Open.

He also picked up valuable points for his quest to make the Ryder Cup team for the first time since 1993.

"I have won again," Stewart said. "I think it will be easier this year when I get in position, and I'm going to be in position again because I'm playing good."

Elway lifts AFC to win

HONOLULU (AP) — John Elway did what he's done so many times before, moving his team briskly down the field and into the end zone. And then he was done for the day. And he might be done forever.

If the Pro Bowl was the Denver quarterback's final game, he went out with a brief but shining performance.

Welcomed with a roar by the Aloha Stadium crowd, Elway played only the first series Sunday but threw a touchdown pass to start the AFC toward a 23-10 victory over the NFC.

"I had fun. We had a good drive and got the job done and that's what it's all about," Elway said. "This is the time of the year for the NFL. It's great for the league and for the players."

Elway was happy for AFC teammates Ty Law and Keyshawn Johnson, the game's co-MVPs.

"They are very deserving," Elway said after the AFC's third straight win in the All-Star game. "I'm glad they got it. Those young guys, they're fun to watch."

Elway, 38, was fun to watch, too.

He said going in that he planned to play only a series or two, but that he wanted to do something good while he was in.

Completing four of five, including a 33-yarder to New England tight end Ben Coates, Elway passed for 55 yards in the AFC's opening 61-yard drive.

He nimbly sidestepped a pair of pass rushers and lobbed a 3-yard TD pass to Sam Gash to put the AFC ahead to stay.

Gash, who may have caught the final touchdown pass of Elway's career, was awed.

"It was definitely memorable. A legend threw the ball and I was able to catch it," the Buffalo fullback said. "I'll definitely think about it later in life."

The MVP of the Broncos' 34-19 Super Bowl win over Atlanta a week earlier, Elway watched the rest of the game from the sidelines. He plans to announce within the next couple of months whether he'll return to the Broncos for another season — and a shot at three consecutive NFL titles.

Stockton and Malone help Utah beat Los Angeles

INGLEWOOD, Calif. (AP) — Karl Malone and John Stockton combined for 27 of Utah's 30 points in the fourth quarter as the Jazz rallied to beat the Los Angeles Lakers 100-91 Sunday in a rematch of last season's Western Conference final.

The Jazz swept the Lakers in four games last year, denying Los Angeles its first trip to the NBA Finals since 1991. Utah went on to lose to Chicago in the championship series.

PHOENIX — Tom Gugliotta had 29 points and 13 rebounds in his Phoenix homecourt debut Sunday night as the Suns overcame an 18-point fourth-quarter outburst by the big forward who deserted them, Antonio McDyess, to beat the Denver Nuggets 115-108.
