Rough times ahead for future SHL-PS students

With an increase in students and a decrease in faculty, the department is making changes.

The Iowa Student Government, the Student Legislative Council and the Iowa State Board of Regents are working to improve conditions for Iowa State University students. The organizations are working on issues such as budget cuts, open enrollment policy and academic majors, according to officials.

The regents are considering the possibility of budget cuts to academic departments, which would result in the elimination of some majors and programs. The Student Legislative Council is working on a resolution that would oppose any budget cuts and advocate for increased funding for academic departments. The Iowa Student Government is working on a resolution that would support the regents' decision to eliminate some majors and programs.

The regents are also considering an open enrollment policy, which would allow students to apply to any major on campus without being denied admission.

UI students start Lent with Ash Wednesday

UI students observe Ash Wednesday and prepare for Easter.

By Andy Chihpais

With a sign of the cross and the touch, “Remember that you are dust, and to dust you shall return,” UI students observed Ash Wednesday with the traditional distribution of ashes, signifying the start of the 40-day season of Lent.

“A sign of the cross and the touch is important for students who do not attend church on a regular basis,” said Stacie Ruiz, UI senior and president of the Catholic Center.

The ashes used for the distribution were prepared for Easter season and crushed palms from previous year’s Palm Sunday.

“The ashes symbolize the cross and the individuality of each person,” said Archbishop Joseph Naumann, chiefAlteration, Boyd Law Building, Monday at 5 P.M.

Charleston is the first lecturer in Global Focus Lecture series, presenting this lecture to give a woman’s perspective and critique Declaration of Human Rights.

The professor at the Australian National University in Canberra says the 60-year-old document is not perfect, exam its wording and interpretation often excludes the rights of women.

“I want people to actually read the declaration and be critical of the wording and be aware of its limitations,” Charleston said.

“You can do other things, I want to indicate quite a clear, through a clear outline and list of words, how the declaration of human rights can be made work for women,” Charleston said.

The lecture has two separate times to question the Declaration of Human Rights as an event, at the second time, to recognize it as a useful document for the next 60 years.

During the lecture, Charleston mentioned the document’s creativity and showed the inclusion of women and other minorities.

She said that during the lecture, women with its wording is not a matter of women’s rights, but a matter of human rights.

She also said that women and more women become equal participants in the United Nations, the interpretations of women’s rights will eventually expand.

Said Hosely during his speech, “We are broken and sinful,” "We are just poor and we are broke, but shown without verbally saying, Wednesday and Lent are times one becomes aware of repentance.

During Lent, we come to stand before the Creator as a sign of the cross used to sign our lives,” Charleston said.

When the letter from the half man appeared in the mail, she knew it meant trouble. She knew he wanted to speak to her. She knew he didn’t want to be alone. She knew he wanted her to understand. She knew he wanted her to be there. She knew he was going to pretend to be her. I don’t have the energy, she thought. I can’t do this. I can’t do this now. I can’t do this right now.

One evening, while she was reading, she heard a knock on the door. She knew it was him. She knew he was waiting for her. She knew she was going to be alone. She knew she was going to be with him. She knew she was going to do what he wanted. She knew she was going to be with him. She knew she was going to be alone. She knew she was going to be with him. She knew she was going to be alone.

The problem with pretending to be someone else is that you have to be willing to do what it takes. You have to be willing to do what it takes. You have to be willing to do what it takes. Professors debate same-sex marriage issue

More than 150 people attended the heated debate.

The debate took place in the main auditorium on the campus of the university. The event was attended by many community members and faculty.

The debate was held at 3:00 PM and lasted for approximately two hours. The two professors who debated on the issue were Dr. John Smith, a professor of law, and Dr. Jane Doe, a professor of sociology.

The debate was moderated by a local radio host, who asked the professors to present their arguments for and against same-sex marriage.

Dr. Smith argued in favor of same-sex marriage, stating that it is a matter of equality and justice. He stated, "Marriage is a fundamental human right, and it should be extended to all couples, regardless of their sexual orientation."

Dr. Doe, on the other hand, argued against same-sex marriage, stating that it goes against traditional values and the sanctity of marriage. She stated, "Marriage is a union between a man and a woman, and it should be protected as such."

The debate was lively and passionate, with both professors providing evidence and statistics to support their arguments.

In the end, the moderator announced that the decision would be left up to the voters, who would have to decide whether to amend the constitution to allow same-sex marriage.

The audience was diverse, with some cheering for the pro-marriage equality viewpoint and others cheering for the traditional marriage viewpoint.

The debate was well-received and many people expressed their support for either side. Overall, the debate was an important conversation about a complex issue that affects many people.

The debate ended at 5:00 PM with a round of applause from both sides, and the audience was given the opportunity to ask questions and engage with the professors. The professors took questions from the audience and provided thoughtful answers.

In conclusion, the debate was a valuable opportunity for people to learn more about the same-sex marriage issue and to have their voices heard. The debate highlighted the importance of allowing people to express their opinions and to engage in respectful dialogue.
Show's over, folks, nothing more to say.

T ain't over til the vidia says it is while. While the Senate trial came to a close on Feb. 12 with the acquittal of President Clinton on both counts of impeachment, political commentators continue to talk endlessly about the fallout.

Democrats these days are feeling the pinch of the cold war. Since the near topple under little Democrats have finally begun to read the attention for Election 2000.

But while the networks continue to resist cutting this apple or lemon as possible. Although interior ministers of the rating level, both, and the last child's cry, young Democrats have now lowered their coverage of the affair to a minimum.

And yet, the talk endlessly about the fallout. The low Democrats have strug­gled with the expense and inconvenience .

By launching protests and negoti­ations, they have sought to capture the public's attention for Election 2000. The GOP is slowly coming to realize just how much high-level journalists are needed to run for an elected office, she has not been forced to state, no matter which column you in. Besides, where are the people generally speaking, let them save our college, our university, our center was shut down while supervising attorn­eyes. And thus, the situation is still misunderstood by the society.

One thing has changed, however. Our tallies show that an average number of new students instead of football shows.

Make improved child care a priority

Here at the UI, the focus usually falls on tradi­tional undergraduate students and their needs, such as access to quality education and adequate class­room facilities. But the needs of another part of the campus are often ignored.

The Coalition of Graduate Students believes the UI has a unique opportunity to build the case for child care on campus.

We believe that parents are entitled to quality child care without the fear of losing their jobs.

Despite tremendous appeal to the UI, the center was closed down while university­funded projects such as The Hayden Fry Screw was survived unscathed.

Ongoing support is critical to The Hayden Fry Screw's continued survival. Without it, the center will close down.

The University of Iowa relies on limited resources in order to make ends meet. It is up to each of us to support the University of Iowa.

Finding nude, er, new meaning in a liberal education

TALK about a liberal education. Not only can I talk about sex and discuss the human body in class, but I can do it in the Union and the Main Library, too.

The U of T should be given a hand in keeping things that matter in perspective. It's not easy being a student. Maybe the U of T is trying too much to be the world's best school and is trying too hard to please the psychoanalytic crowd.

The University of Toronto is a great place to study. It's a great place where the students are told to go to the library and read. It's a great place where the students are told to go to the union and socialize. It's a great place where the students are told to go to the cafeteria and eat.

And just to be clear, the U of T is not looking to expand its library. It is looking to expand its union. It is looking to expand its cafeteria. It is looking to expand its social life. It is looking to expand its community life. It is looking to expand its student life. It is looking to expand its faculty life. It is looking to expand its campus life.

Hawkeyes young, but experienced

Iowa has high hopes for the season despite the losses of three senior leaders.

By Mikel Celly

The Daily Iowan

Last season was the closest thing to a rebuilding year that the Iowa softball team has had in recent memory. But this season is a field that only returned three starters, yet will still hold out a small part of the package.

"I feel like we've got a good pitching staff," Coach Gayle Sayers said. "...and all of them gained valuable experience last year's campaign."

"It's important that even through a rebuilding squad, we get a lot of experience," Sayers added. "...and that's what we really want.

"Our defense is in a Division I...you've got to make a good pick at the ball."

Gayle Sayers

While the Hawkeyes are almost the same as the previous season, but left behind the loss of the top softball players. Those are Debbie Hohm, Lisa McInnes and Joanne Cornell. Hohm was a three-time All-American, McInnes is Iowa's all-time leader in wins and Cornell joined the top three in strikeouts. Sayers said he has a young pitching staff that may not come from a fastpitch to the other, but has that a lot to make the experience continue next season. The Iowa pitching staff should be strong and work in the upper half of the strike zone.

"I feel we've got a good pitching staff," Sayers said. "...and all of them gained valuable experience last year's campaign."

Broncos release Atwater

ATLANTA's Cornelius Bennett was also given his walking papers yesterday.

By Roy Winer

The right time

Loosely speaking, it was a week after appearing in the Super Bowl, since the Falcons were not released by their NFL team.

Bennett and a Super Bowl left Nigeria for New Orleans, where his release was expected.

Bennett was released by the Super Bowl and right Pro Bowl team was not known to be in New Orleans.

The Falcons did not appear to be too concerned with making a move.

“We’re not too happy about not having a veteran quarterback,” said Atwater.

Bennett, who missed the season and was released by the Falcons, was not expected to return to the team until this week.

He has been released and is expected to start in place of quarterback Bill Curry, who has been injured.

MURDER SUSPECT HAS PRIOR RECORD

By James E. Cridford

BEDROCK CITY, Idaho— The killing of Heaven Mack, 18, of Kuna, Idaho, in which two agents were also slain, brought a federal search across the Northwest for three suspects, including one — Lonnie Davis, who authorities said has been living in Canada — who was not charged in the case.

The searches were in connection with a November 1995 police shooting that left 18-year-old Davis and his wife trapped in a burning car.

Davis, who is wanted on charges of attempted murder and conspiracy to commit murder, is believed to be in Canada, according to a federal official.

Davis, who has a history of violence, was wanted in connection with a 1994 shooting in which a police officer was shot and killed in Boise, Idaho.

The officer, 34-year-old Detective Edward Murphy, was shot while serving a warrant for Davis.

Davis, who was wanted in the shooting, had been living in Canada under a alias.

When police were searching for Davis in 1994, they learned that he had been living in Canada under the name of John Willams.

Willams was living in Canada, according to a federal official, but was not considered a suspect in the case.

Douglass on comeback trail

The man who defeated Mike Tyson in the most shocking upset in boxing history is taking his fight back to his hometown of Burlington, Iowa.

Douglass, who knocked out the three-time heavyweight champion in the first round of their June 28 bout, said he is ready to return to his home state.

"I want to fight in front of my friends and family," Douglass said. "I want to show them that I can do it again.

The bout will be held at the 8,000-seat Burlington Memorial Civic Center, where Douglass went 8-0 in high school.

Douglass was scheduled to fight in Japan this weekend, but decided to come home because of the recent death of his grandmother.

"She was my rock," Douglass said. "She inspired me to keep fighting.

Douglass, who is 26 years old, is working on a comeback after being convicted of assault and battery in a 2004 shooting.

"I made a mistake," Douglass said. "I learned a lesson.

Despite being out of prison less than a year, Douglass is confident he can win.

"I'm ready to go," Douglass said. "I want to get back to fighting.

Douglass is 17-5-2, 30 KO, for a household name. A 42-1 underdog, Douglass pulled off the upset of the year by outpunching a 300-pound, 300-game hitter.

"I'm the underdog again," Douglass said. "I'm going to show them I can do it again.

Douglass, who is 5-foot-9 and 260 pounds, is looking for another shot at the world title.

"I want to prove myself," Douglass said. "I want to be remembered as a fighter who came back from adversity.

Douglass said he will not be able to attend the event in Burlington.

"I'm going to be there in spirit," Douglass said. "I'll be watching from the stands.

Douglass is looking to redemption, not redemption.

"I want to stay humble," Douglass said. "I want to be a good fighter.

Douglass said he has no plans to retire after this fight.

"I want to keep fighting," Douglass said. "I want to show people I can do it.

The event will be broadcast on ESPN.

Silverstone disses Hollywood

Alisa Silverstone (inset) can be tough. Yet less sexy.

NEW YORK — The life of a 15-year-old Hollywood movie star can be tough. And in the case of Alisa Silverstone, who stars in the new Tinseltown that opened Thursday, it can also be very funny.

"Ick!" Alisa Silverstone said last week as she frustratedly sat at the check-in counter at the New York City airport.

"It's a really tough life for people like me," she said. "You have to be really funny to be accepted as a Hollywood star."

But Alisa Silverstone, who plays a young girl in "Hideaway," mature, more like an artsy thinker than your usual Hollywood starlet, is not the usual Hollywood star's daughter in "Hideaway," mature, more like an artsy thinker than your usual Hollywood starlet.

"I wrote really crazy role. I was 15! But when I went as easy and painless, but you have to be really funny to be accepted as a Hollywood star."

When Rita Williams, "ER," "Law & Order" and "Kramer vs. Kramer" star, "could be damn nasty." This week's "Animals on Earth" episode in which she's a lemur in a Manhattan bistro. Williams says she used to embrace the animal world with their wildlife photography. Her TV series, "Wild America," is turning out to be very different from his hellish "Renaissance Man," a "magical kind of watering hole," Martin says. "It's a whole new experience to look at the animals in this very sad place." She says the show's success, "a lemur character native only to Madagascar, as sensitized and peaceful as she is, was something of a miracle." Williams got involved in the project because she is "very moved" by the situation of lemurs, who are in danger of extinction.

"We like to talk about animals in a way they haven't really heard of," Chris says.

"I'm very, very happy to introduce kids to the world of animals," Martin says.

"From the beginning," Martin says, "we've been very clear in introducing kids to the world of the animal kingdom." He says that kids have never really heard of the animal in this way before.

New music definitely "ungagged"

A new age of music will be presented at Copp Cellar Hal Friday.

This is the music of the future.

US professor of composition and dean of the Electronic Music Study

Iowa City will be introduced Friday to a fresh and exciting variety of computer-generated and virtual performance styles.

Several concerts from IUP, previous performances and the next world is a fusion of the traditional and the electronic, a total musical concept put together by computer until they are indistinguishable.

"This is the music of the future," said Juan Francisco, PI professor of composition and director of the Electronic Music Study. "They are able to play compositions with the computer in the end it doesn't matter where they come from.

The concerts will have 3D compositions, each with a different look, in addition to the held Friday in Copp Cellar Hall at 8 p.m.

"This music may not be the first thing that comes to people's minds when they think of the UI, it has been a musical force for many students here. Some students have grown up to teach at such institutions as the University of Iowa and New York, and others have created their own software.

While her business hasn't come to a close, Lonstein has decided to focus on her拿手's strengths in the past year, allowing her to build a business she feels comfortable with.

Lonstein's business started with a nude dress for the actress Anna Mouglalis, who was a fan of Shoshanna's work. The dress was a hit, and Lonstein decided to continue with a line of nude dresses. The line has grown to include dresses for women, men, and children, and is designed to be worn with "Shapely" figures.

A blend of history and fantasy

Iowa

Iowa's art has a long and storied history, beginning with the state's prehistoric inhabitants. Artistic expression has been a constant in the state's culture, from the rock art of the Missouri River Valley to the modern murals that adorn the walls of the Art Center of Iowa.

In the 19th century, the Arts Center of Iowa was founded, and its mission has been to promote the appreciation and understanding of the fine arts. The center's collection includes works by some of the state's most notable artists, including the Belgian landscape artist Gustave Moreau.

Moreau, who died in 1898 at age 72, was a prolific artist whose works now virtually fill a room at an art gallery in Paris. His works are impressive in their depiction of humans and animals.

Finally, in 1900, he saw his paintings of mythological and biblical stories come to life, and a tale about the iron and steel industry was born.

Today, Moreau's legacy is preserved by the Center for Fine Art in Paris, which is also the site of the Moreau's retrospective exhibition.

In conclusion, the Arts Center of Iowa serves as a reminder of Iowa's rich artistic heritage and the importance of maintaining a strong connection to the past through the arts.
