Business alum donates largest gift ever to UI

■ The UI will rename the College of Business after Henry Tippie, a 1949 graduate of the school.

By Jerry Abejo
Daily Iowan

UI President Mary Sue Coleman announced Thursday that business school alumnus Henry B. Tippie had donated the largest individual gift ever — $30 million — to the UI.

The gift is the fifth-largest donation among U.S. business colleges. The highest previous donation to the UI was $14 million from the F. Wendell Miller estate.

Coleman told the Iowa state Board of Regents, meeting in Iowa City, that the deal had been finalized during the last week of January.

To commemorate the donation, the College of Business Administration will be renamed the Henry B. Tippie College of Business.

"Most of the top business schools are 'named' business schools," said Sharon Scheib, director of Communications and External Relations of the business school.

"You have the Kellogg business school at Northwestern and the Wharton business school in Pennsylvania. We're one of the few business schools that isn't 'named.'"

Because the UI is eliminating the word "administration" from the college's title, the John Pappajohn Business Administration Building will be renamed the John Pappajohn Business Building.

Tippie, who graduated from the UI with an accounting degree in 1949, made his first donation of $10 to the UI in 1957. Every year since then, he has donated money, which has gone towards the Tippie Auditorium and Pat's Diner in the business building.

From an impoverished childhood, Tippie has gone on to hold interest in several multimillion-dollar companies. He is also the vice chairman of the board of the Rollins Truck Leasing Corp.

The $30 million will not be paid all at once. The amount includes $3 million in past donations as well as donations planned for the future. Scheib said a substantial amount will be donated to the business school soon.

The money will be used primarily for undergraduate studies and faculty support. Money might be invested in undergraduate scholarships or go towards creating more faculty chairpersons and more high-level faculty positions to help keep and attract top employees.

"This is important, especially with the regents' discussion yesterday about how the UI is in a position where we are starting to lose excellent faculty because our tuition is so low," Scheib said.

"It's very exciting for us," Coleman said.

"I hope it will stimulate others to donate. We're hoping this will encourage other alums to donate in other areas."

The change in the college's name will be recognized with a ceremony on April 9, during which Tippie will be present.

In other news, the regents approved a plan to renovate the lobby of Mayflower Residence Hall. The project will cost approximately $1.3 million.

Under the proposal, the main lobby will be redesigned to provide more student seating and space for student activities. Also, the former swimming pool will be converted into a recreation room, including a coffee and juice bar.

UI earns C's on annual women's report card

■ The university garners a 2.33 GPA in dealing with five categories of women's issues.

By Anita Chilipala
The Daily Iowan

When it comes to women's issues, the UI doesn't exactly make the Dean's List.

In the fourth annual report card evaluating the UI administration's progress on women's issues, which was released Thursday, the UI maintained or improved its grades — but they are far from spectacular.

And in the category of leadership, the UI dropped from a B to a C-minus.

Jan Warren, chairwoman of the Council on the Status of Women, which issued the report card, attributes the drop in leadership to a variety of reasons. One is the lack of directors at the offices of Opportunity at Iowa and Special Support Services.

The position of associate/assistant provost for diversity is still unfilled, and progress has been slow regarding parity issues in the area of domestic

UI dean, students clash over fate of centers

■ Students vented concerns about the possible closing of the UI cultural centers.

By Shirin Sadeghi
The Daily Iowan

In a small, dimly lit room in the Afro-American Cultural Center, more than 50 UI students convened to discuss the fate of their cultural centers.

"I want to begin by stating that there are no plans to close either of these cultural centers," said Phillip Jones, vice president for Student Services and dean of students.

However, as the evening progressed into a heated question-and-answer session and shouting match between the students and Jones, few were persuaded of the long-term stability of the centers.

"If we're comfortable here, why do we have to move?" said Edwin West, a UI sophomore and Black Student Union member, summarizing the concerns of the group.

"Because this does not represent progress for the university," Jones replied, amidst a gasp of opposition.

Jones presented a history of the cultural centers on campus and followed with an explanation of the administration's "concept" of what the future can hold for the structures currently occupied by the Afro-

Former Iowa Gov. Terry Branstad has been out of a job for the last month, but he got back to work Thursday night as a UI instructor.

Branstad returned to the place where he earned a B.A. degree in 1969 to teach a graduate-level course in the UI School of Business,

"Leadership and Management in the Public Sector," which will deal with the interaction between government and private businesses.

"I think it's kind of neat to be teaching," Branstad said. "I want to focus on an issue that's so critically important to success as an individual and to make a difference in society."

The former governor won't be teaching the class on his own; Tim Judge, an associate professor of management and organization, will also teach. Judge said he is very excited about seeing Branstad in a

Keep Dr. Tom in the house, Hawkeye basketball fans say

■ An Ankeny Webmaster is using an Internet petition to persuade the UI to retain Tom Davis.

By Steven Cook
The Daily Iowan

UI Hawkeye basketball fans now have another place to vent their emotions over the non-renewal of Coach Tom Davis' contract: the Internet.

The Web site www.iowahawkeyes.com is sponsoring an online petition to retain Davis as the head coach of the Hawks. More than 200 individuals have posted their comments on the petition since Jan. 21, most in support of Davis.

Davis' contract was not renewed by UI Men's Athletics Director Bob Bowsby last spring. The move angered many Hawk fans, who thought Davis should remain as coach. Davis has three more regular season games to go, starting with an away game at the University of Illinois on Feb. 21 at 1:35 p.m.

Comments on the Web site, which is not affiliated with the UI, have ranged from one person saying Davis is the best coach available to another crediting him with making Hawkeye basketball exciting.

The "virtual" petition came about after Webmaster Bill Dennis of Ankeny said he heard several people complaining about Davis' dismissal. He said he wanted to see what the public wanted, and he hopes "someone at the UI looks at it."

"(Davis) is a very courteous person; he doesn't yell at the refs; he doesn't throw chairs. He's a good coach to have," Dennis said. "The university can take advantage of it or not, but it needs to know how the public feels."

Bowsby said Thursday he hadn't

Moss spills the (swill) beans

LONDON (AP) — Supermodel Kate Moss says she regularly used to swill champagne and smoke pot before strolling down the catwalk.

The waif-thin 25-year-old, who recently dried out at a posh London clinic, told Face magazine that she also used to carry a hip flask full of vodka on fashion shoots and often began drinking at 10 a.m.

"I kind of lost the plot there a little bit," said Moss, who began boozing and drugging at 12 — two years before she began modeling.

"In France and London, we're allowed to smoke pot all day ... I'm changing. But I've always liked that lifestyle."

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Rap star ODB was arrested for allegedly wearing a bullet-proof vest — a no-no because of his previous arrests.

The rapper, whose real name is Russell Jones, was driving erratically when he was pulled over Tuesday night, Officer Mike Partain said.

"He didn't have a driver's license, so the officers had him step out of the vehicle and noticed he was wearing body armor," Partain said. "A check found he had prior violent felony arrests, and he was taken into custody."

Jones' attorney did not immediately return a call Thursday.

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP) — Lauryn Hill, Kelly Price and R. Kelly led the nominees for the Soul Train Music Awards. The winners will be announced on March 26 during a syndicated TV ceremony from Los Angeles.

Hill received four nominations Wednesday. Price got three, and Kelly was nominated twice.

Royalty gets the 'Full Monty'

LONDON (AP) — "Full Monty" star Robert Carlyle opted for full exposure Thursday when Queen Elizabeth II asked him what he'd been up to lately.

"Well, I have been trying to kill James Bond this week," he told the queen during a ceremony to bestow upon him the Officer of the Order of British Empire honor.

Carlyle was sporting a severe haircut for his role as the villain in the next Bond film, "The World Is Not Enough."

Although he is one of Britain's best-loved actors, Carlyle couldn't seem to believe he was really at the palace.

"The queen asked, 'How did you get in here?'" he joked.

Percy Harris, the first black Iowa regent, and his wife, Lileah, have donated historically significant tapes and transcripts, personal papers and photographs about their lives in Iowa to the UI Main Library's special collections department.

The tapes consist of a secretly recorded, contentious Dec. 12, 1961, meeting of St. Paul's Methodist Church trustees who debated whether to sell church property to the Harrises, who were members of the Cedar Rapids church. The all-white board agreed to sell the land to them, but their decision created a great division in the church, Harris said.

Because of their race, the Harrises could not find affordable property on which to build a home. Percy Harris was the only one of 12 St. Luke's Hospital medical interns who could not find a place to live when he arrived in Cedar Rapids.

Bob McCown, manuscript librarian, said special collections also received a transcript of the recorded tape. The items are significant records of Iowa's history, McCown added.

Lileah Harris donated personal papers, including letters, photographs and speeches to the Iowa Women's Archives as part of the African American Women in Iowa Project.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Your opinionated attitude will surely ruffle feathers if you don't control your tongue while interacting with groups. Listen to others for a change. They may have some valuable advice.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Spend time with the ones you love. Someone you work with may not be on your side. You will have difficulties dealing with government agencies or institutions today.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Group endeavors will be in your best interests. You will meet new romantic partners and enhance your reputation because of your dedicated contributions. Leadership should be your goal.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): You will make the wrong decisions if you allow your jealousy to stand in the way of good judgment. Confusion on an emotional level will be reason enough to let things ride.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): You are in a high-energy cycle. Your discipline will help you accomplish your goals. Don't waste the day waiting for others to get moving. Take matters into your own hands.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Opportunities to spend money will be present; however, you will have to use discrimination to make the right choices. Take time to make sure elders have their personal papers in order.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Put your time and efforts into pursuing your goals. Luck will be with you, and love will be plentiful. You can make purchases that will improve your self-image and your appearance.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Keep an eye on individuals who are working for you. Be cautious when working with machinery or electrical equipment. You can advance if you're willing to bend to your boss's suggestions.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Changes regarding risky financial ventures may not be to your liking. Direct some of your energy into doing things with children. Creative ideas will be difficult to get off the ground.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Problems at home will end in disaster if you aren't willing to listen to the complaints of loved ones. You will have to give a little more of your time to your personal life.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Romantic opportunities will surface if you go on vacation. Communication will be informative about other people's private affairs. Listen carefully but don't divulge your own secrets.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Overspending on children or entertainment will result in financial limitations. You must be sure to gauge your spending habits and looking into doing things that don't cost so much.

U.N. rights 'very male,' lecturer says

■ The declaration shows a gender bias, a scholar argues.

By Quinn O'Keefe
The Daily Iowan

Global focus lecturer Hillary Charlesworth Thursday compared the Universal Declaration of Human Rights to a 50-year-old man — one who is rather smug in how he treats women.

Charlesworth, a gender-issues scholar and international law professor from Australia, gave a lecture at the Boyd Law Building Thursday night to a predominately female audience of 80, titled "Women and the Universal Declaration of Human Rights."

However, she believes that a more fitting title would be "The Midlife Crisis of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights."

"Many would think that it is inappropriate to compare the Universal Declaration of Human Rights to a man's life, because the declaration is supposed to be eternal and universal," Charlesworth said.

Brett Roseman/The Daily Iowan

Hilary Charlesworth speaks to a crowd of 80 in Levitt Auditorium Thursday.

She criticized the declaration for excluding women in its rhetoric and for its vague portrayal of women in the document itself.

"I think that the language of the declaration certainly reflects its drafters," Charlesworth said. "Women enter the picture of the universal declaration only as they associate to men."

While human rights issues relating to women have gotten more attention from the United Nations in recent years, Charlesworth said the organization must move beyond simple rhetoric.

"The U.N. found it very easy to implement politically correct language but found it very hard to implement significant change," she said. Audience members were generally attentive and seemed receptive to Charlesworth's message.

"There should be some equality in the language, and women should be equally represented," said Frances Addo, a UI senior and lecture attendee. "This should not be a radical movement but rather a gradual transformation."

COGS, UI reach tentative pact

■ The graduate student union and the university avoid arbitration at the 11th hour.

By Jill Barnard
The Daily Iowan

After hours of negotiations Wednesday night, the Campaign to Organize Graduate Students reached a voluntary — albeit tentative — agreement with the UI and Iowa state Board of Regents at about 3 a.m. Thursday.

Only two more steps are involved before the 1999-2001 collective bargaining agreement is official. First, the details need to be recorded, and the chief negotiators of both parties must sign the agreement. Then, on Feb. 24 and Feb. 25, the COGS Bargaining and Grievance Committee will submit the agreement for membership review and vote.

If the COGS members ratify the agreement, it will provide the terms and conditions of employment for UI graduate assistant employees from July 1999 until June 2001.

UI negotiator Mary Jo Small, associate vice president emeritus, said she had a positive feeling about the negotiation process this year. "Negotiations went much more smoothly this time," she said.

On the whole, Small said, she was happy with the agreement reached between COGS and state negotiators.

"I think both parties felt that we've reached a fair agreement," she said. Small said the agreement enhances the health and dental insurance of graduate assistant employees and adds some coverage to their dependents.

It's not surprising that the 1997 negotiation process was more cumbersome than this year's talks, said Small; in 1997, COGS was newly organized (UE Local 896-COGS), negotiating for its first contract.

First negotiations are always more difficult, Small said, because everything must be turned into contract language. Decisions must be made concerning the rules and regulations of debate for the negotiations, she said.

COGS President Deborah Herman agreed that the 1997 negotiations were more difficult. "In first contracts, you're starting from scratch, and there's nothing to work with," she said.

The regents' negotiators have to work within the economic guidelines provided by the state, Small said. And the financial allowance given for negotiations was "about the same as last year," she said.

COGS representative Mary Crippen said she appreciated that COGS avoided arbitration Thursday. It was an appreciation she felt state negotiators must be sharing, given that they'll have to face arbitration with the newly formed hospital union next week.

"I think both sides recognized the danger, because neither side would get what they wanted," she said. "Arbitration is very scary for both sides, and (state negotiators) have as much interest in avoiding it as we do."

Despite the UI's interest in avoiding arbitration, Crippen said, it "didn't help" that the UI held off on monetary discussions until about a week ago.

"We were really under the gun this time," she said.

Herman refused to comment on the specifics of the agreement until it undergoes review by the union membership.

Duped students to receive tuition help

■ Good Samaritans offer help after scam is discovered.

By Pauline Arrillaga
Associated Press

HOUSTON — When an Alaska woman learned a Houston company had failed to honor a local student's $40,000 college scholarship, she anonymously donated $1,000 to help out.

In Hawaii, a businessman whose daughter died while in college is giving $1,300 to a scholarship winner who attends the same university.

And in North Carolina, a woman who lives near Duke University offered housing to yet another student who was to receive a $10,000-a-year scholarship, renewable for four years, from Houston-based AdamsVision USA.

From coast to coast, individuals, corporations and universities are doing what they can to help 51 students who were stiffed out of their scholarships when AdamsVision told them it didn't have the money to pay up.

Despite all the offers, many students still face the possibility of transferring to less-expensive schools unless they scrape up enough money to fill the financial void left by AdamsVision.

"I could probably stay for another year, but beyond that we're really worried," said Melissa Bowlin of Palmer, Alaska, who received the $1,000 anonymous donation toward her $30,000-a-year tuition and board at Cornell University.

AdamsVision last year promised the scholarships to one student from every state and Washington, D.C.

Turkey jails Ocalan, cracks down on Kurds

■ Europe experiences a third day of Kurdish protests over the snatch of rebel leader Abdullah Ocalan.

By Suzan Fraser
Associated Press

ANKARA, Turkey — Turkey moved to stifle Kurdish protests at home and crush Kurdish rebels in northern Iraq Thursday, while prosecutors interrogated the rebel leader Abdullah Ocalan at a tightly secured island prison.

The capture of Ocalan continued to fuel Kurdish protests in Europe for the third day, particularly in Germany, where it was feared the Kurdish conflict would spill over onto its soil.

Turkey saw its most violent protests yet when pro-Kurdish demonstrators and police clashed in the southern city of Ceyhan, injuring three policemen and one demonstrator, the Anatolia news agency said.

The Turkish military released a video Thursday showing Ocalan being led from a ship, his head covered by a hood, onto the island of Imrali, in the Sea of Marmara, where he was made to pose in front of a line of Turkish flags. Turkish stations ran the footage with a caption reading,

"This is the image Turkey has been waiting for the past 15 years."

Police, meanwhile, led sweeps that, according to the independent Human Rights Association, have netted as many as 750 Kurdish activists since Tuesday in Istanbul and the southeast, the heartland of Ocalan's guerrilla war since 1984.

With Ocalan's rebel Kurdistan Workers Party, or PKK, apparently leaderless, the military kept up its latest incursion into neighboring northern Iraq in pursuit of the rebels, who have bases there.

Turkish troops — numbering 10,000 according to newspapers — with helicopters and warplanes, chased Ocalan's fighters in northern Iraq for a fourth day. They drove as far as six miles into the country, an Iraqi Kurdish group said.

Prime Minister Bulent Ecevit said the government would renew a call to rebels to surrender, assuring them that the Parliament would pass a law providing lenient punishment after elections in April.

Jasper defendant talked of racial killing as gang initiation

JASPER, Texas (AP) — Dragging-death defendant John William King once talked about "taking a black out" — committing murder — as a way to get into a white supremacist gang, a former fellow inmate testified Thursday.

"To help new recruits get initiated, take somebody out and kill them. You have to spill blood to get in and give blood to get out, I guess," convicted robber William Hoover testified, recounting what he says King told him while they were both in prison a few years ago.

King, 24, is the first of three white men to go on trial in the slaying of James Byrd Jr., a 49-year-old black man who was abducted last June, chained to a pickup truck and dragged three miles until his body was torn to pieces. King could get the death penalty.

It wasn't clear from Hoover's testimony about the prison conversation who would do the killing or what gang they were talking about. But prosecutors have said that King killed Byrd to gain credibility for a racist group he was organizing.

Hoover, 28, said the idea described by King was to abduct a black man, "kidnap him maybe, put him in the trunk of a car, take him out in the woods ... kill him" to "prove your loyalty to your organization."

Prosecutors say King's idea nearly matches what happened to Byrd.

King was in prison for a burglary at the time.

In other testimony, defense attorneys suggested that King's many racist tattoos were a means of helping him survive in prison.

Under questioning, the heavily tattooed Hoover said such markings are intended to show solidarity with other white inmates and ward off attacks from blacks. "It does help to have close buddies like that," he said.

Ted Turner hits Polish land mine with joke

ATLANTA (AP) — Ted Turner apologized for telling a Polish joke in reference to Pope John Paul II and for suggesting the ban on adultery should be dropped from the Ten Commandments.

Turner said in a statement Wednesday night to the Catholic League, an anti-defamation organization, that he "regrets any offense his comments may have caused ... and extends his heartfelt apologies."

The former CNN chief, who is now vice chairman of Time Warner Inc., made his remarks Tuesday night while addressing the National Family Planning and Reproductive Association in Washington. The group supports abortion rights and contraception, which the pope opposes.

When asked by a member of the audience what he would say if he ever met the pope, Turner said, "Ever seen a Polish mine detector?" He then showed the audience his foot, said Marilyn Keefe, spokeswoman for the association.

He went on to say that Pope John Paul II should "get with it — welcome to the 20th century" and said the commandment against adultery should be done away with, according to Wednesday's edition of the Washington Times.

"We certainly accept his apology and this brings closure to the incident," said William Donahue, president of the Catholic League. "What is disturbing to me is that, reportedly, his comments were received with wild applause from the crowd."

Holocaust survivor: Bayer collaborated in Nazi experiments

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — One of the hundreds of twins experimented on by the infamous Dr. Josef Mengele at Auschwitz is suing Bayer AG, saying the German pharmaceutical giant collaborated with the Nazi scientist.

The lawsuit, filed Wednesday in federal court in Terre Haute, alleges Bayer paid Nazi officials for access to people in concentration camps and used the experiments as a form of research and development during World War II.

In recent years, Holocaust survivors and Jewish organizations have sued banks that held on to the assets of Holocaust victims and companies that allegedly profited from Nazi actions through the use of slave labor.

Polish immigrant Eva Mozes Kor's lawsuit is thought to be the first to target a German company for Nazi medical experiments.

Deadline for talks looms; NATO eyes Serb targets

■ Secretary of State Albright warns the Serbs again: Take the Kosovo peace plan or take the bombs.

By Laura Myers
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — With time running out for a political settlement, NATO Thursday reviewed possible Serb targets in and around Kosovo, and the Clinton administration warned President Slobodan Milosevic to choose peace with ethnic Albanians or face a devastating military strike.

"He will be hit hard, and he will be deprived of the things that he values," warned Secretary of State Madeleine Albright, who plans to return today to the peace talks in Rambouillet, France.

If an attack were ordered, scores of sea-launched Tomahawk missiles would hit Serb air-defense sites and radar facilities first, then vital command centers and barracks in what likely would be a limited NATO strike, Pentagon planners said. They warned, however, that a more aggressive attack plan is being considered.

In their second week of peace talks, the Serbs and ethnic Albanians have until noon Saturday to reach agreement on a self-rule plan for Kosovo, a Serbian province. Mediators at Rambouillet presented the two sides a final version Thursday of a proposed political settlement.

Albright and Norwegian Foreign Minister Knut Vollebaek, chairman of the Organization for Security and Cooperation in Europe, pointedly reminded Milosevic that if he doesn't accept NATO peacekeeping ground troops as part of any Kosovo agreement, he will face military consequences. So far, Milosevic has rejected the NATO plan to send 28,000 ground troops to the province.

Demonstrating the seriousness of NATO threats, the United States has started planning to evacuate the U.S. Embassy at Belgrade, and 1,300 international "verifiers" monitoring Kosovo under the European security authority also are prepared to leave.

Nonessential embassy staff could leave as early as today, said a U.S. embassy official, speaking on condition of anonymity. Vollebaek said he hopes he doesn't have to order an evacuation.

"The (European security) mission and NATO are ready for any eventuality," Albright said. "It's our great hope that we will be able to use that preparation to help the parties on the path to peace."

Vollebaek, speaking at a joint Washington news conference with Albright, added: "I think we are at the stage where we need to exert utmost pressure, maximum pressure on the parties in this final phase."

In the Senate, home is where you throw your hat

■ New York isn't the only state in which Hillary Rodham Clinton could run.

By Anne Gearan
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — If Hillary Rodham Clinton is serious about running for the U.S. Senate in New York, she'll have to start raising money soon. But she won't have to move there before Election Day, 2000.

In fact, a candidate can run for the Senate in any state without moving until the last minute, because the Constitution requires only that senators be residents "when elected."

"She could go anywhere she wants to," said Doug Lewis, executive director of the Election Center, a nonprofit information clearinghouse in Houston. "Obviously, there has to be an opening or a place where she'd be a viable candidate."

The Constitution lists three requirements for senator: a minimum age of 30, U.S. citizenship for at least nine years and that the senator, "when elected, be an inhabitant of that state for which he shall be chosen."

Several states have imposed additional restrictions, but election-law experts say they are constitutionally suspect.

Massachusetts, Wyoming and Nebraska, among other states, require that a Senate candidate be a registered voter. In Ohio, a Senate candidate has to be registered to vote 30 days before the election.

"I don't think restrictions beyond what's in the Constitution would stand up" if challenged in court, Lewis said.

Al Jaeger, secretary of State in North Dakota, agreed, citing a Supreme Court ruling overturning congressional term limits as a guide.

"We are of the opinion that a state can't really go beyond what the Constitution says," Jaeger said.

Practically speaking, no candidate would be likely to make a Senate run in New York or elsewhere without establishing residency at least some months before an election, as Robert F. Kennedy did in New York in 1964.

Kennedy, from Massachusetts, campaigned in New York for months that year but did not actually live there until he rented an apartment in New York City in August.

Students clash with dean over fate of cultural centers

American house and the Latino/Native American house.

Most of all, students said, they felt separated from the planning process.

"If you could gain the trust of the minority students, we could help you in your plan," said Jolene Cook, a UI student.

The issue of location was presented by Jones as one factor for a possible relocation of the centers to a more central point in campus. In 1968, when the first cultural center opened, "it was designed as an appendage because we were not considered a central part of the university," Jones said.

But UI graduate student Melvin Denham responded, "If you put us all into a building, we'll still be an appendage, because we'd still not be completely accepted as a part of the university."

For Jones, this validated his understanding of the "separatism" of the houses. "What a house gives you is separation," Jones said.

As the years and decades have gone by, informal research by the Office of Student Services has indicated the centers are being used less and less, Jones said. But some students did not place the blame for this on the houses.

"People don't use the Afro house, because there's nothing here to do because it's underfunded," said Carlton Watson, UI graduate student.

Students criticized the administration for inadequately funding the cultural centers in terms of their physical upkeep and furnishment. Jones confirmed that, while approximately $100,000 has been spent to date on the "purposeful planning process," only $6,000 to $9,000 a year is spent on the cultural centers.

Jones described a three-phase planning procedure that includes reaching out to the "customers" — meaning the students — receiving input and, finally, developing and implementing a plan for the future of the cultural centers on this campus.

"We are now in the middle of phase two," Jones said.

"If you take away our house, you're taking away our family," said Orrenzo Snyder, a UI resident in the Department of Urology.

Following over three hours of debate, Jones conceded to addressing the issue in writing for the students. Additionally, as a continuation of phase two, a meeting has been planned for March 8 or 9 for another discussion to receive feedback from the students, Jones said.

classroom setting.

"He's very disciplined and hard-working, and he'll be able to make a connection with the students," he said. "You see him on camera, but you don't know that he can make a bond with students."

The class is being taught over the Iowa Communications Network, the state's fiberoptic system, which Branstad helped to build as governor. There are two classes of 20 students, one at the Pappajohn Business Administration Building and one in Newton, Iowa.

"I really became aware, when I was governor, of the opportunities to apply fiberoptics to education in rural areas," Branstad said. "I've always been a strong supporter, and I'm excited to teach over that system."

Branstad said that, although he has no teaching experience, he sees his governorship as a great asset for the students.

"I can bring the personal experience of how to deal with crises and communications strategies," he said.

Many of the students in the class are currently working in the public sector and are going back to school.

One of Branstad's students,

Thomas O'Connor, has worked for 20 years as a recreation therapist.

"I'm a federal employee, so this fits into my background as we talk about the federal government," he said. "I've been wanting to move from the patient-care area to more of an administrative or executive side."

UI graduate student Tyler Woods said he is somewhat skeptical about Branstad as a teacher.

"I think he'll be OK," he said. "It's good that professor Judge is here to help the class run smoothly."

UI grades average on report card from women's-status council

WOMEN

Deone Pedersen, the former chairwoman of the council.

"If we're trying to recruit a diverse population, we need to pay attention to things that will retain them, to help them succeed," she said. "Otherwise we have done them a disservice."

Five categories were assessed in the report: campus climate received a B-minus, salary equity a C-plus, sexual harassment a B, recruitment and retention, and leadership.

"We're not writing this report card to be adversarial, to be confrontational," Warren said. "We just believe that there are issues out there that need to be addressed."

The issues raised by the report are substantiated with reports, data and interviews, Warren said.

"We check out all of our information as best we can," she said. "We're not making things up. This isn't just an opinion poll."

"It's a helpful tool by a group who concerns themselves with important issues," said Susan Mask, director of Affirmative Action. "We look at it and see how policies are working on campus, especially regarding women."

The report card format was chosen because people in an academic institution could relate to

"The grades are the least important. It's the substance of the report that matters."

— Jan Warren,
chairwoman of the Council on the Status of Women and understand it better, Warren said.

She encourages everyone to read the actual contents of the report, which goes beyond merely grading the UI to offer suggestions for improvement in each category.

"The grades are the least important," Warren said. "It's the substance of the report that matters."

The report is also a means to document improvements taking place at the UI.

"We can look at year by year and see how things have progressed," Pedersen said.

Many of the council members commended President Mary Sue Coleman's involvement with the report.

"She's very responsive to our concerns," Warren said. "She addresses the points and talks to her colleagues."

For some UI students, an active administration gives them hope for improvements on campus.

"It's a good sign when the report card shows signs of improvement and is taken very seriously by the central administration," said Megan Levad, a UI junior and council member.

The first report card took the administration by surprise, Pedersen said. But now that it is expected, "we have something to sit down and talk over with," she said. "It brings the issues out into the open."

Although she does not hold out hope for straight A's, Warren said, she is optimistic about the future.

"With the right information and the right people working together, (the report) can serve as a catalyst to continue to move issues forward," she said.

The Council on the Status of Women is a volunteer organization consisting of 20 voting members from the UI — faculty, professional and scientific staff, merit staff and students — and other campus representatives.

"Our mission is to ensure an environment that supports the rights of all women at the UI," Warren said.

'Animal House' days not all bad for Greeks

First, there was "Probation." Then, there was "Double Secret Probation." But now it seems there's something even worse. It's "being forced to go coed." I will apologize right now for using such a scary and downright rude word as "coed."

At least, I assume it must be rude and scary, because nothing else would explain the knicker-twisting uproar into which the fraternities and sororities of Dartmouth College have plunged themselves. You would have thought, from the reaction, that some hallowed institution is being brought to an untimely end by a brutal and unfeeling administration.

And, perhaps this is so. Perhaps this will indeed spell the end of the Greek system, at least at Dartmouth, and quite possibly, throughout the United States. However, I have to say I am somewhat skeptical about such a dire prognosis.

But, to be fair to the fraternities and sororities that are worried about their future, I have to say that I am also skeptical about the claims by certain administrators about the various Greek houses. According to these administrators, fraternities are full of vice, drunkenness and sexual debauchery.

Now, if you were to turn back the clock some 20 years and tell me, as a new student, that by joining a fraternity I would be immersing myself in drink, sex and other immoral behavior, I would have to say, in all honesty, that I might find it at least somewhat enticing!

This current "dens of iniquity" approach to Greek culture is doomed to failure for precisely this reason.

It probably also explains why the membership of such organizations is dropping nationwide. If they aren't dens of iniquity, why join them?

The theory is that they are useful social clubs that provide a basis of networking and also do considerable amounts of charity. As such, these organizations will appeal to some, but probably not to as wide a group as the "dens of iniquity" type of organization.

All of this is, of course, based on various theories (or, if you prefer a more accurate terminology, half-baked ideas) that are floating around in the media and on college campuses.

The questions raised by the action of Dartmouth's trustees in requiring fraternities and sororities to go coed are more fundamental. First, are these houses truly this depraved? And second, if they are, will making them coed change anything or simply increase opportunities for depravity?

WILFRID NIXON

Statistics would suggest that the situation in these houses is indeed rather dire. An Associated Press article Monday stated that 80 percent of students who live in Greek houses are binge drinkers. This sounds suitably serious, until you read the fine print, wherein the concept of "binge drinking" is defined. You binge drink, according to this survey, if you down four or five drinks in a row at least once every two weeks.

This worries me somewhat. If you take half an hour or less to get through five drinks, then yes, there is a problem. But what if these drinks are spread over an evening, from 6 to midnight, say, with a meal involved? Is that binge drinking, or a good and responsible night out?

I do not wish to minimize the fact that some fraternities in some locations have deservedly appalling reputations. And sometimes, what goes on in these houses is completely unacceptable. But, the demonization of fraternities and sororities is clearly rather overdone.

So, the answer to the first question is less than compelling. What of the second? Will making these houses coed improve behavior any? I lived in a male college while I was at university, and it turned coed during my time there.

The bar was a little cleaner, but not much else changed — except the women's rowing team learned to drink just as hard as the men's team.

Men don't want fraternities to go coed because they'll have to deal with the whole toilet-seat thing.

And while women get quoted in the paper saying how they don't like having to deal with the pressure of men being around, what they really mean is they don't want to have to pick up their underwear.

The root issue at Dartmouth is that the town is so small, there is nowhere else to play. And some people have complained about this, because they don't get invited to the good parties. But the sad truth is that sometimes these folks are so enjoyment- and humor-challenged that they wouldn't know a good party if it bit them.

However, I will say no more, because I promised my colleagues I wouldn't talk about women's studies this week.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

What would Lance say about religion?

To the Editor:

Lance Hamby's recent column ("Respectfully disagreeing with UI policy toward gays," D/Feb. 17) once again proves his apparent inability to argue logically or conduct thorough research. The logical problems and conveniently unsearched assumptions are too numerous to discuss thoroughly in a limited format such as a letter to the editor, but I would like to examine one quote from his column.

Hamby makes the statement, "The problem is homosexuality is not, and can never be, analogous to race or gender because homosexuality is based on a behavior and not an immutable characteristic." OK, then. According to Hamby's own logic, no "behavioral," i.e. non-genetic traits, should be protected as rights under the Constitution or federal law. I would like to remind Hamby that religion also is not genetic. Does he feel freedom of religion should not be protected because it is not "immutable?"

Looking for meaning in Hamby's column

To the Editor:

I'm afraid I'm a little confused by Lance Hamby's recent column. ("Respectfully disagreeing with UI policy toward gays," D/Feb. 17.) With one point in particular, I was wondering if Hamby even knew what he was talking about. I'll quote the paragraph as it appeared in the paper: "The problem is homosexuality is not, and can never be, analogous to race or gender, because homosexuality is based on a behavior and not an immutable characteristic." Once again, forgive me, for I know not what he is talking about.

I was under the impression that homosexuality was an immutable characteristic, for, like race and gender, people are born one way and have no choice in choosing whether they're male or female, black or white, even whether they're gay or not gay. I don't know where Hamby got his definition of homosexuality, but he obviously didn't learn it at the UI. I was just hoping that I had misunderstood the article, and I'm sorry that I didn't.

Sodomy is sexual behavior, not a sexual orientation

To the Editor:

In his Feb. 17 commentary ("Respectfully disagreeing with UI policy toward gays"), Lance Hamby writes that sexual orientation is "based on a behavior and not an immutable characteristic." Actually, that's not true.

The act of sodomy is a sexual behavior that people of all sexual orientations (straight, gay or bisexual) are capable of. A person's sexual orientation includes their inherent sexuality... that part of their very being that causes attraction to other persons. Only those who are prejudiced against gays narrowly define them based solely on assumed sexual behavior. Human sexuality is far more complex and homosexuality is clearly not a choice.

I've been gay my whole life, including the 21 years before I ever had sex. Can Hamby explain that? Gays are capable of celibacy, monogamy and promiscuity just like straights. It's what inside that makes us who we are, whether we are sexually active or not.

Column gets people thinking

To the Editor:

Once again I have been shocked and offended by Lance Hamby's bigoted, small-minded viewpoint. His stereotypical portrayal of the feminist movement and now his rambling discourse on UI policy toward sexual orientation have left me thinking of innumerable ways to refute his ideas. And that is exactly why I'm glad he has his column. Every time his viewpoint appears, one or more well-thought-out, informative letters come in to show that people are thinking about the issues he has raised.

While I in no way agree with his views, I respect Mr. Hamby's right to express them and appreciate the discourse that they generate. Keep churning them out, Lance. You're not making a lot of friends, but you've got a lot of people thinking.

'Human wrongs' is dangerous rhetoric

To the Editor:

In responding to Lance Hamby's recent column ("Respectfully disagreeing with UI's policy toward gays," D/Feb. 17), it is necessary to point out that the UI Human Rights Policy also defends creed as a human right, and, while the jury is out for some reason on the origin of homosexuality, it would be pretty difficult to come up with evidence that my religion is an "immutable characteristic."

I love that I can practice my Christianity and remain reasonably sure that no one will get away with beating me up or firing me for doing so. Similarly, we should all be able to love whomever we wish to, and love them proudly. Giving my life to Christ was the best choice I ever made. To sanction robbing anyone of a civil environment in which to live his or her life, particularly in the name of Jesus, would turn me into the worst kind of hypocrite.

St. Paul himself asserts that everything is permissible, but not everything is beneficial, and that it is up to us to be thoughtful about what behaviors will cultivate or damage our spirituality. God hasn't programmed our morality. The Bible is our manual, and after that, it is up to us to decide how we'll live. While it's important to have an opinion and defend it, the right to fulfill one's destiny (without hurting others) should be inalienable.

The truth of the matter is that there are many people on this campus who would like to discriminate against gay people. Likewise, there are people among us who go so far as to consider certain faiths "human wrongs" (and we know from history the ugly places to which this rhetoric can lead). I thank God that a policy of protection of "mutable characteristics" such as creed and sexual orientation frees UI students to determine their lifestyles for themselves, whether I agree with their decision-making or not.

Religious right's sway over GOP no joke

To the Editor:

Gay Teletubbies? Is Jerry Falwell joking? No, it's just his publicity stunt of the month.

Last month, Falwell outraged good people everywhere by declaring the Antichrist is probably alive today and is a male Jew.

This offensive paranoia is what passes for "morality" and "family values" among right-wing religious conservatives. That they hold great influence within the Republican party today, and therefore in government and over our personal lives, is no laughing matter.

Lehmann's failure to act was dangerous

To the Editor:

I would like to respond to Carol Lindeen's editorial ("Principal Lehmann still a pal," D/Feb. 16). Lindeen finds fault with the Iowa City Police Department for charging Brian Lehmann, principal of Lucas Elementary School, with child endangerment.

To suggest he shouldn't be charged because he has already suffered enough at the hands of the police and media is missing the point. Teachers and principals are mandatory child-abuse reporters. In this capacity, they have a moral and legal obligation to safeguard the children in their care.

Three people have come forward, including an Iowa City police officer, to say they warned Lehmann of Roland Thomson's presence and suspicious behavior while serving as a volunteer in his wife's classroom. Lehmann had a legal mandate to protect the children. Are you suggesting the judicial system should ignore the people who voiced concerns and told their version of events to police?

As Lindeen stated, a person is innocent until proven guilty. To have that innocence questioned should also have equal validity.

Winter fashion nonsense

WHO was it who uttered the prophetic phrase, "The clothes don't make the man"? Probably not the manager of an Abercrombie & Fitch. And who was it who said, "Yo lavo la ropa"? Oh, that would just be my Spanish textbook. Never mind.

But there is something to be said about the styles of clothing exhibited by UI students. I say exhibited, rather than worn, because many times I don't think people don certain outfits solely for the purpose of having clothes on.

I wouldn't say it's purely an aesthetic choice between an ensemble that looks like it just walked off a Milan runway and, say, a barrel.

Sometimes, people want to put on a tactile textile show. Lights! Camera! Classes! Let's start with the basics: shoes. Now, I've been to New York twice, and in no place, even Greenwich Village, did I see as many pairs of shoes as I have in Iowa City.

Ha, here's a funny story. So my mom and my little sisters and I are walking through Washington Square at midnight, and I was a tad freaked because, hey, it's New York, and I'm not "street savvy." I'm more "street skittish." So my mom stops a cop and asks him to please reassure her kid. The officer turns to me and says, "in his best New York accent, 'Ma'am, you couldn't swing a dead cow in this part of town without hitting a cop.'"

I don't know what it means, either, but my mom got a big kick out of it, and now at family functions, the story gets pulled out right after the tale of when I seriously considered ditching my car and walking the last mile home during a snow storm. (Note to self: Stop acting stupid in front of younger siblings. Save the idiocy for private.)

Anyway, back to the shoes. My most incredulous face will be on display when I see someone walk by with heels higher than my legs are long. Sorry ladies, but this is mostly aimed at us.

Men just don't possess the essential skills of balance and composure needed to excel in everyday normal walking, let alone strutting around in heels. Sure, it looks cool to wear heels, but at what cost, dammit, what cost?

I'd have to go with an old rule: If your heels necessitate the use of an acrobat's pole in order to maintain balance, they are probably too high. Why do women like to wear heels that cause nosebleeds from the violent change of atmosphere?

Well, for me, it's simply the joy of sporting a pair of quality footwear... OK, OK, so I enjoy being taller. As a person of average stature, I get tired of going on tiptoe to look over certain counters, and getting my ID checked at R-rated movies is certainly getting old. Gaining a few inches from a pair of boots is a welcome lift.

Of course, the choice of shoes, like the rest of one's ensemble, is usually dictated by the weather, but there's just no guarantee. Monday I saw the sun and smelled a little fresh earth, so I threw on my sandals — sans socks. It was incredibly liberating.

It felt so good to be free of constricting shoes and clingy, strangling socks. That is, until some guy smashed my emancipated toes with his very un-liberated work boot. In a flash of pure pain, the entire '60s protest movement flashed before my eyes.

All I needed were some flowers and a guitar and I was ready to sit in the middle of the Pentacrest and sing "We Shall Overcome."

Naturally, every dictate has its deviants. The edict that cold weather calls for weather-appropriate clothing is blatantly defied by a specific niche of the population. Namely, guys, usually between the ages of 17 and 20.

Now, I'm as excited as the next person about the approach of spring, but wearing shorts when it's 30 degrees out and snow flurries are merrily dancing through the streets will in no way bring spring's arrival any faster.

When I'm huddled as far back into my hood as I can get, arms clasped around my body to conserve every calorie of heat possible, and some guy saunters by in shorts and a vest, I have to wonder at which point he traded in his brain for another Nintendo-64 game.

Of course, in the object of fairness, women have their own clothing quirks as well. (Although ours are so much more endearing, don't you think?) When the sun is blazing, and eggs are frying in shade on the sidewalk, why do women pull their wool sweaters tighter around them and complain of the chill?

Actually, I don't know, either. I can't sympathize with this at all, as usually the environment is too hot for my tastes. I'm one of those people who maniacally jumps about, throwing open windows and checking to make sure the heat isn't on. My roommate can usually tell I'm home if she opens the door and has to crack icicles off the wall and do battle with polar bears on the way to the bathroom.

So, if the weather is unable to procure some Valium and continues its manic trend of ups and downs, I expect the continuation of these lovely clothing idiosyncrasies. It is hard to tailor clothing to the weather when it's 60 degrees one day and then snows the next. That insulated barrel is looking better and better.

150 band students invited to the UI

Blowing horns and tooting flutes are scheduled to fill the UI this weekend.

By Lisa Hemann
The Daily Iowan

Approximately 150 high-school band students from around Iowa are scheduled to arrive in Iowa City this weekend for the 31st annual UI Honor Band Weekend.

As a part of the weekend, the students will be invited to take part in a series of master classes taught by UI School of Music faculty and to attend a concert given by the UI Symphony Band Orchestra at 8 p.m. Saturday in Hancher Auditorium.

The students will have the opportunity to audition for scholarships and entrance to the school, said Matthew Sintchak, visiting faculty member in the School of Music.

"It's exciting, I think, for these kids to come from around the entire state of Iowa and have the opportunity to meet with these faculty," Sintchak said.

About 250 students were nominated by their high school band directors to take part in the weekend. From these, the UI School of Music faculty choose 150 students based on experience level and achievement. The faculty also wanted to obtain a balanced distribution of the different instruments throughout the group.

"We try to get the finest high school musicians and give them an opportunity to work with our music faculty," UI Director of Bands Myron Welch said. "It's very similar to showcasing."

The program will include "Festmusik der Stadt Wien," three dance pieces from Leonard Bernstein's musical comedy "On the Town," "Awayday" by Adam Gorb, "Andrea Chenier" by Umberto Giordano and "Cartoon" by Paul Hart.

"It's a concert that has a great deal of variety and they are all challenging pieces, so it will really show the quality of our program here," Welch said.

Sintchak will also be a guest soloist for the concert. He is scheduled to perform "Concerto for the Alto Saxophone and Band," by Paul Creston.

The piece will be a classical saxophone piece, as opposed to jazz saxophone, which will seem different to some people, Welch said.

There are more similarities than differences between the classical saxophone and jazz saxophone, Sintchak said.

"It's like the difference between French and Spanish — there are a lot of words that are similar, it's just that the words are accented in different places," he said. "It's the concept of sounds and accents that makes classical saxophone and jazz saxophone different."

The weekend will wind up with a concert by the high school Honor Band, scheduled for 2:30 p.m. Sunday in Hancher Auditorium.

Both concerts are free and open to the public.

Freshman from Columbia University seeing stars in 'October Sky'

NEW YORK (AP) — In Coalwood, W. Va., all the boys grow up to be coal miners, and Homer Hickam has no reason to think he'll be any different.

Too small to earn a football scholarship, as his brother did, Homer seems headed for the mines, just like his father.

Then the Soviets launch the Sputnik satellite.

As the townspeople of Coalwood gather to watch the tiny dot race across the "October Sky," something inside Homer clicks. Going against his father's wishes, he decides to build and launch his own home-made rocket, enlisting the help of three high school friends.

"Throughout the story, Homer is trying to get out," says Jake Gyllenhaal, who plays the teen-age rocketeer in the film. "In every scene, you can feel him trying to get out of Coalwood and follow his passion. He wants to be a scientist, and his father can't understand that. So they constantly bump heads."

Homer's determination to launch the rocket — despite his father's opposition — propels him out of Coalwood and life in the mines.

"Homer really wants to get out of this town," Gyllenhaal explains. "And ... after this epiphany of seeing Sputnik, he does fall in love with science and rocketry and stuff like that, and he sucks at math. I mean, really, when it comes down to it, he sucks at math, he sucks at science, and he's never really put in the discipline that it needs."

"October Sky" is based on the book "Rocket Boys," written by Homer Hickam Jr., who retired from NASA last year.

Gyllenhaal, 18, grew up in Los Angeles and now lives in New York, where he is a freshman at Columbia University. His father is Stephen Gyllenhaal, who directed "A Dangerous Woman," starring Debra Winger.

A few questions about how a career got launched with "October Sky":

• How did you get involved in acting?

Gyllenhaal: "I've always been an actor. It's my family business. My father is a director, and my mother is a screenwriter, and actually my sister is an actress, too. Also, I've been on sets almost half my life, so I've just watched the process, and from that developed my own style and my love for the process of acting."

• Are you in every scene in the film?

Gyllenhaal: "Yeah. Every scene. I think a lot of the film is, it's very dialogue-driven, but at the same time ... the camera is the biggest narrator. It's not necessarily always the words, and so I didn't realize that I had to do so much. And when I got there, it was a bit overwhelming at first, realizing that looking at the schedule and seeing that I had no day off for three and a half months."

Gyllenhaal

• How does it feel when you see yourself on the big screen?

Gyllenhaal: "I've seen it twice now, and five minutes into the movie I always go, 'Aren't they bored by now? Aren't they bored with this face?' Because I'm looking around waiting for people to go, 'We've seen enough of this guy, he's already been in almost every single shot and every single second of this movie.'"

Clemens shipped to Yankees

By Fred Goodall
Associated Press

TAMPA, Fla. — Roger Clemens was enough to make the New York Yankees tinker with perfection. Even if it meant giving up David Wells.

Even if it meant disrupting the record-setting team that won 125 games last year and the World Series. Especially if it meant getting the only five-time Cy Young award winner in the history of baseball.

"I always coveted Roger Clemens for the Yankees and New York," owner George Steinbrenner said Thursday after obtaining Clemens from Toronto in exchange for Wells, reliever Graeme Lloyd and second baseman Homer Bush.

"We've got a group of warriors here and we're getting a very big warrior," Steinbrenner said. "He's a monster. He's just, 'Give me the ball' — a real competitor."

As for Wells, he left the Yankees' first day of spring training in tears

Former heavyweight champion James "Buster" Douglas weighs in Thursday at Catfish Bend Casino in Burlington.

Buster's comeback continues in Iowa

The Facts: James "Buster" Douglas will fight journeyman Andre Crowder tonight in Burlington.
The Impact: A win would keep the former champion's heavyweight title hopes alive.

By Tony Wirt
The Daily Iowan

BURLINGTON — The road to redemption for former undisputed heavyweight champion of the world James "Buster" Douglas goes through this Mississippi River town tonight.

Douglas (37-6-1, 24 KOs), who gained fame by becoming the first boxer to beat Mike Tyson, will face journeyman heavyweight Andre Crowder in the main event of a six-fight card that begins at 7:30 p.m. at Catfish Bend Casino.

Crowder is a last-minute replacement for Lorenzo Boyd, who pulled out of the fight last week.

"I saw (Crowder) years ago when he embarked on his professional career," said Douglas, who weighed in at 258 pounds Thursday. "I just want to fight my fight and give him something that will make him not want to be in there."

For Douglas, this is a must-win fight if he expects to return to championship contention. The 38-year-old was on the verge of a title fight last summer, but was knocked out in the first round of a June 23, 1998 fight with Lou Savarese.

"Everything went wrong," Douglas said. "It was just one of those things, and it definitely set me back. I'm here, for example. Not to knock the place, but I'm basically starting my career over. This is just another avenue I have to travel."

Douglas did learn a valuable lesson

IOWA MEN'S GYMNASTICS

The first roadblock

■ Fourth-ranked Iowa will look to establish itself in the Big Ten tonight against No. 5 Michigan State.

By Robert Yarborough
The Daily Iowan

After breezing through the first three meets of the season, the Iowa men's gymnastics team will run into two huge roadblocks this weekend.

The Hawkeyes will host No. 5 Michigan State tonight at 7 p.m. in the North Gym of the Fieldhouse before traveling to Lincoln, Neb., to take on No. 8 Nebraska on Sunday at 1 p.m.

"We had really good intrasquads this week and having last week off really helped us," sophomore Troy Smith said. "This is going to be a tough weekend of competition for us."

Iowa is ranked fourth in the latest national rankings and the team has its eye on posting high scores this weekend to move back to the No. 1 spot when the polls come out Monday.

Coach Tom Dunn will be without the services of junior Brian Hamilton, who may have aggravated a previous ACL injury against Illinois two weeks ago. Dunn is well aware of the threats both teams could pose.

"Michigan State and Nebraska will be quite a challenge for us. It will also be tough to have back-to-back meets," Dunn said. "I think the Michigan State meet will be a preview of how competitive the Big Ten Championships are going to be."

The Spartans (2-1), who placed fourth at the Big Ten Championships last season, are led by sophomore Tommy Housley, who is ranked seventh in the nation on the floor exercise.

Coach Rich Atkinson, a native of Waterloo, has brought the program from the depths of mediocrity to Big Ten contender status.

"Michigan State is a much improved team over last season and Nebraska is always tough," Smith said. "Competing in Lincoln with a big crowd will be a task in and of itself."

Nebraska boasts one of the most prolific histories in NCAA men's gymnastics. The Cornhuskers are led by junior All-American Derek Leiter, who is the second-best vaulter in the nation. He placed 16th all-around at last weekend's Winter Cup Challenge.

"I don't know too much about Nebraska's squad this year, but they have a long tradi-

Reversal of roles for Hawkeye wrestlers

■ The fourth-ranked Iowa wrestling team will be a rare underdog Sunday when it faces No. 1 Oklahoma State in Stillwater.

By Tony Wirt
The Daily Iowan

If the Iowa wrestling team needed a final challenge before heading into the postseason, it will have one Sunday.

The Hawkeyes will head into Stillwater, Okla., to finish up their regular season against the top-ranked Oklahoma State Cowboys.

"Everyone is pretty excited about heading down there," 165-pounder Ben Uker said. "The fact that they are No. 1 in the nation alone makes this a big meet. It's also the last dual of the season, and we want to end things on a good note before heading into Big Tens."

Defeating the Cowboys will be a tall task for the Hawkeyes, as Oklahoma State will be favored in at least five of the 10 weight classes. The only Iowa wrestlers favored in their matchups are No. 4 Doug Schwab (141), No. 1 T.J. Williams (149), No. 2 Lee Fullhart (197) and No. 3 Wes Hand (Hwt.). The 165-pound match between Uker and Ty Wilcox is a toss-up.

Things may get a little darker if Hand is unable to compete due to an ankle injury that has kept him off the mat for a month. If he is unable to go, 184-pounders Paul Jenn or Lee Weber would fill in.

If Iowa wants to head into the post-season on a winning note, the team will have to improve from the defeat it suffered last weekend at the hands of

Range heads home to face Fighting Illini

■ The Iowa men's basketball team travels to Champaign to face unranked Illinois on Sunday.

By Megan Manfull
The Daily Iowan

The last time Iowa freshman Joey Range started in his home state was in the 1998 Illinois State Championship game.

He started for Galesburg High School and was touted as one of the nation's top high school recruits. In a losing effort, Range scored 15 points and was named to the all-tournament team.

Sunday, Range will return home and start for Iowa (16-7, 7-6 Big Ten) in Champaign as a candidate for Big Ten Freshman of the Year.

When Iowa meets Illinois (11-15, 3-11) for the 1:30 p.m. tilt, Range will have a "whole lot" of family and friends anticipating his return.

Iowa Starters	Pos.	Yr.	Pts.	Reb.
14 Jake Jaacks	F	Jr.	7.4	4.3
44 J.R. Koch	C	Sr.	9.8	4.4
20 Dean Oliver	G	So.	12.5	3.4
24 R. Luehrsmann	G	Jr.	6.0	2.1
34 Joey Range	G	Fr.	7.9	3.3

"Aw geez, Joey's always got family and friends at every game," sophomore Dean Oliver said. "So there will be plenty when he goes to his home state. He's got a lot of support and that's nice to have. I know he appreciates it."

Range has started the last two games for the Hawkeyes and is coming off a perfect 6-for-6 shooting night against Ohio State last week. Range is averaging 7.9 points and 3.3 rebounds per game, and is third on the team with 30 steals.

Monday, Iowa coach Tom Davis nominated Range for Big Ten Freshman of the Year.

"He's not big enough to overpower like he could at the high school level," Davis said. "But he's adjusting. He's been making more good plays and less mistakes. So hopefully, he can keep it going."

Range will face one of his biggest competitors for the conference rookie honor this weekend. Illinois freshman Cory Bradford will lead the Fighting Illini.

A shooting guard in high school, the 6-foot-2 Memphis, Tenn., native has been forced to take over the point guard position at Illinois. He leads the Iowa passes test, begins a new challenge

■ It's Big Ten Championships time for the Hawkeye men's track and field team.

By Matt Bowen
The Daily Iowan

Larry Wiecek's men's track and field team responded to his challenge, which gives the Iowa coach reason to be optimistic at this weekend's Big Ten Indoor Championships.

Wiecek created a special standard for his team that is different from the Big Ten qualifying standard to assist in his selection of athletes. Seventeen of the 20 athletes traveling to Madison, Wis., passed Wiecek's test, which is also used by many Pac 10 teams.

"It makes it more clear-cut on who we are going to take," Wiecek said.

Based on these numbers, Wiecek likes his team's chances this weekend.

"It is an opportunity to go into battle," Wiecek said. "We don't know what the outcome is going to be, but we know we have a fighting chance."

Saturday's session begins at 10 a.m., with a 10:20 a.m. start scheduled for Sunday's session.

The Hawkeyes' squad of 20 will be led by defending Big Ten long jump champion Bashir Yamini and sophomore Jeremy Allen.

"There is nothing like team success," Wiecek said. "We are going up there to mix it up."

Yamini will try to defend his Big Ten championship, along with competing in the 200-meter dash. Allen will compete in the shot put and the weight throw, but the Hawkeyes' talent doesn't stop there.

Tony Branch will test the Big Ten's best in the hurdles and the 60-meter dash. His sprinting partner, Kurt Felix, will also run the 60-meter dash, as well as compete in the 200-meter dash.

Sophomore Tim Dodge will run in the 400-meter dash, Jim Donovan and Michael Layne will go in the 800-meter dash, Arno van der Westhuizen will throw the shot and the weight and Chad Schwitters and Stetson Steele will run the 5,000-meter run, which is a big event in Wiecek's eyes. Steve English could also come up big in the shot put.

Iowa's 4x400 relay team of Yamini, Branch, Dodge and Felix is ranked among the top 10 in the nation and will be shooting for the conference title.

"It takes about 12 to 15 guys to score to be able to contend for the Big Ten title," Wiecek said. "We had nine guys score last year and we finished fifth."

Justin Turner/The Daily Iowan

Jeremy Allen is aiming for a Big Ten title this weekend in Madison.

A good showing at the Big Tens can be a springboard for the upcoming outdoor track season.

"The good (teams) do it indoors and outdoors," Wiecek said. "I want to do well indoors so we can battle in the outdoor season."

Up next for Iowa is the Feb. 26 NCAA Qualifying meet in Ames.

UI SPORTS ROAD BRIEF

Women's track

This weekend: The Iowa women's track and field team heads to Columbus, Ohio, for the Big Ten Indoor Championships. The meet opens at 9 a.m.

Saturday and Sunday afternoon.

Meet notes: The Hawkeyes are coming off a record-breaking performance at the Illini Classic last weekend. Senior Kerri Blackstone broke the school record in the 20-pound weight throw with a heave of 50 feet, 3 1/2 inches. Senior Chrissie Kubitz beat her previous personal best in the 5,000-meter run by more than 30 seconds, and freshman Anna Shearer set a new personal best in the 800-meter dash. ... The Big Ten Championships are not the last time the Hawkeyes can qualify for the NCAA Championships, but it is considered the biggest meet of the indoor season. ... The Hawkeyes finished in ninth place at last year's Big Ten Indoor Championships.

Coach's comments: "I'm hoping that everyone will be ready to compete," coach Jim Grant said. "If they compete like they did this week, being rested, then I think they'll do very well."

Up next: The Hawkeyes' final opportunity to qualify for the NCAA Championships will be next weekend at the Iowa State Last Chance in Ames.

Hawkeyes look to help themselves this weekend

■ Iowa is still hoping for a No. 6 seed in next week's Big Ten Tournament.

By Eric Petersen
The Daily Iowan

This weekend's final two regular season games at Michigan and Illinois will determine a lot for the Iowa women's basketball team.

The Big Ten Tournament is just a week away, and the Hawkeyes are fighting for the best possible seed.

The games will determine whether the Hawkeyes (11-13, 6-8 Big Ten) receive a No. 6 seed and play lowly Minnesota or Indiana — teams Iowa swept this season — or go against Northwestern in the 8 vs. 9 game.

Either way, the Hawkeyes will play a first-round game, but the intrigue lies in their potential second-round opponent.

If Iowa gains the sixth seed and defeats its first-round opponent, it would avoid once-beaten Purdue and 16th-ranked Penn State. Instead, the Hawkeyes likely would battle Illinois in round two.

Dodging the second-ranked Boilermakers is a scenario that would definitely please senior Amy Herrig.

Brett Roseman/The Daily Iowan

Iowa's Lindsey Meder, a Big Ten Freshman of the Year candidate, drives to the basket against Michigan last month at Carver-Hawkeye Arena.

"It would be good for us just knowing that we wouldn't have to face (Purdue) until the end," Herrig said. "It would be kind of hard, because if we do play them, and we win, we'll be up for that game and it might be tough for us to stay mentally focused in the games afterwards.

"I think sixth place would be a good seed for us."

To garner the coveted No. 6 seed, Iowa needs some help from its conference foes and a sweep of this weekend's games.

Herrig, coming off a 42-point performance against Northwestern, says the Hawkeyes' three-game winning streak is giving her optimism going into this weekend and beyond.

"We've had some ups and downs and hopefully now is an up-time," Herrig said. "We are peaking right now. I think everybody is playing their best ball and (the team's eight freshmen) are finally understanding the system."

The Hawkeyes face Michigan (15-9, 7-7) tonight at 6:30 p.m. in Ann Arbor and travel to Illinois for Sunday's 7 p.m. contest.

Iowa is looking forward to avenging last month's 86-67 blowout loss to the Wolverines at Carver-Hawkeye Arena.

The Hawkeye defense will have its hands full with Michigan forward Stacey Thomas, who is averaging 14.7 points and 7.8 rebounds per game.

Thomas, a candidate for all-Big Ten honors, leads the conference with 3.92 steals per game.

"A big part of the game will be keying on her and what we can control from her," forward Randi Peterson said. "They're a good team, a lot better than people thought they would be. It will be a good test for us to see where we are right now at the end of the season."

Duval picks up where he left off

■ The PGA Tour's hottest golfer started the Nissan Open with a 5-under-par 66.

By Ken Peters
Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — The PGA Tour's preeminent snowboarder, David Duval, returned refreshed from the slopes and quickly got back into his remarkable golf groove.

Duval, whose game has been mostly phenomenal for the past nine months, shot an opening 5-under-par 66 Thursday to share the Nissan Open lead with Bob Estes.

Going for his third win in five 1999 starts, Duval toured Riviera Country Club without a bogey and came close to dropping a shot only on No. 14, where he made a 7-foot par putt.

Estes, whose only tour win was the 1994 Texas Open, had seven birdies and two bogeys on the way to his 66.

The co-leaders didn't have much margin for error, with a group of players, including Nick Price, just a shot behind, and a host of others, two-time champion Fred Couples and Ernie Els among them, two strokes back with 68s.

Tiger Woods, coming off a win at San Diego last weekend, also was close with a 69.

Duval, who came back from an earlier ski trip and won the Bob Hope Classic with a tour-record closing round of 59 last month, believes getting away from golf for awhile helps keep him sharp.

"You get into some good (snow) powder and you kind of float on the top, there's almost no sound, it's a great feeling, an unbelievable feeling," Duval said.

"I'm really glad I like doing that, because when I get back (to golf), it reminds me just how much I love the game."

Duval has been the tour's dominant player for the last nine months, winning nine of his last 30 starts.

Asked if he thought he was going to play well every time out, he replied, "That's certainly my intention. And I think feeling that way helps you to play well."

Softball

This week: The Iowa softball team will open its season this weekend at the Louisville Slugger/ASU Classic in Tempe, Ariz. The Hawkeyes will take on Michigan State, Illinois State, San Jose State and Arizona State in the three-day tournament.

Game notes: This weekend marks the debut of the revamped Hawkeye pitching staff. Newcomers Kristi Hanks and Kelly Zeilstra will take over the top two spots for All-American Debbie Bilbao and Leticia Castellon. ... Iowa returns seven starters from last year's team that finished second at the Big Ten Tournament and advanced to the NCAA Regionals. ... Two of the players the Hawkeyes lost last season, Bilbao and All-Big Ten shortstop Erin McGee, will be with the team this year as student assistant coaches.

Coach's comments: "It's our first time out on a true surface, so you have to be realistic and think about the adjustment when you get back out on dirt and grass," coach Gayle Blevins. "What we look for is growth and change day in and day out. It's a little different than the way you would look at your second or third trip."

Next up: The Hawkeyes will travel to Tampa, Fla., for the South Florida Speedline Invitational on March 4-7.

— Tony Wirt

Women's tennis

This week: In its first road trip of the season, the Iowa women's tennis team will travel to South Alabama and Tulane. Action begins today at 2 p.m. and Sunday at noon, respectively.

Match notes: The Hawkeyes got their first taste of Big Ten competition last weekend, defeating Illinois, 6-1, and falling to Northwestern, 5-2. ... The team is now 4-1 overall and its No. 1 singles player, freshman Toni Neykova, remains undefeated at 5-0. ... The Hawkeyes will be playing South Alabama for the first time ever and hold a 0-1 record against Tulane.

Coach's comments: "Tulane is much improved from last year, and South Alabama is one of the top teams in the nation," coach Paul Wardlaw said. "Our biggest adjustment will be to playing outside. The courts will be slower and points will be longer; we need to be prepared to hit the ball an extra time each point."

Up next: Iowa travels to Milwaukee on Feb. 26-27 to take on Marquette and Alabama-Birmingham.

Women's swimming

Freshman Melissa Loehndorf finished first in the preliminary round of the 500-meter freestyle to lead the Iowa women's swimming team on the first day of the Big Ten Championships.

Along with the 500 freestyle, the preliminaries of the 200 individual medley and 50 freestyle were held Thursday morning at the University of Minnesota.

After setting a school record in the 200 individual medley in her last meet, Loredana Zisu's time dropped three seconds in her race Thursday. Her time of 2:05 was good enough for 15th place in the prelims.

Other notable performances came from Stacey Wertz and Allison Lyle. Wertz and Lyle finished ninth and 11th, respectively, in the prelims of the 50 freestyle.

The Championships continue today and Saturday with the conference champion being crowned after Saturday's 7 p.m. session.

Baseball

This weekend: The Iowa baseball team begins its season this weekend with a round-robin tournament in Manhattan, Kan. The Hawkeyes play a doubleheader with Kansas State this afternoon and then will entertain Air Force on Saturday and Sunday.

Game notes: Both of Iowa's opponents this weekend have losing records. The Wildcats have a 1-5 mark this season while the Falcons are 4-6. ... Five freshmen will be in the starting lineup for Iowa. ... The Hawkeyes will start senior Wes Obermueller on the mound in their first game today. ... Iowa's next three starting pitchers include Steve Rasmussen, Troy Wulf and James Magrane.

Player's comments: "I'm just anxious," Obermueller said. "Obviously you want to go out there and get the first win to get the team going."

Coach's comments: "The five freshmen are the kids who've come out and estab-

Whitaker has no fear

By Ed Schuyler Jr.
Associated Press

NEW YORK — Pernell Whitaker's attitude toward Felix Trinidad Jr. is "show me." "I don't know anything about him," the 35-year-old former champion in four weight classes said about Trinidad, who he will challenge Saturday night in Madison Square Garden.

"I haven't watched any tapes of his fights. Whatever he has he will show me Saturday night."

Whatever Trinidad has, Whitaker makes it clear it will not be enough to win.

"He will be trying to beat me, it's just that nobody has," said Whitaker (41-2-1, 17 knockouts), who is convinced he won losing decisions against Jose

Luis Ramirez and Oscar De La Hoya and a draw against Julio Cesar Chavez.

Nobody has beaten Trinidad (33-0, 28 knockouts), controversially or otherwise.

Trinidad's father, the champion's trainer, has gone to the videotape.

"I've watched them all, especially the last one," he said.

Whitaker's last fight, his first after losing the WBC welterweight title to De La Hoya, was a 12-round decision over Andre Pestrivier. That win was supposed to earn him a shot at then WBA champion Ike Quartey, but he tested positive for cocaine and ended up in drug-alcohol rehabilitation in 1998, a year in which he also got a suspended sentence for reckless driving.

Hey AT&T, why not pick on someone who can take it?

With the millions of advertising dollars spent in AT&T One Rate's battle with 10-10-321, why hasn't the New DimeLine been mentioned?

Because the New DimeLine is the real competitor!

Call for call, the rate comparison says it all.

And to save you even more, we've eliminated our $5 access fee!

Just dial 10-10-811 before every long distance call and receive the New DimeLine's great rates!

Questions? Call 1-800-363-2789.
